HAT Question handled and little store of mony, or of other needful by Livie, Whether the helps in War, vanquish them in two Bat-Great Alexander could have tels, and endanger their Estate, when it was prevailed against the Romans, well settled and held the best part of Italy, and a support of the set of Forces against them, hath provided of all which is needful to a Conbeen, and is the subject of much di- querour, wanting only matter of employfpute; which (as it feems to me) the argument, coming upon them before their Domentson both fides do not fowell explain, minion washalf fowell feeled? It is cafie to as doth the experience that Pyrrhus hath fay, that Alexander had no more than thirty given of the Roman power in his dayes. For thousand foot, and four thousand horse (as if he, a Commander (in Hannibals judge- indeed, at his first passage into Asia, he carriment ) inferiour to Alexander, though to ed over not many more) and that the rest of none else, could with a small strength of men, his followers were no better than base effeArmies of Perdiccus, Antipater, Crate- them not, at some time, both before and rus . Fumenes . Itolomy , Antigonus and Ly- after this ) have opposed their valour and tinachus, with the actions by them per- good military discipline, against the power torned, every one of which (to omit others) of all Countreys to them known, if they commanded only fome fragment of this would have made refiftance. How they dead Emperours power, shall easily find, could have sped well, in undertaking such a that such a reckoning is far short of the match; it is uneasie to find in discourse of truth.

Horfes Elephants, Engines of Battery, and cowardly fools, and the unfortunate: for the like : of all which the Macedonian who foever contends with one too might had abundance; the Roman having nought, for him, either must excell in these, as much fave men and arms. As for Sea-forces; as his enemy goes beyond him in power; he that shall consider after what fort the or else must look both to be overcome, and Komans, in their first Funick War, were to be cast down so much the lower, by how trained in the rudiments of Navigation; much the opinion of his fortune and verfitting upon the shoar, and beating the fand tue renders him suspected, as likely tomake with poles, to practife the stroke of the head another time against the vanquisher. Oar, as not daring to lanch their ill-built Whether the Roman or the Macedonian veffels into the Sea; will eafily conceive were in those dayes the better Souldier. I how far too weak they would have proved will not take upon me to determine: though in fuch fervices.

Now for helpers in War; I do not fee own opinion, and preferr that Army, which why all Greece and Macedon, being abso-followed not only Philip and Alexander, but lutely commanded by Alexander, might also Alexanders Princes after him, in the not well deserve to be laid in ballance against those parts of Italy, which the fore any, that Rome either had, or in long time after did send forth. Concerning foromit therefore all benefit that the Eastern tune, who can give a rule that shall al-World, more wealthy, indeed, than va- wayes hold? Alexander was victorious in liant, could have afforded unto the Mace- every Battel that he fought: and the Roclonian: let us only conjecture, how the mans in the iffue of every War. But for-States of Sicil and Carthage, nearest neighbours to such a quarrel (had it happened) worthy of consideration; I think it a great would have stood affected. The sicilians part of Romes good fortune, that Alexander were for the most part Grecians; neither came not into Italy: where in three years is it to be doubted, that they would readi- after his death, the two Roman Confuls, toly have submitted themselves unto him, gether with all the powers of that State, that ruled all Greece besides them. In what were surprized by the Samnites, and enforced terms they commonly stood, and how ill to yield up their arms. We may therefore they were able to defend themselves, it permit Livie to admire his own Romans, and shall appear anon. Sure it is, that Alex- to compare with Alexander those Captains anders coming into those parts, would have of theirs, which were honoured sufficientbrought excessive joy to them that were ly, in being thought equal to his followers: fain to get the help of Pyrrhus, by offering that the same conceit should blind our to become his subjects. As for the Carthagi- judgement, we cannot permit without much mians, if Agathocles the Tyrant of Syracuse, vanity. hated of his people, and ill able to defend his Now in deciding such a Controversie, own belieged City, could by adventuring to me-thinks it were not amis, for an Englishfail into Africk, put their Dominion, yea, man, to give such a sentence between the and Carthage it felf, in extream hazard 5 Macedonians and Romans, as the Romans finall we think that they would have been once did (being chosen Arbitrators ) beable to withstand Alexander ? But why tween the Ardeases and Aricini, that strove do I question their ability, seeing that they about a piece of Land; saying, that it befent Embassadours, with their submission, as longed unto neither of them, but unto the far as Babylon, ere the War drew near them? Romans themselves. Wherefore it is manifest, that the Romans If therefore it be demanded, whether the must, without other succour, than perhaps Macedonian, or the Roman were the best of some other sew Italian friends (of Warriour? I will answer, The English-pate Abatiques. But he that confiders the which yet there were none that forfook humane reason. It is true, that vertue It were needless to speak of Treasure, and fortune work wonders; but it is against I might without partiality, deliver mine

CHAP. L. man. For it will foon appear to any that teet them against the Caribaginian, and Man thall examine the noble acts of our Nation cedonians.

Greece; what manner of men the Perlians peared comparable to the English. If my and Indians were, whom Alexander van- judgement feem over-partial, our wars in quished; as likewise of what force the France may help to make it good. Macedonian Phalanx was, and how well ap- First therefore it is well known that Rome pointed, against such arms as it commonly ( or perhaps all the world besides )had never encountred: any man, that hath taken pains any to brave a Commander in war as Julius to read the foregoing story of them, doth Cofar: and that no Roman Army was comsufficiently understand. Yet was this Pha- parable unto that which served under the lux never, or very feldom, able to stand fame Cofar. Likewise, it is apparent, that this against the Koman Armies; which were em-gallant Army, which had given fair proof of not whether any Nation besides them have the Helvetian war, when it first entred into man on that they were performed by no I shall not need to speak of her other conadvantage of weapon 5 against no savage quests: it was easie to get more when the of unmanly people; the enemy being far had gotten all this. It is not my purpole to apperiour unto us in number, and all need-differace the Roman valour (which was very ful provisions, yea, as well trained as we, noble ) or to blemish the reputation of to or commonly better, in the exercise of many famous victories: I am not so idle. This I fay; That among all their wars, I In what fort Philip wan his Dominion in find not any, wherein their valour hathapbattelled in fo excellent a form, as I know the Roman courage, in good performance of used, either before or since. The Roman Gaule; was nevertheless utterly disheartned. weapons likewise, both offensive and defen- when Cesar led it against the Germans. So live, were of greater use than those with that we may justly impute all that was exwhich any other Nation hath ferved, before traordinary in the valour of Casars men, to the fiery instruments of Gun-powder were their long exercise, under so good a Leader. known. As for the enemies with which in fo great a War. Now let us in general Rome had to do, we find, that they which compare with the deeds done by these best did over-match him in numbers, were as far of Roman Souldiers, in their principal ferover-matched by her in weapons; and that vice; the things performed in the same they, of whom she had little advantage in Country, by our common English Souldiers. arms, had as little advantage of her in mul- levied in hafte, from following the Cart, or titude. This also (as Plutarch well observ- fitting on the shop-stall : fo shall we see the eth) was a part of her happines; that the difference. Herein will we deal fairly, and was never over-laid with two great Wars believe Cofar in relating the acts of the Romans: but will call the French Historians Hereby it came to pass, that having at to witness, what actions were performed by first increased her strength by accession of the English. In Casars time France was inthe Sabines; having won the State of Alba, habited by the Gaules, a stout people, but against which she adventured her own self, inferiour to the French, by whom they were asit werein wager, upon the heads of three subdued; even when the Romans gave them Champions: and having thereby made her affiftance. The Country of Gaule was rent felf Princes of Latium, the did afterwards in funder (as Cesar witnesseth) into many by long war, in many ages, extend her Do- Lordships: some of which were governed by minion over all Italy. The Carthaginians petty Kings, others by the multitude, none had well-near oppressed her: but her Soul- ordered in such fort as might make it applidiers were Mercenary; so that for want of able to the nearest Neighbour. The factions proper strength, they were easily beaten at were many, and violent: not only in general their own doors. The Etolians, and, with through the whole Country, but between them, all, or the most of Greece, affished her the petty States, yea in every City, and alagainst Philip the Macedonian: he being most in every house. What greater advanbeaten, did lend her his help to beat the same tage could a Conquerour desire? Yet there Atolians. The wars against Antiochus, and was a greater. Arioviftus, with his Germans, other Afiatiques, were such as gave to Rome had over-run the Country, and held much mall cause of boast, though much of joy : part of it in subjection, little different from for those opposites were as base of courage, meer slavery : yea, so often had the Germans as the lands which they held were abun-prevailed in war upon the Gaules, that the dant of riches. Sicil, Spain, and all Greece, Gaules, (who had sometimes been the better fellinto her hands, by using her aid to pro- Souldiers ) did hold themselves no way equal CHART equal to those daily Invaders. Had France Let us hear what a French writer faith of the been so prepared unto our English Kings, inequality that was between the French and the Rome it felf by this time, and long ere this English, when their King John was ready to cime, would have been ours. But when King give the on-fet upon the Black Prince, at a Edward the third began his war upon the battel of Poitiers. John had all advandes France, he found the whole Country feeled tages over Edward, both of number, force, inc. in obedience to one mighty King; a King sew, Country, and conceit (the which is comment whose reputation abroad, was no less than monly a consideration of no small importance. his puissance at home; under whose ensign, in worldly affairs; ) and withall, the choice of the King of Bohemia did serve in person; at all his horsemen (esteemed then the best interested whose call the Genorayes, and other Neight Europe ) with the greatest and wisest contains bour States, were ready to take arms ; final of his whole Realm. And what could heave (a) The ly, a King unto whom one (a) Prince gave more? Dolphin of 19. A result of think it would trouble a Roman Anti-Viennos. away in Sommon City and Territory for quary to find the like example in their Hi-lipse mony. The Country lying to open to the stories; the example I say, of a King, brought design mony. The County tying to open to the Romans and being fo well fenced against the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to the prisoner to Rome, by an army of eight thou- significant to Rome, b ed most therein (for it were meer vanity to thousand, better appointed, and no less exmatch the English purchases with the Roman pert Warriours. This I am sure of, that the conquest) but whether of the two gave the neither Sphax the Numidian, followed by a disc greater proof of military vertue. Cafur him rabble of half Scullions, as Livie rightly Bases felf doth witness, that the Gaules complained terms them, nor their cowardly Kings, Perof their own ignorance in the Art of war, fews and Gentius, are worthy patterns. All and that their own hardiness was overmathat have read of Cress and Agincourt, will tiered by the skill of their enemies. Poor bear me witness, that I do not alledge the men, they admired the Roman Towers, and battel of Poitiers, for lack of other, as good Engines of battery, raised and planted examples of the English Vertue: the proof against their walls, as more than humane whereof hath left many a hundred better works. What greater wonder is it, that marks in all quarters of France, than ever fuch a people was beaten by the Romans; did the valour of the Romans. If any man than that the Caribes, a naked people, but impute these Victories of ours to the long valiant, as any under the fky, are commonly bow, as carrying farther, piercing more put to the worse by small numbers of Spani- strongly, and quicker of discharge than the ards? Besides all this, we are to have regard French Cross-bow: my answer is ready; of the great difficulty that was found, in That in all these respects, it is also (being drawing all the Gaules, or any great part of drawn with a strong arm ) superiour to the them, to one head, that with joynt forces Musket; yet is the Musket a weapon of they might oppose their assailants: as also more use. The Gun and the Cross-boware the much more difficulty of holding them of like force, when discharged by a Boy or long together. For hereby it came to pass, Woman, as when by a strong Man: weakthat they were never able to make use of ness or sickness, or a fore singer makes the opportunity: but sometimes compelled to long Bow unserviceable. More particularly, fray for their fellows; and sometimes driven I say, that it was the costem of our Anceto give or take battel upon extream disad- stors, to shoot, for the most part, point blank; vantages, for fear lest their companies should and so shall he perceive, that will note the fall afunder: as indeed, upon any little circumstances of almost any one battel. in all provisions, exceedingly beyond us? I may, with best commendation of modesty, disaster, they were ready to break, and re- This takes away all objection : for when turn every one to the desence of his own. two Armies are within the distance of a All this, and ( which was little less than all Butts length, one flight of arrows, or two at this ) great odds in weapon gave to the the most, can be delivered before they close. Romans the honour of many gallant Victo- Neither is it in general true, that the long ries. What such help? or what other world- Bow reacheth farther, or that it pierceth ly help, than the golden mettle of their more strongly than the Cross-bow: but this Souldiers, had our Englift Kings against the is the rare effect of an extraordinary arm; French? Were not the French as well ex- whereupon can be grounded no common perienced in feats of War? Yea, did they rule. If any man shall ask, How then came not think themselves therein our superi- it to pass, that the English wan so many great ours? Were they not in arms, in horie, and battels, having no advantage to help him? reter him to the French Hittorian; who French, and in that regard enemy tous. So relating the victory of our men at Crevent; that our danger lay both before and behind where they patied a Bridge in face of the us: and the greater danger at our backs; where commonly we felt, alwayes we feargith a conquering bravery, as he that was ac- ed, a stronger Invasion by Land, than we sultomed to gain every where without any flay: could make upon France, transporting our

of the History of the World.

so notes their proceedings, may find, that none of them went to work like a Conquerour, fave only King Henry the fifth; the interrupt by his death. But this question is the more easily answered, if another be first made. Why did not the Romans attempt the Conquest of Gaul before the time of Cafar ? Why not after the Macedonian for preservation of their own safety.

he forceth our guard placed upon the Bridge to Forces over Sea. he passage. Or I may cite another place It is usual with men, that have pleased of the fame Author, where he tells, how the themselves in admiring the matters which brillons, being invaded by Charls the eighth, they find in ancient Histories: to hold it a King of France, thought it good policy to great injury done to their judgement if any apparel a thousand and five hundred of their take upon him, by way of comparison, to exown men in English Cassocks; hoping that toll the things of latter ages. But I am well the very light of the English Red Crois, perswaded, that as the divided vertue of would be enough to terrifie the French. But this out Island, hath given more noble proof I will not stand to borrow of the French of it self, than under so worthy a Leader, Hilforians (all which, excepting De Serres, that Roman Army could do, which afterand Paulus Emilius, report wonders of our wards could win Rome, and all her Empire, Nation:) the propolition which first I un- making Cofar a Monarch; so hereafter, by dettook to maintain; That the military ver- Gods blelling, who hath converted our the of the English, prevailing against all manner greatest hinderance, into our greatest help, of difficulties, ought to bepreferred before that the enemy that shall dare to try our forces. of the Romans, which was affiled with all ad will find cause to with, that avoiding us, he untages that could be desired. If it be de- had rather encountred as great a puillance manded, Why then did not our Kings finith as was that of the Roman Empire. But it is the Conquest, as Casar had done? my answer now high time, that laying aside compamay be (I hope without offence ) that our rifons, we return to the rehearfal of deeds Kings were like to the Race of Eucide, of done; wherein we shall find, how Rome whom the old Poet Ennius gave this note; began, after Pyrrhus had left Italy, to strive Eellipotentes funt magis quam fapientipotentes : with Carthage for Dominion, in the first Pu-They were more war-like than politick. Who- nick War.

ø. I I.

course of whose victories it pleased God to The estate of Carthage before it entred into War with Rome.

THE City of Carthage had stood above I fix hundred years, when first it began to contend with Rome for the mastery War? Why not after the third Funick, or of Sicil. It fore-went Rome one hundred, and after the Numantian? At all these times lifty years in antiquity of foundation: but they had good leifure: and then especially in the honour of great atchievements, it had they both leifure and fit opportunity, excelled far beyond this advantage of time. when under the conduct of Marins, they had For Carthage had extended her Domininewly vanquished the Cimbri, and Tentones, on in Africa it felf, from the West of Cyby whom the Country of Ganl had been rene, to the streights of Hercules, about pitioully wasted. Surely, the words of Tully one thousand and five hundred miles in were true; That with other Nations the Ro- length, wherein stood three hundred Cimans fought for Dominion, with the Gauls ties. It had subjected all spain, even to the Pyrenean Mountains, together with all the Therefore they attempted not the Con- Islands in the Mediterranean Sea, to the quest of Gaule, until they were Lords of all West of sicil; and of sicil the better part. It other Countreys, to them known. We on flourished about seven hundred and thirty the other fide, held only the one half of our years, before the destruction thereof by own Illand; the other half being inhabited scipio: who, besides other spoils, and all by a Nation (unless perhaps in wealth and that the Souldiers reserved, carried thence numbers of men somewhat inferiour ) every four hundred and seventy thousand weight way equal to our felves; a Nation ancient- of filver, which make or our mony ( if our ly and itrongly allied to our enemies the pounds differ not ) fourteen hundred and rious City ran the same fortune, which thority in their Councils. This confusion in many other great ones have done, both be- Government, together with the trust that fore and fince. The ruinc of the goodliest they reposed in hired Souldiers, were helppieces of the world fore-shows the dissoluti- ing causes of their destruction in the end. on of the whole.

About one hundred years after such time ine, were their avarice and their cruelty. (4)1.1.2 as it was cast down, the Senate of Rome (a) Their avarice was shewed both in exact. All 1 as it was can down, the sealing ing from their Vaffals ( befides ordinary 19) The caused it to be re-built: and by Gracehus ing from their Vaffals ( befides ordinary 19) The caused in the case of the caused in th it was called Junonia: it was again and tributes) the one (b) half of the fruits of Table again abandoned and re-peopled, taken the earth; and in conferring of great offiand re-taken; by Genfericus the Vandal, ces, not upon gentle and merciful per-uses by Bellifarius under Justinian, by the Per fons, but upon those who would best tyran-min metans. It is now nothing. The feat treasures. Their cruelty appeared, input-the b metans. It is now nothing: and while ting them to death without mercy, that had benefit thereof was exceeding ftrong: and while neck of Land; which passage had two n . revolt from them: the other did break of the neck of Land;

it felf towards the West-continent, and lest ten thousand pound sterling. So as this glo- people in latter times usurped too great au-Two other more forcible causes of their ruby Beunjarius under justinian, by the Maho-nize over the people, to augment their maker, fans, by the Fgyptians, and by the Maho-nize over the people, to augment their maker, the Carthaginians commanded the Sea, in- offended through ignorance: the one of the carthaginians the Carthaginians communication of the Carthaginians communication of the Carthaginians compaffed it about, these rendred them odious to their Vassals, but size faving that it was tyed to the Main by a whom it made ready upon all occasions, to be faving that it was tyed to the Main by a whom it made ready upon all occasions, to be shade to and more of breadth (Appian laith, the time spirits of their Generals, by presenting the dismiles and one furlong ) by which we may be the heat of their actions abroad, the fear fundament be induced to believe the common re of a certificate at home. Hereby it came being port, that the City it self was above twen- to pas, that many good Commanders of them ty miles in compass; if not that of strabe, the aringginian Forces, after some great there's affirming the circuit to have been twice as loss received, have desperately cast them allow felves, with all that remained under theiring the It had three Walls without the Wall of charge, into the throat of destruction; hold win to the City; and between each of those, three ing it necessary, either to repair their lossesseign or four Streets, with Vaults under ground, quickly, or to ruine all together: and few ment of thirty foot deep; in which they had of them have dared to manage their own pale place for three hundred Elephants, and all beft projects, after that good form, where and all their food: over these they had stables for in they first conceived them, for fear lest to eas their provender. They had also lodgings in the Streets, between these out-walls, Rule, to crucifie, not only the unhappy adaption to the continuous and the continuou for four thousand horse-men, and twenty Captain, but even him, whose bad counsel was in thousand foor-men, which (according to had prosperous event. The faults, where he can the discipline used now by those of china) with, in general, they of Carthage are taxed, among never peftered the City. It had towards by Roman Historians, I find to be these; lust, The He the South part, the Castle of Egrsa; to cruelty, avarice, crast, unfaithfulness, and base which Servius gives two and twenty sur-perjury. Whether the Romans themselves and its contractions of the servines and the servines and the servines and the servines and the servines and the servines and the servines and the servines are servines and the servines and the servines are servines are servines are servines and the servines are servines are servines and the servines are longs in compass, that make two miles and were free from the same crimes, let the tryal of permitted a half. This was the same piece of ground be referred unto their actions. The first at a half. It is was the tame piece of ground be referred unto their actions. In mineral which Dido obtained of the Lybians, when league between Caribage and Rome, was we all the the got leave to buy only fo much Land of ry ancient: having been made the year fol-west them, as the could compats with an Ox lowing the expulsion of Tarquin. In that had not been as the could compate with an Ox hide. On the West-side it had also the Salt-league the Carthaginians had the superiori- field Sea, but in the nature of a standing pool; for ty, as imposing upon the Romans the more than a certain arm of Land, fastened to the strict conditions. For it was agreed, that down ground, on which the City stood, stretched the Romans should not so much as have desired it self towards the West-continent, and lett but seventy foot open for the Sea to enter. Over this standing Sea was built a most sumptuous Arsenals, having their Ships and Gallies riding under it.

The form of their Common-weal resembled that of sparta; for they had titulary Kings, and the Arissocial Power of Senators. But (as Rezim well observeth) the CHAP. I. trade in some part of Africk, nor suffer and strends in this war with Pyrrbus; and that or cape, then called the fair Promontory, un- affift the state of Rome, by sending an Army the other fide, no Haven in Italy was forbid- ful, against the Epirots. matte product it, at the Carthaginians intreaty) [fure, purfue their buffness in siell: which make was more strict than the former: prohibiting caused them to make so goodly an offer. Africa, or in the Illand of Sardinia.

cathaginians prevailed at one time, the si-cilians, either by their own valour, or by

So many disasters in an enterprise, that being a subtile Nation, easily fore-saw, that the rest.

this of theirs to pass beyond the headland, the people of Carthage were very willing to less it were by force of tempest: whereason into Italy; if their help were thought need-den to the Carthaginians. A fecond league It was indeed the main defire of the Carwas made long after, which (howsoever it thaginans, to hold Pyrrhus so hardly to his hath pleased Livy to say, that the Romans work in Italy, that they might at good leithe Romans to have trade in any part of But the Romans were two high-minded:and refuled to accept any tuch aid of their By these two treaties it may appear, that friend, lest it should blemish their reputathe Carthaginians had an intent not only to tion, and make them feem unable to stand keep the Romans (as perhaps they did other by their own strength. Yet the message was people ) from getting any knowledge taken lovingly, as it ought; and the former of the state of Africk; but to counte-league between Rome and Carthage renewed; nance and uphold them, in their troubling with covenants added, concerning the preall Italy, whereby they themselves might sent business; That if either of the two Cihave the better means to occupy all sicil, ties made peace with Pyrrhus, it should be whilest that Island should be destitute of with reservation of liberty, to assist the Italian succours. Hereupon we find good other, in case that Pyrrhus should invade eicause of the joy that was in carthage, ther of their Dominions. All this notwithand of the Crown of gold, weighing twen- standing, and notwithstanding that the same ty and five pound, fent from thence to Rome, Mago went and treated with Pyrrhus, using when the Samnites were overthrown. But all means to found his intentions (a matter the little state of Rome pervailed faster in very difficult, where one upon every new Italy, than the great power of Carthage did occasion, changeth his own purposes ) yet in Sicil. For that mighty army of three hun- Pyrrhus found leifure to make a step into Sidred thousand men, which Hamnibal condu- cil: whether though in fine he was neither ded out of Africk into Sicil, wan only two getter nor faver, yet he clean defeated the Citiss therein: many great fleets were devoured by tempess; and howoever the departure from thence, as far from any end, the affiftance of their good friends out of from the first undertaking had been so Greece, did at some other time repair their strongly pursued, through the length of maown loses, and take revenge upon those ny generations, might well have induced Invaders. But never were the people of the Carthaginians to believe, that an higher Carthage in better hope of getting all Sicil, providence resisted their intendment. But than when the death of Agathocles the Ty- their defire of winning that fruitful Illand, rant, had left the whole Island in combu- was so inveterate, that with unwearied paflion; the estate of Greece being such, at the tience, they still continued in hope of so fame time, that it seemed impossible for any much the greater an harvest, by how much fuccour to be fent from thence. But whileft their cost and pain therein buried had been the Carthaginians were busie in making their the more. Wherefore they re-continued advantage of this good opportunity; Pyr-their former courses; and by force or pra-thus, invited by the Tarentines and their clice, recovered in few years all their old fellows, came into Italy, where he made possessions: making peace with Syracuse, the tharp war upon the Romans. These news chief City of the Island, that so they might were unpleafing to the Carthaginians, who, the better enable themselves to deal with the same busie disposition which had Somewhat before this time, a troop of brought this Prince out of Greece into Italy, Campanian Souldiers, that had served under would as eafily transport him over into Sicil, Agathocles, being entertained within Mefas foon as he could finish his Roman war. To Jana as friends, and finding themselves too Prevent this danger, they fent Mago Embas-Istrong for the Citizens, took advantage of fadour to Rome; who declared in their name, the power that they had to do wrong; and that they were forry to hear what mifad- with perfidious cruelty, flew those that had venture had befallen the Romans their good trusted them; which done, they occupied

Ddddd

CHAP. I.

whom they had murdered. These Merce-home, and levying an Army of his own Cinaries called themselves Mamertines. Good tizens, well trained and obedient, he hasted Souldiers they were: and like enough it again towards Messana, and was by the Mais, that meer desperation of finding any that mertines ( grown proud by their former s, that meer desperation of intering any their victory over the Mutiners ) incountred in would approve their barbarous treachery, added rage unto their froutness. Haveing therefore not any other colour of their most fignal victory; and leading with him that they did not only defend Messar resolved to give themselves to the Carthagiagainst the Cities of sicil Confederate, to nians, others to crave assistance of the Rowit, against the Syracusans, and others, but mans: to each of whom the several faction they rather wan upon them; yea, and up-dispatched Embassadors for the very same on the Carthaginians, exacting tribute from purpole. many Neighbour places. But it was not The Carabaginians were foon ready to lay long, ere fortune turned her back to these hold upon the good offer: so that a Cap-Mamertines, the Syracusans wan fast upon tain of theirs got into the Castle of Mesana, them; and finally, confining them within whereof they that had fent for him gave the walls of Alessana, they also with a powerful army besieged the City. It hapned ill, they that were more inclinable to the Rothat about the same time a contention be- mans, had brought their Companions to 6 gan between the Syracufan Souldiers, then good agreement, that this Captain, either lying at Magara, and the Citizens of Syra- by force, or by cunning, was turned out of cufe, and Governours of the Common wealth; doors, and the Town referved for other which proceeded to far, that the Army ele- Masters. cted two Governours among themselves, to These news did much offend the people wit, Artemidorus and Hieron, that was after- of Carthage; who crucified their Captain, ward King. Hieron, being for his years ex- as both a Traitor and Coward 5 and fent a cellently adorned with many vertues, al-Fleet and Army to befiege Meffana, 33 2 thoughit was contrary to the policy of that Town that rebelled, having once been State, to approve any election made by the theirs. Hieron the new-made King of Spra Souldiers; yet for the great clemency used cuse (to gratifie his people incensed with at his first entrance, he was by general con the smart of injuries lately received) added fent established and made Governour. This his forces to the Carthaginians, with whom office he rather used as a Scale, thereby to he entred into a league, for exterminating climb to some higher degree, than rested the Mamerines out of Sicil. So the Mamercontent with his present preserment.

whereby to strengthen himself within the Sea, and with an Army on the one side of the City ; and somewhat without it , that gave Town, whilest Hieron with his Syracufani impediment to his obtaining, and fafe lay before it on the other side. keeping of the place he fought, to wit, a powerful party within the Town, and certain mutinous troops of Souldiers without, the streights of Sicil: which passing by night often and easily moved to sedition and tu- with notable audacity, he put himself into mult. For the first, whereby to strengthen the Town, and sending Messengers to the himself, he took to Wife the daughter of Carthaginians, and to Hieron, required them Leptines , a man of the greatest estimation to depart ; signifying unto them that the and authority among the 5 praculians. For Mamertines were now become confederate the second, leading out the Army to besiege with the people of Rome, and that there Mellana, he quartered all those companies, fore he was come to give them protection, which he held suspected, on the one side of even by force of War, if reason wouldnot the City, and leading the rest of his Horse prevail. and Foot unto the other fide, as if he would and Foot unto the other fide, as if he would have affaulted it in two feveral parts, he footnets began the War between Rome and Carmarched away under the covert of the thage; wherein it will then be time to flew Town walls, and left the Mutiners to be cut on which part was the Justice of the quar-

the City, Lands, Goods, and Wives of those in pieces by the affieged: So returning proceedings, than the law of the stronger, their Commander captive into Syracuse, himthey over-ran all the Country round about felf by common content was elected and faluted King. Hereupon the Mamertines, finding In this course, at first, they speed so well, themselves utterly enfeebled, some of them

tines on all sides were closed up within Mef-In brief, there was somewhat wanting, Sana: the Carthaginians lying with a Navy at dered.

ø. III.

The beginning of the first Punick war. That it wis unjustly undertaken by the Romans.

bed to Rome, and not only fearing to be they were wont to receive from their feltaken by the Epirot, but much more di-low-thieves. frusting the Carthaginians, as likely to seize The Romans could not suddenly resolve. upon it in that buffetime, fought aid from whether the way of honesty or of profit the Romans, and obtained from them a Le- were to be followed; they evermore pregion, confisting of four thousand fouldi-tended the one, but they many times walked ers, under the conduct of Decius Campanus, in the other. They confidered, how con-selves with an obstinate resolution: yet in the fure. red to their former liberty and estates.

rell, when some actions of the Romans honourably through all quarters of Isais: lately foregoing this, have been first consi- messengers came to Rome from Messana. defiring help against the Carthaginians, and syracultans, that were in a readiness to inflict the like punishment upon the Mamertines for the like offence. A very impudent request it was, which they made: who having both given example of that villany to the Roman Souldiers, and holpen them with Hen Pyrthus began his war in Italy, joynt forces to make it good, do intreat the the City of Rhegium, being well afte- Judges to give them that atfiftance, which

ers, under the conduct of Details and afforded and afford ter a while, this Roman Garrison, considering ons: seeing for the same offences they had at good leifure, the fact of the Mamertines, lately put to torment, and to the fword. argonomietted in Messana (a City in sicil, situate almost opposite to Rhegium, and no otherwise divided than by a narrow Sea, held the description of the Carthaginian Dowhich severeth it from Italy ) and rather minion, and that they were already Lords weighing the greatness of the booty, than of the best part of Africa, of the Mediterran the odiousness of the villary, by which it Islands, of a great part of Spain, and some was gotten; refolved finally, to make the part of Sicil it felf; whilest also they feared, like purchase, by taking the like wick-that syracuse therein seated (a City in beaued courfe. Confederating therefore them- ty and riches, little at that time inferiour to felves with the Mamertines, they en Carthage, and far superiour to Rome it self ) tertained their Hosts of Rhegium, aftertained their Hosts of Rhegium, after the same manner; dividing the spoil, estate spake for these Mamertines: who, if and all which that State had, among them-they (driven to despair by the Romans) should deliver up Mellana, with those other When complaint was made to the Senate holds that they had, into the hands of the and people of Rome, of this outrage; they Carthaginians, then would nothing stand befinding their honour thereby greatly stain-tween Carthage, and the Lordship of Sicilifor ed ( for no Nation in the world made a syracuse it self could not, for want of succor. more severe profession of justice, than they any long time subsist, if once the Carthaginidid during all the time of their growing ans that were Masters of the Sea, did fasten greatness, ) resolved, after a while, to take upon that passage from the main Land. It revenge upon the offenders. And this they was further considered; that the opportuniperformed shortly after, when they had ty of Messana was such, as would not only quenched the fires, kindled in Italy by Pyr- debarr all fuccours out of the continent, rbm. For, not with standing that those Romans from arrival in Sicil; but would serve as a in Rhegium (as men for the foulness of their bridge, whereby the Carthaginians might fact, hopelels of pardon) defended them have entrance into Italy, at their own plea-end, the affailants forced them; and those These considerations of profit at hand, and which escaped the present fury, were of preventing danger, that threatned from brought bound to Rome, where, after the a-far, did so prevail above all regard of usual torments by whipping inflicted, accord- honesty, that the Mamertines were admiting to the custome of the country, they had ted into Confederacy with the Romans, and their heads stricken from their shoulders, Ap. Claudus the Conful, presently dispatcht and the people of Rhegium were again resto- away for Messana: into which he entred, and undertook the protection of it, as is This execution of Justice being newly shewed before. The besiegers were little performed, and the fame thereof founding troubled with his arrival; and less mody to relieve them in their wants; and they Syracuje.

Ddddd 2

In executing this determination, it was Now in this place I hold it seasonable, to very beneficial to him, that the enemy lay confider of those grounds, whereupon the encamped in fuch fort, as one quarter was Romans entred into this war; not how pronot well able to relieve another in diftres. fitable they were, nor how agreeable to rules Hieron was now exposed to the same dan- of honesty (for questionless the enterprise ger, whereinto he had wilfully cast his own was much to their benefit, though as much mutinous followers not long before: only to their shame ) but how allowable in strict he was strong enough (or thought so) to terms of lawfulness; whereupon they built make good his own quarter, without help all their allegations in maintenance thereof others. Against him Ap. Claudius issued of. That the Mamertines did yield themforth, and (not attempting, by unexpected selves, and all that they had, into the Romans fally, to surpise his trenches ) arranged hands (as the Campanes, distressed by the his men in order of battel, wherewith he samnites, had done ) I cannot find : neipresented him. The Syracusan wanted not ther can I find how the messengers of those courage to fight; but surely he wanted good folk, whereof one part had already adadvice: else would he not have hazzarded mitted the Carthaginians, could be enabled all his power against an enemy of whom he to make any such surrendry in the publick had made no trial; when it had been easie, name of all. and as much as was requisite, to defend his If therefore the Mamertines, by no lawown Camp. It may be, that he thought to full furrendry of themselves and their posget honour, wherewith to adorn the begin- seffions, were become subject unto Rome, by ning of his reign. But he was well beaten, what better title could the Romans affilt and driven to fave himself within his tren- the Mamertines, against their most ancient ches: by which loss, he learned a point of friends the Carthaginians, than they might wisdom, that stood him and his Kingdom in have aided the Campanes against the Samgood ftead all the days of his life. It was nites, without the same condition? which a foolish desire of revenge, that had made was (as they themselves confessed) by none the Syracustans so busie, in helping those of at all. But let it be supposed, that some Carthage, against the Mamertines.

nians, Syracuse it self must have sought help pany of Pyrates, Thieves, Out-laws, Murdefrom Rome, against those friends which it rers, or such other Malefactors, can by any now fo diligently affifted. Hieron had ( in good fuccess of their villany, obtain the prirespect of those two mighty Cities) but a viledge of civil societies, to make league or small stock, which it behoovesh him to go truce; yea, or to require fair war: butare vern well: fuch another loss would have by all means, as most pernicious vermine, to made him almost bankrupt. Therefore he be rooted out of the world. I will not take quietly brake up his Camp: and retired upon me to maintain that opinion of some home: intending to let them frand to their Civilians, that a Prince is not bound to hold adventures, that had hope to be gainers by his faith with one of these; it were a Posthe bargain. The next day, Claudius perceiv- tion of ill consequence: This I hold; that ing the Sicilian Army gone, did with great no one Prince or State can give protection to courage, and with much alacrity of his Soul- fuch as these, as long as any other is using the diers, give charge upon the Carthaginians: [word of vengeance against them, without wherein he sped to well, that the enemy for becoming necessary to their crimes. Wherefook both field and camp, leaving all the fore we may efteem this action of the

wed, with his requiring them to defitt from Country open to the Romans; who having their attempt. For they did far exceed him spoiled all round, without resistance, inin number of men; the whole Illand was read tended to lay fiege unto the great City of were ftrong enough at Sca, to hinder any These prosperous beginnings, howsoever fupply from getting into the Town. All this they animated the Romans, and filled them appine himself well understood: and against with hopes of attaining to greater matters. all this he thought the stiff mettal of his than at the first they had expected : Yet did ant this he thought the metal. There-they not imprint any form of terrour in the form he refulved to iffue out into the field, City of Carthage, that had well enough reand to let the enemies know, that his paired greater losses than this; in which no coming was to fend them away from the more was loft than what had been prepared Town; not to be besieged by them within against the Mamertines alone, without any Sufficion of War from Rome.

point serving to clear this doubt, is lost in Had Messana been taken by the Carthagi- all Histories. Doubtless it is, that no comtheir attempt. For they did far exceed him spoiled all round, without resistance, inin number of men; the whole Illand was reatended to lay flege unto the great City of dy to relieve them in their wants; and they Syracuje. were strong enough at Sca, to hinder any fupply from getting into the Town. All this they animated the Komans, and filled them Appus himfelf well understood; and against with hopes of attaining to greater matters. all this he thought the stiff mettal of his than at the first they had expected : Yet did Roman Souldiers a sufficient remedy. There-they not imprint any form of terrour in the fore he resolved to issue out into the field, City of Carthage, that had well enough reand to let the enemies know, that his paired greater losses than this; in which no coming was to fend them away from the more was loft than what had been prepared Town; not to be belieged by them within against the Mamertines alone, without any

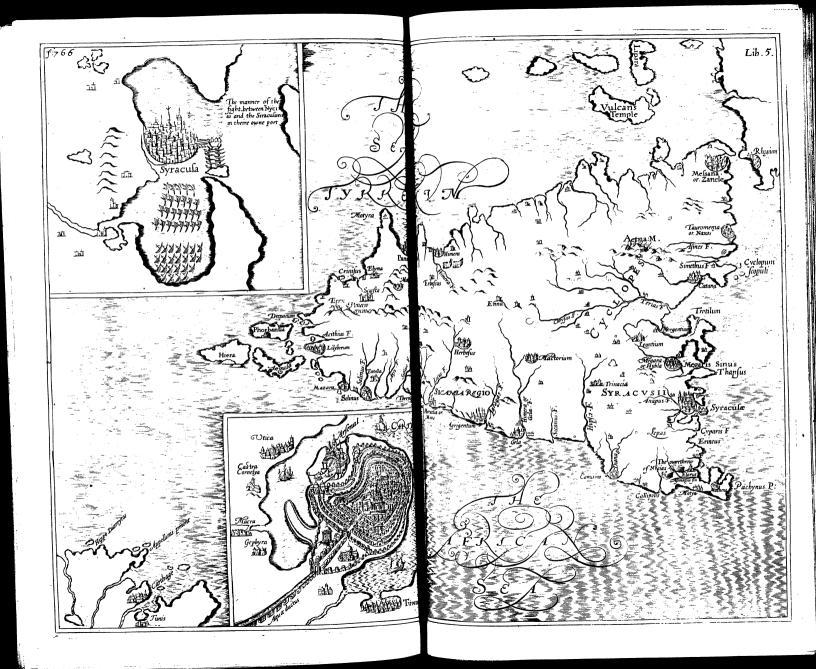

In executing this determination, it was Now in this place I hold it seasonable, to very beneficial to him, that the enemy lay confider of those grounds, whereupon the encamped in such fort, as one quarter was Romans entred into this war; not how pronot well able to relieve another in distress. Stable they were, nor how agreeable to rules Hieron was now exposed to the same dan- of honesty (for questionless the enterprise ger, whereinto he had wilfully cast his own was much to their benefit, though as much mutinous followers not long before: only to their shame ) but how allowable in strict he was ftrong enough (or thought fo) to terms of lawfulness; whereupon they built make good his own quarter, without help all their allegations in maintenance thereof others. Against him Ap. Claudius issued of. That the Mamertines did yield themforth, and (, not attempting, by unexpected felves, and all that they had, into the Romans fally, to surpise his trenches ) arranged hands (as the Campanes, distressed by the his men in order of battel, wherewith he samnites, had done) I cannot find : neipresented him. The Syracusan wanted not ther can I find how the messengers of those courage to fight; but surely he wanted good folk, whereof one part had already adadvice: else would he not have hazzarded mitted the Carthaginians, could be enabled all his power against an enemy of whom he to make any such surrendry in the publick had made no trial; when it had been easie, name of all. and as much as was requisite, to defend his If therefore the Mamertines, by no lawown Camp. It may be, that he thought to get honour, wherewith to adorn the beginfull furrendry of themselves and their posselfions, were become subject unto Rome, by ning of his reign. But he was well beaten, what better title could the Romans affilt and driven to fave himself within his tren- the Mamertines, against their most ancient ches: by which loss, he learned a point of friends the Carthaginians, than they might wisdom, that stood him and his Kingdom in have aided the Campanes against the Samgood stead all the days of his life. It was nites, without the same condition? which a foolish desire of revenge, that had made was (as they themselves confessed) by none the Syracufians fo busie, in helping those of at all. But let it be supposed, that some Carthage, against the Mamertines.

Had Messana been taken by the Carthagi- all Histories. Doubtless it is, that no comnians, Syracufe it self must have sought help pany of Pyrates, Thieves, Out-laws, Murdefrom Rome, against those friends which it rers, or such other Malefactors, can by any now fo diligently affifted. Hieron had ( in good fuccess of their villany, obtain the prirespect of those two mighty Cities) but a viledge of civil societies, to make league or small stock, which it behooveth him to go truce; yea, or to require fair war: butare vern well: fuch another los would have by all means, as most pernicious vernine, to made him almost bankrupt. Therefore he be rooted out of the world. I will not take quietly brake up his Camp: and retired upon me to maintain that opinion of some home: intending to let them stand to their Civilians, that a Prince is not bound to hold adventures, that had hope to be gainers by his faith with one of these; it were a Postthe bargain. The next day, Claudius perceiv- tion of ill consequence: This I hold; that ing the Sicilian Army gone, did with great no one Prince or State can give protection to courage, and with much alacrity of his Soul- fuch as these, as long as any other is using the diers, give charge upon the Carthaginians: sword of vengeance against them, without ved, with his requiring them to defilt from Country open to the Romans; who having

These prosperous beginnings, howsoever fusicion of War from Rome.

point serving to clear this doubt, is lost in wherein he feed to well, that the enemy for | becoming necessary to their crimes. Wherefook both field and camp, leaving all the fore we may esteem this action of the

hesiegers. The great Alexander was so far tormed as well before and after, as in this perswaded herein; that he did put to sword present War. all the Branchiada (a people in Sogdiana) and razed their City, notwithstanding that they Demie-Isle, adjoyning to Italy, as a part of joyfully entertained him as their Lord and Brutium in Calabria, near unto Rhegium, and King; because they were descended from a afterward by violence of tempett severed company of Milesians, who to gratifie King from the same: it is a general opinion of all Merker, had robbed a Temple, and were by antiquity. But at what certain time this him rewarded with the Town and Country, division happened, there is no memorial reand peaceable possession gives jus acquisum, a kind of right by prescription unto think it to have been done by the rage and that which was first obtained by wicked violence of the tide, and surges of the Sea. means: and doth free the descendants from Either of these opinions may be true; for so the crime of their Ancestors, whose villanies was Eubea severed from Beotia; Atalante they do not exercise. But that the same and Marcis from Enbaa; Sillie here in Enggeneration of Thieves, which by a detesta- land, from the cape of Cornwall; and Britble fact hath purchased a rich Town, should tain it felf ( as may feem by Verstigans argubeacknowledged a lawfull company of Ciments) from the opposite continent of Gaule. tizens, there is no shew of right. For even But for Sicil, they which lend their ears to the Conquerer that by open War obtaineth fables, do attribute the cause of it to Neptune a Kingdom, doth not confirm his title, by (as Eustathius witnesseth ) who with his those victories which gave him first possesfion: but length of time is requifite to fon of Holus, divided it from the main land, establish him, unless by some alliance with and so made it an Island, which before was the ancient inheritors, he can better the but a Demie-Isle; that by that means he violence of his claim, as did our King Henry might the more safely inhabit, and possess the the first, by his marriage with Mande, that same. Diodorus Siculus, moved by the auof justice, in this quarrel, than had the opened the Sicilian streights, as Hercules did Gothes , Hunnes , Vandols , and other Na- those of Gibralter. tions, of the Wars that they made upon the They which value the Islands of the mid-Roman Empire, wherein Rome her felf, in land Sea, according to their quantity and the time of her visitation, was burnt to the content, do make this the greatest, as Eutants thereof.

> 6. IV. Of the Island of Sicil.

> > †. I.

Romans to far from being justifiable, by any longer time the hrst victories of Appius pretence of confederacy made with them; Clanding, the objects of the Roman hopes; asthat contrariwise, by admitting this nest but the Dominion of all sicil being the of Murderers and Thieves into their prote- prize, for which Rome and Carthage are fion, they justly deserved to be warred up about to contend: it will be agreeable unon themselves, by the people of sicil; yea, to the order, which in the like cases we although Messana had been taken, and the have observed, to make a brief collection Munertines all flain, e're any news of the ofthings concerning that noble Itland, which Confederacy had been brought unto the have been the stage of many great acts, per-

That Sicil was fometimes a Peninsula, or which these of their posterity enjoyed. Ne- maining in any ancient writer. Strabo, Pliny, Park and vertheless in course of humane justice, long and Dionisius affirm, that it was caused by statility. an earth-quake; Silius and Calfiodorus do three-torked Mace, in favour of Jocastus, the wasdaughter of Malcolme, King of the Scots, thority of Hesiodus, ascribeth the labour of oren. 1.43 by Margaret, the Neece of Edmund Ironside. Sundring it from Italy, to Orion: who that Diod. 1.6. Wherefore I conclude, that the Romans he might be compared to Hercules ( cutting orid de hadnobetter ground (if they had so good) through the rocks and mountains) first F.f. 4.

stathius and strabe, who affirm this, not only to excell the rest for bigness, but also for goodness of soil. As concerning the form of this Island, Pomponius Mela faith, it is like that Capital letter of the Greek, which they call Delta, namely, that it hath the figure of a triangle; which is generally known to be true. That the whole Island was consecrated The qualitie of the Island: and the first inhabi- to Ceres and Proserpina, all old writers with one consent affirm. To Ceres it was dedicated, because it first taught the rules of The defence of the Mamertines, or the fetting and sowing of Corn: to Proserpina, possession of Messana, being now no not so much for that she was from hence violently, Pintarch and Diodorus do report for truth ) was afterward built, were driven by the Pethat Pluto, as foon as she, uncovering her felt, Lagi from their own feats, and finding no first shewed her self to be seen of him, gave place upon the Continent, which they were her the Dominion thereof.

-58

try, there is a famous tellimony witten by Greeks fent any Colonies thither: and (faith Cierro, in the fecond Oration against Verres, Philiftus eighty years before the fall of Tros. where he faith, that Marcus Cato did call it Thele siculi gave the name of Sicilia, to the the Granary and Store-boule of the Common- Island; and making war upon the Sicani, wealth, and the Nurse of the vulgar fort. The drave them from the East and Northern part fame Cicero doth add in that place; that it thereof, into the West and South. At their was not only the Store-house of the people landing; they first built the City Zancle, of Rome: but also that it was a well-fur- afterward called Messana; and after that, nithed treasure. For without any cost or Catana, Leontine, and Syracuse it self, beating charge of ours (faith he) it hath usually from thence the Etolians, who long before clothed, maintained, and furnished our had set up a Town in that place. As for the greatelt Armies with leather, apparrel and name of Syracuse it was not known, till such greater crimes with reacher, apparent fame time as Archias of Corinth (long after) won thing of it. Whatsoever Sicilie doth yield that part of the Island from the Siculi; (faith Solinss) whether by the fun, and temperature of the air, or by the industry and disposses the Etolians thereof, but some labour of man, it is accounted next unto hundred years after their descent, and after those things that are of best estimation: such time as they had founded the Cities were it not that fuch things as the earth first before named with Nea, Hybla, Trinacria, putteth forth, are extreamly over-grown and divers others. with faffron. Diodorus Siculus faith, that in the fields near unto Leontium, and in divers out of Italy, called Morgetes; who were other places of this Island, wheat doth grow thence driven by the Oenotrians. These sat of it telf without any labour or looking to down in that part of sicil, where they afterof the husbandman. Martianus sheweth, ward raised the Cities of Morgantum, and that there were in it fix Colonies, and fixty Leontium. For at this time the Siculi were Cities: there are that reckon more, where- divided, and by a civil war greatly infee-

That Sicil was at first possessed and inhabited by Giants, Leftrigones, and Cyclopes, barbarous people, and uncivil; all histories that was set up in the Temple of Venus Ergand fables do jointly with one consent averr. cina; which he did with so great Art, as Yet Thue dides faith, that these savage peo- those that beheld it thought it rather to be ple dwelt only in one part of the Island. living, than counterfeit. Afterward the sicani, a people of spain, possessed it. That these sicani were not tertained Dadalus, prepares to invade the bred in the Isle (although some so think) Thucydrides and Diodorns do very constantly rived, Cocalus doubting his own sterngth, avouch.

cani were invaded by the Siculi; who, inha nos by treaton, and perswades the Cretani, violently taken by Pluto, as because (which biting that part of Latium, whereon Romable to master and inhabit, passed over into Of the fertility and riches of this Coun-this Island, three hundred years before the

After these siculi came another Nation of the names are found scatteringly in many bled. Among these ancient stories, we find the last voyage, and the death of Minos, King Now besides many famous acts, done by of Crete. Thucydides, an historian of unquethe people of this Island, as well in peace as stionable fincerity, reports of Minos, that he War, there be many other things which made conquest of many Islands: and some have made it very renowned, as the birth of fuch business, perhaps, drew him into sicil. Ceres; the ravishing of Proserpina; the Gi- But the common report is, that he came this ant Enceladus; the mount Æina; Seylla and ther in pursuit of Dedalus. The tale goes Charybds, with other antiquities and rari- thus: Dadalus fleeing the revenge of Minos, ties; besides those learned men, the noble came into sicil, to Cocalus, King of the sica-Mathematician, Archimedes; the famous ni, and, during his abode there, he built a Geomatrician, Euclides; the painful Histori- place of great strength, near unto Megara, an Diodorus; and Empedocles, the deep Phi- for Cocalus to lay up his treasure in; together with many notable works, for which he was greatly admired and honoured.

Among the rest, he cast a Ramin gold,

Now Minos , hearing that Cocalus had en-Territory of Cocalus; but when he was arpromiseth to deliver Dedalus. This he per-Of these it was named Sicania. These Si- forms not, but in the mean while, kills MiGreeks at the fiege thereof.

ges and Messapii.

himself the founder.

their descents, they built the goodly City of from cruelty and oppression. Panormus, now called Palerma.

gan to straggle in those parts.

Lybia and Greece, had Hercules, Orestes, Anta- hundred; from water, to wine and drun-

Afmos his followers, to inhabit a part of St-118, 13phen, and the like; as Denmark had ill; the better (as it feems) to itrengthen Starehaterus, remembred by Sazo Gramma- 106. himself against the Siculi. Hereupon the tiens; as Scylbia, Eritanie, and other Regions centum (their King being dead) gave their had Giants for their first inhabitants: fo this confent, and builded for themselves the City Isle of Sicil had her Leftrigones and Cyclopes. of Minoa after the name of the King Minos. This dicourse I could also reject for fained After, they likewise built the Town of En- and fabulous, did not Aloges make us know, giam, now called Gange: and these were the that the Zamzummins, Emins, Anakims, and first Ciries, built by the Greeks in Sicil, about Og of Basan, with others, which sometime two ages before the war of Iroy; for the inhabited the Mountains and Defarts of grand-children of Minos ferved with the Moab, Ammon, and Mount Seir, were men of exceeding strength and stature, and of the But after such time as the Cretains under-races of Giants; and were it not, that Tertul-flood, that their King had by treason been lian, St. Augustine, Nicephorus, Procopius, Tatal de made away; they gathered together a great Isladore, Pliny, Diodore, Herodolur, Solinia, Refor. Army, to invade Cocalia: and landing near Plutarch, and many other Authors, have class the unto Camicus, they besieged the same five confirmed the opinion: Yea, Viffutius, in his 65, 10, 52 unto Camicus, they beneged the fame nee confirmed the opinion: 1ea, repairing the niss of the years, but in vain. In the end (being forced fecond Navigation into America, had re- 600, Mag. to return, without any revenge taken) they ported that himself had seen the like men 39.26.37 were rackt on the coaft of Italy, and having in tho'e parts. Again, whereas the felf-fame Proportion no means to repair their ships, nor the holis written of all Nations, that is written of Good, Par. nour they had loft, they made good the any one; as touching their simplicity of life, to your place whereon they fell, and built Hyria, or their mean fare, their feeding on Acorns and Hyrium, between the two famous Ports of roots, their poor cottages, the covering of Frundusum and Tarentum. Of these Cretans their bodies with the skins of beasts, their came those Nations, afterward called Lapy hunting, their arms, and weapons, and their warfare, their first passages over great Ri-After the taking of Troy, Egeftus and Ely- vers and Arms of the Sea, upon rafts of trees me, brought with them certain troops into tied together; and afterwards their making sicil, and feated themselves among the si- boats first of twigs and leather, then of cani; where they built the Cities of Egefta wood; first with Oars, and then with Sails; that they esteemed as gods, the first finders It is faid, that Anen visited these places out of Arts; as of Husbandry, of Laws, and in his paffage into Italy: and that some of of Policy: it is a matter, that makes me netthe Trojans, his followers, were left behind ther to wonder at, nor to doubt of it. For him in these Towns of sicil: whereof there they all lived in the same newness of time, want not good Authors, that make Eneas which we call old time, and had all the same want of his instruction, which ( after the About the same time, the Phenicians seiz- Creator of all things ) hath by degrees ed upon the Promontories of Pachinus, and taught all Mankind. For other teaching Lilybeum, and upon certain small Isles ad-had they none, that were removed far off joyning to the main Island : which they for | from the Hebrews, (who inherited the knowtilied, to secure the trades that they had with ledge of the first Patriarchs) than that from the Silicians; like as the Portugals have done variable effects they began, by time and in the East-India, at Goa, Ormus, Mosambique, degrees, to find out the causes: from whonce and other places. But the Phanicians stayed came Philosophy Natural; as the Moral did not there; for after they had once affured from diforder and confusion; and the Law

But it is certain, that the Age of Time hath These we find, were the Nations that brought forth stranger and more incredible inhabited the Isle of sicil, before the war of things, than the Infancy. For we have now Troy, and ere the Greeks in any numbers be- greater Giants for vice and injustice, than the World had in those dayes, for bodily It may perchance feem strange to the Rea- strength; for cottages, and houses of clay der, that in all ancient stories, he finds one and timber, we have raised Palaces of stones; and the same beginning of Nations, after the we carve them, we paint them, and adorn flood; and that the first planters in all parts them with gold, insomuch as men are rather of the World were said to be mighty and known by their houses, than their houses by Giant-like men; and that, as Phenicia, Agppt, them; we are fallen from two dishes to two

kennefs:

t. II.

The Plantation of the Greeks in Sicil.

longer than the reft, shall overthrow it.

minion of all sicil: it happened, that one fuccess of the Corinthians, did affail, and ob-Theocles, a Greek, being driven upon that tain the City of Leontium, built and poffest Coast by an Easternly wind, and finding by the Siculi. In brief, the Greeks win true the commendations thereof, which had from the Siculi, and their Affociates, the been thought fabulous, being delivered on- Cities of Catana and Hybla, which in holy by Poets, gave information to the Athe-nour of the Megarians that forc't it, they nians of this his discovery, and proposed called Megara. unto them the benefit of this easie Conquest | About five and forty years after Archias offering to become their guide. But Theo- had taken Syracuse; Antiphemus, and Enticles was as little regarded by the Athenians, mus, the one from Rhodes, the other from as Columbus, in our Grand-fathers times, was Crete, brought an Army into Sicil, and built by the English. Wherefore he took the same Gela, whose Citizens, one hundred and eight course that Columbus afterwards did. He years after, did erect that magnificent and over-laboured not himself in perswading renowned City of Agrigentum, governed acthe Noble Athenians ( who thought them- cording to the Laws of the Dorians. planted of Enbarans.

our Western Princes of Europe: For they in the very Centre of the Island. So did the relate, who had no Pope, that should forbid them to Cumani about the same time, recover from teft and occupy the void places of the World. Ar- the Siculi the City of Zancle, which they modiscod chias of Corinth followed the Eubwans, and had founded in the straight between Sicil te Cay of landed in Sicil, near unto that City, called and Italy. They of Zancle, had been the the Goods afterward * Syracuse : of which, that part founders of Himera. peneticion only was then compassed with a wall, Not long after this, Dorieus the Lacedeme muathe Grecks, Nasos; the Latines, Infula. He ans, and Carthaginians, fearing the neighwith his Corinthians having overcome the bourhood of the Spartans, soon after invadellent

prof, ect rous every entrance, by Land, or Sra. The Port (was for the most part) contineed with beautiful building: and that part which was wathout the Circ, was on both fides bank up, and fusfained with beautiful wills of Marble. The City of it felt was one of the greatest of the World: for of Marble. The Cary of it felt was one of the greatest of the World: for it had in campas (a set stabe reported) without the treble wall charges are: and Zanche was staten by the Massistant at unified and ciphy studies, which make of our miles about eighteen. It was compounded of four Cities (Sarabo sain of sive ) to wit, public, and was the second at the composition of the walls do yet wirech. After such times as the Down of 1.7- the stabes, and Marshies: of which greates the traines and some dations of the walls do yet wirech. After such times as the Down of 1.7- the fixed, and Marshies: The situation of the walls do yet wirech. After such times as the Down of 1.7- the fixed a civen out the Scissions, this goodly Cary for a long time became the feat of Typans. The fist whereof was Gids: The second, 1/2 to the clear. The third, The significant is the sound of the Marshies and younger: The tenth and sist, the systant, who being slum at Leasine's at keight the Admits of the Conduct of Marshies. e d it under the conduct o Marcelles.

kenness from the covering of our bodies Siculi, drave them up into the Country; and with the skins of beasts, not only to filk and after a few years, their multitude increasing. gold, but to the very ikins of men. But to they added unto the City of the Island, that conclude this digression, Time will also take of Acradina, Tyca, and Neapolis. So as well revenge of the excess, which it hath brought by the commodity of the double Port, caforth; Quam longa dies peperit, longiorque pable of as many ships, as any Haven of that auxit, longiffina subruct: Long time brought part of Europe, as by the fertility of the foil. forth, longer time increased it, and a time, syracuse grew up in great hast, to be one of the goodliest Towns of the world. In thort time the Greeks did possess the better part of all the Sea-coast; forcing the sicilians to withdraw themselves into the fasts and mountanous parts of the Illand, makeing their Royal residence in Trinacria.

When the first Inhabitants had contended long enough about the Dochim, the Chalcidian; encouraged by the selves to be well enough already ) to their The Syracusans also, in the seventieth own profit; but went to the Chalcidians, that year after their Plantation, did fet up the were needy and industrious, by whom his City of Acra, in the Mountains; and in the project was gladly entertained. By these ninetieth year Casmena, in the Plains adwas built the City of Naxus, and a Colony joyning; and again in the hundred and thirtieth year of their dwelling in Syracuse, they But the rest of the Greeks were wifer than built Camerina: and soon after that, Enna, > ed and ruined, though the same were again erelong re-edified.

Selinus also was built by a Colony of Met. III.

CHAP. I.

CHAP

Dionyfius his Tyranny.

ercife all manner of Tyranny therein.

the cunning Artificer of a detestable En ter of Thero, who had also usurped the state gine, gave an hollow Bull of Brass, wherein of Agrigentum. to inclosemen, and scorch them to death: oraising the device with this commendation; three Brethren; Hiero, Polyzelus, and Thra-That the noise of one tormented therein, fibring: to the first of which he gave up the should be like unto the bellowing of a Bull. City of Gela, when he had obtained the The Tyrant gave a due reward to the In- Principality of Syracuse. For, after that time, fome matter of conspiracy.

der of Gela : but Cleander having ruled feter succeeded in his room, and greatly afflicted the people of Naxos, of Zancle, of vers others of the ancient Inhabitants, he sicil. forced to acknowledge him their Lord. He against the Siculi, before Hybla.

together with the Cretans, had long before, Nation. among other of the Greeks, feated themselves the occasion and advantage of a contention in Syracuse, between the Magistrates and of the Government and Affairs of Sicil before the People. For coming with a strong Army to the succour of the Governours, driven out by the multitude, they elected THE most part of the Cities in Sicil, him their Prince, being the first. ( and inwere governed by the rule of the deed ) the most famous, that ever governed people, till such time as Phalaris began to the Syracusans. This change happened in Profile. twelfth Olympiad; wherein the better to This was that Phalaris, to whom Periller, establish himself, he took to wife the Daugh-

Now this Gelon, the Son of Dinomenes, had venter; by caufing the first tryal to be all his thoughts travelled in the iteraghtemade upon himself. He reigned one and ing, beautifying, and amplifying of Syracuse. thirty years, faith Exsebius; others give He defaced Camerina, that a little before him but fixteen: Howfoever it were, one was fallen from the obedience of the Syracu-Telemachus in the end, fell upon him with fians who built it, and brought the Citizens the whole multitude of Agrigentum, and to Syracuse. The Megarians that had movfoned him to death; being thereto anima- ed a War against him, he overcame; the ted by Zeno, even whilst the Tyrant was tor- richer fort he brought unto Syracuse; and menting the same Zeno, to make him confess the people he fold for flaves. In like manner dealt he with other places upon the like oc-After the death of Phalaris, the Citizens casion. Not long after this, Thero, a Prince recovered their liberty, and enjoyed it long, of the Agrigentines, having dispossest Teriltill There usurped the Government of the Im of his City Himera; the Carthaginians Common-weal: at which time also Panetins | were drawn into the quarrel by Anaxilus. made himself Lord of Leontium; and Clean- Lord of Messena, Father-in-law to Terillus: and Gelon was also solicited by his Fatherven years, was slain by one of the Citizens. in-law, Thero. Gelon was content, and in Chander being dead, his Brother Hippocra- fine, after divers conflicts, the Carthaginians and other Africans, led by Amilcar, were overthrown by Gelon: and an hundred and Hored & Meffena, and of Leontium; whom with di- fifty thousand of them left their bodies in Dies

This Gelon it was, to whom the Athenians also made war with the Syracusians, and, in and Lacedamonians sent for succour, when the end, got from them by composition, the Xerxes with his huge Army past the Helle-City of Camerina. But when he had reign | Spont. He, for their relief having armed thired seven years, he was flain in a Battel ty thousand Souldiers, and two hundred thips, refused nevertheless to fend them into At this time did the Syracufians change Greece, because they refused him the comtheir form of Government, from Popular mand of one of their Armies, either by to driffocratical; a preparation towards a Sea, or Land. So heused to their Embalia-Principality, whereinto it was soon after dours only this Saying, That their Spring was changed. After the death of Hyppocrates, withered; accounting the Army, by him pre-Gelon ( descended from the Rhodians, which pared, to be the very flower of the Greek

The Carthaginians, after this great loss in sicil) that had commanded the forces of received, fearing the invasion of their own Hippocrates, in the former War, with notable Country, fent to Gelon by their Embaffasuccess, became Lord of Gela. He, after his dours, to desire peace, who grants it them Masters death, breaking the trust commit- on these conditions: That from thenceforth ted unto him by Hippocrates over his chil- they should not sacrifice their childrento dren, and being in possession of Gela, took saturn; That they should pay him two with two armed ships, in lign of amity. These and added it to that of his own, or exalted conditions the Carthaginians, not only wil- himself from being a private man to the lingly accepted, but with the two thousand dignity of a Prince, it behooveth the Succestalents, and the ships for war, they sent unto sour to maintain it by the same way and art. Demarata, Gelons Wife, a Crown, valued at by which it was gotten. an hundred talents of gold, with other pre- To conclude, Spracuse (though not withfents. Whereby we see, that some Nations, out blows, ere that she could cleanse her and fome Natures, are much the better for felf of the creatures and loversof Geion) being well beaten. The wars ended, and Sicil was now again become Mittress of her in peace, Gelon beautified the Temples of felf, and held ner felf free, well-near the gods, and erected others in honour of threescore years, to the time of Dionistus. them. So being exceedingly beloved and though the were in the mean while greatly honoured of his Subjects, he left the world, endangered by a Citizen of her own, called and left for his fuccessor his Brother Hiero. Tindario. Philiflus and Pliny report, That when his bo- Now, to prevent the greatness of any one

Eeeee

772

him el to be burnt with him.

man rude, cruel, covetous, and fo suspicious wherein every one wrote upon an Oliveof his Brethren Polyzelus, and Ibrafybulus, as leaf(as at Athens they wrote upon thells) the he fought by all means to deftroy them. name of him, whom he would have expelled Notwithstanding all this, by the conversati-the City. He that had most suffrages against on which he had with Simonides, he became him, was banished for five years. Hereby in of better condition, and greatly delighted a short time, it came to pass that those of with the study of good Arts. Divers quarrels judgement, and best able to govern the Comhe had, as well with Theron of Agrigentum, as mon-weal, were, by the worst able, either with other Cities: all which he shortly af- supprest, or thrust out of the City. Yea, ter compounded, and gave a notable over- fuch as feared this Law, though they had throw to the Carthaginians, whom Xerxes not yet felt it, withdrew themselves as sehad incited to invade Sicil, fearing the fuc- cretly as they could, feeking fome place of cours which Gelon had prepared, to aid the more security, wherein to maintain them-Grecians against him. He also overthrew in selves. And good reason they had so to do; battel Thrassdess, the Son of Theron, and seeing that there is nothing so terrible in thereby reftored the Agricentines to their any State, as a powerful and authorized igformer liberty. But in the end, he loft norance. But this Law lasted not very long. the love of the Syracusans; and after he For their necessity taught them to abolish it, had reigned eleven years, he left the King-dom to his Brother Thraspoulus, who became Government; from which, the Nobility a most unjust and bloody Tyraar. Thraspoulus practised to banish one another, the his vertue, as they did the Principality of cusans perinted.

Syracuse. For in all changes of Estates, the refervation ought to answer the acquisition whom they had banished, they levy other tion. When a liberal, valiant, and advised troops: by whom, in conclusion, Ducetius thousand talents of silver, and present him Prince, hath obtained any new Signiory, by was burnt, according to the cultom of among them, for the future, they devised a that Age, a Dog of his, which alwayes wait-kind of banishment of such among them, as ed cuhim, ran into the fire, and suffered were suspected; taking pattern from the Athenian Oftracifme. They called this their To Geior Hiero his Brother succeeded; a new devised judgement of exile, Petalismus, bulus injoyed his Principality no longer than State became altogether Popular. But aften months. For, notwithstanding the ter a while, being invaded by Ducetius, King force of mercenary Souldiers; which he of the sicilians, that inhabited the inner entertained for his guards, he was beaten out of syracuse by the Citizens; to whom, Enna, and some other of the Grecian Cities, being besieged in Acradina, he restored and overthrown the Army of the Agragenthe Government, and was banished the times ) the Syracusians sent forces against Island. From whence he sailed into Greece, him, commanded by an unworthy Citizen where he died a private man, among the of theirs, called Bolcon. This their Captain made nothing so much haste to find out Du-And now had the Syracusans recovered cetius, against whom he was imployed, as he again their former liberty, as all the rest of did to flee from the Army he led, as soon as the Cities did; after which they had never Ducetius presented him battel. So for want fought, had the Successors of Gelon inherited of conduct, the greatest number of the Syraconstrained to leave the Island for a time. Yet ly, to help a people of their own Tribe, that it was not long ere he returned again, and craved their succour, being in distress. The built the City Collatina on the Sea-fide.

did in a fort acknowledge Syracuse, Trina- ed their intent to be none other, than the cris excepted; which also by force of Arms, Conquest of the whole Island. Yet they in the fourfcore and fifth Olympiad, they which had called them in, were so blinded brought to reason.

CHAP. I.

perintendency. For the Citizens of Leon- ed unto them a Fleet and Army, far greatium, being opprest by them, seek aid from ter, than the terrible report of same had the Athenians, about the fixth year of the made it. Peloponnesian War. In this fuit they prevailed by the eloquence of Gorgias their Ora- engaged all her power; as regarding not ontor; and got an hundred Athenian Gallies ly the greatness of the enterprise, but the to succour them, under the leading of La- necessity of finishing it in a short space of ches, and Charwodes. To this Fleet, the Leon- time. For the Lacedamonians (as hath altines, and their Partners, added one hundred ready been shewed in due place) stood at more; with which forces, and with some that time in such broken terms of peace supplies brought by Sophocles, Pythodorns, with Athens, as differed not much from open Eurymedon, and other Athenian Captains, War. Wherefore it was thought necessary. they invaded the Territories of the Syracu either to spare cost in this great Expedition. fant, and their Partisans; wan and lost di- or altogether to forbear it: which was likeout the advice of the Athenians, came to honour. an accord with the Syracusans, and were Of this business, mention hath been alknew not how to amend; but (according to a great conversion. the custom of popular Estates ) by taking Though Alcibiades had prevailed against tevenge upon their own Commanders. So Nicias, in exhorting the people to this great after this, followed the most memorable the chief Commanders therein.

being beaten, submitteth himself, and is end, than that which they pretended name-Athenians scarce knew what to pretend : for Ducetius being dead; all the Greek Cities their preparations were fo great, as discoverwith their own passions, that they would But they do not long enjoy this their Su- not believe their own eyes; which present-

In this expedition, the City of Athens had yers places; took Messara; and, in the se-venth year of the Peloponnessan War, lost it proceedings were slack abroad. And surely, again. They also at the same time attempted had not the desire of the Athenians been Hymera, but in vain. The fire of this quar- over-passionate, the arguments of Nicius had reltook hold upon many Cities, which did caufed them to abstain from fo chargeable a invade each others Territory with great business, and to reserve their forces for a violence. But when they had wearied more needful use. But young counsels prethemselves on all hands, and yet could see vailed against the authority of ancient men. none issue of the War, the Leontines, with- that were more regardful of safety than of admitted into their fociety, with equal free- ready made, in that which we have written dom. So the Athenians, who hoped to of the Peloponnesian War. But what was there have greatned themselves in sicil, by the di- delivered in general terms, as not concernvision and civil War, were disappointed of ing the affairs of Greece, otherwise than by their expectation, by the good agreement of consequence, doth in this place require a the Sicilians, and fain to be gone with the more perfect relation, as a matter, wherein broken remainder of their Fleet. This they the whole State of sicil was like to have felt they banished Pythodorus, and Sophocles, and voyage; yet Nicias, together with Alcibiades laid anheavy fine upon Eurymedon. Shortly and Lamachus, was appointed to be one of War, that ever was made by the Greeks in Si-cil. which was that of the Athenians, against well to succour the Segestans, and to rethe Selinuntines and Syracusians, in favour establish the Leontines, cast out of their plaof the Cities of Egelta, Leontium, and Catana. ces by the Syracustans; as also by torce of They of selinus had oppress the Egestians, Arms, to subject the syracustans, and all their and they of syracuse the Leontines, and the adherents in sicil, and compel them by tri-Catamans: which was the ground of the bute, to acknowledge the Athenians for their War. For the Athenians undertook the supream Lords. To effect which, the for :protection of their old friends: and, in ha named Captains were fent off, with an huntred of the Athenians, aid from Laceda- dred and thirty Gallies, and five thousand mon was fent to the Syracustans. The Laceda- one hundred Souldiers, besides the thirty monians dealt plainly, having none other ships of burden, which transported their Eeeee 2 victuals, the War: and these were Athenians, Manti-the Athenians, wanting horse, could not purneans, Rhodians, and Candians: there were, fue their victory to any great effect. They besides these, fix thousand Megarians light- then retire themselves, with a resolution to armed, with thirty horsemen.

Thorse, at Rhegium, where the Rhegians refuse to upon Messana, hoping to have taken it by a give them entry; but sell them victuals for intelligence, but in vain. For Alcibiades had their mony. From thence they fent to the discovered such as were Traitors within the Egestans, to know what treasure they would City to the Messenians. This he now did in eggrans, to know what treatmet they had contribute towards the war, feeing for their delpight of his own Citizens, the Athenians; because they had recalled him from his comfakes they had entred thereinto. But they found by their answers, that these Egestians mand, with a purpose either to have put were poor, and that they had abused the him to death, or to have banished him: Athenian Embassadours with false thews of whereof being assured by his friends, he gold, having in all but 30 talents. The Airestook his way towards the Lacedemonians, nians further were discouraged, when they and to them he gave mischievous counsel found that the Ringians, their ancient against his Country. While this winter ver friends, and allied unto the Leantines, re-laited, the syraculans fend Embassadors to fused to trust them within their Walls. Lacedamon, and Corinth, for aid : as likewise Hereupon Niciss adviseth to depart towards the A.henian Captains in Sicil, fend to Athen the selmuntines, and to force them, or per- for supplies. Which both the one and the fwade them to an agreement with the Ego. flans; as likewise to see what disourtements the Egestans could make ; and so return again into Greice, and not to walte Athens in a needless war. Alcibi. ba, on the some fide, would from the Port of Catana to Megara, forfaken folicite the Cities of sicil to confederacy against the Syrambers and Selleunienes whereby to force them unto restitution of all that they had taken from the Leontines. Lamachus he perswades them to aitail Syra- of two hundred men at arms, but without cufe it felf, before it were prepared against horse, which they hoped to furnish in the them. But in the end (being excluded out of Island from the Segeffans, and other their divers Cities) they surprise Catana: and there adherents: they were also strengthned with they take new counsel how to proceed. a company of Archers, and with three hun-Thence they imployed Nicias to those of dred talents in monv. Egesta, who received from them thirty talents towards his charges; and one hundred near syracuse, upon the banks of the great and twenty talents more there were of the Port, repelling the Syracujans, that fallyed spoils they had gotten in the Island. Thus the to impeach their intrenchments. They also Summer being ipent in idle consultations, received from their Confederates four hunand vain attempts, the Athenians prepare to dred horse-men, with two hundred other affail Syracufe. But Alcibiades having been horse, to mount their men at arms. Syracuse accused at home, in his absence, was sent for was now in effect blockt up, so as hardly any back by the Athenians to make his answer: succours could enter, but such as were able and the Army was left to the conduct of Ni to force their passage: yet the Athenians cias and Lamachus. These Commanders ob- receive divers losses; among which it was tain a landing place very near unto syracuse, not the least, that Lamachus, one of their

by this device. They imploy to Syracuse an inhabitant of Catana, whom they truft; and instruct him, to promise unto the syracusans, that he would deliver into their hands all the Athenians within Catana. Hereupon the Syracustans draw thither ward with their best forces, these and his own troops, Gylippus adven-But in the mean while, the Athenians, fetting tured to march over-land toward Syracufe. fail from Catana, arrive at syracuse, where The Syracustans fend a part of their forcesto they land at fair ease, and fortific themselves meet him and conduct him. The Athenians against the Town. Shortly after this, they prepare to encounter them, expecting his victuals, engines, and other munitions for fight, and the syracustans had the loss: but refresh their Army at Catana, for the winter-With these troops and fleets they arrive season. From thence they made an attemor other obtained.

In the Spring following (which was the beginning of the eighteenth year of the Peloponnesian war ) the Athenians in Sicil fail of the Inhabitants; from whence, forraging the Country, they obtain some small victories over the stragling Syracusians: and at their return to Catana, they receive a supply

Hereupon they take courage, and incamp best Commanders, was slain.

In the mean while, Gylippus and Python, with the Lacedemonian and Corinthian forces, arrive, and take land at Hymera. The Citizens of Hymera, and of Gela, together with the Selinuntines, joyn with them ; fo that with the Spring following.

to succour Nicios, the other Cylippus. The loss substitting by being at large, the other by between them was in effect equal; and nei-close imbattailing. ther so broken, but that each of them profe-

Whatsoever Nicias his intelligence was so cond time, intangled and arrested. To disorupon the arrival of a new supply into the der also those Athenian Gallies, which came arrival near unto the City upon a place of Town, the Athenians had all confented to arrival near that the first encounter they had depart, and to lodge at Catana: had not an advantage. At the first encounter they had depart, and to lodge at Catana: advantage of their enemies, by reason that Eclipse of the Moon, boding (as was thought) the Spraculum horse-men could not come to ill success caused them to deferr their defight in those straights: but soon after, Gy parture. But this superstition cost them dear ngut in the dear in the syracufians, Lacedamonians, and for the Syracufians, Lacedamonians, and constrained Nicias to fortifie himself within Corinthians, with three core and seventeen his Camp. Whereupon Nicias made the fail of Gallies, entred the great Port of sythate of his affairs known, by his letters to racuse, wherein the Athenians kept their the Athenians; shewing, that without great fleet, and whereon they had fortified them-Sea and Land, the enterprise selves. The Athenians in the same Port enwould be lost, together with the small Army countred them with fourscore and fix Galremaining. These letters received, the Athelies, commanded by Eurymedon: in which nians appoint two other Generals, Euryme- the Athenian fleet was beaten, by the lefter don and Demosthenes, to joyn with Nicios: number, and Eurymedon slain. Now, though it the one they dispatch presently with some were so, that the Syracusans received the supplies; the other they send after him in more loss by land (for the fight was general) yet when the Athenians were beaten by fea, In the mean while, Gylippus at Syracufe, in which kind they thought themselves infights with the Athenians both by Sea and vincible, they were wonderfully cast down. Land, sometimes with ill, and at other times For it was well faid of Gylippus, to the Strawith good fuccess: but in conclusion, he cuitans; When any people do find themselves took from their Fort, near unto Syracuse, the vanguished in that manner of fight, and with Promontory called Plymmyrium; wherein those weapons, in which they persuade themthe Athenians lost their treasure, and a great Jelves that they exceed all others, they not only part of all their provisions. Notwithstand- lose their reputation, but their courage. The ing which loss, and that the Athenians them- Athenians, besides the Gallies sunk and felves, in Greece, were ( in effect ) besieged wrackt, had seventeen taken, and possess by within Athens, by the Lacedemonians; yet the enemy: and with great labour and loss were they most obstinate in prosecuting the were they most obstinate in prosecuting the War in sicil, and dispatched away Demo having drawn them within a Palifado, in one fibenes with new succours. Demosthenes, in corner of the port, unadvisedly: for it is as his way towards sicil, encountred with Po- contrary to a Sea-war, to thrust ships into a lianthes the Corinthian, with his fleet: both straight room and corner, as it is to scatter the Captains being bound for sicil, the one foot in a plain field against horse; the one

The Syracustans, having now weakned the cuted the enterprise they had in hand, But Athenian fleet , resolve to imprison them before the fuccours arrived to either, Gylip. within the Port. And to that purpote they pus and Ariston had assailed the Athenians in range all their Gallies in the mouth of the the great Port of Syracuje, and in a Sea fight Haven, being about a mile over, and there putthem to the worst, to the great discou- they came to Anchor; filling the out-let ragement of the Athenians. On the neck of with all manner of Veffels; which they man this, Demosthenes arrived with threescore most strongly, because the Athenians, being and thirteen Gallies, charged with footmeen; now made desperate, should not with douand (blaming the floath of Nicias) he invadible ranks of Gallies break through the Syraed the Syracustans the same day that he arrived. But he made more haste than he had they were forc't to range themselves over all good speed, being shamefully beaten, and the Out-let of the Port. They therefore repulfed with great los. Hereupon Demo- not only mored themselves strongly by their fibenes and Furzmedon determine to rife up Anchors, but chained the sides of their Gal-from before syracuse, and return to the lies together, and lay behind them again fuccour of Athens: but Nicias disputed to certain ships, which served in the former war the contrary, pretending that he had good for victuallers: to the end, that if any of intelligence within syracuse, whereby he their Gallies were sunk; or the chain, which learned, that the Town could not long hold joyned them to their fellows, broken; the Athenians might yet find themselves a se-and force a passage, the syraculans had left ill counsel. For, as we have heard of many within these Gallies and Ships, inchained to- great Captains (yea, the greatest number of gether, a certain number of loofe ones, to all that have been victorious ) that have Itop their course and fury. For where the neglected the speedy prosecution of a beaten way of any vetlel, uting oar or fails, is broken, enemy; fo might we produce many examand their speed foreslowed, they cannot ples of those, who having slept securely in force with any weight and violence, the the bosome of good fuccess, have been sudreliftance oppoling.

775

776

that they were utterly loft, except with an again all the honour and advantage formerinvincible resolution they could make their ly gotten. But Nicias oppoleth the advice way, and break down this great bridge of of Demosthenes: Others lay, that the Seaboats; or (at least) force a passage through men were against it. Whereupon abandonthem in some part or other : which they re- ing their Gallies, they all resolve to march folve to hazard, with all their shipping (to over land to the Cities of their Confedethe number of one hundred and ten or all rates, till some more favourable fortune forts ) and with all the freeigh of their should call them thence. On the other fide, Land-army, in them imbarqued. But the Gylippus, and other the Lacedemohian and Gallies, which were within the bridge of Corinthian Captains, with Hermocrates, exboats, did so disorder the Atlanianticet, ere hort the Syracusians to put themselves prethey came to force the bridge, as albeit fome fently into the field, and to ftop all thepaffew of themhad broken through the chains, fages, leading to those Cities of their enevet being stopt with the ships without, and mies, to which the Athenians might make affailed by other loofe Gallies of the Syracu- retrait. But many were weary, and many fiant, which were purposely left at large in were wounded, and many of them thought the sea, they were either taken or sunk. that they had done enough for the present. Three great disadvantages the Athenians | Which humour in some of our Commanders had: the first, that fighting within a Haven, at Cadez, lost us both the Indian fleet, and and (as it were ) in a straight, they had no the spoils of many other neighbour places. room to turn themselves, nor to free them- Hermocrates, the Syracusian, finding it a lost selves one from another, being intangled; labour, to perswade his Countrymen to any the second, that having overpestered their hasty prosecution, devised this good strata-Gallies with Souldiers, who used offensive gem, whereby to gain time; not doubting, arms of darts and flings. they had not place but that after a day or two, he should draw upon the decks to stretch their arms; the them willingly out. He sent two or three third was, the discomfortable end for which horse-men out of syracuse by night, willing they fought, namely, to force a passage, by them to find Nicias, and ( after they had which they might fave themselvs by running affured him, that they were of the Athenians away. To be thort, the fight was no less faction ) to give him advice not to march terrible than the confusion: the slaughter away over-hastily from the place, wherein great on all fides; and the noise, and the he was fortified; alledging that the Syracryes, fo lowd and lamentable, as that no custans had lodged their Army, which could direction could be heard. But in the end, not long stay there, upon the passages and the Athenians, as many as survived, were places of advantage, leading towards the beaten back to the Land, with loss of three- Cities of their Allies. These tidings Nicios score of their Gallies, broken, sunk, or aban easily believed, and put off his journey to doned. The syracusans did also lose twenty the third day. For men newly beaten, are of theirs, with Python, Commander of the (for the most part) more fearful than wise; Corintbians. The rest of the Athenian Gallies, running themselves into the bottom of the pears, by night, a man at arms. Port, faved themselves by the help and countenance of the Land-army there fortified. In this desperate estate, the Athenian pierced and pursued with the lamentable Commanders go to counsel. Demostinenes out-cryes of those that were sick and hurt: perswades them to furnish with fresh Soul- whom they abandon to the cure of their

on in form of a wedge, to break through, the Port, to return to Athens. This was no denly awaked, by the re-allied Companies On the other fide, the Athenians knew of a broken Army, and have thereby loft and to them, every thiftle in the field ap-

The third day ( leaving all their Gallies, and all their baggage ) they remove; being diers those few Gallies which remained ; nemics swords. The rest march away, to the and while the syracufians were triumphing, number of forty thousand; and maketheir and made iccure by their present victory, to lirst passage by force, over the River of Anafet upon them, and forcing their way out of pus, notwithstanding the opposition of their

But being every day charged in their | ty, as their vaffals. The Carthaginians, though ers to be starved in loathsome prisons; and buried them there. the rest, sold for slaves. This was the suc-Olympiad.

whom they offered themselves, and their Ci- ster fort within syracuse were forry tor their marches, and by the Syracusian horse-men, ambitious enough of enlarging their Domiheaten in from forraging and provision of nion in sicil, yet considering the prosperity food, they grow weak and hearcless. The of the syracustans, and their late victories Sortenstans also possess the Mountain Lepas, over the Athenians, they stayed a while to be which they were to pass towards Came- dispute of the matter, whether they should and thereby force them to fall back refuse or accept the offer made unto them: again towards the Sea-coast, and to take for the selimintines were straightly allied to what way they could : being unable to the syracuftans, as may appear by what is proceed in their journey intended. Many past. In the end the Senators of Carthage rehard shifts they made, in difficult passages, solve upon the enterprise; and (by a trick of and blind marches by night; which they their Punick wit ) to separate the Syracusans were fain to endure, as having none other from the selinuntines, they fend Embassameans to escape from the enemy that pur- dors to syracuse: praying that C ty, as in used them, and held them waking with con the behalf of the Egestans, to comp. Il the Setinual skirmishing. To keep all in order, limintines to take reason, and to rest content Nition undertook the leading of the Vaunt- with fo much of the lands in quaftion, as quard; and Demosthenes conducted the Rear. they of syracuse should think meet to allow At the River Erineus, Nicias takes the start them. The Syracusans approved the motiof a whole nights march; leaving Demost- on; for it tended to their own honor. But henes to make the retreat: who being incom- the Selinuntines would make no such appaffed, and overprest with numbers, in the pointment : rather they took it ill, that the end renders himself. The conditions he ob Syracustans, with whom they had run one tained, were far better than he could have course of fortune, in the Athenian war, should hoped for ; and the faith of his enemies offer to trouble them, by interpoling as Arfar worse than he suspected. For he was bitrators, in abusiness that themselves could afterward, with Nicias murdered in prison. end by force. This was right as the Carthagi-The Army of Demostheres being dissolved, nians would have it. For now could they of they purfued Nicias with the greater cou- selinus with an ill grace crave aid of $37rarage; who being utterly broken upon the paf- cufe; and the Syracusans as ill grant it unto face of the River Assirarus, rendred himself those, that had refused to stand to the Arto Galippus, upon honest conditions. Gylippus bitrament, which the Carthaginians would fought to preferve him, and to have had have put into their hands. Hereupon, an the honour to have brought these two to Army of three hundred thousand men is set Sparta; Nicias, as a noble Enemy to the out from Carthage, under the conduct of Lacedemonians, and who, at the overthrow Hannibal, Nephew to that Amilear, who ( as which they received at Pylus by the Athe- you have heard before ) was overthrown nians, had faved the lives of the vanquish- with the great Carthaginian Army at Himera ed, Demosthenes, as one that had done to by Gelon. Hannibal was exceeding greedy of Lacedamon the greatest hurt. Hermocrates this imployment, that he might take revenge alfo, the Commander of the syracular Army as well of his Uncles, as of his Fathers death; diffwaded the rest, by all the art he had, the one of them having been sain by the Hifrom using any barbarous violence, after so merans, the other by those of selinus. Both noble a victory. But the cruel and cow- the Cities, Hannibal, in this war, won by force ardly fort, (cowardife and cruelty be- of arms, fackt them, and burnt them; and ing inseparable passions) prevailed, and having taken three thousand of the Himecaused these brave Captains to be misera- rans prisoners, he caused them to be led unbly murdered; one part of their Souldi- to the place, where Amilear was flain, and After this followed some trouble at Syracels of the Sicilian war: which took end at cufe, occasioned by the banishment of Hermothe River Assimarus, the four and twentieth crates, who had lately been General of the day of May, in the fourscore and eleventh syracusian forces, against the Athenians. The malice of his enemies had so far prevailed The Athenians being beaten out of Sicil; with the ingrateful multitude, that he was the Egeftans ( for whose defence against the condemned to exile for his meer vertue, Selinuntines, this late war had been taken at fuch a time as he was aiding the Lacedain hand ) fearing the victorious Syracusans, monians, in their war against Athens : fought help from the Carthaginians; to wherein he did great service. All the honeinjury done unto him, and fought to have ans, grew from his acculation of the princihim repealed. Hermocrates himself, return- pal men. It is the delight of base people to ing into Sicil, gathered an Army of tix reign over their betters: wherefore, gladly thousand; with which he began to repair did he help them to break down, as fetters Selinus; and by many noble actions labou- imprisoning their liberty, the bars that held red to win the love of his Civizens. But it under fafe custody. Long it was not, ere the faction that opposed him was the stron- the chief Citizens had found whereat he ger. Wherefore he was advised to seize aimed. But what they saw, the people would upon a Gate of Syracuse, with some strength not see: and some that were needy, and knew of men; whereby his friends within the not how to get Offices without his help, were Town, might have the better means to willing to help him, though they knew his rife against the adverse party. This he purposes to be such, as would make all the did : but presently the multitude fell to City to smart. He began early to hunt afarms, and fet upon him; in which con- ter the tyranny; being but five and twenty flict he was flain. But his Son-in-law, Diomyling, shall make them wish Hermocrates was his delire to reign long. His first work, alive again.

778

t. I V.

Of Dionysius the Tyrant: and others, following him, in Syracule.

"He Syracusians had enjoyed their lideath of Thrasybulus, to the death of Hermocrates: at which time Dionylius was raif- some neighbour-towns, bound unto him, ed up by God, to take revenge, as well of either for his help in war, or for establishing their cruelty toward strangers, as of their the faction, reigning at that present; were ingratitude towards their own best Citi- wholly affected to his affistance. Having zens. For before the time of Diony [ins, they | therefore gotten the Citadel into his had made it their pastime, to reward the hands, he needed no more, save to assure vertue of their worthiest Commanders with what he had already. He strengthened himdeath, or diffrace : which custom they felf by divers marriages; taking first to wife must now be taught to amend.

Syracuse, by the same degrees, that many by whom he had Dionystus, his Successor; others, before him, had made themselves the other, Aristomache, the daughter of Hipmasters of other Cities, and of syracuse it felt. parinus, and fifter to Dion, honourable men For, being made Prator, and commanding in Syracuje; which bare unto himmany chiltheir Armies against the Carthaginians, and dren, that served to fortifie him with new other their enemies, he behaved himself so alliances. well, that he got a general love among the people, and men of war. Then began he to racusans (envying his prosperity) incited the tollow the example of Pilistratus, that made | multitude, and took arms against him, even himself Lord of Athens; obtaining a band in the novelty of his Rule. But their enof fix hundred men, to defend his person : terprise was more passionately, than wisely under pretence, that his private enemies, be- governed. He had shamefully been beaten ing traiteroully affected to the State of sy. by the Carthaginians at Gela: which, as it racuse, had laid plots how to murder him, vexed the sicilian men at arms, making because of his good services. He doubled the them suspect that it was his purpose to let pay of his Souldiers; alledging, that it would the Carthaginians waste all that he might years of age when he obtained it : belike it of making himself absolute Lord in Syracuse. was, the possession of the Citadel, wherein was much good provision, and under it the Gallies were mored. This he obtained by allowance of the people, and having obtained this, he cared for no more, but declared himself without all shame or fear. The Army the chief Citizens restored by him frombaberty about threescore years, from the nishment; all the needy fort within Syracuse, that could not thrive by honest courses; and the daughter of Hermocrates; and after Dionysius obtained the principality of her, two at once; the one a Locrian, Dorn,

Yet it was not long, ere some of the syincourage them to fight manfully: but in- afterwards take possession of the desolate tending thereby to affure them to him- places; fo it inflamed them with a defireto felf. He perswaded the Citizens, to free themselves from his tyranny. They decall home, out of exile, those that had parted therefore from him, and marched habeen banished, which were the best men of stilly to Syracuse, where they found friends Syracuje; and these were afterwards at his to help them: there they forced his Palace, devotion, as obliged unto him by sogreat a ransacked his treasures, and so shamefully beneat. His first favour, among the syracust abused his wife, that for the griefthereof she noisoped her felf. cruell.

fures, and his Guards.

But he followed their to the fword; but before Egelfa he loft a heels apace; and firing a Gate of the great part of his Army, by a fally of the City by night, entred foon enough to take Citizens. In the mean while Himileo arrives revenge, by making a speedy riddance of but, ere he took land, he lost in a fight at them. For he spared none of his known, Sea, with Leptines, fitty thips of war, and no nor of his suspected enemies. After five thousand Souldiers, belides many thirs that, he grew fodoubtful of his life, as he of burden. This not with standing, he recovenever durst trust Barber to trim him, nor red again Motya upon his first descent. From any person, no not so much as his brother, thence marching towards Messana, he took to enter into his chamber, unstript and Lypara, and ( soon after ) Messana, and fearched. He was the greatest Robber razed it to the ground. Now began Dionysiof the people that ever reigned in any w greatly to doubt his estate. He therefore State, and withall the most unrespectively fortified all the places he could, in the Territory of the Leontines, by which he suppo-After this, he separated with fortification sed that Himileo would pass toward Syrathat part of the City, called the Island, from cufe; and he himself took the field again, the rest; like as the Spaniard did the Cita- with four and thirty thousand foot; and del of Antwerp: thereinhe lodged his Trea- one thousand horse. Now, hearing that His mileo had divided his Army into two parts, He then began to make war upon the marching with the one half over-land, and free Cities of Sicil: but while he lay before fending Mago with the other by Sea : he fent Herbesse, an in-land Town, the Syracustans Leptines, his brother to encounter Mago. rebelled against him; so, as with great dif- But Leptines was utterly beaten by the ficulty he recovered his Citadel: from Carthaginians; twenty thousand of his men whence, having allured the old Souldiers of were flain, and an hundred of his Gallies the Companions, who forced their passage lost. It is very strange, and hardly credithrough the City, with one thousand and ble, which yet good Authors tell us; That two hundred horse, he again recovered the one City should be able to furnish five hunmastery over the Syraculians, And when a dred sail of ships, and two hundred Gallies: multitude of them were busied in gathering (for, so many did Syracuse arm in this war) intheir harvest, he disarmed all the Towns- and more strange it is, that in a battail at men remaining, and new strengthened the Sea, without any great Artillery, or Mus-Fort of the Illand, with a double wall. He ket-shot, twenty thousand should be slain inclosed that part also, called Epipoles; which, in one fight. In all our fights against the with threescore thousand labourers, he fini- Turks, of which that at Lepanto was the flied within three weeks, being two leagues most notable, we hear of no such numin compass. He then built two hundred new ber lost; nor in any other fight by Sea, Gallies ; and repaired one hundred and ten that ever happened in our age, nor before of the old; forged one hundred and forty us. When Charls the fifth went to beliege thousand Targets, with as many swords, and Algier, he had in all his fleet, transporhead-pieces, with fourteen thousand cor-ters and others, but two hundred and fifflets, and all other futable arms. Which done, ty fail of thips, and threefcore and five hesent word to the Cathaginians (greatly Gallies: for the furnishing of which fleet, infeebled by the plague ) That except they he fought help from all the Cities and would abandon the Greek Towns, which ports of spain, Naples, and the rest of Itathey held in Sicil, he would make war upon ly. But in old times it was the manner to them: and, not staying for answer, he took carry into the field, upon extremity, as mathe spoil of all the Phanician ships, and my as were needfull, of all that could bear merchandize, within his Ports; as King arms, giving them little wages, or other Philip the second did of our English, be- allowance: in our dayesit is not so; neither fore the war in our late Queens time. He indeed, is it often requisite. Upon this overthen goes to the field with fourfcore thou- throw, Dionystus posts away to Syracuse, to fand foot, and three thousand horse, and strengthen it: Hamilto follows him, and befends his brother Leptines to fea, with fliegeth the Town by Land and Sea. But the two hundred Gallies, and five hundred Tyrant, having received aid from the Lacethips of burden. Most of the Towns demonians, under the conduct of Pharacidas. which held for Carthage yielded unto puts himself to Sea, to make provision for his him; saving Panormis, Segest or Egesta, Citizens, who, in his absence, take twenty Ancyre, Motya, and Entella. Of these, he first of the Carthaginian Gallies, and sink four. wan Motya by affault, and put all therein Hereupon, finding their own fuccess pro-Fffff

CHAP.

and to violent among the Carthagenians, as diers. of them died thereof. He therefore, with the victories there, brought the Rhegians on power that he could gather together, lets up their knees, forced them to pay him one on them both by Sea and Land; and having hundred and fourfcore thousand crowns, to llain great numbers of them, forceth Himileo furnish him with threescore Gallies, and put to delire peace. This peace Dionysius fold him in an hundred pledges for affurance of their to delire peace. This peace Dionylus iola nim in an nundrea pieages, for atturance of their for fogreat furmof money; on condition, that he should steal away with his Carthogic did, not with any purpose to perform unto them the peace that they had so dearly traying the rest of the Africans and Spaniards. Yet no faithwas kept with him: for their Galleys, he might be fiege them, and he was pursued, and left many of his Cartha-ginians behind him. The rest of the Afrir Now to the end he might not, without some cans fell under the swords of their enemies ; colour, fallifie the faith that he had given only the Spaniards, after they had a while to them; he pretended to want victual for bravely defended themselves, were (after their tubmission) entertained, and served to depart out of staff, and sent to them to May fuch examples of perfidious deal them the like quantity at his coming home the Conquerour.

ing I have noted in other places, and can to Syracufe. hardly forbear to deliver unto memory the | His resolution was, that if they resuled to like practices, when they meet with their furnish him, he would then make their refumatches: That which hapned unto Monfieur fal the cause of his quarrel: if they yieldde Files, was very sutable to this treachery, ed to aid him with the proportion which he wherewith Dionysius pursued Himileo, I was defired, that then they should not be able, prefent when De Files related the injury for want of food, to endure a siege any long done unto him. He had rendred S. John d'Andrew S. John gene to me reach Ming dans lat. A poor pro-freged him therein. He rendred it, upon pro-mite made by the faith of a King, that he flould be fuffered to depart in fafety, with out breach of faith. For when in the begin all his followers. Yet in presence of the ning of his reign, he defired them to bellow King himfelf, of the Duke of Anjon his Bro- a daughter of some of their Nobility upon ther, General of his Army, of the Queen him for a wife; they answered, that they Mother, and of divers Dukes and Marshals had not any one fit for him, save the Hangof France, he was fet upon and broken in mans daughter. Princes do rather pardon ill his March; spoiled of all that he had, and deeds, than villanous words. Alexander forced to fave his life by flight; leaving the the great forgave many tharp fwords, but most of his Souldiers dead upon the place; never any sharp tongues; no, though they the Kings hand and faith warranting him told him but truly of his errors. And to march away with enfigns difplaid and extrainly it belongs to those that have withall his goods and provisions, no whit availing him. It needs not therefore feem ces; and to none elfe, especially in pubstrange, that an Heathen Tyrant should thus lickbreak his faith, lince Kings, professing Chri-ftianity, are bold to do the like, or command had his heart more inflamed against the their Captains to do it for them.

care to re-edific Messon who flayed Amiens, than for his confpiracy with the spein Sicil, to hold up the Carthaginians there niard or Savojan: for he had pardoned in, is again beaten by Dionyfius; who is al- 10000. of fuch as had gone farther, & drawn The contemporation for beaten by the Tauro mentans. A new fup-their swords against him. The contemporation specious, and that of the Tyrant exceeding ply of fourfcore thousand Souldiers is sent ill, having also at the present weapons in from Carthage to Mago, but these take eggs their hands, they confult how to recover for their money, and make peace with Diotheir nanos, they commit now to recover their fiberty. And this they had done, had ny fut, leaving the Sicilians in Tawroment Phariculas the Laced amonian resisted ninn, to shift for themselves: whom them. It also fell out to his exceeding ad- Dionylus, after a long fiege, overcame, vantage, that the plague was fo increased, and gave their City to the mercenary Soulit is said, that above an hundred thousand He then past into Italy, obtained divers furnish him therewith, promising to return

Duke of Biron, for his over-bold and biting Dionysius after this great victory, took taunts, that he used against him before Priest produced against him. So fared it riched. with fome other, greater than he, that toon after.

bread from old. He affaulted their Town to his eldeft fon, and her half-brother Dionron all fides, which he continued to do fins; the younger, called Areta, he bestowed eleven moneths, till he won it by force. on his Brother Theorides: after whose death He used his victory without mercy, spe- Dion took her to wife, being his Neece, cially against Phyton, who had commanded within it.

and Adverfity, as all Kings and States do.

afaithless; a great Poet, but a foolish one. and caused him soon after to be banished Heentertained Plato a while, but afterward, out of Sicil, to the great grief of the for speaking against his tyrauny, he gave or- whole Nation. For whereas Dion had made der to have him flain, or fold for a flave. For offer to the King, either to compound the he could endure no man that flattered him quarrels between him and the Carthagininot bevond measure. His Parasites therefore ans, of whom Dionysius stood in great fear; filed his cruelty, The hate of evil men ; and or (at least ) if they refused it , to furnish his lawless flaughters, The ornaments and ef him with fifty Gallies at his own charge, dufeds of his justice. True it is, that flatterers ring the war against them : his enemies World will love her own.

he remitted unto his Citizens divers pay- their State. ments, by his Father imposed upon them.

mous words that Sir fohn Parret used of our | faid ) had two Wives : Doris of Locris, and late Oucen Elizabeth, were his ruine; and Aristonia be a Syracusian, the sister of Dian. not the counterfeit letter of the Romifb which Brother-in-law of his he greatly en-

By Doris he had this Dionylius, who firethereby ran the same, and a worse fortune, ceeded unto him; and by Aritton, whe he had two fons and two Daughters of which the To be short, he made them know new elder, called sophrosme, he gave in marriage

This Dion a just and valiant man, finding that Dionysius had abandoned all exercise of Some other wars he made with the Car- vertue, and that he was wholly given over than in ans, after the taking and razing of to fenfuality, prevailed fo much with Plato, this City; and those with variable success. whose Disciple he had been, as he drew him For, as in one encounter he flue Mago, with into Sicil, to instruct the young King. And ten thousand Africans: to the son of Mago having perswaded the King to entertain beat him, and flew his brother Leptines, with him, he wrought fo well with him, as Diofourteen thousand of his Souldiers. After nylus began to change condition; to change which he bought his peace of the Carthagi- Tyranny into Monarchy: and to hold the mians, as they had formerly done of him; Principality that he had, rather by the love following therein the advice of Prosperity of his people, and his National Laws, than by the violence of his Guards and Gariwhen he had reigned eight and thirty fons, But this goodness of his lasted not years, he died: some say in his bed, peaceably, which is the most likely, though others his Parasites, that hated Dions severity, report it otherwise. A cruel man he was, and wrought him out of the Tyrants favour, area kind of vermine, which poison all the found means, by finister interpretation, to Princes of the World; and yet they prosper convert his good will into matter of Treabetter than the worthiest and valiantest men fon. They told Dionysius, that all the great do: and I wonder not at it, for it is a world: commendations, given of Plato, had tendand as our Saviour Christ hath told us, The ed to none other end, than to fosten his mind, and to make him neglect his own af-To this Dionysius his son of the same name fairs, by the study of Philosophy; whilest succeeded, and inherited both his King Dion in the mean time having furnished dom and his Vices. To win the love of the fifty Gallies under colour of the Kings ser-People, he pardoned, and released out of vice, had it in his own power either to deprison, a great number of persons, by his liver to the Spracusars their former liberty, father lockt up and condemned. Withall, or to make himself Lord and Soveraiga of

It is likely, that the honest and liberal Which done, and thereby hoping that he offer which he made, to serve the King with had faltned unto himself the peoples affe- so great a preparation, at his own charge, tions; he cast off the sheeps skin, and put begot him many enemies. For they that on that of the wolf. For being jealous of had ferved the King for none other end than his own Brethren, as men of more vertue than to raife and enrich themselves, and had "alhimself, he caused them all to be slain; and all ready been raised & enriched, thought themthe kindred that they had by their Mothers felves bound to make the fame offer that Diside. For Dionysius his Father (as hath been on had made, if the King had had the grace ignorant cowards, that had neither the recovery of his Countries liberty, had the knowledge, nor the daring that Dion had, same reward that all worthy men have had were bold to stile his Love and Liberality, from popular Estates. He was disgraced, Pride and Prelumption; and heartned the affaulted, and forced to abandon the City. young King in his opprefling, and earing up He retired himself to the Leontines, whorehis own people, of whose spoils they them-ceived him with great joy. Soon after his selected shared no small portion. I have heard departure from syracuje, new troops enter it, That when Charls the fifth had the re- the Castle: they sally out, assall, spoil, and pulse at Algier, in Africa, Ferdinando Cortese, burn a great part of the City. Dion is fent one of the bravest men that ever spain for, with humble request: yet, ere he could brought forth, offered unto the Emperour, arrive, Dionysius his Souldiers were retired; to continue the fiege at his own charge. But and the Towns-men thinking themselves sehe had never good day after it. For they cure, thut the gates against Dion. But the that envied his victories, and his conquest next night they of the Castle fally our again, of Mexico in the Welf-Indies, perswaded the with greater fury than ever; they kill Man, himself above him; and to have it said, that of the Town. In this their extremity Dion. the Empire, than he that had it.

782

rant was contented at lirst to fend him the of his Army; and quencheth the fire every revenues of his Lands, and permit him to where kindled, with the other part. In condispose of his moveables at his own pleasure: clusion, after he had conquered both the not without giving hope to recall him in fire and the fword, that had well near burnt short time. Had he continued in this good to ashes, and depopulated Spracuse, he recomood, like enough it is, that Dion would vered the Castle, with the munition and have been well pleased to live well, as he did, furniture thereof, and sent Apollocrates after at Athens. But after some time, Dionysius Dionysius his Father into Italy. But their mamade Port-sale of this Noble-mans goods, lice, of whom he had best deserved, and and thereby urged him to take another whom he had loved most, gave an untimely course, even to fek the restitution of his end to his dayes. For he was soon after his Country toliberty. The vertues of Dion, victory, murdered by Gylippus; who after especially his great Liberality, had purchased he had with ill success, awhile governed much Love in Greece. This Love made him syracuse, was slain with the same Dagger, suspected and hated of the Tyrant: but it with which he had murdered Dion. ftood him in good ftead, when he fought to ! Ten years after the death of Dion , Diongraise men, with whose help he might return fins, with the assistance of his friends in Italy, into Sicil. Yet he got not above eight hun- recovers his estate; and returns to Syracuje, dred (for he carried the matter closely ) to driving Ny seus thence, whom he found Gofollow him in his adventure. But many or vernour therein. The better fort of the them were men of quality, and fit to be Citizens, fearing more than ever, his cruelty, Leaders. Neither did he doubt of finding flee to Icetes, a Syracustan born, and then ruin Syracuje, as many as should be needfull, ling the Leontines. Icetes enters into confethat would readily affift him. Therefore deracy with the Carthaginians, hoping by helanded boldly in Sicil, marched to Syra- their affiltance, not only to prevail against

to conceive it aright. But the covetous and to death by torment. But Dion, for the Emperour, that Corice lought to value Woman, and Child, and fet fire in all parts what the Emperour could not, Cortese had comes the second time to their succour; the effected, and was therefore more worthy of love of his Country furmounting all the injuries that he had received. He sets upon When Dion was newly banished, the Ty- the Garrison of the Castle, with the one part cuse, entred the City without resistance, Dionysius; but by the hatred of the Syracuarmed the multitude, and won all, save the fians towards Dionysms, to make him also Lord of their Ciay. The Syracufians, being Dionssius was then absent in Italy but he deservedly afflicted on all sides, send to the quickly had advertisement of his danger- Corinthians for succour. Icetes also sends ous accident. Wherefore he returned ha- thither, and disswades the Corinthians, as ftily to Syracuse: whence, after many vain well as he can, from intermedling in the butreaties of Peace, and some forcible attempts siness. He tells them, by his Messengers, to recover the Town, he was fain to depart; That he had entred into league with the leaving yet a Castle to the Custody of Apol- Carthaginians, who were so strong by Sea, locrates his eldest Son. Yet ere he went, his that it was not in the power of Corinth, to Minion Philifus, coming with a ftrength of land an Army in Sicil. But the Corinthiant, men to affilt him, was beaten, taken, and put being by this treason of Icetes, more inraged fieged him.

feetes, being himfelf a Tyrant in Leontium, rather fought how to enlarge his power, than how to deliver his Country. Therefore, him, if he would not be perswaded. Timo- Acradina, which he fortified. lean, finding himself over-mastered, makes ceived by Andromachus the Governour. other parts of the Island. From thence he marched toward Adranum, Castle of syracuse into his hands, as think- passage of a River.

than diffwaded, fent Timoleon with nineteen | ply of two thousand foot, and two hundred Gallies, to deliver Syracuse from tyranny. In horse, which are stayed in Italy by foul weathe mean while, leetes had entred Syracufe, ther. Icetes is strengthened with threescore and with the help of the Carthaginians, dri- thousand Africans, brought unto him by Maand prompfus into the Castle, where he be- go(all which he lodgeth within Syracuje) and with an hundred and fifty Gallies, to keep the Port. This was the first time that ever the Carthaginians had dominion within the walls of that City. With this great Army hearing that Timoleon was arrived at Rhe- Iceres affaileth the Caftle Timoleon fends vium, he sent to perswade him, to return his them victuals, and succour, in small boats. Fleet; for that all things were (in effect) by night, from C.stana. Mago and Letes do established in Sicil. The Carthaginian Gal- therefore resolve to besiege Catana; but lies were also in the same Port of Rhegium, they were no sooner on their way towards whose Captains advised Timoleon to get him it, with part of their forces, than Leon, Capgone in peace. They had far more Gallies tain of the Corinthians, fallied out of the there than he had, and were like to compel Castle, and took that part of Syracuse, called

In the mean while, the two thousand Corequest to the Carthaginian Captains, that rinthians arrive: with whom, and two they would be pleased to enter into Rhegi- thousand other Souldiers, Timoleon marchum and there, in an open affembly of the ed toward Syracuse. Mago abandoneth Icetes people, to deliver unto him those arguments being frighted out of Sicil ( which he might for his return, which they had used to him easily have conquered ) with an idle rumour in private; that he might, by publick testi- of treason. This made him return to Carthage; mony, discharge himself to the Senate of where the general exclamation against his cowardize, did so much affright him, that The Carthaginians, perswading themselves, for fear of further punishment he hanged that a victory obtained by a few fair words, himself. Timoleon enters the City, and beats was without loss, and far more easie, than down the Castle ( which he called The Nest that of many blows, and wounds, yielded to of Tyrants ) to the ground. But he found the Timoleons desire. But while the Orations City, when the strangers were fled, in effect were delivering, Timokon, favoured by the desolate; so as their horses did feed on the Rheeians, stole out of the prease; and ha- grass growing in the Market-place. Thereving let fail, before the Gates were opened fore he writes to Corinth for people to reto the Carthaginians, he recovered the Port inhabit it. Ten thousand are sent out of of Tauromenium, where he was joyfully re- Greece, many come from Italy; others from

But a new from arifeth. Asarubal and where surprising Icetes his Army, he slew a Amilcar, Carthaginians, arrive about Lilibapartthereof, and put the rest to run. It is the | um, with threescore and ten thousand Soulnature of victory to beget friends. The diers, transported (with all their provisions) Adranitans joyned with him, and so did Ma- in a thousand ships of burden, and two hunmercus, the Tyrant of Catana. Dionysius also dred Gallies. Timoleon marcheth thither, fent to Timoleon, offering to furrender the and chargeth this great Army upon the

ing it better to yield up himself, and the pla- A tempest of rain, hail, and lightning, with ces which he could not defend, unto the Co- boysterous winds, beating upon the faces rinthians, than either to Icetes, whom he of the Carthaginians, they are utterly brodildained, or to the Carthaginians, whom he ken, ten thousand flain, five thousand taken, hated. Now Timoleon, who, within fifty with all their carriages and provisions: dayes after his arrival, had recovered the among which there were found a thousand Caltle of Syracuse, and sent Dionysius to Co- Corsiets guilt and graven. After this, Timorinth, to live there a private man, was still leon gave an overthrow to Icetes, and followinvaded by the Armies, and molested by the ling his victory, took him, with his Son Eupopractices of Icetes. For he belieged the lemus, and the General of his horse, prisc-Corinthians within the Castle of Syracuse, ners; whom he caused all to be flain : and and attempted (but in vain ) the murder of afterwards (which was imputed to him for great cruelty ) he suffered Icetes his wives The Corinthians fend unto Timoleon a sup- and daughters to be put to death. But this CHAP. L

(after the murder of Dion) had caused himself and the Syracusans; binding him-Arete, Dions wife, and a young child of felf by promife and oath to remain a friend his, with Arifiomache his Sifter, to be call and servant to the State of Carthage, for into the Sea.

rant of Calana, and won Calana it felf. Mu-tween Agathocles and the Syracusans. mercus fled to Hippon Tyraut of Messena: but Agathoeles is chosen Prætor; he entertains Timoleon, purfaced him, won the Town; de-five thousand Africans, and divers old livering Hippon to his Citizens, who tormen- Souldiers of the Murgantines, under colour ted him to death. The same end had Mamer- of a purpose to besiege Herbita. With these, rus, and all other the Tyrants in Sicil.

cinians, on condition that they should not divided into many factions ) he assails the gafs the River of Lyeus. After this, he lived Senators, kills all his enemies and oppoingreat honour among the Syracustans, till sites; divides the spoil of the rich among his death; and was folemnly buried by them the poor; and gives liberty to his Souldiers, in the Market-place of their City: the day to rob, to ravish, and to murder, for two of his Funcrals being for ever ordained to whole daies and nights, without controlebe kept holy among them.

Spracense from the tyranny of Dionysius, and the streets with ten thousand dead carkasbrought peace to the whole Island; the In- ses, besides those that had broken their habitants injoyed their liberty in peace, necks over the walls; their fury had no furabout twenty years. The Cities and temples ther subject to work on. were repaired; the Trade renewed; the Agathocles, in an affembly of the people Merchant failed in fafty; and the Labour- (being an eloquent knave) perswaded them, ing man injoyed the fruits of the earth in that, for the violent fickness, by which the quiet. But it was impossible that a Nation Common-wealth was utterly consumed, he which neither knew how to govern, nor found no better than the violent remedies how to obey; which could neither endure which he had administred : and that he affe-Kings, nor men worthy to be Kings, to go- and no other thing than the reducing of the vern them; should any long time subfist.

there started up one Agathocles among them, indifferent Democraty, by which it had been a man ofbase birth, and of baser condition : governed, from the first institution, with so who from a Begger, to a common Souldier; great glory and posterity. This he did, to from a Souldier to a Captain; and fo from have the Crown clapt on his head (asit degree to degree, rifing to be a Prætor : fi- were) perforce. For, as he knew that he had nally, became Lord and Soveraign of the left none living, within the City, fit or able to Spracustans. Many fortunes he ran, and exercise the office of a Magistrate: so knew under-went as many dangers, ere he obtain- he right well, that all they which had affilted the principality. For he had more than ed in the murder and spoil of their fellowonce attempted it, and was therein both Citizens, had no other hope of defence, than beaten and banisht. A passing valiant man the support of a lawless Lord, who had been he was, and did notable fervice, as well for partaker with them in their villanies and those by whom he was imployed, as also cruelties committed. So as this rable, his for the Syrunfiuns, and against them. For Oration ended, proclaimed him King: again in their Wars against those of Enna, and and again saluting and adoring him, by that the Campanes, he did them memorable ser- name, as if he had been given to him by some car was fent by the Carthaginians to relieve recover the love of his people. Spracuse. With him Agathocles wrought fo The life of this Tyrant is briefly written was the revenge of God upon leeter, who well, that he got him to make peace between ever after. Amilear entertained the busi-He again prevailed against Atamerous Ty- ness, and compounded the quarrels beand with the affistance of the poor and dif-Finally, he made peace with the Cartha- contented Syracusans (the City also being ment: the third day, when they had blunt-After such time as Timoleon had delivered ed their barbarous appetites, and strewed state from an Oligarchy, or the rule of a few Twenty years after the death of Timoleon, tyrannous Magistrates, to the ancient and vice: and on the contrary, as memorable lawfull election. Hence had our King Richard fervice for the hiurgantines against the Syra- the third a piece of his pattern; but the one cusions. For being entertained by the people was of base, the other of Kingly Parents; of Murgantia, and made General of their the one took liberty from a Common-weal, forces, he fackt Leontium; and belieged Syra- the other fought only to succeed in a Monarcuse so straightly, that the Citizens were chy; the one continued his cruelty to the driven to crave aid, even from their antient end, the other, after he had obtained he and natural enemies, the Carthaginians. Amil- Crown, fought, by making good Laws tto

this ill dealing, to Carthage; the Punick faith glad to leave their business undone, and Connich taunted by the Romans, as no better return into Africk. than meer falshood ) shewed it self very ho- The Carthaginians prepare a new Fleet: the Judges might award him, he ended his that rode in the Haven; and committing by Justine; more largely and particularly own life in what fort he thought best. This by Diodorus Siculus: the fumm whereof is desperation of Amilear served to inform this. The same Amilear that had brought Agathocles of the Caribaginians intent. He him into Syracuje, and that had lent him faw they would not be deluded with words. five thou land men to help in the Mallacre of and therefore resolved to get the start of the Citizens, was also content to wink at mathem in action. He diffembled no longer; ny wrongs that he did unto the confede but instead of spoil and robbery, made open rates of the Carthaginians. It was the pur- War upon all their Adherents. He had made rates of Amilear, to fettle Agathoeles in his the better part of Sicil his own, ere the Cartyranny, and to let him vex and waste the thaginian Forces arrived which thinking to whole Illand ; because it was thereby like to have incountred an ill-established Tvrant. come to pass, that he should reduce all sicil found him ready, as a King, to defend his into such terms as would make it become own, and give them sharp entertainment. an easie prey to Carthage. But when the They were beaten by him; and their Navy Cities, confederate with the Carthaginians, was fo Tempest-beaten, that they could neifent their Embassadours, with complaint of ther do good by Land, nor Sca. but were nourable in taking order for the redrefs Em- which being very gallantly manned and furbassadours were sent to comfort the sieili- nished was broken, by soul weather, and the ans, and to put Agathocles in mind of his Co- best part of it cast away, even whilst it was venants; Amilear was recalled home into yet within kenning of their City. But Amil-Africk, and a new Captain appointed to fuc- car, the Son of Gifea, gathering together ceed in his charge, with such forces, as might the remainders of his shipwrack, was bold compel Agathocles to reason, if otherwise he to pass over into Sicil, and landed not far would not hearken to it. All this tended from Gela; where Agathocles was foon reato save their Confederates, from suffering dy to examine the cause of their coming. Such injuries in the future. For that which Many skirmishes passed between them, in was past (fince it could not be recalled) they which (commonly) the Syracusum had the took order to have it feverely punished, better. But his good fucces begat pre-Amilear was accused secretly, and by way sumption; whereby he lost a battel more imoffcrutiny : the suffrages being given, but portant than all the other fights. One adnot calculated; and so reserved until he verse chance is enough to overthrow the should return. This was not so closely hand- state of a Tyrant, if it be not upheld by great led, but that Amilear had soon notice of it: circumspection. The War was soon transfer-In managing his business with Agathocles, it is red to the walls of Syracuse; within which likely that he had an eye to his own profit, Agathocles was closed up, and driven to make aswell as to the publick benefit of his Coun- his last defence by their help, who may be try. For he had made such a composition judged to have loved him not very greatly. with the Syraculian, as gave him not only But the Inhabitants of Syracuse, after that means to weaken others, but to strengthen great Massacre of the principal men, made himself, both in power and authority, even in the beginning of this new Tyranny, were against the Carthaginians. Such is com- (for the most part ) such, as had been either monly the cultom of those, that hope to mercenary Souldiers, infranchifed flaves, or work their own ends by cunning practices, base and needy people; helpers in establishthinking to deal fubtlely and finely, they ing the present Government, and Executiospintheir threads so small, that they are bro- ners of the murders, and spoil committed in ken with the very wind. Amilcar faw, that that change. If there were any other ( as his Carthaginians had a purpose to deal sub- some there were) they were so well obserflantially; and that therefore it would be ved, and ( withall ) fo fearful, that they durft hard for him to make them follow his crook- not stir: But it was enough that they all ed devices : which if he could not do, it agreed in the common defence of themselves wastobe expected, that their anger would and their City; Famine was likely to grow break out into so much the greater extremi- upon them, and inforce them to change ty, by how much the more they had con- their resolution. In this necessity Agathocles realed it. Therefore he followed the ex- adventured upon a strange course, which ample, which some of his fore-goers had the event commended as wife. He imbatqued Raughthim; and, for fear of such a death as as many as he thought meet, in those vesse'

the Government of the City to his Brother to look upon their walls. Their Towns are Antander, willed the people to be of good ill fortified, their people untrained, and experienced in dangers; the mercenary bethought himself of a mean, both toraise forces that they levy in these parts, will the fiege, and to repair all other losses. A Car- rather follow us than them, if we offer thaginian Fleet lay in the mouth of the Ha- greater wages than they can give: which ven, both to hinder the entrance of victual- we may better promise and make good, by lers, and to keep the befieged from iffuing letting them have fome share with us in all

-26

forth. to depart, advertisment came, that many to their stipends. Thus he talked, as one thips of burden, laden with Corn, and other already Master of all the riches in Africk; provisions, were drawing near unto syra- and with many brave words encouraged his cule. To intercept thele the Carthaginians men fo well, that they were contented to fet hoife fail, and lanch forth into the deep. fire on all their ships ( reserving one or two They were not far gone, when they might to use as Messengers) to the end that no behold Agathocles issuing forthof the Port, hope thould remain, save only in victory. with purpose (asthey thought) to give In this heat of resolution, they win by force convoy unto his victuallers. Hereupon they two Cities; which after they had throughly wheel about, and make amain toward him, as thinking him the better booty. Hencither abode their coming, nor fled back into The Carthaginians hearing this, are amazed: the City, but made all speed towards Africk; thinking that Amilear is broken, and his and was pursued by the Carthaginians, as whole Army destroyed in Sicil. This imlong as the day would give them light. In prefition fo difmayes them, that when they the mean season the victuallers were gotten know the truth of all, by such as had scato Syrache; which was the more plentiful- ped in the late Sea-fight, yet still they fear, ly relieved by their coming, for that Aga- and know not what. They suspect Amilthocles had unburdened the place of no small cars faith, who had suffered Agathocles to number. When the Carthaginian Admiral land in africk: they suspected their principerceived, first, that by purluing two Fleets pal Citizens at home, of a meaning to beat once, he had missed of them both : and tray Carthage unto the enemy; they raise a fecondly, that Agathocles returned not again, great Army, and know not to whose charge but was gone to seek his fortune elsewhere, they may safely commit it. he thought it good to purfue those that were fled, and to attend fo well upon them. that they should not have leifure to do mifchief in some other part.

thocles ( whether by chance, or by relation | vied, which far exceeded the forces of Agaof fuch ashad met with him at Sea ) directly thocles. But it seldom happens, that diffentowards Africk, and overtook him after tion between Commanders produceth any six dayes. He had (at the first ) a great start fortunate event. Necessity drave deather of them; fo that (belike ) they rowed hard, cles to fight: and the courage of his men, and wearied themselves in seeking their resolved to deal with the whole multitudeof own misfortune : for he fought with them, the Carthaginians, made easie the victory and beat them; and, having funk or taken against the one half of them. For Bomilmany, drave the rest to flye which way they car would not stir, but suffered Hanno tobe could, laden with such strange tydings of cut in pieces.

his voyage. Africk, then did he discover unto them his the Carthaginian society, to take part with project, letting them understand, that there | Agathocles: who pursuing his victory, winwas no better way to divert the Carthagini- neth many Towns, and fends word to syans, not only from syracuse, but from all the racuse of his good success. The Carthagi-Ille of Sicil, than by bringing the war to their nians also fend unto Sicil, willing Amil own doors. For here (faid he) they have ma- car, their General, to succour the State of ny that hate them, and that will readily take Africk, which was in danger to be loft, Arms against them, as soon as they perceive whilst he was travelling in the Conquest of that there is an Army on foot, which dires sicil. Amilear fends them five thousand men:

the wealth of the Carthaginians, than our Now, at fuch time as Agathocles was ready enemies can do, by making tome addition

There were at that time two famous Captains in the City, Hanno and Bomilear, great enemies. And therefore the more unlikely to conspire against the Common-wealth. The Carthaginian Navy followed Aga. These are made Generals of the Army le-

The reputation of this great victory, When Agathocles had landed his men in brought over a King of the Africans, from all his forces he thought it not needful to cified the tumult, by the accultomed protransport; as hoping rather to draw Agatho- mises of great booty and spoil. It had now cles back into Sicil, than to be drawn home been time for him to offer peace to the Carby one, that could fearce retain his own thaginians: which to obtain, they would Kingdom. But these good hopes had a bad (questionless) have given to him both mony iffue. He spent some time in winning a few enough to pay his Army, and all that they Towns that adhered unto the Syracultans: then held in Sicil. For their City had been and having brought his matters to some distressed, not only by this his war, but by good order, he conceived a fudden hope of the treason of Bomilear, who failed not much raking Syracule by surprise. It was a pret- of making himself Tyrant over them. But ty (though tragical) Accident, if it were ambition is blind. Acathocles had all his true, as Tully relates it. Amilcar had a dream thoughts fixed upon the conquest of Carwhich told him that he should sup the next thage it self: out of which dream he was day within Syracuse. His fancy begot this awakened, by the loss of a battel, not so medream, and he verily believed it. He made morable in regard of any accident therein, more hast than good speed toward the Ci- as of the strange events following it. The ty: and coming upon it on the fudden, had Carthaginians, after their great misfortunes good hope to carry it. But his enemies were in this war, had renewed their old facrifices prepared for him, and had laid an ambush of children to Saturn: from which they to entrap him, whereinto he fell. So he was had abstained ever tince they made peace carried prisoner into the City; in which it with Gelon. And now they made choice was likely that he had no great chear to his of some, the goodlicht of their prisoners tasupper: for they struck of his head, and ken in the battel, to offer unto the said Idol, fent it into Africk (a welcome present) to in way of thankfulness to their victory. The fire, with which these unhappy men were This good fuccess of things at home, did confumed, caught hold upon the lodgings put such courage into the Sicilian Army, nearest unto the Altar, and spreading it that Agathocles was bold to wear a Crown, felffarther through the Camp, with the deand file himself king of aspice. He had all struction of many men, caused such a tumult lured Ophellas, King of the Cyrenians, to take as is usual in the like cases. At the same his part, by promifes to deliver the Country time, the like accident of fire burnt up the into his hands: for that (as is faid) it was Pavilion of Agathecles. Hereupon both the fufficient unto himself to have diverted the Armies fled away, each of them believing, Carthaginians from Sicil, wherein (after this that the noise in the adverse Camp, was a war ended ) he might reign quietly. Ophellas fign of the enemies coming to invade it. But came with a great Army, and was friendly the Carthaginians had a fafe retrait: Agaentertained. But the traiterous Silician, thocles, by a second error, fell into a new taking an advantage, did murther this his affiliant; and afterwards by good words, and great promifes, drew all the Cyrenean Souldiers; and thinking them to be enemies, Army to follow him in his Wars. Thus his (as indeed the one halt of them had revoltvillany found good fucces; and he so pre- ed from him, to the Carthaginians, in the vailed in Africk, that he got leifure to make last battel) he began to assail them, and was after into Sicil. Many Towns in Sicil had fo foutly refifted, that he loft in this blind embraced a defire of recovering their liber- fight above four thousand of his men. This ty; thinking it high time to fight at length did so discourage his proud heart, that, befor their own freedom, after that they had ing fallen from the near hope of taking the blong been exposed, (as a reward of victo- City of Carthage, unto some distrust of his ty) either unto Aliens, or to Tyrants of own safety, he knew no more how to modetheir own Country. These had prevailed rate his present weak fears, than lately he far, and gotten many to take their parts, as had known how to govern his ambition. in a common cause: when the coming of Therefore he took the way that came next Agathocles abated their high spirits, and his into his head; which was to steal closely good fuccefs in many fights, compelled them aboard his ships, with his younger fon (the to Obedience. Out of Sicil he returned elder he suspected of Incest, and of Ambitiinto Africk, where his affairs stood in very on) and so to flye into Sicil; thinking it the bad terms. Archagathus, his ton had loft a best course to shift for himself, as wanting battel; and (which was worse) had ill vessels wherein to transport his Army. His means to help himself: his Army being in older son Archagathus, perceiving his drift, mutiny for lack of pay. But agathocles pa- arrested him and put him under custody: Ggggg loose, elcaped,, and fled alone, leaving both at his first coming. This done, he went to the his fons behind him. His tiight being noyfed Isle of Lipara, and made the Inhabitants buy nis ions bening itim. This inguit being no, see the peace with one hundred talents of gold. But through the Army, all was in an uproar 5 and peace with one hundred talents of gold. But extremity of rage caufed not only the com- when he had gotten this great furm, he mon Souldier, but even such as had been would needs exact a greater; and finding friends to the Tyrant, to lay hold upon his plainly that they had no more left, he was two lons, and kill them. That this flight bold to fpoil the Temples of their gods. of Agathorles was extreemly base, I need not Herein (methinks) he did well enough. Herein (methinks) he did well enough. For how could he believe those to be gods, truly, as all feat is faid tobe, a passion, de-triving him of the succours which reason horrible perjuries? Then he returned richoffered, the sequel doth manifest. His for- ly home, with eleven ships loaden with faken Souldiers, being now a headlefscom- gold: all which, and all the reft of the fleet, pany, and no longer an Army to be feared, were cast away by foul weather at Sea; one obtained nevertheless a reasonable compo- Gally excepted, in which he himself escafition from the Carthaginians: to whom ped, to fuffer a more miserable end. A griethey fold those places, whereof they had vous sicknessfell upon him, that rotted his pollefilon, for nineteen talents. Likewife, whole body, fpreading it felf through all his database himself, having lost his Army, did veins and sinews. Whilst he lay in this case, devited new engines of torment; wherein Grandfathers Kingdom, without aking any ftriving to exceed the Bull of Phalaris, he leave. Thefetydings wounded the heart of made a frame of brass, that should serve to Agathocles with fear and forrow. He saw forch mens bodies, and withall give him himfelf without help, like to become a prey leave to behold them in their milery. So to his ungracious Nephew, from whom he devilish is the nature of man, when reason, knew that no favour was to be expected, that should be his guide, is become a flave either by himself, or by those, whom only to his bruitish affections. In these mischies he now held dear, which were Theogeniz hewas fo outragious, that he neither spared and her children. Therefore he advised her Sex, nor Age; especially, when he was in- and them to fly before they were surpled: formed of the flaughter of his children in for that otherwise they could by no means Africk. But this was not the way to preserve avoid, either death, or somewhat that his estate: it threw him into new dangers, would be worse. He gave them all his trea-They whom he had chased out of their sures and goods, wherewith he even com-Country took arms against him, and drave pelled them (weeping to leave him desolate him into such fears, that he was fain to seek in so wretched a case) to imbark themselves that love at Carthage, which by ruling well hasfily, and make speed into Eggpt. After he might have had in Sicil. He freely detheir departure, whether he threw himfelf livered into the Carlbaginians hands, all into the fire, or whether his difease confuntions Towns of the Phanicians in Sicil, be-ed him, there was none left that cared to longing unto them, which were in his pof- attend him but he ended his life as balely. fession. They requited him honourably, with as obscury, and in as much want as he first great store of corn, and with four hundred began it. talents of gold and filver. So (though not without much trouble and hazard) he pre- the Mamertines, his Souldiers, traiteroully vailed against the Rebels, and settled his occupied Messana, and insested a great part estate. Having no further business left in si- of the Island. Then also did the Carthagincil, he made a voyage into Italy. There he ans begin to renew their attempts of confubdued the Erstians, rather by terrour of quering all sicil. What the Nephew of Aga-

but by means of a sudden tumult, he was let his name than by any force, for they yeilded neverthelels, by the reputation of this late and defiring his end, fave only Theogenia (a war, make peace with Carthage upon equal wife that he had taken out of Egypt) and her small children: his Nephew, the sonof After this, the Tyrant being delivered from forain enemies, discovered his bloody younger son of his own, began to contend nature, in most abominable cruelties, among about the Kingdom. Neither did they the Sicilians. His wants and his fears, urg ed him fo violently, that he was not fatisfied with the spols of the rich, or the death of much. But each of them laid wait for the those whom he held suspected: but in a others life: wherein the Nephew sped so beastly rage depopulated whole Cities. He well, that he slew his Uncle, and got his thocles did, I cannot find. Likely it is that | firength of spracuje, in the dayes of Meathohe quickly perithed. For the Sicilians were cles: and therefore knew, that it was able therefore left it; prophecying that it would should weaken one the other, whereby their become a goodly champion field, wherein own work might be the easier against them Rome and Carthage should fight for superio- both. Yet indeed, the case of the besieged rity. In which bufines, how these two great Cities did speed, the order of our story will before it, as it had been when the Carthagideclare.

6. V.

A recontinuation of the Roman War in Sicil. How Hieron, King of Syracuse, forlook the Carthaginians, and made bis peace with Rome.

Messana, brought the War unto the Gates just and good Prince, had no greater desire Meljana, prougher the var unto the object of stratefy and befieged that great City; than to win the love of his people by feekHieron found it high time for him to feek peace: knowing that the Carthaginian had felicity within the publick, laboured to uppeace: Rhowing that the Carlongianan has been read to provide a property and the could, such as the could, when they were not in case to give long and happy reign, living dear to his own him affiftance; and foreseeing withall, that Subjects, beloved of the Romans, and not the Romans, it would be free for him to fit whom, either the confideration, That they man Confuls, M. Valerius, and C. Ottacilius made unable to compass it. found him, and readily embraced the offer of his friendship. Yet they made use of their present advantage, and fold him peace for an hundred (some say two hundred) Ta- How the Romans besiege and win Agrigentum.

These Consuls had brought a great Army into sicil; yet did they nothing else in effed, than bring over Hiero to their fide. If the System of mony imposed upon him, and by and other necessaries: fo that they, pretheir performing none other piece of ser suming upon his assistance, recall some vice) all the whole time of their abode in part of their forces. The Carthaginians the Island 3 then was his departure from find it high time to bestir them; they the friendship of Carthage, no less to his ho- send to the Ligurians, and to the troups nour than it was to his commodity. For they had in Spain, to come to their aid; by no reason could they require, that he who being arrived, they made the City of should suffer his own Kingdom to run into Agrigentum the seat of the War, against the manifest peril of subversion, for their sakes Romans, filling it with all manner of muthat should have seceived all the profit of nition. the victory : feeing they did expose him to The Roman Consuls, having made peace the whole dapper without straining them with Hieron, return into Italy; and, in elves to give him relief. But the Carthagini- their places, Lucius Posthumus and Quin-ans had lately made good proof of the tun Mamilius arrive. They go on towards driven to fend for Pyrrhus to help them, who to bear a very strong siege. And hereupon it had marryed with a daughter of Agatho- is like that they were the more flack, in fendcles. But Pyrrhus was foon weary of the ing help:if(perhaps)it were not some part Country ( as hath been shewed before ) and of their defire, that both Rome and Syracuse City was not the same, when the Romans lay nians attempted it. For there was great reason to try the uttermost hazard of war against the Carthaginians, who sought no other thing than to bring it into flavery: not so against the Romans, who thought it fufficient if they could withdraw it from the party of their enemies. Besides, it was not all one to be governed by Agathocles, or by Hiero. The former of these cared not what Hen Appins Clandins, following the the Citizens endured, so long as he might advantage of his victory gotten at preserve his own tyranny: the latter, as a when once he had purchased his quiet from greatly molested by the Carthaginians; fill, without fear of moleftation, whilft had left him to himfelf, ere he left their fociety, Rome and Carthage were fighting for the made unwilling to feek his ruine; or their mastery. In this good mood the new Ro- more earnest business with the Romans,

s. VI.

Their beginning to maintain a flect. Their first los, and first victory by sea, Of sea-fiebt in general.

Ggggg 2

791

* Agigor * Agrigentum: and finding no enemy in the as broken, till they came to the body of the agrigentum. and intuing no cataly agrigentum. and intuing no cataly agrigentum. Army, that lay shadowed behind some rising Cuy, but fed with fifty thousand Souldiers. After a ground. The Numidians perform it accorby the come, while, the time of harvest being come, a dingly; and while the Romans pursued the der the part of the Roman Army range the Country Numidians, Hanno gives upon them, and conduct of to gather corn, and those at the siege grow having slaughtered many, beats the rest into delice and P. jagus. negligent; the Carthaginians fally furtoufly, their Trenches. The com- and indanger the Roman Army, but are in After this encounter, the Carthaginians and some and monager the troops and the pass was the end repelled into the Town with great made no other attempt for two months, but ten miss. the loss; but by the fmart felt on both fides, the lay strongly encamped, waiting untill some about the loss; but by the smart felt on both fides, the walls, and Affailants redoubled their guards, and the opportunity should invite them. But Anthad fometimes befieged kept within their covert. Yet the mibal that was befieged in Agrigentum, as in it cont Romans, the better to assure themselves, cut well by signs as messengers, made Hanno handered a deep trench between the walls of the Ci-know how ill the extremity which he enund and their Camp: and another on the out-dured, was able to brook such dilators tanks, This fide thereof; that neither the Carthaginians courses. Hanno thereupon, a second time, reason or might force them suddenly, by a fally; nor provoked the Consuls to fight: But his Elethe ferrili-those of the Country without, break upon phants being disordered by his own Vantthou or the country without of the figure of the management of the bour-hood any relief of victuals, and munitions, whillt recovered Heraclea. Annibal perceiving this, than greathe Syracufan supplies the assailants with and remaining hopeless of succour, resolved in a first what they want. The besieged send for to make his own way. Finding therefore frace from fuccour to Carthage, after they had been in that the Romans, after this dayes victory, granings, this fort pent up five months. The Cartha- wearied with labour, and secured by their to great give and giv glory and Sants, under the command of Hanno; who night; he rusht out of the Town, with all the pleny and arrives with it at Heracles, to the West of remainder of his Army, and past by the Rogreat, sait the Romans had bestowed all their provisi- they were, that he could not carry the City caused Emp do the on. By means hereof, the famine without with him, which with little a-do the Roto lay, that grew to be as great, as it was within Agri- mans entred, and pitifully spoiled. The Rogenius genium; and the Roman Camp no icis man product the direction of their prefent good built Pala- straightly assigned by Hanno, than the City to follow the direction of their prefent good pur them and put themselves in order. Hanno directs the disease of Kings, of States, and also of pompand the Numidian horsemen to change the Vant- private men, to covet the greatest things, magnitude, to the end to draw them further on ; but not to enjoy the leaft; the defire of that in their which done, he commands them to return which we neither have nor need, taking godly Temples, and Theatens, Water-conduits, and Fifth-preds. the ruines, Wincom we neither nave not need, taking
Temples, and Theatens, Water-conduits, and Fifth-preds. the ruines,
When the design see fund-tion arguments, but Agent re felf coulder—whe rest are the proper of the Temple of Japitro Objopiurs. (by The study of the Temple is felf) there was fet out on one fide the full propertion of the Giants, sphang with the gods, all out out in the full propertion of the Giants, sphang with the gods, all out out in possibled mubble of divers colours; a wank the most magnificent and tare that ever hath been feen conthe other fide, the war of Troy, and the counters which happed at that fages; with the personates of the Henon Titus Off acillius, two new Confuls, are fent incounters which hapned at that fiege; with the personages of the Heroes that were doers in that war; all of the like beautiful stone, and of equa that were dorrs in that wars, all of the like beautiful flone, and or equal flature to the bodies of those men in ancient times: In comparation of which, the latter works or that kind, are but petry things, and meet rusles, the would require a volume of penger the magnificence of the Temples of Frevenils, Acidinal Control, June Luita, Coultin, Poliphias, Calita and Frevenils, Acidinal Matter-pieces of those exaginite. Panters and Carvens Politar, 2012, 2019, and Polyitating were to be from. But ny noce for frince it can be fame fortune that all other great Cities have done, and warrained be divers calamities of war; whereof this war prefers brought warrained be divers calamities of war; whereof this war prefers brought unto it not the leaft.

The fifth Book of the first Part Agricentum. Hanno put himself into the man camp without resistance. The Confuls field, and surpriseth Erbesus, a City wherein pursue him in the morning, but in vain: sure gentum; and the Roman Camp no less mans, proud of this victory, pursued rather ces of meh was by the Romans: infomuch, as if Hieron fortunes, than their first determinations. ty, as it had not supplied them, they had been They had resolved in the beginning of this they are ant forced to abandon the fiege. But feeing War, only to fuccour the Mamertines, and to nive tor that this diffress was not enough to make to keep the Carthaginians from their own made fuch them rife, Hanno determined to give them coafts: but now they determine to make reals, as it them file. To which end departing from He-themselves Lords of all Sicil; and from they ment battel. To which end departing from He-themselves Lords of all Sicil; and from they ment battel. one ment the makes approach unto the Roman thence, being favoured with the wind of next day. Camp. The Romans resolve to sustain him, good success, to fail over into Africk. It is > to Sicil. Whereupon, the Romans being Masters of the field, many in-land Towns gave themselves unto them. On the contrary, the Carthaginians keeping still the Lordship of the Sea, many maritimate places became theirs. The Romans therefore, as wellto fecure their own coafts, often invaded by the African fleets, as to equal themselves in every Gallies, whereby they might falten or grapkind of warfare with their enemies, deter- ple themselves with their enemies, when mine to make a fleet. And herein fortune they were (as we call it) boord and boord, favoured them with this accident, that be- that is, when they brought the Gallies sides ing altogether ignorant inship-wrights craft, together. This done the weightier ships had form of wind thrust one of the Caribagi- gotten the advantage, and the Africans lost nian Gallies, of five banks, to the shore.

they might learn the stroke of the Gally, Certainly, he that will happily perform a and how to mount and draw their Oares.

not easily beaten by fifty. but give the charge of their fleet to his Col- failers, and good ships, have the advantage, league, Duilius, Duilius, considering that the on the open Sea, of an hundred as good ships Roman vessels were heavy and slow, the and of slower failing. For if the fleet of an African Gallies having the speed of them, de-hundred sail keep themselves near together, vised a certain Engine in the prow of his in a gross squadron; the twenty ships, charg-

it. For neither did their swittness serve Now had the Romans a pattern, and by them, nor their Marriners craft; the veffels it they began to fet up an hundred Quinque wherein both Nations fought, being open: remes which were Gallies, rowed by five on fo that all was to be carryed by the advanevery bank; and twenty, of three on a bank: tage of weapon, and valour of the men. Beand while these were in preparing, they ex- fides this, as the heavier Gallies were acciercifed their men in the feat of rowing. This dentally likely to crush, and crack the fides they did after a strange fashion. They placed of the lighter and weaker, so were they by mon the Sea-fands many feats, in order of the reason of their breadth, more steady; the banks in Gallies, whereon they placed and those that best kept their feet, could also their water-men, and taught them to beat best use their hands. The example may be the fand with long poles, orderly, and as given between one of the long boats of his they were directed by the Master, that so Majesties great ships, and a London-Barge.

fight at Sea, must be skilful in making choice When their fleet was finished, some rig- of Vessels to fight in: he must believe that ging and other implements excepted, C. Cor- there is more belonging to a good man of gog and other implements excepted to the waters, then ever confuls (for they war, upon the waters, than great daring 5 changed every year) was made Admiral: and must know, that there is a great deal of who being more in love with this new kind difference, between fighting loose or as who can make a spread of the Guns of a flow of warfare, than well advifed, paft over to large, and grappling. The Guns of a flow fluing with feventeen Gallies, leaving the fluip pierce as well, and make as great holes, rest to follow him. There he stayed not, but as those in a swift. To clap ships together, would needs row along the coast to Lipara, without consideration, belongs rather to a hoping to do some piece of service. Hannibal mad man, than to a man of War: for by such a Carthaginian was at the same time Gover- an ignorant bravery was Peter Stroffie lost at nour in Panormus; who being advertised of the Azores, when he fought against the Marthis new Sea-mans arrival, fent forth one quest of Santa Cruz. In like fort, had the Boodes, a Senator of Carthage, with twenty Lord Charles Howard, Admiral of England, Gallies, to entertain him. Boodes, falling been lost in the year 1588, if he had not upon the Consul unawares, took both him been better advised, than a great many maand the fleet he commanded. When Hanni- lignant fools were, that found fault with his bal received this good news, together with demeanour. The Spaniards had an Army the Roman Gallies, and their Conful; he aboord them; and he had none: they had grew no less foolish hardy than Cornelius more ships than he had and of higher buildhad been. For he, fancying to himself to ing and charging; so that, had he intangled suprize the rest of the Roman fleet, on their himself with those great and powerful Vesowncoast, ere they were yet in all points sels, he had greatly endangered this King-Provided; fought them out with a fleet of dom of England. For twenty men upon the fifty fail: wherewith falling among them, he defences, are equal to an hundred that boord was well beaten, and leaving the greater and enter; whereas then, contrariwise, the number of his own behind him, made an Spaniards had an hundred, for twenty of hard escape with the rest: for of one hun ours to defend themselves withall. But our dred and twenty Gallies, the Romans under Admiral knew his advantage, and held it: Cornelius had lost but seventeen, so as one which had he not done, he had not been bundred and three remained, which were worthy to have held his head. Here to speak ingeneral of Sea-fights (for particulars are The Romans, being advertised of Corneli- fitter for private hands than for the Press,) whis overthrow, make hast to redeem him, I say, that a fleet of twenty ships, all good

ing them upon any angle, thall force them to | ragement, to proceed in their Wars by Sea: give ground, and to fall back upon their own whereby they hoped, not only to get Sicil next fellows: of which so many as intangle, but all the other liles between Italy and are made unferviceable or loft. Force them Africk, beginning with Sardinia, whither they may eafily, because the twenty ships, loon after they fent a fleet for that purpose. which give themselves teope after they have On the contrary side, Amilear, the Carthagigiven one broad fide of Artillery, by clap-nian, lying in Panormus, carefully waited ping into the wind, and staying, they may for all occasions, that might help to recomgive them the other; and fo the twenty ships pence the late misfortune; and being adbatter them in pieces with a perpetual volly ; vertifed, that some quarrel was grown bewhereasthose that fight in a troop, have no tween the Roman Souldiers, and their Auxiroom to turn, and can alwayes use but one liaries, being such as caused them to incamo and the tame beaten fide. If the fleet of an apart, he fent forth Hanno to fet upon them; hundred fail give themselves any distance, who taking them unawares, buried four then shal the lesser steer against thousand of them in the place. Now during those that are arear and hindmost, or against the continuance of the Land-war in Sicil, those, that by advantage of over-sailing the continuance of the Land-war in Sicil, those, that the development of the continuance of the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that are areas and hindmost, and if upon a Sicil, the continuance of the Land-war in Sicil, those the Land-war in Sicil, those that are areas and hindmost properties that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those the Land-war in Sicil, those the Land-war in Sicil, those that the Land-war in Sicil, those the Lee-shore, the ships next the wind : be con- to make amends for his former errour, obftrained to fal back into their own fquadron, tained the trust of a new fleet, wherewithhe then it is all to nothing, the whole fleet must arrived at Sardinia: the conquest of which fuffer shipwrack, or render it self. That such Island, the Romans had entertained for their advantage may be taken upon a fleet of un- next enterprise. Now it fo fellout, that the equal speed, it hath been well enough con- Romans, crossing the Sea from Sicil, arrived ceived in old time; as by the Oration of Herlin the Port where Hannibal with his new mocrates, in Thueydides, which he made to fleet anchored. They fet upon him unawares. them, it may easily be observed.

Prince; of which, like an Eclipfe of the Sun, peccare; In War it is too much to offend twice. His we shall find the effects hereafter. Impossible After this, it was long ere any thing of im-sia ? it is to equal words and forrows; I will there- portance was done by the Confuls, till * P4- man fore leave him in the hands of God that hath him. Cura leves loquuntur, ingentes siupent.

Divers Enterfeats of War, between the Romans

fo gave it unto the Romans great incou which grows about it.

the $577acusars, when the Atherians invaded he conducted; himself hardly escaping the Ethem, it may easily be observed.

Of the Art of War by Sea, I had written a Treatise, for the Lord Henry, Prince of Wales; a fubject, to my knowledge, never thandled by any man, ancient or modern: but the Carthaginians, were so ill pleased with the Sood unfortunate voyage, that the habour of sinishing it, by his loss; by the loss of that brave the Carthaginians of the Sunday and the Sood unfortunate voyage, that they hanged him up for his diligence: for some they have believe the Sood unfortunate voyage, that they hanged him up for his diligence: for some they have believe they have believe they have believe they have believe they have they have believe they have been believed to the sound to be they have been believed to the sound to be they have been believed to be they have been believed to be they have been believed to be the sound to be they have been believed to be the sound to be the sound to be they have been believed to be the sound to b is one of the first Cities that hath been built in all Emps. Rewhereas Trucydides seems to make it a Colony of the Phanician; R But it is now time to return to the beaten Carthaginian; who by losing their advantage of (wift boats, and boarding the Romanis, 1880). But it is now time to return to the beaten carthaginian; who by losing their advantage of (wift boats, and boarding the Romanis, 1880). But it is now time to return to the beaten carthage of (wift boats, and boarding the Romanis, 1880). But it is now time to return to the beaten carthage of (wift boats, and boarding the Romanis, 1880). But it is now time to return to the beaten carthage in the property of the property tage of (witt boats, and boarding the Komans), have loft fifty fail of their Gallies: a son the other fide, their enemies by commanding the test of the fide, their enemies by commanding the Seas, have gotten liberty to fail about the Weft part of Sicil; where they raifed the fiege laid unto Segesta by the Carthaginians, and won the Town of Macella, with some other places.

The field with the season of the field of the field with the field of the field with the field of the field with the field wi post, put ejan pratits jacoo futt sjace, full document. O futt some analysis fed Tuni buit, praxime nomes of Bayeb, fed Tuni buit, praxime nomes of Parts. And chain coin (faith Faxillus) was found intire in the Caftle Bayeb, in the year of Now whether these inferiptions were truly as ancient as the many than the state of the sta Now whether the inferiptions were truly as ancient, as their mailer the second of the THE Victory of Dutlius, as it was honoured at Rome, with the first Naval

Sea, as well of the Gain and State on the High (Sign) an Triumph, that was ever feen in that City; for our it is the control of the strong of t normus was belieged; where, when the Ro- first and second. The order of the Carthamins had fought in vain to draw the Car-ginian Fleet-I cannot receive by relation; thatinians into the field; being unable to but, by the manner of the fight afterwards, force that great City, because of the strong I conjecture, that the front of their Fleet Garrison therein bestowed: they then de- was thin, and stretched in a great length. parted from thence, and trook certain In- much like to that which the French call ns. Hippana, and others, between Panermuchthin: which form, fince the Piftol prevailed and steffana.

and Quinqueremes.

fought on the waters. By Polybius his esti- mans to their heels; as not able to sustain mation, there were in the Roman Gallies an both squadrons. The Rear being relieved, hundred and forty thousand men; and in the Consuls came to the aid of their third those of Carthage, an hundred and fifty thou- Battalion, which towed their victuallers, and: Reckoning one hundred and twenty which were also in great danger of being Souldiers, and three hundred Rowors to beaten by the Africans: but the Confuls, every Gally, one with the other. The Roman joyning their squadrons to it, put the Carfleet was divided into four parts, of which thaginians on that part also to running. was attraced into tour pares of whether first made the form of a Wedge or I This victory fell unto the Roman, patt-Triangle; the two first squadrons making by by the hardiness of their Souldiers; the Flanks, and the third squadron, the but principally, for that Amilear, being first Base: the point thereof (wherein were the beaten. could never after joyn himself unto two Confuls as Admirals) looking toward any of his other squadons, that remained, the enemy, and the middle space lying as yet in a fair likelihood of prevailing, for empty. Their Vessels of carriage were long as they fought upon equal terms, and towed by the third squadron. After all but squadron to quadron. But Amilear came up the fourth, in form of a Crescent; forlaking the fight, thereby left a full fourth very well manned, but exceeding thin: fo part of the Roman Fleet uningaged, and that the horns of it inclosed all the third ready to give succour to any of the other squadron, together with the corner of the parts that were opprest. So as in conclusion, and Towns, as Algoifications, Enns, Cameri-Combat en haye, a long front of horse, and over the Lance, they have changed. Behind The year following, C. Athless the Contal this first out-stretched front, their Battaltons who commanded the Roman neet, discover- were more folid: for Amilear, Admiral of who company of the Carthaginian Gallies, the Carthaginians had thus ordered them, of ranging the coast: and, not staying for his purpose, his Gallies having the speed of the whole number pursued them with ten of Romans) that, when the first Fleet of the his. But he was well beaten for the hafte he Romans hafted to break through the first made, and lost all, save the Gally which Gallies, they should all turn tail, and the Rotransported him: wherein himself escaped mans pursuing them (as after a victory ) diswith great labour. But ere all was done, the order themselves, and, for eagerness of tarelt of Atilises his fleet was gotten up: who king the Run-awayes, leave their own three renewing the fight, recovered from the Car- iquadrons far behind them. For so it must that in an a double number of theirs; by needs fall out; feeing that the third fquawhich the Victory remaining doubtful, both dron towed their horfe-boats and victualchallenge it. Now to try at once, which of lers; and the fourth had the Rearward of these two Nations should command the all. According to Amilears directionit suc-Seas, they both prepare all they can. The ceeded. For when the Romans had charged, Romans make a fleet of three hundred and and broken the thin front of the Carthagithirty Gallies; the Carthaginians, of three nian first Fleet, which ran away, they forthhundred and fifty, * Triremes, Quadriremes, with gave after them with all speed possible, not fo much as looking behind them for the fection squares that four to an Car: and the Tienny three, he has thought, that the Dadapterness had five ranks of Cars, one has thought, that the Dadapterness had five ranks of Cars, one were drawn near unto the body of the Cartandary and the other Gallies (rateably) freet. But had this been the famility of a thousand unto a nother could have the famility of a thousand unto a nother could have the famility of a thousand unto a nother could have the famility of a thousand unto a nother could have the famility of the the second squadron. Hereby the Romans second squadron came up, which forced Antilear to betake him to his Oars. Hanno The Romans resolve to transport the also who commanded the right wing of the War into Africk; the Carthaginians, to ar- Carthaginian Fleet, invaded the Roman reft them on the coast of Sicil. The num- Rearward, and prevailed against them. But bers, with which each of them filled their Amilear being beaten off, Marcus Atilius fell feet, was (perhaps) the greatest that ever back to their succour, and put the Carthagi-

the Romans got the honour of the day : | Promontory, till they came to Clypea, a Town for they loft but four and twenty of theirs; about fifty English mile from it. There whereas the Africans lost thirty that were they dif-embarked and prepared to beliege funk, and threefcore and three that were clypea; which to ease them of labour, was

than the Romans , had also divided his Fleet all invasions are foolish. By this time were into four fquadrons, (befides those that he the Africans also arrived at their own Carranged in the front to draw on the enemies, thage, fearing that the Roman Fleet and Arand to ingage them) and that whilft he him- my had directed themselves thither : but befell fought with one fqualron that charged him, all the reft of the enemies Fleet had they made provisions of all forts, both by Sea been at the same time entertained, he had and Land, for their defence. The Romans prevailed: but the second squadron, being send to Rome for directions, and in the mean tree came to the refeue of the first, by which while wast all round about them. The or-Annicar was opprest; and Amilear, being op- der given for the Senate, was. That one of preit and feattered, the Confuls had good the Confuls should remain with the Army, leifure to relieve both the third and the and that the other thould return with the fourth squadron, and got the victory.

cepts to Philip the second his Son, where he whither he carried with him twenty thouadvised him concerning War against the fand African Captains, with all the Roman Turks, tells him, that in all battels be- Fleet and Army; except forty ships, fifteen tween them and the Christians, he should thousand foot, and five hundred horse, that never fail to charge the fanifars in the be- were left with Atilius. ginning of the fight, and to ingage them at once with the reil. For (faith he) the Jani- fome Towns and places that were unwalled, fars, who are alwayes referred intire in the and laid fiege to others. But he performed Rear of the battel, and in whom the Turk no great matter before he came to Adir. reposeth his greatest considence; come up Yet I hold it worthy of relation, that near in a goss body, when all the troops on both unto the River of Bragada, he encountred fides are difbanded and in confusion; where- with a S. rpent of one hundred and twenty by they carry the Victory before them with- foot long, which he flew, not without los out relistance. By the same order of fight, of many Souldiers, being driven to use and refervation, did the Romans also pre- against it such engines of War, as served provail against other Nations. For they kept perly for the affaulting of Towns, At Adis their Triarii in store ( who were the choice he met with the Carthaginian Army, whereof their Army) for the up-thot and last of the Captains were Hanno and Bostar, toblow. A great and victorious advantage gether with Amilear, who had brought over it hath even been found, to keep some one out of sicil five thousand foot, and five hunor two good troops to look on, when all dred horse to succour his Country. These elfe are difbanded and ingaged.

e. VIII.

2ke Romans prevail in Africk. Atilius the felves free from necessity of coming to ly beaten and made priloner.

OW the Romans, according to their of Adis, they incamp near unto him, and itrongly (as they think) on the top of an hill: paired and re-victualled their Fleet, fet fail but thereby they lofe the fervices both of for Africa, and arrived at the Promontory their Elephants, and of their horse-men. This of Hercules, a great Head-land, somewhat disadvantage of theirs, Regulus discovers, and to the Last or the Fort of Carthage, and makes use of it. He assails them in their fome torty leagues from Heraclia in Sicil, strength, which they defend a while, but in where similar nimfelf as yet staid. From tine the Romans prevail, and force them from this Head-land ( kaving the entrance into the place, taking the spoil of their Camp. Folyielded unto them. Now had they a Port Now, if Amilear who had more Gallies of their own on Africa fide; without which Fleet into Italy. According to this direction. Charls the fifth, among other the Pre- Minlius the Conful is fent home to Rome;

(belike) had an intent, rather to weary him out of Africk, by wary protraction of time, than to undergo the hazard of a main fight. They were careful to hold them-Conful, propoundeth intolerable conditions blows: yet had they a great defire to fave of Peace to the Carthaginians. He is utter- the Town of Adis out of his hands. Intending therefore to follow their general purpote, and yet to disturb him in the siege Cartinge) they coaled the East-fice of the lowing this their good fortune at the heels, ors G-they proceed to * Tunis a City within fix- fand, were it not commonly found that teen miles of Carthage, which they affault they which use the service of mercenary his the year 1836, and was one of the three Keyes, which he own doors. so in the year 156 and was ease of the three hours, which he making to Philip the leaded be four to keep fale; to wit, that a stage to Philip the leaded be four to keep fale; to wit, that he had been so keep fale; to wit that the headed had been so keep fale to the head of the head and Queen Euroscov, to woung out or use annut: where we stayed ground, fittest both for his Elephants and Horse, pair jucks, but brake oven the doors, and having rifled all, Horse, presented them batted. The Romans must have been supported by the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the control of the Romans was the control of the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where the Romans was the Romans was the Romans was the Romans where Romans was the Romans wh and the other of an hundred and fifty thou- the enemy upon equal terms. Here was

Souldiers, are stronger abroad, than at their

wondred much, whence this new courage By the loss of this battail at Adis, and of their enemies might grow : but confimore especially by the loss of Tunis, the dent they were, that it should soon be Conthaginians were greatly dismayed. The abated. Their chief care was, how to resist Numidians, their next Neighbours towards the violence of the Elephants. Against the West, insult upon their misfortunes; them they placed the Velites, or light-armed invade, and spoil their Territory, and force Souldiers, as a forlorn hope; that these those that inhabite abroad, to forsake their might either with darts and other castingvillages and fields, and to hide themselves weapons, drive back the beasts upon the within the walls of Carthage. By reason here-enemies, or at least break their violence, and of agreat famine at hand threatens the Ci- hinder them from rushing freely upon the tizens. Atilius finds his own advantage, and Legions. To the same end, they made affures himself that the City could not long their battails deeper in file, than they had hold out : vet he feared left he might defend been accustomed to do. By which means, it felf, untill his time of Office, that was near as they were the less subject unto the imexpired, should be quiterun out, whereby pression of the Elephants; so were they the new Confuls were like to reap the ho- to much the more exposed unto the vionour of obtaining it. Ambition therefore, lence of the horse, wherein the enemy did that hath no respect but to it self, per-far exceed them. The Elephants were Iwades him to treat of peace with the Car- placed by Xantippus, all in one rank, before thaginians. But he propounded unto them his Army; which followed them at a reabut me proposed and one of the conditions, as there-by their hearts, formerly possessing and distance: his horsemen, and some light-armed foot, of the Carthaginians Auxibecame now so couragious and distantel, liaries, were in the wings. The first onset that they resolved, either to defend their was given by the Elephants, against which liberty, or die to the last man. To strengthen the Velites were so unable to make resithis their resolution, there arrived at the stance, that they brake into the battalions fame time a great troop of Greeks, whom following, and put them into some diforthey had formerly fent to entertain. Among der. In this case, the depth of the Roman these was a very expert Souldier, named battail was helpfull. For when the beasts Xuntippus, a Spartan: who being informed had fpent their force, in piercing through a of what had passed, and of the overthrow few of the first ranks; the squadrons neverwhich the Carthaginians received neer unto theless persisted in their order, without Adia, gave it out publickly; that the same opening. But the Carthaginian horse, havewas occasioned by default of the Comman-ing at the first encounter, by reason of their ders, and not of the Nation. This bruit, ran advantage in number, driven those of Atitill it came to the Senate; Xantippus is sent lius out of the field, began to charge the for; gives the reason of his opinion; and in Roman battalions in flank, and put them conclusion, being made General of the in great distress; who being forced to turn African forces, he puts himself into the field face every way, could neither pass forward The Army which he led, confifted of no nor yet retire; but had very much ado to more than twelve thousand foot, and four make good the ground whereon they stood. thousand horse, with an hundred Ele-In the mean while, such of the Romans, phants. No greater were the forces where as had escaped the fury of the Elephants, with the Carthaginians fought for all that and left them at their backs, fell upon the they had, Libertyes, Lives, Goods, Wives, Carthaginian Army, that met them in veand Children: which might well make it ry good array. It was no even match. The suspected, that the Armies by Sea, before one were a difordered Company, wearied poken of, were mif-numbered; the one con- with labour and hurt; the other, fresh, is of an hundred and forty thousand, and well prepared, to have dealt with therefore a great flaughter with little fight; the natural care, to preferve himfelf and the Romann halfily recoiled to the body of others, by yielding to such an office of humatheir Army, which being surrounded with nity, as is common in all wars (not groundthe enemy, and spent with travail, fell all ed upon deadly hatred ) only in regard of to rout, upon the defeat of these troops, some small advantage. Whatsoever the that open the way to a general overthrow. Carthaginians thought of him; fure it is So the Carthaginians obtained a full victory; that his faithful observance of his word destroying the whole Roman Army, save given, cannot betoo much commended. But two thousand, and taking five hundred pri- that grave speech, which he made in the Sefoners, together with Atilius the Conful. nate, against the exchange of prisoners, ap-Of their own they lost no more than eight pears, in all reason, to have proceeded from hundred Mercenaries, which were flain a vain-glorious forwardness, rather than when the fight began, by two thouland of from any necessity of State. For the Exthe Romans: that wheeling about to avoid change was made foon after his death; the Elephants, bare down all before them: wherein the Romans had the worse bargain, and made way even to the Carthaginian by fo much as Right as himfelf was worth. As trenches. These were the two thousand for the authority of all Historians, that that escaped, when the whole Army behind magnifie him in this point; we are to conthem was routed. All the rest were either lider, that they lived under the Roman Emtaken or flain. Hereby fortune made the pire: Philinus, the Carthaginian, perhaps did Romans know, that they were no less her censure it otherwise. Yet the death which vaffals, than were the Carthaginians: how in- he fuffered with extream torments, could not folent soever they had been in their propo- be more grievous to him, than it was dishofition of peace, as if they had purchated from pourable to Carthage. Neither do I think her the inheritance of their prosperity, that the Carthaginians could excuse themwhich shenever gave nor fold to any mor- selves herein; otherwise than by recriminatal man. With what joy these newes were tion: saying, that the Romans deserved to be welcomed, when they came to Carthage, no better intreated, for as much as it is their we may easily conjecture; and what great ordinary practice to use others in the like things the vertue of one man hath often fort. Cruelty doth not become more warbrought to pass in the world, there are many rantable, but rather more odious, by being examples to prove, no less than this of Xan- customary. It was the Roman fashion, to tippus: all of them confirming that sentence whip almost to death, and then to behead, of Eurypedes, Mens una Sapiens, plurium vincit the Captains of their enemies whom they manus; Many mens hands equal not one wife took, yea, although they were fuch as had After this great service done to the Car- fore it seems not meet, in reason, that they thaginians, Xantippus, returned into Greece ; should cry out against the like tyrannical inwhether for that he was more envyed than folency in others, as if it were lawful only honoured, or for what other cause, it is un- in themselves.

796

known. was very memorable. He was fent from his intolerable demands; and of the fudden Carthage to Rome, about the exchange and valour, whereinto the Carthaginians fear ransom of prisoners on both sides: giving was changed by meer desperation; calls to his faith to return if the business were not remembrance, the like insolency of others effected. When he came to Rome, and plainly in prosperity, that hath bred the like resolufaw that his Country should lose by the bar- tion in those, to whom all reasonable grace gain: fo far was he from urging the Senate hath been denyed. In such cases I never hold unto compassion of his own milery, that he it impertinent, to add unto one, more testiearnestly perswaded to have the prisoners in monies; approving the true rules, from Affick left to their ill destinies. This done, which our passions carry us away. In the year 1378, the Genomaies wonso painstaken, he was rewarded with an hor- fast upon the Venetians, as they not only rible death. For this his constancy and dravetheir Gallies out of the Sea, but they faith, all Writers highly extoll him. But the brought their own fleet within two miles of Carthaginians seem to have judged him an Venice it self. This bred such an amazement obstinate and malicious enemy, that neither in the City of Venice, that they offered unto in his prosperity would hearken to reathe Genowaies (their state reserved) whatso fon, nor yet in his calamity would have ever they would demand. But Peter Doria, alwayes made fair wars with them. Where-

The consideration both of this missor-The death of Atilius Regulus the Conful, tune, that rewarded the pride of Atilius

blown up with many former victories, would to their colt. For the Romans took by force hearken tono composition; save the yield- an hundred and sourteen of their fleet, and ing of their City and State to his discretion. drew them after them to Clypea; where Hereupon the Venetians, being filled with they staid no longer, than to take in their didain, thrust out to Sea with all their re- own men that had been belieged: and this maining power, and affail Doria with fuch done, they made amain toward sicil, in maining power, and anall Daria with then done; they made amain toward Seel, in desperate tury, that they break his fleet, kill hope to recover all that the Carthaginians held therein. In this hasty voyage they four core boats of Padoa, and four thousand prisoners, recover Chiozza, and all the plates the prisoners, recover Chiozza, and all the plates the prisoners of the Phots, who pray them to find harbour in time, for that the ces taken from them; and following their scason threatned some violent storms, which victory, enter the Port of Genoa, entorcing ever hapned between the rifing of orno, and the Genomaies basely to beg peace, to their of the * Deg stare. Now although the Piof Infolency.

6. I X.

How the affairs of Carthage prospered after the victory against Atilius: How the Romans, having loft their fleet by tempeft, resolve to for sake the Seas: The great advantages of a good fleet in war, between Nations divided by the Sea.

extream difhonour and diadvantage, being lots of the Roman fleet had thus fore-warn-" There we bearen; which, being victorious, they might ed them of the weather at hand, and certi-mo the have commanded, to their greatest honour fied them withal, that the South coast of world, and advantage. The like hapned to the Sicil had no good Ports, wherein to fave which hath Earl of Flanders, in the year 1380. when themselves upon such an accident: yet this times of having taken a notable, and withal victorious Nation was perswaded, that the cutragious an over-cruel revenge upon the Gantois, he wind and feas feared them no lefs, than did beside refused mercy to the reit, who in all humi- the Africans; and that they were able to the accility, submitting themselves to his obedience, conquer Elements themselves. So refusing dental offered their City, goods, and estates, to to stay within some Port, as they were ad-have upon be disposed at his pleasure. This when he vised, they would needs put out to Sea; our Coast had unadvisedly refused, and was resolved thinking it a matter much helping their mas flaw to extinguish them utterly; they issue out of their City with five thousand chosen men, after this victory against the bias the of their City with five thousand chosen men, and armed with a desperate resolution, they less Towns upon the coast. The merciles in the charge the Earl, break his Army, enter winds in the mean while overtake them, wet use through metally with his vanquilhed fol- and near unto Camerina, overturn and thrust manches lowers; and enforce him to hide himself headlong on the rocks, all but fourscore of Angel under an heap of thraw, in a poor cottage; of three hundred and forty fines; to as their states, out of which with great difficulty he eleaformer great victory was devoured by the these mod ped, and faved himself. Such are the fruits Seas, before the same thereof recovered winds, Cornerde

call the Notes, or Northwinds, are very feneful! and therefore tray that navigate in Unife parts, the habour till those months take end. Contest the fifth being as ill adviced, in patting the Seas towards Affet, in the Winter quarter contrary to the council of A. Dail; 3 as he was in the unfallands times to continue his tiege better After it Lavians, lost an hundred and ferry thips by tempets, and fateen Galles, with all celled in them, or imany victables, border, and munitonal a 10 all on 16.5 to great, than his retreat, both from before the one and the other, was extream dishonourable.

The Carthaginians, hearing what had hapned, repair all their warlike veffels ho-DY the reputation of this late victory, ping once again to command the Seas: they Dall places that had been loft in Africk, are also as confident of their land-forces return to the obedience of Carthage. On- fince the overthrow of Atilius. They fend ly Clypea stands out; before which the Asdrubal into sicil with all their old Souldi-Carthaginians fit down, and affail it, but ers, and an hundred and forty Elephants imin vain: For the Romans, hearing of the barked in two hundred Gallies. With this loss of Atilius, with their forces in Africk, Army and fleet he arrives ar Lilybann; where and withal, that Clypca was belieged, make he begins to vex the Partifans of Rome. But ready a gross Army, and transport it in a advertity doth not discourage the Romans: fleet of three hundred and fifty Gallies. They build in 3. moneths (a matter of great commanded by M. Emilius, and Ser. Ful- note ) one hundred and twenty thips; with vius, their Confuls. At the Promontory of which, and the remainder of their late ship-Mercury, two hundred Carthaginian Gal- wrack, they row to Panormus, or Palerma, lies, fet out of purpose, upon the bruit of the chief City of the Africans in Sicil, and their coming, encounter them: but greatly furround it by Land and Water: after a Hhhhhh 2

therefore a great flaughter with little fight; the natural care, to preferve himself and the Romans hastily recoiled to the body of others, by yielding to such an office of humatheir Army, which being furrounded with nity, as is common in all wars (not groundthe enemy, and spent with travail, fell all ed upon deadly hatred ) only in regard of to rout, upon the defeat of these troops, some small advantage. Whatsoever the that open the way to a general overthrow. Carthaginians thought of him ; fure it is So the Carthaginian, obtained a full victory; that his faithful observance of his word destroying the whole Roman Army, save given, cannot be too much commended. But two thousand, and taking five hundred pri- that grave speech, which he made in the Sefoners, together with Atilius the Conful. nate, against the exchange of prisoners, ap-Of their own they lost no more than eight pears, in all reason, to have proceeded from hundred Mercenaries, which were flain a vain-glorious forwardness, rather than when the fight began, by two thousand of from any necessity of State. For the Exthe Romans: that wheeling about to avoid change was made foon after his death; the Elephants, bare down all before them: and made way even to the Carthaginian trenches. These were the two thousand for the authority of all Historians, that that escaped, when the whole Army behind magnifie him in this point; we are to conthem was routed. All the rest were either lider, that they lived under the Roman Emtaken or flain. Hereby fortune made the pire: Philinus, the Carthaginian, perhaps did Romans know, that they were no less her censure it otherwise. Yet the death which vassals, than were the Carthaginians: how in- he suffered with extream torments, could not folent foever they had been in their propo- be more grievous to him, than it was diffiofition of peace, as if they had purchased from nourable to Carthage. Neither do I think her the inheritance of their prosperity, that the Carthaginians could excuse themwhich she never gave nor sold to any mor- selves herein; otherwise than by recriminamind.

honoured, or for what other cause, it is un- in themselves. known.

was very memorable. He was fent from his intolerable demands; and of the sudden Carthage to Rome, about the exchange and valour, whereinto the Carthaginians fear ranfom of prisoners on both sides: giving was changed by meer desperation; calls to his faith to return if the business were not remembrance, the like insolency of others effected. When he came to Rome, and plainly in prosperity, that hath bred the like resolufaw that his Country should lose by the bar- tion in those, to whom all reasonable grace gain: fo far was he from urging the Senate hath been denyed. In fuch cases I never hold unto compassion of his own misery, that he it impertinent, to add unto one, more telliearneftly perfivaded to have the prifoners in monies; approving the true rules, from Africk left to their ill destinies. This done, which our passions carry us away. he returned to Carthage: where for his In the year 1378, the Genowates wonfo painstaken, he was rewarded with an hor- fast upon the Venetians, as they not only rible death. For this his constancy and dravetheir Gallies out of the Sea, but they faith, all Writers highly extoll him. But the brought their own fleet within two miles of Carthaginians feem to have judged him an Venice it felf. This bred fuch an amazement obstinate and malicious enemy, that neither in the City of Venice, that they offered unto in his prosperity would hearken to reathe Genowaies (their state reserved) whatsofon, nor yet in his calamity would have ever they would demand. But Peter Doria, wherein the Romans had the worse bargain, by fo much as Regulas himself was worth. As tal man. With what joy these newes were tion: saying, that the Romans deserved to be welcomed, when they came to Carthage, no better intreated, for as much as it is their we may easily conjecture; and what great ordinary practice to use others in the like things the vertue of one man hath often fort. Cruelty doth not become more warbrought to pass in the world, there are many rantable, but rather more odious, by being examples to prove, no less than this of Xan- customary. It was the Roman fashion, to tippus: all of them confirming that sentence whip almost to death, and then to behead, of Eurypedes, Mens una sapiens, plurium vincit the Captains of their enemies whom they manus; Many mens hands equal not one wife took, yea, although they were such as had alwayes made fair wars with them. Where-After this great service done to the Car- fore it seems not meet, in reason, that they thaginians, Xantippus, returned into Greece; should cry out against the like tyrannical inwhether for that he was more envyed than folency in others, as if it were lawful only blown up with many former victories, would to their colt. For the Romans took by force hearken to no composition; save the yield- an hundred and fourteen of their fleet, and ing of their City and State to his discretion. drew them after them to Clypea; where Hereupon the Venetians, being filled with they staid no longer, than to take in their didain, thrust out to Sea with all their re- own men that had been belieged: and this maining power, and affail Doria with fuch done, they made amain toward sicil, in desperate fury, that they break his fleet, kill hope to recover all that the Carthaginians deperate ruy, and they bean insuces, an imperior recover an that the Cartonginian Doria himfelf, take nineteen of his Gallies, held therein. In this hafty voyage they fourfeore boats of Padoa, and fourthoufand despite the advice of the Pitots, who pray prioners, recover Chiesza, and all the pla-testaken from them; and following their cason threatned some violent storms, which victory, enter the Port of Genou, enforcing ever hapned between the rifing of Orion, and the Genorates basely to beg peace, to their of the * Dog-starr. Now although the Piof Infolency.

The consideration both of this missor-The death of Atilius Regulus the Conful, tune, that rewarded the pride of Atilius

6. IX.

How the affairs of Carthage prospered after tages of a good fleet in war, between Nations divided by the Sea.

extream dishonour and disadvantage, being lots of the Roman sleet had thus forc-warn- There a hearen; which being victorious, they might ed them of the weather at hand, and certi-of the have commanded, to their greatest honour fied them withal, that the South coast of world, and advantage. The like hapned to the Sicil had no good Ports, wherein to fave which hads Earl of Flanders, in the year 1380. when themselves upon such an accident: yet this times of having taken a notable, and withal victorious Nation was perswaded, that the cutragious an over-cruel revenge upon the Gantois, he wind and feas feared them no less, than did beside refused mercy to the rest, who in all humi-the Africans; and that they were able to the accirefuled mercy to the rell, who in an intumoffered their City, goods, and estates, to to fay within some Port, as they were ad ince upon be disposed at his pleasure. This whenhe had unadvisedly refused, and was resolved thinking it a matter much helping their arm the to extinguish themutterly; they iffue out reputation, after this victory against the that felof their City with five thousand chosen men, Carthaginian fleet, to take a few worth-never fails and armed with a desperate resolution, they less Towns upon the coast. The merciles in the and armed with a desperate resolution, they person so with upon the coart. In the reference we charge the Earl, break his Army, enter winds in the mean while overtake them, Wet Engles (pell-mell) with his vanquished followed and near unto Camerina, overturn and thrust mands. lowers; and enforce him to hide himself headlong on the rocks, all but fourscore of Angue under an heap of straw, in a poor cottage; of three hundred and forty ships, so as their tumber, out of which with great difficulty he elea- former great victory was devoured by the those most ped, and faved himself. Such are the fruits Seas, before the same thereof recovered winds, Konte.

call the Natts, or Northwinds, are very feneful: and therefore they that ensygate in those parts, take hashour till those months take end-though till those months take end-though till those so that Affet, in the Winter quarter contrary to the council of A. Dails; as he was the unfalled times to contrain his tage before Affet, in Landaus, Jold like unfallonable times to contrain his tage before Affet; in Landaus, Jold mans, having loft their fleet by tempes, resolution to forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the forfake the Seas: The great advantions the f

The Carthaginians, hearing what had hapned, repair all their warlike veilels ho-OY the reputation of this late victory, ping once again to command the Seas: they Dall places that had been loft in Africk, are also as confident of their land-forces return to the obedience of Carthage. On- fince the overthrow of Atilius. They fend ly Clypea stands out; before which the Asdrubal into sicil with all their old Souldi-Carthaginians fit down, and affail it, but ers, and an hundred and forty Elephants imin vain: For the Romans, hearing of the barked in two hundred Gallies. With this loss of Atilius, with their forces in Africk, Army and fleet he arrives ar Lilybaum; where and withal, that Clypea was belieged, make he begins to vex the Partifans of Rome. But ready a gross Army, and transport it in a advertity doth not discourage the Romans: fleet of three hundred and fifty Gallies. They build in 3. moneths (a matter of great commanded by M. Emilius, and Ser. Ful- note) one hundred and twenty thips; with vius, their Confuls. At the Promontory of which, and the remainder of their late ship-Mercury, two hundred Carthaginian Gal- wrack, they row to Panormus, or Palerma, lies, fet out of purpose, upon the bruit of the chief City of the Africans in Sicil, and their coming, encounter them: but greatly furround it by Land and Water: after a while they take it, and leaving a Garrison wail against London, suddenly imbarqued: therein, return to Rome.

Hhhhhh 2

ing in Africk: to which purpose they imploy- There finding ill entertainment, he again ed C. Servilius, and C. Sempronius, their Con- thipt his men, and entred the Severn, making fuls. But these wrought no wonders. Some Edmond to march after him, to the succour fooil they made upon the coasts of Africk: of Worcester-shire, by him greatly spoiled. but Fortune robbed them of all their get- But when he had Edmond there, he failed tings. For in their return, they were first back again to London: by means whereof. fet upon the fands, and like to have perish he both wearied the King, and spoiled ed, near unto the leffer syries, where they where he pleased, ere succour could arrive. were fain to heave all over boord, that fo And this was not the least help, which the they might get off: then, having with much Netherlands have had against the Spaniards. ado doubled the Cape of Lilybaum, in their in the defence of their liberty, that being passage from Panormus towards Italy, they Masters of the Sea, they could pass their loft an hundred and fifty of their thips by Army from place to place, unwearied, and foul weather. A greater discouragement entire, with all the Munition and Artillery never Nation had; the god of the wars fa- belonging unto it, in the tenth part of the voured them no more, than the god of the time, wherein their enemies have been able waters afflicted them. Of all that Mars to do it. Of this an instance or two. The enricht them with upon the Land, Neptune Count Maurice of Nassau, now living, one of robbed them upon the Seas. For they had the greatest Captains, and of the worthiest now loft, besides what they lost in fight, Princes, that either the present or preceding four hundred and fix Ships and Gallies, with Ages have brought forth, in the year 1590. in them.

could not be performed without an Army, portance, and mastered it. and the provisions that followit, in lefs than | And to fay the truth; it is impossible for advantage of transporting Armies by water, of the Sea. Hereos I had rather, that Spain between Commun, and Famund Ironside. For than England should be an example. Let it Canutus, when he had entred the Thames therefore be supposed, that King Philip the with his Navy and Army, and could not pre- second had fully resolved to hinder Sir John and failing to the West landed in Dorset-Shire. Very desirous the Romans were to be do- fo drawing Edmund and his Army thither. all the munition and Souldiers transported carryed his Army by Sea, with forty Canons to Breda: making countenance either to The exceeding damage hereby received, befiege Boifleduc, or Gertreviden Berg; which perswaded them to give over their Navigation, and their fight by Sea, and to send diers, and victuals. But as soon as the wind only a Land-army into Sicil, under L. Cecili- ferved, he fuddenly fet fail, arriving in the us, and F. Furius, their Consuls. These they mouth of the Meuze, turned up the Rhine, transport in some threescore ordinary pas- and thence to Ifel, and fate down before fage boats, by the straights of Meffana, that Zutphen. So before the Spaniards could are not above a mile and a half broad from march over land round about Holland, land to land. In like fort, the overthrow above four fore mile, and over many great which airing received in Africa, occasioned Rivers, with their Cannon and carriage, chiefly by the Elephants, made them less Zutphen was taken. Again, when the Spanish cholerick against the Carthaginians, than be- Army had overcome this wearisome march, fore; fo that for two years after, they kept and were now far from home, Prince the high and woody grounds, not daring to Maurice, making countenance to fail up the fight in the fair and champion Countreys. Rhine, changed his course in the night, and Eut this late resolution of forsaking the Seas sailing down the stream, he was set lasted not long. For it was impossible for down before Hullt in Brabant, ere the them to succour those places which they spaniards had knowledge what was become held in Sicil, without a Navy, much less of him. So this Town he also took, before to maintain the War in Africa. For, where the spanish Army could return. Laftly, the as the Romans were to fend forces from spanish Army was no fooner arrived in Bra-Messana to Feesta, to Lilybeum, and to other bant, than the Prince Maurice, well attendplaces in the extream Welt parts of sicil, ed by his good fleet, having fortified Hulls, making cometime a march of above an hun- fet fail again, and presented himself before dred and forty English mile by land, which Nymegen in Gelders, a City of notable im-

14. dayes; the Carthaginians would pass it any maritime Countrey, not having the with their Gallies, in eight and forty hours. coafts admirably fortified, An old example we have, of that great against a powerful enemy, that is master Don Antonio, King of Portugal, before the tive. This he holds only upon supposition a gates of Lysborn; and that he would have in absence of our shipping; and comparativekept off the English, by power of his land- ly, as that it is a more safe and easie course. forces; as being too weak at Sea, through to defend all the coast of England, than to the great overthrow of his mighty Armado, suffer any enemy to land, and afterwards to by the fleet of Queen Elizabeth, in the year fight with him. Surely I hold with him, foregoing. Surely, it had not been hard for that it is the best way, to keep our enemies him, to prepare an Army, that should be from treading upon our ground; wherein, able to refit our eleven thousand. But if we fail, then must we seek to make him where should this his Army have been be- with, that he had stayed at his own home. towed? If about Lisborn; then would it In such a case, if it should happen, our have been easie unto the English to take, judgements are to weight many particular ransack, and burn the Town of Groin, and circumstances, that belongs not unto this to waste the Country round about it. For discourse. But making the question general, the great and threatning preparations of and politive. Whether England, without the the Earl of Altemira, the Marquels of Se- help of her fleet, be able to debarr an enemy rally, and others did not hinder them from from landing; I hold that it is unable so to performing all this. Neither did the hafty do: and therefore I think it most danger levy or eight thousand under the Earl of rous to make the adventure. For the in-Andrada, terve to more effect, than the in- couragement of a first victory to an enemy, create of honour to Sir John Norris, and his and the discouragement of being beaten to Affociates: confidering that the English the invaded, may draw after it amost pericharged these, at Puente de Burgos, and pas- lous consequence. ting the great Bridge, behind which they It is true, that the Marshal Monluc, in his lay, that was flanked with shot, and barri- Commentaries, doth greatly complain, that cadoed at the further end, routed them, by his wanting forces, wherewith to have took their camp; took their General stand-kept the frontier of Guyenne, they of the ard with the Kings Arms, and pursued them Protestant Religion, after the battel of Monover all the Country, which they fired. If a contour, entred that Country, and gathered Royal Army, and not (as this was) a Com- great strength and relief thence; for if the pany of private adventurers, had thus begun King ( faith he ) would have given me but thewar in Galicia; I think it would have reasonable means, j'eusse bien garde à Monmade the Spaniards to quit the guard of feur l'Admiral de fair boire fes Chevaux en Portugal, and make haste to the defence of la Garonne; I would have kept the Admiral

Naris in the year 1589. from prefenting | Commentaries, that maintains the afficina-

their St. Jago , whose Temple was not far from watering his horses in the River of Gafrom the danger. But, had they held their ronne. Monfeur de Langey, on the contrary first resolution, as knowing, that Sir John side, prefers the not fighting upon a fron-Norre his main intent was, to bring Don An- tier with an invading enemy, and commends tonio, with an Army into his Kingdom, whi- the delay; which course the Constable of ther coming strong, he expected to be rea- France held against the Emperour Charles, dily and joyfully welcomed: could they when he invaded Provence. Great difference have hindred his landing in Portugal? Did I know there is, and a diverse consideration not he land at Penicha, and march over to be had, between fuch a country as France the Country to Lisborn, fix dayes journey? is, strengthened withmany fortified places: Did not he (when all Don Antonio his promites failed) pass along by the River of but of the bodies of wen. And it was of in-Lysborn to Cascaliz, and there, having won vasions upon firm land, that these great the Fort, quietly imbarque his men, and de- Captains spake: whose entrances cannot be part? But thefe, though no more than an uncertain. But our question is of an Army handful, yet were they Englishmen. Let us to be transported over Sea, and to be landconfider of the matter it felf; what another ed again in an enemies countrey, and the Nation might do, even against England, in place left to the choice of the invader. landing an Army, by advantage of a fleet, if Hercunto I say, That such an Army cannot we had none. This question, Whether an be resisted on the coast of England, without invading Army may be resisted at their land- a fleet to impeach it; no, nor on the coast of ing upon the coast of England, were there no France, or any other Countrey: except evefleet of ours at the sea to impeach it; is alreaty and handled by a learned Gentleman of our erful Army, in each of them, to make op-Nation, in his observations upon Cafars position. For let his whole supposition be granted ?

CHARI

granted; That Kent is able to furnish twelve | Sea-shores, shall be forced to run from place thousand foot, and that those twelve thou- to place in vain, after a fleet of ships; they fand be layed in the three best landing will at length sit down in the mid-way; and places within that Country, to wit, three leave all at adventure. But fay it were thousand at Margat, three thousand at the otherwise; that the invading enemy will Neffe, and 6000. at Foulkston, that is some offer to land in some such place, where there what equally distant from them both; as also shall be an Army of ours ready to receive that two of these troops (unless some other him; yet it cannot be doubted, but that order be thought more fit ) be directed to when the choice of all our Trained Bands. strengthen the third, when they shall see and the choice of our Commanders and the enemics fleet to bend towards it: I fay, Captains, shall be drawn together (as they that notwithstanding this provision, if the were at Tilbury in the year 1588.) to attend enemy, fetting fail from the Isle of Wight, the person of the Prince, and for the dein the first watch of the night, and towing sence of the City of London: they that retheir long boats at their sterns, shall ar- main to guard the coast can be of no such rive by dawn of day at the Neffe, and thrust force, as to encounter an Army like unto that their Army on snore there; it will be hard wherewith it was intended that the Prince for those three thousand that are at Margat, of Parma should have landed in England. (twenty and four long miles from thence) to come time enough to re-enforce their perience, what to think in such a case. There fellows at the Neffe. Nay, how shall they are not many Islands in the world, better at Foulkstone be able to do it, who are near- fenced by nature, and strengthned by art: it er by more than half the way? feeing that being every where hard of access; having the enemy, at his first arrival, will either no good harbour wherein to shelter a Navy make his entrance by force, with three or of friends, and upon every cove or watering tour hundred shot of great Artillery, and place a Forterected, to forbid the approach quickly put the first three thousand, that of an enemies boat. Yet when Emanuel de were intrenched at the Nesse, to run; or sylva, and Monsseur de Chattes, that held it elfe give them so much to do, that they to the use of Don Antonio, with five or six of breath, will easily out run the Souldiers that coast them. Les armees ne volent point en poste; Armies neither flye, nor run post, saith a Marshal of France. And I know it to be true, that a fleet of ships may be feen at Sun-fet, and after it, at the Lishall not be able to march it in fix dayes. shuffled together, by affect of equal or an-Again, when those troops lodged on the swerable strength.

The lile of Tercera hath taught us by exshall be glad to send for help to Foulkston, thousand men, thought to have kept the and perhaps to Margat : whereby those Marques of Santa Cruz, from setting foot places will be left bare. Now let us sup- on ground therein; the Marquess having pose, that all the twelve thousand Kentish showed himself in the Road of Angra, did Souldiers arrive at the Neffe, ere the enemy fet fail, ere any was aware of it, and arrived can be ready to dif-embarque his Army, fo at the Port des Moles, far diftant from thence; that he will find it unfate, to land in the face of fo many, prepared to withfitand him; yet must we believe, that he will play the best of his own game; (having liber-third property of the ty to go which way he lift ) under covert all regard of his worth, and of three hunof the night, fet fail towards the East, dred French prisoners murdered in cold where what shall hinder him to take blood; had instructed de Chattes, and his ground, either at Margat, the Downes, or followers, what they might expect at that elsewhere, before they at the Neffe can be Marques his hands: Therefore it is not like, well aware of his departure? Certainly, that they were flow in carrying in relief to there is nothing more case than to do it. Fort des Moles. Whether our English would be Yea, the like may be faid of Waymouth, Pur- perswaded to make such diligent haste, from beck, Poole, and of all landing places on the Margat to the Nesse, and back again, it may South Coalt. For there is no man ignorant, be doubted. Sure I am, that it were a greatthat thips, without putting themselves out er march than all the length of Tercera; whereof the French-men had not measured the one half when they found themselvs prevented by the more nimble Ships of Spain.

This may fuffice to prove, that a strong Army, in a good fleet, which neither foot, nor horse is able to follow, cannot be denyed to find; yet by the next morning they may re- land where it lift, in England, France, or elfecover Portland, whereas an Army of foot where, unless it be hindred, encountred, and our Prince and Nation, that a few Islanders and betake themselves to an hasty trot. should not think any advantage great For end of this Digression, I hopethat I could not refuse; as, Sir William Brook, Sir the shore. William Harvey , Sir Arthur Gorges, Sir John Skot, Sir Thomas Ridgeway, Sir Henry Tinnes, Sir Charles Morgan, Sir Walter Chute, Mar-cellus Throckmorton, Captain Laurence Kemis, Captain William Morgan, and others such as well understood themselves and the enemy: by whose help, with Gods favour, I made good the enterprize I undertook. As for the working of the Sea, the steepness of the cliffs, and other troubles that were not new to us, we overcame them well enough. And these ( notwithstanding ) made five or

The difficult landing of our English, at the companies of the enemies, that fought to Fayal, in the year 1597. is alledged against impeach our landing, abandon the wall, this: which example moves me no way to whereon their Mulketiers lay on the Reft think, that a large Coast may be defended for us, and won the place of them without mins, that a fixing Fleet. I landed those English any great loss. This I could have done with against a mile and therefore ought to take lelsdanger, fo that it should not have served notice of this inftance. For whereas I find for example of a Rule, that failed even in an Action of mine cited, with omiflion of this example: but the reasons before almy name; I may, by a civil interpretation, ledged, (together with other reasons well my name; and other teachs were think, that there was no purpose to defraud known to some of the Gentlemen aboveme of any honour; but rather an opinion, named, though more private than to be here that the enterprize was such, or so ill man-laid down) made me rather follow the way aged, as that no hancur could be due unto of bravery, and take the shorter course; hait. There were indeed some which were in ving it still in mine own power to fall off that voyage, who advised me not to under- when I should think it meet. It is easily faid, that voy Be and I hearkned unto them somethat the Enemy was more than a Coward; what longer than was requifite, especially, (which yet was more than we knew) neither whilt they defired me to referve the title of will I magnifie such a small piece of service, while they defined the toteless that the state of the sta for a greater perion. But when they began to the form of difficulty; I gave them to understand, the fame which I now maintain, that it was more difficult to defend a coast, than to invade it. The truth is, that I could the fame enemy troubled us more in our more income. thanto invade it. The truth is, that round the lame enemy troubled us more in our havelanded my men with more eafe than I march towards Fayal, than in our taking the did; yea without finding any refittance, if I would have rowed to another place; yea eventhere where I landed, if I would have men were lain or hurt by him, among whom taken more company to help me. But, with- Sir Arthur Gorges was shot in that march; out fearing any imputation of raffiness, I and that such, as (thinking all danger to be may fay, that I had more regard of reputa- raft, when he had won good footing) would may ray, that business, than of safety. For I needs follow us to the Town, were driven thought it to belong unto the honour of by him, to forfake the pace of a man of war, enough, against a Fleet set forth by @ Eliza- this question shall never come to tryal; his beth: and further, I was unwilling, that Majesties many movable Forts will forbid fome Low-Country Captains, and others, not the experience. And although the English of mine own fquadron, whose affiftance I had will no less disclain, than any Nation under refused, should please themselves with a Heaven can do, to be beaten upon their own fweet conceit ( though it would have been ground, or elfewhere by a forain enemy; yet thort, when I had landed in some other to entertain those that thall assail us, with place ) That for want of their belp I was driven their own Bief in their bellies, and before to turn tail. Therefore I took with me none, they eat of our Kentifb Capons, I take it to but men affured, Commanders of mine own be the wifest way. To do which, his Majesty squadron, with some of their followers, and after God, will imploy his good ships on the afew other Gentlemen, voluntaries, whom Sea, and not trust to any intrenchment upon the Roman Conful at Panormus: The fiege and taking all their Elephants. of Lilybrum at plassine, in despite to Kome; the whole State filled with courted Lilybrum at plassine, in despite to Kome; the whole State filled with courter Roman Fleet. That it is a matter of great difficulty to flop, the pussage of good fail, which they fent into Sicil, to give end their Confuls, abandon the Seas again.

6. X.

CHAP.

6. X.

fible, either to keep what they had already down before it, and possess themselves of all gotten in Sicil, or to enlarge their Domi- the places of advantage near unto it, espenions in Africa, or elsewhere; they resolved |cially of such as command the Haven, which once again, notwithstanding their late mis- had a very difficult entrance. They also heat with all the force he had; and charging the other troops, that flood embattailed, hent. How the Romans attempt again to get the Ma- terly brake them, and put them to their flery of the Seas. The Victory of Cacilius heels; making a great flaughter of them

thips. The Romans, by reason of grievous to that war, that had now lasted fourteen lolles received under Claudius and Junius years. With this Fleet and Army the Romans resolved to attempt Lilybaum, the only place of importance which the Carthaginians When, without a strong Navy, the heldin sicil; and all (indeed ) save Dreparation found it altogether imposes that was near adjoyning. They set adventures, to strengthen their Fleet and to the ground fix Towers of defence; and Ships of war. So causing fifty new Gallies by forcible engines weaken so many other to be built, and the old to be repaired, they parts of the City, as the defendants begin gave them in charge ( together with certain to despair. Yet Himileo, Commander of the Legions of Souldiers ) to the new Confuls, place, faileth not in all that belongs to a man Legions of Sounders y to the new Commun, place, tailerth not in an inat belongs to a man e. Asilius, and L. Manlius. On the other of War. All that is broken he repaired fide, Alarubal perceiving that the Romans, with admirable diligence; he maketh mapartly by reason of the shipwrack which my survivous sallies, and giveth to the Romans. they had lately suffered, partly by reason of the when had lately suffered, partly by reason of all the affronts that possibly could be made, the overthrow which they received by Xan-life, and they suffice a, were less daring than they ten thousand Souldiers; among which there had been in the beginning of the war : and are certain Lieutenants, and other petty of withall, that one of the Confuls was return- ficers, that configure to render and betray ed into Italy, with the one half of the Army, the Town. But the matter is revealed by an and that Cacilius, with only the other half, Achaan, called Alexon, who had formerly in remained at Panormus; he removed with danger of the like treason, saved Agrigentum. the Carthaginian forces from Lilybaum to- Himilco useth the help of Alexon, to affure wards it, hoping to provoke Cacilius to fight. the hired Souldiers, and imploys Hannibal to But the Consul was better advised. For when appeale the troops of the Gaules, which did Asignabal had made his approaches some- waver, and had sent their agents to theenewhat near the Town, Cacilius caused a deep my. All, promise constancy and truth; so trench to be cut, a good diffance without that the Traitors, being unable to perform the ditch of the City: between which and what they had undertaken, are fain to live his trench he left ground sufficient, to em- in the Koman Camp as fugitives, that had battel a Legion of his Souldiers. To these he wrought no good whereby to deterve their gave order that they should advance them- bread. In the mean while, a supply of ten felves, and pass over the new trench, till such thousand Souldiers is fent from Carthage to time as the African Elephants were thrust their relief, having Hannibal the Son of upon them. From those beasts he command- Amilear for their Conductor: who, in deed them to retire by flow degrees till they spight of all resistance, entred the Port and had drawn on the Elephants to the brink of City, to the incredible joy of the besieged. the new trench, which they could by no The old Souldiers, together with the new means pats. This they performed according-ly. For when the Elephants were at a fland, with hope of great reward ) refolved to fet they were to gawled and beaten, both by upon the Romans in their trenches, and eithose Souldiers that were on the inside of ther force them to abandon the siege, or (at the trench, and by those that lay in the least ) to take from them, or set on fire their trench it felf, that being inraged by their ma- engines of battery. The attempt is prefently ny wounds, they brake back furioully upon made, and purfued to the uttermost, with their own foot-men, and utterly difordered great flaughter on both fides. But the Rothem. Cacilius etpying his advantage; fallied mans, being more in number, and having places, and with extreme difficulty defend haps it is and the Fleet of Merchants that frand the state of things at Lilybaum; but that the Duke of Parma, belieging introve know not how to fend into the Town. A and finding no polibility to mafter it, othercertain Rhodian undertakes the service; and wife than by famine, laid his Cannon on the having received his dispatch, fails with one bank of the River, so well to purpose, and having received its displaced in an application and collective to Agaily, a little Island near Lipbosto for even with the face of the Water, that he sem. Thence, taking his time he steered dithought it impossible for the least beaut to pass by Yet the Isollanders and Zelanders, with Gally, he past through the best of the look of the little with the set of the with the with the set of the with the wi Channel, and recovered the water-gate ere coming to find a good market for their Butany of those which the Romans had to guard ter and Cheefe, even the poor men. attendthe Port, could thrust from the shores on ing their profit when all things were vert of the dark night, nor dreading to be Dukes Cannon, in despith of it; when a boorded by the Roman Gallies, who waited strong Westerly wind, and a Tide of slood hisreturn, he set sail, and shipped his Oars favoured them; as also with a contrary this Gally being exceeding quick of fteer-wind, and an ebbing water, they turned age, and himself expert in all parts of the back again: so as he was forced, in the Channel ) recovered the Havens mouth, and end, to build his Stockado overthwart, the Sea, in despight of all the pursuit made the River, to his marvellous trouble and the Sea, in despite to the state of the Sea, in despite the state of t

In the beginning of our late Queens time, wife not. when Denmark and Sueden were at war, our East-land Fleet, bound for Leif-land, was He arrives in safety at Carthage, and makes forbidden by the King of Denmark to trade them know the estate of Lilybeum. Others with the subjects of his enemies, and he also, after this, take upon them to do the threatned to fink their ships if they came like, and perform it with the same sucbut did beat down, with Artillery, a great | night, and not suspecting any such impedi-part of the Fort of Elsenour; which at that ment, ran her self aground thereon, and the advantage of the ground, hold full their time was not fo well rampard, as now perfollowed him, went through without any They of Carthage defire greatly to under- wound received. Neither was it long, lince extreme dear in Antwerp, passed in boats of The next day, neither attending the co- ten or twelve Tun, by the mouth of the ofbeing encompassed by many, he turned again towards the mouth of the Haven, the year 1596, when we entred the Port of challenging any one, if any one durst come Caliz, neither did the Fort at Puntal, when forth to undertake him. This enterprise, and we were entred, beat us from our anchoring the well performing of it, was very remark- by it; though it plaid upon us with four able, and much wondred at in those dayes: demi-cannons within point-blank, from fix and yet, where there was no great Artillery, in the morning till twelve at noon. The fiege nor any other weapons of fire, to kill afarr of oftend, and of many other places, may be off, the adventure which this Rhodian made given for proof, how hard a matter it is to was not greatly hazardous. For in this Age, iftop the passage of a good ship, without anotavaliant and judicious man of war will not there as good to encounter it. Yet this is fear to pass by the best appointed Fort of true, that where a Fort is so set, as that of Europe, with the help of a good Tide, and Angra in Tercera, that there is no passage a leading gale of wind: no, though forty along beside it, or that the ships are driven, pieces of great Artillery open their mouths to turn upon a bow-line towards it, wanting against him, and threaten to tear him in all help of wind and tide; there, and in such places, it is of great use, and fearful : other-

But to return to our adventrous Rhodian: through the straights of Elfenour. Notwith- cess. The Romans therefore labour to choak standing this, our Merchants ( having a ship the Channel; and, for that purpose, fill maof her Majesties, called the Minion to de-fined them ) made the adventure, and su-fink them therein. The force of the Tides staining some Vollies of thot, kept on their clears it again in part : but they grounded course. The King made all the provision so many of those great bellied-boats in the he could to ftop them, or fink them at their best of the entrance, as at last it made a return. But the Minion, commanded ( as I manifest rising and heap, like a ragged Island take it) by William Burrough, leading the in the passage. Hereby it came to pass, that way, did not only pass out with little loss, a Carthaginian Gally, taking her course by

Roma Consil at Panormus: The fiege and taking all their Elephants. How a Rhodian Gally en-Try brum at pleasure, in despright of to Rome; the whole State filled with conto reconsite abandon the Seas again.

by reason of the snipwrack which ny turious sallies, and giveth to the Roman has lately suffered, partly by reason of all the affronts that possibly could be made. exerthrow which they received by Xan- He hath in Garrison (besides the Citizens) are certain Lieutenants, and other petry of that one of the Consuls was return- ficers, that conspire to render and betray that Couling, with only the other half, Achean, called Alexon, who had formerly in tonained at fanormus; he removed with danger of the like treason, faved Agrigentum. Carthe miss forces from Lilybeum to- Himileo useth the help of Alexon, to assure Logueg to provoke Cacilius to fight. the hired Souldiers, and imploys Hannibal to Conful was better advised. For when appeale the troops of the Gaules, which did traces to be cut, a good diltance without that the Traitors, being unable to perform esench he lett ground sufficient, to em- in the Roman Camp as fugitives, that had A Legion of his Souldiers. To these he wrought no good whereby to deterve their green that they should advance them bread. In the mean while, a supply of ten and puts over the new trench, till such thousand Souldiers is sent from Carthage to their relief, having Hannibal the Son of Amilear for their Conductor: who, in deconstitute by flow degrees till they spight of all resistance, entred the Port and Grave on the blephants to the brink of City, to the incredible joy of the befieged The old Souldiers, together with the new This they performed according | Companies, (thereto perfwaded by Himiko real vitenthe Liephants were at a stand, with hope of great reward ) resolved to set were to a whed and beaten, both by upon the Romans in their trenches, and e-

with all the force he had; and charging the Roccans attempt again to get the Ma- terly brake them, and put them to their Rectans attempt again to get the and letty of the Seas. The Victory of Caccilius heels; making a great flaughter of them,

The report of this Victory being brought Roman Fleet. That it is a matter of rage, prepared a new Fleet of two hundred it should to flop the passage of good fail, which they fent into sicil, to give end The Romans, by resson of grievous to that war, that had now lasted fourteen to d under Claudius and Junius years. With this Fleet and Army the Remans resolved to attempt Lilybeum, the only Then, without a ftrong Navy, the heldin Sicil; and all (indeed) lave Dreps. place of importance which the Carthaginian honor tound it altogether impof num, that was near adjoyning. They fet downbefore it, and possess themselves of all downbefore it, and possess themselves of all the places of advantage near unto it, especially of fuch as command the Haven, which adding norw ithit anding their late mif- had a very difficult entrance. They also best to the ground fix Towers of defence; and of var. So causing fifty new Gallies by forcible engines weaken so many other parts of the City, and the old to be repaired, they parts of the City, as the defendants begin to despair. Yet Himileo, Commander of the 1 301. of So diers) to the new Confuls, place, faileth not in all that belongs to a man Continue of I. Manlius. On the other of War. All that is broken he repaired drawal perceiving that the Romans, with admirable diligence the maketh maten thousand Souldiers; among which there radd had made his approaches some waver, and had sent their agents to theme rear the Town, Cacilius caused a deep my. All promise constancy and truth; so of the City: between which and what they had undertaken, are fain to live to that were on the infide of ther force them to abandon the fiege, or (# by those that lay in the least ) to take from them, or set on firetheir cervar being inraged by their ma- engines of battery. The attempt is prefently trake back turioully upon made, and purfued to the uttermoft, with the men, and utterly ditordered great flaughter on both fides. But the Reyoung las advantages fallied mans, being more in number, and having the advantage of the ground, hold fill their time was not fo well ramoard, as now per-

either fide.

vert of the dark night, nor dreading to be Dukes Cannon, in despight of it; when a boorded by the Roman Gallies, who waited strong Westerly wind, and a Tide of flood his return, he set sail, and shipped his Oars savoured them; as also with a contrary (his Gally being exceeding quick of steer-wind, and an ebbing water, they turned age, and himself expert in all parts of the back again: so as he was forced, in the Channel ) recovered the Havens mouth, and end, to build his Stockado overthwart the Sea, in despight of all the pursuit made the River, to his marvellous trouble and after him. Then, finding himfelf out of danger charge. ofbeing encompassed by many, he turned The Fort Saint Philip terrified not us in able, and much wondred at in those dayes: demi-cannons within point-blank, from fix and yet, where there was no great Artillery, in the morning till twelve at noon. The fiege nor any other weapons of fire, to kill afarr of oftend, and of many other places, may be off, the adventure which this Rhodian made given for proof, how hard a matter it is to was not greatly hazardous. For in this Age, stop the passage of a good ship, without anoa valiant and judicious man of war will not ther as good to encounter it. Yet this is fear to pass by the best appointed Fort of true, that where a Fort is so set, as that of Europe, with the help of a good Tide, and Angra in Tercera, that there is no paffage a leading gale of wind: no, though forty along beside it, or that the ships are driven pieces of great Artillery open their mouths to turn upon a bow-line to wards it, wanting against him, and threaten to tear him in all help of wind and tide; there, and in such

In the beginning of our late Queens time, wife not. when Denmark and Sueden were at war, But to return to our adventrous Rhodian: but did beat down, with Artillery, a great night, and not suspecting any such impediplaces, and with extreme difficulty defend haps it is : and the Fleet of Merchants that followed him, went through without any They of Carthage defire greatly to under- wound received. Neither was it long, fince fand the state of things at Lilybann; but that the Duke of Parma, belieging Antwerp. know not how to fend into the Town. A and finding no possibility to master it, othercertain Rhodian undertakes the service; and wife than by famine, laid his Cannon on the having received his dispatch, sails with one bank of the River, so well to purpose, and cally to Agusa, a little Island near Lilybe- fo even with the face of the Water, that he w. Thence, taking his time he steered di- thought it impossible for the least boat to rectly with the Port; and having a passing pass by. Yet the Hollanders and Zelanders, with Gally, he past through the best of the not blown up by any wind of glory, but Channel, and recovered the water-gate ere coming to find a good market for their Butany of those which the Romans had to guard ter and Cheese, even the poor men. attendthe Port, could thrust from the shores on ing their profit when all things were extreme dear in Antwerp, passed in boats of The next day, neither attending the co-ten or twelve Tun, by the mouth of the again towards the mouth of the Haven, the year 1596, when we entred the Port of challenging any one, if any one durst come Caliz, neither did the Fort at Puntal, when forth to undertake him. This enterprife, and we were entred, beat us from our anchoring the well performing of it, was very remark- by it; though it plaid upon us with four places, it is of great use, and fearful : other-our East-land Fleet, bound for Leif-land, was He arrives in safety at Carthage, and makes forbidden by the King of Denmark to trade them know the estate of Lilybaum. Others with the subjects of his enemies, and he also, after this, take upon them to do the threatned to fink their ships if they came like, and perform it with the same sucthrough the straights of Elfenour. Notwith cess. The Romans therefore labour to choak standing this, our Merchants ( having a ship the Channel; and, for that purpose, fill maof her Maiestics, called the Minion to de- ny Merchants ships with great stones, and fend them ) made the adventure, and su- sink them therein. The force of the Tides staining some Vollies of thot, kept on their clears it again in part : but they grounded course. The King made all the provision so many of those great bellied-boats in the he could to stop them, or fink them at their best of the entrance, as at last it made a return. But the Minion, commanded ( as I manifest rising and heap, like a ragged Island take it ) by William Burrough , leading the in the passage. Hereby it came to pass, that way, did not only pass out with little loss, a Carthaginian Gally, taking her course by part of the Fort of Elfenour; which at that ment, ran her felf aground thereon, and dron, thinking to enter, as he had done be- as he could not turn himfelf any way from fore: but this Carthaginian Gally, a little his enemies, nor range himself in any order. before taken, gave him chafe, and gathered Therefore when he found no hope of reupon him, he finds what the is, both by her fiftance, keeping the thore on his left hand form, and by her fwiftness: and being not he thrust out of the Bay with thirty Galable to run from her. refolved to fight with lies, betides his own, and fo fled away: all her. But the is too well manned for him, the rest of his Fleet, to the number of nineto that he is beaten and taken.

the Souldiers being worn with labour and greatly honoured at Carthage; and Clauwatching. But in this despair there rose so dius, for his indiscretion and flight, as much violent a tempest, as some of the Romans disgraced at Kome. Wooden-Towers, by which they over-topt The Romans, notwithstanding this great the walls of Lilybeum, were over-turned loss, arm threefcore Gallies, with which A Greek Souldier undertakes to fire those they fend away L. Junius, their Conful. to that were fallen, and performs it : for the take charge of their business in sicil. Junius fire was no fooner kindled, but being blown arrives at Messana, where he meets with the unto by the bellows of a tempelt, it increa- whole remainder of the Roman Fleet, those fed to fall, as it became refittless, and in the excepted which rode in the Port of Libend burned all to athes, and melted the baum. One hundred and twenty Gallies he brazen heads of the battering Ramms, had; and besides these, he had gotten to-Hereupon, despair and weariness hinder the gether almost eight hundred ships of bur-Romans from repairing their Engines: fo then, which were laden with all necessary that they refolve, by a long fiege, to starve provisions for the Army. With this great the defendants.

of ten thousand Souldiers is fent from wait for some that were too slow of fail to Rome, under M. Claudius, the Conful. He keep company with him along from Mefarrives at Messana, and marcheth over sana. In the mean time he dispatcheth away Land to Lilybaum: where having re-infor- towards Lilybaum his Questors or Treaced the Army, and supplied the Gallies with surers; to whomhe commits the one half of new Rowers, he propounds the surprise of his victuallers, with some Gallies for their Drebanum, a City on the other fide of the Convoy. Lay of Liphaum. This service the Captains Adherbal was not careless after his late victory: but studied how to use it to the best victory: but studied how to use it to the best Conful embarques his troops, and arrives on advantage. The ships and prisoners that he the fudden in the mouth of the Port. Ad-hadtaken, he fent to Carthage. Of his own herbal is Governour of the Town, a vali- Gallies he delivered thirty to Carthalo, who ant and prudent man of war, who being had threefcore and ten more under his own ignorant of the new supply arrived at Lily-charge; and sent him to try what good might have, was at first amazed at their sudden ap-be done against the Roman Fleet in the Haproach; but having recovered his spirits, ven of Lilybaum. According to his direction, promifeth great rewards to fuch, as by tentive to the keeping in of the belieged Carforward, in great confusion. Adherbal finds on through with his enterprise.

and follows his advantage, and forceth the Conful into a Bay at hand, wherein he the South coast of Sicil, devising how to rangeth himself, having the Land on his work mischief to the enemy; wherein Forback: hoping thereby to keep himself from tune presented him with a fair occasion, being incompassed. But he was thereby, which he wisely managed. He was adver-

was taken. Now comes that brave Kho- and for want of Sca-room, to straightned ty and four fhips, were taken or funk by the Lilybaum, after this, is greatly diffrested, Carthaginians. Adherbal for this fervice is

Fleet he arrives at Syracufe, where he staves Upon relation of what had palt, a supply a while; partly to take in Corn, partly to he periwades the Souldiers rather to fight Carthalo luddenly enters the mouth of that abroad, than to be enclosed. Herewithall he Haven, where he finds the Romans more attheir valour shall deserve them; offering to thaginians, than to the desence of their own lead them himself, and to fight in the head against another Fleet. So he chargeth them, of his Fleet. Having sufficiently encouraged boords, and takes some, and fires therest. his men, he thrust into the Sea towards the The Roman Camp takes alarm, and hastens Romans. The Conful, deceived of his ex- to the refcue. But Himileo, Governour of the pectation, calls back the foremost Gallies. Town, is not behind hand; who fallies out that he might now marshall them for de- at the same time, and putting the Romans to fence. Hereupon some row backward, some great distress, gives Carthalo good leisure to which of them would first stir, with a reso- (perhaps) will not be found. lution to affault that, which thould first dare. toput it felf into the Sea. So as now all the three leets were on the South coast of sicil, between the Promontory of Pachinus and The City of Eryx is surprised by the Romans, Lilybaum; a Tract exceeding dangerous, when the wind ftormed at South. The Carthaginians, who knew the times of tempelt, and their fignes, tinding (belike) some iwelling billow (for fowe do in the West of England, before a Southernly frorm) hafted to double the Cape of Pachinus, thereby to cover themselves from the rage at hand. But the Romans, who knew better how to fight than how to Navigate, and never found any foul weather in the entrails of their beaft;

against the rocks, and utterly wrackt.

tiled by his Scouts, that they had diferyed, that they refolyed again to tortake the Seas, near a hand, a great fleet, confifting of all and trult only to the fervice of tacir Leginamer of Vetfels. These were the victual ons upon firm ground. But tuch a resolution his, which the Conful Junius, more halfily cannot long hold. Either they must be lets, which they had fent before him to-flrong at Saa, or elle they mult not make than providently, had fent before him to-flrong at Saa, or elle they mult not make wards Lilybaum. Carthalo was glad to hear war in an Illand, against those that have a wards coming: for he and his men were mighter fleet. Yet are they to be excuted, all of courage, by realon of their late victo- in regard or the many great calamittes ries. Accounting therefore the great mul which they had futiered through their want made of Roman Hulks, approaching, to be of fkill. Here I cannot forbear to comrather a prey than a fleet likely to make mend the patient vertue of the spaniards. irrong opposition, he hastens to encounter We seldomor never find, that any Nation them. It fell out according to his expectati- thath endured fo many miladventures and on. The Romans had no mind to fight: but miferies as the Spaniards have done in their were glad to feek shelter in an open Road, Indian Discoveries. Yet perlisting in their full of Rocks under the covert of a poor enterprifes with an invincible constancy, Town, belonging to their party; that could they have annexed to their Kingdom to help to fave them only from the prefent dan- many goodly Provinces, as bury the rememger, by lending themengines and other aid, brance of all dangers pair. Tempetts and wherewith to beat off the Carthaginians that thipwracks, famine, overthows, mutinies, affailed them. Caribalo therefore, having heat and cold, pettilence, and all manner of taken a few of them, lay waiting for the diffeates both old and new, together with relt, that could not long ride under those extream poverty, and want of all things Rocks, but would be forced by any great needful, have been the enemies wherewith change of wind, either to put out into the every one of their most noble discoverers, deep, or to fave their men how they could, at one time or other, hath incountred. Many by taking land, with the loss of all their years have passed oversome of their heads in sapping. Whilit he was busie in this care, the search of not so many leagues: yea more the Conful Junius drew near, and was disco- than one or two have spent their labour, veied. Against him Carthalo makes out, and their wealth, and their lives, in learch of a hindshim altogether unprepared to fight as golden Kingdom, without getting further being wholly ignorant of that which had notice of it, than what they had at their first hapmed. The Conful had neither means to fetting forth. All which notwithstanding, fir nor ability to fight. Therefore he like-the third, fourth, and fifth undertakers, wile ran into a very dangerous Creek; have not been ditheartned. Surely, they are thinking no danger fo great as that of the worthily rewarded with those Treasuries enemy. The Carthaginian feeing this, be- and Paradifes which they enjoy; and well takes himfelf to a station between the two they deterve to hold them quietly, if they Roman fleets; where he watcheth, to fee hinder not the like vertues in others, which

of the History of the World.

6. XI.

and recovered by Amilcar, who finitly holds war with them five years. The Romans , having emptied their common treasury, build a new fleet at the charges of private men. The great victory at Sea of Luctatius the Contal 5 whereby the Carthaginians are forced to crave peace. The conditions of the peace between Rome and Carthage.

HE Romans were careful to supply with all industry, by land, the want their South-fayers being all land-Prophets, of thrength at Sea. Therefore they conwere fuddenly overtaken with a boilterous tinue the fiege of Lilsbaum, and feek to South wind, and all the Gallies ferced make fure to themselves all places, whither the enemies thips could not bring relie. This calamity fo discouraged the Remans, The Conful Junius, to cure the wound of dishonour, which he had received, be-prelieve them. There he found them pastime thought him what enterprises to undertake. about two years more, hoping still to wea-In the end he resolved to attempt the ry out those that lay over his head, as they Mountain and City of Fryx, with the Tem- on the contrary did their best, to thrust him ple of Venus Erycina: which was the fairest out of those quarters. resolution.

liiii 2

805

straightly held (as it were) besieged. And rival. no less was Amilear himself restrained, by Hanno was Admiral of the Carthaginian both of these Garrisons, and such as came to sleet; a man (as his actions declare him) wife and richeft of all the Itland; and of thefe, At this time, all the care, both of the Roby cunning or treason, he got possession. mans and of the Carthaginians, was bent unto Frex was commodiously seated between the prosecuting of this business at Errx. Drepanum and Panormus; fo that it feemed Wherein it feems true (as Hanibal in Livie a fit place for a Garrison, that should re- spake unto scipio ) that the affairs of Carftrain the Carthaginians from making roads thage never stood in better terms, fince the into the Country. Wherefore Junius for- beginning of the war, than now they did tified both the top of the Mountain, and the For whereas the Romans had utterly forfafirst entrance of the passage from the bot- ken the Seas, partly by reason of their great tom, (both of which places were very de- losses; partly upon confidence of their landfentible) with a good strength of men. But forces, which they held reliftles; Amilear. shortly after, in the eighteenth year of this with a small Army, had so well acquitted war, the Carthaginians fet forth Amilear, fur- himself, to the honour of his Country, that named Barcas. Father of the great Hannibal, by the tryal of five years war, the Carthagi. with a Fleet and Army, who failing to the nian Souldier was judged equal, if not funecoasts of Italy, did throughly repay the rior to the Roman. Finally, when all, that spoils which the Romans made in Africa, might be, had been devised and done, for For he first of all waited and destroyed the the dislodging of this obstinate Warriour: Territories of the Locrians, and of the Bru- no way feemed better to the Senate of Rome. tians, that were dependants of Rome. Then than once again to build a fleet; whereby, entred he into sicil, and finding there no if the maftery of the Sea could once be gotwalled City in the Carthaginians power, that ten, it was likely that Amilear, for lack of ferved fitly to infelt the Romans, he occu- supply, should not long be able to hold out. pied a piece of ground of great advantage, But in performing this, extream difficulty and lodged his Army thereon; to confront was found. The common treasury was exas well the Romans, that were in Panormus, haufted : and the coft was not little, that was as those that kept about Eryx, putting him- requisite unto such an enterprise. Wherefore felf between both Armies with admirable there was none other way left, than to lay the burden upon private purfes. Divers of The place that Amilear had seized upon, the principal Citizens undertook to build was not only very strong by situation, but (each at his own charges ) one Quinquehad the command of a Port: whereby it reme, which example wrought fo well, that gave him opportunity to fcour all the coast they, whose ability would not serve to do of Italy with his Fleet, wasting all along as the like, joyned with some others, and layfar as to Cuma. In the lile of sicil he held ling their mony together, concurred twoor the Romans to hard work, lying near unto three of them, in building of another; with Panormus: where in three years abode, he condition to be repayed, when the war was did many notable acts, though not of much finished. By this voluntary contribution. configuence, for that the enemy could net they made and finished two hundred new ver be drawn to hazard the main chance. Quinqueremes: taking for their pattern that Having wearied himself and the Romans excellent shift rowing Gally which they had long enough about Panormus, he undertook gotten from the Rhodian, in the Port of Lia strange piece of work at Eryx. The Roman lybeum, as was shewed before. The charge Garrisons, placed there by Junius, on the of this fleet was committed to C. Luctanus top, and at the bottom of the Mountain, Catulus; who past with the same into sicil were very ftrongly lodged. Nevertheless the Spring following, and entred the Port of Amilear found a way, lying towards the Drepanum; indeavouring by all means to Sea-fide, by which he conveighed his men have forced the City. But being advertised into the City of Erry, that was about the that the Carthaginian fleet was at hand, and midft of the afcent, ere the enemy knew of being mindful of the late losses which his By this it came to pass, that the Romans | Predecessors had received; he was carewhich kept the top of the mountain, were full to put himself in order, against their ar-

Captain, he betook himself to the long Robe. wind, escaping to the lile of Hieronejus. Yet is he much commended in Roman Histothat peace which he thenceforth commendwith all needful provisions for the Souldiers ing all conclusions to his election and sole at Ergx (for dexterity in making prepara- counsel. tion was the best of his qualities ): but he

in picture, exceedingly formal, and ikilful my repent of his new adventure to Sea. This in picture, executing, the state of the state of the state of the state of feeming reverend. How his re- was a good courle, if it could have been perint beautiful to the state of the stat in the art of tenning Sed, I do not find; but formed. But Catulus used all possible difputation was and actions, as as the first put to and the cantus used an politic difficult of the same of the cantus used an politic difficult of the same of the cantus used an politic difficult of the cantus used an politic difficult of the cantus used and politic difficult of the c it was undertaken by men more worthy lign: not because he was informed of the enethan himfelf. This quality procured unto mies purpose, but that he knew it to be the than the done to many others) both best for them, and for that he feared no danhm (as a nature done to many offices), both of them, and for that he reared no dangood liking among the antient fort, whole ger fo greatly, as to encounter with Amilear, cold temper is averfe from new enterprifes; Wherefore although the weather was very and therewithall an opinion of great fore fight, confirmed by every lofs received. the grain and the Seas wenthigh, when the Carthagnian fleet was deferred yet he rather More particularly, he was gracious among choic to fight with the enemy, that had the the people, for that he was one of the most wind of him, than to suffer his convoy to pais gievous oppressors of their subject Provin- along to Errx, upon unlikely hope of better gnerous opportunity in the future. All that Hanno estians much wealth, but therewithall fuch should have done, Catalus had performed. He hatred, as turned it all to their great loss. had carefully exercised his men in Rowing 5 He had ere this been imployed against the he had lightned his Gallies of all unnecessary Namidians and wild Africans, that were burthens; and he had taken aboard the choice more like to Rovers than to Souldiers, in men of the Roman Land-Souldiers. The making War. Of those fugitive Nations he Carthaginians therefore, at the first encounlearned to negled more manly enemies, to ter were utterly broken and defeated, hahis own great dishonour, and to the great ving fifty of their Gallies stemmed and sunk, hut of Carthages, which loft not more by his and seventy taken, wherein were sew less bad conduct, than by his malicious counsel, than ten thousand men, that were all made when, having shewed himself an unworthy prisoners: the rest, by a sudden change or

The state of Carthage, utterly discounes, as a temperate man, and one that stu-raged by this change of fortune, knew not didhow to preferve the League between whereon to refolve. Means to repair their Carthage and Rome. In which regard, how fleet in any time, there were none left; wellhe deserved of his own Country, it will their best men of war by Sea were conappear hereafter: how beneficial hewas to fumed; and Amilear, upon whose valour the Romans, it will appear, both hereafter, and judgement the honour and fafety of the and in his present voyage; wherein he re- Common-weal rested, was now surrounded duced the Carthaginians to a miserable ne- by his enemies in Sicil, where he could cellity of accepting, upon hard conditions, not be relieved. In this extremity, they make dispatch unto Amilear himself, and authorized him to take what course should Hanno had very well furnished his Navy, seem best unto his excellent wisdom, leav-

Amilear, whom no advertity, accompahad neither been careful in training his nied with the leaft hope or poliibility of re-Martiners, to the practice of Sea-fight, nor covery, had ever vanquished, looking over in manning his Gallies with frout fellows. He every promife, true or falle, that the prefent thought, that the same of a Carthaginian time could make him, (for to attend any fleet was enough, to make the unexpert Ro- thing from the future he was not able ) remans give way: forgetting, that rather the folved to make trial, whether his necessity refiftless force of tempelts, than any other might be compounded upon any reasonable frength of opposition, had made them to terms. He therefore sent to Luctation the for sake the Seas. Yet in one thing he had ei- Conful an overture of peace: who considerther conceived a right, or else was sent forth ing it well, gathered so many arguments well instructed. It was his purpose, first of all from the present poverty of the Roman to fail to Eryx, and there to discharge his State, wasted beyond expectation in the hips of their lading: and having thus light-former war, that he formerly harkened unto ned himself, he meant to take aboard some it. So, in conclusion, an accord was made, but part of the Land-army, together with Amil-with provision, That it should hold none car himself, by whose helphe doubted not, otherwise, than if the Senate and People of but that he should be able to make his ene- Rome would ratific it with their allowance.

The conditions were: First, that the sum; and required a shorter time of pay-Carthacinians should clearly abandon the ment. Further also they took order, that Ifle of sicil. Secondly, that they should the Carthaginians should not only depart never undertake upon literon King of syra- out of Sieil it felf, but should also withdraw ente. nor invade any part of his Territories, their Companies out of all other Islands benor the Territories of any of his Friends tween it and Italy, renouncing their whole and Allies. Thirdly, that they should fet at interest therein. liberty, and fend back into traly, all the Ro- Such was the end of the first Punick War mans, whom they held priloners, without that had lasted about twenty four years ransome. Lastly, that they should pay unto without intermission; in which time the the Romans two thousand and two hundred Romans had loft, by fight or shipwrack talents; which make, as the French reckon about feven hundred Quinqueremes; and the talent, thirteen hundred and twenty the Carthaginians about five hundred; the thousand crowns: the same to be delivered greatness of which losses, doth serve to prove the greatness both of these two Cities, and within twenty years next following. Thele Articles were fent to Rome, where of the War it felf: wherein I hold good the they were not throughly approved: but ten judgement of Polyline. That the Roman Commissioners were fent into Bicil, to make in general, did thew themselves the braver perfect the agreement. These Commissio- Nation ; and Amilear , the most worther pers added a thousand talents to the former Captain.

Of divers actions passing between the first and second Panick Warrs.

ø. I.

Of the cruel War begun between the Carthaginians and their own Mercenaries.

gave them rather means and leifure to help believe, that any people, or indeed any one man, themselves in a following war, than cause to would continue longer in an over-burdened hold themselves contented with the prefent estate, than meer necessity did enforce & Now. peace. It is an ancient and true rule, Quid if the Romans themselves could make this leges à victoribus dicuntur, accipiuntur à victis; judgement of those Nations, who had little That laws are given by the Conquerors, and else besides their manly resolution, to dereceived of the conquered. But the Romans fend their liberty; furely, they grofly flathad either forgotten the answer that was tered themselves, in presuming that the Carmade unto them. by one of the Privernates; thaginians, who neither in power nor in or elle had forgotten to follow it in this pride, were any way inferiour unto themweighty bufness. For when one or Priver-Telves, would fit down any longer by the num, after a rebellion, defending in the Se- loss and dithonour received, than untill nate the caufe of his City, was demanded by they could recover their legs, and the a Senator, It hat peace the Romans might hope strength which had a while failed themto for, or affire themselves of, if they quitted their take revenge, But occasion, by which (while present advantage over them; he unswered well entertained) not only private men, in those words, S. banan decleritis, & fidual but Kings and publick States, have more O perpetuam; si malam, hand dinturnam; si prevailed, than by any proper prowessor the peace be good and faith at that you give us, vertue, with-held the tempest from the Roit will be perfectual, if it be ill, then of little mans for a time, and turned it most fearfulcontinuance. To this answer the Senate, at ly upon Africa, and the Carthagraians them that time gave fuch approbation, that it was felves.

HE Romans having partly by faid, Viri & liberi vocem auditam; An credi force, and partly by composi- posset, ullum populum, ant hominem denia; in tion, thrust the Carthaginians ea conditione, cujus eum paniteat, diutius out of Sicil, and all the little quam necesse sit mansurum? That it was the Islands thereunto adjacent, speech of a manly, and free man; for who could as Carthage, unto fome fuch reatonable coni- cancelled without fatisfying their expectapolition, as the prefent emptiness of the com- tion by some unordinary largers. mon Treasury did require : fo that the fift might have been friendly discharged, whole Army being arrived, and lodged in and a good president left unto the second Sicca, Hanno comes thither to clear the acand third, whilft their dif-junction had made compt. Now is the day come, wherein they them unable to recover their whole due by shall all be made rich; especially if they ca force. But the Carthaginians were of a con- hold together, in maintaining froutly tray opinion. They thought to find, in the common cause. So think they all; and whole Army, fome that would be contented femble themselves to hear what good to his charges in the mean while.

all, when they came back for their pay. But them.

for after the first Punick war was ended, for news or their tellows arrival, and their for arctime first, went to Libbarn, own pay. Burine's they had none to do, and there is a sum of the non where the transported into Africk: the care the whole argument of their discourse inof which business he committed unto Goffa, clining them to nothing elfe. Their daily of whom 3 as to a man of approved fufficient talk was, how rich they should be, when all to a more than the finding the delivered over his charge. Gefo had their mony came inshow much would tall to a epecial confideration of the great fumms, every fingle thate and for how long time the wherein Carthage was indepted unto there City was behind hand with them in reckon-Africanies, and withall, of the great dif-ing. They were all grown Arithmeticians, bility to make payment. Therefore he and he was thought a man of worth, that thought it the wifeft way, to fend them over could find most reason to increase their deby handfuls a few at a time; mands, to the very highest, even beyond hat to the first might have their dispatch, their due. No part of their long service was and be gone, ere the fecond or third Com- forgotten; but the comfortable words and paniesarrived. Herein he dealt providently. promites of their Captains, leading them for it had not been hard to perswade any forth to any dangerous light, were called to imall number, lodged within fo great a City mind, and fo many obligations, not to be Thus the time patieth away, untill the

800

to gratifie the Publick State, by remitting agretpart of their own due: and hoped, by luch an example, to draw all the multibyluch an example, to draw all the multitude to the like agreement and capitulation. ny promifes made to them; all which were So they detained the first and second com- to be considered in their Donative. Hanno mers; telling them, that they would make begins a very formal Oration; wherein he an even reckoning with all together. Thus bewails the poverty of Carthage, tells them every day the number increased, and many how great a summ of mony is to be paid diforders (a thing incident among Souldiers) unto the Romans; reckons up the excellive were committed; which much disquieted charges whereat the Common-wealth had the City, not accustomed unto the like. In been in the late War; and finally defires this regard it was thought fit, to remove them to hold themselves contented with them all to some other place, where they part of their pay, and out of the love which might be less troublesome. This must be they bare unto the City, to remit the rest. done by some colourable words of perswa- Few of them understood his discourse: for fion: for their number was already to great, the Carthaginian Army was composed of funthat it was not fafe to offend them too far. dry Nations, as Greeks, Africans, Gaules, Ligu-Wherefore it is devised, that they should all rians, Spaniards, and others; all of different attend the coming of their fellows, at sicca: languages. Yet they stared upon him, and receiving every one a piece of gold, to bear were (as I think) little pleased with his very gesture. But when such as conceived the This motion is accepted, and the Soul- whole tenour of his speech, had informed diers began to dis-lodge; leaving behind the rest what cold comfort he brought; they them their wives, their children, and all their were all inraged, and fared like mad-men, baggage, as meaning shortly to fetch away so that nothing would serve to appeale the Carthaginians have no fancy to their re- Hanno would fain have affwaged their futurning into the Town; and therefore com- ry, but he knew not how: for he less underpel them to truss up their fardels, that they stood their dissonant loud noises, than they might have none occasion left to make any did his Oration. An Army collected out of errands thither. So to Sicca they removed, fo many Countries, that have no one lanwith all their goods: and there lay waiting guage common to all, or to the greater part of them, is neither easily stirred up to muti- they list. They fend ever and anon some ny nor easily pacified, when once it is bro- of their Senatours into the Camp; who ken into out-rage. The best that Hanno can promise to satisfie all demands, as far forth do. is to use the help of Interpreters and as it should be possible. And thus by shifting Mellengers. But these Interpreters mistake from one extreme to another, they make his meaning; some for want of skill; others the Souldiers understand into what fear the of fet purpofe; and such as deliver his er- City was driven; which cannot chusebur rands in the world fente, are best believed, add much insolency to the passions already Finally, they think themselves much abused stirred up. by the Carthaginians, and refolve to demand This fudden change of weather, and the their own in peremptory terms, at a nearer true cause of it, is quickly found by the Ardistance. In this mood they leave Sieca, my, which thereupon grows wife, and find. and march as far as Tunis, that is within a ve- ing the feafon fit, labours to make a great own errour. It is a good Rule .

CHAP 11.

Curandum inprimis, ne magna injuria fiat Fortibus & miferis.

Have special care, that valiant poverty Be not opprest with too great injury.

Rule, hath also been careless in providing to or their Captains direct them where to fecure her felt against the inconvenience fetch it? But this would not serve. They that might follow. She had fuffered the faid that they had been fometimes drivento whole multitude, whereupon she was like buy; and that ( fince they could not rememto give cause of discontent to joyn it self in ber how much, or at what rate they bought) to one body, when the feveral troops might they would be paid for their provision dueasily have been dispersed: she hath turned ring the whole time, and according to the out of her gates the wives, children, and dearest price that Wheat had born, whilst goods of these poor men, which, had she rethe War lasted. Such are now the demands tained in shew of kindness, she might have of these Mutiners; who might easily have used them as Hostages for her own safety; been satisfied with far less charges, and sat and by imploying a miferable penny-father, more honour, by receiving their due at the in her negotiation with men of War, the first. But now they make no end of crahath weak ned the reputation of her bravest ving. For whilst the Carthaginians are per-Captains, that might best have served to plexed about this Corn mony; the Souldiers free her from the threatning danger. Yet have devifed many more tricks, whereby likely it is, that Amilear had no defire to extort a greater fumm of mony, without to be used as an instrument in defrauding his all regard of shame. Since therefore no good own Souldiers of their wages: especially end could be found of these controversies confidering, that as he best could bear wit- which daily did multiply, it was thought ness of their merits, so was he not ignorant, convenient, that one of the Carthaginians, that means to content them were not want- which had commanded in Sicil, should be ing, if the Citizens had been willing there-chosen by the Souldiers to reconcile all difunto. Hereupon may be added a probable ferences. Hereunto the Army condescend conjecture that Hanno, with his complices, ed, and made choice of Gefco: partly out of who at this very time was a bitter enemy to good liking to him, who had shewed himself Amilear, had the boldness to impose the at all times, a friendly man to them, and careblame of his own wretched counsel upon full of their good, especially when they were the liberal promises made by the Captains, to be transported into Africk: partly out Amile ar therefore did wifely, in suffering of a dislike which they had conceived of those that maligned him, to have the managing of their own plot, and to deal the in all this busie time. So Gesco comes among to buy what they lift, and at what price tion of Hanno. He calls unto him first of all rv little of Carthage, and there they encamp, harvest. Mony must be had, and without Now begin the Carthaginians to find their any abatement. This is granted. Many have loft their horfes in publick fervice of the State. The State shall pay for them. They had lived fome years by making hard shift, without receiving their allowance of victuals from Carthage. If they had lived they wanted not meat; therefore what was this to the Carthaginians ? Was it not all But this proud City, having neglected the one, whether the thips did bring in provision, cards which themselves had shuffled. This them; and to please them the better, comes they continue to do as foolifhly as they had not without mony: which might give bet at first begun. They furnish a market at ter countenance to his proceedings, than Tunis, for the Souldiers; whom they fuffer barren eloquence had done to the negotian not stood against it.

that in the late war had fled from a Roman, we are no finall part, lyes at their gates, ready whom he ferved, and therefore flood in to help us if we be men. A better opportunity fear, left he should be delivered back to his cannot be expetted; for were our swords once Master; at whose hands he could expect no drawn, all Africk would rife on our side. As todeter others from the like seditious be-haviour. This Matho deals with his Country-menthe Africans; telling them, that they were in far worse condition, than either By such perswasions Matho wins the Afiithe Gaules, the Greeks, the Spaniards, or any can Souldiers to his own purpose. They are for aign Mercenaries. For (faith he) Thefe our not now fo greedy of money, as of quarrel, companions have no more to do, than to re-which he that seeketh will not miss to find. cover their mages, and so get them gone: but When Geso therefore offered to pay them we that are to flay behind in Africa, shall be their whole stipend presently, but referred called to another manner of accompt, when we their other demands, for horses and victuals, every danger of war, as any other men, we same purpose) can be heard, save only Throw, bould now fland quaking like flaves, and not throw.

the Captains, and then the feveral Nations dare to open our mouths, when others take liapart, rebuking them gently for that which berty to require their due. This notwithin and had passed a advising them temperately con- ing yemay after your selves, that we are like ening the prefent; and exhorting them to to be raught tetter manners, as foon as our felcontinue their love unto the State, which lows are gone: in regard of whore they are had long entertained them, and would content to phalow their indignation with a needs alwaies be mindful of their good fer- | 200.1, but a forced countenance. Let us therevices. After this he began to put hand to his fore be mire, and confider that they hate and ourse, offering to give them their whole pay fear us: their travel will show it felf when in hand; and then after to confider of other their fear is once past: unless we now take our reckonings at a more convenient time. This time, ind whileft we are the fironger, enfectle bad been well accepted, and might have them to greatly, that their batted shall not be ferved to bring all to a quiet pass, if two fe- able to do us wrong. All their frength consistdirious Ring-leaders of the multitude had eth in money, wherewithall they have hired others against us, and us against others. At There was in the Camp one spendius, a the present they have neither money nor friends. furly fellow, and audacious, but a flave ; The best Army that ever served them, whereof less than to be whipt and crucified. This for the Carthaginians, Whither can they fend ters, than to be winter and channel wretch could find no better way to prolong for help? The cafe it felf is plan. Ent we milt his own life, than by raising such troubles as might serve to withdraw men from care of ligence of Gesco, by incensing these Gaules and private matters, and make his own reftitution impossible, were his Master never for else it behoveth us to please our good Maimportunate. With Spendius there affociated fters, by joyning with them against our fellows. himself one Matho, an hot-headed man, yea by offering to forgive unto them all our that had been so forward in stirring up the mages, if so (peradventure) they may be won tumult, as he could not choose but sear, lest to forgive us, or not over cruelly to punish our hisown death should be made an example, faults committed. He is most worthily a are left alone; so that we shall have cause to to some other more convenient time; they wish that we had returned home beggars, ra- brake into great outrage, and fay, that they ther than loaden with the money, which (little will have all, even all at once, and that out though it be) shall break our backs. Te are of hand. In this tumult, the whole Army not ignorant, how tyrannically those our haugh- Hock together about Matho and Spendius; 17 Masters of Carthage do reign over us. They whose diligence is not wanting to add more think it reasonable, that our lives and goods fuel to the fire already blazing. Matho and Should be at their disposition; which they have spendius are the only men to whom the Soulat other times been accustomed to take from diers will hearken: if any other stand up to we even without apparent cause, as it were to make a speech, a showre of stones, slying declare their fover aignty: What will they now about his cars, puts him to silence, that he do, feeing that we have demeaned our felves shall never afterwards speak word more. Neias free-men, and been bold to fet a good face ther flay they to confider what it is that on the matter, demanding our own, as others any man would fay : enough hath been faid have done? Te all do know, that it were a already by those good spokes men; so very shame for us, if having been as forward in that no other word (though perhaps to the

Kkkkk

Now the rebellion begins to take form. | Carthaginians themselves have forgotten. Matho and Spendius are choice Captains; but the people, that have suffered to much who, followed by a desperate crue of Ruf- retain all in perfect memory. Wherefore not fians, will fuffer so man to make his own only fuch as can bear arms, are ready to do peace, but purfue their own ends, under fair fervice in this great commotion; but the vepretence of the common cause. All which ry women bring forth their Jewels, and notwithstanding, Gelo is not wanting to the other ornaments, offering all to sail for good of his Country, but adventures him the maintenance of fo just a quarrel. By this felf upon their fury. One while he deals great forwardness, and liberal contribution. with the Captains, and other principalmen; Matho and Spendius are supplyed with a taking them by the hand, and giving gentle strong aid of threescore and ten thousand words: another while, he works with the Africans: and are moreover furnished with leveral Nations; putting them all in hope of money, not only to fatisfie the prefent appetheir own hearts delire, if any reason would tite of their men ; but sufficient to continue content them. None of them are to fullen as the war begun, though it should be of long the Africans: indeed none of them had to endurance. good caufe. They require him peremptorily to give them their own, and not to feed them with words. The truth is, that they are not fo coverous as they feem : but will be Divers Observations upon this War with the more glad of an ill answer, than of a good payment. This is more than Gefco knows: he fees not that Matho hath any more than bare words to bestow upon them. Wherefore, as rebuking their inconsiderate heat, of Tyranny, and how Tyrants are fain to use he tells them, That they may do well, if they itand in want of money, to feek it of their Captain Matho. This is enough. Shall he both defraud them and deride them? They itay no longer, but lay violent hands upon the treasure that he had brought; yea upon |vel.Behold a tyrannical City, persecutedby him also, and all that are with him: as inten- her own Mercenaries with a deadly war. It ding to take this in part of payment, and, for is a common thing, as being almost necessathe rest, to take another course. Matho and ry, that a tyranny should be upheld by Mer-Spendius are glad of this. It had little pleafed cenary forces: it is common that Mercenathem to fee their fellows begin to grow ries should be false: and it is common that calm, by his fair language: wherefore they all war made against Tyrants, should be excast into bonds both him, and all the Cartha- ceeding full of hate and cruelty. Yet weselginians that they can find; that so the Ar- dome hear, that ever the ruine of a tyranny my may be freed from danger of good ad- is procured or fought by those that were monition, which they call Treaton. After hired to maintaint the cower of it : and felthis follows open war. Matho folicites all dome or never do we read of any war that Affick, and his Emballadors are every where hathbeen profecuted with fuch inexpiable wellentertained. Neither is it needful to hatred, as this that is now in hand. use perswasion: the very fame of this rebel- That which we properly call Tyranny, is, lion sufficeth to draw the whole Country into A violent form of Government, not respeding it. Now must the Carthaginians be plagued the good of the subject, but only the pleasure of tor those oppressions, with which they have the Commander. I purposely forbear to say plagued others. It is true that advertity hath that it is, the unjust rule of one over many: never been untold of her errours : and as for very truly doth Cleon in Thucydides tell she is ever assured to hear her own, so com- the Athenians, that their dominion over monly with her own she undergoes those of their subjects, was none other, than a meer other men. The Africans finding the Car-tyranny; though it were fo, that they themthaginians hang under the wheel, tell them selves were a great City, and a popular estate. boldly, that their Impositions were merci- Neither is it peradventure greatly needful, less; that they took from them the one half that I should call this form of commandof their Corn; that they doubled their tri- ing, violent: fince it may well and eafily be butes in all things elfe; and that they inflict- conceived, that no man willingly performs ed upontheir valials the greatest punishment obedience to one regardles of his life and

6. Il.

Mercenaries.

†. I.

the help of Mercenaries.

for the least offences. These ciuclties the welfare ; unless himself be either a mad by inflames the Tyrants appetite, and will mercenaries are, by mutual obligation, firmnot fuffer it to be restrained with any limits ly affured unto the Tyrant. of respect. Why should he seek out bounds to prescribe unto his desires, who cannot endure the face of one fo honest, as may put oure the tace of any moderation? It That the Tyranny of a City over her subjects is is much that he hath gotten by extorting from some few: by sparing none, he should have riches in goodly abundance. He hath taken a great deal from every one: but taken a great usal from every one. He hath every one could have spared more. He hath wrung all their Purses, and now he hath man, or (which is little better) wholly pof- [shall all be permitted to do as he doth; to man, or (winted to do as he don't to felled with some extreme pallion of love. rob, to ravish, to murder, and to fatisfie their The practice of tyranny is not alwayes of a own appetites, in most outragious manner. The practice of change is more being thought fo much the more affured to like extremity: for fome Lords are more being thought fo much the more affured to gentle than others, to their very flaves; and their Mafter, by how much themore he fees gentic than others, or home, is mild enough them grow harefull to all men elfe. Confiderbe that is most crack to think it be but for his ing in what age, and in what language I towards others, Nevertheles, in large Do write; I must be fain to say, that these are own available in the Rulers differetion can-minions, wherein the Rulers differetion can-not dreams: though fome English-man perminions, wherein the transfer of the diffe haps that were unacquainted with Hiltory, not extend might be found between the lighting upon this leaf, might suppose this worth of feveral men, it is commonly feen, difcourse to be but little better. This is to that the tafte of sweetness drawn out of op-pression, hath so good a reliss, as continual-that a tyrannical City must likewise use mercenary Souldiers.

t. II.

wrung an then Covetoufness is never satis- jects; it may appear some wayes to be more enough: but (as Covetoufness is never satisfed) he thinks that all this is too little for a moderate, than that of one man: but in maflock, though it were indeed a good yearly ny things it is more intolerable. A City is jealous of her Dominion; but not (as is one mobbery, and is not better pleafed with the man) fearful of her life: the lefs need hath gains, than with the Art of getting, He is ha- she therefore to secure her self by cruelty. ted for this, and he knows it well: but he A City is not luxurious in consuming her thinks by cruelty to change hatred into treasures, and therefore needs the lets to fear. So he makes it his exercise, to torment pluck from her Subjects. If War, or any and murder all whom he suspecteth: in which other great occasion drive her to necessity course, if he suspect none unjustly, he may be of taking from her Subjects more than orfaid to deal craftily; but if Innocency be not dinary fumms of money; the fame necessity fafe, how can all this make any Conspirator makes either the contribution easie, or the to frand in fear, fince the Traitor is no worfe taking excusable. Indeed no wrongs are so rewarded than the quiet man? Wherefore grievous and hatefull, as those that are infohe can think upon none other fecurity, than lent. Remember (faith Caligula the Emperour, to disarm all his Subjects; to fortifie him to his Grand-mother Antonia) that I may do felf within some strong place; and, for defence of his Person and State, to hire as many lufty Souldiers as shall be thought suffino harm. And Juvenal reckons it, as the cent. These must not be of his own Country: complement of all torments, inslicted by a for if not every one, yet some one or other cruel Roman Dame upon her slaves, that may chance to have a feeling of the publick whilest she was whipping them, the painted milery. This considered, he allures unto him her face, talked with her Gossips, and used a desperate rabble of strangers, the most un- all signs of neglecting what those wretches honelt that can be found; such as have nei-telt. Now feeing that the greatest grievanther wealth nor credit at home, and will ces wherewith a domineering State offcntherefore be carefull to support him, by deth her Subjects, are free from all sense of whose only favour they are maintained indignity; likely it is, that they will not ex-Now, left any of these, either by detestation tremely hate her, although desire of liberty of his wickedness, or (which in wicked men make them weary of her Empire. In these ismost likely) by promise of greater reward respects it is not needfull that she should keep than he doth give, should be drawn to turn a Guard of licentious cut-throats, and mainhis sword against the Tyrant himselt: they tain them in all villany, as a Dionysius or Kkkkk 2

815

CHAP. II

Suitable

able to terrific and to hold perforce in obe- lading of wax and honey. These fly into all dience, all male-contents. These things, quarters, and are quickly acquainted with confidered alone by themselves, may serve to every mans wealth, or whatsoever else, in all prove. That a City is scarce able to deserve the Province, is worthy to be desired. They the name of a Tyranness, in the proper sig- know all a mans enemies, and all his fears:

that the miferies wherewith a Tyrant load-into acquaintance with these masterful eth his people, are not so heavy, as the bur- guests, in hope to win their friendship, were dens imposed by a cruel City. Not with an endless labour, (yet it must be underout some appearance of truth, it may be gone) and such as every one hath not means faid, that Lult, and many other private pal- to go about : but were this effected, what fions, are no way incident to a City or Cor- availeth it? The love of our Governour is poration. But to make this good, we shall purchased with gifts: the Successour of this have need to use the help of such distincti- man, he is more loving than could be wished ons, as the Argument in hand doth not re- in respect of a fair Wise or Daughter, then quire. Was not Rome lascivious, when Cato comes the third, perhaps of the contrary fawas fain to rife and leave the Theater, to the ction at home, a bitter enemy to both his end, that the reverend regard of his gravity fore-goers, who feeks the ruine of all that might not hinder the people from calling for have been inward with them. So the mifea fnew of naked Courtifans, that were to be ries of this tyranny are not simple, but interbrought upon the open stage? By common laced (as it were) with the calamities of civil practice, and general approved cultom, we War. The Romans had a Law De Repetundir. are to centure the quality of a whole State; or, of Recovery, against extorting-Maginot by the private vertue or vice of any one strates: yet we find, that it ferved not wholman, nor by metaphytical abstraction of ly to restrain their Provincial Governours; the univerful from the fingular; or of the who presuming on the favour of their own four may prove better.

dred and friends, who mean not to return one most wicked man.

Agathocles must do: her own Citizens are home empty to their hives, without a good becoming themselves, within a little space, All this notwithstanding, it shall appear, the enemies that he feareth most. To grow Corporation, from those of whom it is com- Citizens, and of their kindred and friends pounded: I fay therefore, (as I have faid elfe- at home, were bold in their Provinces, to where) That it were better to live under one work all these enormities rehearsed; though pernicious Tyrant, than under many thou- somewhat the more sparingly, for fear of fands. The reasons proving this, are too many judgement. If the Subjects of Rome groaned to fet down, but a few may fuffice. The de- under fuch oppressions, what must we think fires of one man, how inordinate foever, if of those that were Vastals unto Carthage? they cannot be fatisfied, yet they may be The Romans imposed no burthensome triwearied; he is not able to fearch all cor-butes; they loved not to hear, that their ners; his humour may be found, and footh- Empire was grievous; they condemned maed; age or good advice, yea, or some unex- ny noble Citizens for having been ill Gopected accident may reform him: all which vernours. At Carthage all went quite confailing; yet is there hope, that his fuccef- trary: the rapines newly devised by one Magistrate, served as presidents to instruct Many Tyrants have been changed into another; every man resolved to do the worthy Kings: and many have ill used their like, when it should fall to his turn; and he ill-gotten Dominion, which, becoming here- was held a notable States-man, whose robditary to their posterity, hath grown into beries had been such, as might afford a good the most excellent form of Government, share to the common treasure. Particular even a lawful Monarchy. But they that live examples of this Carthaginian practice are under a tyrannical City, have no such hope: not extant: the Government of Verres the their Mistress is immortal, and will not Roman in Sicil, that it is lively set out by flacken the reins, untill they be pulled out | Tully, may ferve to inform us, what was the of her hands, and her own mouth receive demeanour of these Punick Rulers, who stood the bridle of a more mightier Chariotter. in fear of no fuch condemnation, as Verres This is wofull: yet their present sufferings underwent. By prosecuting this discourse, make them less mindfull of the future. New I might inferr a more general proposition; flies, and hungry ones, fall upon the same That a City cannot govern her subject Profore, out of which others had already fucked vinces fo mildly as a King: but it is enough their fill. A new Governour comes yearly to have shewed. That the tyranny of a City among them, attended by all his poor kin-lis far more intolerable, than that of any CHAP. II. the harred of their subjects: and again, tu into the hands of the King of iragen. table to the hatred of the subjects, is the Like unto his father was Francu Sforza, the jealousie of their Lords. Hence it followed, first of that race, Duke of Millan; who being force in Spain, the spaniarus in Chirch, seeing logicities with his perion, into their hands, he each of them like to prove the better Souldiers, was by them delivered up unto his encmy the farther they were from home, as if they the French King, by whom he was inclosed in the Castle of Loches unto his dying day.

The like inconvenience is found, in using Spanish hirelings could properly be termed the help of forrain Auxiliaries. We fee. Mercenaries: for they were subject unto that when the Emperour of Constantinople Carthage, and carried into the field, not on- had hired ten thousand Turks against his ly by reward, but by duty. Yet feeing their neighbour Princes; he could never, either

t. III.

ter than Mercenaries.

The dangers growing from the use of mercenary Souldiers, and forrain Auxiliaries.

ferve, than to those against whom they ferve, they are seditious, unsaithfull, direction drew the English into Ireland; but the one places and Countries, whereinto they are two kingdoms. drawn; as being held by no other bond, Against all this, may be alledged the Surable to the cruelty of fuch Lords, is fudden, and forced her to put her felf that, in wars abroad, the Carthaginians durft entertained by the Millanois, forced them to whethe service of African Souldiers; in Africk become his slaves, even with the very same if felf they had rather be beholding to army which themselves had levied for them others, that were farther fetcht. For the own defence. But Lodowick Sforza, the fon of fame purpose did Hannibal, in the second this Francis by the just judgement of God, Panick war, shift his Mercenaries out of their was made a memorable example unto posteown Countries; Ut Afri in Hispania, Hispa- rity, in losing his whole estate by the trea-3 ni in Africa, melior procul ab domo futurus chery of such faithless Mercenaries, as his ating, miles, velut mutuis pignoribus obligati own Father had been. For having waged an spendia facerent; that the Africans might army of Switzers, and committed his Durchy, Gree in Spain, the Spaniards in Africk, being together with his person, into their hands, he duty was no better than enforced, and that it was not any love to the State, but meer the Sea upon Asia fide; which gave bedefire of gain, that made them fight; I will ginning to the Christian servitude, that soon not nicely stand upon propriety of a word, laster followed. Alexander the Son of Casbut hold them, as Polybius also doth, no bet fander, sought aid of the great Demetrius : but Demetrins, being entred into his Kingdom, flew the same Alexander, who had invited him, and made himfelf King of Macedon. Syracon the Turk was called into Egypt by Sanar Soldan, against his opposite: but this Turk did fettle himfelf fo furely in Fgypt, that Saladine his successor became Lord HE extream danger, growing from the thereof; and of all the holy Land, foon afimployment of such Souldiers, is well ter. What need we look about for examobserved by Machiael: who sheweth, that ples of this kind? Every Kingdom, in effect, they are more terrible to those whom they can furnish us. The Britains drew the Saxons obedient, devourers, and destroyers of all and the other soon became Lords of those

than their own commodity. Yea, that which good success of the United Provinces of the is most fearful among such hirelings, is, that Netherlands, using none other than such they have often, and in time of greatest ex- kind of Souldiers, in their late war. Indeed tremity, not only refused to fight, in their these Low-Countreys have many goodly and defence, who have entertained them, but re- ftrong Cities, filled with Inhabitants that are volted unto the contrary part; to the utter wealthy, industrious, and valiant in their ruine of those Princes and States that have kind. They are frout Sea-men, and therein is trusted them. Those mercenaries (saith Ma- their excellency; neither are they bad at chiavel) which filled all Italy when Charls the the defence of a place well fortified: but in eighth of France did pass the Alpes, were open field they have seldom been able to the cause that the said French King won the Itand against the Spaniard. Necessity there-Realm of Naples with his Buckler without a fore compelled them to feek help abroad: Sword. Notable was the example of sforza and the like necessity made them forbear to the Father of Francis Sforza, Duke of Mil- arm any great numbers of their own. For, lan; who being entertained by Queen Joan with money raised by their Trade, they of Naples, abandoned her service on the maintained the War: and therefore could,

Agathocles must do: her own Citizens are home empty to their hives, without a good able to terrific and to hold perforce in obe- lading of wax and honey. These fly into all dience, all male-contents. These things, quarters, and are quickly acquainted with confidered alone by themselves, may serve to every mans wealth, or whatsoever else, in all prove, That a City is scarce able to deserve the Province, is worthy to be desired. They the name of a Tyrannels, in the proper fig-know all a mans enemies, and all his fears: nification.

All this notwithstanding, it shall appear, that the miseries wherewith a Tyrant load-into acquaintance with these masterful eth his people, are not so heavy, as the burguests, in hope to win their friendship, were dens imposed by a cruel City. Not with- an endless labour, (yet it must be underout some appearance of truth, it may be gone) and such as every one hath not means faid, that Luft, and many other private paft to go about : but were this effected, what fions, are no way incident to a City or Cor- availeth it? The love of our Governour is poration. But to make this good, we shall purchased with gifts: the Successour of this have need to use the help of such distincti- man, he is more loving than could be wished ons, as the Argument in hand doth not re- in respect of a fair Wise or Daughter, then quire. Was not Rome lascivious, when Cato comes the third, perhaps of the contrary fawas fain to rise and leave the Theater, to the ction at home, a bitter enemy to both his end, that the reverend regard of his gravity fore-goers, who feeks the rune of all that might not hinder the people from calling for have been inward with them. So the misea fliew of naked Courtifans, that were to be ries of this tyranny are not simple, but interbrought upon the open stage? By common practice, and general approved custom, we War. The Romans had a Law De Repetundis, are to censure the quality of a whole State; or, of Recovery, against extorting Maginot by the private vertue or vice of any one strates: yet we find, that it served not wholfour may prove better.

ill-gotten Dominion, which, becoming heretheir Mistress is immortal, and will not dred and friends, who mean not to return one most wicked man.

becoming themselves, within a little space. the enemies that he feareth most. To grow man, nor by metaphysical abstraction of ly to restrain their Provincial Governours; the universal from the singular; or of the who presuming on the favour of their own Cirizens, and of their kindred and friends pounded: I say therefore, (as I have said elsewhere) That it were better to live under one work all these enormities rehearsed; though pernicious Tyrant, than under many thou- somewhat the more sparingly, for fear of fands. The reasons proving this, are too many judgement. If the Subjects of Rome grouned to fet down, but a few may suffice. The de- under such oppressions, what must we think fires of one man, how inordinate foever, if of those that were Vallals unto Carthage? they cannot be satisfied, yet they may be The Romans imposed no burthensome triwearied; he is not able to fearch all cor-butes; they loved not to hear, that their ners; his humour may be found, and footh- Empire was grievous; they condemned maed ; age or good advice, yea, or some unex- ny noble Citizens for having been ill Copected accident may reform him: all which vernours. At Carthage all went quite confailing; yet is there hope, that his fuccefi trary: the rapines newly deviled by one Magistrate, served as presidents to instruct Many Tyrants have been changed into another; every man resolved to do the worthy Kings: and many have ill used their like, when it should fall to his turn; and he was held a notable States-man, whose robditary to their posterity, hath grown into beries had been such, as might afford a good the most excellent form of Government, share to the common treasure. Particular even a lawful Monarchy. But they that live examples of this Carthaginian practice are under a tyrannical City, have no such hope: not extant: the Government of Verres the Roman in Sicil, that it is lively fet out by flacken the reins, untill they be pulled out Tully, may ferve to inform us, what was the of her hands, and her own mouth receive demeanour of these Punick Rulers, who stood the bridle of a more mightier Chariotter. in fear of no such condemnation, as Vares This is wofull: yet their present sufferings underwent. By prosecuting this discourse, make them less mindfull of the future. New I might inferr a more general proposition; flies, and hungry ones, fall upon the same That a City cannot govern her subject Profore, out of which others had already sucked vinces so mildly as a King: but it is enough their fill. A new Governour comes yearly to have shewed, That the tyranny of a City among them, attended by all his poor kin- is far more intolerable, than that of any Suitable were obliced by mutual pledges. It is disputa- the Castle of Loches unto his dying day. ble. I confess, whether these African and The like inconvenience is found, in using Spanish hirelings could properly be termed the help of forrain Auxiliaries. We see, Mercenaries: for they were subject unto that when the Emperour of Constantinople Carthage, and carried into the field, not on- had hired ten thousand Turks against his ly by reward, but by duty. Yet seeing their neighbour Princes; he could never, either by by reward, but by duty. Let being their heighbour Frinces; he could never, either duty was no better than enforced, and that it was not any love to the State, but meer the Sea upon Afia fide; which gave bedefite of gain, that made them fight; I will ginning to the Christian servitude, that soon ont nicely stand upon propriety of a word, but hold them, as Polybius also doth, no bet-funder, sought aid of the great Demetrius: but ter than Mercenaries.

t. III.

Souldiers, and forrain Auxiliaries.

places and Countries, whereinto they are two kingdoms.

Sutable to the cruelty of fuch Lords, is fudden, and forced her to put her felf the hatred of their subjects: and again, su- into the hands of the King of Aragon. table to the hatred of the subjects, is the Like unto his father was Francu Sforza, the jealousie of their Lords. Hence it followed, first of that race, Duke of Millan; who being that, in wars abroad, the Carthaginians durst entertained by the Millanois, forced them to use the service of African Souldiers; in Africk become his slaves, even with the very same ir felf they had rather be beholding to army which themselves had levied for their others, that were farther fetcht. For the own defence. But Lodowick sforza, the fon of fame purpose did Hannibal, in the second this Francis by the just judgement of God. Punick war, thift his Mercenaries out of their was made a memorable example unto posteown Countries; Ut Afri in Hispania, Hispa-rity, in loling his whole elfate by the trea-tions, in Africa, melior procul ab dono futurus chery of such faithless Mercenaries, as his aterg, miles, velut matuis pignoribus obligati own Father had been. For having waged an fipendia facerent; that the Africans might army of Switzers, and committed his Durchy, Groe in Spain, the Spaniards in Africk, being together with his person, into their hands he each of them like to prove the better Souldiers, was by them delivered up unto his enemy the farther they were from home, as if they the French King, by whom he was inclosed in Demetrius, being entred into his Kingdom, flew the same Alexander, who had invited him, and made himfelf King of Macedon. Syracon the Turk was called into Egypt by The dangers growing from the use of mercenary Sanar Soldan, against his opposite: but this Turk did fettle himfelf fo furely in Egypt. that Saladine his successor became Lord HE extream danger, growing from the thereof; and of all the holy Land, foon afimployment of such Souldiers, is well ter. What need we look about for exam-Imprograme to fuch solutions, is well fer. What need we look about for examinating the property of the propert drawn; as being held by no other bond, Against all this, may be alledged the than their own commodity. Yea, that which good success of the United Provinces of the is most fearful among fuch hirelings, is, that Netherlands, using none other than fuch they have often, and in time of greatest ex- kind of Souldiers, in their late war. Indeed tremity, not only refused to fight, in their these Low-Countreys have many goodly and defence, who have entertained them, but re- ftrong Cities, filled with Inhabitants that are volted unto the contrary part; to the utter wealthy, industrious, and valiant in their rune of those Princes and States that have kind. They are stout Sea-men, and therein is trusted them. Those mercenaries (saith Ma-their excellency; neither are they bad at chiave!) which filled all Italy when Charls the the defence of a place well fortified: but in eighth of France did pass the Alpes, were open field they have seldom been able to the cause that the said French King won the stand against the spaniard. Necessity there-Realm of Naples with his Buckler without a fore compelled them to feek help abroad: Sword. Notable was the example of Sforza and the like necessity made them forbear to the Father of Francis Sforza, Duke of Mil- arm any great numbers of their own. For, lan; who being entertained by Queen Joan with money raised by their Trade, they of Naples, abandoned her fervice on the maintained the War: and therefore could, multitude into good liking of their present cise tyranny? Why did the Athenians?

ill foare unto the Pike and Musket, those Soveraignty of their Country, which they hands, that were of more use in helping to offered, yet being provoked by the spafill the common purse. Yet what of this? wiard their enemy, pursued him with contithey fped well. Surely they fped as ill as might be, whilest they had none other than in Scotland, a King too just and wise (though mercenary Souldiers. Many fruitless at not ingaged in any quarrel) either to make mercenary sounders. Many irruners are not magacian any quarter) either to make tempts, made by the Prince of Orcoge, can profit of his neighbours miferies, or to help witnefs it: and that brave Commander Count Lodowick of Nassau, felt, to his grief, own inheritance: then might the Nasherin his retrait from Graningham; when, in landers very fafely repole confidence in the the very instant that required their service forces of these their Neighbour Countries. in fight, his Mercenaries cried out aloud for The Souldiers that came unto them from money, and so ran away. This was not the hence, were (to omit any other commendaonly time, when the hired Souldiers of the tions) not only regardfull of the pay that States, have either fought to hide their co- they should receive, but well affected unto wardize under a shew of greedines; or at the cause that they took in hand : or, if any leaft, by meer covetousness, have ruined in were cold in his devotion, unto the fide one hour, the labour of many moneths. I whereon he fought, yet was he kept in or will not fland to prove this by many examder, by remembrance of his own home, where the English would have rewarded him Neither would I touch the honour of Monfeur the Duke of Anjou, brother to the rupted by the Spaniard. They were there-French King; fave that it is folly to conceal fore trufted with the cultody of Cities; they what all the world knows. He that would were held as friends, and patrons; the neceflay open the danger of forraign Auxiliaries, needeth no better pattern. It is commonly the pay-day came, with lendings, and other found, that such Aiders make themselves helps, as well as the ability of the States could Lords over tho'e, to whom they lend their permit. When three fuch Princes, reigning fuccour: but where shall we meet with such at one time, shall agree so well, to maintain another as this Monstear, who, for his pro-tection promised, being rewarded with the furprised and wone; the death of the Count the enemy against whom they are entertained. St. Aignan, who fell over the wall, and the Cannon of the City, discharged against his own troops, informed him better what had hapned; shewing, that they were his own French who stood in need of the pity. Then gave them assurance to use the service of their was his feigned passion changed into a very bitter anguish of mind, wherein, smiting his breaft, and wringing his hands, he exclaimed, Helas, mon dien, que veux tu faire de moy? Alas, my God, what wilt thou do with me? So, the affairs of the Netberlands will not TEre it may be demanded, whether taker with them in the same danger; when ences above rehearsed? The answer is, that the Queen of England refused to accept the their Armies were compounded usually of

816

Lordship of the Countrey, made it his first bour-Country of the same Religion, and to work, to thrust by violence a galling yoak which they all are lovingly affected: then upon the peoples ncck? Well, he lived to may fuch a Country be fecure of her Auxilirepent it, with grief enough. Even whileft aries, and quietly intend her Trade, or other he was counterfeiting unto those about business, in hope of like success. But these cirhim, that were ignorant of his plot, an ima- cumftances meet fo seldom, as it may well nini, that were ignorant or inspirot, an ima-ginary forrow for the poor Burghers of Anti-merpe, as verily believing the Town to be raign auxiliary forces are no less dangerous, than

t. IIII.

gave them affurance to use the service of their own Subjects in their Wars. That in mans nature there is an affection breeding tyranny, which hindereth the use and benefit of the like moderation.

ferve to prove, that there is little danger in also the Romans were not compelled using Mercenary Souldiers, or the help of to use the service of other Souldiers in their forraign Auxiliaries. This notwithstanding, many great wars, but performed all by their own Citizens? for if it were their manner sources the search of the search of Sources and Sources of Sources fought help of the Englift, Scots, and French: to arm their own subjects, how hapned it, wherein they did wifely, and prospered that they feared no rebellion? if strangers, For when there was in France a King, par- how then could they avoid the inconvenicasion required, some companies of Cam- nours, without impairing their Majesty tanes, Hetrurians, Samnites, or other of their thereby. The fum of all is; they had, of inbictis, as were either interested in the their own, a strong army; they doubled it quartel, or might best be trusted. They had, by adjoyning thereunto the Latines; and about their times, (though seldom they did they further increased it, as need required, imploy fo many) ten Roman Legions; a good with other help of their own subjects: all. firength, if all other help had been wanting; or the most of their followers, accounting which served to keep in good order their the prosperity of Rome to be the common fubiects, that were alwaies fewer in the army good. than themselves. As for the Latines, if confanguinity were not a sufficient obligation; ing so effectual, in affuring the people unto vet many priviledges and immunities, which their Lords, and consequently in the estathey injoyed, made them affured unto the blithment or inlargement of Dominion: it State of Rome: under which they lived al- may feem strange, that the practice of Tvmost at liberty, as being bound to little else, ranny, whose effects are contrary, hath been how easie soever, seems troublesome to the may be said of all Vice and Irregularity, neck that hath been accustomed to freedom. whatsoever. For it is less difficult, (who-Therefore many people of Italy have taken foever think otherwise) and more fafe, to occasion of several advantages, to deliver keep the way of Justice and Honesty, than themselves from the Roman subjection. But to turn aside from it ; yet commonly our nished, and the people by degrees have ob- seduceth our reason; the same unruly appe-

with their own present estate. Wherefore temper, and the vehemency of private hait is no marvel, that Petellia, a City of the tred among them? Doubtles, we must be Brations in Italy, choic rather to endure all extremity of war, than, upon any condition, vice diffinct from others. A Man, we know, therefore willed them to look to their own are common likewise unto brute beasts;

their own Citizens, and of the Latines in good, as having been faithful to the utmost. equal number: to which they added, as oc- Such love purchased these mild Gover-

The moderate use of soveraign power bethan to serve it in war. It is true, that a yoke so common in all ages. The like, I know. fill they have been reclaimed by war, the paffions do lead us into by paths. But where Authors of rebellion have sharply been pulling, Anger, Fear, or any the like Affection, tained such liberty, as made them esteem tite, either bringeth with it an excuse, or, at none otherwise of Rome, than as the com- least-wise, taketh away all cause of wonder. mon City of all Italy. Yea, in process of In tyranny it is not so: for as much as we time it was granted unto many Cities, and can hardly descrythe passion, that is of force those far off removed, even to Tarfis in Cili- to infinuate it felf into the whole tenour of cia, where St. Paul was born, that all the a Government. It must be confessed, that Burgeffes should be free of Rome it felf. This lawless defires have bred many Tyrants: favour was conferred absolutely upon some; yet so that these desires have seldome been upon some, with restraint of giving voice in hereditary, or long-lasting; but have ended election of Magistrates, or with other such commonly with the Tyrants life, sometimes limitation as was thought fit. Hereunto before his death; by which means the gomay be added, that it was their manner, af vernment hath been reduced to a better ter a great conquest, to release unto their form. In such cases, the saying of Aristotle Aris, pal. new subjects half of their tribute which they holds, That tyrannies are of a short continual. 5 is 128 had been wont to pay to their former ance. But this doth not satisfie the question Lords, which was a ready way to bring the in hand. Why did the Carthaginians exer-

condition; when the review of harder times Why have many other Cities done the like? palt, should rather teach them to fear a re- If in respect of their general good; how lapfe, than to hope for better in the future, could they be ignorant, that this was an ill by feeking innovation. Neither would it be course for the safety of the Weal publick? forgotten, as a special note of the Romans If they were led hereunto by any affection; good Government, That when some, for what was that affection wherein so many their well-deserving, have had the offer to thousand Citizens, divided and subdivided be made Citizens of Rome, they have refused within themselves by factions, did all conit, and held themselves better contented curr, notwithstanding the much diversity of toforsake the Romans; even when the Ro- is Animal politicum, apt even by Nature, to mans themselves had confessed, that they command or to obey; every one in his prowere unable to help these their subjects, and per degree. Other desires of Mankind.

but the desire of rule belongeth unto the this Vice, as a thing unknown, is without a nobler part of reason; whereunto is also name. Tyranny is more bold, and seareth answerable an aptness to yield obedience. not to be known, but would be reputed ho-Now as hunger and thirst are given by na- nourable: for it is prosperum & fælix selun. ture not only to Man and Beast, but unto all a fortunate mischief, as long as it can subsist. forts of Vegetables, for the sustentation of There is no reward or bonour (faith Peter their life: as Fear, Anger, Lust, and other Charron) affigned unto those, that know how affections are likewise natural, in conveni- to increase, or preserve humane nature: all ent measure, both unto Mankind, and to all honours, greatness, riches, dignities, Empires, Creatures that have sense, for the shunning triumphs, trophees, are appointed for those, that or repelling of harm, and seeking after that know how to afflict, trouble, or desiroy it. Celar which is requifite: even to is this defire of and Alexander, have un-made and flain. ruling or obeying, ingraffed by Nature in each of them, more than a million of men: the race of Man, and in Man only as a rea- but they made none, nor left none behind Sonable creature, for the ordering of his life, them. Such is the errour of Mans judgein a civil form of Justice. All these in-bred ment in valuing things according to the qualities are good and useful. Nevertheless, common opinion. But the true name of Hunger and Thirst are the Parents of Glut- Tyranny, when it grows to ripeness, is none tony and Drunkenness, which, in reproach, other than Feritie: the same that Aristotle are called beaftly, by an unproper term : faith to be worfe than any vice. It exceedeth fince they grow from appetites, found in less indeed all other vices, isluing from the pafworthy creatures than beasts, and are yet sions incident both to Man and Beast; no not fo common in beafts, as in men. The lefs, than Perjury, Murder, Treason, and the effects of Anger, and of such other Passions like horrible crimes, exceed in villany, the as descend no lower than unto brute beasts, faults of Gluttony and Drunkenness, that are held less vile; and perhaps not without grow from more ignoble appetites. Hereof good reason: yet are the more pernicious. Seiron, Procrustes, and Pityocamptes, that But as no corruption is worse by sharper used their bodily force to the destruction Laws, as being in general more horrible, and of Mankind, are not better examples, than punished more grievously, than of that Phalaris, Dionysius, and Agathocles, whose which is best; there is not any passion, that mischievous heads were assisted by the nourisheth a vice more hurtful unto Man-hands of detestable Ruffians. The same kind, than that which iffueth from the most barbarous desire of Lordship, transported noble root, even the depraved Affection of those old examples of Feritie, and these lat-Ruling. Hence arise those two great mister Tyrants, beyond the bounds of reachiefs, of which hath been an old question son : neither of them knew the use of Rule, in dispute, whether be the worse; That all nor the difference between Freemen and things, or that nothing should be lawful. Of slaves. their, a dull spirit and overloaden by for- The rule of the husband over the wife, tune with power, whereof it is not capable, and of Parents over their children, is natuoccasioneth the one; the other proceedeth ral, and appointed by God himself; so that from a contrary diftemper, whose vehemen- it is alwayes, and simply, allowable and cy the bounds of Reason cannot limit. Un-good. The former of these, is as the doder the extremity of either, no Country is minion of Reason over Appetite; the latter able to subsist, yet the defective dulness, that is the whole authority, which one Freeman permitteth any thing, will also permit the can have over another. The rule of a King execution of Law, to which meer necessity is no more, nor none other, than of a comdoth enforce the ordinary Magistrate; mon Father over his whole Country; which whereas Tyranny is more active, and pleasing the that knows what the power of a Father eth it felf in the excess, with a false colour of is, or ought to be, knows to be enough. Justice. Examples of stupidity, and unapt- But there is a greater and more Masterly ness to rule, are not very frequent, though rule, which God gave unto Adam, when he for this quality troubles not it felf in feeking and over the fowl of the air; and every living Empire; or it by some errour of fortune, it thing that moveth upon the earth: which also encounter therewithall, (as when Claudius, he continued unto Noah and his children, of Rome) some friend, or else a wife, is not shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon and some of them, to bodies wanting sense: cruelty doth help to shadow. Therefore fuch natures are every where to be found : faid; Have dominion over the fifth of the Sea, Gazzi hiding himself in a corner, found the Empire saying, The fear of you, and the dread of you, Graph wanting to supply the defect, which also every foul of the air, upon all that mouth upon the earth, and upon all the fifthes of the to Ariftotles doctrine, to be naturally of beafts. Therefore when Commiferation flaves.

by the captivity of the Midianitifo girls, uphold civil rule, are ( though more noble ) which were made bond-flaves, and the San not fo simply needful, unto the sustentiation 629, 25, ancient : for Noah laid this curfe upon Cana- which notwithstanding are the lowest in de-

to crived that think fo. Saint Paul defired the thould increase, by access of those, that are liberty of Onesimus, whom he had won unto weary of their own more painful condition. Christ: vet wrote for this unto Philemon by This may suffice to prove, that in Mankind way of request, craving it as a benefit, not urging it as a duty. Agreeable hereto is desire of absolute dominion: whereunto the the direction, which the same Saint Paul general custom of Nations doth subscribe; Ca. 7 giveth unto servants : Let every man abide in together with the pleasure which most men in the same calling wherein he was called: art take in flatterers, that are the basest of thon called, being a feroant? care not for it, but flaves.

if then maift be made free, use it rather. It is true, that Christan Religion hath procured how Tyranny hath been so rise in all ages, liberty unto many; not only in regard of and practifed, not only in the fingle rule of piety, but for that the Christian Masters some victous Prince, but ever by consent of stood in fear of being discovered by their whole Cities and Estates: since other vices flaves, unto the perfecutors of Religion. Ma- have likewise gotten head, and born a genehomet likewise, by giving liberty to his fol- ral sway notwithstanding that the way of lowers, drew many unto his impiety: but vertue be more honourable, and commodibondage, I cannot tell; fave that by the that the most noble affections should not be practice of the Turks and Moors, it feems he disordered? in the government of wife and

But whether this kind of dominion be Sea: into your hands are they delivered. lawful, or not; Ariftotle hath well proved. He who gave this dominion unto Man, that it is natural. And certainly, we find did give also an aptitude to use it. The not such a latitude of difference in any creaexecution of this power hath fince ex- ture, as in the nature of man; wherein ( to rended it felf, over a very great part omit the infinite distance in estate of the of Mankind. There are indeed no small Elect and Reprobate ) the wifest excel the numbers of men, whose disability to go- most foolish, by far greater degree, than the vern themselves, proves them, according most foolish of men doth surpass the wifest hath given way to reason, we shall find, that Yet find I not in Scripture any warrant nature is the ground even of Masterly poto oppress men with bondage : unless the wer, and of service obedience, which is therelawfulness thereof be sufficiently intimated, to correspondent. But it may be truly said. where it is faid, That a man shall not be pu- that some Countries have subsisted long nished for the death of a servant; whom he without the use of any servility; as also it is hath flain by correction, if the fervant live a true, that some Countries have not the use of day or two, because he is his money: or else any tame Cattel. Indeed the affections which duary had a part of them for the Lords tri- either of our kind, as are Luft, and the like; bute. Doubtless the custom hath been very or of every one, as are Hunger and thirst; as, that he should be a fervant of fervants;

gree. But where most vile and fervile disposite and shraham had of Pharaoh, among other gifts, men-fervants and maid-fervants, which were none other than slaves. Christian wonder, how the dangerous toil of Sea-far-Religion is faid to have abrogated this old ing men can find enough to undertake them, kind of fervility: but furely they are de- than how the fwarm of idle vagabonds whether he forbade it, as unlawful, unto his ous. Few there are that have used well the fedators, to hold one another of them in inferiour Passions; how then can we expect, did not. In England we had many bond-children, some are utterly careless, and corfervants, untill the time of our last civil rupt all by their dull connivency: others, by wars; and I think that the Laws concern- masterly rigour, hold their own blood uning Villenage are still in force, of which der condition of flavery. To be a good Gothe latest are the sharpest. And now, since vernour is a rare commendation: and to preflaves were made free, which were of fer the Weal publick above all respects great use and service, there are grown up whatsoever, is the Vertue justly termed Hea rabble of Rogues, Cutpurfes, and other roical. Of this Vertue many ages afford not the like trades; flaves in Nature, though not many examples. Hettor is named by Aristotle ; as one of them; and defervedly, if this praise ill spare unto the Pike and Musket, those Soveraignty of their Country, which they hands, that were of more use in helping to offered, yet being provoked by the spafill the common purse. Yet what of this? miard their enemy, pursued him with contithey sped well. Surely they sped as ill as nual war; when the heir of England reigned might be, whilest they had none other than in Scotland, a King too just and wife (though mercenary Souldiers. Many fruitless at not ingaged in any quarrel) either to make tempts, made by the Prince of Orenge, can profit of his neighbours miseries, or to help witness it: and that brave Commander those that had attempted the conquest of his Count Lodowick of Nassau, felt, to his grief, own inheritance: then might the Netherin his retrait from Graningham; when, in landers very fafely repose confidence in the the very instant that required their service forces of these their Neighbour Countries. in fight, his Mercenaries cried out aloud for The Souldiers that came unto them from money, and so ran away. This was not the hence, were (to omit any other commendaonly time, when the hired Souldiers of the tions) not only regardfull of the pay that States, have either fought to hide their co- they should receive, but well affected unto wardize under a shew of greediness; or at the cause that they took in hand : or, if any least, by meer covetousness, have ruined in were cold in his devotion, unto the fide one hour, the labour of many moneths. I whereon he fought, yet was he kept in orwill not stand to prove this by many exam- der, by remembrance of his own home. ples: for they themselves will not deny it. where the English would have rewarded him Neither would I touch the honour of Mon- with death, if that his faith had been corfeur the Duke of Anjon, brother to the rupted by the Spaniard. They were there-French King ; fave that it is folly to conceal fore trufted with the custody of Cities ; they what all the world knows. He that would were held as friends, and patrons; the necesfurprised and wone; the death of the Count the enemy against whom they are entertained. St. Aignan, who fell over the wall, and the Cannon of the City, discharged against his own troops, informed him better what had hapned; thewing, that they were his own That the moderate government of the Romans, French who stood in need of the pity. Then was his feigned passion changed into a very bitter anguish of mind, wherein, smiting his breast, and wringing his hands, he exclaimed, Helas, mon dien, que veux tu faire de moy? Alas, my God, what wilt thou do with me? So, the affairs of the Netherlands will not ferve to prove, that there is little danger in also the Romans were not compelled using Mercenary Souldiers, or the help of to use the service of other Souldiers in their forraign Auxiliaries. This notwithstanding, many great wars, but performed all by their they were obedient unto necessity, and own Citizens? for if it were their manner fought help of the English, Scots, and French: to arm their own subjects, how hapned it, For when there was in France a King, par- how then could they avoid the inconvenitaker with them in the same danger; when ences above rehearsed? The answer is, that the Queen of England refused to accept the their Armies were compounded usually of lay open the danger of forraign Auxiliaries, fity of the poorer fort was relieved, before needeth no better pattern. It is commonly the pay-day came, with lendings, and other found, that fuch Aiders make themselves helps, as well as the ability of the States could Lords over tho'e, to whom they lend their permit. When three such Princes, reigning fuccour: but where shall we meet with such at one time, shall agree so well, to maintain another as this Monfigur, who, for his pro-tection promifed, being rewarded with the at the least to feeming) to them all, a Neigh-Lordship of the Country, made it his first bour-Country of the same Religion, and to work, to thruft by violence a galling yoak which they all are lovingly affected: then upon the peoples neck? Well, he lived to may fuch a Country be fecure of her Auxilirepent it, with grief enough. Even whilest aries, and quietly intend her Trade, or other he was counterfeiting unto those about business, in hope of like success. But these cirhim, that were ignorant of his plot, an ima- cumstances meet so seldom, as it may well ginary forrow for the poor Burghers of Ant- hold true in general: That mercenary and forwerpe, as verily believing the Town to be raign auxiliary forces are no lest dangerous, than

816

t. IIII.

gave them assurance to use the service of their own Subjects in their Wars. That in mans nature there is an affection breeding tyranny, which bindereth the use and benefit of the like moderation.

wherein they did wifely, and prospered that they feared no rebellion? if strangers, fubjects, that were alwaies fewer in the army good. than themselves. As for the Latines, if confanguinity were not a sufficient obligation; ing so effectual, in affuring the people unto yet many priviledges and immunities, which their Lords, and confequently in the estathey injoyed, made them affured unto the State of Rome: under which they lived alhow easie soever, seems troublesome to the may be said of all Vice and Irregularity, neck that hath been accustomed to freedom. whatsoever. For it is less difficult, (who-Therefore many people of Italy have taken foever think otherwife) and more fafe, to occasion of several advantages, to deliver keep the way of Justice and Honesty, than themselves from the Roman Subjection. But to turn aside from it ; yet commonly our still they have been reclaimed by war, the passions do lead us into by-paths. But where Authors of rebellion have sharply been pu- Lust, Anger, Fear, or any the like Affection. nished, and the people by degrees have ob- seduceth our reason; the same unruly appetained fuch liberty, as made them efteem tite, either bringeth with it an excuse, or, at none otherwise of Rome, than as the com-least-wise, taketh away all cause of wonder. mon City of all Italy. Yea, in process of In tyranny it is not so: for as much as we time it was granted unto many Cities, and can hardly descrythe passion, that is offorce those far off removed, even to Tarfus in Cili- to infinuate it felf into the whole tenour of cia, where St. Paul was born, that all the a Government. It must be confessed, that Burgeffes should be free of Rome it felf. This lawless defires have bred many Tyrants: favour was conferred absolutely upon some; yet so that these desires have seldome been upon some, with restraint of giving voice in hereditary, or long-lasting; but have ended election of Magistrates, or with other such commonly with the Tyrants life, sometimes limitation as was thought fit. Hereunto before his death; by which means the gomay be added, that it was their manner, af vernment hath been reduced to a better had been wont to pay to their former ance. But this doth not fatisfie the question Lords, which was a ready way to bring the in hand. Why did the Carthaginians exermultitude into good liking of their present cise tyranny? Why did the Athenians? condition ; when the review of harder times Why have many other Cities done the like? palt, should rather teach them to fear a re- If in respect of their general good; how lapfe, than to hope for better in the future, could they be ignorant, that this was an ill by feeking innovation. Neither would it be course for the safety of the Weal publick? forgotten, as a special note of the Romans If they were led hereunto by any affection; good Government, That when some, for what was that affection wherein so many their well-descrying, have had the offer to thousand Citizens, divided and subdivided be made Citizens of Rome, they have refused within themselves by factions, did all conit, and held themselves better contented curr, notwithstanding the much divertity of with their own prefent estate. Wherefore temper, and the vehemency of private hatis no marvel, that Petellia, a City of the tred among them > Doubtles, we mult be Brutions in Italy, chose rather to endure all fain to say, That Tyranny is, by it self, a extremity of war, than, upon any condition, vice distinct from others. A Man, we know, to for sake the Romans; even when the Ro- is Animal politicum, apt even by Nature, to mans themselves had confessed, that they command or to obey; every one in his pro-

their own Citizens, and of the Latines in good, as having been faithful to the utmost. equal number: to which they added, as oc- Such love purchased these mild Govercalion required, fome companies of Cam- nours, without impairing their Majette panes, Hetrurians, Samnites, or other of their thereby. The fum of all is; they had, or inbjects, as were either interested in the their own, a strong army; they doubled it quarrel, or might best be trusted. They had, by adjoyning thereunto the Latines; and about these times, (though seldom they did they further increased it, as need required. imploy fo many) ten Roman Legions; a good with other help of their own subjects: all. strength, if all other help had been wanting; or the most of their followers, accounting which ferved to keep in good order their the prosperity of Rome to be the common The moderate use of soveraign power be-bliffment or inlargement of Dominion: it may feem strange, that the practice of Tymost at liberty, as being bound to little else, ranny, whose effects are contrary, hath been than to serve it in war. It is true, that a yoke so common in all ages. The like, I know, ter a great conquest, to release unto their form. In such cases, the saying of Aristotle Arist. pol. new subjects half of their tribute which they holds, That tyrannies are of a fort continu-1.5. a 12 were unable to help these their subjects, and per degree. Other desires of Mankind, therefore willed them to look to their own are common likewife unto brute beafts;

in Law.

and some of them, to bodies wanting sense: cruelty doth help to shadow. Therefore but the defire of rule belongeth unto the this Vice, as a thing unknown, is without a nobler part of reason; whereunto is also name. Tyranny is more bold, and feareth answerable an aptness to yield obedience. not to be known, but would be reputed ho-Now as hunger and thirst are given by na- nourable : for it is prosperum & falix scelus. ture not only to Man and Beaft, but unto all a fortunate mijebief, as long as it can fubfift. forts of Vegetables, for the fultentation of There is no remard or bonour (faith Peter their life: as Fear, Anger, Luft, and other Charron) affigned unto those, that know hom affections are likewife natural, in conveni- to increase, or preserve humane nature : all ent measure, both unto Mankind, and to all bonours, greatness, riches, dignities, Empires, Creatures that have fenfe, for the shunning triumphs, trophecs, are appointed for those, that or repelling of harm, and feeking after that know how to afflict, trouble, or destroy it. Cefar which is requifite: even so is this desire of and Alexander, have un-made and flain. ruling or obeying, ingraffed by Nature in each of them, more than a million of men: the race of Man, and in Man only as a rea- but they made none, nor left none behind fonable creature, for the ordering of his life, them. Such is the errour of Mans judgein a civil form of Justice. All these in-bred ment in valuing things according to the qualities are good and useful. Nevertheless, common opinion. But the true name of Hunger and I hirst are the Parents of Glut-Tyranny, when it grows to ripeness, is none tony and Drunkenne's, which, in reproach, other than Feritie: the same that Ariftotle are called beaftly, by an unproper term : faith to be worse than any vice. It exceedeth fince they grow from appetites, found in less indeed all other vices, issuing from the pasworthy creatures than beafts, and are yet fions incident both to Man and Beaft; no not fo common in beafts, as in men. The less, than Perjury, Murder, Treason, and the effects of Anger, and of fuch other Pallions like horrible crimes, exceed in villany, the as descend no lower than unto brute beasts, faults of Gluttony and Drunkenness, that are held less vile; and perhaps not without grow from more ignoble appetites. Hereof good reason : yet are the more pernicious. Sciron, Procrustes, and Pityocamptes, that But as no corruption is worse by sharper used their bodily force to the destruction Laws, as being in general more horrible, and of Mankind, are not better examples, than punished more grievously, than of that Phalaris, Dionysius, and Agathocles, whose which is belt; there is not any passion, that mischievous heads were assisted by the nourisheth a vice more hurtful unto Man-hands of detestable Ruffians. The same kind, than that which iffueth from the most barbarous desire of Lordship, transported noble root, even the depraved Affection of those old examples of Feritie, and these lat-Ruling. Hence arise those two great mis-chiefs, of which hath been an old question fon : neither of them knew the use of Rule, in dispute, whether be the worse; That all nor the difference between Freemen and things, or that nothing should be lawful. Of slaves. these, a dull spirit and overloaden by for- The rule of the husband over the wife, tune with power, whereof it is not capable, and of Parents over their children, is natu-occasioneth the one; the other proceedeth ral, and appointed by God himself; so that from a contrary diftemper, whose vehemen- it is alwayes, and fimply, allowable and cy the bounds of Reason cannot limit. Un-good. The former of these, is as the doder the extremity of either, no Country is minion of Reason over Appetite; the latter able to subsist, yet the desective dulness, that is the whole authority, which one Freeman permitteth any thing, will also permit the can have over another. The rule of a King execution of Law, to which meer necessity is no more, nor none other, than of a comdoth enforce the ordinary Magistrate; mon Father over his whole Country: which whereas Tyranny is more active, and pleas- he that knows what the power of a Father eth it felf in the excess, with a falle colour of is, or ought to be, knows to be enough. Justice. Examples of stupidity, and unapt- But there is a greater and more Masterly ness to rule, are not very frequent, though rule, which God gave unto Adam, when he fuch natures are every where to be found : faid; Have dominion over the fifth of the Sea, Ganth for this quality troubles not it felf in feeking and over the fowl of the air, and every living Empire; or it by some errour of fortune, it thing that moveth upon the earth: which also encounter therewithall, (as when Claudius, he continued unto Noah and his children, hiding himself in a corner, found the Empire saying, The fear of you, and the dread of you, Genga of Rome) some friend, or else a wife, is not shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon wanting to supply the defect, which also every foul of the air, upon all that moveth execution of this power hath fince ex-ture, as in the nature of man; wherein (to tended it self, over a very great part omit the infinite distance in estate of the of Mankind. There are indeed no small Elect and Reprobate) the wifest excel the numbers of men, whose disability to go-most foolish, by far greater degree, than the vern themselves, proves them, according most foolish of men doth surpass the wisest to Ariftotles doctrine, to be naturally of beafts. Therefore when Commiscration flaves. Yet find I not in Scripture any warrant nature is the ground even of Masterly poto oppress men with bondage: unless the wer, and of service obedience, which is therelawfulness thereof be sufficiently intimated, to correspondent. But it may be truly said. where it is said, That a man shall not be pu- that some Countries have subsisted long nished for the death of a servant; whom he without the use of any servility; as also it is hath slain by correction, if the servant live a true, that some Countries have not the use of fal. i. day or two, because he is his money: or else any tame Cattel. Indeed the affections which by the captivity of the Midianitish girls, uphold civil rule, are ( though more noble ) Nama which were made bond-flaves, and the San not fo simply needful, unto the sustentation chuary had a part of them for the Lords tri- either of our kind, as are Luft, and the like; bute. Doubtles the custom hath been very or of every one, as are Luir, and the like; or of every one, as are Hunger and thirst; one, as, that he should be a servant of servants; gree. But where most vile and service dispositions have liberty to show themselves begings, men-servants and maid-servants, which were none other than flaves. Christian wonder, how the dangerous toil of Sea-far-Religion is said to have abrogated this old ing men can find enough to undertake them, kind of fervility: but furely they are de-than how the fwarm of idle vagabonds received that think fo. Saint Paul defired the should increase, by access of those, that are liberty of Onessmus, whom he had won unto weary of their own more painful condition. Therety of Onesimus, whom he had won unto Christ: yet wrote for this unto Philemon by way of request, craving it as a benesit, not urging it as a duty. Agreeable hereto is the direction, which the same Saint Paul the direction, which the same Saint Paul general custom of Nations doth subscribe; is a giveth unto servants: Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called: art take in flatterers, that are the bases of stages. thon called, being a servant ? care not for it, but flaves. if shou maift be made free, use it rather. It is This being so, we find no cause to marvel, true, that Christan Religion hath procured how Tyranny hath been so rife in all ages. liberty unto many; not only in regard of and practifed, not only in the fingle rule of piety, but for that the Christian Masters some vicious Prince, but ever by consent of flood in fear of being discovered by their whole Cities and Estates: since other vices flaves, unto the persecutors of Religion. Ma- have likewise gotten head, and born a genehomel likewife, by giving liberty to his fol- ral fway ,notwithstanding that the way of lowers, drew many unto his impiety: but vertue be more honourable, and commodiwhether he forbade it, as unlawful, unto his ous. Few there are that have used well the fectators, to hold one another of them in inferiour Passions: how then can we expect, bondage, I cannot tell; fave that by the that the most noble affections should not be practice of the Turks and Moors, it feems he difordered? in the government of wife and did not. In England we had many bond-children, some are utterly careless, and corfervants, untill the time of our last civil rupt all by their dull connivency: others, by wars; and I think that the Laws concern- masterly rigour, hold their own blood uning Villenage are still in force, of which der condition of flavery. To be a good Gothe latest are the sharpest. And now, fince vernour is a rare commendation: and to pre-

upon the earth, and upon all the fifthes of the But whether this kind of dominion be Sea: into your hands are they delivered. lawful, or not; Ariftotle hath well proved, He who gave this dominion unto Man, that it is natural. And certainly, we find did give also an aptitude to use it. The not such a latitude of difference in any creahath given way to reason, we shall find, that flaves were made free, which were of fer the Weal publick above all respects great use and service, there are grown up whatsoever, is the Vertue justly termed Hea rabble of Rogues, Cutpurfes, and other roical. Of this Vertue many ages afford not thelike trades; flaves in Nature, thoughnot many examples. Hedor is named by Ariftotle as one of them; and deservedly, if this praise be due to extraordinary height of fortitude, fuch a King is nevertheless a man, must dve. used in defence of a mans own Country, and may err: yet wisdome and fame shall But if we consider, that a love of the general fet him free, from error, and from death. good cannot be perfect, without reference both with and without the help of time. unto the fountain of all goodness: we shall One thing I may not omit, as a singular befind, that no moral vertue-how great foever, nefit (though there be many other befides can by it felf, deferve the commendation of redounding unto this King, as the fruit of his. more than Vertue, as the Heroical doth. goodness, ) The people that live under a Wherefore we mult fearch the Scriptures, pleafant yoke, are not only loving to their for patterns hereof; fuch as David, Josaphat, Soveraign Lord, but free of courage; and and tolias were. Of Christian Kings, if there no greater in muster of men, than of stout were many fuch, the world would foon be fighters, if need require: whereas on the happy. It is not my purpose to wrong the contrary, he that ruleth as over slaves, shall worth of any by denying the praise where it be attended in time of necessity, by slavish is due, or by preferring a less excellent. But minds, neither loving his person, nor rehe that can find a King religious, and garding his or their own honour. Cowards zealous in Gods cause, without enforcement, may be furious, and slaves outragious, for a either of advertity, or of some regard of time: but among spirits that have once State a procurer of general peace and vielded unto flavery, univerfally it is found nishing his Judges to do justice; by the vi- into bondage. gorous influence of whose Government, civility is infused, even into those places, that seasonably have spoken, in the general dishave been the dens of favage Robbers and course of Government: but where so lively Cut-throat; one that hath quite abolished a an example of the calamity following a tyflavish Brebon Law, by which a whole Nati- rannical rule, and the use of Mercenaries, on of his subjects were held in bondage; and thereupon depending, did offer it self, as is one, whose higher vertue and wisdom doth this present business of the Carthaginians; I make the praise not only of Nobility and thought that the note would be more effeother ornaments, but of abstinence from the ctual, than being barely delivered, as out of blood, the wives, and the goods of those a common place. that are under his power, together with a world of chief commendations belonging unto some good Princes, to appear less regardable: he, I fay, that can find fuch a King, findeth an example, worthy to add unto How the mar against the Mercenaries was divertue an honourable title, if it were formerly wanting. Under fuch a King, it is likely, by Gods blefling, that a Land shall flourish, with increase of Trade, in Countries before unknown; that Civility and Religion shall be propagated, into barbarous and heathen DEing now to return unto those Merce-Countries; and that the happiness of his subjects, shall cause the Nations far off remov- gressed, I cannot readily find, by what ed to wish him their Soveraign. I need not name henceforth I should call them. They add hereunto, that all the actions of fuch a are no longer in pay with the Carthagini-King, even his bodily exercises, do pertake ans; neither care they to pretend, that of vertue; fince all things tending to the they feek their wages already due; fothat perfervation of his life and health, or to the they are neither Mercenaries, nor Mutiners. mollifying of his cares, ( who fixing his con- Had they all been subjects unto Carthage, templation upon God, seeketh how to imitthen might they justly have been termed tate the unspeakable goodness, rather than Rebels: but Spendius, and others, that the inaccessible majesty, with both of which were the principal part of them, ought none himself is indued, as far as humane nature is allegiance to that State, which they endeacapable ) do also belong to the furtherance voured to subvert. Wherefore I will borof that common good, which he procureth. row the name of their late occupation, and Left any man should think me transported still call them Mercenaries, as Polybin also with admiration or other affection, beyond doth.

quiet; who not only useth his authority, but true, what Homer saith, God bereaveth a man Hom. 94. adds the travel of his cloquence, in admo- of half his vertue, that day when he casteth him 1. 12.

Of these things, I might perhaps more

ø. III.

versty managed by Hanno and Amilcar, with variable success. The bloody conncels of the Mcrcenaries : and their final destru-

Dnaries, from whom I have thus far di-

the bonds of reaton; I add hereunto, that These, using the advantage of their present ftrength, ind in Cities of great importance, as being feated all their libete anchor; fending to the field the great upon the western Haven of Carthage, where their great Captain Amilear, whom they ests to it is divided by a neck of land; Hippagreta furnished with ten thousand foot of supply, ridi Cir. within cafurther out upon the Sea. Neither was enough to do, before he should be able to filly to hinder the Carthaginians from paf- For, besides other places of advantage that Pato For in all parts at once.

rs, or any the Africans themselves, Genal Matha. Nigor faith, that he was the firm it self is ruined, and the place whereon it flood, now called the place whereon was very ancient, and unbuilt before carthage, faith Silbus. As hamilton before Carthage was fee up, 6 did traffer Carthage was through the Banassis in the third Paulick war. Famous it was by the death signal to pumper, who held it against cafer Fisher that worthy Divine, was shalon deteroof in the time of Genfords; the drains, who lived all the insection for grant place was the carthage was an analysis of the carthage was an analysis of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was a support of the carthage was the carthage was a support of the carthage was the carth

Town befieged, as to batter and affail any of his own Citizens. place defended against him. With these pro- There was no need to bid Spendius look visions, and with an hundred Elephants, he about him, when once it was heard, that came to Utica, fo fuddenly, that the ene- Amilcar was come over Bagradas: all the mies as men surprised, for sook their Tren- Mercenaries were troubled with the news; ches, and retired themselves unto a rising knowing that they were no longer to deal piece of woody ground, where they might with the improvident gravity of Hanno, but be fafe against the violence of his beasts, with an able spirit, even with their own Hanno, thinking that he had to do with Nu- Master in the Art of War, whom they donimidians, whose custome was after any loss, red, though they hated him. But time feer toflie two or three whole daies journey off; was foon changed into prefumption; when prefently entred the Town; to thew himself more than fifteen thousand of their own faafter this his victory. But these good fellows, ciety, were come from Utica, and other ten against whom he was to war, had learned of thousand from the guard of the Bridge. Amilear, to retire and to fight again, many Their Army was far greater, than that of times in one day, as need required. There- Amilcar; and they were in their own fore as foon as they perceived, that he knew judgement, the better men; upon which connot how to use a victory; they assailed their sidence, they resolved to charge him on all own Camp, and with great flaughter, drave fides, and beat him down, in despight of his the Carthaginians out of it, forced them to worth and reputation. With this resolution hide themselves within Wiea; and got poffelion of all the store that Hanno had advantage; and still exhorting one another brought for the relief of the Town. This to play themen, and give the onset. Especibad beginning Hanno followed with futable ally they that followed him in the Rear, had indifcretion; losing the benefit of many a great mind to begin the fight; where unto fair opportunities, and suffering the enemies their promptness was such, as took from to take possession of all the entrance from them their former circumspection. Anil-Carthage to the firm land.

resizes firength, besieged * Otica and Hippagreta, sexceedingly troubled, and did therefore let and feventy Elephants. Amilear had work the Camp at Tunis abandoned, which lay meet with the enemy upon equal ground. fing up into the Countrey: for Matho and the Mercenaries had occupied. Hanno had spending wanted not men to follow the war suffered them to win the only bridge, by which the River Macra, or Bagradas, was palfable unto these that were to travel into the Continent. This River had not many foords, nor those easie for a single man to get over: but upon them all was kept fuch guard, as gave to Amilcar little hope of prevailing in leeking way by force. As for the Bridge it self, Matho and his followers were there How the Carthaginians were amazed with lodged: and had there built a Town. this unexpected peril, any man may con- wherein to lye commodioully, intentive onceive. But the business it self awakes them ly to the custody thereof. But Amilear had haltily. They are hardly prest on all sides; observed, that the very mouth of Bagradas and therefore travelled their brains the ut- used to be sometimes cloyed with sand and termost, how to shake off these furious dogs gravel, that was driven in by certain custofrom their shoulders, who sometimes by mary winds, and could not be driven out night, sometimes by day, came unto the very again, by force of that slow River, till the wals of their City. In this exigent, Hanno wind failing, or changing suffered the was made their General: who failed not in weight of the waters, to difburden their his accustomed diligence of making all good channel. Hereof he made use; and taking preparation: but had gotten together what- his opportunity passed the River, contrary foever was needfull, as well to relieve a to all expectation, either of the enemy, or car held his way toward the Bridge, keeping The Carthaginians perceiving this, were himself on plain grounds, that were fittest for the service of his Elephants, which he much defired : and therefore came unto he placed in front of his Army. Neither made Amilear fignifying his good affection to him. he shew of any defire to fight, but suffered the rashness of his enemies to encrease, till it should break into some disorder. At length unto him his own daughter in marriage; and perceiving, that with more boldness than so wan from the entmies 2000. horse, that good heed, they followed him to near, as following Naravafus turned unto the Carthawould be little for their good, if he should ginians side. With this help he gave battel turn unto them, he hasted his march, even unto spendius: wherein the Numidian lato such a pace, as made a shew little diffe- boured to approve his own valour to his ring from plain flight. The Mercenaries new friend. So the victory was great : for presently sell upon his skirts; believing that there were slain ten thousand of spendies his fellows, and four thousand taken prisoners;

But whilst they confusedly, as in sudden but Spendius himself, with Autarius the Ganl, opinion of victory, were driven at the heels escaped to do more mischief. Amilear dealt of those that had the Rear; Amilear wheel- very gently with his prisoners: pardoning ed about, and met them in the face, charge all offences past, and dismissing as many as ing them hotly, but invery good order, to were unwilling to become his followers; yet that amazed, with the apprehension of un- with condition, that they should never more expected danger, they fled without making bear arms against the Carthaginians; threatany refistance. In this overthrow there ning to take sharp revenge upon all that were fix thousand of the Mercenaries flain, should break this Covenant. and about two thousand taken, the rest fled , This humanity was vehemently suspected Town at the Bridge; whither Amilear followed them so fast, that he wan the place

Souldiers. Wherefore they resolved to take easily; the enemies being thence also fled such order, that no man among them should unto Tunis, as not having recollected their dare to trust in the good nature of Amilear, fpirits to make it good.

the diligence of Amilear in pursuing it, caufted letters of advertisment, wherein was ed many Towns revolted, partly by fear, contained, that some of their company, repartly by force, to return to their former ipective only of their private benefit, and obedience. Yet was not Matho wanting to careless of the general good, had a purpose himself in this dangerous time. He sent to betray them all unto the Carthaginian, about Numidia and Africk, for new supplies; with whom they held intelligence; and that admonishing the people, now or never, to it was needfull to look well unto Gesco, and do their best, for the recovery of their free- his companions, whom these traitors had a dom : he perswaded spendius, and Autarius, purpose to inlarge. Upon this Theme Spenthat was a Captain of the Gaules, to wait dies makes an Oration to the Souldiers, exupon Amilear, and always to keep the high-horting them to fidelity; and shewing with er grounds, or at least, the foot of some hill, many words, that the seeming humanity of where they might be free from the Ele- Amilear, toward some, was none other than phants; and he himself continued to press abait, wherewith to intrap them all at once the Town of Hippagreta with an hard fiege. together; as also telling them what a dan-It was necessary for Amilear, in passing from gerous enemy Geseo would prove, if he might place to place, as his business required, to escape their hands. Whilest he is yet in the take such wayes as there were: for all the midst of his tale, were letters come to the

nor to hope for any fafety whilst Carthage The same of this victory, together with was able to do him hurt, They counterfei-Country lay not level. Therefore Spendius, same purpose. Then steps forth Antarius, who still coasted him, had once gotten a and speaks his mind plainly: saying, that it notable advantage of ground; the Carthagi- were the best, yea, the only way, for the mians lying in a plain, furrounded with hills, common fafety, to cut off all hope of reconthat were occupied by the Mercenaries, with ciliation with Carthage; that if some were their Numidian and African fuccours. In this deviling to make their own peace, it would difficulty, the fame of Amilear his personal go hard with those that had a care of the worth did greatly benefit his Countrey. war; that it were better to make an end of For Naravajus, a young Gentleman com-Gesto his life, than to trouble themselves with manding over the Numidians, was glad of looking to his custody; that by such a course this occasion, ferving to get the acquain- every one should be ingaged in the present ance and love of to brave a man, which Action, as having none other hope left, than to alter his intended cruelty; but they were them unto wild beafts to be devoured. forthwith stoned to death, as a Document Untill this time Hanno, with the Army execution. Neither were they therewith- from Amilear, and done little as may feem that the subjects or friends of Carthage, without him. But when the war grew to should lose their hands, and so be sent such extremity, as threatened utter ruine to that it was most execrable ferity. As for Amilear was not enabled to do more than in the councel of using it, it was like unto the former times; rather he could now perform councel of Achitophel; All Israel shall bear, nothing: such was the hatred between him this thou art abborred of the father; then shall and his unworthy Colleague. The Towns the hands of all that are with thee be strong. of Otica and Hippagreta, that had stood al-Such are the fruits of desperation. He that wayes firm to the Carthaginian party, did is past all hope of pardon, is afraid of his now revolt unto the enemy, murdering all own fellows, if they be more innocent; the Souldiers that they had in Garrison, and and to avoid the punishment of less offen- casting their bodies forth, without suffering ces, committeth greater. The cowardize them to be buried. The provisions brought of offenders, and the revengeful spirits of by sea, for maintenance of the Army, were those that have been wronged, are breeders lost in foul weather; and Carthage it self of this desperation to which may be ad-stood in danger of being besieged, about ded some deficiency of Laws, in distinguish which Matho and Spendim consulted, whilest ing the punishments of malefactors, accor- one of the Carthaginian Generals did ( asit ding to the degree of their several crimes, were ) bind the others hands. to make amends, for the wrong done in pafe two chief Commanders in equal commission curity.

in victory alone; finally, that fuch as would feel here againft; were worthy to be repu- Severity, used with due respect are the best ted Traitors. This Ausarius wasin great credit with the Souldiers, and could speak sunded. For as long as these his old Souldiers dry languages, in such fort, that he was un- were any way likely to be reclaimed by genderstood by all. According to his motion the couries, his humanity was ready to intherefore it was agreed, that Gesco, and all vite them. But when they were transported the other prisoners, should forthwith be put with beastly outrage, beyond all regard of to horrible death, by torments. Nevertheless honesty and shame, he rewarded their vilthere were some, that for love of Gesco sought lany with answerable vengeance, casting unto others; and so the Decree was put in under his command, had kept himself apart all contented, but further ordained, that for that nothing is remembered of him fince all Carthaginian prisoners which they his late losses. Neither was Amilcar forry to took, should be served in like fort : and want his help; as being able to do better home, which rule they observed ever af- the one or the other fide: then was Hanno fent for, and came to Amilcar, with whom he Of this cruelty I need say no more, than joyned his forces. By this access of strength

822

A coward thinks all provision too little for It hath in all Ages been used as the fafest his own security. If Phocas be a coward course, to send forth, in great Expeditions, (faid the Emperour Mauritius) then is he two generals of one Army. This was the murderous. To be steadfast and sure, in common practice of those two mighty Citaking revenge, is thought a point of ho- ties Athens and Rome, which other States nour, and a defensative against new inju- and Princes have often imitated; perswading ries. But wrongfully : for it is opposite to themselves, that great Armies are not so well the rule of Christianity; and such a quality conducted by one, as by two: who out of discovered, makes them deadly enemies, who emulation to excell each other, will use the fion. This was it which wrought so much on upon this further consideration; the betwoe to the Carthaginians; teaching Matho, ter to restrain the ambition of any one, that and his Afficans, to suspect even their should be trusted with so great a strength. gentleness, as the introduction to extream For hereof all Common-weals have been jear rigour. Like unto the errours of Princes and lous, having been taught by their examples Governours, are the errours of Laws. Where that have made themselves Tyrants over one and the same punishment is awarded un- those Cities and States that have imployed to the less offence, and unto the greater, them. In this point the Venetians having been he that hath adventured to rob a man, is so circumspect, as they have, for the most eafily tempted to kill him, for his own fe- part, trusted strangers, and not their own in all the wars which they have made. It is true, Dictator was appointed, whose power was bis own courage.

neither hindred by any partner, nor by any
But we need no better example, than of modesty hath often been such, that the less car, and that was enough. shall appear. Now of those ten Generals abroad. which served the Athenians at the battel of Hieron King of Syracufe, though during able fervice. For it, is hard to find two great manifeltly proved.

Captains of equal differetion and valour; but that the one hash more of fury than of judg-fily prefling the City, Amilear was as dili-that the equal authority of two command- occasions are as often overflipt, as at other ing in chief, serveth well to bridle the ambi- times many actions are unseasonably undertion of one or both, from turning upon the taken. I remember it well, that when the Prince or State that hath given them trust : Prince of Conde was slain after the Battleof but in managing the war it felf, it is com- Jarnac, ( which Prince, together with the monly the cause of ill success. In wars made admiral Chastillan, had the conduct of the near unto Rome it felf, when two good Protestant Army ) the Protestants did greatly friends were Confuls, or fuch two at leaft, as bewail the los of the faid Prince , in respect concurred in one defire of Triumph, which of his Religion, person, and birth; yet comhonour the greatest of any that Rome could forting themselves, they thought it rather an give ) was to be obtained by that one years advancement, than an hinderance to their tervice; it is no marvel, though each of the affairs. For so much did the Valour of the Confuls did his best, and inferred all his one out-reach the advisedness of the other. thoughts unto none other end than victory. as what foever the Admiral intended to win Yet in all dangerous cases, when the Consuls by attending the advantage, the Prince adproceeded otherwise than was defired, one ventured to lose, by being over-confident in great limitation. Neither was it indeed the the Carthaginians in this present business: manner, to fend forth both the Confuls to who, though they were still fick of their illone war; but each went whither his lot cal-grounded love to Hanno, and were unwil-led him, to his own Province; unless one ling to difgrace him; yet seeing that all ran business seemed to require them both, and towards ruine, through the discord of the they also seemed fit to be joyned in the ad- Generals, committed the decision of their ministration. Now although it, was so, That Controversies, unto the Army that served the Ramans did many times prevail with under them. The judgment of the Army their joynt-Generals: yet was this never fo was, that Hanno hould depart the Camp: feldom, without as much concord, as any which he did, and Hannibal was fent in his other vertue of the Commanders. For their stead, one that would be directed by Amil-

able Captain, though of equal authority, After this, the affairs of Carthage began hath willingly submitted himself to the to prosper somewhat better. Matho and other, and obeyed his directions. This not- secondius had brought their Army near unto withfranding, they have many times by or-daining two Commanders of one Army, re-They might well be bold to hope and adceived great and most dangerous over-venture much, having in their Camp above throws; wherefore in the second Punick lifty thousand, besides those that lay abroad War we shall find examples. On the contra- in Garrisons. Nevertheles, the City was too ry fide, in their wars most remote, that were strong for them to win by affault: and the alwayes managed by one, they feldom fail-entrance of victuals they could not hinder, ed to win exceeding honour, as hereafter if any should be sent in by friends from Marathon, it may be truly faid, that had not the wars in Sicil he affifted the Romans, and their temper been better than the judgment still continued in their alliance, yet now of the people that fent them forth, and had fent fuccours to the Carthaginians: fearing not they submitted themselves to the con-their fall, and consequently his own; beduction of Militades; their affairs had found cause if no other State gave the Romans the same success which they found at other somewhat to trouble their digestion, the times, when they coupled Nicias and Alci- Principality of Syracuse would soon be debiades together in Sicil: the one being fo voured by them. The Romans also gave over-wary, and the other so hasty, as all them some slender affistance, and, for the came to nought, that they undertook: prefent, refused good offers made unto whereas cimon alone, as allo driffider, and them by the Mercenaries. This they did to there, having folg charge of all, did their to shew a noble kind of disposition; which country and Common-weal most remark-

ment, and so the contrary, by which the best gent in waiting at their backs, and cutting

finding themselves more straightly besieged in person. What they could say unto him by him, than Carthage was by them, they it is hard to conjecture: yet by the condiiffued into the field: when Spendius, and one craved pardon for the multitude. The con-Tarcas an African Captain affilting the re- ditions were, that the Carthaginians should work; leaving Matho in Tunis, to negotiate enemies, any ten whom they pleased, to rein plain battel: untill at length he got them more, in number. into a straight, whence ere they should This was a famous exploit: and the news get out, he ment to take of them a good thereof exceeding welcome to Carthage; and account. Their judgment was enough to terrible to the revolted Cities of Africk. perceive their own disadvantage; and there- Henceforward Amilear, with his Naravalis, fore they had the less stomach to fight; and Hannibal, carried the war from Town but awaiting for help from Tunis. Amilear to Town, and found all places ready to prudently foreseeing, that necessity might yield: Utica & Hippagreta only standing out, teach them to dare impossibilities, useth the upon fear of deserved vengeance; and Tunis, benefit of their present fear, and shut them being held by Matho, with the remainder of close up with Trench and Rampart. There his Army. It was thought fit to begin with they waited miserably, for succour thrt Tunis, wherein lay the chief strength of the came not: and having ipent all their vi- enemy. Coming before this Town, they duals, were so pinched with hunger, that brought forth spendius, with his fellows in they fed upon the bodies of their prisoners. view of the defendants, and crucified them This they fuffered patiently, as knowing that under the walls; to terrifie those of his old they had not deferved any favour from Car- companions, that were still in Arms. With thage: and hoping that their friends at Tu- this rigour the fiege began; as if speedy vinis would not be unmindful of them. But ctory had been affured. Hannibal quartered companions, and yet faw none appearance or far afunder to help one another in fudden Intelhood of relief: their obitinacy was accidents: and therefore it behoved each to broken, and they threatned their Captains be the more circumspect.

With what they deferved, unlefs they would go forth to Amilcar, and feek such peace as string from the walls beheld his own degree to a might be gotten. So Spendim, Zarxar, and knew not how to avoid it oberwise than by Amarius; fell to consultation, wherein it was resolved to obey the multitude, and yield themselves, if it were so required, unto that lay secure, as if all danger were pass, unto the death of the medium of the string that lay secure, as if all danger were pass, unto the death of the medium of the string that lay secure, as if all danger were pass, unto the death of the medium of the string the string that lay secure, as if all danger were pass, unto the string the string that the string that the string that the string the string that the string the string that the string that the string the string that the stri the death, rather than perish by the hands der the command of Hannibal; and with so off all that come to their supply: so that these three come forth to talk with Amilear purposed to desist from their vain attempt, tions which Amilear granted, it seems that and try some other course. Hereupon they they took the blame upon themselves, and bellion, take upon them to find Amilear chuse, out of the whole number of these with their friends, and take a general care of main at their discretion; and that the rest the business. The Elephants of Carthage, and should albe dismissed, each in his shirt, or horse of Naravasius, made spendius fearful to descend into the Plains. Wherefore betook himself to his former method that he chose them presently, as part of the of war, keeping the mountains, and rough ten, and so commanded to lay hands on grounds, or occupying the straightest pas-them: the resthe forthwith went to setch fages, wherein the desperate courage of his with his whole Army in order. The Rebels, men might shew it self, with little disadvan- who knew not that peace was concluded tage. But Amilear had more skill in this upon so gentle Articles, thought themselves Art, than could be matched by the labour betrayed: and therefore amazedly ran to of Spendius. He drew the enemy to ma- Arms. But they wanted Captains to order ny fkirmishes; in all which the success was them; and the same astonishment that made fuch, as added courage to his own men, them break the Covenants of peace, whereand abated the strength and spirit of the of they were ignorant, gave unto Amilear Rebells. Thus he continued, provoking them both colour of Justice, in accomplishing renight and day: still intrapping some of them, venge and ease in doing the execution. They and sometimes giving them the overthrow were all slain: being forty thousand, or when they were driven to such extremity, on that part of Tunis, which lay toward that they were fain to devour their own Carthage. Amilear on the opposite side: too likelihood of relief: their obstinacy was accidents: and therefore it behaved each to

of their own companions. Hereupon they great and unexpected fury he fallied, that af-fend to crave parlie, which is granted 5 and ter an exceeding flaughter, he took Hannibal prisoner:

prisoner; on whom, and thirty the most foretold, without help of witchcraft. Manoble of the Carthaginian prisoners, he pre- tho, and his followers, had nothing whereon fently revenged the death of Spendius, by to prefume, fave their daring spirits, which the same torture. Of this, Amilear knew no- had been well cooled by the many late skirthing, till it was too late; neither had he mishes, wherein they had learned how to frength enough remaining, after this great run away. The Carthaginians had reason to loss, to continue the siege; but was fain to dare, as having been often victorious : and the River Bagradis, where he incamped.

upon the same of this loss, than had been not easily to be matched in that Age. Neithe joy of the late great victory. All that ther was it likely that the desire of liberry could bear arms, were fent into the field,un- should work so much, in men accustomed to der Hanno; whom, it seems, they thought servitude; as the honour of their State the most able of their Captains surviving would, in Citizens, whose future and present the late accidents of War. If there were good lay all at once ingaged in that advenany Law among them forbidding the im- ture. So the Carthaginians wan a great viployment of one sole General near unto Story, wherein most of the Africans their their City (for they are known to have tru- enemies were flain; the rest fled into a fted one man abroad ) the time did not permit, in this hasty exigent, to devise about re- therefore they all yielded; and Matho himpealing it. But thirty principal men are cho- felf was taken alive. Immediately upon this fen by the Senate, to bring Hanno to Amilears victory, all the Africans that had rebelled, Camp, and by all good perswasions to recon-made submission to their old Masters: Viicile them. This could not be effected in one ca only, and Hippagreta stood out, as knowday. It nearly touched Amilear in his ho- ing how little they deserved of favour. But nourathat the carelesness of Hannibal seem- they were soon forced to take what condied to be imputed unto him, by fending his tions best pleased the victours. Matho and enemy to moderate his proceedings. Never his fellows were led to Carthage in triumph; theless after many conferences, the authority where they suffered all torments that could of the Senators prevailed; Amilear and Han- be devised, in recompence of the mischiefs no were made friends; and thenceforth, which they had wrought in this war. The whilst this war lasted, Hanno took warning war had lasted three years, and about four by Hannibals calamities, to follow good dimonths, when it came to this good end: rections, though afterwards he returned to which the Carthaginians, whose subjects did his old and deadly hatred.

abroad, as meaning to use the reputation of ed in the beginning. his late success, whilst it gave some life unto his business. He had reason to do as he did: but he wanted skill to deal with Amilear. The skirmishes, and light exercises of war. wherein Amilear trained his Carthaginians did so far abate the strength, and withall diminish the credit of Matho; that he refolved to try the fortune of one battel: wherein either his own defire should be accomplished, or his cares ended. To this conclusion the Carthaginians were no less prone, than Matho: as being weary of these long troubles, and insupportable expences; confident in the valour of their own men, which kindled the like fire in Sardinia: where had approved it self in many tryals; and murdering Boffar the Governour, and other well affured of Amilear his great worth, Carthaginians, they were in hope to get, and whereunto the enemy hath not what to op-hold that Island to their own use. Against pose. According to his determination, each these, one Hanno was sent with a small Army part was diligent in making provision: in- (fuch as could be spared in that busie time) break it up, and remove unto the mouth of in all points else they had the better of their enemies; especially (which is worth all the The terrour was no less within Carthage, rest ) they had such a Commander, as was Town, which was not to be defended, and not love them, should with less expence, by In the mean scason Matho was come contenting their Mercenaries, have prevent-

ø. IV.

How the Mercenaries of the Carthaginians, that were in Sardinia, rebelled : and were afterwards driven out by the Handers. The faithless dealing of the Romans with the Carthaginians, in taking from them Sardinia , contrary to the peace.

7 Hilft Matho and Spendiss were ma-V king terrible combustion in Africk; other Mercenaries of the Carthaginians had viting their friends to help; and drawing confifting likewife of Mercenaries, levied forth into the field, all that lay in Garrifon. On the fudden. But these companies that The issue of this battel might have been followed Hanno, finding it more for their diffrust, they refolved to hang up their reasons that follow. Commander Hanno, and performed it. A Some Indian Merchants had relieved Antecommon practice it hath been in all Ages, the and Spendius with Corn: of whom the with those that have undertaken the quar. Continguing took almost ince handed, and tel of an unjust war, to enjoyn the perforthed them in prition. Hereof was made a mance of fome notorious and villatious act, great complaint: to that the temans from to those that come in to them as seconds, Embaliadours to Carthege, requiring fairly of fencing.

fafery, and prefent profit, to joyn themselves i there was none other school eneward, rapp with those that were already revolted, than possession and rule of the Country's the morto endanger themselves by battel, for the terms not cally taken us. So they sail to good of that Common-weal, of which blows; which how they were dealt, I know they had no care; began to enter into not; but finally the Mercenaries were driven practice with the sardinian Rebels, effer-out and compelled to fave themselves in Haly. me to run one course of fortune with them Before their departure out of sardinia, they in their enterprife. This their offer was had invited the Romans into it; with as good kindly taken; but their faith was suspected fright, as the Mimertines had called them Wherefore to take away all jealoutie and into sicil. Yer this offer was refused, upon with offer to partake, and to affift the im- faction. It was no time for the Carthaginians pious purpotes which they have in hand. It to dispute : they quietly yielded to release is indeed the best pawn, that desperate men them all. This was so kindly taken, that they can deliver to each other, to perform fome forbade all their Merchants to trade thencefuch actions, as are equally unpardonable forth with the Rebels; admonifhing them to carry all provisions to Carthage. And up-By fuch a kind of cruelty did the un- on the fame reason did they forbear to gratefull Mantingans murder a Garrison of moddle with sardinia, or to accept the City Achaians, fent unto them for their defence of Vica, offering it felf unto their subjectiagainst the Lacedemonians, by Aratus; who, on. This might have served as a notable exwhen he had formerly pollest himself of ample of the Roman Faith, to all posterity: their City, by right of war, did not only had not the iffue proved, that it was meer spare the lack and spoil thereof, but gave regard of greater profit, which kept them so them equal freedom, with the rest of the temperate, no longer than the hope lasted of Cities united. These revolts are also com- thriving better thereby, than they should mon in our Court-wars; where, in the have done by open breach of Faith. The Conquests of new fortunes, and making of whole estate of Carthage depended at that new parties, and factions, without the de-time, upon the vertue of Amilear: who, had pression or destruction of old friends, we he been overthrown by spending or Matho, cannot be received and trusted by old ene- in one main battel, that mighty City muit mies. Cesont les coups de vieille escrime. These cither have fallen into the barbarous hands (fay the French) be the blows of the old Art of merciles villains, or have humbled her felf under protection of the Romans, with These Mercenaries in Sardinia were no whom she had lately striven for superiowhit less violent in their purpose, than were rity. That extreme necessity, whereinto Spendius, and his affociates: only they want- Matho reduced the City, by the forume ed a Matho among them, to negotiate with of one fally made out of Tunis, is enough the inhabitants of the Province. The Islan- to prove, that Carthage was not far from ders were no less glad, than the Souldiers, such a miserable choice. Wherefore it that the Carthaginians were expelled the was not unwifely done of the Romans, to Country: but they could not agree about make fuch demonstration of kindness, and the profit of the victory. The sardinians honourable dealing, as might invite a rich thought that it was enough, if they reward-but finking ship, to run her self aground ed the fouldiers for their pains taken. Con-upon their shore. But when all was well trariwise, the souldiers were of opinion, that ended in Africk, and the Carthaginians bethe title of the Carthaginians to that Isle, was gan to prepare for the recovery of Sardinia; devolved unto themselves, by right of Con-then did Ambition put off her goodly vizor. quest. The same quarrel would (in likeli- The Romans perceiving that Carthage, hood) have rifen between spendius with his beyond their hope, had recovered her feet Mercenaries, and their African friends; if the again; began to strike at her head. They common defire of both had once taken ef-entertained the proffer of those M remaries, feet: unless the riches of Carthage had served that were fled out of Sardinia; and they tocontent them all. But in Sardinia, where denounced war against this enterbled and Mmmmai impoverithe.

chough. They would have twelve hundred fort suspected to be wisdom. talents, in recompence belike (for I fee But the glory of Amilear was continually not what reason they could alledge) of the upheld and enlarged, by many notable sergreat fear which they had endured, of an vices that he did, to the fingular benefit of invation from Carthage. It is indeed plain, his Country. He passed the straights of Herthat they impudently fought occasion of cules, (now called the straights of Gibralter) war. But necessity taught the Carthagini- and landed on the Western coasts of spain; ans patience; and the mony was payed, in which Country, during nine years that he how hardly foever it was raifed. From this lived there, he subjected unto the State of time forward, let not Rome complain of the Carthage the better part of all those Provinces. Punick faith, in breach of Covenants: she But finally in a battel that he fought with her felf hath broken the peace already, a Nation in Portugal, called the Vettones, which Amilear purposeth to make her dearly (defending himself a long time with an adrepent; but what Amilear lives not to per-mirable resolution ) he was invironed and form, shall be accomplished by Hannibal his slain: carrying with him to the grave the renowned Son.

ø. V.

liow the Affairs of Carthage went, between the Son-in-law was made General of the Carren, served to instruct the Carthaginians in thage: adding so many subjects and confea necessary lesion; That either they must derates thereunto, that the Romans began make themselves the stronger, or else re- to grow jealous again of this hasty increase. joive to be obedient unto those that were He built a goodly City upon a commodious more mighty. In a City long accustomed to Haven, in the Kingdom of Granado, opthe braver determination eafily took posite to that of Oran in Africa, and gave it the name of New Carthage, which to this for the increase of Puissance and Empire. day it nearly retaineth, being called now ruine.

were of his faction, took little pleasure in the help this, at the present they know not ; general love and honour, which daily in- for they daily expected to be invaded by the realed towards Amilear and his friends. Gaules, their ancient enemies, and nearest Tet could they not deny him to be the most neighbours to the West. But he needeth country of command in all the City: only little help of force, that knoweth himfelf to they commended peace and quietness; ad- be feared : it is enough if he request, since his impoverished City, under a shameless pre-vising men to beware of provoking the Rotence, that the preparations made for Saidi- mans, in whose amity they said, that the fenia, were made indeed against Rome it self. licity of Carthage did consist. By such dis-The Carthaginians knew themselves unable courses, harsh to the ears of good Citizens, to relift, and therefore yielded to the Ro- who had feeling of the wrong done to their mans demand; renouncing unto them all Common-weal, they got none other reputatheir right in Sardinia. But this was not tion, than of fingularity: which the ignorant

CHAP. IT

CHAP. II.

same great honour and fame, by which in many fignal victories, he had acquired the name of a second Mars. After the death of Amilcar, Asdrubal his Airican Kebellion, and the second Punick thaginian forces in Spain. This was a good man of war; but far better in practice and cunning than in deeds of arms. By his THE injurious dealings of the Romans, notable dexterity in matter of negotiation, expressing their desire to pick a quar- he greatly enlarged the Dominion of Carthe thrength, and the jealousie of the Ro- * Carthagena. With this success of the Car- Town with this faces of the carrancan Sea; but the riches of Spain, that lay a little troubled; but began to accuse their acres pon the Ocean, were unknown to Rome: own negligence. For whereas they had forwherefore that Province might ferve both merly taken fo much pains to beat them out the little to exercise the Carthaginians in war, and to of the Isle of Sicil, as suspecting their neight mich repair their decayed forces, with all needful bourhood there; they had now, by cum-ing po-furplies. Of the spanifb Expedition, the bring themselves in a war of far less impor-ind charge and foveraign trust was committed tance, (whereof I shall speak anon) given the year unto Amilear: upon whom his Country did them leifure without interruption, to re-1934 at wholly repose it self; in hope to recover cover upon their own Continent, a Domi-tier strength by his means, that had saved it from nion by far exceeding both in the bodies of a few transfer. men, and in revenue, that which the Ro-yes 1956. Hanno, with some other envious men that mans had taken from them. But how to requelt shall have the vertue of a com- blows from a fourer Dame; there were from

found some, that by offering themselves to Yet were the Romans utterly destitute of the protection of Rome, became ( as they all good colour, that might help them to in- thought) fellow-fervants with Carthage. But termeddle in Spain. The Spaniards were the Carthaginians will thortly teach themanothen unacquainted with Rome, whereof (in ther lesson. The Saguntines, a people on the probability) they scarce had heard the South-side of Iberns, entred into confederaname : fo that there were no Mamertines, cy with the Romans, and were gladly acceptnor other fuch Rebels, to call in Roman fuc- ed. Surely it was lawful unto the Romans to cours; but in the enterprise of Sardinia, the admit the Saguntines, or any other people Romans had learned an impudent pretence, (neither subject, nor open enemy in war to that might also ferve their turn in Spain. For the Carthaginians) into their society; and though it were apparent, that the Spanish af unlawful it was unto the Carthaginians, to fairs had no relation to the peace between use violence towards any that should thus these two Cities; and though it were no- once become confederate with Rome. Neverthing likely, that Asdrubal had any purpose theless, if we consider the late agreement to extend his victories unto the gates of made with Afdrubal, we shall find that the Rome. or to any of the Roman frontiers: yet Romans could have none other honest colour (as if some such matter had been suspected) of requiring it, than an implicit covenant of they fent unto him, requiring that he should making the River there's a bound, over which forbear to proceed any further, than to the they themselves would not pass, in any Dif-River of Iberus. In addressing their messen- covery or Conquest by them intended to be gers, rather to Asdrubal, than to the City of made upon spain : in which regard, they Carthage; they feem to have hoped, that might have fome honest pretence to require howsoever the generality of the Carthagi- the like of the Carthaginians; though Rome, giniams had sweetly swallowed many bitter as yet, had no foot on the one side of therms, pills, to avoid alloccasion of war with Rome, whereas Carthage on the other side of that yet the bravery of one man might prove River, held almost all the Country. Howsoyet the bravery of one man might prove interpretations at the Country. Howload morefaftidious, and refenting the injury, re-ever it were, this indignity was not so easily turn such answer, as would intangle his digested, as former injuries had been. For it whole Country in the quarrel, that they to was a matter of ill consequence, that the much defired; and might embrace at leilure, I Nations which had heard of no greater power when once they had found apparent cause. But Aldrubal finely deluded their expectation. | tum resting securely among them, upon con-He pretended no manner of dislike at all: fidence of help from a more mighty City. and whereas they would have this insolent Wherefore either in this respect, or for that covenant inferted into the Articles of peace; the fenfe is most feeling of the latest injuries; he took upon him to do it of his own power, or rather for that now the Carthaginiaus with fuch appearance of conformity to their were of power to do themselves right: war will, that they went their wayes contented, against Saguntum was generally thought upand fought no further.

fear of present war, had ratified this new Spain eight years (being flain by a flave, whose composition made by Astrubal; yet should it Master he had put to death) and the Great not have stood bound in honour, to observe Hannibal, Son of the Great Amilear, was chothe same carefully, unless an oath had also sen General in his stead. been extorted, to make all fure. But fince all passed quietly, under the bare authority of Asdrubal, this Capitulation was none other in effect than a second breach of peace; where- The estate of Greece from the death of Pyrof the Romans might be accused more justly. than they could accuse the Carthaginians of perjury, (as they after did) for refuling to stand to ir.

wan some reputation in Spain. For when and the second; the estate of Greece, after it was once conceived by the spaniards, that the death of Pyrrhus, was grown fomewhat. the City which would needs be Mistress like unto that, wherein Philip of Macedon over them, stood in fear her self of receiving had found it; though far weaker, as the on, let the Romans take it how they lift. In If it had been so, that the State of Car- such terms were the Carthaginians, when thage, thereunto pressed by the Romans, for Asarubal dyed, after he had commanded in

ø. VI.

rhus, to the reign of Philip the Son of Demetrius in Macedon.

N the long term of the first Punick war, By this Treaty with Asdrubal, the Romans and the vacation following, between it Mmmmm 2

by Alexander the Son of Pyrrhus the Epirot with age. from whose father he had hardly won it. This happened unto him, by the revolt of ceeding unto his Father, reigned ten years. his Souldiers, even at such time, as having He made greater proof of his vertue before overthrown with great flaughter an Army he was King, than after. The Dardanians, of the Gaules, he was converting his forces Etolians, and Acheans, held him continualagainst the Athenians, whom he compelled ly busied in war; wherein his fortune was to receive his Garrisons. But his young son variable, and for the more part ill. About Demetrius raised an Army, wherewith he these times the power of the Macedonians chased Alexander, not only out of Macedon, began to decay: and the Gracians to cast off but out of his own Epirus, and restored his their yoke. Father to the Kingdom.

By the help of this young Prince Demethe Town; which was of much importance, ship; and was also called Doson, that is as after-fpring. The whole Country had re- poisoned by this Antigonus, who deceived covered by degrees, a form of liberty: in his wife Nicea thereof, and got it from her petty tyrannies (bred of those inseriour by atrick. The device was this: Antigonus Captains, which in the times of general com- fent his young fon Demetrius to Corinth, wilbuiltion, had feifed each upon fuch towns as ling him to court Nicea, and feek her marrihe could get) were, by force or accident, ex- age. The foolish old widow perceived not tirpated, and reformed; and some States how unfit a match she was for the young were rifen to fuch greatness, as not only fer- Prince, but entertained the fancy of marrived to defend themselves, but to give pro- age ; whereto the old King was even as reatection to others. This conversion to the dy to consent, as was his son to desire, and better. proceeded from the like dissensions came thither in person to solemnize it. Hereand tumults in Macedon, as had been in upon all Corinth was filled with facrifices. Greece, when Philip first began to encroach feasts, plaies, and all forts of games: in the upon it. For after many quarrels and great midft of which, Antigonus watched his time. wars, about the Kingdom of Macedon, be- and got into the Castle, beguiling the poor tween Antigonus the elder, Cassander, Deme- Lady, whose jealousie had been exceeding trius, Lysimachus, Seleucus, Pyrrbus, and the diligent in keeping it. Of this purchase he Gaules: Antigonus the fon of Demetrius, final- was fo glad, that he could not contain himly got and held it, reigning fix and thirty felf within the gravity beforming his old years; yet so, that he was divers times age. But as he had stollen it; so was it thence expelled, not only by the Gaules, and again stollen from him : neither lived he to by Pyrrbus, as hath been already shewed, but revenge the loss of it, being already spent

CHAP. II

CHAP. II.

Demetrius, the fon of this Antigonus, fuc-

Philip, the only fon of Demetrius, was a young child when his Father dved; and trius (though in another kind) Antigonus therefore Antigonus, his Uncle, had the got into his possession the Citadel of Corinth; charge of the Kingdom, during the minoriwhich was justly termed . he fetter of Greece. ty of the Prince; but he affumed the name This Citadel called Acrocorinthus, flood up- and power of a King, though he respected on a steep rocky hill on the North side of the Philip as his own son, to whom he left the Town, and was by nature and art fostrong, Crown at his death; This Antigonus, was that it seemed impregnable. It commanded called the Tutor, in regard of his Protectoras occupying the whole breadth of the much as, Will-give, because he was slow in Islbmus, that running between the Agean his liberality. He represed the Dardaniand Ionique Seas, joyneth Peloponnesus to the ans and Inestalians, which molested his Main of Greece. Wherefore he that held Kingdom, in the beginning of his reign. possession of this Castle was able to cut off Upon confidence of this good service, he all passage by land, from one half of Greece took state upon him, as one that rather unto the other; besides the commodity of were King in his own right, than only a the two Seas, upon both of which, this rich Protector. Hereupon the people fell to and goodly City had commodious havens. mutiny; but were foon appealed by fair Alexander, the son of Polysperchon; and after words, and a seeming unwillingness of his his death, Cratesipolis his wife, had gotten to meddle any more with the Government. Corinth in the great shuffling of Provinces The Achaians took from him the City of and Towns, that was made between Alex. Athens, foon after Demetrius his death; and anders Princes. Afterwards it paffed from likely they were to have wrought him out hand to hand, untill it came, I know not of all, or most that he held in Greece, if their how, to one Alexander; of whom I find no- own estate had not been endangered by a thing else, than that he was thought to be nearer enemy. But civil diffension, which had overthrown the power of Greece, when I ftrong league of amity, partly, in the Olymlike advantage.

cedonians and Spartans ) they did not Marcus Carynensis was the first, and Aratus only draw all others by their love and alli- the fecond. ance, but induced, through their example, This Aratus was a noble young Gentlethe rest of the Cities of Peloponnesus, to be man of sicyon, who, living at Argos in exile. governed by one Law, and to use one and whilest his Country was oppressed by Tymoney.

Aratus, the Sicyonian, was the first that by night, with ladders; whence they chaunited them again; and gave them courage, fed the Tyrant, and restored the people to after that they had been by the Macedonian liberty. This was in the time of Antigonus Captains divided into many Principalities. In Gonatas King of Macedon, a Prince more elder times they were governed by Kings, as busie in watching what to get among the most of the great Cities of Greece were; to Greeks, than wise in looking to his own. For which kind of rule they first subjected them- fear of Antigonus, the Sicyonians enter into felves, after the descent of the Heraclida, the Achaian league : which though at that when Tifamenus the fon of Orestes possest the time it received more increase by their acces-Territory of Achaia. In this estate they sion than it added strength to them; yet the continued to the time of Gyges, after whom, benefit of this conjunction ferved well when his fons fought to change the Legal enough against Antigonus, whose subtlety Government of their Predecessors unto Ty-was somewhat greater than his valour. As ranny, they expelled them, and made their the industry and counsel of Aratus delivered State popular; as seeming most equal. This his County from bondage, and fortified it by form of Common-weal had continuance, the Achaian league; so further, by his great with fone fmall changes according to the liberality, with the exceeding great coft of diversity of times, till the reign of Philip and 150. talents, he pacified the inexplicable Alexander Kings of Macedon: who tempest- controversies, between the banished Sicyoni-Alexander Kings or Macroon: Who tempers controverines, between the banimed sizyonilike overturned all things in that part of the like overturned all things in that part of the world. For those twelve Cities, called the Citizens that had possession of these mens Cities of Alliance (whereof, Helice, and Bura Lands; as also with the same money he drew or Olenus, the Sea had eaten up a little before many others to affift him in those enterprises the Batte of Leathers) were, by diffur-following, that redounded to the fingular bance of the Macedonians, divided from each other, and trained into a war, no less of Polemy Euergetes King of Espt 5 who foolish than cruel, among themselves. But in partly had a desire to hold some strong and the one hundred and four and twentieth fure friendship in Greece, partly was delight-Olympiad ( in which, or near it, Ptolemy the ed with the conversation of Aratus himself, fon of Lagus, Lysimachus, Seleucus, and Ptole- that made a dangerous voyage to him into my Ceraunus, left the world) two of ten re- Egypt, and fed his pleasure in goodly pictures, maining Cities and people, namely, the Pa- with the gift of many curious pieces, wherein trenses and the Dimai, united themselves, the workmen of Sicyon excelled. and laid the foundation of the general ac-The first of Aratus his great attempts, was cord, and re-union, which after followed, the surprize of the Acrocorinthus or Citadel For having been, some of them Partisans of Corinth; which he wan by night, being with fundry Macedonian Captains, and thereinto guided by some theeves that he others having been governed by petty had hired for the purpose, who living in it flourished most, overthrew it easily now piad before spoken of, and partly, at such again, when it had scarcely recovered time as Pyrrhus made his first voyage into ftrength after a long fickness; and gave to Haly. Now after the uniting of the Patrenses this Antigonus no less authority therein, than and Dimei, to whom also the Cities of Titrea, Philip the Father of Alexander, got by the and Phara, joyned themselves; Heira chased out her Garrisons: and the Burians, killing These Achaians from small beginnings, their Kings, entred with the Cerannians into had increased in short time to great the same Consederacy. These Cities, for firength and fame: fo that they grew the twenty and five years, used the fame form most redoubted Nation of all the Greek. of Government with the Achaian; who by By the equality of their Laws, and by their a Senatory and two Prætors, ordered all clemency (notwithstanding that they things in their Common-weal; and foon after were a long time held under by the Ma-by one Prætor, or Commander: of which, the same fort of weights, measure, and rants, found means, through the help of other banished men, to enter their own City

his treasury, passing in and out by a secret (who rose up one after another in Argos) in path among the rocks. Yet was he fain to open field, and flew one of them in battail: fight for it, ere he could get it : though in- but all sufficed not : untill at length Ariflodeed Antigonus his Souldiers were rather machus the Tyrant was so terrified, perswaovercome by their own fear, than by any ded, and hired by Aratus, that he confented force of the affailants; as miltrusting lest to refign his Estate. The like did Xenon the the Achaians were more in number, than in Tyrant of Hermione, and Cleonymus, that had truth they were, and having loft the advan- oppressed the Phliasians. tages of the place already, upon which they had prefumed, before they were aware of on foot, Lylladas the Tyrant of Megalopolis.

ments, furprifes, and practices, Aratus was and annexed it to the Council of Achaia: very cunning, adventurous, and valiant: in whereby he got fuch credit, that he was open field, and plain battail, he was as timo- chosen General of their forces (which was a rous. By this strange mixture of cowardize yearly Office, and might not be held two and courage, he ministred argument of dif- years together by one man :) every second putation, to Philosophers and others; Whe- year, for a certain while, he and Aratus ther a valiant man (as he was esteemed, and succeeded one another by turns. But those infome cases approved) might look pale and tremble, when he began battail; and Whe- and Aristomachus, were carried with prither the vertue of Fortitude were diversifi- vate passion from care of the general good; ed, by the fundry natures of men, and in a in which courses they opposed Aratus, to the manner confined unto several forts of action. great hurt of Achaia, as shall appear in due In resolving which doubts it may be faid, time. that all vertue is perfected in men by exer- The Acheans having obtained so much cife, wherein they are trained by occasion: puissance and reputation, that Ptolemy King though a natural inclination standeth in of Egypt was become Patron of their Allineed of little practice; whereas the defect ance, and (in title of honour) General of hereof must be supplyed with much instru- their forces by Seaand Land; made open ction, use, good success, and other help, yet War upon Demetrius the son of Antigonus hardly shall grow absolute in general. Such Gonatus, for the liberty of Athens. It is was Aratus in matter of War. In sincere affer strange and worthy of noting, That when ons will truly testifie.

ed unto the Common-wealth of Achaia, the the Athenians become; in whom the rule Megarians revolted foon after from Antigo- was verified, that holds true in general of nus, and entred into the same Corporation. the multitude, Aut humiliter servit, aut su-So did the Trazenians, and the Epidaurians: perbe dominatur; It is either base in service, whereby this new erected State grew so or insolent in command. Nevertheless when powerful, that it adventured to take Athens, Demetrius was dead, Aratus performed that from the Macedonians, and Argor and Mega-by money, which he could not by force; lopolis, from tyrants that held them. The enterprise upon the Athenians was of none nian Garrison, purchased liberty to the effect. For though Aratus wasted the Isle of Athenians, who thenceforth held good cor-Salami, to shew his strength, and sent home respondence with the Acheans, loving the Athenian prisoners, without ransome, to them, and speaking well of them, which allure the City by thew of love; yet the Athenians stirred neither against him, nor for him, as being now grown honest slaves to the belike, in regard of their own out-worn Micedonians. Upon drgos the adventure glory.

Was carryed more ftrongly. The Achaians | Now as the Common-wealth of Achaians | Now as the Common wealth of Achaians | Now as t came sometimes to the gates of the City, but daily increased within Peloponnesus, by juthe people stirred not: once they entred it, stice and honesty; so did the Atolians, in and might have won it, if the Citizens would the utter part of Greece, yea and within Peloown freedom; fundry times, and with di- diness of body, and rude courage in fight,

Whilest this business with the Argives was was fo well handled by Aratus, that, with-In these kinds of night-services, ambush- out compulsion, he gave liberty to his City, ction to his Country he was unreprovable, Aratus in this quarrel had lost a battail, the and so acknowledged : as his following acti- Athenians wore Garlands, in fign of joy, to flatter their good Lords the Macedonians, When Acrocorinthus was taken, and joyn-that had won the victory. Such were now have lent any help to the recovery of their ponnefus it felf, wax very powerful, by sturvers events, they fought with the Tyrants, without help of any other vertue. They had stoutly defended themselves against Anti- vice unto Antigonus; offering to make him in Peloponnesus : so that they were hardened come Achean. with a perpetual travail; feldom putting off their Armour. But their hardiness ill de- these times; and subject to the injuries of ferved the name of valour, feeing they had any stronger neighbour. Pyrrhus had greatly no regard of honesty or friendship, measur- weakned it; The Atolians entring Liconia ing all things by their own insolent wills, with an Army, had carried away fifty thouand thinking all people base-minded, that fand slaves; and, which was worse, their disciwere not as fierce and outragious as them- pline was corrupted, Avarice and Luxury felves.

spoils in Peloponnesus, and occupied a good had sometime been their general vertue, was part of the Country. They had invaded hardly now to be found among the best of the friends of the Acheans; taken and fack-them. There was left in Sparta no more than ed Pallene; where, although they were seven hundred natural Citizens; of whom foundly beaten by Aratus, yet their defire of not above one hundred had Lands; all the gain made them make a new voyage thi- rest were needy people, and desirous of inther, as to a Country wherein somewhat was novation. Hereupon followed intestine sedito be gotten. But they were forced to look tion; which endangered the City most of all. another way, by Demetrias the Son of Anti-Agis a good King, who fought to reform the gonus Gonatas: who prefied them so hardly, disorders of the State, exhorted the people that they were driven to feek help of the to a strict observation of Lycurgue his Laws. Acheans; which they obtained. The war To which purpose he caused them to pass which the Acheans made upon Demetrius, an Act, for the abolishing of all debts, and without Feloponness, in Attica, though it equal division of Lands. All the younger, tended to expelling the Macedons out of and poorer fort were glad of this; but the Greece, yet the benefit thereof redounded rich men opposed it. These had recourse chiefly unto the Atolians, at whose instance unto Leonidas the other King, (for in Sparta it was fet on foot : for thereby were the Ma- were two Kings) who took their part : becedonian forces diverted from them. Nei- ing himself a diffolute man, as one trained up ther was this good turn unacknowledged; in the Court of Syria, whence also he had though very basely the Ætolians, giving his wife. In this contention Leonidas was exthanks in words, devised how to requite the pelled the City, and a new King chosen in his benefit with some great mischies. They saw stead. But Agis his friends and Counsellors in that the Acheans were defirous to bring all this enteprize, abused his good meaning to Peloponnesus into their Alliance and Corpo- their own private commodity. They were ration: of which intent, the Lacedamonians hasty to take away all debts, and cancel all were very jealous. Wherefore these Etolians bonds, for they themselves were deeply laboured earnestly to set the Lacedamonians indebted : but the division of Lands they and Acheans together by the ears : hoping afterwards hindred, because their own posthat if this might come to pass, they them- seffions were great. Hence arose a tumult in felves should be called in to help (it skilled Sparta, which these men increased by their not on what fide) and fo get no small share, foul oppression of the poorer Citizens. So both in booty and Territory. Neither did that in fine, Leonidas was brought home, pater and Craterus; partly by daring to do partaker of their gain, whom they knew to and fuffer much, partly by the natural be offended with the many loffes, that this ftrength and fastness of their Country; but Kingdom hath sustained by the Acheans. Of especially by the benefit of the time, which this plot Aratus was aware: who therefore called away these famous Captains to other determined to suffer many indignities, rather business, as hath been related. They had than to give the Lacedamonians cause to take molested Cassander, in favour of Antigonus, Arms. But this resolution was taken someand were themselves as much plagued by what too late: and not altogether in his own him, and by the Acarnanians, a little, but a power to hold. He had been medling with fout Nation, that took his part. Afterwards the Arcadians, that were dependants of Lathey had to do with Demetrius, the Son of cedamon: and thereby had provoked the the first Antigonus, and more or less with all Lacedamonians to look about them; seeing the Kings of Macedon succeeding him. They that all Peloponness, excepting themselves, likewise held often war with the Acarnani- the Eleans, and a few Arcadians their friends ans, Athamanians, Epirots, and many Cities (who also were attempted) was already be-The City of Sparta was in ill case about reigned among them, the poor was opprefied These Etolians had lately made great by the rich, and the generosity of spirit, that they forbear to communicate this their de- and restored to his Kingdom, and the two adverse Kings driven to take Sanctuary; out labour of a painful night travel, and discoof which, Cleombroius, the late-made King, vered his enmity to Sparta; of which Cleomewas difmiffed into exile: but Agis was not was nothing forry. By these degrees the trained forth, drawn into prison, and there war began. In the entrance whereto Aratus by his enemies condemned and firangled, had discovered the Atolian practice, and together with his Mother, and his old therefore would have stayed the quarrel Grand-mother. The like to this was never from proceeding too far. But Liftadas known in sparte: and ( which is the and Ariftomachus would needs fight, and more edicus) this crucky proceeded from he could do none other than be ruled the Fpkori, Magitirates that thould have by them; especially seeing Cleomenes was given Patronage to the Laws, using their to urgent. Aristomachus was at that time power, and more power than to them be- General of the Acheans, (He and Lylladas longed, against a King, that had proceeded being of great account, since they had abanorderiv in reforming the City as the Law re- doned their tyranny ) who fent unto Araquired.

all good Citizens; and ferved to establish the conia. No diffwasions of Aratus would serve. impotent rule of a few tyrannical opprellors, therefore he came in person, and took part In which case Aratus might well hope to of a business, little pleasing him in the preadjoyn Lacedamon to the Acheans Common- fent, and less in the future. When he met wealth: though it were great injustice to with Cleamenes, he durft not fight; but optake fuch advantages, and attempt by force, posed himself against Aristomachus, who that which would have redounded to the defired to give battel. Yet had the Acheans general good of reloponness, and to the be-twenty thousand foot, and one thousand neste of sparta it felf, if it could have been horse, in their Army: whereas Cleomenes wrought by periwation.

crears of sparia, and revenged the death of raifed an ill report upon Aratus; which Lygo, did also requite the unjust attempts of fladas helped to make worse, by accusing his the recleans, even in their own kind: ob- cowardize. Nevertheless the Acheans would truding upon them by force an union of all not fall out with Aratus their Benefactor, Telogeomejus, though little to their good like- but chose him their General the year foling, for that the Lucedemonians and their lowing; against Lysadas his accuser that fued King should have been the principal; not for the place. Being General himself, it bethey and their Prætor. Leonidas having thus hoved him to confute with deeds, the flancaused sais to be flain, took his wife that derous words of Lysiadas. Therefore he was very rich and beautiful, and gave her purposed to set upon the Eleans: but was in marriage (perforce) to his own Son Clee- met withall on the way, near unto the Mount morer. This young Prince fell greatly ina- Lycens, by Cleomenes, who vanquished him mource on his wife, and fought to win her in a great battel, and drave him to hide affection, as well as he had her person. He himself all night for fear, so that he was discourfed much with her about the purpose thought to have been flain. This misadvenother former husband Agis, and by pitying his ture Aratus recompenced by a trick of his misfortune, began to entertain a defire of own more natural occupation; performing accomplishing that, wherein agis had failed. So coming himself to be King, whiles he hardly have been expected, had he been via covery young, he gladly embraced all occasions of War; for that he hoped by firong hand to effect that, which Agis by take; he fuddenly wrought with some of proceeding formally in to corrupt an estate the Mantineans, who did let him into their of the City, had attempted to his own ru-City. These Mantineans, (whom he had thus ine. Therefore when the Fpkori gave him in brought to his purpose) had once before charge, to take and fortifie Athenaum, a Tem- joyned themselves with the Achaians; but the on the marches of Liconia, to which shortly upon fear, or some other passion, both they and the Megalopolitans pretended they gave themselves to the Etolians; and title, he readily performed it. Hereof Ara- from the Etolians, presently after this victotus made no complaint, but fought to take ry, to Cleomenes, from whom immediately by farprize Teges and Orchoments, Cities they were thus won. For this their levity then Confederate with the Lacedamonians: they were not punished, but freely admitted wherein, his intelligence failing, he lost the now again into the Achean (ociety. As this tus, lying then in Athens, and required his The death of Agis was much lamented by affiftance in a journey to be made into Lahad no more than five thousand in all. This but the same man who redressed the dis- gave reputation to the Lacedamonian, and good good success repaired the credit of Aratm; other places, even of Achaia. These news further, than that they refused to make any longer contribution, towards the pay of those Mercenaries which he had waged. Countrey, and saw that Antigonus, with the This Aratus took patiently, and followed Atolians, or perhaps without them, would the war nevertheless; wherein though Cle-shortly make an end of that, which Cleoomenes wan some Towns, and Aratus got the menes had thus begun. Therefore he adbetter in one small fight, yet little of impor- vised how to provide against the worst, and tance was done; the Acheans being weary, either to repair all, or (if it could not be) and the Spartan King intentive to another to fave all from utter ruine. The office of bufinefs...

altogether stand in need of Mercenary help, as it lately had done, to fave it felf from the Liolians, Illgrians, and such other enemies. All this was dispatched in great haste; the take any. advantage of these his domestical

The Acheans hearing of this great alteration in sparta; thought that it would be long ere Cleomenes durit iffue forth of the City, for fear of some rebellion. But it was not long ere they heard, that he had wasted over all Arcadia at his pleasure; and was Acheans. admitted into Mantinea; and ready to take | The City of Megalopolis had been well to another battel almost ruined it. Cleomenes displeased them not a little : but they must and he encountred near unto Megalopolis; patiently endure to hear worfe. For where the Acheans had somewhat the bet- when Cleomenes had shaken off the power ter at the first, but their General durst not of the Ephori, that curbed his authority, he follow his advantage. Thereupon Lyliadas, proceeded more roundly in his work, being of whom we spake before, grew somewhat better obeyed, and by better men. His Laimpatient with anger; and taking with him cedemonians refumed their ancient courage; all the horse, brake upon the Lacedemonians and he himself had the heart to demand the whom he routed at the beginning, but pur- Principality of Greece. He did not therefore fuing them too far into places of hard paf-henceforth contend about the possession of fage, he was slain by them, and his follow- a few Towns: but adventured to win or ers driven back upon their own Compani- lose all. The Ætohans, in favour of his atons, in such fort, that finally all the Army tempt, declared themselves on his side: and was disordered an put to flight. This was whereas he had gotten Mantinea, Tegea, and a great loss, and incensed the Acheans against other places; to which they had some title, Aratus: yet their indignation proceeded no they willingly renounced all their interest unto him.

Aratus did apprehend the danger of his General, when it was next put upon him, he Cleomenes having led into the field all refuld; fearing to be fo far prest, as to hazard that were like to hinder his purpose, and in one battel all the force of his Country, tired them with painfull journeys, forfook to which as he had never any affection, nor the Achean war on a sudden, and came un- perchance courage, so was his manner of expected home to sparta, where he flew the warfare otherwife. For he commonly at-Ephori, and restored by force the ancient tempted by surprise, and defended upon the discipline of Lycurgus. Then he gave an ac- advantage of place, after the manner of the count of his doings; and flewing by what Irifs, and of all other Nations, overcharged degrees the Ephori had incroached upon the with numbers of men. Yet did he not forpower of Kings, and many disorders had sake the care of the Weal-publick, though grown in the City; he justified his proceed- in aiming at the general good, it seems that ings, and forthwith began to make equal di- private passion drew him into an ill course. vision of the Lands, reducing all to the first He saw that Megalopolis could not be deinstitution. He also supplied the defect of fended without making a dangerous hazard Citizens, by chusing new, out of such as of battel; that Maninea had not only openwere friends to the State, and valiant men : ed her gates unto Cleomenes, but flain the So that henceforth his Countrey might not Achean Garrison that lay therein; that other Towns had yielded unto him, without compulsion; and that Aristomachus, once Tyrant of Argos, and fince General of the Acheans, was now revolted unto the enemy sparans well satisfied, and Cleomenes him- following the fortune of Cleomenes. Ptolemy self ready in the field, ere his enemies could was too far off to help; and the nearness of Antigonus was very dangerous; yet might be usefull, if this King would (as Polybius faith) like others, be triend or enemy, as should best agree with his own profit. To make trial hereof, Aratus practifed with some of Megalopolis, whom he found apt unto his purpose; and instructed them all the Countrey of Megalopolis; had ranged how to deal with Antigonus, and the lieved by the Ackaans, with their own pro- consent. per strength. Wherefore it was thought meet, that Embaffadours should be sent unaffected to the Macedonians, ever fince the himfelf of all others did most wish: to the time of Philip the Father of Alexander, who end, that he might not afterward fultain the had obliged it unto him by fome special be- common reprehension, if any thing fell out nefits. At this time it lay nearest unto the amis; since it might appear, that he had danger; was very faithfull, and therefore not been Author of this Decree, but only deserved succour; yet could not well be re- followed, and that leisurably, the general

CHAP-II.

836

Nevertheless, in true estimation, this fineness of Aratus might have been used, with his to the General Council of Achaia, requesting greater commendation, in a contrary course. leave and good allowance, to try the favour For it had been more honourable to make of Antigoniu in their necessity. This was an end of the war, by yielding unto Cleomegranted, for lack of what else to answer: ner that power which they gave unto Antiand the same Embassadours dispatched gonus: since thereby he should both have away to Antigonus. They did their own er- freed his Country from all further trouble; rand briefly; telling him of the good will and withall, should have restored unto the and respect which their City had of long universal state of Greece, that honourable time born unto him and his Predecessors; of condition, whereof the Macedonians had betheir present need; and how it would agree rest it. But it is commonly found, (which is with his honour to give them aid. But great pity) that Vertue, having rifen to howhen they delivered the more general mat- nour by degrees, and confirmed it felf, (asit ter, wherein Aratus had given them in were) in the feat of principality, by length of struction; shewing how the ambition of time, and success of many actions, can ill en-Cleomenes, and violence of the Atolians, dure the hasty growth of any others reputamight redound to his own great loss or tion, wherewith it sees it self likely to be danger, if the one and the other were not overtopped Other cause to despise the Lacein time prevented; how Aratus himfelf did damonians there was none, than that they ftand affected; and what good likelihood lately had been in dangerous case; neither there was of reducing the Acheans under could any reason be found, why Aratm should the Patronage of Macedon: then began prefer Antigonus before Cleomenes, than that Antigonus to lend a more attentive ear to he had stood in doubt of the one, when he their discourse. He embraced the motion: thought himself more mighty than the other. and to give it the more life, he wrote unto Wherefore he was justly plagued, when he the Megalopolitans, that his help should not faw his own honours reversed by the insolent be wanting, so far forth as it might stand Macedonians : and instead of living as a comwith the Acheans good liking. Particularly panion with Cleomenes, that was descended he commended himself by these Messengers of a long race of Kings, the posterity of Hero to Aratus, assuring them, that he thought cules, was fain to do facrifice unto Antigomus, himself highly bound to this honourable man, whose former actions he now perceiv Philip, whose Nobility was but of five deed not to have been grounded upon any scents, and whom perhaps he might have hatred to the Macedonians, but only upon a seen his fellows, if he had not made them his just and worthy love to his own Notion. Lords. By this inclination to the Macedoni-With this answer they returned to Megalo- ans, the love of Ptolemy was lost: who forthpolis: and are presently sent away to the with took part with Cleomenes, though he Council of Achaia; there to make some spee- did not supply him with such liberality, as dy conclusion, as the necessity of the time re- he had used to the Acheans; being warned, quired. The Ache ans were glad to hear, that as may feem, by their example, to be more Antigonus was so inclinable to their desire; wary both in trusting and disbursting. Cleo-and therefore were ready to entertain his fa-menes himself, whillt this business with Antiwith all good correspondence. Heregonse was a-foot, passed through Acadia unto Aratio gave his consents and praised the
with an Army, and laboured by all means wisdom of the Countrimen, that so well district to draw the Acheans to battel. At the Cicerned the best and likeliest means of their ty of Dymes in Achaia were assembled all common safety: adding nevertheless, that the remaining forces of the Nation; with it were not amifs, first of all to try their own which it was concluded to make trial; wheability; which if it failed, then should they ther perhaps they might amend their estate, do well to call in this gracious Prince, and without feeking help of the Macedonian make him their Patron and Protector. Thus Thither went Chemener, and there fought he shewedhimself moderate; in that which with them; where he had so great a victory, that the enemy was no longerable to keep | fought to hinder his coming thither in perbe held , for the conclusion of the war.

all Royal flew, that might breed respect Castle of Corinth, which was the gate of Peochim in the multitude. This was that in-loponnessus, and without which none could deed which aratus feared, and for which he hold affured foveraignty of the Country; he

the open field. The calamity was fuch, that fon; left the people, hearing the promifes of Aratus himself durst not take upon him to Cleomenes ratified by his own mouth, should be their General, when his turn came in prefently be won with his gentle words, and the next election. Wherefore the Acheans limith the bargain without more ado. Therewere compelled to fue for peace; which was fore Cleomenes wrote unto the whole Coungranted upon this easie condition: That they cel, bitterly complaining against these jugashould not arrogate unto themselves the gling tricks; and Aritis was not far behind command of Peloponness, but suffer the La- with him in as bitter an Oration. So becedemonians (as in former ages) to be their tween fear of the one, and reverence of the Leaders in war. Hereunto if they would other, the Affembly knew not how to procondescend, he promised unto them, that he ceed, but abruptly brake up, leaving all, would presently restore all places taken as it were to fortune. Cleomenes took his from them, and all his prisoners ransom-free: advantage of their present weakness, and also that they should enjoy their own Laws renewed the War. Many Cities yielded unand Liberties without molestation. This to him willingly; many he forced; and gentle offer of Cleomenes was very pleafing to partly by force, partly by terror, he wan the Acheans: who defired him to come to Argos, which never King of Sparta before the City of Lerna, where a Parliament should him could do. In this case Aratus sent his own fon to Antigonus, intreating him to Now feeming the affairs of Greece likely to defer no time, but come prefently to rebe setled in better order, than they had lieve the distressed Achains. Antigonus ever been fince the beginning of the Pelopon- gave good words as could be wished; favenessan Wars, yea, or fince the Persian invasi- ing that he utterly resused to do any thing, on: when God, who had otherwite disposed unless he might first have Acrocorinthus put of these matters, hindred all with a draught into his hands. This demand was somewhat of cold water, which Cleomenes drank in like unto that of the Hunter, who promifed great heat, and thereupon fell extream fick., to help the horse against his enemy the and so could not be present at Lerna, but Stagg: but with condition, that the horse caused the Parliament to be deserved to should suffer him to be saddled and bridled. another time. Nevertheless he sent home the Aratus was herewithall contented , but chief of his prisoners, to shew that he meant wanting all honest colour to do it: seeing none other than good faith. By this fair deal- the Corinthians had no way deserved to be ing he confirmed the Acheans in their de- thus given away to the Macedonians. Yet fire of his friendship; who affembled again at length an occasion was found; for that at Argos, there to establish the League. But the Corinthians, perceiving what he intend-Aratus was violently bent against it, and ed, were minded to arrest him. So he fought by great words, and terrible threats, withdrew himfelf out of their City, and to make his Country-men afraid of refolv- fent word to Antigonus, that their Castle ing. When all would not serve turn, be be- should be ready to let him in. The Corinthitook himself to his cunning; and sent word ans on the other side ran to Gleomenes; who to Cleomenes, that he should do well to leave lost no time, but made hast with them to his Army behind him, and come alone into corinth, where he fought how to get poffer-Argos, receiving hostages for safety of his sion of their Castle, or at least to save it from person. Cleomenes, was already far on his Antigonus, by surrounding it within Trenway, when he met with this advertisement; ches, that none might issue nor enter withand took it in ill part, that he should be thus out his leave. Whilest this was doing, he deluded. For it had been an easie matter, took special order, that Aratus his house and to have told him to much at the first, & not goods, within the Town, should be kept for have made him come so far with an Army, the Owner; to whom he sent Messenger afwhich afterwardshe must dismiss. Yet that ter Messenger, desiring him to come to which chiefly seems to have troubled him, agreement, and not to bring in the barba-was the drift of his oppugners; who sought sous Macedonians, and Illyrians, to Peloponthereby, eitherto make him wait without webs; proming, that if he would hearken to she gates, and deal only with themselves and these persuasions, then would he give him their Messengers, or if he would adventure double the same pension, which he had been himself into the City, then to deprive him of wont to receive of King Ptolomy. As for the defired that it might not be committed unto men; and called him Tyrant for his doings his own disposition, but be joyntly kept by at home, because he would not do the like the Lacedamonians and Achaans. All this en- abroad. So they took their time, invited the treaty served to no purpose. For Aratus, Acheans, assailed his Garrison, cut in rejecting utterly the motion, sent his own pieces the rescue that he sent, and compel-son as an Hostage to Antigonus; and labour-led him at length to forsake the desence of ed with the Acheans, to put Acrocorinthus Corinth, and look unto the enemies that into his hands. Which when Cleomenes were behind his back. For when he underunderstood, he seised upon the goods of stood by continual messengers, that his men Aratus in Corinth , and wasted all the Coun- which held the Citadel at Argos were almost trey of Sieyon, whereof this his Adversary lost: he began to fear lest his labour in the Isthmus; having patied with his Army that lay within. Therefore he forfook his through Eubea, because the Etolians beld custody of the Isthmus, and made all haste the straights of Thermopyla against him. This towards Argos: which if he could lave, he they did, either in favour of Cleomenes, which meant to trust fortune with the rest. And so they pretended; or in doubt of the great- far he prevailed at his coming to Argos, that nels, whereunto the Mucedonians might at- both Argives and Achaans were glad to tain by the good success of this journey. house themselves, leaving him Master of the At his coming thither, he found the Lace- streets; when the horsemen of Antigonus damonians ready to forbid his entrance: were discovered afar off, hasting torelieve and that with fufficient strength; yet with no the Citizens; and Antigonus himself ( to purpose to hazard battel, but rather to wea-whom Corinth was yielded, as soon as the ry him thence with hunger; against which Spartan had turned his back ) followhe came not well provided. Antigonis there- ing apace with the body of his Army. Chofore laboured hard to make his way by menes therefore had no more to do, then to force; but he was not able fo to do : he fe- make a safe retreat. This he did, and got cretly got into the Corinthian Haven; but him home into Laconia: lofing in short was violently driven out again, with great space all, or most of that which he had been loss ofmen; finally he resolved to turn aside, long in getting. and feek a passage over the gulfe of corinth, to Siegon, or some other part and commended the Citizens, went into of Achaia; but this required much time, Arcadia; where he wan such Castles as were and great preparation, which was not eafily held for Cleomenes, and restored them to

Numnn 2

8:8

In this perplexity, news from Argos came by Sea, that greatly comforted Antigo- ment by the Acheans; to whom he declared nue, and no less troubled his enemies. The the cause of his coming, and spake brave Acheans were gotten into that City; and words, that filled them with hope. The the Garrison which Cleomenes had left there- Acheans were not behind with him; but in, though it was not driven out of the Cita- made him Captain-General over them and del, yet was hardly distressed, and stood in their Consederates: and further entered inneed of present help. Argos had always been to covenant with him, That they would not enemy to Sparta, and well affected to the deal with any Prince or State, either by King of Macedon. When Cleomenes took writing, or Embassadour, without his conit, he forbare to chase out those whom he sent. All this while & somewhat longer Aramost suspected; partly, at the entreaty of two was the only man, that seemed to rule the friends, and partly, for that they all made Kingsheart : carrying him to Sicyon his own thew to be glad of his prosperity. They were Town, (for Winter was come on ) where he gladindeed of Cleomenes his victories, both not only feasted him as a great Prince, but in Areos and elsewhere, as many as hoped suffered more than humane honours, as facrithat he would cause all debters to be dif- fices and the like, to be done unto him. This charged from their creditors, as he had lately example of Aratus and his Sicyonians, was guarding the entry should grow frivolous; Antigonis in the mean time drew near to the Achaans in the mean while spoiling all Antigonus having shewed himself at Argos, the old Possessors. This done, he took his way to Egium, where was held a Parliadone in Sparta. But that which Cleomenes had ollowed by the rest of Achaia: which had done in Sparta was agreeable to the Spartan made (forfooth ) a very wife bargain, if in institution: in other places, where it would litead of Cleomenes that would have been a have been tyrannical, he did not. Thereup King, it had obtained the protection of a on fuch as were disappointed of their unjust God. But this god was poor, and wanting hopes began to turn good Common-wealth wherewith to pay his Macedonians , imposed the burthen upon the Achaens. This was fent unto Egypt, yet the aid came not. For hardly taken: yet worfe must be indured in Ptolemy was slow; as dealing in the busihope of better. Neither was Aratus him- ness of Greece, rather for his minds fake, than Gif over-carefully respected; when the star upon any apprehension of necessity. Cleotues of those Tyrants, which he had thrown menes therefore provided for himself, as well down in Arges, were again erected by Anti- as his own ability would serve. He magenus; or when the statues which he had numifed all the Heilotes which were the Laerected, of those that had taken Acrocorin- cedamonian flaves: taking money for their the with him, were all thrown down by the liberty, and arming two thousand of them sme King, and one only left unto himself after the Macedonian fashion. Having thus at his earnest intreaty. It might there-increased his forces, he came on the sudden fore appear, that this god was also spight- to Megalopolis, that lay secure, as having deful. Nevertheless in taking revenge upon fended it self in more dangerous times, and those that offended him, Aratus did satisfie having now Antigonus near at hand in his own passion by the aid of these Macedo- Agium. The Town he wan: but after he vians. For with extreme torments he did was entred, all that were fit to bear Arms put Aristomachus to death, who had been rose hastily against him; and though they once Tyrant of Argos, afterwards General could not drive him out, yet faved the mulof the Acheans, and from them revolting titude, to whom they gave a Port free for unto Cleomenes, did fall at length into their their escape. He sent after the Citizens, ofhands. In like fort handled he (though not as fering their Town and goods to them again, vet ) the Mantineans, for their ingratitude if they would be of his party. But they and cruelty shewed to the Achaens. For he bravely refueld his offer: wherefore he sackflew all the principal Citizens, and sold the ed and ruined it, carrying with him to sparrest, men, women and children, all for bond14 a great booty that he found therein. These flaves : dividing the spoil; two parts to the news astonished the Acheans at Agium: Macedonians, and the third to the Acheans. who thereupon brake up their Parliament. The Town it felf was given by Antigonus to Antigonus fent hastily for his Macedonians. the Argives, who peopled it with a Co-out of their wintering-places : but they iony of their own; and Aratse having were folong in coming, that Cleomener was charge of this business, caused it be new safely gone home. Therefore he returned named Antigonia. Surely of this cruelty them back to their lodgings, and went himthere can be no better excuse, than even the self to Argos, there to pass the rest of his unflattery which Aratus was driven to use to lucky winter, somewhat further from the Antigonus: forasmuch as it was a token of eyes of the grieved Acheans. When he fervility, whereinto they had urged and had layn a while at Argos, Cleomenes was at brought him; whom he, as in revenge the gates, with no great number of men.vet thereof, did thus requite. But leaving to with more than Antigenus had then about speak of this change, which the coming in hir. The Argives perceiving that their of the Macedonian wrought in the Civil Country would be spoiled, if Antigonus did State of the Acheans; let us return unto this not iffue into the field, were very earnest war against the Lacedamonian. The next Summer Antigonus wan Tegea, wifer than to be moved with their clamors.

The reason why he ftirred no further, nor nor other thrength unto Lacedamon. followed Antigonus to Mantinea, & to those Afterwards, when the season was more fit other Towns that he wan, was this : He had for war, Antigonus gathered together all his few Souldiers, and had not money enough to troops; meaning to requite these bravadoes wage more. Ptolemy the Egyptian promised of his enemy, with the conquest of Sparta. much, but would perform nothing, unless cleomenes, on the other fide laboured to he might have Cleomenes his own Mother, keep the war from his own gates; and and his children in pledge. These were therefore entred upon the Country of Argos.

with him to go forth and fight. But he was Mantings, Orchomenus, Herea, and Telphuffa: and fuffered them to fee their villages burnt; Mantinea he dif-peopled, as was faid before; to bid him refign his Office of Protector unto in Orchomenus he placed a Garrison of his some that were more valiant; and to satisfie Macedanians; the rest he restored to the their passions with foolish words, rather than Atheans, with whom he wintered at Agi- he would be overcome in fight, and thereby where they held a Parliament. Once lose more honour than could easily be reonly Cleamenes had met him this year; and paired. By this Cleamenes had his defire, in that was on the borders of Laconia, where weakning the reputation of his enemy: he lay ready to defend his own Territory. though he hereby added neither followers, where he made such a havock, as drew Anti- their Illyrians were driven to fall back upon course thither, from his intended invation of the Army following them; perswaded the Liconia. Many great affronts the Maccdoni- Captains of the Achean horse, to break upon an was fain to endure, in coasting of the Spar- the Spartan Mercenaries. But they would tan King; that ranging over the Country not: partly despising his youth and want of of the Argives, Phliafians, and Orchomenians, charge; partly, for that Antigonus had given drave a Garrison of his out of Oligyris; order, that they should keep their places. and did facrifice, as it were before his face, untill they received a fign from him, which in the Suburbs of Argos, without the Temple was not as yet. Philopamen perceiving them of Juno, that was thut up; fending unto to be more orderly than well advised, inhim in foorn to borrow the keys. Thele were treated fome of his own Country men to follight things; yet ferved to dif-hearten the low him, gave a charge on the spartans, and Achean fide, and to fill the enemy with cou- forced them, not only to leave the Illmians, rage, which was no matter of light impor- but feek how to fave themselves. Being so tance. Therfore he concluded to lay apart far advanced, he found the place which the all other regard of things abroad, and to Illyrians had attemped, like enough to be rut all to hazardaby fetting up his rest, with- won, through the unskilfulness of him that out any more delay, upon sparta it felf. He held it. Wherefore he alighted, and perhad in his Army eight and twenty thou- fwaded the men at Arms his Companions to fand foot, and twelve hundred horse, col- do the like: the folly of Euclydas being malected out of fundry Nations, as Macedoni ans, Illgrians, Ganles, Epirots, Buotians, Acar- red not to hinder those that ascended, but naniaus, and others; together with the Ache- waited for them in a Plain, where they might and their friends of Peloponnelus. Cleo- fight upon even terms. So he recovered the menes had of all forts twenty thousand, Hill-top; where, though he was fore hurt. with which he lay at Selafia: fortifying yet he made good the place that he had flightly the other passages into Laconia, gotten, until the whole Army came up to through which the Macedonians were not him; by which the Lacedamonians were likely to feek entrance. Antigonus coming beaten from it, with great flaughter of them unto Selafia, found his enemy fo strongly en- in their descent. This overthrow, and death being resolved to make an end one way or ages past. other; Antigonus attempted with his Illy- Chemenes fled unto Sparta; where he had rians, to force that part which lay on the no defireto stay; finding only two hundred hill Fua. But his Illyrians were so ill seconded left, of fix thousand spartans that he had led by the Achean foot, that the Spartan horse, unto this battel, and most of his hired Souland light-armed foot, incamped in the diers dead, or gone away. So he perswaded nifest, who kept the top of the Hill, and ffircamped, upon and between the hills of Eva of Euclydas, made Cleomenes lofe the day: and Olimpus, that he was constrained to spend who fighting bravely on the other fide, upon much time there, before he could advance Olympus, against Antigonus himself, waslike any one foot : neither lay it in his power to to have been furrounded and loft, if he had come hastily to blows, which he greatly de- not withdrawn himself with an extraordifired, without the hazard of his whole Army, nary fpeed. In this battel ended the glory of in affailing their well defenced Camp. But Lacedamon, which, as a light ready to go at length (as it happens, when men are weary out, had with a great, but not long blaze, both of their hopes and fears ) both Kings shined more brightly of late, than in many ftraight valley between those hills, issuing his people to yield themselves unto Amigo-forth, fell upon their skirts, and not only mas; and promising to do all that should at disordered them, but were like to have en- any time lye in his own power, for their dangered all the reft. If Cleaneves himself good, he halted away to the Sea-like where had stood in that part of the battel, he had shipping long before provided would have made great use of such a fair against all that might happen and imbale beginning. But Euclydia, his Brother, a more ed himfelf for Egypt. He was lovingly entervaliant than ikilfull Souldier, commanded in tained by Ptolemy Energetes; who undertook that wing: who neither followed this ad- to reffore him to his Kingdom, and (perhaps) vantage, nor took such benefit as the ground meant no left, as being much delighted with afforded, whereon he lay. Philopamen the his gallant behaviour, and qualities. In the Arcadian of Megalopolis, who afterwards pro-wed a famous Captain, served then on horse, of four and twenty Talents, yearly. But as a private young man, among the Achaans, this Ptolemy died; and his Son Ptolemy Phi-He reeing that all was like to go to rout, if lopater fucceeded him: a vicious young Prince.

840

flew some enemies of his that he met; and having walked up and down the streets without resistance (no man offering to take his part, or, which is very strang, to fight against him on the Kings behalf) he, and his Companions, agreed together to be minifters of their own death. Upon his dead body Ptolemy was bold to shew his indignation: and flew his Mother and Children, that had fed Agis, with his Mother and Grand-mo- also war with the Illgrians, wherein they dren.

and Government : tarrying there no longer it is not meet to be utterly filent. than two or three daies: after which he otherwise determined.

brake a vein that bled inwardly, and in to be chosen into the Office , contradicting

Prince, wholly governed by lewd Women, short space finished his life, who was trouand bale Men, unmindful of all vertue, and bled before with a confumption of the hating any in whom it was found. When lungs. His Kingdom descended unto Philip therefore Cleomenes was defirous to return the Son of Demetrius, being then a Boy : as into Greece, whither the troubles in Pelopon- also about the same time it was that Antiorefus did feem to invite him; Ptolomy and chas, furnamed (I know not why) the Great; his Minions, would neither give him aid; and Ptolomy Philopater, began to reign in Alis nor yet dared to dismiss him (as he defired) and Egypt; Boyes all. Of these, Ptolomey, though to try his own friends in Greece, because he old enough to love Harlots, when he first was too well acquainted with the weakness was King, yet continued a Boy all the sevenof Egypt: nor well knew how to detain teen years of his reign. The unripe age of him against his will. At length they devised Philip and Antiochus; bred such intestine inmatter against him, and made him prisoner, convenience to their Kingdoms, as is usual the last aft of him was, that with thirty of in the minority of Princes : but their elder his Country-men, he undertook a desperate years brought them acquainted with the enterprize; breaking out of the prison, and Romans; upon which occasion, when it provoking the Alexandrians to rebell and comes, we shall more seasonably speak of feek their liberty. In which attempt he them, and of their Kingdoms, more at large.

d. VII.

How the Illyrians infested the Coast of Greece; and bow they were subdued by the Romans

Whilst things thus passed in Greece, and whilst the Carthaginians were been sent thither, as Hostages, together with buse in their conquest of Spain: the Rothe Wives of his Adherents, as many as were mans had found themselves work among there, attending upon the old Queen. Such the Sardinians and Corficans, that were eawas the end of Cleomenes, a generous filly fubdued at first, and easily vanquished Prince, but Son of Leonidas, who had cau- again, when they rebelled. They made ther, to come to such a bloody end, as now got much honour with little pain. With the befell his own Wife, Son, and Grand-chil Gaules they had much ado, that lasted not Line 50, 21. long; being rather, as Livy faith, a tumult After the victory at sellafia: Antigonus than a war. So that by all these light exerwithout resistance entred Sparta: wherein- cises their valour was hardly kept from rust. to never the force of any Enemy, before him, How they got the Illands in the Mediterracould make way. He kindly intreated the nean Sea, it hath been shewed before: of Citizens, and left them to their own Laws their dealings with the Illgrians and Guales.

The Illyrians inhabited the Country now haltned out of Peloponnesus, and never re- called Slavonia; a troublesome Nation, impaturned. The cause of his speedy departure tient of rest, and continually making war for was an advertisment that he received out gain, without either regard of friend or foe. of Macedon; how the Illyrians over-ran and They were invited by Demetrius, King of destroyed the Country. Had these news Macedon, to help the Mydionians his friends, come a little sooner, or had Gleomenes ei- that were besieged by the Etolians, for that ther deferred the fight, a few daies longer, they refused to be of their society. Before or at least-wise tarried a few daies after the the Illyrians succours came, the Mydionians fight, in Sparta; the Kingdom of Lacede- were fo far fpent, that the Ætolians contendmon would have stood, and perhaps have ed about the booty: the old Prætor, or extended it felf over all Greece. But God had chiefMagistrate of their Nation, who was going out of his office, claiming to have the ho-Antigonus fought a great battel with the nour of the victory, and the division of the Illyrians, and overcame them. Yet therein spoyl to be referred unto him; for that he he caught his bane : not by any wound, but had in a manner brought the fiege to an end, by over-straining his voice; wherewith he and won the Town:others, that were in hope ample.

quished the stoutest of the Greeks, he found home by letters from Tenta the Queen, that feasted, and drank so immoderately; that ces to hazard, but offered composition, ended his life. His Kingdom, together That the Epirots might ransome their Town, with his great hopes, he left unto Teuta his and all their people that were prisoners;

-12 11 1 all forts at Sea, making no difference be- made this profitable and honourable bartween friend and foe; as if the had been gain, the Illyrians returned into their own fole Mistress of the falt Waters. She armed a Country by Land, sending their booty away fleet and fent it into Greece; willing her by Sea. Captains to make war where they found ad- At their coming home, they found no such vantage, without any further respect. These great trouble, as that which they brought, fell on the weitern coast of Peloponnesus; or had occasioned in this voyage. For, in fulwhere they invaded the Eleans, and Meffani filling the commandment of their Queen, ans. Afterwards they returned along by they had taken many Italian Merchants, Epirus, and stayed at the City of Fhanice, whilesthey lay at Phanice; and made them to take in victuals and other necessaries good prize. Hereof the complaints made There lay in Phanice eight hundred Gaules, unto the Roman Senate, were to frequent, that having been Mercenaries of the Cartha- that Embaffadours were fent to require of ginians, went about to betray, first Agri- Tenta, that she should abstain from doing gentum, then Eryx, to the Romans; but fail- fuchinjuries. These Embassadours found her ing to do either, they nevertheless revolted, very jolly; both for the riches which her fleet and were for their mildeeds difarmed and had brought in; and for that the had, in thort this, and defiring that old orders might be fent to Sea by the Romans, yet entertained kept. It was a petty strife, and somewhat by these Epirots, and trusted to lye in Garlike to that of the French in latter ages, who rison within their Town. The Gaules were thought upon dividing the prey, before they foon grown acquainted with the Illyrians, to had won the victories, which anon hey loft, whom they betrayed Phanice; which deat Foitiers and Agincourt. The Etolians ferved none other, in trusting them. All Epiwifely compounded the difference, order- rus was presently in arms, and hastned to ing it thus, That the old and the new drive out these unwelcome guests. But whilst Practor should be joyntly intituled in the the Epirots lay before the Town, there victory, and have equal authority in di- came news into their Camp, of another Illyfributing of the gettings. But the Illyri- rian Army, that was marching thitherward ans finished the strife much more elegantly, by Land, under one scerdilaidas, whom and after another fashion. They arrived Queen Tenta had sent to help his fellows. and landed ere any was aware of them; Upon this advertisement, a part of them is they fell upon the Atolians, and though fent away towards Antigonia, to make good good refiltance was made, yet got the vi- that Town, and the straights adjoyning, by ctory, partly by force of their multitude, which these new comers must enter into partly by the help of the Mydionians, that their Countrey; another part of them rewere not idle in their own bufiness, but mains at Phanice, to continue the siege, frontly fallied out of the Town. Many of Neither the one nor the other speed well in the Etolians were flain, more were taken, their business. For Scerdilaidas found their Camp and all their baggage was means to joyn with his fellows; and they loft : the Illyrians took the spoil, and that were befieged within Phanice, fallied went their way; the Mydionians erected out of the Town, and gave such an over-a Trophie, inscribing the names both of throw to the Epirots, as made them despair their old and new Magistrates (for they all of saving their Country, without great and so chose new Officers at the same time) speedy help from abroad. Wherefore as the Etolians had directed them by exand Ætolians: craving their help, with The success of this voyage highly pleased very pitifull terms of intreaty. Theyob-Agron King of the Illyrians : not only in tained their fuit; neither was it long, beregard of the money, wherewith Demetrius fore an Army, fent by these two Nations, had hired his affiftance; or of the booty was ready in Epirus to present battel unto that was gotten; but for that having van- scerdilaidas. But scerdilaidas was called it not uneafie to enrich himself by setting signified a rebellion of some Illyrians against upon the less warlike: For joy of this he her: so that he had no mind to put his forhe fell into a Pleurifie, which in few daies which was accepted. The agreement was, and that the illyrians should quietly depart Tenta gave her people free liberty to rob with all their booty and flaves. Having a good look to the Romans, that found fault less may an Embassadour do it without inwith her doings, and, calling them by a curring justly the same danger to punishtrue name, Piracy, required amends. Yet ment, with other Traitors; in which case, when their speech was ended, she vouchsaf- his place gives him no priviledge at all. But ed to tell them, That injury in publick the we will leave this dispute to the Civilians; would do them none: as for private matters, and go on with the revenge, taken by the no account was to be made of them; neither Romans, for the flaughter of their Embaffawas it the manner of Kings to forbid their dour Coruncanus, subjects to get commodity, how they best The Illyrian Queen was secure of the Rovenge in publick, of those private wrongs than she, both before and since: Having that are born out by publick authority: more regard unto fame, than unto the substance therefore we shall teach you, God willing, to of things. The Greeks were at that time more reform your Kingly manners, and learn bet- famous than the Romans; the Ætolians and ter of us. These words the Queen took so Epirots had the name of the most warlike impatiently, that no revenge could fatisfie people in Greece; these had she cassly vanher, but the death of him that had spoken quished, and therefore thought, that with them. Wherefore, without all regard of the the Romans she should be little troubled. Had common Law of Nations, she caused him to she considered that her whole Army, which bellain: as if that had been the way to fet wrought such wonders in Greece; was not her heart at rest; which was indeed the much greaterthan often thousand men; and mean to disquiet and afflict it ever after.

feems to be this; that fince without media- fron to take all that could be gotten. This tion, there would never be an end of war fleet divided it felf, & one part of it fell with (a) Divided and destruction, therefore it was equally re- (a) Dyrrachium, the other with Corcyra, when y person of that Prince, in whose Countries than to trust her. they refide, warranted by any law whatfo- The Romans were even ready to put to space, tamed her rebells, and brought all to jever. For whereas the true office of an Emgood order, fave only the Town Is, which basiadour residing, is the maintenance of her forces held straightly besieged. Swelling amity; if it be not lawfull for one Prince to with this posperity, she could hardly afford practice against the life of another; much could by Sea. But (faid the younger of the mans, as if they would not dare to stir against two Embaffadours) we Romans have a man-her. She was indeed in an errour, that hath ner, and a very laudable one, to take re- undone many of all forts, greater and less that nevertheless, it prevailed as much by The Romans, provoked by this outrage, odds of number, as by valour, or skill in arms: prepare two great Armies; the one by Sea, she would have continued touse her advanconfisting of two hundred fail, commanded tage against those that were of more fame by C. Fulvius; the other by Land, led by A. than strength, with such good caution, that Posthumus. They trouble not themselves any she should not have needed to oppose her more with requiring latisfaction: for this late-gotten reputation, against those that injury is offuch nature, as must be requited were more mighty than her self. But she was with mortal war. It is indeed contrary to all a woman, and did what she listed. She sent humane Law, to use violence towards Em- fortha greater fleet than before, under Demebaffadours: the reason and ground whereof, trius of Pharos; with the like ample commif-

and destructions, insections in an algebra by Dyrachium was almost surprised by the tilly sometime ceived by all Nations, as a lesson taught by Dyrachium was almost surprised by the tilly sometime could be all the country of the tilly sometimes. Nature, that Embassadours should pass free- rians; yet was it rescued by the stout Citi diare, and ly, and in fafety, between enemies. Never-zens. In (b) Coreyra the Illyrians landed, now Desirable and the life and befored the Town Mixed the life and before the life an theles, as I take it, this general Law is not wasted the slife, and besieged the Town of most without limitation. For if any King or State, Hereupon the Atolians and Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Additional Control of the Acheans were the Acheans we layhold upon Emballadours fent by their called in to help; who came, and were not between enemies, not unto themselves, but unto some beaten in a fight at Sea : losing, besides de thanks third, whom they should draw into the quar- others of less note, Marcus Carpunfis, the en Petro rel; then it is as lawful to use violence to first Prætor of Achaia, whom Aratus sucthose Embassadours (thus employed to make ceeded. The Town of Corcyra, dismayed (b) corgthe war more terrible ) as it is to kill the men with this overthrow, opened the gates unto the difficult of of war, and subjects of an enemy. And so Demetrius Pharius, who took possession of it the distance of war, and nubjects of all the might the Athenians have answered it when with an Illyrian Garrison: sending the restricts to might the Athenians have answered it when with an Illyrian Garrison: sending the restricts to make the might be supported by the sending the restricts to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending the restrict to the sending t they slew the Lacedemonian Embassadours, of his forces to besiege Dyrrachium. In the from Dr. that were sent to Xerxes, to draw him into mean season, Testa was angry withher Cap-rayto, cala warupon the Athenians. Neither are those tain Demetrius: I know not why; but so led now Embassadours, which practise against the as he resolved to try any other cour, e, rather in the pair

00000

Снар. 11.

844

Sea, though uncertain which way to take, when advertisement was brought to C. Fulwill as a Conful, of Demetrius his fear and of the War between the Romans and Gauls. discontent. Likely it was that such an occafion might greatly help to advance the bufiness in hand. Wherefore the Conful failed thither; where he found the Town of Coregra fo well prepared to his hand by Deme- were the next, against whom the Rotrius, that it not only received him willing- mans took Arms. These were a populous ly, but delivered into his power the Illgrian Nation, and often molested Rome; some-Garrison, and submitted it self unto the Ro-times with their own forces, and sometimes man protection.

After this good beginning, the Conful fail- France. Once their fortune was good, when (6) done ed along the coast to (c) Apollonia; accom- they took Rome and burnt it: though the ms, active panied with Demetrius, whom he used iffue of that war proved not answerable to mear 13.7 pathenceforth as his Councellor and guide. To the beginning, if we may give credit unto Praces, Apollonia came also Posthumus, the other Koman Historians. In following times their upon the Conful, with the Land-Army, numbred at success was variable, and commonly bad. twenty thousand foot, and two thousand Many overthrows they received; and if horse. Thence they hastened towards Dyrra- they got any victory, it yielded them no chium, which the Illyrians had belieged; but profit, but was foon extorted out of their upon news of the Roman army they disperse hands. They were indeed more sierce than themselves. From thence the Romans enter well advised: lightly stirred up to war, Illyria, and take Farthenia; beat the Illyri- and lightly giving over. At the first brunt, ans by sea, take twenty of their ships, and they were said to be more than men; but enforce the Queen Tenta to for sake the coast, when that was past, less than women. The and to cover her felf in Rison far within the Romans were acquainted with their temper, Land. In the end, part of the Romans hafte by long experience, and knew how to hanthem homeward, and leave the best places die them: yet gave alwayes careful heed to of Illyria in the hands of Demetrius; anotheir approach, were it only bruited. For ther part staics behind, and prosecutes the the danger of them was sudden, and uncerwar, in such fort, that Tenta was forced to tain; by reason of their neighbourhood and beg peace; which the obtained upon mifer- want of intelligence among them. Few of able conditions; to wit, That the should their attempts upon Rome were called wars, quit the better part of Illyria, and pay tri- but tumultus Gallici, tumults of the Gaules: bute for the reit; and from thenceforth ne- and rightly. For they gave many alarums to ver fend any of her thips of war towards the Italy, and used to rise with great Armies, but coafts of Greece, beyond the Island of Liffa: after a few dayes march, and sometimes beexcept it were some one or two vellels un-fore their setting forth, any small occasion armed, and by way of Trade.

Embaliadours into divers parts of Greece, years, sometimes twenty or thirty: till they lignifying their love to their Country, and were stirred up again, by younger heads, how, for good will thereunto, they had made unacquainted with the danger. Whilft they war with good success upon Tenta, and her rested, the State of Rome, that against these people. They hoped, belike, that some distref- made only defensive war, had leisure to led Cities would take this occasion, to defire grow, by fetting upon others. Herein God their patronage: which if it hapned, they provided well for that Monarchy, which he were wife enough to play their own games. intended to raife: that the Ganles never fell But no such matter fell out. The Embassa- upon Italy with a mighty power, in the time dours were only rewarded with thanks; and of any other great and dangerous war. Had a decree made at Corinth, That the Romans they attempted to conquer it, whilst Pyrthenceforth might be partakers of the Isth- rhus was travelling in the same enterprize: he more hereafter.

6. VIII.

Comewhat before the coming of Hannibal into Italy.

He Gaules that dwelt in Lombards with the assistance of those that inhabited ferved to disperse them. Having received an After this Illyrian war, the Romans fent overthrow, they would rest ten or twelve mian rastimes. This was an idle courtesie, or in either of the two former Punick wars: but well meant by the vain Greeks, and it may be doubled what would have become therefore well taken by the Romans: who of this Imperious City. But it feems that by this Illyrian expedition got nothing in the Gaules had no better intelligence in the Greece, fave a little acquaintance, that shall affairs of Italy, than strangers had in Ganle. At least, they knew not how to use their times: and were therefore like to fmart,

The Hetruria, and belieging Arretium, had won Nations about Rhodanus, wageable as the a great battel, and flain L. Celius, with the Smitzers in these times. The Geffates having most of his Army. Mannius Curius the new received a great imprest, come to the field Conful fent Embassadours to them, to treat under the conduct of their Kings Concolitaabout ranfom of prisoners. But these Em- | nus and Anoroesius: who with the Boji, and bassadours they slew. Therefore when for- Insubrians, compound an Army of tifty tune turned to the better, the Romans fol- thousand foot, and twenty thousand horse, and lowed it so well, that they expelled their and those of the best men, and best appoint-Senones out of their Countrey, and fent a co- ed, that ever invaded the Roman Territory; lony of their own to inhabit it. This caused to whom the senogalli, that had been beawere of the (a) Boji, another people of Gaul, to fear ten out of their polletions, gave a great inthe like measure: who thereupon took arms, crease of strength. On the contrary side, Illyrian war.

they were neerer; like as they called Cifal- of Tuscane. try between Ancona and Ariminum: exter- fand foot, and two hundred horse. There were minating utterly those Gauls. Such an offer also appointed for supplies (if any misadvenwere it made in England, concerning either ture came to these) of the Sabines and Hetrujoy the Multitude. But the Commonalty of fand horse, which Army was to be lodged that Flaminius had ever after their good there were twenty thousand; and of the Ve-whenfoever the enemies, whom they had f. This dreadfull Prefident extremely difmuch provoked, and little hart, should had pleased the Boji; who being neighbours to leilure to visit them at their own home: Ariminum, feared the like displantation. which was now after the first Turick War. And because the rest of the Gauls had rea-Once before this, the Romans had been bold. fon to refolve, that themselves also should be to fet upon the Gauls in their own Coun- rooted out by degrees; the great Nation of trey: and that was three years before the the Infubrians, which inhabited the Dutchy coming of Pyrrbus into It.ily. At that time of Milan, joyned with the Boji, and upon the Senones, a Tribe of the Gauls, invading a common purse entertained the Gellates. nee, and and drew the Hetrurians to their fide. But the Venetians, and the (b) Cenomanni, ad-(b) Conois the Romans overthrew them in two great hered to the Romans: as better believing in the people battels; and thereby made them fue for their prosperity and rising fortune. For fear about Borin River peace, which lasted until the end of this of whose incursions therefore, the Gauls the north were forced to leave a good part of their fide of the It vexed the Gauls to fee a Roman colo- Army, on the frontier of Milan: with the in River !! ny planted in their Countrey; who had been rest of their forces they entred into Tuscane. There accultioned to enlarge their bounds, by driving out their neighbours perforce. Where **Emilias to Rimine, to ftop their paffage; Comment for they laboured with the Translapines (to and in the place of C. Atilias their other in France, as lying Conful, who then was in Sardinia, they in and inhaps board the three their hands to be the state of the state from them beyond the Alpes, though to us ploy one of their Prætors, for the defence Country pines, or by-hither the Alpes, those who dwelt | Being at this time greatly troubled with between them and the Mountains) to draw the confideration of this powerfull Army, them to their party: reasonably presuming, which the Gauls had assembled, they caused that as their disjunction had caused their a view to be taken, as well of all their own loss, so their union might recompence it, with forces, as of those of their Allies: who were large amends. But the business was so foolish- no less willing than themselves, to oppose the ly carryed, that the Cifalpines and Transalpines incursions of the barbarous people; fearfell together by the ears, putting the Komans ing, as they had cause, that their own deonly to a tumnit, without further trouble of struction could not be prevented otherwise, war. Soon after, they were urged by a great than by the good fortune of Rome. The er indignity, to go more substantially to numbers, found in this Muster, deserve to be work. For C. Flaminius, a popular man in recorded : because they set out the power of Rome proposed a Decree, which was ratified the Romans in those dayes. With the Conby the people; That, befides one Colony fulsthey fent forth to the war four Legions already planted in the territory of the Seno- of their own: every Legion confifting of five nes, as many more should be carried thither, thousand two hundred foot, and three hunas would ferve to people the whole Coun- dredhorfe; and of their Allies thirteen thou-Virginia, or Guiana it self, would not over- rians fifty thousand foot, and four thou-Rome took this in fo good part, notwith- in the border of Hetruria. Of the Umbri and standing all danger joyned with the benefit, Sarfinates, which inhabited the Apenines, netians and Cenomans, other twenty thou-

000002

fand: which latter Armies were directed to general, as good fighting men, as elsewhere invade the Boji, that forcing them to defend might be found. their own Territories, the General Army of Notwithstanding all these counter prepathe Gauls should be thereby greatly dimi- rations, the Gauls keep on their way: and

(c. Janger and ) reventy thousand; in that of the (g) Lapper and be charged on their backs, they turned head: Bus seem Meffippees, fifty thousand foot, and fixteen and in the same evening discovered the Ro-Nation; thousand the thousand now a matter of apparent necessity, that allo called horse; the (b) Marsi, (i) Marsisini, (k) Fer- fight they must. Wherefore they helped Penalise, rentani, and the Vestini, of twenty thousand themselves with a stratagem, that shew-Applies, foot, and four thousand horse. The Romans ed no great fineness of wit, but such and Gala-bases. The had also two Legions in Sicil, and about Ta- as well beseemed those that had none Country rentum, containing eight thousand four hun- other occupation than war; and stood them con aining of the Romans and Campanes joyntly, reckon- the night, they cause their foot to march of cashing fand foot; and of horse three and twenty off at the first light of day, with such a speed, (7) A per thousand: of which, reckoning the Romans as might rather argue a running away, than pic of the me were an hundred and fifty a retreat; as if they had not dared to abide thousand foot, and about six thousand horse. battell. The Romans, interpreting this their (1) Prelime Casting up the whole forces of all the Pro hasty departure, as the Gauls desired they a resple of vinces in Italy, both of the Romani and their should, follow them in disorder. The Gault nine thousand two hundred of the foot. fwerable to this large accompt. Yet were the themselves any further. Romans fain to arm their flaves, even for This indeed had been a good resolution, want of other Souldiers, after their over if they had taken it, before the enemy had throw at Canna. Wherefore the marvel is been in fight. But as well in the wars of not great, that the Carthaginians and others these later ages, as in former times, it hath were little terrified with report of such a ever been sound extream dangerous to make multitude. For all heads are not fit for Helnished. There were besides these, to be entring into Tuscane, destroy, and put to fire ready against all uncertain chances of war, and sword, all that lay before them. From thirty thousand foot, and fifteen hundred thence they march directly towards Rome: horle-garrifoned in Rome it felf, of their own hoping to find the Romans rather in delipeople; and of their Allies, thirty thousand beration, than in the field. But their infoot, and two thousand horse. Over and telligence fails them. For the Roman Arabove thele great troops; in the Roll of the my, fent into Tuscane, having taken some Latines that was fent unto the Senate, there other way than they did, and finding that were numbred fourscore thousand foot, and it had missed of them, came again fast after five thousand horse; in that of the Sam- them, to arrest them in their journey. Herenites, seventy thousand foot, and of horse of when they heard the rumour, fearing to thousand horse; the Lucans sent a list of man Army, by whom they incamped. It was dred foot, and four hundred horse. So as in good stead at the present. In the dead of ing men armed, and fit to bear arms, there away, but not far, leaving their horse in were regiltred two hundred and fifty thou- guard; to whom they give order to come (E.A. ro. confederates, it amounted to feven hundred return, charge them, and kill fix thouland (6) Apro-thousand foot, and seventy thousand horse. upon the place; the rest take a piece of profits cal- But the number is somewhat mis-cast by Po- ground of advantage, and defend themselves, day Fron lybius; not with a purpose to inrich himself till L. Emilius, being at Ariminum, comes day Finds by the dead payes; for where he reckons to their fuccour. Upon the coming of the nine hundred horse too many, he falls short Consul, the Gauls consult, whether they should give the Romans battel, or forbear. How great soever this muster was, it In which dispute, Aneroestus, one of their feems to have been like unto that, which Kings, perswades them, rather to return in-Lodowick Sforza made, when Lewis the to their own Countreys; where, after they twelfth invaded Milan: at what time, the had disposed of the great spoils and riches better to encourage himself and his subjects which they had gotten, they should then hetook a Roll of all persons able to bear renew the war, being without carriage, pearms, within the Dutchy, though indeed he fter or other impediment. This advice they were never able to bring a tenth part of all embrace; for, feeing they that were them into the field. Certain it is, that the Mercenaries, had obtained what they came battels of Trebia, Thrasymene, and Canne, did for, to wit, the spoils of their enemies, they not confume any fuch proportion, as was an- thought it wisdom, to hazard neither it, nor mets: though the Roman Citizens were, in For although they that retire, do often turn heads yet in always going on from the purfu-Inels, and was one of them that had cause to ing enemy, they find within few miles, either thank him for it. Now the Gauls, embracing the fafe ad-ftraight, hedge, ditch or place of difadvanupon a retreat made by the Marques of sal, the place, accompanied with the two Kings doth testifie no less. For although a great of the Gauls, Concolitanus and Aneroestus;

ing Enemy a long time, and gave the foot leasure to trot away; yet being retarded courage; and, ere long, all that they held in by often turnings, the Spanish foot overtook Italy. For they were invaded the year foland defeated them utterly. During the lowing this overthrow, by the new Confuls, wars between the Imperials and the French, Fulvius and Manlius. The Romans knew fore they left the field. So was stroft over- Gauls, to repair their forces, as the Gauls thrown by the Marques of Marignan, be- had done to them. These new Consuls beat cause he could not be perswaded to dislodge the Boji; but by reason of the great rains the night before the Marquess his arrivall, that fell, and the great pestilence that reign-Therefore did the French King Francis the ed, they were compelled for that prefent there is less dishonour to dislodge in the and all forts of their divination, the Rodark, than to be beaten in the light. And mans were extremely superstitious) had hereof M. de la Noue gives this judgement of a not only foreshewed little good, when they days retreat, made in France, presently before were chosen, but had also nullified the elethe battel at Moncountour. For (faith he) ction. C. Flaminius, receiving letters of

were forced to fight upon our disadvan-unto the enemies, vanquished them, and tage, and to our ruine. And yet did that spoiled their Countrey; then perused the worthy Gentleman Count Lodowick of Naf- letters; and returning home obtained a Jau, brother to the late famous Prince of triumph, fore against the will of the Senate.

Orange, make the retreat at Moncounter with and not altogether with good liking of the so great resolution, as he saved the one half people, who yet bear him out, for that he

of the Protest ant Army, then broken and dif- lided in faction with the Commonalty, banded; of which my felf was an eye-wit-though a man of great Nobility.

tage, which they are inforced to pals in dif- vice (as they take it) of one of their Kings. order. In such cases, the Souldier knows turn their backs to the enemy, and their it as well as the Captain, that he which for- faces homeward. Amilius follows them as fakes the field, perceives and fears fome ad- near as he can, without ingaging himfelf, atvantage of the Enemies. Fear, which is tending his advantage. In the mean while. the betrayer of those succours that reason C. Atilius the other Conful, with the Legions offereth, when it hath once possest the of sardinia, lands at Pila; so as the Cauls heart of man, it casteth thence both cou-inclosed between two Armies, are forced to rage and understanding. They that make fight. They therefore equally strengthen retreat, are alwayes in fear to be abandon- their Rear and Front. To fultain Amilius ed; they that lead the way, fear to be in- they appoint the Geffates, and the Milanois; gaged: and so the hindmost treads on his in the Front they range the Piemontois, and heels that is foremost, and consequently, all the rest of the Gauls inhabiting upon the disband, run, and perish, if those that favour | River of Po. The manner of the fight Polybins the retrait be not held to it by men of great describeth at large: which was well fought courage. The miserable overthrow that the of all hands. But in the end the Gauls fell; French received in Naples, in the year 1503. and so did Atilius the Consul: who died in troop of French horse sustained the pursu- with forty thousand of their Vassals After this fatal overthrow, the Ganls loft Boili and Mont were lost at Brignolles, who well how to use their victory: they gave not in a bravery would needs see the enemy, be- ten, twenty, or thirty years time to the first wisely: when without respect of point to surcease. In the second year, Furius and of honour, he dislodged from before Lander- Flaminius invade the Milanois; and prefer, by night, as many other the most advi- vail very far, being strongly affisted by the fed Captains, ( not finding themselves in Cenomanni and the Venetians. Neverthecase to give battel) have done. Je ne trouve l'es these Consuls were revoked out of their point (faith the Marshall Monluc) ant fait des Province, by the Senate of Rome, and comarmes chose st difficile, qu'unne retraitte; I pelled to resign their Office; because the find nothing in the art of war so difficult as Augures, or Soothsayers, had found, that to make a safe retreat. A sure rule it is that some token or other of the Birds (in which, staying upon our reputation, in shew, not to this revocation from the Senate, and being dislodge by night; we lost our reputation in otherwise advertised of the contents, was deed, by dislodging by day: whereby we not hasty to open them; but first gave battel rounded the Decree, for dividing the voking any one to fight with him. Marcellus Countrey of the Senones among the people was no less daring, than the barbarous of Kome. He was the first, or one of the King : whether more wise in this action. I first, that understanding the Majesty of will not dispute; he was more fortunate and Rome to be indeed wholly in the people, and that fufficed to commend him. He flew and no otherwise in the Senate, than by a way disarmed Britomarus, in the presence of both of Delegacy, or grand Commission; did not Armies: whereby his own men took such stand highly upon his birth and degree, but courage, and his enemies were so dismayed, courted the multitude, and taught them to that without much trouble of fight the Reknow and use their power, over himself and mans obtained a great Victory. his fellow Senators, in reforming their dif- This was the third and last time, that orders. For this, the Commons highly esteem- ever any Roman General slew the General of ed him, and the Senators as deeply hated the enemies, with his own hand. To this him. But he had the furer fide, and found kind of victory, belonged a peculiar triimitators, that role by the fame art, which umph; whereof only Romulus, Coffus, and in process of time, grew the only or chief this Marcellus, had the honour : yet I dare way to preferment.

MAP. III.

CHAP. II.

poled, M.Claudius Marcellus, and Conselius ter men of war than any of these three; Scipio, were chosen Consuls, for the rest of though they never offered up to Jupite, that year. The Gauls about this time desi- Opima spolia, The Armour of a General slain red peace; and were like to have obtained by themselves, when they were Generals, nor it : though the new Confuls were against it, perhaps affected so to do. as fearing to want work. But when thirty thousand of the Gessates following their the Romans; and Milan soon after : with all King Britomarus, were come over the Alpes, that belonged to the Cifalpines, or Gauls, and joyned with the Insubrians: all other that dwelt in Lombardie. Thus was that vadiscourse, than ofpresent war, was at an end. liant and mighty Nation, that had so many So the Confuls hasted into their Province, | years vexed the State of Rome, and in forwhere they besieged Acerra, a Town not mer times taken the City it self, brought to far from Novarro ( fo far had the Romans pierced already in the Dutchy of Milan.) To divert them from this fiege, Britomarus fat down before Clastidium, a Town in the fame Tract, with a great part of his forces: leaving the rest, with the Insubrians, to attend upon the Confuls at Acerra, and to look felves in the cold and barren Mountains, like to the defence of Milan. But this would not fuffice, to make the Romans break up their fiege. Marcellus, taking with him the greateft part of the horse, and fix hundred foot lightly armed, thought to deal well enough with those at Classidium. Britomarus heard of the Confuls coming, and met him upon the way: fo fuddenly, that the Roman had aveonce in the reign of Numa; nor in long no leifure to rest themselves after their jour time after, untill the reign of Augustus. But ney, but were compelled instantly to fight : number, both of horse and foot : but he might boldly undertake, to extend their Mothought so well of his own personal valour, narchy as far as their ambition could reach.

This was that Flaminius, who had pro- that he rode out fingle before his Army, pro-fay, that the two Scipio's, and divers of the Flaminius and his Colleague, being dif- Roman Captains, especially Casar, were bet-

After this victory, Acerra was yielded to nothing in a short time; their pleasant and fertile Territory possest by the Romans; and the remainder of their Nation, inhabiting Italy, fo many as would not subject their necks to the Roman voke, either forced to abandon their Countreys, or to hide them-Outlawes and Thieves. And thus did the Romans spend the three and twenty years following the peace made with Carthage. In part of which time, they were at fuch leifure, that they closed up the Temple of fanus: which they never did before, (it standney, but were compelled instantly to fight: this their present happiness was not to last Herein Britomarus had done well, if he had long: a dangerous War, and perhaps the not forthwith, in a rash bravery, lost his greatest that had ever been, was to come ungame at a cast. He had advantage enough in to their Gates; which being well ended, they

CHAP. III.

Of the fecond Punick Warr.

6. I.

The Wars of Hannibal in Spain. Quarrels between the Romans and Carthaginians. Hannibal besiegeth and taketh Saguntum, whilft the Romans are busied with the Illyrians. War proclaimed between Rome and Carthage.

by the Army, as foon as Asarubal was dead: famine or pestilence, or after some great and the election was ratified by the State of loss of Army or Fleet, they should be driven Carthage; wherewith Hanno and his Com- to yield unto the impudent demands of plices were nothing pleased. This was now their enemies; and to give away basely the third of the Barchine family ( fo called of their lands and treasures, as they had lately Amilear, whose surname was Bareas ) that done; ot miserably fight, upon terms of had command in chief, over the men of war. difadvantage.

Which honour would perhaps have been This difpolition of his Country-men, Hanless envied by these domestical enemies, if nibal well understood. Neither was he igthe Alies and friends of the Bachine house, norant (for his father, and other friends, had had not also born the whole sway in Go- long time devised of this business ) that in vernment, and been the only men regarded, making war with the Romans, it was no both by the Senate and the people. This ge- small advantage to get the start of them. If neral good will, as it was first purchased by once he could bring an Army into Italy, the most worthy deserts of Amilear in sa- without molestation; there was good hope ving his Country from imminent ruine, in- that he should find friends and affistance, larging the Dominion thereof, and inriching even of those people, that helped to increase it with treasures and great revenues; so was the Roman Armies in foreign wars. But this it retained, by the same good Arts, among could never be effected, if the matter were his friends and followers. Hanno therefore, openly disputed at Carthage. For it was to be and his Partisans, being neither able to tax doubted, that the Carthaginians, how glad the vertue of their enemies, that was unre- foever they would be, to hear that he had provable; nor to perform the like services set the war on foot, would nevertheless be unto the common-weal; had nothing left flow and timorous, as commonly men are in whereby to value themselves, excepting the the beginning of great enterprises, if the general reprehension of War, and cautelous matter were referred to their deliberation advice of not provoking the Romans. This Which if it should happen, then were the they seasoned other-whiles with detraction; Romans like to be made acquainted, not onfaying, that the Barchine faction went about ly with the generalities of his purpose, but to oppressthe liberty of the City. But their with such particulars as must be discoursed malicious words were unregarded; and if it of, in procuring allowance to his defign. were factious, to bear ill-will to Rome, then This might suffice to disorder the whole were all the Citizens (very few excepted) no Project. Wherefore, he resolved to lay siege less Barchine, than Hannibal himself. For it unto Saguntum, which might seem not greatwas long fince apparent, that the oath of the ly to concern the Romans, and would highly Romans, to the articles of peace, afforded please the Carthaginians, that had fresh in no security to Carthage, were she never so mind the indignity of that Spanish Towns quiet, and officious; unlefs the should yield alliance with her half triends. So should to become their subject. Since therefore the he assay both the patience of his enemies, peace was like to hold no longer, than until and the disposition of his own Citizens.

ANNIBAL, the Son of Amil- the Romans could find some good advancar, was about fix and twenty tage, to renew the war: it was rather defiyears old, when he was chosen red by the Carthaginians, that whilest their General of the Carthaginian ownestate was in good case, the war should forces in Spain. He was elected begin; than that in some unhappy time of went fair and orderly to work: and begin- in the Army, the most adventrous, but that ning with those that lay next in his way, ap- which may befeem a Captain, or inferiour proaching unto Saguntum by degrees. This Commander, doth not alwayes become a he did (faith Livie) to give some colour to Chief; though it hath sometime succeeded his proceedings : as if he had not principally well with fuch great ones, as have been intended the war against Suguntum, but had found more fortunate than wife. At this been drawn thither by course of business, time, our great Man of war knew as well Yet reason teacheth plainly, that without how to dissemble his courage, as at other regard of fuch formalities, it was needful to times to make it good. For he with-drew finish the conquest of the rest, before he did himself from the River-side, as if searfull to any thing that should provoke the Romans. foord it; thereby to draw over that great First therefore he entred upon the Territo- multitude from their banks of advantage. · A necotte ry of the * Olcades; and having befreged Al- The Spaniards, apprehending this in such (Jinh Su-that (Livic called it Carteia) their chief fort, as Hannibal defired that they should City, he became, in a few daies, Master not thrust themselves in fury and disorder, into Bieres only thereof, but of all the other Towns of the swift stream, with a purpose to charge their Country. This Nation which he first the Carthaginians, abandoning ( as they definition undertook, being subdued, and the winter thought for fear ( the defences on the conof Spain at hand, he refted his Army in new Carthage, trary fide. But when Hamibal faw themin or Carthagena; and imparted liberally to their way, and well-near over; he turned found mear the Souldiers, the spoils he had gotten in back his Elephants to entertain them at by Soldier, and his late Conquest.

849

850

called Salamanca; and after it, (b) Arbucala, midst of the staff; had such an advantage the Old by affault : though not without a long over the foot, that were in the River, under callior At- fiege, and great difficulty. But in his return, their strokes, clattered together, and unable bicair, an he was put to the height, both of his cou- to move or shift their bodies, as on firm rage, and of his Martial judgment. For all ground, that they slew all those (in a manthe Fance fuch of the Vaccei, as were able to bear ner) without refiftance, which were already " Japan arms, being made desperate by the spoil of entered into the water ; and pursued the rest, their Country, with those of Salamanca, and that fled like men amazed, with so great a of the Olcades, that had escaped in the late slaugher, as from that day forward, there overthrow, joyning themselves with the To- was not any Spaniard, on that fide the River letans; compounded an Army of an hundred of Iberus, (the Saguntines excepted) that thousand able men : and stayed Hannibal had the daring to lift up their hands against on the banks of the River Tague, which runn-eth to the Sea by Libborn in Portugal. These four Nations, having had experience of wards them, cryed before they were hurt. Hannibals invincible courage, and that he They fent Embassadours to Rome, and benever faw enemy, upon whom he durst not mouned themselves, as likely to suffer that, give charge; were throughly resolved, that which afterwards they suffered indeed; on-his natural valour would at this time no less ly because of their alliance and friendship neglected the cold advice of discretion, than with this honourable City, which the Carat other times it had feemed to do, when thaginians hated. This tale moved the Sethe like great occasion perswaded him to nate, but much more a report, that Sagunuse it. But he that makes himself a body tum was already besieged. Hereupon some of Crystal, that all men may look thorow cry out, that War should be proclaimed by him, and discern all the parts of his dispo- Land and Sea; as also that the two Consuls fition, makes himself (withall) an As: and should be fent with Armies, the one into thereby teacheth others, either how to spain, the other into Africk But others went ride, or drive him. Wife men, thoughthey more Roman-like to work, and carried it. So have fingle hearts in all that is just and ver- it was only concluded; that Embassadours tuous: yet they are like Coffers with double | should be fent into spain, to view the state bottoms: which when others look into be- of their confederates: which were indeed ing opened, they see not all that they hold, none other than the Saguntines. For if Hanon the fudden, and at once. It is true, that | nibal intended war against Rome, it was this fubtle Carthaginian, when he ferved un- likely that he should give them, ere it were

CHAP. III. Having thus concluded, he nevertheless der Asdrubal, was, of all the men of mark their landing: and thrust his Horse-men, In the Spring following, he pursued the both above and beneath them, into the Rifrom New war against the (a) Vaccai; and without any ver, These carrying a kind of Lance de Gay, Castings, and against the (a) seems and without any ver, There earlying a kind of Lance at Gay, long, a more plaufible occasion to take | In the mean while, Demetrius Pharius, herve to countenance their following De- thankful disposition. The commotion of the that they found Hannibal before Saguntum, ginian war, emboldened him to despite his but could not get audience of him, and there- Benefactors and Patrons: whom he ought to fore went to Carthage, where also they were have defended and aided, in all perils, even not regarded, nor heard. But Polybins an with the hazard of his whole eltate, which Historian of fincerity less questionable, tells, he had received of their gift. But he was a that they found him at Carthagena, and had Traitor to his own Queen; and therefore conterence with him, though fuch as left dealt according to his kind, with those that them doubtful. This is more agreeable to had rewarded him for being fuch. First he the rest of Hannibal his whole course. And built ships, and spoiled the Isles of Greece; furely we might wonder, why the Carthagi- against the covenants to which he was nians should afterwards admit a more pe- bound. Then he adventured further, and seiremptory Embailage (as Livie confelleth) fed upon some places, that the Romans kept and fall to disputation about the covenants in their own hands. If he had begun sooner, of Peace; if they had rejected that which or rather if he had stayed somewhat longer. was fent, upon none other pretence than pre- he might have feed better. For the butiness vention of war.

CHAP. III.

fro, Hannibal prepared not only his forces, felf by his doings, an enemy, and was vanbut some Roman pretences, against sagun- quithed. The Roman Conful, Amilius, was tum. He found out Mamertines, or people fent against him: who in seven daies wan that should do as the Mamertines in sicil the strong Town of Dimalum; and thereby had done for the Romans; and implore his brought fuch terrour upon the Country help against the Saguntines. These were round about, that Embassadours were sent the Turdetani, a Nation adjoyning to Sagun- from all places, to yield themselves, withtum, and having many quarrels with them. Out putting him to further pains. Only the (as happens commonly among neighbours) City of Pharus, in which Demetrius lay, of which, Hannibal himself hatched some. prepared to resist: which he might have Finding therefore such an occasion, what done long, if the hot-headed Rebel had not loever it was, as made himable to fay, that been too foolish. Amilius landed a great the Saguntines had first provoked him, ere part of his Army in the Isle of Pharus, by he medled with them; he made no more night; and bestowed them in covert, preado, but fate down with his whole power be- tenting himfelf the next morning with twenfore their Town. He was now more secure, ty ships before the Town, and offering to than he had formerly been of his own Citi- force the Haven. Demetrius with all his zens: for that they had not entertained the power issued out against the Consul, and was Roman Embassadours, with any trembling re- loon intercluded from the Town, by those verence, as of late years they had been wont. that lay in ambush. Wherefore he fled away Nevertheless, he was glad of any handsome through by-paths to a Greek, where he had colour, to shadow his actions: not only be shipping ready for him, and imbarqued himcause the War, which he so much desired, self: leaving all his estate unto them, of was not proclaimed; but that he might not | whose liberality he first had it. be checked in his course, as an open enemy, make Saguntum, the feat of the War.

Arms against him : if he had no such purpose, whom the Romans had made King over a vet would it be in their power to determine great part of Illyria, rebelled against them; what they lifted themselves, upon the report either for that he found himself overof these Embassadours; and this their gra- straightly tyed up by them, with hard condivity, in being not too rash at first, would tions; or rather because he was of an uncree. Of these Embassadours Livie reports, Gauls, and afterward the same of the Carthawith the Gauls was ended; with Hannibal, Whilest the Embassadours passed to and not throughly begun, when he declared him-

This business, though it were soon disbefore he could fet foot in Italy. The Romans patched, yet prevented it not the fiege of Sahad the like, though contrary defire. They guntum; before which Hannibal fate down, were glad of the quarrel; as hoping that ere Amilius was landed in Illyria. In the Carthage, with all thereto belonging, should beginning of the siege, the Carthaginians thereby in short space become their own. Yet were much discouraged, by reason of the were they not hasty to threaten, before they brave fallies made by the Saguntines; in one were ready to strike; but meant to tempo- of which, their General received a dangerous rize, until they had an Army in readiness to wound in the thigh, that caused him to lye be fent into Spain, where they thought to many daies unable to move. Nevertheleft, he was not unmindfull of his work in the movable Towers, that might equal those the War. which were built on the walls of the City :

Ppppp

mean while; but gave order to raife certain friends at Carthage, and to animate them unto

These tydings exceedingly vexed the Roand to prepare to batter the curtains, and mans, who had good cause to be angry at make a breach. These being finished and ap-their own slowness, in forbearing to send plied, had foon wrought their effect. A help unto the Saguntines, that held out eight great and large breach was made, by the fall months, looking Itill for fuccour, but in vain. of divers Towers, and a great length of wall; Wherefore they determined to repair whereat an hot all ault was given; but it was their honour, by taking tharp revenge. To fo well fulfained by the sagantines, as the this end they fent Embaffadours again to Carthaginians were not only beaten from Carthage: demanding only, Whether it were the breach, and out of some ground with- by general consent and allowance of the Carin the Town, which upon the first fury they thaginians, that Hannibal had made war uphad won; but they were pursued even to on Saguntum: which if they granted (as their own trenches and camp. Nevertheless it feemed they would) then to give them the Carthaginian Army, wherein were about defiance. Hereunto answer was made, in an hundred and fifty thousand men, did so the Senate of carthage, to this effect; That weary the Towns-men with continual tra- this their fecond Embaffage, howfoever vel, that at length it got within the walls; qualified with mild words, was indeed more and was only hindred from taking full pol-infolent than the former. For in that, they fellion of the City, by fome counter-works only required justice against Hannibal; but of the Saguntines, that were also ready to be in this, the very State and Common-wealth won. In this extremity, there was one Alcon of Carthage, was urged to plead guilty, or a Saguntine, that conveyed himself out of not guilty. But (faid the Carthaginian the Town, to treat with Hannibal for some ac- speaker) whether the General of our Army cord. But the conditions which the Cartha- in Spain, in belieging Saguntum, have only ginian offered were so severe, and without followed his own counsel; or whether he all compass of honour, as Alcon durst not did it, by direction from us: it is not the return to propound them to his Country-question which the Komans ought to ask us.

men. For Hannibal demanded all that they had, gold, sliver, plate, and other riches within the City: yea, the City it self to be lawful for Hannibal to do as be hath done.

For it belongs to us, to call our own Comhe would assign some other place for their manders in question, and to punish them achabitation: not allowing them to carry out with them any other thing, wherechallenge us, if we have done any thing with to fustain themselves, than the cloaths contrary to our late League and contract. on their backs; or other arms, to defend It is true, that in our negotiation with Luthem, than their nails and teeth. Yet might datim the Conful, the Allies of both Nathey far better have submitted themselves tions were comprehended: but the Sagununto this miserable appointment, (seeing times were not then of your Allies, and therethereby they might have injoyed their lives, and faved the honour of their wives and faved the honour of their wives and daughters) than to have rested at the discre- was no dispute. As touching the last agreetion of the Conquerour, as soon after they ment between you and Asarubal, wherein did: by whom their wives and daughters you will say that the Saguntines were comwere deflowed before their own faces; and prehended by name; it is you that have all put to fword, that were above fourteen taught us how to answer that particular. For years of age. For it was a poor comfort, what loever you found in the Treaty between which a great number of them took; when us and Luctatins, to your own disadvantage, not daring to fight, and fell their blood at you cast it upon your Consuls presumption the dearest rate, they shut themselves up as promising those things, for which he had like most wretched creatures in their own no warrant from the Senate and people of houses, and therein burnt themselves with Rome. If then it be lawfull for the Romans, all that they had: fodying unrevenged. The to disavow the actions of their Consuls and treasures found in saguntum, which were Commanders, concluding any thing without very great, Itannibal kept wherewith topay punctual and precise warrant; the same lihis Army: the flaves and other booty, he berty may we also assume, and hold our divided among his Souldiers, referving tome | felves no way bound in honour to perform things of choice, wherewith to present his those bargains which Astrubal hath made for us, without our commandment and Fabius) take the War, and there it among confent.

This was an impertinent answer, and cepted. little better than a meer cavil. For Luctatius the Conful, in his Treaty of Peace with the pretences, when each part had resolved to had been therefore much better to have ever been maintained by the party unwildealt plainly, and to have alledged, That ling, or unable to sustain the War. The rusty after this League was made and confirmed sword, and the empty purse, do alwayes plead on both parts, it was broken by the Romans, open War. As for the Saguntines, it little Peace between ambitious Princes and States, skilled that the Romans had admitted them is but a kind of breathing) the best advised breach of Peace, in taking away Sardinia, as he could, ere the War brake out; Don were no better than Roman injuries, as im- John, with the Netherlands; and Philip the plying this commination, Do what sever we second of Spain, with the English, when in require ; else will we make War, without the great Imbarge he took all our thing and regard of our oath, which we have already goods in his Ports. broken.

But this the Carthaginians did not alledge, forgetting, in heat of contention (as Poly- juries received from these enemies, had anobiss takes it ) the best of their Plea. Yet since ther private and hereditary desire, that vio-Livie himself doth remember and acknowledge, that the taking of Sardinia from the Father Amilcar, at what time he did facri-Carthaginians, did inflame the spirit of Amil fice, being ready to take his journey into car with defire of revenge : we may reaso- spain, had solemnly bound him by oath, to nably think, that the mention of this inju- purfue them with immortal hatred, and to ry was omitted, not so much upon forgetful- work them all possible mischief, as soon as nels, as for that it was not thought conver he should be a man, and able. Hannihal was nient, by ripping up such ancient matter of then about nine years old, when his Father quarrel, to shew that the war, now towards, caused him to lay his hand upon the Altar, had long been thought upon, and like to be and make this yow: fo that it was no marvel. made with extraordinary force, in other if the impression were strong in him. manner than heretofore. In conclusion, the That it is inhumane to bequeath hatred Carthaginian Senate moved the Roman Em- in this fort, asit wereby Legacy, it cannot tines, and the confining of their Armies that as foon as their coffers shall be full, they ces. Whereupon 2. Fabius gathering up ple of England. the skirt of his gown, as if somewhat had been laid in the hollow thereof, made this short reply: I have here (quoth he) in my Gown-skirt both Peace and War: make you (my Masters of the Senate) election of these two, which of them you like belt, and purpose to imbrace. Hereat all cryed out at once; Even which of them you your felf have a fancy to offerus. Marry then (quoth which he had drawn against the Saguntines, you: Which the affembly willingly ac-

This was plain dealing. To wrangle about Carthaginians, had expresly referred the al- make War, it was meerly frivolous. For all lowance thereof to the people of Rome. It these disputes of breach of Peace, have performance of covenants. There have in robbing the Carthaginians of the Ille of been few Kings or States in the World, that Sardinia, and withall of twelve hundred have otherwise understood the obligation of talents: which perjury the State of Carthage, a Treaty, than with the condition of their being now grown able, would revenge with own advantage: and commonly (feeing into confederacy, and forthwith inserted have rather begun with the sword, than their names into the Treaty of Peace with with the trumpet. So dealt the Arragonois Aldrubal: feeing that the Treaty with Af- with the French in Naples; Henry the second drubal, and all other business between Rome of France, with the Imperials, when he and Caribage, following the violence and wrote to Brifac, to surprise as many places

But Hannibal, besides the present strength of Carthage, and the common feeling of inlently carryed him against the Romans. His bassadours, to deliver unto them in plain be denyed. Yet for mine own part, I do not terms the purposes of those that sent them, much doubt, but that some of those Kings, and the worst of that, which they had long with whom we are now in peace, have redetermined against them: as for the Sagun- ceived the like charge of their Predecessors, within Iberus; those were but their preten- shall declare themselves enemies to the peo-

ø. 11.

Hannibal takes order for the defence of Spain, and Africk. His fourney into Italy.

WArr being thus proclaimed, Hannibal refolved not to put up his sword Ppppp 2

untill he had therewith opened his pallage asking leave: which that others might not unto the gates of Rome. So began the se-*Majora, * Baleares. Befides these, he selected four fore sought to keep him from passing over Elephants.

of his house, who sate still at carthage) to on which the beasts were towed over. whom he left an Army of ten thousand foot, both the rage of the River, and of those that and one thousand horse. Being arrived defended it, he was visited by the Princes at the borders of Spain, some of his spa- of the Gauls Cisalpines, that inhabited Pienish Souldiers returned home, without mont and Milan, who lately had revolted cond Punick War; fecond to none that many more that feemed willing to be gone. ever the Senate and people of Rome sustain- Hereby it came to pass, that the Journey ed. Hannibal wintred at Carthagena; where seemed the less tedious unto those that ache licensed his Spanish Souldiers to visit companied him, as being not enforced by their friends, and refresh themselves against compulsion. With the rest of his Army, conthe Spring. In the mean while he gave fifting now but of fifty thousand foot, and instructions to his Brother Asdrubal for the nine thousand horse, he past the Pyrenes, and Government of spain in his absence. He entred into Gaul. He found the Gauls that also took order, to send a great many troops bordered upon Spain, ready in Arms to forof spaniards into Africk, to equal the bid his entrance into their Countrey: but number of Africans formerly drawn thence won them with gentle speech, and rich preinto Spain; to the end, that so the one sents that he bestowed upon their Leaders. Nation might remain as pledges and gages to favour his Expedition. So without any for the other. Of the Spaniards, he trans-molestation, he came to the bank of Rhodaported into Africk thirteen thousand, eight mus; where dwelt, on each side of the River, hundred and fifty foot, and twelve hundred a people called Volce, These were unacquainhorse; also eight hundred slingers of the ted with the cause of his coming; and therethousand foot, all young men, and of quali- the water. But he was greatly affished by ty, out of the best Cities of Spain; which he some of those Ganls, that inhabited on the appointed to be garrisoned in Carthage it self, West side of Rhodanus, to wit, by those of not fo much in regard of their forces, as that Vivaretz and Lyonnois. For although many they might serve for hostages: for among of them had transported themselves and those four thousand, the best of the Spanish their goods, into the Country of Dauphine, Citizens, and those that swayed most in thinking to defend the further bank against their several States, had their Sons or Kins- him: yet such as remained, being very demen. He also left with his Brother, to sirous to free their Countrey of so many ill guard the Coasts and Ports, fifty and seven guests, were better pleased to have their Gallies; whereof thirty seven were present- Countrey-men well beaten, which had abanly armed, and appointed for the war. Of doned them, than to have their own store of Africans and other Nations, strangers, he left corn and cattel wasted, by the long stay offo with him above twelve thousand foot, and great an Army, as lay upon them. For which two thousand horse, besides one and twenty reason, they helped him to make boats; informed him of another more easie passage, Having in this fort taken order for the de-fence of Spain and Africk; he sent disco-When the Vessels for transportation of his verers before him, to view the Passages of Army were in readines; he sent Hanno, the the Pyrenaun Mountains, and of the Alps. Son of Bomilear, up the River: himfelf in the He allo fent Embassadours to the Mountai-mean while making countenance to enter ners of the Pyrenes, and to the Gauls, to ob- the Foord below. The end of this labour, tain a quiet passage: that he might bring his was, that Hanno charging the Gaules una-Army entire into Haly, and not be compelled wares upon their own side, and Hannibal, at to diminish his force, by any War in the the same time, passing the River in their faway, till he came to encounter the Romans, ces, the further bank was won, though with His Emballadours and Discoverers being re- some difficulty; and the enemies dispersed. turned with good satisfaction; in the begin- Yet was he greatly troubled in conveying ning of the Spring, he past over the River of over his Elephants; who marvellously feared theres, with an Army confifting of fourfcore the water. He was therefore driven to make and ten thousand foot, and twelve thousand raffs of trees, and cover them with Earth horse. All those parts of Spain, into which and Turf; whereof he fastned one to each he had not entred before, he now subdued: bank, that might serve as a bridge, to and and appointed Hanno (not that old enemy from another of the same fort, but loose upgovern spain on the East side of Iberus; to Having past this first brunt, and overcome from the Romans. These informed him of the rooted out, and destroyed by the Caribagiand refistance:

s. III.

Romans.

marched thus far, had been folicited before, rather some assurance from the people of by the same Roman Embassadours, who Massilia, which were consederates with had denounced the war at Carthage. Thefe, Rome, that the Gauls were determined to as they were instructed by the Senate, took take part with their enemy. Of this inclinaspain in their way home-ward from Car-thage, with a purpose to draw into the Ro- For when the news was brought into Italy, man Alliance, as many of the Cities and that the Carthaginians had passed Iberus, Princes as they could; at least to diffwade and were on the way towards Rome; this them from contracting any friendship with alone sufficed to stir up the Boji, and Insubrithe Carthagimians. The first which they at- ass, against the Romans. These reople were tempted were the Volcians, a people in Spain, lately offended at the plantation of new from whom, in open assembly, they received Roman Colonies, at Cremona, and Placentia, by one that spake for the rest, this uncom- within their Territories. Relying therefore fortable answer : With what face (faith he) upon the Carthaginian succour, which they can ye Romans periwade us to value your supposed to be now at hand; they laid Alliance, or to prefer it before the friendship aside all regard of those hostages, which of the Carthaginians; seeing we are taught they had given to the Romans, and fell upon by the example of the Saguntines, to be more the new Colonies. The Towns it feems they wifethan fo? For they, relying on your faith could not win; for Hannibal shortly after

paffages of the Alps; that they were not so mians; whom they might else have held difficult, as common report made them; and their affured friends, and good neighbours. from these he received guides, with many as we, and other the people of Spain have other encouragements. All which notwith- found them. Ye may therefore be gone, with standing, he found himself extreamly in this resolution from us, That for our parts combred by the Savoyans; and loft, both of (and fo I think, I may answer for the rest of his carriages, and of his Carthaginians, more our Country-men) the Romans henceforth than willingly he would, or had formerly are not to expect any kindness at our hands thought that he should. For he was twice who are resolved, never to make account of mainly affailed by them, before he could re-their protection, nor amity. From the Volcover the plain Countreys on the other fide. cians, the Embassadours took their way to-And whereas his Journey over the Moun- wards the Gauls ; using their best arguments rains cost him fifteen dayes travel, he was to perswade them not to suffer the Cartha. every day, more or less, not only charged ginians to pass into Italy, thorow their Terby those Mountainers, but withall extream- ritory: and withall greatly glorifying themly beaten with grievous weather and snow: selves, their strength, and large Dominion. it being the beginning of Winter, when he But the Gauls laught them to fcorn, and had began, and overcame this passage. But the hardly the patience to hear them speak. fair and fertile Plains, which were now rea- For shall we (faid one of their Princes) dy to receive them; with the affiftance and by refifting Hannibals paffage into Italy, enconduct of the Cifalpine Gauls, who by their tertain a war which is not meant to be made proper forces had so often invaded the Ro- against us? Shall we hold the war among man Territory; gave them great comfort our felves, and in our own Territory, by and encouragement to go on : having no- force which marcheth with a speedy pace thing else of difficulty remaining, but that from us, toward our ancient enemies? Have which from the beginning they made ac the Romans deserved so well of us, and the compt to overcome, by their proper valour Carthaginians fo ill, that we should fet fire on and resolution; namely, the Roman Armies, our own houses, to save theirs from burning? No, we know it well, that the Romans have already forced some Nations of ours, out of their proper Territory and inheritance: and constrained others, as free as How the Romans in vain folicited the Spa-themselves, to pay them tribute. We will not niards and Gauls to take their part. The therefore make the Carthaginians, our ene-Rebellion of the Cifalpine-Gauls against the mies, who have no way as yet offended us, nor we them. With this unpleasing answer the Embassa-HE Countries of Spain and Ganl, dours returned home, carrying no good through which the Carthaginians news, of friends likely to help them; but and promised assistance, have been utterly failed to get them. But they forced the Roman

Commissioners

CHAP. III.

Commissioners, (who belike were abroad five hundred Numidians; Scipio, three in the Country) to flye to Modena: where hundred of his better appointed Roman they besieged them. The siege of Modena horse. These met and fought, and the Nahad continued some small time; when the midians were beaten: yet could not the Gaules, having little skill in assaulting Cities, Romans greatly brag, having slain only two waxed weary, and feemed defirous to have hundred, and loft of their own, one hundred peace, and to come to some good accord and forty. But when Scipio drew near, to with the Romans. This they did of purpole, have met with the Carthaginians; he found. to draw on some meeting; that they might that they were gone three dayes before; and therein lay hand upon the Roman Deputies, that (as he then found affuredly true) with thereby to redeem their Hostages in way of an intent to look upon the walls of Rome. exchange. And it fell out, in part, according This interrupted his intended Voyage into to their wish. For the Romans sent out Em- Spain. Nevertheless he sent away thither balladours to treat with them, and to con- his Brother Cm. Cornelius Scipio, with the clude a Peace; whom they detained. Man-greatest part of his Fleet and Army, to try lius the Prætor, who lay in these quarters what might be done against Asdrubal, and with an Army, hearing this outrage; marched the other Carthaginian Lieutenants in the in all halte to the relief of the besieged. But Country. He himself, taking with him a the Gaules, having laid a strong ambush in a few choise bands, returned by Sea to Pifa; wood joyning to the way, fell upon the Præ- and so patting thorow Tuscane into Lumbartor so opportunely, as he was utterly over- die, drew together the broken troops of thrown, and all his followers left dead in Manlius and Atilius that lately had been the place, a few excepted, that recovered, beaten by the Gaules: with which forces by fait running to a little village, but defen- he made head against the enemy, thinking fible supon the River of Po. When this was to find him over-laboured, with travel of heard at Rome, C. Attilius, another of the his painful Journey. Prætors, was hastily sent to relieve the befieged with a Legion, and five thousand of the Roman affociates: which forces were taken out of the Confuls Army, and supplyed Scipio the Roman Conful overcome by Hanby a new levy.

As the Gaules were too rash and hasty ; fo were the Romans too flow, and indeed too ill-advised, in the beginning of this war. They were not perswaded that Carthage, Five Months Hannibal had spent in his which had almost servicely endured so matter tedious Journey from Carthagena; what whereof he was neither glad, nor forry, as feveral shares. not meaning to have to do with him. Each Having newly paffed the Alpes, and scarce others number and doings : Hannibal, about of Piemont ; he fought to win the friendship

ø. IV.

nibal at Ticinum. Both of the Roman Confuls beaten by Hannibal, in a great battel at Trebia.

ny indignities in time of the late peace; great muster he could make, when he had would be to brave and couragious on the passed the Alpes, it is not easily found. Some fudden, as to attempt the conquest of Haly it reckon his foot at an hundred thousand, and felf. Wherefore they appointed one of their his horse at twenty thousand; others re-Consuls to make war in spain, the other port them to have been only twenty thouin Africk : resting secure of all danger at land foot, and six hundred horse. Hannibal home. Titus Sempronius took his way toward himself in his monument which he raised, in Affick, with an hundred and fixty Quin- the Temple of Juno Lacinia, agreeth with queremes, or Gallies of five to an Oar, which the latter fumm. Yet the Gaules, Ligupreparation may feem to threaten even the rians, and others that joyned with him, City of Carthage, to which it shall not come are likely to have mightily increased his near. P. Cornelius Scipio, the other Conful, Army, in short space. But when he march made all possible halte, by the way of Ge- ed Eastward from the banks of Rhodanus, noa, into Provence; and used such diligence, he had with him eight and thirty thouhaving the wind also favourable, as in five land foot, and eight thousand horse; of dayes he recovered Meljilia. There he was which, all fave those remembed by him-advertised of Hannibal his having passed the self in the Inscription of his Altar in Juno's River of Rhodanus, whom he thought to Temple, are like to have perished by dihave found busse yet a while in Spain. Har-have found busse yet a while in Spain. Har-hibal had also news of the Consuls arrival: which mischiefs had devoured, each their

of them fent forth Scouts to discover the refreshed his wearied Army in the Country

Their of the (a) Taurini, who lay next in his way. | prepared the minds of their Souldiers, by But the Taurini held war at that time with the best arguments they had: unto which the Insubrians, which were his good friends; Hannibal added the Rhetorick of a prefent and refused (perhaps for the same cause) his example, that he thewed upon certain priin amity. Wherefore he affaulted their Town; foners of the Sacoians, which he brought and wan it by force in three daies. Their along with him, fitted for the purpote, into fooil ferved well to hearten his Army; and Italy. For their, having been no less mifertheir calamity, to terrifie the Neighbour ably fettered and chained, than toaringly has places. So the Gault, without more ado, fed; and withall fo often foourged on their at the places. So the Gault, without more ado, fed; and withall fo often foourged on their at the places. fell unto his fide: many for fear, many also naked bodies, as nothing was more in their for good-will, according to their former in- defire, than to be delivered from their miclination. This disposition ran thorow the series by any kind of present death, were whole Country: which joyned, or was all brought into the micdle of the Army in readiness to joyn with the Carthaginians; where it was openly demanded, which of when the news of scipio the Conful his ar- them would fight hand to hand with fome rival, made some to be more advised than other of his Companions, till the one of thereft. The name of the Romans was ter- them were flain, with condition, being the rible in those quarters; what was in the Victor, to receive his liberty, and some small Carthaginians, experience had not yet laid reward. This was no fooner propounded. open. Since therefore the Roman Conful than all of them together accepted the offer. was already gotten thorow the most defen- Then did Hannibal cause lots to be cast. fible passages, ere any speech had been heard which of them should enter the List, with of his approach: many fate still for very such weapons, as the Chieftains of the Ganls fear. who else would fain have concluded were wont to use in single combats. Every a League with these new-come friends; and one of these unhappy men wished, that his some for greater fear, offered their service own lot might speed; whereby it should at against the Carthaginians, whom neverthe- least be his good fortune, to end his miseries less they had wished well to speed.

by death, if not to get a reward by victory. This wavering affection of the Province, That couple, whose good hap it was to be whereinto they were entred, made the two chosen, fought resolvedly : as rather de-Generals hasten to the tryal of a battail. siring, than fearing death; and having none Their meeting was at Ticinum, now called other hope, than in vanquishing. Thus were Pavia; where each of them wondred at the some few couples matched, it skilled not others expedition: Hannibal thinking it how equally: for all these poor creatures strange that the Consul, whom he had left were willing, upon whatsoever uneven behind him on the other fide of the Alpes, terms, to rid themselves out of flavery. The could meet him in the face, before he had fame affection that was in these Combatants. well warmed himself in the Plains; Scipio and in their fellows which beheld them. admiring the strange adventure of passing wrought also upon the Carthaginians, for those Mountains, and the great spirit of his whom the speciacle was ordained. For they Enemy. Neither were the Senate at Rome deemed happy, not only him, that by winlittle amazed at Hannibals success, and sud- ing the victory had gotten his liberty, toden arrival. Wherefore they dispatched a gether with an horse and armour : but even Messenger in all haste unto Sempronius, the him also, who being slain in fight, had escapother Conful, that was then in Sicily, giving ed that miserable condition, unto which him to understand hereof: and letting him his Companions were returned. Their Gcfurther know, that whereas he had been di- neral perceiving what impression this dumb rected to make the war in Africa, it was now shew had wrought in them, began to adtheir pleasure that he should forbear to pro- monish them of their own condition, speakfecute any fuch attempt, but that he should ing to this effect: That he had laid before return the Army under his charge, with all them an example of their own estates; seepossible speed, to save Italy it self. According ing the time was at hand, wherein they were to this order, Sempronius fent off his Fleet all to run the same fortune, that these flaves from Lilybeum; with direction to land the had done; all to live victorious and rich; Army at Ariminum, a Port Town not far or all to die, or (which these prisoners from Ravenna: quite another way from esteemed far more grievous ) to live in a Carthage, whither he was making hafte. In perpetual flavery: That none of them all, the mean while, Scipio and Hannibal were in whom was common sense, could promise come so near, that fight they must, ere they to himself any hope of life by flight : fince could part afunder. Hereupon both of them the Mountains, the Rivers, the great dipurfuit of merciles Enemies, must need re- long after this, ere the two Generals met: trench all fuch impotent imaginations. He each being far advanced before the gross of therefore prayed them to remember, that his Army, with his Horse; and the Roman they, who had even now praifed the fortune having also with him some light-armed foot, both of the Victor, and of the vanquished, to view the ground, and the enemies counwould make it their own cale; feeing that tenance. When they discovered the apthere was never any in the world, appoint- proach one of the other; Scipio fent before ed with fuch a resolution that had ever been him his horsemen of the Gauls, to begin the broken, or beaten by their enemies. On the light, and bestowing his Darters in the void contrary, he told them that the Romans, ground between their troups, to affilt them: who were to fight upon their own foil, and himself with his Roman men at arms, followin view of their own Towns; who knew as ed foftly in good order. The Gauls (whemany waies to fave themselves by flight, as ther delirous to try the metal of the Carthathey had bodies of men to fight withall, ginians, or hoping thereby to get favour of could no way entertain such a resolution as the Romans) behaved themselves couragitheirs: feeing the same Necessity, (to which oully, and were as couragiously opposed. nothing feen's impossible) did no way press Yet their foot that should have aided them, them, or constrain them. In this fort did shrank at the first brunt, or rather fled co-Hannihal, with one substantial Argument, wardly away, without casting a Darts for fear That there was no mean between Victory and ot being trodden down by the enemies horse. Death, encourage his Companions. For, This notwithstanding, the Gauls maintained (faith a great Captain of France) La com- the fight, and did more hurt than they remodite de la retraitte advance la fuite; The ceived; as presuming that they were well commodity of a retrait, doth greatly advance a backt. Neither was the Conful unmindful to flat running amay.

CHAP. III.

given order for the laying of a bridge over have stood by them, admonishing him that the River of Ticinus, did not neglect to use it was needful. Wherefore he adventured the best arguments and reasons he could, to himself so far, that he received a dangerous encourage the Army he led: putting them wound; and had been left in the place, if in mind of the great conquelts and victories his Son (afterward furnamed Africanus) had of their Ancestors; against how many Nati- not brought him off: though others give ons they had prevailed; and over how ma- the honour of this refeue to a Lieurian flave. ny Princes, their Enemies, had they trium- Whilst the Romans were busied in helping phed. As for this Army commanded by Han- their Conful; an unexpected ftorm came wind, although it were enough to tell them, driving at their backs, and made them look that it was no better than of Carthaginians, about how to help themselves. Hannibal whom in their late war they had to often had appointed his Numidian light-horfe, to besten, by Land and Sea ; yet he prayed give upon the Romans in flank, and to comthem withall to confider, that at this time it pass them about, whilst he with his men at was not only fo diminished in numbers, as it Arms sustained their charge, and met them rather feemed a troup of Brigants and in the face. The Numidians performed Thieves, than an Army likely to encounter this very well: cutting in pieces the featthe Romans, but fo weather-beaten, and star-tered foot, that ran away at the first enved, as neither the men, nor horses, had counter; and then falling on the backs of ttrength or courage to fustain the first charge those, whose looks were fastned upon Hanthat thould be given upon them. Nay (faid nibal and scipio. By this impression, the he)ye your felves may make judgment what | Romans were shuffled together, and routed: daring they have now remaining, after fo fo that they all betook them to their speed, array travails and miferies; feeing when they and left unto their enemies the honour of wei in their best strength, after they had the day. pair the Roan, their horfe-men were not only france from their own Countries, and the people, both in Africa, and in Sicil. It was not relieve them: their hardiness deserving his Scipio on the other fide, after that he had aid; and the hasty flight of those that should

When Scipio faw his horsemen thus beabeaten by ours, and driven back to the very ten, and the rest of his Army thereby greatly Trenches of their Camp, but Hannibal him-discouraged; he thought it a point of wiftelf, fearing our approach, ran headlong dom, having loft fo many of his Fleet upon Towards the Alps: thinking it a left diffio- the first puff of the wind, totake Port with nour andie there by frost, famine, and pre- the rest, before the extremest of the temichastor, than by the sharp swords of the pest overtock him. For he saw by the lowtransans, which had to often cut down his ring morning what manner of day it was like to prove. Therefore his battail of footbe-1 do; yet this diminished his reputation. For ing yet unbroken, he in a manner stole the every day more and more of the Gauls fell retrait; and recovered the Bridge over Iici- to the Carthaginian iide; among whom was, which he had formerly built. But not- came in the Eoji, that brought with them withstanding all the haste that he made, he the Roman Commissioners, which they had left fix hundred of his Rear behinde him: taken in the late Insurrection. They had hiwho were the last that should have passed, therto kept them as pledges, to redem their and staid to break the bridge. Herein he follown hostages: but now they deliver them lowed this rule of a good man of War, Si cer- up to Hannibal, as tokens and pledges of tamen quandoque dubium videatur, tacitam their affections towards him; by whose help miles arripiat fugam: fuga enim aliquando they conceived better hope of recovering laudanda: which must be understood in this their own men and lands. In the mean while, fort: If a General of an Army, by some unpros- Hannibal, being in great scarcity of victuals, perous beginnings doubt the success; or find his attempted the taking of Clastidium, a Town Army fearful or wavering, it is more profitable wherein the Romans had laid up all their to fteal a safe retrait, than to abide the uncer- store and munition. But there needed no tain event of battail.

pas the River; Scipio the whilest refreshing little money. his men, and easing himself of his wound in Placentia. But as foon as Hannibal presented Rome, filled the Senate and People, rather his Army before the Town, offering battail with a defire of hafty revenge, than any great to the Romans, who durst not accept it, nor forrow for their loss received; feeing that in iffue forth of their Camp; the Gauls, that a manner, all their Foot, wherein their hitherto had followed Scipio for fear, ga- strengthand hope consisted, were as yet enthered out of his fear, courage to forsake tire. They therefore hasted away Sempronihim. They thought that now the long-denum, that was newly arrived, towards Arimifired time was come, in which better Chiefnum, where the Army, by him fent out of tains and Souldiers, than Aneroestus, Brito- Sicil, awaited his coming. He therefore hastmarus. and Gessates, were come to help them: ed thither; and from thence he marched if they had the hearts to help themselves. speedily towards his Colleague: who attend-Wherefore the same night they fell upon ed him upon the banks of Trebia. Both the the Roman Camp; wounded and slew many Armies being joyned in one, the Consuls deespecially of those guards that kept watch at vised about that which remained to be done: thegate; with whose heads in their hands, Sempronius received from Scipio the relatithey fled over to the Carthaginians, and pre- on of what had passed since Hannibals arrifented their service. Hannibal received them val; the fortune of the late fight; and by exceeding courteoully, and dismiss them to what errour or misadventure the Romans their own places: as men likely to be of were therein foiled: which Scipio chiefly more use to him, in perswading the rest laid on the revolt and treason of the Gauls. of their Nation to become his Confe- sempronius, having received from scipio derates, than in any other service at the the state of the affairs in those parts; sought prefent.

a great blow, if the Numidians, greedy of objecting the unlkilfulness of the new-come fpoil, had not staid to ransack their Camp: Souldiers: and withall, gave him good River of Trebia, and fave themselves. Scipio, being both unable to travel by reason of his wound, and withall, finding it expedient to of Trebia and Po, being already revolted. attend the coming of his fellow-Conful; in- Sempronius knew all this as well as scipio: but force; a Brundusian, whom the Romans It was two dayes after, ere Hannibal could had trusted with keeping it, fold it for a

The news of these disasters, brought to

by all means to try his fortune with Hanni-About the fourth watch of the night fol- bal, before scipio were recovered of his lowing, the Conful stole a retrait, as he had wounds, that thereby he might purchase to done before 3 but not with the like ease and himself the sole glory of the victory, which fecurity. Hannibal had a good eye upon him, he had already, in his imagination, certainly and ere he could get far, sent the Numidians obtained. He also feared the election of the after him: following himself with all his new Consuls: his own time being well-near Army. That night the Romans had received expired. But Scipio perswaded the contrary; and thereby given time to all (lave some few reason, to affure him that the Gault, natuin Rear, that were slain or taken) to pass the rally unconstant, were upon terms of abancamps himself strongly upon the banks of being both guided and blinded by his ambi-Trebia. Necessity required that he should so tion, he made haste to find out the dishonour avoided. This resolution of Sempronius was Army, after they had well warmed, and well exceeding pleating to Hannibal: who fear- fed themselves in their Camp, he led into the ed nothing fo much as delay and los of time. field, and marched towards the Conful. Ear-For the firength of his Army, confifting in ly in the morning, he had fent over Trebia strangers, to wit, in Spaniards and Gauls; he some companies of Numidian light-horse, to no less feared the change of affection in the brave the enemy, and draw him forth to a one, than the impatience of the other: who bad dinner, ere he had broken his fast. Sembeing far from their own home, had many pronius was ready to take any opportunity to passions moving them to turn their faces to- fight: and therefore not only issued out of his wards it. To further the desire of Sempro- Camp, but soorded the River of Trebia, in a nius, it fel' out so, that about the same time, most cold and miserable day; his foot being the Gauls, inhabiting near unto Trebia, com- wet almost to the arm-holes: which, togeplained of injuries done by the Carthagini- ther with the want of food, did so enfeeble ans. They did not supply Hannibal with ne- and cool their courages, as they wanted force dertaken this Expedition. Seeing therefore these they ranged in a gross Battalion, guard-them to retire faster than they came. Sem- all sorts, Horse and Foot.

pronius was ready to back his ownmen; and Three great errours Sempronius commitrepelled the enemies. Hannibal did the ted, of which every one deserved to be relike. So that at length all the Roman Army compensed with the loss that followed. The was crawn forth; and a battel ready to be first was, that he fought with Hannibal in a fuied it.

which he might otherwise easily have Horse, and as many foot. The rest of his ceffaries, as he supposed that they might to handle the arms they bare. Strong they have done; although he daily reprehended were in foot, as well of their own Nation, as their negligence, teiling them, that for their of the Latines: having of the one fixteen, of fakes, and to fet them at liberty, he had un- the other twenty thousand. The mass of how little they regarded his words, he was ed on the flanks with three thou and horfe; bold to be his own Carver; and took from thrusting their Light-armed, and Dargers, in them by force, as much as he needed of that loose troops in the head of the test in the nawhich they had. Hereupon they fly to the ture of a Vantguard. The Carthaginian num-Romans for help: and, to make their tale the bers of foot were in a manner equal to their the tra, fay that this wrong is done them, bethey refused to joyn with Hannibal.

they refused to joyn with Hannibal.

both in number and goodness. When therefore the Roman horse ranged on the slanks 3.00d, and was affured of their mu-but Sempronius affirmed, that it when their foot, were charged both in from with the honour of Rome, to preserve and flank, by the Spaniards, Gauls and Elereir Confederates from fuffering injury: phants; when finally the whole Army was and that hereby might be won the friend unawares preft in the Rear, by Mago and his ftip of all the Gault. Therefore he fent out a two thousand, that rose out of their place of thousand Horse: which coming unlooked ambush; then fell the Romans, by heaps, unfor upon Hannibal his forragers, and finding der the enemies swords: and being beaten them heavy loaden, cut many of them in down, as well fighting in diforder, as flying pieces, and chased the rest even into their towards the River, by the Horsemen that own Camp. This indignity made the Carpursued them, there escaped no more of fix thaginians sally out against them: who caused and thirty thousand, than ten thousand of fought, if the Carthaginian had not re- Champain, being by far inferiour in Horse, and withall, thereby subject to the African This victory ) for so the Consul would Elephants, which in inclosed or un-even have it called) made the Romans in general grounds & wood-lands, would have been of desirous to try the main chance in open field: no use. His second errour was, that he made all the perswasions of Scipio to the contrary no discovery of the place upon which he notwithstanding. Of this disposition Hanni- fought; whereby he was grossy over-reacht, bal was advertised by the Gauls, his Spies, and infnared, by the ambush which Hannibal that were in the Roman Camp. Therefore he had laid for him. The third was, that he bethought himself how to help forward the drencht his footmen with empty stomacks, victory by adding some stratagem to his in the River of Trebia, even in a most cold forces : he found in the hollow of a water and frosty day, whereby, in effect, they lost courfe, over-grown with high reed, a fit the use of their limbs. For, as one saith well, trench to cover an ambush. Therein he cast There is nothing more inconvenient and perilous, his brother Mago with a thousand choice than to present an Army tyred with travel, to my, was collected by Scipio, who got there- dife against him; but were in likefort detectwith into Placentia; stealing away the same ed. He was the refore glad to use Periwizs of night, which was exceeding rainy, from hair, and falle beards of divers colours: to the Carthaginians, who either perceived him the end that he might not be descrived, nor not because of the showrs; or would not known, to those that should undertake to perceive him, because they were over-weari- make him away. Fain he would have passed ed. Sempronius escaped with extream dan- the Appenines, upon the first appearance of ger, flying, through the Countrythat was Spring; but was compelled by the violence over-run by the enemies horse. He was at- of weather, to tarry among the Gauls, till tended by more than were requisite in a se- he had seen more swallows than one. At cret flight; yet by fewer than could have length, when the year was fomwhat better made refistance; if the enemy had met with opened, he resolved to take his leave of these him. Nevertheless he got away, and came to giddy companions and bring the war nearer Rome; where he did hisoffice in chuling new to the gate of Rome. So away he went, ha-Consuls for the year following: and then ving his Army greatly increased with Lieureturned into his Province, with afresh sup- rians and Ganls; more serviceable friends ply against Hannibal.

an enemy fresh and fed; since where the strength; their territory. Wherefore some of them of body faileth, the generofity of mind is but conspired against his life; others admonithas an unprofitable vapour.

6. V.

fymene.

followers he not only well intreated, but heard news of the c Rean Confuls. fent them to their Countries without ransome; with the protestation, That he there- been chosen Consuls for this year: Servilius fore undertook the War in Italy, to free a tractable man, and who lly governed by them from the oppression of the Romans. advice of the Senate; Flaminius an hot-By these means he hoped, and not in vain, headed popular Orator; who having once to draw many of them to his party and af- been robbed (as he thought) of his Confulfiltance. But the Gauls were not capable of thip, by a device of the Senators, was afraid fuch perswassions. They stood in fear, lest to be served so again, unless he quickly sihe should make their Country the seat of nished the war. This jealous Consul thought War, and perhaps take it from them. They it not best for him to be at Rome, when he were also more grieved than reason willed entred into his Office, lest his adversaries, by ed him of the danger; and thele that gave The broken remainder of the Roman Ar- him the advice, were ready foon after to praabroad, than in their own Country. That the passage of the Appenine Mountains was troublesome, I hold it needless to make any doubt. Yet fince the Roman Armies found The departure of Hannibal from the Cifalpine no memorable impediment, in their marches Gauls into Hetruria. Flaminius the Ro- that way: the great vexation which fell man Conful flain, and his Army destroyed upon Hannibal, when he was travelling by the Carthaginians, at the Lake of Thra- thorow and over them, ought in reason to be imputed rather to the extremity of Winter, that makes alwayes foul, than to any HE Winter growing on apace, was intollerable difficulty in that journey. Nevery tharp, and unfit for service: to vertheless, to avoid the length of war, tothe great contentment of the Romans who, gether with the refistance and fortifications being not able to keep the field, lay warm which may not improbably be thought to in Placentia, and Cremona. Yet Hannibal did have been erected upon the ordinary pafnot fuffer them to rest very quiet; but vex- fages towards Rome: he chose at this time, ed them with continual Alarms: assayled though it were with much trouble, to travel divers places, and taking some; beating thorow the Fens and rotten grounds of the Gauls their adherents, and winning the Tuscane. In those Marishes, and bogs, he lost Ligurians to his party, who presented him, in all his Elephants, save one, together with token of their faithful love, with two Ro- the use of one of his eyes; by the moistness man Questors, or Treasurers, two Colonels, of the air, and by lodging on the cold and five Gentlemen, the Sons of Senators, ground, and wading thorow deep mire and which they had intercepted. These, and in water. In brief, after he had, with much general all fuch prisoners as he had of the ado, recovered the firm and fertile Plains, Romans, he held in straight places, loaden he lodged about Arretium; where he somewith Irons, and miferably fed: those of their what refreshed his wearied followers, and

C. Flaminius, and Cn. Servilius had of late them, at his feeding upon them, and wasting feigning some religious impediment, should detain

Qqqqq 2

CHAP. [11.

detain him within the City, or find other, and the Lake, There was he charged unawhere he shortly found them.

be plucked up by the Enfign-bearer. Of liberties. this tale, whether true or false, Tully makes This accord Hannibal refused to confirm; a jest, faying, That the cowardly knave faying, that it was made by Maharbal did faintly pull at it (as going now to fight) without fufficient warrant, as wanting his having hardly pitched it into the earth. authority to make it good. Hereinhe taught Neither was the answer of Flaminius (if it them ( yet little to his own honour) what it were true)difagreeable hereto: for he com- was to keep no faith : and fitted them with manded that it should be digged up, if fear a trick of their own. For if it were lawful had made the hands too weak to lift it: unto the Romans, to alter covenants, or asking withall, whether letters were not add unto them what they listed; if the carcome from the Senate, to hinder his pro- thaginians must be fain to pay certain hunceedings. Of this their icalouse, both he dreds and yet more hundreds of talents, beand the Senate that did give him cause, are sides their first bargains; as also to renounce likely to repent.

butinels for him at home, to disappoint him wares, on all sides, (save only where that of the honour that he hoped to get in the great Lake of Perufia, permitted neither his war. Wherefore he departed secretly out of enemies to come at him, nor him to flye from the Town, and meant to take possession of them) knowing not which way to turn, or his Office when the day came at Ariminum. make relistance. So was he flain in the place. The Fathers (fo the Senators were called ) accompanied with fifteen thousand dead highly displeased with this revoked him by carkastes of his Country-men. About fix Embaffadors: but he neglected their in-thousand of his men, that had the Vantjunction; and haltening to meet with the guard took courage, as for the most part it Carthaginians, took his way to Arctium, happens, out of desperation: and breaking thorow the enemies, that ftood in their way, The fiery diffosition of this Conful, pro- recovered the tops of the Mountains. If these mifed unto Hamibal great affurance of vi- had returned, and given charge upon the cto: y. Therefore he provoked, with many in- Carthaginians backs, it was thought that they dignities, the vehement nature of the Ro-might have greatly amended, if not wholly man; horing thereby to draw him unto altered the fortune of the day. But that viofight, ere Servilius came with the rest of the lence of their fear, which, kindled by neces-Army. All the Country between Fefula and fity had wrought the effects of hardiness. Arctium, he put to fire and fword, even un- was well allwaged, when they eeafed to deder the Confuls nofe; which was enough to spair of faving their lives by flight. They make him ftir, that would not have fitten stood still, in acold sweat, upon the Hill-top ftill, though Hannibal had been quiet. It is hearing under them a terrible noise, but not true that a great Captain of France hath any way discovering how things went, be-fined a Paja saffe n'. ft. pas perdu; A wasfeed cause of the great fogg that held all that Country is not three by lost. But by this waste of the Country, Flammins thought his own Air was cleared, and they might plainly dishonour to be much impaired; and there-cern the lamentable flaughter of their felfore advanced towards the Enemy. Many lows. But they staid not to lament it; for it advised him (which had indeed been best) was high time, they thought, to be gone ere to have patience a while, and stay for his they were descryed and attached by the Co-league. But of this he could not abide to enemies horfe. This they should have hear; saying, that he came not to defend thought upon sooner, since they had no mind Arctium, whilst the Carthaginians went to return into the fight. For, described burning down all Italy before them, to the were, and Maharbal sent after them, who gates of Rome. Therefore he took horse, and overtook them by night in a Village, which commanded the Army to march. It is re- he furrounded with his horse: and so they ported as ominous, that one of their Enfigns yielded the next day, rendring up their stuck so fast in the ground, as it could not arms, upon his promise of their lives and

their interest in Sardinia, and be limited in All the Territory of Cortona, as far as to their Spanish Conquests, according to the the lake of Thratymene, was on a light fire; good pleasure of the Romans, whose present which while the Conful thought to quench advantage is more ample, than the condiwith his enemies blood, he surfued Han tions of the late concluded Peace then can nibal fo unadvisedly, that he fell with his Hannibal be as Roman, as themselves; and whole Army into an ambuth cunningly laid make them know, that perfidiousness gainfor him between the Mountains of Certons eth no more in prosperity, than it losethin the change of fortune. Fifteen thousand Ita- | not, contrary to all good advice, have been fian prisoners, or thereabout, he had in his fo halty to fight, before the arrival of ser hands : of which, all that were not Romans, vilius. It sempreneus had been continued in he fet free without ranfom; proteiting, as his charge, it is probable that he would have fakes, and to free them and others from the time, and have fearched all fuspected places. fon, and in fetters, making them learn to eat We may boldly avow it, that by being conthage, yet a contempt of Rome: as if this war gether with the Helvetians and many of the had not concerned the general fafety, but Germans, under the Roman yoke; into which of her oppressions. But an antient reputation wit in the World can do, to inform it self. any Italian Partifans.

matter of importance, when the news was perswaded the imitation. brought him of his Colleagues overthrow and deathin Hetruria; that made himhaften back to the defence of Rome.

fruits of popular jealousie, which perswaded the Romans to the yearly change of their Commanders in the wars; which greatly endangered, and retarded the growth of that Empire. Certain it is, that all men are far better taught by their own errours, than by the examples of their foregoers. Flaminius had heard in what a trap Sempronius had been taken up but the year before, this their ill success, and at the danger by this subtile Carthaginian; yet suffered he apparent; which threatned them in more himself to be caught soon after in the same terrible manner, than ever did war since manner. He had also belike forgotten how Rome it self was taken. They were good Sempronius, fearing to be prevented by a Souldiers, and so little accustomed to renew Conful, and ambitious of the fole ho- ceive an overthrow, that when Parrhus had nour of beating Hannibal in battle, without beaten them, once and again, in open field, he had done before, that it was for their taken his companion with him the record Roman tyranny, that he had undertaken this proper to have fludowed an ambush : both war. But the Romans he kept in straight pri- which this new Conful Flaminius neglected. hard meat. This was a good way to breed tinued in his Government of France ten in the people of Italy, if not a love of Car- years, Cafar brought that mighty Nation, toonly the preferving of her own neck from parts had there been every year a new Licuthe voke of flavery, which her over-ftrong tenant fent, they would hardly, if ever, have enemies would thrust upon her in revenge been subdued. For it is more than the best confirmed by fuccels of many ages, is not within one years compals, of the nature of lost in one or two battles. Wherefore more a great Nation, of the Factions, of the Plais to be done, ere the Carthaginians can get ces, Rivers, and of all good helps, whereby to profecute a War to the best effect. Our Presently after the battle of Thrasimene, Princes have commonly left their Deputies C. Centronius, with four thousand Roman in Ireland three years; whence by reason of horse, drew near unto the Camp of Hanni- the shortness of that their time, many of bal. He was fent from Ariminum by Servilius them have returned as wife as they went the other Conful, to increase the strength of outjothers have profited more, & yes when Flaminius: but, coming too late, he increathey began but to know the first rudiments fed only the mitadventure. Maharbal was of War, and Government, fitting the Counemployed by Hannibal, to intercept this try, they have been called home, and new tompany; who finding them amazed with Apprentices sent in their places, to the great report which they had newly heard of the prejudice both of this and that Estate. But it great overthrow, charged them, and brake hathever been the old course of the World rathem : and killing almost half of them, drave ther to follow the errours, than to examine the rest unto a high piece of ground, them: and of Princes and Governours to where they came down, and finiply yielded uphold their flothful ignorance, by the old to mercy the next day. Servilius himself examples and policy of other ages and peowas in the mean time skirmishing with the ple; though neither likeness of time, of oc-Gauls; against whom he had wrought no casion, or of any other circumstance, have

o. VI.

In these passages, it is easie to discern the How Q. Fabius the Roman Diffator, Sought to confume the force of Hannibal, by lingring War. Minutius the Mafter of the Horfe, honoured and advanced by the People, for bold and successful attempting; adventures rashly upon Hannibal, and as like to periff with his Army, and rescued by Fabius.

Reatly were the Romans amazed at help of his companion Scipio, had been re- all Haly was strangely affected with his sucwarded with shame and loss; else would be cess, and held him in admiration, as one that scould work wonders. But Pyrrhus his quar- when the Dictator was newly fet forth rel was not grounded upon hate: he only against Hannibal, word was brought that the fought honour, and fought (asit were, upon Carthaginian Fleet had intercepted all the a bravery; demeaning himself like a cour supply, that was going to Cn. Scipio in Spain. teous enemy. This Carthaginian detested the Against these Carthaginians, Fabius comwhole Roman name; against which he burn- manded servilius the Consul to put to Sea; ed with defire of revenge. Ticinum, Trebia, and taking up all the ships about Rome and and Thrasymene, witnessed his purpose, and Oftia, to pursue them: whilst he, with the his ability; which to withstand, they fled Legions, attended upon Hannibal. Four Lepower was greater than the Confuls, and lies the Conful had conducted thither. scarcely subject unto controll of the whole | With these forthwith he followed apace named by one of the Confuls, at the ap- alwayes lodged himself on high grounds. Maximus; the best reputed man of war in he incamped upon the Adriatick shores; repetit, contrary winds, contrary courses. 2. Fa- Companies, armed his Africans after the bius chose M. Minutius Rusus Master of the manner of the Romans, and made his difhorse: which Officer was customarily as patches from Carthage; presenting his friends, the Dictators Lievtenant; though this Mi- which were in effect, all the Citizens with more upon him.

Livilb 22 were true (as Livie reports it) that the wards Apulia a Northern Province of the fear. And surely this was a time, when Rome wife. He would not engage himself in any was exceedingly diftempered with passion; such enterprise, as should detain him, and whereof that memorable accident, of two give the Romans leave to take breath. All his paired and fortified; the Bridges upon Ritery. To this end he presented Fabius with unto a remedy that had long been out of gions he had levied in hafte; and from Ariuse, and created a Dictator. The Dictators minum he received the Army which Servi-

City. Wherefore this Officer was seldom after Hannibal; not to fight, but to affront chosen, but upon some extremity, and for no him. And knowing well, what advantage longer time than fix months. He was to be the Numidian horse had over the Romans, he pointment of the Senate: though it were to, and of hard access. Hannibal in the mean that the Consul (if he stood upon his prero- while, pursuing his victory, had ranged gative ) might name whom he pleased. At over all the Country, and used all manner of this time the one Consulbeing dead, and cruelty towards the inhabitants; especially the other too far off, the people took upon to those of the Roman Nation, of whom he them, as having supream authority, to give did put to the sword all that were able to the Dignity by their election, to 2 Fabius bear arms. Passing by Spoletum and Ancona. the City. Novum factum novum consilium ex- freshed his diseased, and over-travelled nutius grew afterwards famous, by taking part of the spoils that he had gotten. Having refreshed his army, fed his horses, cured his The first act of Fabius, was the reforma- wounded Souldiers, and(as Polybius hathit) tion of somewhat amiss in matters of Religi- healed his horse heeles of the scratches, by on: a good beginning and commendable, washing their pasterns in old wine: he folhad the Religion been also good. But if it lowed the coast of the Adriatick Sea to-Books of Sphil were consulted, and gave di- Kingdom of Naples spoiling the Murrucini, rection in this business of devotion; then and all other Nations lying in his way. In must we believe that those books of sybil, all this ground that he over-ran, he had not preserved in Rome, were dictated by an evil taken any one City: onely he had affayled spirit. For it was ordained, that some Vow, spoletum a Collony of the Romans; and findmade in the beginning of this war to Mars, ing it well defended, presently gave it over. should be made anew, and amplysted, as having not been rightly made before: also the force of it spent in a great siege. This the that great Plays should be vowed unto Jn-Protestant Army sound true at Poiltiers, a piter, and a Temple to Venus; with such little before the battle of Moncountour; and other Trumpery. This vehemency of super-their victorious enemies, anon after at stition, proceeds always from vehemency of s. Jean d. Angelp. But Hannibal was more women that suddenly died, when they saw care was to weaken them in force and reputheir Sons return alive from Thrasjmene, may tation: knowing, that when once he was abserve to bear witness, though it be more pro- solute Master of the field, it would not be perly an example of motherly love. The longere the walled Cities would open their Walls and Towers of the City were now regates, without expecting any engine of batvers were broken down, and all care taken battle, as foon as he faw him; and provoked for desence of Rome itself. In this tumult, him with all manner of bravadoes. But defires battel : and this of Hannibal, was his light footmen, with some slaughter of the both the invading and victorious. Fabius Romans, that began to hold them in fkirtherefore suffered Hannibal to cross the Ap-miss. After this, Hannibal made semblance penines, and to fall upon the most rich and of taking his journey towards Rome: and pleasant Territory of Campania; neither the Dictator coasted him in the wonted could be by any arguments be perswaded, manner , keeping still on high grounds, beto adventure the Roman Army in battel : but tween him and the City, whileft the Carthabeing far too weak in horse, he alwayes kept ginian wasted all the Plains. The Carthagithe Hills and fast grounds. When Hannibal nian took Geryon, an old ruinous Town in faw he could by no means draw this wary Apulia, forfaken by the Inhabitants, which Dictator to fight, that the Winter came on, he turned into Barns and Store-houses for and that the Towns flood firm for the Ro- winter, and incamped under the broken mans, whose Legions were in fight, though wall. Other matter of importance he did afar off; he resolved to rest his Army, that none: but the time passed idly, till the Diwas loaden with spoil, in some plentiful and cator was called away to Rome, about some affured place, till the following spring. But business of Religion, and left the Army ere this can be done he must pass along by in charge with Minutias the Master of the the Dictators camp, that hung over his horse. head upon the hills of Collicula, and Casilinum: for other way there was none, by to shew his own sufficiency. He was fully which he might iffue out of that goodly gar- perswaded, that his Romans, in plain field den-countrey, which he had already wast- would be too hard for the Africans and Spaed, into places more abundant of provision neards: by whom if they had been foiled for his wintering. It was by meer errour of already twice or thrice, it was not by open his guide, that he first entred within these force, but by subtilty and ambush, which he straights. For he would have been directed thought himself wife enough to prevent. unto Calfinum, whence he might both affay All the Army was of his opinion; and that the fair City of Capua, which had made him to earneftly, ashe was preferred, by judgefriendly promifes under-hand, and hinder ment of the Souldiers, in worthiness to comthe Romans from coming near it to prevent mand, before the cold and wary Fabius. him. But his guide mif-understood the Car- In this jollity of conceit, he determined to thaginian pronunciation, and conducted him fight. Yet had he been peremptorily forawry another way, from Cassinum to Casili- bidden so to do, by the Dictator; the breach "um, whence Fabius hoped that he should of whose command was extream peril of values would not bite. He knew well the not eafily escape. Now began the wisdom differences between fouldiers bred up, ever of Fabius to grow into credit; as if he in tince they were boyes, in war and in blood, taken the Carthaginians in a trap, and wen resinced and hardened in Spain, made proud the victory without blows. But Hannibal and adventurous by many victories there, reformed this opinion, and freed himfelt, by and of late by some notable acts against the a sleight invention, yet serving the turn as Romans ; and fuch, as had no oftner feen well as a better. In driving the countrey the enemy, than been vanquished by him, he had gotten about two thousand Kine Therefore he attended the Carthaginian fo whose hornes he dressed with dry saggers neer, as he kept him from stragling too far; and setting fire to them in the dark night. and preferved the countrey from utter spoil, caused them to be driven up the hills. The He inured his men by little and little, and spectacle was strange, and therefore terrimade them acquainted with dangers by debes, especially to those that knew it to be grees, and he brought them first to look on a work of a terrible enemy. What it should the Lyon afar off, that in the end he might mean, Fabius could not tell; but thought it a device to circumvent him, and therefore Now Minutius had a contrary disposition, kept within his Trenches. They that kept the and was as fiery as Flaminius: taxing Fabius hill tops were horribly affraid, when some with cowardize and fear. But all stirred of these fiery Monsters were gotten beyond not this well-advised Commander. For them; and ran therefore halfily away, thinkwife men are no more moved with fuch ing the enemies were behind their backs noise, than with wind bruised out of a blad- and fell among the light-armed Carthaginider. There is nothing of more indifcretion ans, that were no less afraid of them. So Hanand danger, than to purfue misfortune: it nibal, with his whole Army recovered fure wasteth it self sooner by sufferance, than by ground without molestation: where he staid opposition. It is the invading Army that till the next morning, and then brought off

Minutius was glad of this good occasion

death. But the honour of the victory, which | For this piece of service Minutius was he held undoubtedly his own; and the highly effected by the Army, and more love of the Army, and the friends that he had highly by the people at Rome, to whom he at home bearing office in Rome, were enough fent the news, with somewhat greater boast to fave him from the Dictators rods and than truth. It feemed no small matter, that axes, took he the matter never fo hainouf- the Roman Army had recovered fpirit, fo far ly. Harnibal on the other fide was no less forth that it dared to set upon Hannibal in glad, that he should play with a more adhis own Camp; and that in so doing, it came venturous Gametter. Therefore he drew off with the better. Every man therefore near, and to provoke the Komans, sent forth praised the Master of the Horse, that had a third part of his Army to waste the Coun-wrought this great alteration; and confea third part of this Ariny to wantetine of the string real after after and conte-trey. This was boldly done, feeing that quently, they grew as far out of liking with Alimitius incamped hard by him: but it Fabius and his timerous proceedings, thinkfeems, that he now despited those whom he ing that he had not done any thing wilely, had so often vanquished. There was a piece in all his Distatorship: faving that he chose of high ground between the two Camps; such a worthy Lieutenant; whereas indeed which because it would be commodious to in no other thing he had so greatly erred. him that could occupy it, the Carthaginians But the Dictator was not so joyful of a little feized upon by night with two thouland of good luck, as angry with the breach of dicitheir light armed. But Minutius, by plain pline; and fearfull of greater danger, thereforce, wan it from them the next day; and on likely to enfue. He faid that he knew his neerer neighbour.

was, to provide abundantly, not only for he had done, if he were Dictator: speaking his men, but for his Horfes, which he knew it openly, That good fucces iffuing from to be the chief of his strength; that he might keep them in good heart against the next lamity; for as much as the one breda foolish Summer: if besides this he could give the considence, the other taught men to be wa-Romans another blow, it would increase his ry. Against these Sermons every one cryed reputation, incourage his own men, terri- out, especially Metellus, a Tribune of the fee his enemies, and give him leave to for-rage the Countrey at will. Since therefore and do what he lift, without fear of the Di-Minutius did not in many dayes issue forth dator. Is it not enough (saidhe) that this of his Camp, the Carthaginian sent out (as our only Man, chosen to be General, and before) a great number of his men, to fetch | Lord of the Town, in our greatest necessity. in harvest. This advantage Minutius wisely hath done no manner of good, but suffered espied, and took. For he led forth his Ar-all Italy to be wasted before his eyes, to the my, and fetting it in order, presented battel utter shame of our State; unless he also hinto Hannibal, that was not in case to accept der others, from doing better than himself it, even at his own Trenches. His horses, can, or dares? It were good to consider and all his light Armature, divided into what he means by this. Into the place of many companies, he sent abroad against the C. Flaminius he hath not chosen any new forragers; who being dispersed over all the Consul all this while; Servilius is sent away fields, and loaden with booty, could make to Sea, I know not why; Hannibal and he, no resistance. This angred Hannibal, that have as it were taken Truce; Hannibal was not able to help them; but worfe did sparing the Dictators grounds: (for Hanit arger him, when the Romans took heart nibal had indeed forborn to spoil some to affail his Trenches. They perceived that grounds of Fabius, that fo he might bring it was meer weakness, which held him with- him into envy and suspicion) and the Dictain his Camp, and therefore were bold to tor giving him leave to spoil all others, withdespile his great name, that could not resist out impeachment. Surely his drift is even their present strength. But in the heat of the this: he would have the War to last businets, Asarubal came from Geryon with long, that he himself might be long in of four thousand men, being informed of the fice, and have the fole Government both of danger, by those that had escaped the Ro- our City and Armies. But this must not be man horse. This imboldened Hannibal to so. It were better, that the Commonalty of iffue forth against the Romans; to whom Rome, which gave him this authority, should received.

intrenching himself thereupon, became their own place, and what was to be done: that he would teach the Master of the Horse to do so The main business of Hannibal at this time likewise; and make him give account of what nevertheless he did not much hurt, as he had again take it from him and conferr it upon one more worthy. But left, in moving the people hereto, I should seem to do him in-1 jury ; thus far forth I will regard his ho- had dispatched the election of new Connour: I will only propound, That the Malter full, which was M. Atilius Regulus, in the of the Horse may be joined in equal author room of C. Flaminius: and, having finished rity with the Dictator; a thing not more all requifite bufiness, went out of Town. new, nor less necessary, than was the electi- perceiving well, that he should not be able on of this Dictator, by the People.

people

wife; and fince they had found one ( this test with it; as if herein consisted the proof worthy Master of the Horse) that was bet-ter affected unto them and his Countrey, to reward him according to his good deserts; make good the opinion which had thus adand give him authority, according as was vanced him. Therefore he was no less care-Propounded by the Tribune, that so he ful of getting occasion to fight, than was Famight be encouraged and enabled to bins of avoiding the necessity. That which proceed as he had begun. So the Act passed. Minutius and Hannibal equally defired, could

Before this buffe day of contention, Fabius to withstand the multitude in hindering the Though all men, even the Senators, were decree. The news of Minutius his advanceill perswaded of the course which Fabius ment, was at the camp as soon as Fabius: had taken against Hannibal, as being neither so that his old Lieutenant, and new Colplaulible, nor feeming beneficial at the pre- league, began to treat with him as a Comfent; vet was there none so injurious, as to panion; asking him at the first, in what think that his general intent, and care of forthe thought it best to divide their authe Weal-publique, was less than very ho-thority: whether that one, one day; and nourable. Whereas therefore it was the the other, the next; or each of them fucmanner, in paffing of any act, that some cessively, for some longer time, should comman of credit and authority, besides the mand in chief. Fabius briefly told him, That propounder, should stand up, and formally it was the pleasure of the Citizens, to make deliver his approbation, not one of the the Master of the Horse equal to the Dictaprincipal Citizens was found so impudent, tor, but thathe should never be his superias to offer that open disgrace, both unto or: He would therefore divide the Legions a worthy Personage, and (therewithal) with him by lot, according to the custom. unto that dignity, whose great power had Minutius was not herewith greatly pleased; freed the State at several times, from the for that with half of the Army he could not greatest dangers. Only C. Terentins Varro , work such wonders as otherwise he hoped who the year before had been Prætor, to accomplish. Nevertheless he meant to do was glad of fuch an opportunity, to win his best, and so taking his part of the Army. the favour of the Multitude. This fellow incamped about a mile and a half from the was the son of a Butcher, afterwards be- Dictator. Needful it was (though Livy seems came a Shop-keeper; and being of a con- to tax him for it) that he should so do. For tentious spirit, grew by often brabling, to where two several Commanders are not take upon him as a Pleader, dealing in poor subordinate one unto another, nor joyned in mens causes. Thus by little and little he Commission, but have each intire and absogot into Office; and role by degrees, lute charge of his own followers, there are being advanced by those, who in hatred of the forces (though belonging to one Prince the Nobility favoured his very baseness. And or State ) not one, but two distinct Arnow he thought the time was come, for him mies: in which regard, one Camp shall not to give a hard push at the Consulship; by hold them both without great inconvenidoing that, which none of the great men, ence. Polybius neither finds fault with this fearing or favouring one another, either distinction, nor yet reports, that Fabius was durst or would. So he made an hot inve- unwilling to command in chief successively dive, not only against Fabius, but against (as the two Consuls used) with Minutius, by all the Nobility; saying, That it grieved turns. He saith that Minutius was very rethem to fee the people do well, and take fractory, and so proud of his advancement. upon them what belonged unto them, in that continually he opposed the Dictator: matter of Government; That they fought who thereupon referred it to his choice, eito humble the Commons by poverty, and ther to divide the forces between them, as is to impoverish them by War; especially by said before, or else to have command over War at their own doors, which would foon all by courfe. This is likely to be true. For confume every poor mans living, and find Natures impatient of subjection, when once him other work to think upon, than matter they have broken loofe from the rigour of of State. Therefore he bade them to be authority, love nothing more, than to con-detain him within the City, or find other, and the Lake, There was he charged unabutinels for him at home, to disappoint him wares, on all sides, (save only where that of the hoseur that he hoped to get in the great Lake of Perufus, permitted neither his war. Wherefore he departed fecretly out of enemies to come at him, nor him to flye from the Town, and meant to take pollellion of them) knowing not which way to turn, or his Office when the day came at Ariminum. make reliftance. So was he flain in the place. The Fathers (to the Senators were called ) accompanied with fifteen thousand dead highly displeased with this, revoked him by carkasses of his Country-men. About fix Emballadors: but he neglected their in thousand of his men, that had the Vantjunction; and haltening to meet with the guard took courage, as for the most part it Carthaeinians, took his way to Arctium. happens, out of desperation: and breaking where he shortly found them.

Rrrrr

AP. 111.

252

miled unto Hannibal great affurance of vi- had returned, and given charge upon the cio: v. Therefore he provoked, with many in- Carthaginians backs, it was thought that they dignities, the veloment nature of the Romight have greatly amended, if not wholly min; horing thereby to draw him unto altered the fortune of the day. But that viofight ere servilius came with the rest of the lence of their fear, which kindled by neces-Army. All the Country between Fefula and fity had wrought the effects of hardiness. Arctium, he put to fire and fword, even under the Confuls nofe; which was enough to spair of saving their lives by flight. They make him ftir, that would not have litten ftood still, in a cold sweat, upon the Hill-top, ftill, though Hannibal had been quiet. It is hearing under them a terrible noise, but not true that a great Captain of France hath any way discovering how things went, bestaid; rays gafte n' ft pas perdu; A wasted cause of the great fogg that held all that Country 1 int thereby loft. But by this walte morning. When it grew toward noon, the of the Country, Flammins thought his own Air was cleared, and they might plainly difhonour to be much impaired; and there-cern the lamentable flaughter of their felfore advanced towards the Enemy. Many lows. But they staid not to lament it; for it advised him (which had indeed been best ) was high time, they thought, to be gone ere to have patience a while, and ftay for his they were descryed and attached by the Colleague. But of this he could not abide to enemies horse. This they should have hear; faying, that he came not to defend thought upon sooner, since they had nomind Arctium, whilft the Carthaginians went to return into the fight. For, described they burning down all Italy before them, to the were, and Maharbal sent after them, who gates of Rome. Therefore he took horse, and overtook them by night in a Village, which commanded the Army to march. It is re- he furrounded with his horse: and so they ported as ominous, that one of their Enfigns yielded the next day, rendring up their stuck so fast in the ground, as it could not arms, upon his promise of their lives and be plucked up by the Enfign-bearer. Of liberties. this tale, whether true or falle, Tully makes This accord Hannibal refused to confirm, a jeft, faying, That the cowardly knave Taying, that it was made by Maharbal did faintly pull at it (as going now to fight) without sufficient warrant, as wanting his having hardly pitched it into the earth, authority to make it good. Hereinhe taught Neither was the answer of Flaminius (if it them ( yet little to his own honour) what it were true)difagreeable hereto: for he com- was to keep no faith : and fitted them with manded that it should be digged up, if fear a trick of their own. For if it were lawful had made the hands too weak to lift it : unto the Romans, to alter covenants, or asking withall, whether letters were not add unto them what they listed; if the Carcome from the Senate, to hinder his pro- thaginians must be fain to pay certain hunceedings. Of this their jealousie, both he dreds, and yet more hundreds of talents, beand the Senate that did give him cause, are sides their first bargains; as also to renounce likely to repent.

the lake of Thraymene, was on a light fire ; good pleasure of the Romans, whose present which while the Conful thought to quench advantage is more ample, than the condiwith his enemies blood, he surfued Him- tions of the late concluded Peace: then can nibal so unadvisedly, that he fell with his Hannibal be as Roman, as themselves; and whole Army into an ambuth cunningly laid make them know, that perfidiousness gain-thorow the enemies, that food in their way, The fiery diffrosition of this Conful, pro- recovered the tops of the Mountains. If these their interest in Sardinia, and be limited in All the Territory of Cortona, as far as to their Spanish Conquests, according to the for him between the Mountains of Certona eth no more in prosperity, than it losethin the change of fortune. Fifteen thousand I. a., not, contrary to all good advice, have been war. But the Romans he kept in straight priconfirmed by fuccels of many ages, is not any Italian Partifans.

Presently after the battle of Thrasimene, C. Centronius, with four thousand Roman horse, drew near unto the Camp of Hannimatter of importance, when the news was perswaded the imitation. brought him of his Colleagues overthrow and death in Hetruria; that made him haften back to the defence of Rome.

In these passages, it is easie to discern the fruits of popular jealousie, which perswaded the Romans to the yearly change of their Commanders in the wars; which greatly endangered, and retarded the growth of that Empire. Certain it is, that ailmen are far better taught by their own errours, than by the examples of their foregoers. Flaminius had heard in what a trap Semproniw had been taken up but the year before, fan priloners, or thereabout, he had in his to halty to figut, before the arrival of ser hands : of which, all that were not Romins, cilius. Is sempronius had been continued in he fet free without ranfom; proteiting, as hischarge, it is probabl, that he would have he had done before, that it was for their taken his companion with him the econd takes, and to free them and others from the time, and have fearened all fuspected places, Roman tyranny, that he had undertaken this proper to have fluslowed an ambush : both which this new Conful Flaminius neglected. fon, and in fetters, making them learn to eat We may boldly avow it, that by being conhard meat. This was a good way to breed tinued in his Government of Trance ten in the people of Italy, if not a love of Car- years, Cafar brought that mighty Nation, tothace, yet a contempt of Rome: as if this war gether with the Helvetians and many of the had not concerned the general fafety, but Germans, under the Reman yoke; into which only the preferving of her own neck from parts had there been every year a new Lieuthe voke of flavery, which her over-strong tenant sent, they would hardly, if ever, have enemies would thrust upon her in revenge been subdued. For it is more than the best ofher oppressions. But an antient reputation wit in the World can do, to inform it self, within one years compais, of the nature of loft in one or two battles. Wherefore more a great Nation, of the Factions, of the Plais to be done, ere the Carthaginians can get ces, Rivers, and of all good helps, whereby to profecute a War to the best effect. Our Princes have commonly left their Deputies in Ireland three years 5 whence by reason of the shortness of that their time, many of bal. He was fent from Ariminum by Servilius them have returned as wife as they went the other Consul, to increase the strength of outjothers have profited more, & ver when flaminins: but, coming too late, he increathey began but to know the first rudiments sed only the mitadventure. Maharbal was of War, and Government, fitting the Counemployed by Hannibal, to intercept this try, they have been called home, and new tompany; who finding them amazed with Apprentices sent in their places, to the great report which they had newly heard of the prejudice both of this and that Efface. But it great overthrow, charged them, and brake hathever been the old course of the World rathem: and killing almost half of them, drave ther to follow the errours, than to examine the rest unto a high piece of ground, them: and of Princes and Governours to where they came down, and fimply yielded uphold their flothful ignorance, by the old to mercy the next day. Servilius himself examples and policy of other ages and peowas in the mean time skirmishing with the ple; though neither likeness of time, of oc-Gauls; against whom he had wrought no casion, or of any other circumstance, have

o. VI.

How Q. Fabius the Roman Diffutor, Sought to conjume the force of Hannibal, by lingring War. Minutius the Mafter of the Horfe, honoured and advanced by the People, for bold and successful attempting ; adventures rashly upon Hannibal, and as like to periffs with his Army, and rescued by Fabius.

Reatly were the Romans amazed at Tthis their ill success, and at the danger by this subtile Carthaginian; yet suffered he apparent; which threatned them in more himself to be caught soon after in the same terrible manner, than ever did war since manner. He had also belike forgotten how Rome it self was taken. They were good Sempronius, fearing to be prevented by a Souldiers, and so little accustomed to renew Conful, and ambitious of the fole ho- ceive an overthrow, that when Parrhus had nour of beating Hannibalin battle, without beaten them, once and again, in open field, help of his companion scipio, had been re- all Haly was strangely affected with his sucwarded with shame and loss; else would be cess, and held him in admiration, as one that CHAP. III.

rel was not grounded upon hate: he only against Hannibal, word was brought that the fought honour, and fought (asit were, upon Carthaginian Fleet had intercepted all the a bravery; demeaning himfelf like a cour supply, that was going to Cn. Scipio in Spain. teous enemy. This Carthaginian detested the Against these Carthaginians, Fabius com. whole Roman name; against which he burn- manded servilius the Consul to put to Sea; ed with delire of revenge. Ticinum, Trebia, and taking up all the ships about Rome and and Thruffmene, witnessed his purpose, and oftia, to pursue them: whilst he, with the his ability; which to withstand, they fled Legions, attended upon Hannibal, Four Leunto a remedy that had long been out of gions he had levied in hafte: and from Ariuse, and created a Dictator. The Dictators minum he received the Army which servipower was greater than the Confuls, and lies the Conful had conducted thither. icarcely subject unto controll of the whole | With these forthwith he followed anace City. Wherefore this Officer was feldom after Hannibal; not to fight, but to affront chosen, but upon some extremity, and for no him. And knowing well, what advantage longer time than fix months. He was to be the Numidian horse had over the Romans, he named by one of the Confuls, at the ap-alwayes lodged himself on high grounds, pointment of the Senate: though it were lo, and of hard access. Hannibal in the mean that the Conful (if he stood upon his prero- while, pursuing his victory, had ranged gative ) might name whom he pleased. At over all the Country, and used all manner of this time the one Conful being dead, and cruelty towards the inhabitants; especially the other too far off, the people took upon to those of the Roman Nation, of whom he them, as having supream authority, to give did put to the sword all that were able to the Dignity by their election, to & Fabius bear arms. Passing by Spoletum and Ancona, Maximus; the best reputed man of war in he incamped upon the Adriatick shores; rethe City. Novum factum novum confilium ex- freshed his diseased, and over-travelled petit, contrary winds, contrary courses, Q. Fa- Companies, armed his Africans after the bius chose M. Minutius Rusus Master of the manner of the Romans, and made his difhorse: which Officer was customarily as patches from Carthage; presenting his friends, more upon him.

tion of somewhat amiss in matters of Religi- healed his horse heeles of the scratches, by on: a good beginning and commendable, washing their pasterns in old wine: he fol-Landbaza were true (as Livie reports it) that the wards Apulia a Northern Province of the scould work wonders. But Pyrrhus his quar- when the Dictator was newly fet forth

the Dictators Lievtenant; though this Mi- which were in effect, all the Citizens with nutius grew afterwards famous, by taking part of the spoils that he had gotten. Having refreshed his army, fed his horses, cured his The first act of Fabius, was the reforma- wounded Souldiers, and (as Polybius hathit) had the Religion been also good. But if it lowed the coast of the Adrianick Sea to-Books of sphil were consulted, and gave di- Kingdom of Naples spoiling the Murrucini, rection in this business of devotion; then and all other Nations lying in his way. In must we believe that those books of sybil, all this ground that he over-ran, he had not preserved in Rome, were dictated by an evil taken any one City: onely he had assayed spirit. For it was ordained, that some Vow, spoletum a Collony of the Romans; and findmade in the beginning of this war to Mars, ling it well defended, presently gave it over. flould be made anew, and amplyfied, as hather the malice of a great Army is broken, and ving not been rightly made before: also the force of it spent in a great siege. This the that great Plays shouldbe vowed unto Ju- Protestant Army found true at Positiers, a piter, and a Temple to Venus; with such little before the battle of Moncountour; and other Trumpery. This vehemency of super-their victorious enemies, anon after at stition, proceeds always from vehemency of s. Jean d'Angely. But Hannibal was more fear. And surely this was a time, when Rome wife. He would not engage himself in any was exceedingly diftempered with passion; such enterprise, as should detain him, and whereof that memorable accident of two give the Romans leave to take breath. All his women that fuddenly died, when they faw care was to weaken them in force and reputheir Sons return alive from Thrasymene, may tation: knowing, that when once he was abserve to bear witness, though it be more profolute Master of the field, it would not be perly an example of motherly love. The longere the walled Cities would open their Walls and Towers of the City were now regates, without expecting any engine of batpaired and fortified; the Bridgesupon Ri- tery. To this end he presented Fabius with vers were broken down, and all care taken battle, as foon as he faw him; and provoked for desence of Rome itself. In this tumult, him with all manner of bravadoes. But values would not bite. He knew well the not eafily cleape. Now began the wildon inferences between fouldiers bred up, ever of Fabius to grow into credit; as if he ireance they were boyes, in war and in blood, taken the Carthaginians in a trap, and wen fit on his tail.

the Dictators camp, that hung over his horse. head upon the hills of collicula, and Casili- Minutius was glad of this good occasion num: for other way there was none, by to shew his own sufficiency. He was fully which he might iffue out of that goodly gar-perswaded, that his Romans, in plain field den-countrey, which he had already wast- would be too hard for the Africans and Spaed, into places more abundant of provision niards: by whom if they had been foiled for his wintering. It was by meer errour of already twice or thrice, it was not by open his guide, that he first entred within these force, but by subtilty and ambush, which he straights. For he would have been directed thought himself wife enough to prevent. unto Calfinum, whence he might both affay All the Army was of his opinion; and that the fair City of Capua, which had made him to earnestly, ashe was preferred, by judgefriendly promises under-hand, and hinder ment of the Souldiers, in worthiness to comthe Romans from coming near it to prevent mand, before the cold and wary Fabius. him. But his guide mis-understood the Car- In this jollity of conceit, he determined to thaginian pronunciation, and conducted him fight. Yet had he been peremptorily forawry another way, from Callinum to Calili- bidden so to do, by the Dictator; the breach regard and hardened in Spain, made proud the victory without blows. But Hannibal and adventurous by many victories there, reformed this opinion, and freed himfelt, by and of late by some notable acts against the a sleight invention, yet serving the turn us Romans; and fuch, as had no oftner feen well as a better. In driving the countrey the enemy, than been vanquished by him. he had gotten about two thousand Kine Therefore he attended the Carthaginian fo whose hornes he drested with dry faggots ner, as he kept him from stragling too far s and setting the to them in the dark mght. and preserved the countrey from utter spoil. caused them to be driven up the hills. The He inured his men by little and little, and spectacle was strange, and therefore terrimade them acquainted with dangers by de ble; especially to those that knew it to be grees, and he brought them first to look on a work of a terrible enemy. What it should the Lyon afar off, that in the end he might mean, Fabius could not tell; but thought it a device to circumvent him, and therefore Now Minutius had a contrary disposition, kept within his Trenches. They that kept the and was as fiery as Flaminius: taxing Fabius hill tops were horribly affraid, when some with cowardize and fear. But all stirred of these fiery Monsters were gotten beyond not this well-advised Commander. For them ; and ran therefore halfily away, thinkwife men are no more moved with fuch ing the enemies were behind their backs; noise, than with wind bruised out of a blad- and fell among the light-armed Carthagimder. There is nothing of more indifcretion ans, that were no less afraid of them. So Hanand danger, than to purfue misfortune: it nibal, with his whole Army recovered fure wastethit self sooner by sufferance, than by ground without molestation: where he staid opposition. It is the invading Army that till the next morning, and then brought off defires battel : and this of Hannibal, was his light footmen, with some slaughter of the both the invading and victorious. Fabius Romans, that began to hold them in ikirtherefore suffered Hannibal to cross the Ap- mish. After this, Hannibal made semblance penines, and to fall upon the most rich and of taking his journey towards Rome: and pleasant Territory of Campania; neither the Dictator coasted him in the wonted could he by any arguments be perswaded, manner, keeping still on high grounds, betoadventure the Roman Army in battel : but tween him and the City, whileft the Carthabeing far too weak in horse, he alwayes kept ginian wasted all the Plains. The Carthagithe Hills and fast grounds. When Hannibal nian took Geryon, an old ruinous Town in faw he could by no means draw this wary Apulia, forfaken by the Inhabitants, which Dictator to fight, that the Winter came on, he turned into Barns and Store-houses for and that the Towns stood firm for the Ro- winter, and incamped under the broken mans, whose Legions were in fight, though wall. Other matter of importance he did afar off; he resolved to rest his Army, that none: but the time passed idly, till the Diwas loaden with spoil, in some plentiful and ctator was called away to Rome, about some affured place, till the following spring. But business of Religion, and left the Army ere this can be done he must pass along by in charge with Minutias the Master of the death, but the honour of the victory, which | he held undoubtedly his own; and the highly effected by the Army, and more leve of the Army, and the friends that he had highly by the people at Rome, to whom he at home bearing office in Figure, were enough fent the news, with somewhat greater boats to fave him from the Dictators rods and than truth. It feemed no small matter, that axes, took he the matter never to hainouf-the Roman Army had recovered spirit, fofar by. Harnikal on the other fide was no lefs forth that it dated to fet upon Hamibal in glad, that he should play with a more ad- his own Camp 5 and that in fo doing, it came venturous Gametter. Therefore he drew off with the better. Every man therefore near, and to provoke the Komans, fent forth praifed the Master of the Horse, that had a third part of his Army to waste the Coun-wrought this great alteration; and confetrev. This was boldly done, feeing that quently, they grew as far out of liking with Alinning incamped hard by him: but it Fabins and his timerous proceedings, thinkfreems, that he now despited those whom he ing that he had not done any thing wilely, had so often vanquished. There was a piece in all his Dictatorship: faving that he chose of high ground between the two Camps; such a worthy Lieutenant; whereas indeed which because it would be commodious to in no other thing he had so greatly erred. him that could occupy it, the Carthaginians But the Dictator was not so joyful of a little feized upon by night with two thousand of good luck, as angry with the breach of discitheir light armed. But Minutius, by plain pline; and fearfull of greater danger, thereforce, wan it from them the next day; and on likely to enfue. He said that he know his neerer neighbour. was, to provide abundantly, not only for he had done, if he were Dictator: speaking his men, but for his Horses, which he knew it openly, That good success issuing from bad counsel, was more to be seared, than cakeep them in good heart against the next lamity; for as much as the one bred a foolish Summer: if besides this he could give the considence, the other taught men to be wa-Komans another blow, it would increase his reputation, incourage his own men, terriout, especially Metellus, a Tribune of the reputation, incoming any of the series and give him leave to for-fie his enemies, and give him leave to for-rage the Countrey at will. Since therefore and do what he lift, without fear of the Di-himutius did not in many dayes if live forth of his Camp, the Carthaginian fent out (as our only Man, chosen to be General, and before) a great number of his men, to fetch Lord of the Town, in our greatest necessity, in harvest. This advantage Minutius wisely hath done no manner of good, but suffered espied, and took. For heled forth his Ar-my, and setting it in order, presented battel utter shame of our State; unless he also hinto Hannibal, that was not in case to accept der others, from doing better than himself it, even at his own Trenches. His horses, can, or dares? It were good to consider and all his light Armature, divided into what he means by this. Into the place of many companies, he sent abroad against the C. Flaminius he hath not chosen any new forragers; who being dispersed over all the Consul all this while; Servilius is sent away fields, and loaden with booty, could make to Sea, I know not why; Hannibal and he, no refistance. This angred Hannibal, that have as it were taken Truce; Hannibal was not able to help them; but worfe did sparing the Dicators grounds: (for Hanit arger him, when the Romans took heart mibal had indeed forborn to spoil some to afail his Trenches. They perceived that grounds of Fabius, that so he might bring it was meer weakness, which held him with- him into envy and suspicion) and the Dictain his Camp, and therefore were bold to tor giving him leave to spoil all others, withdespite his great name, that could not resist out impeachment. Surely his drift is even their present strength. But in the heat of the this: he would have the War to last bulinets, Afdrubal came from Geryon with long, that he himfelf might be long in offour shouland men, being informed of the fice, and have the fole Government both of danger, by those that had escaped the Ro- our City and Armies. But this must not be man horse. This imboldened Hannibal to so. It were better, that the Commonalty of iffice forth against the Romans; to whom Rome, which gave him this authority, should received.

"um, whence Fabius hoped that he should of whose command was extream peril of

For this piece of fervice Minutius was intrenching himself thereupon, became their own place, and what was to be done: that he would teach the Master of the Horse to do so The main business of Hannibal at this time likewise; and make him give account of what nevertheless he cid not much hurt, as he had again take it from him and conferr it upon one more worthy. But left, in moving the

people

neople hereto, I should seem to do him in-1 on of this Dictator, by the People.

worthy Master of the Horse ) that was bet- and assurance of their liberty. Proceed as he had begun. So the Act passed. Minutius and Hannibal equally defired, could Before this buffe day of contention, Fabius iury; thus far forth I will regard his ho- had dispatched the election of new Connour: I will only propound, That the Malter full, which was M. Allins Regulus, in the of the Horse may be joined in equal authoroom of C. Flaminius: and, having finished rity with the Dictator; a thing not more all requifite bufiness, went out of Town new nor less necessary, than was the electi- perceiving well, that he should not be able to withstand the multitude in hindering the Though all men, even the Senators, were decree. The news of Minutius his advanceill perswaded of the course which Fabius ment, was at the camp as soon as Fabius; had taken against Hannibal, as being neither to that his old Lieutenant, and new Colplaufible, nor feeming beneficial at the pre- league, began to treat with him as a Comfent; vet was there none so injurious, as to panion; asking him at the first, in what think that his general intent, and care of forthe thought it best to divide their authe Weal-publique, was less than very ho- thority: whether that one, one day; and nourable. Whereas therefore it was the the other, the next; or each of them fucmanner, in passing of any act, that some cessively, for some longer time, should comman of credit and authority, besides the mand in chief. Fabius briefly told him, That propounder, should stand up, and formally it was the pleasure of the Citizens, to make deliver his approbation, not one of the the Master of the Horse equal to the Dictaprincipal Citizens was found so impudent, tor, but that he should never be his superias to offer that open disgrace, both unto or: He would therefore divide the Legions a worthy Personage, and (therewithal) with him by lot, according to the custom. unto that dignity, whose great power had Minutius was not herewith greatly pleased; freed the State at several times, from the for that with half of the Army he could not greatest dangers. Only C. Terentins Varro , work such wonders as otherwise he hoped who the year before had been Prætor, to accomplish. Nevertheless he meant to do was glad of such an opportunity, to win his best, and so taking his part of the Army, the favour of the Multitude. This fellow incamped about a mile and a half from the was the son of a Butcher, afterwards be-Dictator. Needful it was (though Livy seems came a Shop-keeper; and being of a con- to tax him for it) that he should so do. For tentious spirit, grew by often brabling, to where two several Commanders are not take upon him as a Pleader, dealing in poor subordinate one unto another, nor joyned in mens causes. Thus by little and little he Commission, but have each intire and absogot into Office; and rose by degrees, lute charge of his own followers, there are being advanced by those, who in hatred of the forces (though belonging to one Prince the Nobility favoured his very baseness. And or State ) not one, but two distinct Arnow he thought the time was come, for him mies: in which regard, one Camp shall not to give a hard push at the Consulship; by hold them both without great inconvenidoing that, which none of the great men, ence. Polybius neither finds fault with this fearing or favouring one another, either distinction, nor yet reports, that Fabius was durst or would. So he made an hot inve-unwilling to command in chief successively dive, not only against Fabius, but against (as the two Consuls used) with Minutius, by all the Nobility; faying, That it grieved turns. He faith that Minutius was very rethem to see the people do well, and take fractory, and so proud of his advancement, upon them what belonged unto them, in that continually he opposed the Dictator: matter of Government; That they fought who thereupon referred it to his choice, eito humble the Commons by poverty, and ther to divide the forces between them, as is to impoverish them by War; especially by said before, or else to have command over War at their own doors, which would foon all by course. This is likely to be true. For confume every poor mans living, and find Natures impatient of subjection, when once him other work to think upon, than matter they have broken loofe from the rigour of of State. Therefore he bade them to be authority, love nothing more, than to conwife; and fince they had found one ( this test with it; as if herein confisted the proof ter affected unto them and his Countrey, to It behoved the Master of the horse to reward him according to his good deferts; make good the opinion which had thus adand give him authority, according as was vanced him. Therefore he was no less carepropounded by the Tribune, that so he ful of getting occasion to fight, than was Famight be encouraged and enabled to bins of avoiding the necessity. That which to hide two or three hundred men. In thefe lurking places Hannibal bestowed five hunthem fo close together, that they could not be discovered. But left by any misadventure

they should be found out, and buried in their holes; he made offer betimes in the morning, to feize upon a piece of ground that lay on the other hand : whereby he drew the eyes and the thoughts of the Romans, from their more needful care, to bufiness little concerning them. Like unto this was the occasion, which not long before had provoked Minu-

like fort as he got it; he fent first his light ar-

Conful, the war would never be brought to thers, against the vertue (as it was believed) an end; That fuch of the Plebeians as had of this mean, but worthy man, feemed fo long fince been advanced to honour by the manifest, that when the People had urged people, were grown as proud as the old the business to dispatch, only Terestiss was Nobility, and contemned the meaner fort, chosen Consul: in whose hand it was left, to

to Tens or Decuries; and governed fucceffive- These new Consuls, Varro and Paulus omit ly, by the space of five dayes, one Decurie ted no part of their diligence in preparing after another in order: yet so, that the Li- for the war; wherein though Varro made Hors, or Virgers, carrying the Fasces, or bun-the greater noise, by telling what wonders dles of rods and axes, waited only upon the he would work, and that he would ask no chief of them with those Ensigns of power. more, than once to have a fight of Hannibal. This custome was retained in times of the whom he promised to vanquish the very first Confuls; and put in use, when by death, or day; yet the providence and care of Pauany casualty, there wanted ordinary Magi- lus travelled more earnestly toward the acstrates of the old year, to substitute new for complishment of that, whereof his fellow the year following. The advantage of the vainly boasted. He wrote unto the two old Fathers herein was, that if the election were Confuls Servilius and Atilius, desiring them not like to go as they would have it, there to abstain from hazard of the main chances needed no more, than to flip five dayes, and but nevertheless, to ply the Carthaginians then was all to begin anew: by which in- with daily skirmish, and weaken them by terruption, the heat of the multitude was degrees: that when he and his Colleague commonly well affwaged. Upon such change should take the field, with the great Army on, it was also lawful unto new Petitioners, find the four old Legions well accustomed to fue for the Magistracies that lay void: to the enemy, and the enemy well weakned ever fince themselves were freed from con- hold the election of his Colleague. Hereupon tempt of the more mighty; That therefore all the former Petitioners gave over. For ir was needful to choose a Consul, who whereas men of ordinary mark had stood thould be altogether a Plebeian, a meer new for the place before, it was now thought man, one that could boast of nothing but meet, that, both, to supply the defect, and to the Peoples love, nor could wish more, than bridle the violence of this unexpert, and hotto keep it, by well deferving of them heated man, one of great fufficiency and re-By fuch perswasions the Multitude was putation, should be joyned with him, as both won, to be wholly for Terentius: to the Companion and Oppolite. So L. A milius Paugreat vexation of the Nobles, who could lus, he who a few years fince had overcome not endure to fee a man railed for none the Illyrians, and chafed Demetrius Pharius out other vertue, than his detracting from their of his Kingdome, was urged by the Nobility honour; and therefore opposed him with to stand for the place; which he easily oball their might. To hinder the defire of the tained, having no Competitor. It was not the People, it fell out, or at least was alledged, defire of this honourable man, to trouble that neither of the two present Consuls himself any more in such great business of could well be spared from attending upon the Common-wealth. For, notwithstanding Hannibal, to hold the Election. Wherefore his late good service, He, and M. Livius that a Dictator was named for that purpose; and had been his companion in office, were afhe again deposed (either as was pretend-terwards injuriously vexed by the people, ed) for some religious impediment, or be- and called unto judgement : wherein Livius cause the Fathers defired an Inter-regnum, was condemned, and Amilius hardly escapwherein they might better hope to prevail ed. But of this injustice they shall put the in choice of the new Consuls. This Inter- Romans well in mind each of them in his sereerum took name and being in Rome, at the cond Consulship wherein they shall honoudeath of Romulus: and was in use at the rably approve their worth; the one of them death of other Kings. The order of it was nobly dying, in the most grievous loss; the this. All the Fathers, or Senators, who at the other bravely winning, in the most happy vifirst were an hundred, parted themselves in- ctory that ever befell that Common-wealth.

of those, that were Presidents of the electi- which they were now levying, they might which otherwise was not allowed; but a to their hands. He was also very strict in time limited, wherein they should publickly his Musters, wherein the whole Senate affist declare themselves to seek those offices. But him so carefully, as if in this Action they no device would ferve against the general meant to refute the slanders, with which favour born unto Terentius. One Inter-reg- Terentius and his adherents had burdened num passed over, and the malice of the Fa- them. What number of men they raised, it is not long be wanting. The countrey lying be- (fore in all hafte, he returned home by sicil. tween them was open and bare, yet as fit for and (being fo required by the Dictators letambush, as could be wished: for that the ters) repaired to the camp, with his fellowfides of a naked valley adjoyning, had many Conful, where they took charge of the Army. and fracious caves; able fome one of them,

ø. VII.

dred horse, and five thousand foot; thrusting The Roman people, desirous to finish the man quickly, choose a rails and unworthy Conful Great forces levied against Hannibal. Hannibal taketh the Romans provisions in the Caftle of Canna. The new Confuls fet forth against Hannibal.

Ith little pleasure did they of the poorer fort in Rome hear the great commendations that were given to Fabine by the principal Citizens. He had indeed tius to adventure upon the Carthaginians. preserved them from receiving a great over-Hoping therefore to increase his honour, in throw; but had neither finished the war, nor done any thing in appearance thereto tendmature, then his horse, and at length (seeing ing. Rather it might seem that the reputatithat Hannibal seconded his own troops with on of this his one worthy act, was likely to fresh companies) he followed in person with countenance the slow proceedings or perthe Legions. He was foon caught, and fo hot- haps the cowardize ( if it were no worfe) of ly charged on all fides, that he knew neither those that followed him, in protracting the how to make refistance, nor any safe retrait. work to a great length, Else, what meant the In this dangerous case, whilst the Romans Consuls to sit idle the whole winter, contradefended themselves losing many, and those ry to all former custome; fince it was never of their best men: Fabius drew near in very heard before, that any Roman General had good order to relieve them. For this old willingly suffered the time of his command Captain, perceiving afar off, into what ex- to run away without any performace: as tremity his new Colleague had rashly lif it were honourable to do just nothing? thrown himself & his followers, did the office Thus they suspected they knew not what; of a good Citizen; and regarding more the and were ready every man to discharge the benefit of his Countrey, than the difgrace grief and anger of his own private loss, upon which he had wrongfully sustained, sought the ill administration of the publick.

rather to approve himself by hasting to do This affection of the people, was very good, than by suffering his enemy to feel helpful to C. Terentius Varro, in his suit for the the reward of doing ill. Upon Fabius his ap- Confulfhip. It behoved him to ftrike, whilf proach, Hannibal retired: fearing to be well the Iron was hot: his own worth being wetted with a showre, from the cloud (as he little or none; and his credit over-weak, to termed the Dictator ) that had hung folong make way into that high Dignity. But the on the Hill-tops. Minutius forthwith sub- Commonalty were then in such a mood, as mitted himself to Fabine; by whose benefit abundantly supplied all his defects. Wherein he confessed his life to have been faved. So to help, he had a kinsman, Bibius Herennifrom this time forwards the war proceeded us, then Tribune of the People; who spacoldly, as the Dictator would have it; both red not touse the liberty of his place, in faywhilest his Office lasted which was not long, ing what he listed, without all regard of and likewise afterwards, when he delivered truth, or modesty. This bold Orator stuck up his charge unto the Confuls, that follow- not to affirm, that Hannibal was drawn into Italy, and suffered therein to range at his Servilius the Conful had pursued in vain pleasure, by the Noblemen; That Minutius a Carthaginian fleet, to which he came never indeed with his two Legions, was likely to within kenning. He ran along all the coast of have been overthrown, and was rescued by Italy; took hostages of the Sardinians and Fabius with the other two: but, had all Corficans; passed over into Africk; and there been joyned together, what they might have negligently falling to spoil the countrey, was done, it was apparent, by the victory of Mishamefully beaten aboord his ships, with the nutius when he commanded over all as Maloss of 1000 men. Weighing anchor there- fter of the horse; That without a Plebeian

ed his instructions.

uncertain. Fourfeore thousand foot, at the had with him; wherein their fuccess, for leaft, and fix thousand horse, they were the most part, was rather good than great ftrong in the field, when the day came, Yet one mischance not only blemished the

ing upon Hansibal. relieved the Carthaginians, when they were that time, made his abode at Geryon; where diffredied by their own Mercenaries; fo did lay all his store for the Winter. The Romans he now fend help to Rome, a thousand Arto be near him, lodged about Cannussium: chers, and Slingers, with great quantity of and, that they might not be driven to turn Wheat, Barly, and other Provisions: fear afide for all necessaries, to the loss of good ing nothing more, than that one of these apportunities, they bestowed much offer two mighty Cities should deltroy the other, provisions in the Castle of Canna: for the whereby his own estate would fall to ruine, Town was razed the year before. This place that stood upright, by having them some-what evenly ballanced. He gave them also nished himself, but compelled his enemies counted, to fend forces into Africa: if (per- to want many needfull things, unless they haps) by that means they might divert the would be troubled with far carriage. Bewar from home. His gifts, and good advice fides this, and more to his advantage, he were lovingly accepted; and inftructions enabled himfelf to abide in that open Counwere given to Titus Odacilius the Prætor, try, fit for the service of his Horse, longer which was to go into Sicil, that he should than the Romans, having so many mouths accordingly pass over into Africk, if he to feed, could well endure to tarry; withfound it expedient.

at this time, do much more ferve to declare the Senate, letting them understand how their puissance, than any, though larger acthis Piece taken by Hannibal, would ferve compt by Poll, of such as were not easily him to command no small part of the Coundrawn into the field, and fitted for service. try adjacent; it then seemed needfull, even For, besides these Armies of the Consuls, unto the Fathers themselves, to adventure a and that which went into Sicil, twenty five battel with the Cartbaginian, rather than thousand, with L. Posthumius Albinus, ano- suffer him thus to take root in the ground of ther of the Pixtors, went against the Gauls, Italy. Nevertheless answer was returned to reclaim that Province, which the passage unto Servilius, that he should have patience of Hannibal through it, had taken from yet awhile: for that the Confuls would fent itrength might well embolden them to do as need required. do as they did. They fent Embassadours to Thilip, the Son of Demetrius, King of Mace- and the season of the year commodious to don . requiring him to deliver into their take the field, the two Confuls, with their hands Demetrius Ibarius: who, having Army, set forth against Hannibal. This was been their subject, and rebell, was sied into alwayes done with great solemnity: especihis Kingdom. They also fent to the Illyrians, ally, when soever they went forth to war of payment was aiready past. What answer Sacrifices, and solemn Vows, were madeun-necessity of a battel. Many skirmishes they Country remarkable service. Terentins his which t arro had so greatly defired, of look-honour of their other services, but was indeed the occasion to draw on the misery Hiero the old King of syracuje, as he had following. Hannibal for the most part of out offering battel, which he most desired. The great Levies, which the Romans made Of this mishap when Servilius had informed them. The contemplation of this their pre- lihortly be there, with a Power sufficient to

When all things were ready in the City, to demand their tribute; whereof the day against any noble or redoubted Enemy. For they received, it is not known: only this is to Jupiter, and the rest of their gods, for known, that Demetrius Pharins was not fent good fuccefs and Victory: which being per-unto them; and that Philip henceforth began to have an eye upon them, little to their an honourable train of the principal mengood. As for the Illyrian money, by the (not only such as were of their kindred and make, it will appear, that the one half of it Voluntaries for love, but a great number of (how little focver) would have been wel- others that meant to abide at home,) were come to Rome, and accepted, without any accompanied on their way, and dismissed cavil about forfeiture for non-payment of the with friendly leave-taking, and good wishes. At this time, all the Fathers, and the whole While ft the City was busied in these cares, Nobility, waited upon Emilius Paulus, as the old Confuls lay as near unto Hannibal as the only Man, whom they thought either collibly they could without incurring the worthy of this honour, or likely to do his lice of his own Citizens.

Attendants

o. VIII.

latt years Confuls, requesting it because of vantage was theirs, why did he make them. his age and weakness: servilius they re- forbear to use it: Thus thought the comtained with them, as their affistant. The mon Souldier: and thus also thought the first thing that Amilius thought necessary, Consul Terentius; who was no less popular was, to hearten his Souldiers with good in the Camp, than he had been in the City. words; who out of their bad fuccels hi- Expectation is alwayes tedious; and never therto, had gathered more cause of fear, more, than when the Event is of most imthan of courage. He willed them to con-portance. All men longed, both at Rome, palt against the Carthaginians, and other doubtfull passions of Hope and Fear: there-Rome at the present was able to set forth. formance. He told them in what danger their Country | Thus while the Romans think themselves flood; how the state and safety thereof to have the better of their enemies, they fall refted upon their hands; using some such into an inconvenience, than which few are other common matter of perswasion. But more dangerous; Dissension of their chief the most effectual part of this Oration, was, Commanders. Varro would fight: Emilius That Hannibal with this his terrible Army, would fo too, but said that it was not yet had not yet obtained one victory by plain time; why? because the enemy must shortforce and valour: but that only by deceit ly dislodge, and remove hence, into places and ambush he had stoln the honour, which less fit for his horse. But shall the Romans he had gotten at Trebia and Thrasymene, wait, till Hannibal, having eaten up his last Herewithall he taxed the inconfiderate years provisions, return into Campania to talhnels of Sempronius and Flaminius; of gather a second Harvelt? This would (faid whom the one taw not his enemies, untill Varro) favour too much of 2. Fabius: And he was furrounded by them; the other your haste (faid Paulus) doth favour no scarce saw them, when they struck off his less of C. Flaminius. Their deeds were like head, by reason of the thick mist, through their words: for they commanded by the darkness whereof he went groping turns interchangeably every day. Emi-

Attendants were the whole multitude of the Finally declaring what advantages they roorer Citizens; a troop no less in great- had against the Lnemy; and how destitute res, than the other was in dignity. At the the Enemy was of those helps, by which he ners, commente strong, Fabius the late Dictator, is faid to had hitherto prevailed against them; he have exhorted the Conful Paulus, with ma- exhorted them to play the men, and do ny grave words, to shew his magnanimity, their best. They were easily perswaded: not only in dealing with the Carthaginians, for the contemplation of their own mulbut (which he thought harder) in bridling titude, and confidence of the Roman verthe outragious folly of his fellow-Conful. tue in matter of Arms, gave them cause to The answer of Paulus, was, That he meant think, that under a Captain so well expenot again to run into danger of condemna- rienced, and every way sufficient, as Amition by offending the multitude; that he lins was known to be, they should easily would do his best for his Country, but if he prevail against the Carthaginians, that faw his best were likely to be ill taken, he came short of them in all things else, save would think it less rashness to adventure up- craft; which would not alwayes thrive. on the Enemies fword, than upon the ma- But in one thing they mistook the meaning of their General. It was his defire that they should have heart to fight; not that they should lose the patience of awaiting a convenient feason. But they, having pre-Diffension between the two Roman Confuls. conceived a victory, thought all delayes to Whether it be likely, that Hannibal was upon be impediments: and thereby fought to rob mans pressed him to fight. The great bat-dod conduct. They remembred what tail of Canna. themselves affected with the vulgar defire. Hese new Generals, arriving at the of ending the war quickly; wherein since These new Generals, arriving at the jot enough the war young of Camp, dismissed M. Atilius, one of the Emilius had acknowledged, that the additional beautiful beautiful was theirs, why did he make them, fider not only now, their victories in time and in the Army, to be freed from the more warlike Nations than were the Car- fore Terentius, who hastened their defire to thaginians, but even their own great num- effect, was likely to win more thanks, than bers: which were no less than all that should his Colleague, though greater in per-

(as it were blinde-fold) into their snares. lins lodged six miles from Hannibal, where uncertain. Fourfeore thousand foot, at the had with him; wherein their fuccess, for leaft, and fix thousand horse, they were the most part, was rather good than great. ftrong in the field, when the day came, Yet one mischance not only blemished the which t arm had to greatly defired, of look-honour of their other fervices, but was ining upon Hansibal.

CHAP. III

870

relieved the Carthaginians, when they were that time, made his abode at Goryon; where diffrested by their own Mercenaries; fo did lay all his store for the Winter. The Romans he now fend help to Rome, a thouland Art to be near him, lodged about Cannufium: chers, and Slingers, with great quantity of and, that they might not be driven to turn Wheat, Barly, and other Provisions: tear afide for all necessaries, to the loss of good ing nothing more, than that one of these opportunities, they bestowed much of their two mighty Cities thould deltroy the other, provisions in the Castle of Canne: for the whereby his own estate would fall to ruine, Town was razed the year before. This place that stood upright, by having them some- Hannibal wan, and thereby not only surwhat evenly ballanced. He gave them also nished himself, but compelled his enemies counted, to fend forces into Africa: if (per- to want many needfull things, unless they hars) by that means they might divert the would be troubled with far carriage. Bewar from home. His gifts, and good advice fides this, and more to his advantage, he were lovingly accepted; and instructions enabled himself to abide in that open Connwere given to Titus Odacilius the Prætor, try, fit for the service of his Horse, longer which was to go into Sicil, that he should than the Romans, having so many mouths accordingly pass over into Africk, if he to feed, could well endure to tarry; withfound it expedient.

at this time, do much more ferve to declare the Senate, letting them understand how their putifiance, than any, though larger ac- this Piece taken by Hannibal, would ferve compt by Poll, of such as were not easily him to command no small part of the Coundrawn into the field, and fitted for fervice. try adjacent; it then feemed needfull, even For, besides these Armies of the Consuls, unto the Fathers themselves, to adventure a and that which went into Sicil, twenty five battel with the Cartbaginian, rather than thousand, with L. Posthumius Albinus, ano- suffer him thus to take root in the ground of ther of the Pixtors, went against the Gauls, Italy. Nevertheless answer was returned to reclaim that Province, which the paffage unto Servilius, that he should have patience of Hannibal through it, had taken from yet awhile: for that the Confuls would them. The contemplation of this their pre- lihortly be there, with a Power sufficient to fent it ength might well embolden them to do as need required. do as they did. They fent Embassiadours to When all things were ready in the City, Thilip, the Son of Demetrius, King of Mace- and the feason of the year commodious to don . requiring him to deliver into their take the field, the two Confuls, with their hands Demetrius Ibarius: who, having Army, set forth against Hannibal. This was been their subject, and rebell, was sled into alwayes done with great solemnity: especihis Kingdom. They also fent to the Illyrians, ally, when soever they went forth to war to demand their tribute; whereof the day against any noble or redoubted Enemy. For of payment was aiready past. What answer Sacrifices, and solemn Vows, were made unthey received, it is not known: only this is to Jupiter, and the rest of their gods, for known, that Demetrius Tharins was not fent good fuccess and Victory: which being perunto them; and that Philip henceforth be- formed, the Generals in warlike attire, with good. As for the Illyrian money, by the (not only such as were of their kindred and (how little focyer) would have been wel- others that meant to abide at home,) were come to Rome, and accepted, without any accompanied on their way, and dismissed cavil about forfeiture for non-payment of the | with friendly leave-taking, and good wishes. whole.

deed the occasion to draw on the misery there the old King of syranje, as he had following. Hannibal for the most part of out offering battel, which he most desired. The great Levies, which the Romans made Of this milhap when Servilius had informed gan to have an eye upon them, little to their an honourable train of the principal men, inifis that they were driven foon after to alliance, or followed them to the war, as make, it will appear, that the one half of it Voluntaries for love, but a great number of At this time, all the Fathers, and the whole While It the City was busied in these cares, Nobility, waited upon Emilius Paulus, as the old Confuls lay as near unto Hannibal as the only Man, whom they thought either possibly they could without incurring the worthy of this honour, or likely to do his necessity of a battel. Many skirmishes they Country remarkable service. Terentins his

Attendants

Attendants were the whole multitude of the Finally declaring what advantages they lice of his own Citizens.

ø. VIII.

Rome at the present was able to set forth. formance. He told them in what danger their Country | Thus while the Romans think themselves

rooter Citizens; a troop no less in great- had against the 1 nemy; and how destitute nels, than the other was in dignity. At the the Enemy was of those helps, by which he parting, Fabius the late Dictator, is faid to had hitherto prevailed against them; he have exhorted the Conful Paulus, with majexhorted them to play the men, and do ny grave words, to shew his magnanimity, their best. They were easily perswaded: not only in dealing with the Carthaginians, for the contemplation of their own mulbut (which he thought harder) in bridling titude, and confidence of the Roman verthe outragious folly of his fellow-Conful. tue in matter of Arms, gave them cause to The answer of Paulus, was, That he meant think, that under a Captain to well expenot again to run into danger of condemna- rienced, and every way fufficient, as Amition by offending the multitude; that he lins was known to be, they should easily would do his best for his Country, but if he prevail against the Carthaginians, that faw his best were likely to be ill taken, he came short of them in all things else, save would think it less rashness to adventure up- craft; which would not alwayes thrive. on the Enemies fword, than upon the ma- But in one thing they mistook the meaning of their General. It was his defire that they should have heart to fight; not that they should lose the patience of awaiting a convenient feason. But they, having pre-Diffention between the two Roman Confuls. conceived a victory, thought all delayes to Whether it be likely, that Hannibal was upon be impediments: and thereby fought to rob point of flying out of Italy, when the Ro- themselves of their best help; which was, mans preffed him to fight. The great bat-tail of Canna.

Good conduct. They remembred what tail of Canna. talk they had heard at Rome: and were themselves affected with the vulgar defire, Hele new Generals, arriving at the of ending the war quickly; wherein fince Camp, dismissed M. Atilius, one of the Emilius had acknowledged, that the ad-last years Consuls, requesting it because of vantage was theirs, why did he make them, his age and weakness: Servilius they re- forbear to use it: Thus thought the comtained with them, as their affiftant. The mon Souldier: and thus also thought the first thing that Emilius thought necessary, Consul Terentius; who was no less popular was, to hearten his Souldiers with good in the Camp, than he had been in the City. Expectation is alwayes tedious; and never therto, had gathered more cause of fear, more, than when the Event is of most imthan of courage. He willed them to con-portance. All men longed, both at Rome, fider not only now, their victories in time and in the Army, to be freed from the past against the Carthaginians, and other doubtfull passions of Hope and Fear: theremore warlike Nations than were the Car- fore Terentius, who hastened their desire to thaginians, but even their own great num- effect, was likely to win more thanks, than bers: which were no less than all that should his Colleague, though greater in per-stood; how the state and safety thereof to have the better of their enemies, they fall refted upon their hands; using some such into an inconvenience, than which few are other common matter of perswasion. But more dangerous; Dissension of their chief the most effectual part of this Oration, was, Commanders. Varro would fight: Emilius That Hannibal with this his terrible Army, would so too, but said that it was not yet had not yet obtained one victory by plain time; why? because the enemy must shortforce and valour: but that only by deceit ly dislodge, and remove hence, into places and ambush he had stoln the honour, which less fit for his horse. But shall the Romans he had gotten at Trebia and Thrasymene. wait, till Hannibal, having eaten up his last Herewithall he taxed the inconfiderate years provisions, return into Campania to tallness of Sempronius and Flaminius; of gather a second Harvest? This would (hid whom the one saw not his enemies, untill Varro) savour too much of 2. Fabius: And he was furrounded by them; the other your haste (said Paulus) doth savour no scarce saw them, when they struck off his less of C. Flaminius. Their deeds were like head, by reason of the thick mist, through their words: for they commanded by the darkness whereof he went groping turns interchangeably every day. Emi-(as it were blinde-fold) into their snares. lins lodged six miles from Hannibal, where the ground was somewhat uneven. Thither | end, that both his unfaithfull Souldiers the ground was some would take pains to might find the more difficulty in running come, he doubted not to fend them away from him; and that his hunger might be in fuch hafte, as they should not leave running till they were out o. Hasp. But they whilest he was about to put this device in excame not. Terentius therefore the next day ecution, the Romans prefiled him fo hard descended into the Plains; his Colleague that they even forced him to that, which he holding him, and befeeching him to Itay. most defired, even to fight a battel upon Neverthele's, he fate down close by Hamii open Champain ground: wherein he was balswho, as an unbidden guest, gave him but victorious. It was not uncommendable in a rude welcome and entertainment. The Livie, to speak the best of his own Citi-Carthaginian Horse, and light armature, fell zens; and, where they did ill, to say, That. upon the Reman Vant-courrers; and put without their own great folly, they had the whole Army in tumult, whilest it was done passing well. Further also he may be vet in march: but they were beaten off, not excused; as writing only by report. For without los, for that the Roman had among thus he laith, Hannibal de finga in Gallan their Velites, fome troops weightily armed, [dicitur] agitasse; Hannibal is said to have whereas the Carthaginians had none. The bethought himself of stying into Gaul: where day following, Amilius, who could not hand he makes it no more than a matter of hearfomely withdraw the Army out of that le-fomely withdraw the Army out of that le-vel ground, incamped upon the River Aufilation. As for the process it self, it is very dus; fending a third part of his forces over incredible. For if Hannibal, coming out of the water, to lie upon the Eastern bank, Gaul, thorow the Marishes and Bogs of Hetruwhere they entrenched themselves. He ne ria, could find victuals enough, and all things ver was more unwilling to fight than at this needfull unto his Army, the Summer forepresent; because the ground served wholly going: what should hinder him to do the for the advantage of his enemy; with whom like this year; especially since he had plaid he meant to deal, when occasion should the carefull Husband in making a great hardraw him to more equal terms. Therefore veft; fince he had long been Master of the he stirred not out of his Trenches, but for- open field; and besides, had gotten, by surtified himself, expecting when Hannibal prise, no small part of the Romans provishould dislodge, and remove towards Ge- sions? Sutable hereunto is all the rest. If ryon, Canne, or some other place, where his Hannibal had taken nothing but Corn and store lay, for want of necellaries: whereof Cattel, his Souldiers might perhaps have an Army forraging the Countrey, was not fallen into mutiny for pay. But he brought likely to carry about with it sufficient quan- gold with him into Italy: and had so well tity, for any long time.

The fifth Book of the first Part

filence, That Livie differeth much in his Re- Souldiers, all Roman-like, and loaded his lation from Polybim; telling many strange followers with spoil: having left where-tales, of the misery into which Hannibal with to redeem as many of his own, as were had been driven; and of base courses that taken by the enemy; when the Romans he devised to take, if the Romans could have were not willing, as finding it not easie to do retained their patience a little longer. He the like. In this point therefore, we are to had (faith Livie) but ten dayes provision of attend the general agreement of Historians; meat. He had not money to pay his fouldiers. who give it as a principal commendation They were an unruly Rabble, gathered out unto Hannibal, That he alwayes kept his of several Nations, so that he knew not how Army free from sedition, though it were to keep them in order; but that from mur- composed of sundry Nations, no less different muring, they fell to flat exclamations, first, in Manners, Religion, and almost in Naabout their Pay, and Provant, and after-ture, than they were in languages: and well wards for very tamine. Especially the spa- might he so do, having not only pronounmiards were ready to forfake him, and run ced, That which of his men foever fought over to the Romans fide. Yea Hannibal him | bravely with an enemy, was thereby a Carfelf was once upon the point, to have stoln thaginian; but solemnly protested and swore, away into Gaul with all his horse, and left his (besides other rewards) to make as many foot unto their miserable destinies. At length of them as should deserve and seek it, free Cifor lack of all other counsel, he resolved to tizens of Carthage. The running away into get him as far as he could from the Romans, Ganl, was a senseless device. Hannibal be-increased his stock, since he came into that Here it would not be passed over with Country, that he had armed his African into the Southermost parts of Applia; to the ing there with his whole Army, took so rage, as promised assured victory. When hold. ginian, to the intent, that either Hannibal rible many. As horrible a many as they are little pleafure in the Country and People, might be compelled to leave behind him that he made all haste to get him out of it. some answerable number, for defence of his And what should he now do there with his Trenches ( which out of his paucity he was horle? or could be be trufted, either there, less able to space from the battel, than or ellewhere? yea, how could be defire to were the Romans ) or that these ten thoulive, having betrayed all his Army, and re- fand, falling upon the Carthaeinian Camp. linguished his miserable foot to the butche- when the fight began, and taking it with ry of their enemies? This tale therefore Plu- all the wealth therein, might thereby (as truck omitteth, who in writing the life of commonly do such accidents ) terrific and Hannibal, takes in a manner all his directions diffract the enemies in the heat of fight. This from Livie. But of this and the like it is done, the two Confuls went over the water enough to fay. That all Historians love to with their Army to theleffer Camp, whence extoll their own Country-men; and where a also they drew forth their men, and ranloss cannot be differabled, nor the honour of ged them in order of battel: the ground the victory taken from the enemy, and given on the East part of the River, seeming perunto blindFortune there to lay all the blame haps more fit for marshalling of their Army. on some strange mis-government of their Hannibal was glad of this, as he had great own forces: as if they might easily have cause, and without any delay, passed likewonall, but loft all through such folly, as wife over, fomewhat higher up the stream, no Enemy can hope to find in them another which ran from the South-leaving in his own Camp so many, as he thought would serve Now let us return back to the two Ar- to defend it, and no more. To encourage mies. where they lye incamped on the his men; he bade them look about them. River Aufidus. Varro was perswaded, that and view the ground well, upon which they it concerned him in honour to make good were to fight. They did fo. And could you his word unto the people of Rome: and (faid he) pray for any greater fortune, fince he had thus long waited in vain than to joyn battel with the Romans upon to get the confent of Paulso, now at length such a level ground, where the stronger in to use his own authority; and, without horse are sure to prevail? They all asany more disputing of the matter, to fight sented to him; and shewed by their countewhen his own day came. When therefore nances, that they were very glad of it. Well it was his turn to command; at the first then (said he further) yeare first of all to break of the day he began to pass the thank the gods, that have brought them River, without staying to bid his Col- hither; and then Us that have trained them league good morrow. But Paulus came to along, and drawn them into necessity of him, and fought, as in former times, to playing for their lives, where they are fure to have diffwaded him from putting the lose them. As for these Romans, I was fain estate of his Country to a needless hazard, to encourage you against them, when Against those words and substantial argu- ye met them first : but now ye may even ments, Terentius could alledge none other encourage your felves, by calling to mind than point of Honour. Hannibal had pre- that they are the men, whom ye have as fented them battel at their Trenches: should often beaten as seen. Of one thing only they endure this Brayado? He had fent I will put you in mind: That whereas hihis Numidians over the River but even the therto you fought for other respects, as to day before, who fell upon the Romans that drive them before you out of Gaul; and to were fetching water to the leffer Camp; win the open Country, and fields of Italy; and drave them shamefully to run within both of which we have obtained: now are their defences; which also they made offer ve to fight for the Towns themselves, and to affail: Must this also be suffered? He all the riches within them; which this viwould not endure it: for it could not but dory shall make yours. Therefore play the weaken the spirit of the Roman Souldier; Stout Souldiers: and ere many hours pass, which as yet was lively, and full of fuch cou- ye shall be Lords of all that the Romans

Emilius perceived that he could not hinder When he had faid this; his Brother Mago the obstinate resolution of his Companion, came to him, whom he had sent to view the he took all care, that what he faw must be countenance of the enemy. Hannibal asked done, might be done well. Ten thousand him, what news; and what work they were Roman foot he caused to be left behind, in likely to have with these Romans? Work the greater Camp opposite unto the Cartha- enough (answered Mago) for they are anhorthe ground was somewhat uneven. Thither | end , that both his unfaithfull Souldiers if the Carthaginians would take pains to might find the more difficulty in running come, he doubted not to fend them away from him; and that his hunger might be in such hafte, as they should not leave run-relieved with the more early harvest. But ning till they were out o. Haly. But they whilest he was about to put this device inexcame not. Terentins therefore the next day ecution, the Romans prefled him to hard. descended into the Plains; his Colleague that they even forced him to that, which he holding him, and befeeching him to stay, most defired, even to fight a battel upon Nevertheless, he sate down close by Hanni- open Champain ground: wherein he was balswho, as an unbidden guest, gave him but victorious. It was not uncommendablein a rude welcome and entertainment. The Livie, to speak the best of his own Citi-Carthaginian Horse, and light armature, fell zens 3 and, where they did ill, to say, That. noon the Roman Vant-courrers; and put without their own great folly, they had the whole Army in tumult, whileft it was done paffing well. Further also he may be vet in march: but they were beaten off, not excused; as writing only by report. For without los, for that the Romans had among thus he faith, Hannibal de fuga in Galliam their Velites, fome troops weightily armed, [dicitur] agitssses; Hannibal is said to have whereas the Carthaginians had none. The bethought himself of stying into Gaul: where day following. **milius*, who could not hand- he makes it no more than a matter of hearfomely withdraw the Army out of that le- fay; as perhaps was all the rest of this Revel ground, incamped upon the River Aufi- lation. As for the process it self, it is very dus; fending a third part of his forces over incredible. For if Hannibal, coming out of the water, to lie upon the Eastern bank, Gaul, thorow the Marishes and Bogs of Hetruwhere they entrenched themselves. He ne- ria, could find victuals enough, and all things ver was more unwilling to fight than at this needfull unto his Army, the Summer forepresent; because the ground served wholly going: what should hinder him to do the for the advantage of his enemy; with whom like this year; especially since he had plaid he meant to deal, when occasion should the carefull Husband in making a great hardraw him to more equal terms. Therefore vest; since he had long been Master of the he stirred not out of his Trenches, but for- open field; and besides, had gotten, by surtified himself, expecting when Hannibal prife, no small part of the Romans provishould dislodge, and remove towards Ge- sions? Sutable hereunto is all the rest. If ryon, Canna, or some other place, where his Hannibal had taken nothing but Corn and store lay, for want of necessaries: whereof Cattel, his Souldiers might perhaps have an Army forraging the Countrey, was not fallen into mutiny for pay. But he brought likely to carry about with it sufficient quan- gold with him into Italy: and had so well tity, for any long time.

silence, That Livie differeth much in his Re- Souldiers, all Roman-like, and loaded his lation from Polybius; telling many strange followers with spoil: having left wheretales, of the misery into which Hannibal with to redeem as many of his own, as were had been driven; and of base courses that taken by the enemy; when the Romans he devised to take, if the Romans could have were not willing, as finding it not easie to do retained their patience a little longer. He the like. In this point therefore, we are to had (faith Livie) but ten dayes provision of attend the general agreement of Historians; meat. He had not money to pay his fouldiers. who give it as a principal commendation They were an unruly Rabble, gathered out unto Hannibal, That he alwayes kept his of feveral Nations, to that he knew not how Army free from fedition, though it were to keep them in order; but that from mur-composed of sundry Nations, no less different muring, they fell to flat exclamations, first, in Manners, Religion, and almost in Naabout their Pay, and Provant, and after-ture, than they were in languages: and well wards for very famine. Especially the spa- might he so do, having not only pronounniards were ready to forfake him, and run ced, That which of his men soever fought over to the Romans lide. Yea Hannibal him | bravely with an enemy, was thereby a Carfelf was once upon the point, to have stoln thaginian; but solemnly protested and swore, away into Gaul with all his horse, and left his (besides other rewards) to make as many foot unto their miserable destinies. At length of them as should deserve and seek it, free Cifor lack of all other counsel, he resolved to tizens of Carthage. The running away into get him as far as he could from the Romans, Ganl, was a senseless device. Hannibal beinto the Southermost parts of Apulia; to the ing there with his whole Army, took so

increased his stock, since he came into that Here it would not be passed over with Country, that he had armed his African

rage, as promised assured victory. When hold. Emilius perceived that he could not hinder ginian, to the intent, that either Hannibal rible many. As horrible a many as they are little pleasure in the Country and People, might be compelled to leave behind him that he made all hafte to get him out of it. fome answerable number, for defence of his And what should he now do there with his Trenches ( which out of his paucity he was horie? or could he be trufted, either there, less able to spare from the battel, than or elsewhere? yea, how could he desire to were the Romans ) or that these ten thoulive, having betrayed all his Army, and re- fand, falling upon the Carthaginian Camp, linguished his miserable foot to the butche- when the fight began, and taking it with ry of their enemies? This tale therefore Plu- all the wealth therein, might thereby (as turch omitteth, who in writing the life of commonly do fuch accidents ) terrifie and Hunnibal, takes in a manner all his directions distract the enemies in the heat of fight. This from Livie. But of this and the like it is done, the two Confuls went over the water enough to fay, That all Historians love to with their Army to the leffer Camp, whence extoll their own Country-men; and where a also they drew forth their men, and ranloss cannot be dissembled, nor the honour of ged them in order of battel: the ground the victory taken from the enemy, and given on the East part of the River, seeming perunto blind Fortune, there to lay all the blame haps more fit for marshalling of their Army. on some strange mis-government of their Hannibal was glad of this, as he had great uwn forces: as if they might easily have cause; and without any delay, passed likewonall, but loft all through such folly, as wife over, fomewhat higher up the stream, no Enemy can hope to find in them another which ran from the South; leaving in his own Camp so many, as he thought would serve Now let us return back to the two Ar- to defend it, and no more. To encourage mies, where they lye incamped on the his men; he bade them look about them, River Aufidus. Varro was perswaded, that and view the ground well, upon which they it concerned him in honour to make good were to fight. They did fo. And could you his word unto the people of Rome: and (faid he) pray for any greater fortune, fince he had thus long waited in vain than to joyn battel with the Romans upon to get the confent of Paulus, now at length fuch a level ground, where the stronger in to life his own authority; and, without horse are sure to prevail? They all afany more disputing of the matter, to fight sented to him; and shewed by their countewhen his own day came. When therefore nances, that they were very glad of it. Well it was his turn to command; at the first then (faid he further) yeare first of all to break of the day he began to pass the thank the gods, that have brought them River, without staying to bid his Col- hither; and then Us, that have trained them league good morrow. But Paulus came to along, and drawn them into necessity of him, and fought, as in former times, to playing for their lives, where they are fureto have diffwaded him from putting the lose them. As for these Romans, I was fain estate of his Country to a needless hazard, to encourage you against them, when Against those words and substantial argu- ye met them first: but now ye may even ments, Terentius could alledge none other encourage your felves, by calling to mind than point of Honour. Hannibal had pre- that they are the men, whom ye have as fented them battel at their Trenches: should often beaten as seen. Of one thing only they endure this Bravado? He had fent I will put you in mind: That whereas hihis Numidians over the River but even the therto you fought for other respects, as to day before, who fell upon the Romans that drive them before you out of Gaul; and to were fetching water to the leffer Camp; win the open Country, and fields of Italy; and drave them shamefully to run within both of which ye have obtained: now are their defences, which also they made offer ve to fight for the Towns themselves, and to affail: Must this also be suffered? He all the riches within them; which this viwould not endure it: for it could not but Gory shall make yours. Therefore play the weaken the spirit of the Roman Souldier; stout Souldiers: and ere many hours pass, which as yet was lively, and full of fuch cou- ye shall be Lords of all that the Romans

When he had faid this; his Brother Mago the obstinate resolution of his Companion, came to him, whom he had sent to view the he took all care, that what he faw must be countenance of the enemy. Hannibal asked done, might be done well. Ten thousand him, what news; and what work they were Roman foot he caused to be left behind, in likely to have with these Romans? Work the greater Camp opposite unto the Cartha- enough (answered Mago) for they are anhor-

CHAP. III.

(thus Hannibal replied) I tell thee, Brother, miards, armed each after their own Counthat among them all, fearch them never fo try manner; their shields alike; but the diligencity, thou shalt not find one man, Gauls using long broad swords, that were whose name is Mago. With that he fell a forcible in a down-right stroak; the spalaughing, and fo did all that flood about miards, flort and well pointed blades, either him; which gladded the fouldiers, who to strike or thrust; the Gauls, naked from thought their General would not be so mer- their navel upwards, as confident in their rv. without great assurance. Whether it own fierceneis: the Spaniards, wearing were fo, that Hannibal, in the pride of his white Cassocks embroidered with Purple, victories already gotten, valued one Mago This medley of two Nations, differing as above many thouland Romans; or whether well in habit and furniture, as in quality, he intimated, that the Romans were no less made a gallant shew, and terrible, because troubled with thinking upon Mago and his strange. The Gauls were strong of body and Companions, than was Mago with beholding furious in giving charge, but foon wearied. ther with a jest, and shew himself merry un- of them have inherited to this day. The Spato the Souldiers: this his answer was more niards were less eager, but more wary ; neimanly, than was the relation of his discove-ther ashamed to give ground, when they rer. But if Hannibal himself had been sent were over-pressed; nor afraid to return and forth by Mago, to view the Romans, he could renew the fight, upon any small encouragebut vain boafts.

874

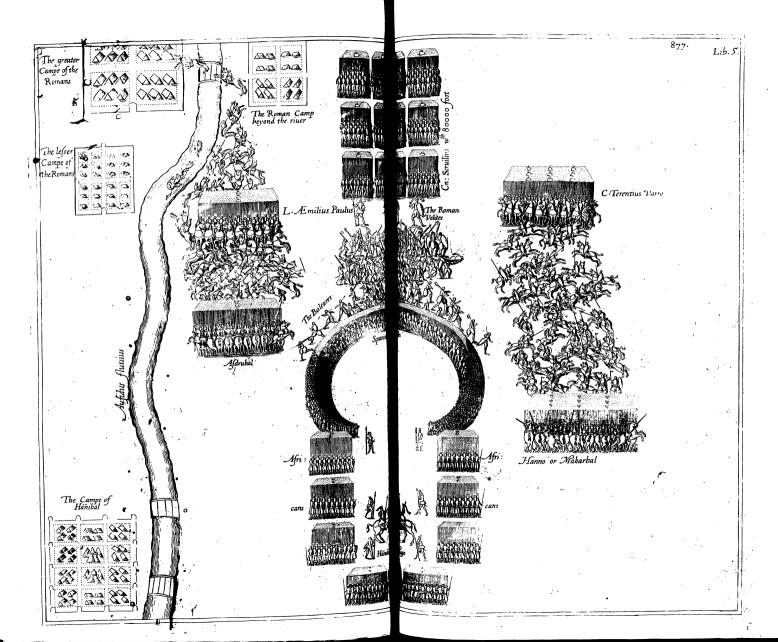

his military skill, than was greatness in his far upon them, without further ingaging spirit and undertakings. For to omit the himself than discretion would allow. Herehad long before conceived the means to which the Carthaginian had in horse; by draw his enemies to battel; he marshalled which he was able, if the worst had happed, hands were brought to fight, where every ries is many timesalike. Desperation begetone might do his best service. His Darters, teth courage; but no greater, nor so lively, where; and well trained in the use of those and thin, as serving only to guide it orderly back, when need should require; the fore those wherewith they had formerly served; made the two wings very deep in File. Between these he ranged his Gants and Spatickued against all impression. The circle their huge multitude; or whether he meant as accustomed to spend their violence at the only to correct the sad mood of his Bro-first brunt, which disposition all that come not have returned with a more gallant rement. As the roughness of the one, and paport in his mouth, than that which Captain tience of the other, ferved mutually to re-Gum, before the battel of Agincourt, made duce each of them to a good and firm temunto our King Henry the fifth: faying, That per; so the place which they held in this of the Frenchmen, there were enow to be kil- battel, added confidence joyntly unto them led; enow tobe taken prisoners; and enow both. For they saw themselves well and to run away. Even such words as these, or strongly flanked with Carthaginians and fuch pleasant jests as this of Hannibal, are not other Africans; whose name was grown terwithout their moment; but ferve many rible in Spain, by their Conquests, and in times, when battel is in hand, to work up- Gaul, by this their present war. Since thereon such passions, as must govern more of the fore it could not be feared, that any great business: especially, where other needful calamity should fall upon them, whilst the care is not wanting; without which they are wings on either fide stood fast: these Barbarians had no cause to shrink, or forbear to In this great day, the Carthaginian excel- imploy the uttermost of their hardines, as led himself, expressing no less perfection of knowing that the enemy could not press commodiousness of the place, into which he unto may be added that great advantage, his Army in such convenient order, that all to make a good retrait. The effect of contraand Slingers of the Balcares, he seut off be- as doth assured Confidence. Hannibal therefore him, to encounter with the Roman Ve- fore caused the Gauls and Spaniards to adliter. These were loose troops, answerable vance, leaving void the place wherein they in a manner to those, which we call now by had stood, and into which they might fall a French name, Enfans Perdues; but when back, when they should be over-hardly prefwe use our own terms, the forlorn-hope. The gross of his Army following them, he ordered thus. His Africant, armed after the Roman manner, with the spoils which they had gotten at Trebia, Thrasjmene, or else- from which he had drawn it, being narrow where; and well trained in the use of those and thin, as serving only to guide it orderly hereof feemeth to have been fo great, that it their faces Northward, the Romans toward shadowed the Africans, who stood behind the South. it; though such figures, cut in brass, as I have After some light skirmish, between the

feen of this Battle, present it more narrow; Roman Velites, and Hannibal his Darters and with little reason, as shall anon appear: as Slingers of the Baleares; Astarubal brake upalso in the same figures it is omitted. That on the Consul Paulus, and was roughly enany Companies of Africans, or others, were countred: not after the manner of fervice left in the Rear, to second the Gauls and on horse-back, used in those times, wheeling Spaniards when they were driven to retrait; about Alman like; but each giving on in a though it be manifest, that Hannibal in per-right line. Pouldron to Pouldron, as having fon flood between the last ranks of his long the River on the one hand, and the shoulder Battalions, and in the head of his Rear, of the foot on the other hand; fo that there doubtless well accompanied with the choice was no way left but to pierce and break of his own Nation. Between the left Batta- thorow. Wherefore they not only used their lion and the River Aufidus, were the Gauls Lances and Swords; but rushing violently and Spanish horse, under the command of amongst the Enemies, grasped one another; Aldrubal: On the right wing, toward the and so their horses running from under them, wide Plains, was Hanno (Livie faith Mahar- fell many to the ground; where starting up bal) with the Numidian light-horse. Hanni- again, they began to deal blows like footbal himself, with his brother Mago, and the men. In conclusion, the Roman horse were leading of the Rear. The whole fumm of over-born, and driven by plain force to a Hannibals Army in the field this day, was staggering recoil. This the Consul Paulus ten thousand horse, and forty thousand foot, could not remedy. For Asdrubal, with his his enemies having two to one against him in boisterous Gauls and Spaniards, were not to foot; and He, five to three against them in be resisted by these Roman Gentlemen . unequal both in number, and in horfmanthip. The Roman Army was marshalled in the When the battels came to joyning, the Rousual form: but somewhat more narrow, man Legionaries found work enough, and and deep than was accustomed; perhaps, somewhat more than enough, to break that because this had been found convenient great Crescent, upon which they first fell: against the Carthaginians, in the former war. To strongly for the while, did the Gauls and It was indeed no bad way of refiftance spanish foot make refiftance. Wherefore against Elephants, to make the Ranks thick the two points of their battel drew towards and floors, but the Files long; as also to streng the midst; by whose aid, these opposites then well the Rear, that it might stand fast were forced to disband, and sly back to compacted as a wall, under shelter whereof their first place. This they did in great the disordered troops might re-ally them- haste and fear: and were with no less haste. felves. Thus much it feems, that Terentius and folly pursued. Upon the Africans that had learned of some old Souldiers; and stood behind them, they needed not to fall therefore he now ordered his Battels accor- foul; both for that there was void room dingly, as meaning to shew more skill, than enough; and forasmuch as the Rear, or was in his understanding. But the Carthagi- Horns of this Moon, pointed into the safe nians had here no Elephants with them in retrait, where Hannibal with his Carthagithe field: their advantage was in Horse; nians was ready to re-enforce them, when against which this manner of imbattailing time should require. In this hasty retrait, was very unprofitable, forasmuch as their or flight of the Gauls and Spaniards, it hapcharge is better sustained in front, than upon ned, as was necessary, that they who had a long flank. As for Emilius, it was not his stood in the limb or utter compass of the half day of command: He was but an Affistant; Moon, made the innermost or concave surand in such cases it happens often, that wise face thereof disordered and broken though men yield for very weariness unto the more it were ) when it was forced to turn the incontentious. Upon the right hand, and to- side outward: the horns or points thereof, ward the River, were the Roman horsemen, as yet, untouched, only turning round, and under the Conful Paulus: On the left wing, recoyling very little. So the Romans, in purwas C. Terentius Varro the other Conful, with fuing them, were inclosed in an half circle; the rest of the horse, which were of the La- which they should not have needed greatly tines, and other affociates: Cn. Servilius the to regard, ( for that the fides of it were former years Conful, had the leading of the exceeding thin and broken; and the bat-battel. The Sun was newly rifen, and offend-tom of it, none other than a throng of men ed neither part; the Carthaginians having routed, and feeming unable to make refifrance) had all the enemies foot been cast | company alighted, thinking that the Conful into this on great body, that was in a man- had given order fo to do : as in many barner dissolved. But whitest the Legions, fol- tels, the Roman men at arms had left their lowing their supposed victory, rushed on horses, to help their foot in distress. When upon those that stood before them, and Hannibal (for he was near at hand) perceivthereby unwittingly engaged themselves ed this, and understood that the Consulhad deeply within the principal itrength of the willed his horse-men to dismount; He was Enemies, hedging them in on both hands; very glad of it, and pleasantly said, I hadrathe two African Battalions on either fide ad ther he would have delivered them nuto me, vanced to far, that getting beyond the Rear bound hand and foot: meaning that he had of them, they enclosed them, in a manner, them now almost as safe, as if they were so behind : and forward they could not pass bound. All this while C. Terentius Varro, with far, without removing Hannibal and Mago; the horse of his associates, in the left wing, which made that way the least easie. Hereby was marvelously troubled by Hanno (or Mait is apparent. That the great Crescent, before harbal) and the Numidians: who beating spoken of, was of such extent, ascovered the up and down about that great sandy Plain, Africans, who lay behind it undiscerned, un- raised a foul dust; which a strong South till now. For it is agreed, that the Romans wind, blowing there accustomarily, drave were thus empaled manyares; and that they into the eyes and mouths of the Roman, behaved themselves, as men that thought These using their advantage both of number upon no other work, than what was found and of lightness, wearied the Consul and his them by the Gauls. Neither is it credible, followers exceedingly: neither giving, nor that they would have been fo mad, as to fulfaining any charge, but continually run head-long, with the whole bulk of their making offers, and wheeling about Yet at Army, into the throat of flaughter; had the first they seemed to promise him an hapthey feen those weapons bent against them py day of it. For when the battails were at the first, which when they did see, they even ready to joyn; five hundred of these had little hope to escape. Much might be Numidians came pricking away from their imputed to their heat of fight, and rashness fellows, with their shields cast behind their of inferiour Captains: but fince the Con- backs, (as was the manner of those which ful Paulus, a man so expert in war, being yielded) and throwing down their arms. vanquished in horse, had put himself among rendred themselves. This was good luck to the Legions; it cannot be supposed, that begin withall, if there had been good meanhe and they did wilfully thus engage them- ing. Varro had not leifure to examine them; felves. Afdrubal, having broken the but caused them, unweaponed as they were, troops of Roman horse, that were led by to get them behind the Army, where he the Conful Paulus, followed upon them bade them rest quietly till all was done. along the River fide, beating down and These crafty adventurers did as he bade killing, as many as he could, (which were them, for a while; till they found opporalmost all of them) without regard of take- tunity to put in execution the purpose, for ing prisoners. The Conful himself was ei- which they had thus yielded. Under their ther driven upon his own Legions, or wil- Jackets they had short swords and poniards; lingly did cast himself among them; as besides which, they found other scattered hoping by them to make good the day, not- weapons about the field of such as were slain, withstanding the defeat of his horse. But he and therewithal flew upon the hindmost of failed of this his expectation. Nevertheless the Romans, whilest all eyes and thoughts he cheared up his men as well as he could, were bent another way : fo that they did both with comfortable words, and with great mischief, and raised yet a greater terthe example of his own frout behaviour: rour. Thus Hannibal, in a plain level ground, beating down and killing many of the found means to lay an ambush at the back of enemies with his own hand. The like did his enemies. The last blow, that ended all Hannibal among his Carthaginians, in the fight and refistance, was given by the same fame part of the battle; and with better fue- hand which gave the first. Afdrubal (having cess. For the Consul received a blow from | n short space broken the Roman troups of a fling, that did him great hurt: and though norse, and cut in pieces all, save the Coma troup of Roman Gentlemen, riding about pany of Emilius that rushed into the gross of him, did their best to save him from further his foot, and a very few besides, that recoverharm; yet was he so hardly laid at, that ed some narrow passage, between the River he was compelled, by wounds and weak- and their own Battalions) did not stay to ness, to forsake his horse. Hereupon all his charge upon the face of the Legions, but fell back behind the Rear of his own, and that be lived and died mindful of his whole-

and another, to incounter him. But of this, by which he might have withdrawn him-or of ought elfe, excepting hasty flight, his felf; was now (had he never so well been troops, followed the light Numidians, appointed by Asarbal unto the pursuit, as fit-apace in that great Carnage. It suffices hundred unto the pursuit, as fittelf for that tervice. Afdrubal himfelf, with to his honour, That in the Battel he lought the Gauls and Spanish horse, compassing about, fell upon the backs of the Romans; both abstained himself, and distinguished his that were ere this hardly distressed, and in sellow-Consul, from fighting at all It, when a manner surrounded on all parts else : He theday was utterly lost, it had lien in his brake them eafily; who before made ill re- power to fave his own life unto the good of filtance, being inclosed, and laid at on every his Country, never more needing it; I should multitude thronging up and down, they weary of the World, and his unthankfull knew not whither or which way, whilest Citizens. But if such a resolution were every one fought to avoid those enemies, praise worthy in Amilius, as proceeding up to horse, and saved themselves: which Life, son to that famous Earl of Shrewsbury, though it is hardly understood how they was died in the Battel of Chaftilion, more could do; yet I will rather believe it, than highly to be honoured. For Amilia was suppose that Livie so reporteth, to grace old, grievously, if not mortally wounded, thereby his History with this following tale. and accomptable for the overthrow receiv-Cn. Cornelius Lentulus, galloping along by a ed: Talbot was in the flowre of his youth, place where he saw the Consul sitting all bloddi-unburt, easily able to have escaped, and not ed upon a stone, intreated him to rise and save answerable for that dayes misfortune, when himself; offering him his assistance and borse. he refused to forsake his Father; who rore-But Paulus refused it; willing Lentulus to seeing the loss of the battel, and not meaning bift for himself, and not to lose time : faying, to stain his actions past by flying in his old That it was not his purpose to be brought again age, exhorted this his noble son to be gone into judgement by the People, either as an ac- and leave him. the of his Colleague, or as guilty himself of In this terrible overthrow died all the Rothat dayer loss. Further, he willed Lentulus man foot, save two or three thousand, who to commend him to the Senate, and in particu- (as Livie faith) escaped into the letter Camp; lar to Fabius : willing them to fortifie Rome, whence the same night, about six hundred of fast as well they could; and telling Fabius, of them brake forth, and joyning with such fetching about, came up to the Numidians: Some counsel. These words (peradventure) with whom he joyned, and gave upon Te- or some to like purpose, the Consuluttered to Lentulus, either when against his will he This fearful Cloud, as it shewed at the was drawn to that battel, or when he befirst appearance what weather it had lest held the first defeat of his horse; at what behind it, on the other fide: fo did it prog- time he put himself in the head of his Leginosticate a dismal storm unto those upon ons. For I doubt not, but Hannibal knew whom it was ready now to fall. Wherefore what he faid a good while before this; Terentius his followers, having wearied when he thought the Conful and his troup, themselves much in doing little, and seeing in little better case than if they had been more work toward, than they could hope bound. The whole Gross of the Romans, was to fustain; thought it the best way, to avoid inclosed indeed as within a fack; whereof the danger by present slight. The Conful the African Battaltons made the sides; the was no less wife than they, in apprehending Spaniards, Gauls, and Hannibal with his Carthe greatness of his own peril; nor more thaginians, the bottom; and Asdrubal with desperate, in striving to work impossibili- his horse, closed up the mouth : in which ties: it being impolible, when to many part, they first of all were shuffled together. thrank from him, to sustain the impression and began the Rout, wherein all the rest alone, which he could not have indured collowed. Amilius therefore, who could with their affiftance. Now he found that not fit his horfe, whileft the battel yet lafted. it was one thing to talk of Hannibal at Rome; and whileft the spaces were somewhat open, present leifure would not serve him to con- mounted) unable to fly, having in his way fider. Close at the heels of him and his flying so close a throng of his own miterable folside, not knowing which way to turn. Here think, that he either too much disesteemed began a pittiful flaughter: the vanquished himself; or being too faintly minded, was whom he faw nearest. Some of the Roman out of Roman valour; then was the English Gentlemen that were about Amilius, got vertue of the Lord John Talbot, Viscount of those in the greater Camp, as were willing | Consuls : among whom was Cn. Servilius. to try their fortune, conveyed themselves the last years Consul, and Minutius, late away ere morning, about four thousand foot, Master of the horse. The number of prisoand two hundred horse, partly in whole ners, taken in this battel, Livie makes no troops, partly dispersed into Cannusum: the greater than three thousand foot, and three next day the Koman Camps, both less and hundred horse: too few to have defended greater, were yielded unto Hannibal by those for the space of one half hour, both the Rathat remained in them. Polybius hath no man Camps, which yet the fame Livie faith, mention of this escape : only he reports, that to have been over-cowardly yielded up. We the ten thousand, whom Amilius had left on may therefore do better, to give credit unto the West side of Ausidus (as was shewed be- one of the prisoners, whom she same Histofore) to fet upon the Camp of Hannibal, did rian shortly after introduceth speaking in as they were appointed; but ere they could the Senate, and faying, That they were no effect their defire, which they had well near less than eight thousand. It may therefore be, done, the battel was loft : and Hamibal, that these three thousand were only such as coming over the water to them, drave them the Enemy spared, when the fury of Execuinto their own Camp; which they quickly tion was palt : but to these must be added vielded, having loft two thousand of their about five thousand more, who yielded in number. Like enough it is, that at the first the greater Camp, when their company were fight of Hannibal, coming upon them with either flain or fled. So the reckoning falls his victorious Army, a greater number of out right : which the Romans, especially the these did flye, and thereby escaped, whilest Consul Varro, had before cast up (as we say) their fellows, making defence in vain, re- without their Hoft; nothing to chargeable. tired into their Camp, and held the enemy as now they find it. On the fide of Hannibal butied. For about two Legions they were there died fome four thousand Gauls, fif-( perhaps not half full, but made up by ad- teen hundred spaniards and Africans, and dition of others, whose fault or fortune was two hundred Horte, or thereabouts : a like ) that having ferved at Canne, were af- lofs not fenfible, in the joy of fo great a viterwards extremely difgraced by the State Ctory; which is he had purfued, as Maharbal of Rome, for that they had abandoned their advised him, and forthwith marched away companions fighting. Of the Roman horse towards Rome : it is little doubted, but that what numbers escaped, it is uncertain: but the war had presently been at an end. But he very few they were that faved themselves in believed not so far in his own prosperity; the first charge, by getting behind the River; and was therefore told, That he knew how to and Terentius the Conful recovered Venufia, get, not how to use a victory. with threefcore and ten at the most in his company. That he was to ill attended, it is no marvel : for l'enusia lay many miles off to the Southward; fo that his nearest way thither, had been thorow the midst of Hannibals Army, if the pallage had been open. NOT without good cause doth Poly-Therefore it must needs be, that when once biss reprehend those two Historians, he got out of fight, he turned up fome by Fahius the Roman, and Philinus the Carthagiway; so disappointing the Numidians that nian; who, regarding more the pleasure hunted contre. Of fuch as could not hold of them unto whose honour they consepace with the Conful, but took other wayes, crated their travels, than the truth of and were scattered over the fields; two things, and information of posterity, magnithousand, or thereabout, were gathered up fied indifferently, whether good or bad, all by the Numidiuns, and made prisoners : the actions and proceedings, the one of his Carrest were slain, all save three hundred, who thaginians, the other of his Roman Quirites, dispersed themselves in slight, as chance led and Fathers conscript. No man of sound them, and got into fundry Towns. There judgement will condemn this liberty of cendied in this great Battel of Canna, besides fure, which Polybins hath wied For to recom-L. Emilius Paulus the Conful, two of the pence his juniority (fuch as it was) he pro-Roman Quæstors or Treasurers, and one and Juceth substantial arguments, to justifie his twenty Colonels or Tribunes of the Soul- own Relation; and confuteth the vanity of diers, our core Senators, or fuch as had born whose former Authors, out of their own office, out or which they were to be chosen writings, by conference of places ill coherinto the Senare. Many of these were of spering: which pains is to be suspected, that he

ø. IX.

Of things following the Battel at Canna.

cial mark, as having been Ædiler, Pixtors or would not have taken, had he been born in

ed to have all men think better and more which the Romans themselves, who could not honourably than he deserved, of his own hinder him from spoiling the Country, espe-Countrey. The like disease it is to be feared, cially the poorer fort of them, did hardly inthat we shall hereafter find in others; and dure; but in a loving respect unto that great shall have some cause to wish, that either courtesse (as it seemed) which he used unto they were somewhat less Roman, or else, that such of them as became h s prisoners. For as fome works of their opposite Writers were at other times, so now after this great victoextant, that fo we might at least hear both ry at Canne, he had lovingly dismitted as fides speak : being henceforth destitute of many of the Italian Confederates of Rome, Polybins his help, that was a man indifferent. as fell into his hands; rebuiling them gently But fince this cannot be, we must be some- for being so obstinate against him that had times bold, to observe the coherence of lought to deliver them from bondage. Noithings; and believe fo much only to be true, ther spared he to win their love by gitts. as dependethupon good reason, or (at least) pretending to admire their valour; but ieckfair probability. This attentive circumfpe- ing indeed, by all wayes and means, tomake ction is needful at the present: such is the them his, whilest all other motives were conrepugnancy, or forgetfulness, which we current. At this time also he began to deal find in the best narration of things following kindly (though against his nature) with the the Battel of Canna. For it is faid, that four Roman prisoners; telling them that he bore thousand foot and horse gathered toge- no mortal hatred unto their Estate; but bether about the Conful Terentius at Venusia; ing provoked by injuries, sought to right that others to the number of ten thousand himself and his Country; and fought with got into Cannusium, chusing for their Cap- them, to try which of these two Cities, Rome tains, young P. Scipio, and Ap. Claudius; yet or Carthage should bear soveraign Rule, not that the Conful Terentius Varro, joyning his which of them should be dellarged. So he company unto those of Scipio at Cannussum, gave them leave to chuse ten of their numwrote unto the Senate, that he had now ber, that should be fent home to treat with well near tenthousand men about him; that the Fathers about their ran ome: and togethese letters of the Consul were brought to ther with these he sent Carthalo a Nobie-Rome, when the Senate was newly rifen, man of Carthage, and General of all Horie, to that had been taking order for pacifying feel the disposition of the Senate, who her it those tumults in the City, which grew upon were bowed as yet by so much advertity, the first bruit of the overthrow; and yet, and could stoop unto desire of peace. But that Embassadours from Capua (after some with the Romans these Arts prevailed not, consultation, whether it were meet to send as shall be shewed in due place. The people any, or without further circumstance, to fide of Italy, all, or most of them, save the Rowith Hannibal) were fent unto Terentius, man Colonies, or the Latines, were not only and found him at Venulia, a pretty while be- weary of their losses past, but entertained fore he wrote thoseletters, which overtook a deceivable hope, of changing their old (in a manner ) at Rome the first news of the Society for a better. Wherefore not only overthrow. Among such incoherences, I the Samnites, Lucans, Brutians, and Apulihold it the best way, to omit so much as ans, ancient enemies of Rome, and not unhath not some particular connexion with till the former Generation utterly subdued, matter ensuing: mutual dependency in began to re-assume their wonted pirits: but things of this nature, being no small argu- the Campans, a Nation of all in Italy most ment of truth.

Camp, and truffed up the spoils, forthwith he ly coajoyned, as were any fave the Latines, dis-lodged, and marched away into Samni- changed on a sudden their love into hatred, m; finding a disposition in the Hirpines, and without any other cause found, than change many other people thereabout, to forfake of fortune. the Roman party, and make alliance with Campania is the most goodly and fruit-cartiage. The first Town that opened the ful Province of Italy, if not (as some then gates unto him, was Cossa, where he laid up thought) of all the Earth: and the City of his baggage: and leaving his Brother Mago Capua, answerable unto the Country, whereto take in other places, he hafted into Camof it was Head; so great, fair, and wealthy, pania. The general affection of the multithat it seemed no less convenient a seat of the tude, in all the Cities of Italy, was inclinable Empire, than was either Rome or Carrhage.

either of these two Cities, but have spared | unto him; not only in regard of their griefome part of his diligence, and been content- vous losses sustained abroad in the fields. bound unto the State of Rome, and by When Hannibal had facked the Roman many mutual affinities therewith as straight-

But of all qualities, Bravery is the least re- | Lady, and given his Daughter in marriage to quisite unto soveraign command. The Cam- a Roman: but, that the danger of forsaking pans were luxurious, idle, and proud: and of the Roman party was not now the greatvaluing themselves like Jayes by their fea- est: for that the people were violently bent thers, despised the unfortunate vertue of the to murder all the Senate, and after to joyn Romans their Patrons and Benefactors. Yet themselves with Hannibal, who should counwere there some of the principal among tenance the fact, and save them harmless. them, as in other Cities, that bore especial This he spake, as a man well known to be regard unto the Majesty of Rome, and could beloved himself by the people, and prive not indure to hear of Innovation. But the unto their deligns. Having throughly terri-Tlebeian faction had lately fo prevailed with- fied the Senate, by laying open the danger in Capua, that all was governed by the plea- hanging over them : He promifed neverthefure of the Multitude; which wholly fol- less to deliver them all, and to set things in lowed the direction of Pacuvius Calavius an quiet, if they would freely put themselves inambitious Noble-man, whose credit grew, to his hands; offering his oath, or any other and was up held by furthering all popular affurance that they thould demand for his desires; whereof, the conjunction with Han- faithful meaning. They all agreed. Then nibal was not the leaft. Some of the Capuans shutting up the Court, and placing a guard had offered their City to the Carthaginians of his own followers about it, that none thortly after the battel of Thrasymene : might enter, nor issue forth, without his whereupon chiefly it was, that Hannibal leave; he called the people to affembly; made his journey into Campania: the Dicta- and speaking as much ill of the Senate, as he tor Fabine waiting upon him. At that time, knew they would be glad to hear, he told either the nearness of the Roman Army, or them, that these wicked Governours were fome other fear of the Capuans, hindred furprifed by his policy, and all fast, ready to them from breaking into actual rebellion labide what fentence they would lay upon They had indeed no leifure to treat about them. Only thus much he advited them, as any article of new Confederacy: or, had a thing which necessity required, That they leifure served, yet were the multitude should chuse a new Senate, before they sa-(whose inconstant love Hannibal had won tissied their anger upon the old. So rehearsfrom the Romans, by gentle usage, and free ingunto them the names of one or two Sedismissing of some prisoners in good account nators; he asked what their judgement was among them) unable to hold any fuch nego- of those. All cryed out, That they were wortiation, without advice of the Senate, which thy of death. Chuse then (faid he) first of mainly impugned it. So they that had pro- all some new ones into their places. Hereat mited to yield up their Town to Hannibal, the multitude, unprovided for fuch an and meet him on the way, with some of their election, was filent, untill at last some one or Nobility that should assure him of all faith-other adventured to name whom he thought ful meaning, were driven to fit still in a great lit. The men so nominated, were utterly perplexity: as having failed to let in this difliked by the whole Affembly; either for their new friend, yet sufficiently discovered some known fault, baseness and insufficiency; themselves to draw upon them the hatred of or else even because they were unknown, the Romans. In this case were no small num- and therefore held unworthy. This difficulber of the Citizens; who thereupon grew ty in the new Election appearing more and the more incented against their Senate, on more, whilest more were to be chosen; (the whom they cast all the blame, easily pardon- fittest man to be substituted, having been ing their own cowardize. The people hold-named among the first, and not thought fit ing so tender a regard of liberty, that even enough) Pactivius intreated, and easily prethe lawful government of Magistrates griev- vailed with the people, that the present Seed them, with an imaginary oppression; had nate might for this time be spared, in hope now good cause to fear lest the Senators of amends hereafter; which (doubtless) would become the Lords indeed, and by they would make, having thus obtained help of the Romans bring them under a pardon of all offences past. Henceforth, not more straight subjection, than ever they had only the people, as in former times, hoendured. This fear being ready to break in noured Pacuvius, and esteemed him their to some outrage, Pacuvius made use of, to Patron; but the Senators also were governferve his own ambition. He discoursed unto ed by him, to whom they acknowledged the Senate, as they fate in Counsel, about themselves indebted, for saving all their those motions troubling the City : and said, lives. Neither did the Senate fail after this by That he himself had both married a Roman all obsequiousness, to court the people, giving to Terentius the Consul, to fee his present forsaken. cafe, and what it could minister of Hope or Advertisement hereof was given to Hanwere in Sicil.

CHAP. III.

sions, to the wilful and head-strong Multi- dered all the Romans, upon whom at the

the reines unto their lawless Will, who else | tude; whom he put in mind of Pyrrhus and were likely to cast them down. All the City the Tarentines, wishing them not to change heing thus of one mind; only fear of the Ro- old friends for new acquaintance. This did mans kept them from opening their gates to he, when they were tending Embaffadours Humibal, But after the Battel at Canne, this unto Hannibal; and this also did he, when impediment was removed; and few there the new alliance was concluded; but most were that would open their mouths to speak earnestly, when a Carthaginian Garrison was against the rebellion. Yet for a smuch as three entring the Town: at which time he gave bundred principal Gentlemen of the Cam- advice, either to keep it out, or to fall upon pans, did then serve the Romans in the Isle of it, and to cut it in pieces, that by such a rans, the Parents and Kinsmen of these pre- notable piece of service, they might make vailed to far that Embaffadors were fent un amends unto the Romans, whom they had

Fear. These, wheresoever they found him, nibal: who lying about Naples not far off, found him weakly attended, and as weak in fent for Magius to come speak with him in foirit, as in followers. Yet they offered him the Camp. This Magius refused : alledging, formally the service of their State; and de-that he was, by the late concluded Articles, fired to know what he would command free from subjection unto any Carthaginian; them. But he most basely lamented unto and therefore would not come. Hannibat them the greatness of the Roman misfortune: thereupon hasted himself towards Capua; faying, That all was loft; and that the Cam- forbearing to attempt any further upon pans must now not help the Romans, who had Naples, which he thought to have taken in his nothing left wherewith to help themselves, way by Scalado, but found the walls too high, but make war in their defence against the and was not well provided to lay siege unto Carthaginians; as the Romans had fome- it. At Capua he was entertained with great times done for the Campans against the Sam- solemnity and pomp: all the people issuing nites. Hereunto he is said to have added a forth of the Town, to behold the great toolish Invective against Hannibal and his Commander, which had won so many noble Carthaginians: telling, how he had taught victories. Having taken his pleasure in the them to make bridges of flaughtered fight of that goodly City, and passed over his carkaffes, and to feed upon mans flesh, with first entertainments, he came into their Sesuch other stuff, as only bewrayed his own nate, where he commended their resolution, fear. As for the Campans themselves, he put in shaking off the Roman yoke; promising, them in mind of their present strength: that ere long all Italy and Rome it felf, should they having thirty thousand foot, and four be driven to acknowledge Capua as chief, wifions, in abundance. Thus he dismissed Magins, who openly took part with the Rothem prouder than they came, and filled mans their enemies; he prayed them, that them with conceit of getting a great Lord- they would not use him as a Campan, but a hip; whereas before they were fome-what timorous in adventuring to feek their own liberty. Having reported this at 64pus; the same Embassadors were dif-delivered unto Haunibal; who unwilling to patched away to Hannibal, with whom they offend the Capuans, at his first coming, by easily made alliance, upon these conditiputting so great a man to death, yet fearing ons, that the Campans should be absolute- that they might sue for his liberty, it he kept ly free, and ruled by their own Laws; him alive, thought it best to fend him away That no Citizens of theirs should be subject to Carthage. Thus Hannibal settled his friendunto any Carthaginian Magistrate, in what ship with the Campanes: among whom, oncale soever, whether in War or Peace; and ly this Decius Magius had openly dared to that Hannibal should deliver unto the Cam-speak against him; being assisted by Perolla Pans three hundred Roman prisoners, such the Son of Passvins. This Perolla would as themselves would chuse, whom they have murdered Hannibal, whilest he was might exchange for their Gentlemen which at supper, the first night of his coming, had not his Fathers authority kept him from at-Against all this Negotiation, Decius Ma- tempting any such attempt. All the Town an honourable Citizen, opposed him (besides) were so earnest in the love of their felf earneftly; using, in vain, many perswa- new Society, that they are faid to have mur-

present

CHAP: III.

present they could lay hand; or (which is vince, if the Prætor stirred aside to there all one ) to have smothered them to death scue of Hieron. in an hot Bath.

of Capua, ran fome other Towns thereabouts Conful, that he might name a Dictator, to which dependeth on this, as their Mother-take soverain charge of the Weal-publick City. Nola, Nuceria, Naples, Caliline, and Acer- with absolute power, as necessity required re, were the Cities next adjoyning, that It must needs feem strange, that all forts of flood out for the Romans. Against these people went forth to meet the Conful, and Hannibal went, thinking to find them weak- bid him welcome home, giving him thanks Iv manned; as they were indeed, though for that he had not despaired of the Weal-pubstoutly defended.

to rut Garrisons into all their walled less) provided wifely for upholding the ge-Towns; but were fain to leave all places, neral reputation. If this coming into the except a few of the most suspected, unto the City had renewed the lamentations and ourfaith and courage of the inhabitants. Rome cries of the people: what else would have it self was in extream fear of Hannibals followed, than a contempt of their wretchcoming, at the first report of the overthrow edness, among those that were subject unto at Canna: and the grief of that loss was so their Dominion? Now in finding this ocgeneral, and immoderate, that it much casion (though indeed he gave it not ) of disturbed the provision against apparent bestowing upon him their welcome, and danger. It was hard to judge, whether the thanks; they noised abroad a fame, which lossalready received, or the fear of destru- came perhaps unto the ears of Hannibal, of ction presently threatning, were the more their Magnanimity and Confidence: that terrible. All the Senators found work might feem grounded on their remaining enough, to stint the noise and lamentable strength. This therefore was wisely done. But Courrers were sent forth, to bring assured was done generously, and out of great spirits tidings how all went : whereof when Letters let me be pardoned, if I believe him not. It from the Consul Varro had throughly in- was done fearfully, and to cover their grief: formed them, they were so amazed, that had they dared to shew their indignation, they ran into barbarous superstition; and they would have struck off his head a sin taking direction (as was faid) from their fa- few years after, Cn. Fulvius had his life tal books, buried alive two men and women, brought into question, and was banished by the books of sibyl gave them fuch instructions; we may justly think that sibyl her self-senate, was nominated Dictator, and 7. Semwas instructed by the Devil. Yet it is not im- pronius, Master of the horse. These fell pre-

In the midst of these extremities, it was The same course of fortune, with those thought needful to call home Terentine the lick. But this was done (as may feem) by or-The Romans at this time were not in case, der from the Senate: which therein doubtbewailings, whereof the streets were full. whereas Livie would have us think, that it the street would have us think the street would have us think the street would have us think the street would have us think the street would have us think the street would have us the street would have Gaules and Greeks, in their Oxe-market. If them, being less blame-worthy, for a smaller than probable, that extremity of fear caufed liently to mustering of Souldiers, of whom them to hearken to wicked South-fayers; they raifed four new Legions, and one thou-whose detestable counsels they afterwards fand horse: though with much difficulty; for their own honour (as ashamed of such as being fain to take up some that were very Authors ) imputed to the books of sibyl. An boyes. These four Legions are elsewhere Embailador was fent to Delphi, to confult forgotten in account of the forces levied by with the oracle of Apollo; and enquire with this Dictator; and two Legions only fet what prayers and supplications they might down, that had been enrolled in the beginpacific the gods, and obtain an end of thefe ning of the year for the custody of the City. calamities. This is enough to discover the So it may be, that these two Legions being tivil greatness of their fear; though not serving drawn into the field; four new ones of to give remedy. At that time came Letters Pratextati, or striplings were left in their out of Sicil, from the Prætor of Octacilius; places. In such raw Souldiers, and so few, whom the Senate had appointed, if he found little considence was to be reposed; for it meet, to pass over into Africk. In these which reason they increased their number, were contained news of one Carthaginian by adding unto them eight thousand sturdy fleet that wasted the kingdome of Hieron slaves, that were put in hope of liberty, if their good friend and confederate; and of they should deserve it by manfull service. another fleet, riding among the liles Agateir, This not fufficing, the Dictator proclaimed, which was in readiness to set upon Lily- that whosoever ought mony and could not houm, and the rest of the Roman Pro- pay it, or had committed any capital offence, should forthwith be discharged of third part of a common Souldiers ransome: his debt or punishment, if he would serve and likely it is, that he offered them at the Roman-like.

proceedings, as if they had been severe; fault. when as indeed they were suitable to the M. Junius the Dictator, having dispatched present fortune, poor and somewhat beg. all needfull business within the City, took garly. Hereof it is no little proof, That the field with five and twenty thousand Hannibal valued those Roman saves, whom men. What he did with this Army, I cannot he had taken in the Camp among their find : nor more of him than this, That he

in the War. To arm these Companies, they price, whereat he thought them current. were fain to take down out of their Tem- But if we should suppose, that by trading ples and Porches, the spoils of their enemies with Hannibal, a better bargain for slaves that had been there fet up : among which, might have been made, than was by the were 6000. Armours of the Gaules, that State at home, in dealing with private men: had been carried in the Triumph of C. Fla- yet must we withall consider, that these minius, a little before the beginning of this private men did only lend these flaves for war. To such mockery had God brought la while unto the Common-wealth, and the pride of the Roman, as a due reward of were afterwards contented to forbear the their insolent oppressions, that they were price of them (when by order of the Senate fain to issue forth of their own gates, in the they were enfranchised until the war habit of strangers, when Hannibal was ready should be ended. If Hannibal would have to encounter them with his Africans, armed given such long day of payment, it is likely that the Romans would have been About the same time it was that Carthalo his Chapmen : but, seeing he dealt onwith the Agents of the prisoners taken at ly for ready money, they chose rather to Canne, came to Rome. Carthalo was not ad-mitted into the City, but commanded, whilft The like aufterity, upon the same reason, he was on the way, to be gone ere night out but contrary pretence, was used toward of the Roman Territory. To the mellengers the Souldiers that escaped from that great of the captives audience was given by the battel. These were charged for having Senate. They made earnest Petition to be fled: as the prisoners were, for not flying, ranfomed at the publick charge; not only when they might have done so. True it is, the tears and lamentation of their poor kinfthat in such cases (if ever) that which they folk but the great need, wherein the City call Raggione del Stato, may serve for an exthen flood, of able Souldiers, commending cufe : when the Common-wealth, bear their fuit; which yet they obtained not. driven to a miferable exigent, is fain to Besides the general custom of the Romans help it self, by doing injuries to private (held by long Tradition, and strengthened men. And so dealt the Romans now : conby a notable Precedent, when Regular was demning all those that had served at Canna, overthrown, and taken prisoner in the for- to be transported into Sicil; and there to mer War) not to be too tender of such as serve, not as others did, untill they had had vielded to the enemy, much was alleadg- fulfilled twenty years in the Wars, or elfe ed against those who now craved ransome: were fifty years of age, but untill this War but the foecial point was, that they were should be ended, howlong soever it lasted, wilfully loft, fince they might have faved and that without reward. The fame thrifty themselves, as others did. It sufficed not censure was afterwards laid upon others, unto these poor men, to say, that their of- for their mis-behaviour : but never upon fence was no greater than the Confuls; they any man of quality, fave only (a good were told, that this was great presumption. while after this, at better leisure) upon The truth was, the State wanted money ; Cecilius Metellus, and a few other hareand therefore could not want excuses ; brain'd fools his companions; who, being whereby to avoid the disbursement : whe- frighted out of their wits, with the terrour ther it were fo, or not, that any fuch Plea of fo great a loss, were devising, after the was held about this matter of redemption, battel, which way to run out of Italy, when as we find recorded. Neither must we re- Hannibal as yet had scarce one Town withgard it, that the flaves which were armed in it. The inequality of this rigour grew for the war, are faid to have cost more, than shortly distasteful to the Commonalty: and the fumm did amount unto, that would have was openly blamed by a Tribune of the peoransomed these prisoners. For this is but a ple 3 nevertheless it was quietly digested, Lindblag tale, devised to countenance the Roman the excuse being no less apparent than the Masters, at no more, than every one the spent the time about Campania; where (as Ttttt

may be prefumed ) he was not idle. To one that had fo well deferved of the Ro. him therefore perhaps it may be ascribed, man State, had not repaired unto him any evil done to Hannibal, by the Romans, than fuch acquaintance. So with many in this their weak estate, only Marcellus commendations, gifts, and loving enterhad the honour. Marcellus, being then tainment, being himself also a man high-that Hannibal did no greater evil : for of the Prætor, who desired nothing more one of the Pretors, lay at Oftia, with a ly reputed for his personal valour, he made Fleet ready to set sail for sicil, having this Bantius so far in love with him, that no one Legion aboord his ships; and sifteen thing could be attempted within Nola. hundred other Souldiers newly taken up: against the Romans, whereof he had not with which forces he was to defend that presently advertisement. At the coming of Illand, and do what harm he could in Marcellus, Hannibal removed from about Africk. But hearing of the overthrow at Nola; and affayed, as formerly he had Canne, he fent there of his new Levy to done, the Neapolitans : but they had late-Rome, for defence of the City; and march- ly taken in a Roman Garrison; upon coned hastily with his Legion toward Can- fidence whereof they gave him a peremnulum : delivering the Fleet, empty of ptory answer, to his discontent. Thence Souldiers to P. Furius his Colleague, went he to Nuceria, which he took by Thence was he called by the Magistrates, composition; and so returned back again and chief Citizens of Nola, to help them: to Nola. He was not ignorant, what good who were like to be forced by the multitude affection the common people of Nola bore (affected, as were the rest of the Cam- unto him : who although they durst not panes) to let in the Carthaginian; and stir in his quarrel, being over-awed by knew not how to avoid this otherwise, the Roman Garrison; yet if they saw than by feeming to deliberate about the Marcellus hardly bestead, and forced to articles of this new confederacy. Where-turn his care from watching them within. forc he made great journeys thitherward; to repelling the enemies affailing him and arrived even time enough to prevent without, like enough it feemed, that the Enemy. Many idle walks Hannibal they would not be wanting unto the acmade betwixt Nola and Naples : affaying complishment of their own defires. He by fair words and terrible threats the therefore brought his Army close to the one and the other City. Naples was ftrong, Town, and fkirmifhed often with Marcelles: and not infected with any the least touch not in hope thereby to do much good, of diflovalty: had also a fure Haven, but only to make shew of a meaning to whereby it stood in the less fear of sustain- force the Town; which he sought in the ing much inconvenience, by spoil of the mean while to take by intelligence. In the Lands and Villages abroad in the Coun-night time there passed messages between trey. But at Nola it was thought a va- him and the Citizens his partakers : whereluable confideration, That Hannibal was by it was concluded, That if once Mar-Master of the field: which if he laid waste, cellus, with all his forces, could be trainall the poor people were utterly undone, ed into the field, the multitude within So thought the Multitude : and fuch talk the Town should presently rise; and seizing used some, that had little fear of their upon the gates, exclude him as an Enemy. own private want or poverty, but a great Of this Negotiation Marcellus was adverdesire to gratifie the Carthaginian. Of tised : and fearing lest the Consoirators these, one L. Bantius was chief; a stout would shortly adventure, even to find him young Gentleman, and Souldier of especi- busied within the City, whilest the Carthaal mark, well beloved in the City, and ginians should scale the walls; he thought one that had done good service to the Ro- it the surest way, to cut off the Enemies mans; but was found by Hannibal half hope, and fend him away betimes. Wheredead at Canne; and after much gentle fore ordering his men in three companies, usage, good attendance, and cure of his within three several gates, looking towards wounds, friendly dismissed with liberal the enemy; he gave a straight command, gifts. He therefore thought, that it con-that all the Citizens should keep their cerned him in honour, to return the greatest houses. Thus he lay close a good part of thanks he could unto so courteous an enemy. the day, to the enemies great wonder, Marcellus perceiving this, wrought upon against whom he had customarily issued the same easie nature of the Gentleman: forth before more early, every day, to skirand taking notice of him, as if it had nish. But when it was further noted, that the been by chance, feemed to wonder, why walls were bare, and not a man appearing on them; then thought Hannibal, that furely red unto their pleafure, by his own Citizens;

all was discovered, and Marcellus now bu- could now please themselves, as with good fied with the Citizens. Whereupon he bad news, to hear, That in a fkirmish nor far his men bring ladders, and make ready for from Rome, he appeared to be a man, and not the affault : which was done in all hafte. But refiftlefs. At Castlinum the Dictator was not : when the Carthaginians were at the very but many Companies of Italians, Confedewals, and thought nothing less, than that the rates of Rome, were gotten into the Town. Romans would meet them in the field: fud- and held it. Five hundred of the Pranestines denly the middle gate was opened, whereat there were, and about four hundred of Pe-Marcellus, with the best and oldest of his rusia, with some of the Latines. All these Souldiers, brake forth upon them, with a had the good hap, to come too late to the great noise, to make his unexpected fally the battel at Canna, being sent by their several more terrible. Whilest the Carthaginians, States to the Camp: whither whilest they much out of order, were some of them fly- were marching, the tidings of that great ing before Marcellus, the rest making head misfortune encountred them, and sent them against him: the other two gates opened, back forrowfull; for they loved well their whereat in like fort iffued they of the new Lords the Romans, under whose government levied Companies, upon the enemies backs. they lived happily. So came they all, one The fudden terrour was more available unto after another to Cassline, where they met the Romans, than their force ; yet the Exe- and stayed. Neither had they stayed there cution was fo great, that this was accounted long, ere they heard news from Capua, How as a victory, and reputed one of the bravest that great City became the Ring-leader Acts performed in all that War, forasmuch of all the Campanes into rebelling. The as hereby it was first proved, that Hannibal people of Casiline were affected as they of might be overcome. After this, Marcellus Capua: and therefore fought how to rid being freed from his enemies that were their hands of those Franchines and their departed, took a strict account of the Citi- fellows; but the Souldiers were too hard zens of Nola; condemning above threescore for them, and after many trains laid one for and ten of high Treason, whose heads he another, at last they slew all the Townsmen struck off; and so leaving the Town in quiet in a night, and fortified the Western part obedience unto their Senate, went and in- of the Town (for it was divided by the Ricamped hard by about Suessula. Hannibal in ver Vulturnus) against the Enemy. If they the mean feason was gone to Acerra: where had run away with the goods, and pretendbeing excluded, he thought it no wildom ed, that thefe of Casiline were as the rest of to lose time in perswasions, but laid siege the Campanes, all Traitors; they themselve unto it, and began on all fides to close it might have been reputed, as no better up. This terrified the People, who knew than the Mamertines. But their confidence themselves unable to hold out. Therefore be- in defence of the place witnesseth, upon we are fore his Works were finished, and they quite honest reasons they surprised it. Hannion. furrounded; they stole out by night, and came thither, thinking to have encountry left him the Town empty: which he facked with greater forces: but thefe few found and burnt. Then hearing news of the Di- him more work than he expected. Divers ctator, that he was about Casiline, thither affaults he gave, but was still repelled with went Hannibal; as being unwilling that an loss: and many fallies they made, with vaenemy so near should disquiet him at Capua; riable event. The Enemy mined; and they where he meant to Winter. It feems, or ra- countermined: opposing so much industry ther indeed it is plain, that the late victory to his force, that he was driven to close of Marcellus had nothing abated the spirit them up, and seek to win them by famine. of the Carthaginian: who durst with a small T. Sempronius Gracchus, that was Master of part of his Army feek out the Dictator, that the Horse, lay with the Roman Army higher had with him the heart of the Roman up the River: who fain would have relieved strength. Wherefore the joy of his Ene-Casiline, but that the Dictator being gone mies, upon fo flight an occasion as the death to Rome about some matters of Religion, had of some two shouland of his men, at the given him an express charge not to fight till most, and those not slain in plain battel, his return. Marcellus from Suessula could not but by a sudden eruption; witnesseth come: his way being stopped by the overchiefly, in what great fear they stood of flowings of Vulturnus; the Nolans also be-Hannibal, and how Crest-fallen they were : seeching him not to leave them, who that having three years fince demanded at were in danger of the Campanes, if he de-Carthage the body of Hannibal, to be delive- parted. Thus it is reported: but if the water Ttttt 2

CHAP. III

stayed his journey, such intreaties were needless. Neither is it like that the Dictator tarried at Rome so long, as till extrem fa- of the great supply that was decreed at Carmine had confumed the Garrison in Cassline. Wherefore it may be thought, that the Town was loft, because the Romans durst not adventure to raife the fiege. Barrels of Corn were fent by night, floting down the River; and when some of these, being carried awry by an Eddie of water, stuck among the Willows on the bank, whereby this manner of relief was discovered and prevented; Gracebus cast a great quantity of Nuts into the stream, which taintly sustained the poor belieged men. At length when all food fuch Italians, as fell from the Romans after was frent, and whatfoever grew green un-ithe battel at Canna; his brother Hannibal der the Walls was gathered for Sallets, the font for him to Capua, and thence dispatch-Carthaginians ploughed up the ground sed him away to Carthage, with the joywhereon the believed prefently fowed Rape-full message of Victory. He told the Carthafeed. Hannibal feeing this, admired their ginian Senate with how many Roman Gepatience; and faid. That he meant not to nerals his brother had fought, what Conitay at Calline untill the Rapes were grown fulls he had chased, wounded or flain; how Wherefore though hitherto he had refused the stout Romans, that in the former war neto hearken unto any Composition, as in-ver shunned any occasion of fight, were tending to make them an example to all now grown localm that they thought their others, by punishing their obstinacy; yet Dictator Fabius the only good Captain, benow he was content, to grant them their cause he never durst adventure to come lives at an indifferent ransome; which when to battel; That not without reason their they had paid, he quietly dismissed them, ac- spirits were thus abated, since Hannibal had cording to his promife. Seven hundred car- flain of them above two hundred thouthaginians he placed in Casiline, as a Garrison fand, and taken above fifty thousand prisofor defence of the Campanes; unto whom he ners. He further told them of the Brutirestored it. To the Pranestine Souldiers ans, Apulians, Samnites, Lucans, and other great thanks were given, and loving re-people of Italy, that followed the fortune wards; among which they had offer, in re- of those great victories, had revolted unto gard of their vertue, to be made Citizens of the Carthaginians. Among the rest he mag-Rome. But their present condition pleased nified Capua, as a goodly City, and fit to be them fo well, that they chose rather to con- not only (as already it was ) Head of all tinue, as they were in Pranefte: which is no the Capuans, but the chief feat of their Doweak proof, of the good estate wherein the minion in Italy: and there he informed Cities flourished, that were subject to the them, how lovingly his brother had been Roman Government. This siege of Cassline entertained, where he meant to rest that was not a little beneficial to the Romans, as winter attending their supply. As for the having long detained Hannibal, and confu-war, He said it was even at an end, if they med much of his time, that might otherwise would now pursue it closely, and not give have been better spent. For winter overtook the Romans any breathing time, whereinto him long before he could dispatch the busi- re-collect themselves, and repair their broness: which how to quit with his honour he ken forces. He willed them to consider, that knew not, when he was once engaged, the war far from home, in the Enemies Coun-Therefore he wintered at Capua: where he trey: that so many battels had much dimi-times, as shall appear hereafter.

6. X.

thage to be fent to Hannibal into Italy, Hom by the malice of Hanno, and floth or partimony of the Carthaginians, the Supply max too long deferred. That the riches of the Carthaginians grow faster, than of the Romans. Of Fabius and other old Romans Historians, how partial they were in their writines.

WHen Mago, the fon of Amilear had spent some time about the taking in refreshed his Army, or rather corrupted it, as nished his brothers Army: that the Souldiers, all Historians report, and made it effeminate; who had so well deserved, ought to be conthough effeminate as it was, He therewithall sidered with liberal rewards; and that it did often beat the Romans in following was not good to burden their new Italianfriends, with exactions of money, corn, and other necessaries; but that these things must be sent from Carthage; which the victory would require with large amends. Finally, he caused the golden rings, taken from the fingers of the Roman Knights that were slain, ones of private men was not altogether to great, as the Law would be penulted, though otherwife Tus Assails, The meaning of the Roys, as the great priviledge of the Romas Equities.

*principal of that order, were accustomed to wear that ornament.

Who fo confiders the former Punich War. may eafily find, that the State of Carthage never did receive, in all the durance thereof, any fuch hopefull advertisements from their Captains abroad. Wherefore it is no any opinion of good advantage had called marvel, if the errand of Mago found extraordinary welcome. In the vehemency of this fince after this war ended, and a new league joy, Himilco, a Senator adverse to the faction of Hanno, is faid to have demanded of that great perswader unto peace with Rome, Whether he were still of opinion, that Hannibal (hould be yielded up unto the Romans; or whether he would forbid them to give indeed very pestilent; and served only to thanks unto the gods, for this their good fuccess. Hereunto though it be not likely that on. For it was concluded by a main consent Hanno made the same formal answer, which of the Senate, that forty thousand Numidi-Livie puts into his mouth, calling the Cartha- ans, forty Elephants, and great abundance ginian Senators Patres Conferipti, by a term of filver, should be sent over to Hannibal: proper to the Romans; and putting them and that, belides these, twenty thousand in mind of his own shamefull overthrow re- foot, and four thousand horse, should be leceived at the Islands Agateis: yet the sum | vied in Spain; not only to supply, as need of his speech appears to have been no less should require, the Armies in their Promalicious than is fet down, forasmuch as vince, but to be transported into Italy. that a few * filver stude in the bridles and trap- quired it; or the crasty malice of Hanno, and to be poured out openly in the Court : ( Spain, in his journey towards Italy ) then which being measured, tilled (as some say) might such an objection more justly have three bushels; or (as others would rather been made unto his demand of a fupply. But have it) no more than one; adding, that by the most likely part of Hanno his Oration, this might appear the greatness of the Ro- and wherein he best might hope to prevail, man calamity, forasmuch as none but the contained a perswasion to use their fortune with moderation; and now to feek peace, whilest they had so much the better in war.

What would have been the issue of this counsel, if it had been followed, it were not easie to say. For though it be likely, that the Roman pride would have brooked much indignity, in freeing Italy from the danger of war ; yet it is not likely that the faith, fo often broken to the Carthaginians in former times, would have been kept entire, when for revenge of fo many thameful overthrows concluded, no fubmiffive behaviour could preserve Carthage from ruine, longer, than untill fuch time as Rome was at leifure from all other wars. This counsel therefore of Hanno, though it might feem temperate, was hinder the performance of a noble resoluti-

Hannibal himself, at his departure out of This great Aid, had it been as carefully Italy, exclaimed against the wickedness of fent, as it was readily decreed; the Roman this Hanno; faying, that his hatred against Historians would not have found cause, to the Barchines, had oppressed their Family, tax the retchless improvidence of Hannibal, when otherwise it could not, with the ruine in forbearing to march directly from Canno of Carthage. Therefore it may well be, that to Rome, or in refreshing his Army among hemade fuch a jest of these victories, as is re- the delights of Capua: the next years work ported; faying, it ill befeemed him, who would have finished the business, with less hadvanquished the Romans to call for more dangerous adventure; and the pleasures, help as if he had been beaten; or him, that which his men enjoyed among the Camhad taken their Camp, filled forfooth with panes, would have been commended, as respoil, to make request for meat and money. wards by him well thought upon, where-To these cavils, if answer were needfull, it with to animate both them and others, that might be faid, That other booty than of were to be imployed in the following War. horses and slaves, little was to be found in But either the too much carelesness of those, the Roman Camp: the best of the Souldiers that were loth to make haste in laying out carrying no other wealth into the field, than their money, before extreme necessity repings of their horses. If Hannibal had ta- his fellows, working upon the private huken any main convoy of money and provi- mours of men, that had more feeling of their fions, going to supply all wants of a great own commodity, than fense of the publick Army in some other Province, (as the two need; utterly perverted, and made unpro-Scipio's are afterwards faid to have done, fitable in the performance, the order that when they wan the Camp of Asarbal, that had been so well set down. The * Elephants * Zivilas. carryed along with him all the wealth of were fent: and some money peradventure, uncertain it is how long after. But those pons, and engines of War; the Romans told great forces of threescore thousand foot, and them plainly, That the City of Carthage, tour thousand horse, came not into Italy, till which was the body of the Citizens, should much was lost of that which already had be friendly dealt withall, but the Town been gotten, and a great part of the old Car- must needs be demolished, and removed inthurinian Army, was first consumed by time, to some other place, that should be twelve and fundry accidents of war. Only fome miles distant from the Sca. For (faid the fmall numbers, no way answering unto the Romans) This Trade of Merchandise, by proportion decreed, were fent into spain; which ye now live, is not fit for peaceable and the journey of Astrubal thence through men, such as ye promise to become hereaf-France into Italy much talked of, but he not ter, as is the Trade of Husbandry; an enabled thereunto, till many years were wholesome kinde of life, and enduing men past, and the Romans had recovered their with many laudable qualities which enable Carthaginians drew into their City, both the Romans, though fugred with glofing by the Tributes received from their subjects, words, plainly shews, what good observaand by their wealthy Trade of Merchan-tion the elder Cato had made of the hafty dize. For it is not long, fince the War of the growth of Carthage in riches. For, when he-Mercenaries, and the perfidious tyranny of ing demanded his opinion in the Senate the Romans, extorting in time of greatest about any matter whatsoever it were he adnecessity twelve hundred talents; had ex- ded still this conclusion, Thus I think, and ceedingly impoverished Carthage: which that Carthage should be destroyed: He may was before brought into great want, even by feem, not only to have had regard unto that the expence of fo much money, as was to be present wealth, which at his being there he difbursed for redeeming of peace, after the had found in the City, but much more unto loss of Agateis. Yet we see, what great these times, and the great height whereunto Armies of Numidians, and Spaniards, be- it rose, even suddenly as we see, out of many fides those already on foot, are appointed calamities, whilest the Romans thought, that to the service in Italy, and how little the it had not been in case to date so terrible Carthaginians fear the want of money in a War. these chargeable undertakings: whereas the But as the Carthaginians, in gathering Romans on the other fide, having three or wealth, were more industrious and skilfull four years together been forced to some ex- than the Romans; so came they far short of traordinary cost, are fain to go upon credit; them in the honourable care of the publick even for the price of those slaves, which good: having every one or most of them, a they bought of their own Citizens to arm more principal regard of his own private befor their defence. Such advantage in means nefit. This made them (besides the neglito enrich their Treasury, had the wealthy gence commonly found in victors) when the Merchants of Carthage trading in all parts of first heat of their affection ( wherein they the Mediterranean Sea, even from Tyrus their concluded to pursue the war strongly) was Mother-City in the bottom of the straights over-past, go more leisurely to work, than unto the great Ocean, above the Romans: had been requifite in the execution: It was who lived on the fruits of their ground, and eafie for Hanno to perswade covetous men, received their Tributes from people follow- that they should first of all defend their own ing the same course of life. When the time in Spain. This might be done with little chared; and having accordingly, when they were fo required, yielded up all their weadition, that their City might not be destroy- had given him to the conquest of Rome.

Снав. Пр.

their bodies, and make them very apt for Here we may note, what great riches the conversation. This villanous dealing of therefore was come, that the harred of ges. Afterwards, when that Province was fe-cita Rome found leifure to shew it self, in the destruction of Carthage; the impudence of Roman fallhood, in seeking an honest colour wherewith to shadow the intended breach of the Common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the Common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the Common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the Common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the Common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the Common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the common-wealth to one hazard of the state of the common-wealth to one hazard of the state of of Faith, discovered plainly whence the fortune, against the enemies, or (which perjealousie was bred, that this mighty City haps were worse) to the government of an in so would again rebell. For the Carthaginians, ambitious man, and his brethren; who having having given up hostages, even before the nonce (if they could so do) finished the wars with might easily make * Hannibal a King, and looker should be enjoyned them, with confuded the contraction of the ingly well fortified: a great Spanish Town few handfuls into Spain. of the same name, lying without it, that was

ness, or niggardize, the Carthaginians were thought him fo, were well enough contentperswaded rather to make small disburs- ed to hearken unto his discourses, as long as ments in Spain, than to fet up all their rest at they were plausible, and tended to keep the once in Italy. Yet was it indeed impossible to purse full. In the mean while they suffered holda Countrey of fo large extent, and fo Hannibal, and all the noble house of Amilopen a coast as that of Spain, free from all car, to weary themselves in travel for the incursion of the Enemy : especially the affe- Common-wealth : which all Carthage in gedion of the Naturals being (as in a new con- neral highly commended, but weakly afquest) ill established. A better way therefore listed; as if the industry of these Barchines it had been, to make a running War, by had been somewhat more than needful. Surewhich the Romans might have been found by the Carthaginians, in general, were far lefs occupied, even with the ordinary Carthagi- honourable than the people of Rome: not nian Garrisons or some little addition there- only in government of their subject Provinunto. For if it were thought meet, to defer ces, but in administration of their own the profecution of their main intendment estate; few of them preferring the respect against Rome it felf, untill such time as every of the Weal-publick above their private inlittle thorn were pulled out of the fides of terest, But as they thrived little in the end. fogreat a Province, then must Emporia have by their parsimony used toward their own heen befieged and forced: which, by reason Mercenaries, when the former Roman war of alliance with the Mallilians, gave unto the was finished: so the conclusion of this war Romans, at all times when they pleafed, a prefent, will make them complain, with ready and secure Harbour. But the Town of feeling tighs, of their negligence in supplying Emboria, was too strong to be won in haste: Hannibal, after the victory at Canna; when it had long defended it felf against the Bar- gladly they would give all their Treasures. harians: having not above four hundred to redeem the opportunity, that now they paces of wall to the main Land, and exceed- let pass, as if it were cost enough to send a

That both the Spanish business, and the three miles in compass, very strong likewise, state of Africk it self, depended wholly, or and friend unto the Gracians, though not for the most part, upon success of things in over much trusted. Wherefore to force this Italy, the course of actions following will Town of Emporia, that was, besides the pro- make manifest. Particularly, how matters per strength, like to be so well assisted by the were ordered in Spain by the Carthaginian Mallilians, Romans, and some spaniards, Governours, it is very hard and almost imwould have been a work of little less diffi- possible to set down. For though we must culty, than was the Romans war (in appear not reprehend in that worthy Hiltorian Livy, ance ) after the battel at Canna: yea, it had the tender love of his own Country, which been in effect none other, than to alter the made him give credit unto Fabius and others; feat of the war; which Hannibal had already yet must we not, for his sake, believe those fixed, with better judgement, near unto the lyes, which the unpartial judgement of Polygates of Rome. The difficulty of this attempt, bim hath condemned, in the Writers that being fuch as caused it altogether to be for- gave them original. It were needless to reborn; great folly it was to be much trou- hearfe all that may be found in Polybius, con-Pol. iii. I. bled about expelling the Romans utterly out ceroing the untruth of that Roman Hillorian of Spain : whom they might more easily Fabius. One example may suffice. He saith of have diverted thence, and drawn home to Amilear and his men at Eryx, in the former their own doors, by making strong war up- war, That, having clean spent their strength, on their City. For even fo the Romans af- and being even broken with many miferies, terwards removed Hannibal into Africk, by they were glad to submit themselves unto fending an Army to Carthage; and by take- the Romans. Contrary hereunto we find in ing the like course, they now endeavoured the life of Amilcar, set down by Emilius Proto change the feat of the war transferring bus, That Eryx was in such fort held by the it out of Italy into Spain. But the private Carthaginians, that it seemed to be in as good affections of men, regarding the common condition, asif in those parts there had not good no otherwise, than as it is accessary to been any war. These words, being referred to their own purposes, did make them easily the brave resolution of the Carthaginian Soulwink at opportunities, and hope that some- diers, and the singular vertue of their Genewhat would fall out well of it felf, though ral, infusing such spirit into them, may be tathey fet not to their helping hands. Hanno ken as not over liberal. For in the treaty of was a malicious wretch : yet they that peace between Amilcar and Catulus, when the Koman first of all required, that this Ganlinto Baly, to encounter with Hannibal Garrison of Eryx should lay down their arms at his descent from the Alps, sent before him and forfake Sicil, threatning, that other wife his Brother Cnews, with part of his Fleet and he would not talk of any composition : Amil- Army, into Spain. Two Roman Legions. car boldly bade him chuse, whether he with fourteen thousand foot of the Confewould talk of it or no; for that the Arms derates, and twelve hundred horse, had been which his Countrey had put into his hands to allotted unto the Conful, therewith to make use against her enemies, it was not his pur- war in Spain against Hannibal; who, since he pose to yield up unto them. Now fince the was marching into Italy with the strength of Romans. contrary to their custom upon like his Army, P. Scipio believed, that a good advantages, were content to let Amilear have part of these his own forces might well be his will, and not to stand with him upon point | spared from the Spanish Expedition; and of honour, whilest otherwise they might quitherefore made bold to carry some of the ctly rid their hands of him; plain enough number back with him, fending on his Broit is, that they were far from thinking him a ther with the rest, as his Lieutenant, Publica man confumed with miferies, as Fabius would himself remained in Italy all the time of his have him feem. Hereunto agrees the relation Confulfhip; which being expired, he was of Folybius: who flatly, and by name, charg- fent Proconful into spain by the Senate, eth Fabius with untruth; faying, That how- with an Army of eight thousand men, and a foever Amilear and his Souldiers had endu- Fleet of thirty Gallies. red all extremity, yet they behaved themfelves as men that had no fense thereof; and Province, were very great; and, as they are were as far from being either vanquished or reported, somewhat marvellous. For they tyred, as were their Enemies. Such being the continually prevailed in spain against the difference between Fabius (as also perhaps Carthaginians; whom they vanquished in between other old Writers of the Roman sto- fo many battels, and withdrew from their ry) and those that had more regard of truth, Alliance so many of the Spaniards their than of flattering the mighty City of Rome : | Confederates, that we have cause to wonwe must take it in good part, that howsoe- der how the enemy could so often find ver Livie introduceth Hanno, in one place, means to repair his forces, and return strong iovning very foolishly his own shameful into the field. But as the Romans, by preoverthrow at the Islands * Agateis, with the tending to deliver the Countrey from the tygreat services of Amilear at Eryx, as if both ranny of Carthage, might easily win unto their Estimates of them had had a like event; yet † else- Consederacy, as many as were galled with popetis, where he forbeareth not to put a more like- the African yoke, and durst adventure to The last ly tale (though with as impudent a comme-break it: fo the ancient reputation of the 1 2h. 23. moration of his own unhappy conduct) into first Conquerors might serve to arm the Nathe same Hanno his mouth, making him say, turals against these Invaders, and to reclaim That the affairs of Carthage went never bet those that had revolted unto the Romans, ter, than a little before the loss of their Fleet were it only by the memory of fuch ill fucin that battel at Sea; wherein himself was cess, as the like rebellions in former times General. Now, concerning the doings of the had found. Hereto may be added the Car-Scipio's in Spain, there is cause to wish, that thaginian Treasure; which easily raised this Fabius, with Val. Antias, and others of the Souldiers, among those valiant (but in that like stamp, had either written (if they could Age) poor, and gold-thirsty Nations. Neinot write more temperately) nothing at all; ther was it of small importance, that so maor that the tender affection of Livie to his by of the Spaniards had their children, kinf-Kome, had not caused him to think too well of men, and friends, abroad with Hannibal in their relations; which are fuch as follow.

ø. X I.

followed thence his Brother Hannibal into pio, which neither Scipio, nor Livie for him,

We hath been shewed already, how P. Cor- strange it was, and as little to his honour, as nelius Scipio the Consul returning from it had been extreamly dangerous to Rome,

The Acts of these two Brethren in their his Italian Wars; or ferving the Carthaginians in Africk. And peradventure, if we durft be bold to fay it; the victories of the scipe's were neither fo many, nor fo great as they are set out by Livie. This we may be bold to strange reports of the Roman victories in fay, that the great Captain Fabius, or Livie Spain, before Aidrubal the Son of Amilcar in his person, maketh an objection unto Scidoth answer. That if Asdrubal were vanquished, as Scipio would say by him in Spain:

that the Jame vanquished man should invade That they should gently or kindly) uphold the too much credit. in this regard, I will fum- their own , leaving them to be governed by marily run over the doings of the Scipio's in Hanno at his discretion. These therefore whereof there is no great certainty.

ing a meer stranger, and having no jurisdi-than regardful of the greater milchief, ction in the Country. Yet it is certain, that whereinto they ran by feeking to avoid it. could well infinuate himself in to the love of not suffer Hanno to temporize. Tenthousand inpractice had the better success, for that unto him : besides which, it is like, that some he feemed to have none other errand than forces he was able to raise out of his Prosetting them at liberty. This pretext avail- vince. Therefore he adventured a battel ed with some: others were to be hired with scipio, wherein he was overthrown with mony: and some he compelled to yield and taken. Following this victory, Scipio by force or fear; especially when he had befieged stiffum, a Town hard by, and won won a battel against Hanno. Into all Trea it. But Afdrubal having passed Therus, and ties of Accord, made with these people, coming too late to the relief of Hanno, likely it is, that he remembred to insert this with eight thousand foot, and a thousand Article, which the Romans in their Alliances horse, fell upon the Roman Sea-forces, that never forgat, unless in long times past, and lay not far from Tarracon, whom he found when they dealt with the Carthaginians, or careless, as after a victory, roaving abroad in their Superiours; Majestatem Pop. Rom. comi- the Country; and with great slaughter the trenfervent, which is, as Tully interprets it, drave them aboard their ships. This done, he stal). And it is indeed an incredible narra Majesty of the people of Rome. This was in tion, That Afdrubal, being enclosed on all appearance nothing troubletome; yet inides, and not knowing how to escape out of plied it indeed an obscure covenant of subbattel, fave only by the steep descent of jection. And in this respect it may be true, Rocks, over a great River that lay at his That the spaniards became ditionis Roma- in these, back, ran away with all his mony, Ele- na, of the Koman jurisdiction; though hereohants and broken troops, over Tagus, direct- after they will fay, they had no tuch meanly towards the Pyrenees, and fo toward Italing. That part of the Country wherein Scih: upon which he fell with more than three- pio landed, was newly subdued by Hannibal score thousand armed Souldiers Neither do in his passage toward Italy; and therefore lice, how it hangs well together. That he the more easily shaken out of obedience. chose a piece of ground very defensible, but particularly in the Barentians: 11a.nib.d had most incommodious for his retrait, if he found at his coming among them such an should happen to be vanquilhed; and yet, apprehension of the Roman greatness, as that he fent all his mony and Elephants made him suspect, that any light occasion away beforehim, as not intending to abide would make them start from the Carthagithe enemy: Or how it could be true, that nians. Wherefore he not only appointed these his Elephants being so sent before, Hanno Governour over them, as over the Pol. alic. could hinder the Romans ( for so have they rest of the Province between Iberus and the faid to have done in the last battel between Pyrenees, but made him also their Lord; that him and Scipio ) from breaking into his is, (as I conceive it; for I do not think he Camp. Wherefore we can no more than be gave the Principality of their Country unforry, that all Carthaginian records of this to Hanno and his Heirs) he made him not War, and Spanish, (if there were any) being only Lieutenant-general over them, in matutterly loft, we can know no more thereof, ters of War, and things concerning the than what it hath pleased the Romans to tell holding them in obedience to Carthage; but us; unto whom it wereno wisdom to give took from them all inferiour Officers of Spain, not greatly infilting on particulars, had good cause to rejoyce at the coming of Scipio; with whom, others also (no doubt) Cn. Cornelius landed at Emporia, an Haven found reasons to joyn, it being the custom Town, not far within the Pyrenees, retain-of all conquered Nations in hatred of their ing still the same name with little inflexion. present Lords, to throw themselves indif-That by the flame of his clemency he allu-creetly into the protection of others, that red many Nations to become subject unto many times prove worse than the former. So Rome, as the story begins of him, I could were the Neapolitans, and Milanois, in the eafily believe, if I understood by what occa- age of our Grand-fathers, weary by turns of fion they had need to ule his clemency, or the 'paniards and French; as more fentible heto give such famous example thereof, be- still of the present evil which they felt, he was a man very courteous, and one that This bad affection of this Province, would the Barbarians, among whom, his dexterity toot, and a thousand horse, Hannibal had left

Uuuuu

ran up into the Country, where he with- the comfortable promifes of those that had drew the Ilerectes from the Roman party, ruled them before. For that it was their inthough they had given Hostages to scipio, tent to live under their own Country Laws. scipio in the mean feason was gone to visit and not under Governours fent from and aid his Fleet; where having fet things Rome or Carthage, their demeanour in all in order, he returned back, and made to- Ages following may testifie: even from ward Aldrubal; who durst not abide his henceforth unto the dayes of Augustus Cafar, coming, but withdrew himielt again over till when they were never thorowly contherus. So the Ilergetes were compelled by quered. force having loft Athanagia their chief The year following this, Cn. Scipio had City, to pay a fine to the Romans, and in- a victory against the Carthaginians in fight create the number of their Hostages. The An- at Sea; or rather came upon them unlooked fetanilikewife, Confederates of the Cartha- for, while they rode at Anchor, most of their ginians, were belieged in their chief Town 5 men being on thore. All their thips that ran which they defended thirry dayes; hoping, not too far on ground, he took; and therein vain, that the sharp Winter, and great by grew Master of the whole coast; landabundance of Snow that fell, would have ing at pleafure, and doing great hurt in all made the Romans to dislodge. But they were places that were not well defenced. After fain at length to yield; and for this their this victory, above one hundred and twenty obstinacy, they were amerced twenty talents Nations, or petty estates in spain, are said of filver. During the fiege, the Lacetani to have submitted themselves unto the Rocame to help their diffressed neighbours; mans, or given Hostages; whereby Asarabal and were beaten home by scipio, leaving was compelled to flye into the uttermost twelve thousand of their Company dead be- corners of the Land, and hide himself in Luhind them. I cannot but wonder how these litania. Yet it followes, that the Ileretes Lacetani, that are faid to be the first which did again rebel; that Asdrubal hereupon embraced the friendship of scipio, should, came over Iberus; and that Scipio (though without any cause remembred, become Car- having easily vanquished the Hergetes) thaginian on the sudden, in the next news went not forth to meet him, but stirred up that we hear of them. As also it is strange, against him the Celliberians, that lately that all the Sea-coast Northward of Iberus, were become his subjects, and had given having lately become voluntarily ditionis him Hostages. These took from the Cartha-Romane, subject unto Rome, should, in continu- ginians three Towns, and vanquished him ance of the Story, after a few lines, hold war in two battels; wherein they flew fifteen against Scipio, without any relistance of the thousand of his men, and took four thou-Carthaginians. Neither can I believe, that fand prisoners. Then arrived P. Scipio, with Aldrubal, as it were by a charm, stirred up the supply before mentioned: and hencethe Hergetes, making them lay slide all care forward the two Brethren joyntly adminiof their Hostages, and take Arms in his quar- stred the business in Spain. rel; whilst himself had not the daring to The Carthaginians being occupied in the stand against scipio, but ran away, and sa- Celtiberian War; the two Scipio's did hand ved himself beyond therus. Philinas per-cunstanter, without both fear or doubt, pals haps, or some Carthaginian Writer, would over therus, and besieged Saguntum. Little have told it thus: That scipio adventuring cause of doubt had they, if Cn. had already too far into the Country, was beaten by Subdued many Nations beyond it; and, As drubal back to his ships, whence he durst among many other, the same Celtiberians, not stir until Winter came on: at what that with their proper forces were able to time the Carthaginian returned into the vanquish Asdrubal. Bostar, the Governor of heart of his Province, leaving some few Saguntum, a simple man, suffered himself to Garrisons to desend those places, that after be perswaded by one Acedux a Spaniard, scipio won, by returning upon them, un that the only way to get the favour and looked for through a deep Snow. As for the hearty good will of the Country, was by Lacetani, Ilergetes, and the rest, we may freely restoring unto them their Hostages; reasonably think, that they sought their own as resting without any pledge, assured of benefit; helping themselves one while by their faith. But the crafty Spaniard, being the Romans against the Carthaginians; and trusted with this message and restitution of contrariwife, upon sense of injuries received, the Hostages, carried them all to the Roman or apprehension of more grievous tyranoy, General; perswaded them, as he had done under which they seared to be brought by Bostar, to make the Liberality their own. these new Masters , hearkning again unto Hereby the Romans purchased much love, if

if the tale were true; and if it were not ra- | and Sea, is sent to take the charge of Spain.

bren chidden the last year for their neg-Aldrubal is fain to make a journey to them. Himilco, with such forces as are thought ed his own safety? They find him, and Mago expedient for that service, both by Land and Amilear the Son of Bomilear, with an

ther true, as afterward, and ere this we find | Wherefore Asdrubal hath now no more to that all the spanish Hostages were left in do, than to furnish himself with store of monew Carthage. I am weary of rehearing to ny, that he might have wherewithal to win many particularities, whereof I can believe fo the friendship of the Gauls; through whose few. But fince we find no better certain- Countries he must pass, as Hannibal had ties, we must content our selves with these. done before him. The Carthaginians were The year following was like unto this: greatly to blame, for not remembring to eafe Afdrebal must be beaten again. The two him of his care. But fince it can be no bet-Scipio's divide their forces: Cn. makes war ter, he layes great Impositions upon all the by Land, P. by Sea. Afdrubal, with much Spaniards his Subjects : and having gotten labour and entreaty, hath gotten four thou- together as much treasure as he could, onfand foot, and five hundred horse out of ward he marcheth toward therms. The sci-Africk: He repairs his Fleet, and provides pio's hearing these news, are careful how to every way to make refistance. But all his arrest him on the way. They besiege Ibera chief Sea-men, and Masters of his Ships, re- (so called of the Rivers name running by it) volt unto the Romans; because they had the richest Town in all those quarters, that was confederate with Aldrubal; who thereligence, which had betrayed the Navy, The upon steps aside to relieve it. The Romans revolt of these ship-masters animates to re- meet him, and fight a battel with him; bellion the Carpetians, or Carpetani, an In- which they win the more easily, for that the land people about Toledo, in the very Center | Spaniards, his followers had rather be vanof spain. These do much mischief, so that quished at home , than get the victory, and afterwards be haled into Ita y. Great num-His sudden coming cuts off some of them, bers are slain; and few should have escaped. that were found scattered abroad in the but that the Spaniards ran away ere the fields. But they, making a head, so valiantly battels were fully joyned. Their Camp the affail him, that they drive him for very fear, Romans take and spoil; whereby (questionto encamp himselfstrongly on an high piece | less ) they are marvellously enriched; all the of ground; whence he dares not come forth | mony that could be raked together in Spain to give them battel. So they take a Town being carried along in this Italian Expediby force, wherein he had laid up all his pro- tion. This dayes event joyns all spain to visions; and shortly make themselves Ma- the Romans, if any part of the Country fters of the Country round about. This good stood in doubt before; and puts Astrubal so fince(s) breeds negligence; for which they far from all thought of travelling into tral), dearly pay. Afarabal comes upon them, that it leaves him small hope of keeping himtakes them unprepared, beats them, kills (elf safe in spain. Of these exploits advertisethe most of them, and disperseth the rest; so ment is sent to Rome, and Letters to the Sethat the whole Nation yieldeth to him the nate, from P. and Cn. Scipio, whereof the Liv. Hib. 22. next day. Then come directions from Car- Contents are, That they have neither mony, thage, that Asarbal should lead his Army apparel, nor bread, wherewith to sustain forth into Italy; which we may wonder why their Army and Fleet; that all is wanting: the Carthaginians would appoint him to do, fo as unless they may be supplied from Rome. if they had been informed by his letters in they can neither hold their forces together. what hard case he was; and had so weakly nor tarry any longer in the Province. These supplyed him, as is shewed before. But thus Letters come to Rome in an evil season; the we find it reported; and that upon the ve- State being scarcely able, after the loss at ry rumour of this his journey, almost all canna, to help it self at home. Yet relief is Spain was ready to fall to the Romans. Af- fent; how hardly, and how much to the drubal therefore presently sends word to Car- commendations of that love and care, which thage, That this must not be so: or, if they the private Citizens of Rome bare unto the will needs have it fo, that then they must Common-wealth, shall be inserted elsewhere send him a successor, and well attended with into the relation of things, whereof the truth a strong Army, which to employ they should is less questionable. At the coming of this find work more than enough; such notable supply, the two Scipio's pursue Afdrubal, men were the Roman Generals. But the Se- and hunt him out of his lurking holes. What nate of Carthage is not much moved with else can we think, that remember the last this excuse; As drubal must needs be gone: news of him, and how fearfully he mistrust-

Unuuu 2

Allitures: ( which the learned Ortelius, and place with victuals, being ftrong and defenothers probably conjecture to have stood, fible; as intending to make it his seat for a where Carinnena is now in the Kingdom of while. But the Country round about it is too Aragon; for there was Illiturgis, afterwards full of Enemies: the Carthaginian horse have called Forum Julii, quite another way) a charged the Romans in their march, and are Town of the Illergetes their nearest Neigh- gone off clear; falling also upon some stragbours, for having revolted unto the Ro-lers, or fuch as lagged behind their fellows fed; but most of all, for want of victu- of them. Hereupon it is thought behoveful. als. The Romans therefore break through to retire unto some place more affured. So between the Enemies Camps, with terrible Publius withdraws himself unto Mons visioflaughter of all that resisted them: and have-ria: that rising somewhat Eastward from ing victualled the place, incourage Towns- Incibili, overlooketh the Southern Out-let men to defend their walls as floutly, as they of Iberus. Thither the Carthaginians purfue should anon behold them fighting manfully him: His brother Gn. repairs unto himsand with the besiegers, in their behalf. So they Assignabel the son of Gasco, with a full Army. iffue forth, about fixteen thouland against arrives to help his Companions. As they lie threescore thousand: and killing more of thus near incamped together, P. Scipio with the enemies, than themselves were in num-some light-armed, going closely to view the Li: Si 22. ber, drave all the three Carthaginian Com- places thereabouts, is discovered by the ene-

booty, fifty and eight Enfigns.

ten from Illiturgi, fall upon Incibili, that know not why) Castulo, a great City of Spain, ftood a little Southward from the mouth of whence Hannibal had taken him a wife, joyn-Iberus. The Spaniards are blamed, as too eth with the Romans; though being far greedy of earning money by war, for thus distant from them, and seated on the head of re-inforcing the broken Carthaginians. But the River Beis Nevertheless the Carthait may be wondred, whence the Carthagini- ginians pass over Iberus, to befiege Illiturgi ans had money to pay them: fince Afarthal again, wherein lodgeth a Roman garrifon; was lately driven to poll the Country, wanting money of his own; and being beaten ly wonder, what should move them to negin his journey, had lost his wealthy carriages left the rebellion of Castulo, yea and the Rowhen his Camp was taken after the battel man Army lying fo close by them, and to feek by Iberus. Howfoever it happens, the Car-thaginians (according to their cuftom) are wherein they had been fo grievously beaten beaten again at Incibili : where there were the year before. Butthither they go: and of them above thirteen thousand slain, and thither follows them Cn. Scipio with one ter this, (in a manner) all the people of spain in two battels kills above twelve thousand, fell from them unto the Romans. Thus and takes more than a thousand of them priwere not aware.

Army of threefcore thou fand men, befieging Publius Scipio incampeth: and ftores the The Town is greatly diffref- in march, they have cut off two thousand manders, every one out of his quarter; and mies: who are like to take him, butthat took that day, besides prisoners and other he withdraws himself to an high piece of ground; where they befiege him, until his The Carthaginian Army, being thus bea- brother Cn. fercht him off. After this (but] above three thousand taken; besides two Legion: who enters the Town by sorce, and forty Ensigns, and nine Elephants. Af- breaks out upon them the next day, and could Fabins, Valerius, Antius, or fome foners, with fix and thirty Enfigns. This viother Historian, to whom Livy gave credit, Ctory (doubtless ) is remarkable : consiconquer all spain twice in one year, by dering that the greatest Roman Legion at winning famous victories; whereof these this time, consisted of no more than five good Captains, P. and Cn. Scipio, perhaps thousand men. The vanquished Carthaginians besiege Bigarra: but that siege is also The Romans notwithstanding this large raised by Cn. Scipio. Thence the Carthaginiaccess of Dominion, winter on their own ans remove to Manda; where the Romans fide of Iberus. In the beginning of the are soon at their heels. There is a greatbatnext year, great Armies of the Spaniards tel fought, that lasted four hours, wherein rise against Asdrubal; and are overthrown the Romans get a notable victory: and a by him. P. Scipio, to help these his friends, is more notable would have gotten, had not forced to make great haste over the River. Cn. Scipio been wounded. Thirty nine Ele-At Castrum Allum, a place in the mid-way phants are killed, and twelve thousand mens between new Carthage and Saguntum, fa-three thousand prisoners taken, and seven mous by the death of the great Amilear, and fifty Enfigns. The Carthaginians flie to up the broken troops of Afdrubal, who havtheir honour; and wherein we may be af- follows, to call every messenger, or stragdisturbed them if they had been able.

But overlooking now this long continu-

Auringes; and the Romans pursuethem. Cn. stook Sagantum (if they took it not by fur-Scipio in a Litter is carried into the field, and prize; which is to be suspected, fince in this vanquished the Carthaginians again; but Action we find no particulars remembred. kils not half so many of them, as before; as when the same place was taken by Hangood cause why, for there are fewer of them nibal) they had gotten the better of their left to fight. Notwithstanding all these over- Enemies in some notable fight. In like fort throws, the Spaniards, a people framed even also must we think, that all those battels by nature to fet war on foot, quickly fill lately remembred, after every one of which Asdrubal sate down before some place, that ing also hired some of the Gauls, adventures had rebelled, or seemed ready to rebel, were once more to try his fortune with the Ro- prosperous unto the Carthaginians. For it mans. But he is beaten again: and loseth is not the custome of Armies vanquished to eight thousand of his men besides Prisoners, carry to war from Town to Town, and Flephants, Enfigns, and other appurte beleaguer Cities of their Enemies; but to nances. After fo many victories, the Romans fortifie themselves within their own places are even ashamed to leave Saguntum en- of strength, and therein to attend the levy thralled unto the Carthaginians; fince, in and arrival of new supplies. And surely, behalf of that City, they had at first entred if the Romans had been absolute Masters into this war. And well may we think it of the field, when they won Saguntum. strange, that they had not recovered it long they would not have consumed a whole before, fince we may remember, that long year following, in practifing only with the before this they had won all the Country | Celtiberians the next adjoyning people. Yet once and again. But it must not be forgot- made they this, little less than two years ten, that they had ere now befieged Sagun- business. Of these Celtiberians we hear betum; and were fain (as appears) togo their fore, That they had yielded up themselves way without it: To as they need not to blush, lunto the Romans; for security of their faith, for having to long forborn to do that which given Hostages to Scipio; and, at his appointere now they had attempted, but were un-ment, made war against the Carthaginians, able to perform. At the present they won with their proper forces. Wherefore it is Saguntum: and restored the possession strange, that they are now thus hardly thereof unto such of the poor dispersed wrought; and not without express condi-Citizens as they can find out. They also tion of a great summ, hired to serve in the waste and destroy the Country of the Tur- Roman Camp. How this may hold together I detani. that had ministred unto Hannibal cannot perceive sunless perhaps in those days matter of quarrel against the Saguntines. it were the Roman custome, or rather the This last action (questionless) was much to custome of some bad Author whom Livy fured , that the Carthaginians would have ler, that entred that camp, an Hostage of that people from whom he came.

The Celtiberians at length, hired with ance of great victories, which the Romans great rewards, fend an Army of thirty thouhave gotten in Spain, other print or token fand to help the Romans: out of which, of all their brave exploits, we can perceive 3000. of the fittest men are chosen, and none, than this recovery of Saguntum: ex- carried into Italy, there to deal with their cepting the stopping of Astrabals journey; Country-men that follow Hannibal in his which was indeed of greatest importance, wars. But if any of these three hundred but appertaining to their own defence. For return back into Spain, it is to be feared, they have landed at Emporie, an Haven that he brings with him fuch news of the Town, built and peopled by a Colony of riches and wellfare of Hannibals men, that all the Phoceans, kin to the Massilians, friends his fellows at home are the less unwilling to the Romans; They have easily won to to follow Asdrubal, when he shall next have their party, lost, recovered, and lost again, a defire to lead them into Italy. Hereof we some petty bordering Nations of the spa- find more than probability, when these niards, that are carried one while by per- mercenary Celtiberians meet the Carthaginiswasion,other-whiles by force, and sometimes an Army in the field. The two Scipio's preby their own unfetled passions; and now suming on this access of strength, divide finally they have won a Town, whereof the their forces, and feek out the Enemies, who Carthaginians held entire possession, who lie not far off with three Armies. Astrubal had rooted out the old inhabitants. Where- the fon of Amilear, is nearest at hand; fore we may eafily believe, that when they even among the Celtiberians, at Anitorgis.

CHAP. III.

With him Cn. scipio doubts not to take | should have had for hazarding their lives. good order: but the fear is, that this one C. scipio therefore being unable to stay them. part of the Carthaginian forces being de- and no less unable, without their help eiitroved; Mago the Son of Gefco, hearing the ther to refift the enemy, or to joyn with his news, will make use of their distance, which Brother, maketh a very violent retrair: is five dayes march, and by running into herein only differing from plain flight, that the furthest part of the Country save them- he keeps his men together. Asdrubal presfelves from being overtaken. Publius there- feth hard upon him: and Mage, with Afdrafore must make the more halte, and take bal the Son of Gesco, having made an end with him the better Souldiers, that is, two of Publim, haften to dispatcht his Brother afparts of the old Roman Army, leaving the ter him. Scipio steals from them all by night, third part, and all the Celtiberians, to his but is overtaken the next day by their horse. Brother. He that hath the longer journey to and arrested, in an open place of hard stomake, comes somewhat the sooner to his ny ground, where grows not so much as a lives end. Mago and Afdrubal, the Son of thrub, unfit for defence of his Legions Gesco, are not studying how to run away: against such enemies. Yet a little Hill he they find no such necessity. They joyn their finds of easie ascent on every side; which forces together, meet with Publius Scipio, and he takes for want of a more commodious lay at him so hardly, that he is driven to place, and fortifies with pack-faddles, and keep himself close within his Trenches; other luggage, for default of a better Palwherein be thinks himself not will assured. lisado. These weak defences the Carthagi-Especially he is vexed by Majanisla, Prince vians soon tear in sunder; and, breaking in of the Majfafjli, Numidian, bordering up- on all hands, leave very few of themalive; on Mauritania, in the Region called now that faving themselves, I know not how, Tremizen: to whom the chief honour of within some woods adjoyning, escape unto this service is ascribed, for that he becomes T. Fonteins, whom Publius had left in his afterward Confederate with the Romans. In Camp, as is before faid. It is a terrible overthis dangerous case, P. Scipio gets intellithrow, they say, out of which no man escapes. with Indibil's upon the way, leaving T. Fonwhich way to turn, yet fighting and animating his men, where need most requireth, is like end hath Cn. Scipio within nine and

gence, that Indibilis a Spanish Prince, is com- Yet, how they who were thus hemmed in on ing with seven thousand and five hundred every side, in so bare a ground as afforded of the Sueffetani, to joyn with his Enemies. not a shrub to cover them, could break out, Fearing therefore to be strait shut up, and and shrowd themselves within woods adbelieged, he issues forth by night, to meet joyning, I should much wonder; did not a greater miracle following call away mine teius his Lieutenant, with a small company attention. T. Fonteius is in P. Scipio's Camp,on to defend the Camp. He meets with Indibi- the North fide of Iberus, fearful (as may be lis; but is not able, according to his hope, to supposed) of his own life; since his General, defeat him at the first incounter. The fight with two parts of the Roman Army, had continues fo long, that the Numidian horse little hope to remain long safe within it. Thiappear (whom he thought to have been ig- ther comes L. Martins, a young Roman norant of his departure) and fall upon the Gentleman of a noble Spirit; who having Romans on all fides: neither are the Car- gathered together the scattered Souldiers, thaginians far behind; but come so fast up and drawn some Companies out of their Garon him in a Rear, that P. Scipio, uncertain rifons, makes a pretty Army. The Souldiers, being to chuse a General by most voices, preterr this L. Martius before Fonteim struck thorow with a lance, and slain : very the Lieutenant, as well they may. For few of his Army escaping the same destiny, Astrubal the Son of Gesco, coming upon through benefit of the dark night. The them; this L. Martins fo encourageth his men (fondly weeping when he led them twenty dayes after. At his meeting with 4j- forth, upon remembrance of their more hodrubal, the Celtiberian Mercenaries all for- nourable Generals lately flain ) and admofake him, pretending that they had war in nisheth them of their present necessity, that their own Country. If Anitorgis, where Af- he beats the Carthaginians into their drubal then lay, were, as Ortelius following Trenches. A notable victory perhaps he Bucterus takes it, a Celtiberian Town; this might have gotten but that he wisely founds was no vain pretence, but an apparent truth. the retrait; referving the fury of his Soul-But we may justly believe, that they were diers to a greater occasion. The Carthaginiwon by Afdrubal, and eafily perswaded to ans are at first amazed, and wonder whence take as much mony for not fighting, as they this new boldness grows, in enemies lately vanquished, and now again little betterthan rately concludeth, That this Captain Martaken : but when they fee, that the Roman tins got a great name, which he might lares not follow his advantage, they return well do, it with fo fmall forces, and in fuch their former security; and, utterly de- distress, he could clearly get off from the pling him, fet neither Corps de garde nor Enemies, and give them any parting blow. Sentinel, but rest secure, as if no enemy were though it were far less than that which is Martius therefore animates his Soul- here fet down. Of these occurrents L. Martius sent word diers with lively words; and tells them, That there is no adventure more fafe, than to Rome, not forgetting his own good ferthat which is furthest from suspicion of being undertaken. They are soon perswaded such wife, as the Senate might judge him to follow him, in any desperate piece of ser- worthy to hold the place of their Vice-So he leads him forth by night, and gerent in Spain : which the better to inti-

vice, whatfoever it was, but fetting it out in fteals upon the Camp of Afdrubal; where, mate unto them, he stilled himself Propretor. finding no guard, but the enemies fait The Fathers were no less moved with the tvafleep, or very drowsie, he enters without dings than the case required; and therefore refistance, fires their Cabbins, and gives took such careful order, for supplying their a terrible alarm; fo that all affrighted the forces in Spain, that although Hannibal came Carthaginians run head-long one upon ano- to the gates of Rome, ere the Companies ther, they know not which way. All paf- levied to ferve that Province, could be fages out of their Camp, Martius hath pre- fent away; yet could they not stay a tyde polleslied, so that there is no way to escape, for defence of the City it self, but shipped lave by leaping down the Rampart; which them in all hafte for Spain. As for the title of as many do, as can think upon it, and run Propretor, which Martins had affumed they away toward the Camp of Afdrabal the Son thought it too great for him, and were offended at his presumption in usurping it: of Amilear, that lay fix miles off. But Martins hath way-laid them. In a Valley be- foreseeing well, that it was matter of ill tween their two Camps he hath bestowed a consequence, to have the Souldiers abroad Roman cohort, and I know not what num- make choice among themselves, of those that ber of Horse; so that into this Ambush they should command Armies and Provinces. Therefore Claudius Nero was dispatched fall every one, and are cut in pieces. But, left perchance any should have escaped, and away with all convenient haste, into Spain: give the alarm before his coming; Martins canzying with him about fix thousand of hastensto be there as soon as they. By which the Roman foot, and as many of the Latiner, diligent speed, he comes early in the with three hundred Roman horse, and of the Latines eight hundred.

morning upon this further Camp; which It happened well that about these times, with no great difficulty he enters, and partly by apprehension of danger which the the affairs of Rome began to prosper in Italy, Enemies conceived, when they beheld the and offered means of fending abroad such Roman shields, foul, and bloodied with a strong supply: otherwise the victories of their former execution, he drives headlong into flight, all that can fave themselves footing in Spain, or to stop the Carthaginifrom the fury of the sword. Thirty seven an Armies from marching towards the Alps. thousand of the enemies perish in this nights For when Claudius, landing with his new work; besides a thousand eight hundred forces, took charge of that remainder of and thirty, taken prisoners. Hereunto Vale- the Army, which was under Martius and ring Antino adds , that the Camp of Mago Fonteins ; he found furer tokens of the overwas also taken, and seven thousand slain; throws received, than of those miraculous and that in another battel with Afdrubal, victories, whereof Martins had made his there were flain ten thousand more; besides vaunts unto the Senate. The Roman party four thousand three hundred and thirty ta- was forsaken by most of the Spanish friends; ken prisoners. Such is the power of some whom how to reclaim, it could not easily Historians. Livie therefore hath elsewhere be devised. Yet Claudius advanced boldly well observed, That there is none so intem towards Asdrubal the Brother of Hannibal; Perate, as Valerius Antius, in multiplying whom he found among the Aufetani, near the numbers that have fallen in battels, enough at hand, incamped in a place called That, whilft Martins was making an Oration Lapides atri; out of which there was no iffue, to his Souldiers, a stame of fire shone about but only through a strait, whereon the Rohis head, Livie reports as a common tale, man seized at the first coming. What should not giving thereto any credit: and tempe- have tempted any man of understanding to incamp in fuch a place, I do not find : and | much of the great Alexanders vanity; how as little reason can I find in that which fol- he used to walk alone in the Capitol, as one lowed. For it is faid, that Afdrubal feeing that had some secret conference with Jupihimself thus lockt up, made offer to depart ver; how a Dragon (which must have been forthwith out of all Spain, and quit the Pro-one of the gods; and, in likelihood, Jupiter vince to the Romans, upon condition that That he spent many dayes, in entertaining and anothing away at the commerce of any parley with Claudius about his business; and bow of these matters he nourse. That night by night he conveyed his tootmen (a few at a time) through very diffi-them no better than fables, devided by Hicult passages, out of the danger; and that storians, who thought thereby to add unto finally taking advantage of a mifty day, he the glory of Rome: that this Noble City ftole away with all his Horse and Elephants, might seem not only to have surpassed other leaving his Camp empty. If we confider, that Nations in vertue of the generality, but also there were at the lame time, besides this of in great worth of one single man. To this end nothing is lest out, that might serve Spain; we shall find no less cause to wonder to adorn this Roman Champion. For it is at the simplicity of Claudius, who hoped to considently written, as matter of unqueconclude a bargain for fo great a Country, stionable truth, That when a Proconful was with one of these three Chieftains, than at to be chosen for Spain, there durst not any the strange nature of those passages, through Captain of the principal Citizens offer himwhich the footmen could hardly creep out felf as Petitioner for that honourable, but by night; the Horse and Elephants easily dangerous charge; That the people of Rome following them in a dark milty day. Where- were much altonished thereat; That when fore in giving belief to such a tale, it is need- the day of Election came, all the Princes of ful that we suppose, both the danger where- the City stood looking one another in the in the Carthaginians were, and the condiface, not one of them having the heart to tions offered for their safe departure, to adventure himself in such a desperate serhave been of far less vallue. Howfoever it vice; and finally, that this P. Cornelius Sciwas; neither this, nor ought else that the pio, being then about four and twenty years Romans could do, served to purchase any of age, getting up on a high place where new friends in spain, or to recover the old he might be feen of all the multitude, rewhich they had loft. Like enough it is, that quested and obtained, that the office might the old Souldiers, which had chosen Mar- be conferred upon him. If this were true, tim their Propretor, took it not well, that then were all the victories of L. Martin no the Senate, regardless of their good deserts, better than dreams: and either very unrea had repealed their election, and fent a Pro- tonable was the fear of all the Roman Cappretor whom they fancied not so well. Some tains, who durst not follow Claudius Nero, fuch occasion may have moved them to de that not long before was gone into Spain fire a Proconful, and (perhaps) young Scipio Propretor; or very bad intelligence they by name: as if a title of greater dignity were had out of the Province, which Afdrubal needful to work regard in the Barbarians; the Carthaginian, as we heard even now, and the beloved memory of Cn. and Publim. was ready to abandon. But upon these incolikely to do good, were it revived in one herences, which I find in the two partial Roof the same family. Whether upon these or upon other reasons; C. Claudius was recalled out of the Province; and Publius the Son of P. Scipio fent proconful into Spain.

This is that Scipio, who afterward tranfferred the war into Africk: where he happily ended it, to the great honour and benefit lies, with these they landed at Emporia; and of his Country. He was a man of goodly marched from thence to Tarracon alongst presence, and singularly well conditioned; the Sea-coast. At the same of Scipio's arrival, especially he excelled in Temperance, Contilit is said, that Embassages came to him apace nency, Bounty, and other vertues that pur- from all quarters of the Province; which chate love; of which qualities what great use he entertained with such a Majesty, as bred he made, shall appear in the tenour of his a wonderful opinion of him. As for the actions following. As for those things that enemies, they were greatly afraid of him;

man Historians, I do not willingly insist.

P. Scipio was fent Proconful into Spain; and with him was joyned M. Junius Syllanus, as Propretor, and his Coadjutor. They carried with them ten thousand foot, and a thousand horse, in thirty Quinquereme-Galare reported of him, savouring a little too and so much the greater was their fear, by how much the less they could give any real to so great a benefit. Hereupon a Prince of Come think, all the next Year ) he did nothing: but spent the time perhaps, as his foregoers had done, intreating with the Spaniards. His first enterprise was against new Carthage: upon which he came unexpected. with five and twenty thousand foot, and and gave free entrance to the Roman Army. mood, and bring him to a more convenient What booty was found within the Town, temper. Livie himself cannot certainly affirm; but is fon of it. If we must believe this, then must the Celtiberians, and two petty Kings of the we needs believe, that their fear was even as Ilergetes and Lucetani, nearest Neighbours great as could be: for very little cause there to Turracon, and dwelling on the North-side was, to be terrified with the fame of fo of therm, fortook the Carthaginian party, voung a man, which had as yet performed and joyned with the Romans. The speech nothing. All the Winter following (or, as of Indibilis, King of the Ilergetes, is much commended; for that he did not vaunt himself, as commonly Fugitives use, of the pleasure, which he did unto the Romans, in revolting from their enemies ; but rather excused this his changing side, as being thereto compelled by injuries of the Carthaginians. two thousand five hundred horse; his Sea- and invited by the honourable dealing of forces coasting him, and moderating their scipio. This temperate estimation of his new course in such wife, that they arrived there professed friendship, was indeed no unsure together with him He affailed the Town by token, that it should be long-lasting. But if Land and Sea; and won it by affault the the Ilergetes had long ere this (as we have first day. The Carthaginians lost it, by their heard before) for saken the Carthaginian partoo much confidence upon the strength of ty, and stoutly held themselves as friends to it: which caused them to man it more slen- Cn. Scipio: then could nothing have been dederly, than was requisite. Yet it might have vised more valu, than this Oration of Indibibeen well enough defended, if some Fisher / is their King, excusing, as new, his taking men of Tarracon had not discovered unto part with the same, when he should have rascipio, a fecret passage unto the walls; where- ther craved pardon for his breach of alliofthe Townsmen themselves were either ig- ance, formerly contracted with the Father norant, or thought (at least ) that their ene- and the Uncle. Most likely therefore it is, mies could have no notice. This City of new that how foever the two elder Scipio's had Carthage, resembled the old and great Car- gotten some few places among these their thage in fituation; standing upon a demy Neighbours, and held them by strength; yet Island, between an Haven and a great Lake were the Romans never masters of the All the Western side of the walls, and some - Country, till this worthy Commander, by what of the North, was fenced with this recovering their Hostages from the Cartha-Lake: which the Fisher-men of Tarracon had ginians, and by his great munificence in founded; and finding some part thereof a sending them home, won unto himself the shelf, whereon at low-water men might pass affured love and affistance of these Princes. knee-deep,or (at most ) wading up to the The Carthaginian Generals, when they Navil, Scipio thrust thereinto some compa- heard of this loss, were very forry : yet nenies of his men; who recovered the top of vertheless they set agood face on the matthe walls without refistance: the place be- ter; saying, that a young man, having stoln ing left without guard; as able to defend it a Town by surprise, was too far transported, felf by the natural strength. These falling and over-joyed, but that shortly they would suddenly upon the backs of the Carthagini- meet with him, and put him in mind of his ans within the City, easily forced a gate, Father and Uncle; which would alter his

Now if I should here interpose mine own fain to say, that some Roman Historians told conjecture; I should be bold to say, that the lies without measure, in way of amplificati- | Carthaginians were at this time busie, in set-By that small proportion of riches, ling forth towards Italy; and that Scipio, to which was afterward carried by Seipio into divert them, undertook new Carthage, as his the Roman Treasury, we may easily perceive Father and Uncle, upon the like occasion, how great a vanity it was to fay, that all fate down before Ibera. And in this respect the wealth of Africk and Spain was heaped I would suppose, that it had not been much up in that one Town. But therein were be- amissif the passage over the Lake had been flowed all the Spanish Hostages (or at least undiscovered, and the Town held out some of the adjoyning Provinces ) whom scipie longer while. For howfoever that partiintreated with fingular courtefie: reftoring cular Action was the more fortunate, in them unto their kindred and friends, in such coming to such good issue upon the sirst gracious manner, as doubled the thanks due day: yet in the generality of the business, between

purpose, and to do what else was needful,

be wished, that Asarubal should be stayed finally to have concluded, that go he needs from going into Italy, than that half of spain must, were it but to carry all the Spaniards should be taken from him. Whereas there- as far as might be, from the name of Scipio. fore he had nothing left to do, that should How likely this was to have been true, it hinder his journey; Mago, and Asdrubal shall appear at his coming into Italy; whence the fon of Gelco, were thought sufficient to these incoherent relations of the Spanish hold scipio work, in that lingring War of affairs have too long detained us. taking and retaking Towns, whilst the main of the Carthaginian forces, under Asdrubal the fon of Amilear, went to a greater enterprife : even to fight in tryal of the Empire. But the Roman Historians tell this after another fashion; and say, That Asdrubal was bearen into Italy : whither he ran for fear, as thinking himfelf ill affured of the Spaniards, as long as they might but hear the name of Scipio. Scipio, lay they, coming upon Asdrubal; his Vant-currers charged so luftily the Carthaginian horse, that they drave them into their Trenches: and made it apparent, even by that small piece of fervice, how full of fpirit the Romans Army was, and how dejected the Enemy. Asdrubal therefore by night retired out of that even ground, and occupied an Hill, compassed on rejoyced (as may be thought) not a little, to three sides with the River, very steep of hear the good news from Carthage of such ascent, and not easie of access on the foreside; mighty aid, as was decreed to be sent thence by which himself got up, and was to be fol- unto him. In former times he had found lowed by the Romans. On the top of it there work enough, to carry the Romans corn inwasa Plain, whereon he strongly encamped to his own barns, and to drive away their himself: and in the mid-way, between the Cattle to Gerjon: his victories affording him top and root of the Hill, was also another little other profit than sustenance for his Ar-Plain; into which he descended, more up- my; by making him master of the open field. on bravery, that he might not feem to He might perhaps have forced some walled hide himself within the Trenches, than Towns in like fort as he did Gerjon, and the for that he durst adventure his Army to Castle of Canna: but had he spent much the hazzard of a battail, for which this time, about the getting of any one placewell vered even footing with him; drove him out grievously punished him for such imploy-Hill top: whither although the afcent were the reason, why he forbore to adventure up-between Rome and Carthage, it was more to consulted with him about this War; and

ø. XII.

The oreat troubles that Hannibal raised in all quarters, to the City of Rome. Posthumius the Roman General, with his whole Army, is flain by the Gauls. Philip King of Macedon enters into a League with Hannibal, against the Romans. The Romans joyning with the Ætolians, make war upon Philip in Greece : and afterwards conclude a peace with him. the better to intend their busines against the Carthaginians.

WE left Hannibal wintering at Capua: where he and his new Confederates was no equal ground. But such advantage of defended; the hunger, that his Army must place could not fave him from the Romans. have endured the Winter and Spring fol-They climed up the Hill to him; they reco- lowing, untill corn were ripe, would have of this lower Plain, up into his Camp on the ment of the Summer. This may have been very difficult, and his Elephants bestowed on Rome, after his victory at Canna. For had in the smoothest places to hinder their approach; yet compassing about, and seeking ty) to carry the City at his first coming; paffage where it was hardest to be found; want of victuals would have compelled him but much more strongly breaking their to quit the enterprise. Yea many of the way, where the Carthaginians had got up people that opened fo halfily their gates before them, they drave both men and Ele- unto him, upon the fresh bruit of his glophants head-long, I know not whither: for it rious fuccess, would have taken time of deis faid, that there was no way to flye. Out of liberation, and waited perhaps the event fuch a battel, wherein he had lost eight thou- of another battel; if being, either for want fand men, Afdrubal is said to have escaped; of means to force the City, or of necessaand gathering together his dispersed troops, ries to continue a siege before it, repelled to have marched toward the Pyrenees, hav- (as might feem) from the walls of Rome, he ing sent away his Elephants ere the fight be- had presented himself unto them with a gan. Nevertheless, Mago, and Asarubal the lessened reputation, somewhat later in the fon of Gefco, are reported after this to have year; when time to force their obedience was wanting unless they would freely yield for Petilia, by force; after it had held out it. But this great part of the care and trave fome moneths. He won likewife Confentia, was past, when so many States of Italy were and Croton, that was torfaken by the Inhabecome his: the year following, the Sam pitants. Also the City of Locri, which was nites, and other old enemies of Rome, were of great importance, yielded unto him: like to receive a notable pleasure of their as did all other places thereabout; except new alliance with Carthage, by helping to only the Town of Rhegium, over against lay fiege unto that proud City, which fo sicil. long had held them in subjection. Thus the The great faith of the Petilians is worthy winter was passed over joy fully, saving that to be recorded, as a notable testimony of there came not any tidings of the prepara- the good government, under which the Rotions to fecond the welcome report of those man subjects lived. As for the samnites, Cammighty forces, that were decreed and ex- panes, and others, whose earnestness in repetted. The Spring grew on : and of the bellion may feem to prove the contrary; we promised supply there arrived no more, are to consider, That they had lately conthan only the Elephants. How late it was tended with Rome for Soveraignty, and were ere these came, I find not: only we find, now transported with ambition: which that after this he had above thirty of them; reason can hardly moderate, or benefits alwhereas all, fave one, that he brought over lay. The Petilians, in the very beginning of the Alps, had been lost in his journy through their danger, did send to Rome for help: the Marishes of Hetruria. Very bad excuse where their messengers received answer of this exceeding negligence, they that from the Senate, That the publick misforbrought the Elephants could make unto tunes had not left means, to relieve their Hannibal. If they were his friends, they told Aflociates that were fo far diftant. The Petihim truly what mischiefs the perswasion of lian Messengers (Embassadours they are Hanno wrought among the too niggardly termed; as were all others, publickly fent Carthaginians. Otherwife, they might per- from Cities of the Roman Subjection, that haps inform him, that it was thought a had a private jurifdiction within themfafer, though a farther way about, to pass selves) fell down to the ground, and humbly along through spain and Gaul, as he him befought the Fathers, not to give them felf had done; and increase the Army, by away; promising to do and suffer whatsoehyring the Barbarians in the journey; than ver was possible, in defence of their Town. to commit the main strength of their City, against the Carthaginians. Hereupon the Seto the hazzard of the Seas: especially want- nate fell to consultation again: and having ing a commodious Haven, to receive the throughly confidered all their forces re-Fleet that should carry such a number of maining plainly confessed, that it was not in Men, Horses, and Elephants, with all need-their power to give any relief. Wherefore ful provisions. With these allegations Hanni- these Embassadours were willed to return balmust rest content; and seek, as well as home, and to bid their Citizens provide hecan, to fatisfie his Italian Confederates hereafter for their own fafety, as having al-Therefore when time of the year ferved he ready discharged their saith to the utmost. took the field: and having finished what All this notwithstanding, the Petilians (as rested to be done at Casilinum, sought to was said ) held out some moneths; and having make himself Master of some good Haven- striven in vain to defend themselves, when town thereabout; that might ferve to enter- there was no apparent possibility gave to the tain the Carthaginian Fleet, or take from his Carthaginians a bloody victory over them; Enemies at home all excuse, which they being vanquished as much by famine, as by might precend by want thereof. To the same any violence of the Assailants.

The Romans at this time were indeed in he fent Himileo unto the Locrians, and Han- fuch ill case, that Hannibal with a little help no to the Lucans: not forgetting at once to from Carthage, might have reduced them affay all quarters of staly, yea, the Isles of si- unto terms of great extremity. For whereas cil and Sardinia, fince the fiege of Rome must in a great bravery, before their loss at Canneeds be deferred unto another year. Hanno | ne, they had shewed their high minds, by made an ill journey of it, being met, or over- entertaining the care of things far off, nottaken, by T. Sempronius Longus : who flew withstanding the great war that lay upon above two thouland of his men; with the them so near at hand: it now fell out miferloss of fewer than three hundred Romans. ably all at once, that their fortune abroad But Himilco sped far better. By help of the was no whit better than at home. L. Posthu-Erntians, his good friends, he won Petellia, mins Albinus their Prætor they had tent, into Gaul: to the Illyrian King Piness they enjoying leifure to look into the doings had fent for their tribute due, whereof the abroad, he sent Embassadours to Hannibal; pay-day was past; willing him, if he defired with whom he made a league, upon these forbearance, to deliver Holtages for his conditions; That the King in person should performance of what was due; and to Philip come into Italy, and with all his forces, by King of Mucedon they had fent, to require, Land and Sea, affift the Carthaginians in the that he should deliver up unto them Deme- Roman war, until it were finished; That trius Pharius their Subject and Rebel, whom Rome, and all Italy, together with all the he had received. But now from all quar-spoil therein to be gotten, should be left inters they hear tydings, little suitable to tire unto the State of Carthage; and that aftheir former glorious conceits. Posthumius terwards Hannibal, with his Army, should with all his Army was cut in pieces by the pass into Greece, and there affist Philip, until Gauls, in such fort, that scarce ten men esca he had subdued all his enemies ( which ped. The manner of his overthrow was very were the Etolians, Thracians, King Antiostrange. There was a great Wood, called by chus and others) leaving semblably unto the Gauls, Litana; thorow which he was to him the full possession of that Country, and país. Against his coming, the Enemies had the Isles adjoyning. But such predisposition fawed the trees so far, that a little force of Kingdoms and Provinces, is lightly would serve to cast them down. When there- controlled by the divine providence, which fore Posthumius, with his whole Army, was therein shews it felf; not (as Herodotus falfentred into this dangerous passage, the ly terms it, and like an Atheist) enviousor Gauls that lay about the Wood, began to malicious, but very just and Majestical in cast down the trees; which falling one upholding that unspeakable greatness of against another, bore all downso fast, that Soveraignty, by which It rules the whole the Romans were overwhelmed, Men and World, and all that therein is. Horses; in such wife, that no more escaped, than is faid before. How this tedious work fell into the Romans hands, in their journey of fawing so many trees, could take defired towards Hannibal: and being examined effect, and neither be perceived, nor made what they were, adventured upon a bold frustrate, either by some wind that might have blown all down before the Romans King of Macedon to Rome, there to make a entred, or by some other of those many ac- League with the Senate and people, and ofcidents, whereto the device was subject; I do fer his help in this time of great necessity. not well conceive. Yet some such thing may These news were so welcome, that the joy have been done, and what failed in the thereof took away all care of making better stratagem, supplied with the Enemies sword. inquiry. So they were lovingly feasted, and It is not perhaps worthy to be omitted, as freely dismissed with guides that should a monument of the favage condition, where-lead them the way, and shew them how to with Lombardie, a Country now so civil, avoid the Carthaginians. But they being thus was infected in elder times, that of Posthu- instructed concerning their journey, fell mius his skull, being cleansed and trimmed wilfully into the Camp of Hannibal; who up with gold, a drinking cup was made, and entertained them after a better fashion, and consecrated in their principal Temple, as an concluded the business about which they holy veffel for the use of the Priest in their came, upon the points before remembered folemnities. Of this great overthrow, when In their return homeward, they happened word was brought to Rome, the amazement again unluckily to be deferred by the Rowas no less than the calamity. But forrow man Fleet; which mistrusting them to be of

XXXXX 2

902

with an Army of five and twenty thousand, | For having affured his affairs in Greece, and

The first Embassadours that Philip sent, could give no remedy to the mischief: and the Carthaginian party, gave them chace. anger was vain, where there wanted forces They did their best to have escaped: but to revenge. Tribute from the Illyrians there being overtaken, they suffered the Romans came none; neither do I find that any was to come aboord; and trusting to the lye that a second time demanded; this we find, that once had served them, said it again, That have with Pleuratus, and Scerdiletus, Illyrian ing been sent from King Philip to make a Kings as also with Gentius, who raigned league with the people of Rome, they were within a few years following, the Romans not able by reason of the Carthaginians lydealt upon even terms; entreating their af- ing between, to get any further than to fiftance against Philip and Perseus; not com- M. Valerius the Prætor, unto whom they had manding their duty, as Vassals. The Macedonian troubled them yet a little further. Master. The tale was now less credible than before: and which marred all ) Gesco, Bostar, with so great slaughter, that they forced only with fome loss of time.

and Mago, with their followers, Carthagi- him to fortake his Camp, and raise the fiege. nians that were fent with them from Hanni- The King purposed (as it is said) to have debalto ratifie the agreement, being prefently parted thence by Sea: but Valerius, coming detected, made the matter apparent. Where- with his Fleet from Oricum, stopped up the fore a little inquisition served to find all mouth of the River, so that he was fain to out: fo that at length Hannibals own let- burn his ships (which belike were no betters to King Philip were delivered up, and the ter than long boats) and depart ill furnished whole business confected. The Embassadours of carriages by Land. After this Valerius and their followers were fent close prisoners dealt with the Etolians, a Nation alwaies to Rome; where the chief of them were cast enemy to the Crown of Macedon; and easily into prison, and the rest sold for bond-perswaded them (being so affected, as hath flaves. Yet one of their ships that escaped, else-where been shewed ) to make strong carried word into Macedon of all that had war on Philip; wherein he promifed them happened. Whereupon new Embassage was great affistance from the Romans. That fent, that went aud returned with better which most moved the troublesome spirits of freed; concluding, as was agreed before, the Ætolians, was the hope of getting Acarnania; after which they had gaped long, and The Romans were exceedingly perplexed; whereof the Roman was as liberal in making thinking with what heavy weight this Mace- promise, as if already it had been his own. donian war, in an evil hour, was likely to So a league was made between them; and fall upon them, when their shoulders were afterward solemnly published at Olympia, over-burdened with the load of the Cartha- by the Etolians, and by the Romans in their vinian. Yet they took a noble resolution, Capital. The conditions were, that from and suitable unto that, whereby they kept | Etolia to Corcyra, in which space Acarnania off the storm, that else would have beaten was contained, all the Country should be upon them from Spain. They judged it more subdued, and left unto the Liolians, the easie with small force to detain Philip in pillage only to be given to the Romans. And Greece, than with all their strength to refist that if the Ætolians made peace with Phihimin Italy. And herein they were in the lip, it should be with Provision, to hold no right For that the very reputation of a King longer than whilft he abstained from doing of Macedon, joyning with Hannibal in fuch injury to the Romans, or their Affociates. a time, would have sufficed to shake the al- This was indeed the only point whereat Valegiance, not only of the Latines, and other, lerius aimed, who promised as much on the their most faithful Subjects, but even of the Romans behalf, That they should not make Roman Colonies, that held all priviledges peace with the Macedonian, unlessit were of the City, it will appear by the following with like condition of including the Etosuccess of things. M. Valerius the Prætor, lians. Into this league was place reserved for with twenty Quinquereme Gallies, was ap- the Lacedemonians and Eleans, as to those pointed to attend upon the Macedonian, and that had made or favoured the fide of Cleoto fet on foot some commotion in Greece; or menes against the Macedonian, to enter at to nourish the troubles already therein be-their pleasure. The like regard was had of gun. Philip was busie about the Sea Towns, Attalus, Pleuratus, and Scerdiletus: the first that looked towards Italy, fetting upon of which reigned at Pergamus in Alia the Apollonia; and thence falling upon Oricum, less, a Prince hereafter much to be spoken which he won, and so returned to Apollo- of; the other two held some part of Illyria, nia again. The Epirots craved help of M. Va- about which the Romans were so far from lerius; or rather excepted his kind offers; contending with them, that gladly they who had none other business to do. The sought to get their friendly acquaintance. Garrison that Philip had left in Oricum, was But the names of these Associates are thrust ftrong enough to hold the Towns-men in into the Treaty, rather to give it countegood order, but not to keep out the Romans; nance, than for any readiness which they disof whose daring to attempt any thing close to enter thereinto. The Etolians against him, on that side the Sea, Philip as alone, and chiefly Scopas their Prætor, with then had no suspition. Valerius therefore ea- Dorymachus and others, are vet a while the fily regained the Town, and sent thence a only men, of whom the Roman Generals thousand men, under Navius Crifpus, an un- must make much; as the late French King, dertaking and expert Captain, which got Henry the fourth, when he had only the by night into Apollonia. These made a no-title of Navarre, was said to court the Majors table fally, and brake into Philip's Trenches of Rochel. Philip was not idle, when he heard

whereunto

whereunto the Ætolian tended. Herepair-Hereupon, these his troublesome neighboure ed his Army, made a countenance of war defired peace of him, and used their helf upon the Illyrians, and other his borderers, means to get it. And when the day appointhat were wont in times of danger to infelt ed for the conclusion therefore, was come. the Kingdom of Macedon; wasted the Countheir Embassadours, in stead of making try about Oricum and Apollonia, and over-sunning the Pelagonians, Dardanians, and rable conditions, as ill besemed vanquished others, whom he held suspected, came down men to offer; and might therefore well teinto Theffaly, whence he made shew as if he stifie, that their minds were altered. It was would invade Ætolia. By the fame of this not any love of peace, but fear of being be-Expedition, he thought to stir up all the fieged in their own Towns, that had made Greeks adjoyning, against the Ætolians; them desirous of composition. This fear bewhom they generally detelted as a neft of ing taken away, by the incouragements of Robbers, troublesome to all the Country. Attalus and the Romans, they were as fierce To which purpose, and to hinder the Ato- as ever; and thrust a Garrison of their own. lians from breaking into Greece, he left Per- and some Roman friends into Elis; which few, his Son and Heir, with four thousand threatned Achaia, wherein Fhilip then lav. men . upon their borders : with the rest of The Romans, making a cut over the straight his Army, before greater buliness should from Naupadus, wasted the Country in a overtake and intangle him, he made a long terrible bravery; wherein Philip required journey into Thrace, against a people called him, coming upon them in great haste from the Medes, that were wont to fall upon Ma- the Nemaan Games ( which he was then cecedon, when foever the King was absent. The lebrating ) and sending them faster away. Etolians hearing of his departure, armed but nothing richer than they came. as many as they could against the Acarna- In the heat of this contention, Prusing King nians; in hope to subdue those their daily of Eithynia, fearing the growth of Attalus. enemies, and win their little Country, ere no less than Attalus held suspected the power he should be able to return. Hereto it much of Philip, sent a Navy into Greece, to affist availed, that the Romans had already taken the Mucedonian party. The like did the Oeniade and Naxes, Acarnanian Towns, con- Carthaginians; and upon greater reason, as veniently situated to let in an Army; and being more interessed in the success of his configned them unto the Apolians, accord- affairs. Philip was too weak by Sea : and ing to the tenour of the contract lately made though he could man some two hundred with them. But the stout resolution of the ships, yet the vessels were such, as could not Acarnanians to die (as we say) every Mo- hold out against the Romans Quinqueremes. thers Son of them, in defence of their Coun- Wherefore it behoved him to use the help try; together with the great haste of the of his good friends the Carthaginians. But Macedonian ( who laid afide all other busi- their aid came somewhat too late; which ness) to succour these his friends; caused the might better at first have kept those Ene-Etolians to forfake their enterprise. When mies from fastening upon any part of Greece, this Expedition was given over the Romans than afterward it could ferve to drive them and Atolians fell upon Ancyre, which they out, when they had pierced into the bowels took: the Romans affailed by Sea, the Eto- of that Country. Ere Philip could attempt lians by Land. The Atolians had the Town, any thing by Sea, it was needful that he and the Komans the (poil.

chosen Consul at Rome; and P. Sulpitius sent But in affailing their Town, he was encounin his stead, to keep the war on foot in tred by the Atolian and Roman Garrison, Greece. But besides the Roman help, Attalus which drave him back with some loss. In out of Asia came over to assist the Atolians. such cases, especially where God intendeth He was chiefly moved by his own jealousie a great conversion of Empire, Fame is very of Fhilips greatness; though somewhat also powerful in working. The King had receitickled with the vanity of being chosen by ved no great detriment in his retrait from the Etolians their principal Magistrate; Elis: rather he had given testimony of his which honour, though no better than ti- personal valour, in fighting well on foot, tulary, he took in very loving part. Against when his horse was slain under him. He had the forces which Attalus and the Romans also soon after taken a great multitude of had fent, being joyned with the main power the Eleans, to the number of four thousand, of Etolia, Philip tried the fortune of two with some twenty thousand head of Cattel should correct the Eleans, bad neighbours For the e good services M. Valerius was to the Achaians his principal Confederates. battels; and was victorious in : ach of them. which they had brought together in a place of fafety, as they thought, when their Coun-Hereupon the King returned home, leaving more hereafter. not three thousand men to affist his friends

The fifth Book of the first Part

The Lacedemonians, hearing certain rerry was invaded. But it had hapned, that port of Cleomenes his death in Egypt, went in his pursuit of the Romans forragers about about to chuse two new Kings, and to consicion, his horse running hastily under a formthemselves to their old manner of golow tree, had torn off one of the horns, vernment. But their estate was so far out which (after the fashion of those times) the of tune, that their hope of redressing things King wore in his Crest. This was gathered within the City, proved no less unfortunate, up by an Atolian, who carried it home, and than had been their attempts of recoverthewed it as a token of Philip's death. The ing a large dominion abroad. Lycurgus a horn was well known, and the tale believed. Tyrant role up among them: upon whom All Macedon therefore was in an uproar; succeeded this Machanidas, and shortly afand not only the borderers, ready to fall up- ter came Nabis, that was worse than both on the Country, but some Captains of Philip of them. They held on the Etolian and Roeasily corrupted; who thinking to make man side, for fear of the Acheans, that were themselves a fortune in that change of the chief Confederates of Philip, and hated things, ran into such treason, as they might extremely the name both of Tyrant and better hope to make good, than to excuse. Lacedamonian. But of these we shall speak

Philip entring into Achaia, and seeing his the Acheans. He also took order, to have bea- presence had brought the contentment of cons erected, that might give him notice of affurance to that Country; spake brave the enemies doings, upon whom he meant words to the Assembly of their States, sayshortly to return. The affairs of Macedon, ing, That he had to do with an Enemy his presence quikly established. But in that was very nimble, and made War by Greece all went ill-favouredly ; especially in running away. He told how he had folthe lile of Eubers, where one Plater betrayed lowed them to Chalcis, to Orecum, to Opus, to Attalus and the Romans, the Town of and now into Achaia; but could no where Oreum, ere Philip could arrive to help it: find them, such hast they made, for fear of where also the strong City of Chalcis was being overtaken. But flight, he said, was not likely to have been loft, if he had not come alwaies prosperous: he should one day the sooner. He made such hasty marches, light upon them; as ere this he sundry that he had almost taken Attalus in the City times had done, and still to their loss. The of Opus: this City, lying over against Eu- Achaians were glad to hear these words; bea, Attalus had won more through the and much the more glad, in regard of his cowardize of the people, than any great good deeds accompanying them. For he reforce that he had used now because the Ro-stored unto their Nation some Towns that man Souldiers had defrauded him in the were in his hand, belonging to them of old. fack of Oreum, and taken all to themselves; it Likewise to the Megalopolitans their confewas agreed, that Attalus should make his best derates, he rendred Aliphera. The Dyprofit of the Opuntians, without admitting means, that had been taken by the Rothe Romans to be his sharers. But whilst he mans, and sold for slaves, he sought out, was busie, in drawing as much mony as he ransomed, and put in quiet possession of could out of the Citizens: the suddentyd-their own City. Further, passing over the ings of Philip's arrival, made him leave all Corinthian Gulf, he fell upon the Etolians; behind him, and run away to the Sea-side, whom he drave into the mountains and where he got aboord his ships, finding the woods, or other their strongest holds, and Romans gone before, upon the like fear. wasted their Country. This done, he took Either the indignity of this misadventure, leave of the Acheans, and returned home or tydings of Prufice to Bithywian his inva- by Sea, visited the people that were his subfion upon the Kingdom of Pergamus; made jects, or dependants; and animated them fo Andsir return home, without staying to well, that they rested searless of any threattake leave of his friends. So Philip reco- ning danger. Then had he leifure to make vered Opus, won Torone, Tritonos, Drymus war upon the Dardanians, ill neighbours to and many small Towns in those parts; per-Macedon: with whom nevertheless he was forming likewise some actions, of more bra- not so far occupied, but that he could go in very than importance, against the Ætolians. hand with preparing a Fleet of an hundred In the mean season, Machanidas, the Tyrant Gallies, whereby to make himself Master of Lacedamon, had been busie in Peloporine- of the Sea; the Romans (fince the deparso, but hearing of Philip's arrival, was re-ture of Attalus ) having not dared to meet or purfue him, when he lately ran along the coast of Greece, fast by them where they world at pleasure. Therefore he had rea-

on to the Macedonian, and emboldened him courfe : which was, not to admit into the felto make strong war upon the Etolians, at lowship of their Italian wars so mighty a their own doors. As for the Komans either Prince; whom change of affection might fome displeasure, conceived against their make dangerous to their Empire; or his Confederates, or some sear of danger at much affection unto Hannibal, more dangehome, when afdrubal was ready to fall upon rous to their liberty. Rather they should Italy; caused them to give over the care of do well to save charges, and feed the Macethings in Greece, and leave their friends donian with hopes; by making many prothere to their own fortunes. The Ætolians miles of fending a fleet and some other suctherefore being driven to great extremity, cours. This would cost nothing, yet would were fain to fue for peace unto Philip; and it ferve to terrifie the Romans, and compell accept it, upon what ever conditions it best them to fend part of their forces from home, plealed him. The agreement was no fooner that might find this Enemy work abroad, made, than P. Sempronius with ten thousand So should the Roman Armies be lessened in foot, a thousand horse, and thirty five gal- Italy; and Philip, when once he was ingaged lies, came over in great haste (though some- in the war, beurged unto the prosecution, what too late ) to troubleit. Hearing how by his own necessity: putting the Carthathings went in Ætolia, he turned aside to ginians tolittle or no charges : yea,scarceto Dyrrhacchium and Apolonia, making a great the labour of giving him thanks. Now ifit noise, as it with these his own forces he might come to pass, as Hannibal every day would work wonders. But it was notlongere did promife, that Rome, and all Italy should Philip came to visit him, and found him tame within a while be at the devotion of Carenough. The King presented him battel, but thage : better it were, that the City should he refused it : and suffering the Macedoni- be free, so as the troublesome Greeks might ans to waste the Country round about, be- address their complaints unto the Carthagifore his eyes, kept himself close within the nians, as competent Judges between them wals of Apollonia, making some overtures of and the Macedonian, than that Hannibal, peace: which caused Philip to return home with the power of Africk, should wait upquietly. The Romans had not fogreat cause on Philip, as his Executioner, to fulfill his to be displeased with the Etolians, as had will and pleasure, in doing such injuries, as Philip to take in evil part the demeanor of would both make the name of a Carthaginithe Carthaginians. For notwithstanding the an hateful in Greece, and oblige Philip to be royal offer that he made them, to serve their no less impudent, in fulfilling all requests of turn in Italy, and affist them, in getting their Hannibal. Whether the councel of Hanno hearts desire, before he would expect any and his fellows were such as this, or wherequital : they had not sent any fleet, as in ther the Carthaginians, of their own disposireason they ought, and as (considering his tion, without his advice, were too sparing, want of sufficient ability by Sea ) it is likely and careless, the matter (as far as concerned they were bound either to secure the tran- | Philip) came to one reckoning. For they did sportation of his Army, or to free his coast him no manner of good, but rather dodged from the Roman and Ætolian Piracies. Only with him, even in their little courtefie which once they came to his help, which was at his they most pretended. And this perhaps was fon, fuch as envy could fugge ft, to perfwade This good success added much reputation the Carthaginians unto a safe and thrifty last journey into Achais. But they were gone part of the reason, why he began the again before his arrival: having done no building of an hundred Gallies, as if he thing, and pretending fear of being taken by the Romans, even at such time as Philip with his proper strength would have reached, had his own Navy, durst boldly pass by Sea, he not vainly given credit to faithless proand found none that durst oppose him. This mifes. When therefore the Etolians had wretchless dealing of the Carthaginians, may submitted themselves already: and when the therefore seem to have been one of Hanno Romans desired his friendship, as might be his tricks, whereof Hannibal so bitterly com thought, for very fear of him, with repuplained. For it could not but grieve this ma- tation enough, and not as a for faken Client licious man exceedingly to hear that so of the Carthaginians, but a Prince able to great a King made offer to ferve in person have succoured them in their necessity, he under Hamibal, and required the affiftance of the same Hamibal, as of a man likely to prehension, leave them to themselves. For make Monarchs, and alter the affairs of the fakes but they despised him, as if the quarrel were meerly his own, and he unable to manage it.

The vanity of which their conceits would appear unto them, when they should see. that with his proper strength he had finished the War, and concluded it highly to his honour. So the year following it fomewhat to their loss.

omitted, belike, as having agreed for them- from all parts, administred matter unto Hanleague with Philip) were also inserted by the Italy; yet could not that prohibition hold, Romans; that were never flow in offering when fo many new occurrences brought their friendship to small and feeble Nati- each along with thim their new care; and ons. As for the Athenians; they stood required their several Armies. This had not much upon their old honour; and loved to been a very bad excuse, if any one of the mabear a part, though they did nothing, in all ny occasions offered had been throughly great actions. Yet the fetting down of profecuted : though it flood with best reatheir names in this Treaty, served the Ro- fon, that the foundation of all other hopes mans to good purpose: for a such as they and comforts, which was the prosperity of were a busie people, and ministred occasion Hannibal in his Italian war, should have been to renew the War, when means did better strengthned; what soever had become of ferve to follow it.

o. XIII.

How the Romans began to recover their firength by degrees. The noble affection of the Romans, in relieving the publick Necel-Sties of their Common-well TT was a great fault in the Carthaginians, was agreed, by the mediation of the Epirots, I that embracing fo many enterprifes at Acarnanians, and others, That the Romans once, they followed all by the halves; and thould retain three or four Towns of Illy- wasted more men and mony to no purpose, riv. which they had recovered by this War, than would have ferved (if good order had being part of their old Illyrian Conquest : been taken ) to finish the whole War, in Places no way belonging to the Macedini- far shorter space; and make themselves an; and therefore perhaps inserted into the Lords of all that the Romans held. This error Covenants, that somewhat might seem to had become the less harmful, if their care have been gotten. On the other fide, the of Italy had been fought as it ought. But they Atintanes were appointed to return under suffered Hannibal to weary himself with exthe obedience of Philip: who, if they were pectation of their promised supplies; which (as Ortelius problably conjectures) the peo- being still preferred from year to year, cauple of the Country about Apollonia, then fed as great opportunities to be loft, as a Condid the Romans abandon part of their get- querour could have defired. The death of tings; whereby it appears, that they did Posthumius, and destruction of this whole Arnot give peace, as they would feem to have my in Gaul; the begun rebellion of the Sardone, but accepted it, upon conditions dinians; the death of Hiero their friend in Syracufe; with great alterations much to their The Confederates and Dependants of the prejudice, in the whole life of sicil; as al-Macedonian, comprehended in this Peace, fo that War, of which we last spake threatwere Prulias King of Bithynia, the Acheans, ned from Macedon, happening all at one time; Betians, Thessalians, Acarnanians and Epirots. and that so nearly after their terrible over-On the Roman fide were named, first, the throw at Canna, among so many revolts of people of Ilium, as an honourable remem- their Italian Confederates; would utterly brance of the Romans descent from Troy; have funk the Roman State; had the Carthathen. Attalus King of Pergamus; Plueratus ginians, if not the first year, yet at least the an Illyrian Prince; and Nabis the Tyrant of second, sent over to Hannibal the forces that Latedamon; together with the Eleans, Mef- was decreed. It is not to be doubted, that senians and Athenians. The Ætolians were even this diversity of great hopes, appearing selves before. But the Eleans and Meffeni- no, or such as Hanno was, whereupon to ans, followers of the Etolians, (and by work. Forthough it were in the power of them, as is most likely, comprised in their Carthage, to perform all that was decreed for the rest. But the slender Troops, wherewith the Carthaginians fed the War in Spain; the lingring aid which they fent to uphold the Sardinian rebellion, when it was alreadv well-near beaten down; their trifling with Philip; and (amongst all these their attempts)their hasty catching at Sicil:little delferved to be thought good reasons of negle-

Yyyyy

tting the main point, whereto all the rest | Marcellus therefore gave over the place; and had reference. Rather every one of these Q. Fabius Maximus, the late famous Dica-Actions, considered a part by it self, was no tor, was substituted in his room. But Fabius otherwise to be allowed, as discreetly un- was detained in the City, about matters of dertaken, or substantially followed; than by religion or superstition: wherewith Rome making supposition. That the care of Italy was commonly, especially in times of danger. made the Carthaginians more negligent in very much troubled. So Gracchus alone. all things elfe. Yet if these allegations would with a Consular Army, waited upon Hanninot serve to content Hannibal, then must be bal among the Campans: not able to meet patiently endure to know, that his own Ci- the enemy in field; yet intentive to all ocrizens were jealous of his Greatness, and casions, that should be presented. The 10-

The fifth Book of the first Part

Whatseever he heard or thought, Hannihal was glad to apply himself to Necessity; to Army skilful in the exercises of war, than to feed his Italian triends with hopes; and to keep it from quarrels that might arise by trifle away the time about Nola, Naples, Cume, upbraiding one another with their base couand other places: being loth to spend his Army in an hard nege, that was to be referved for a work of more importance. Many offers he made upon Nola, but alwayes with bad success. Once Marcellus fought a battel with him there, yet under the very walls of flesh his men, and make them confident the Town; having the affistance of the Citizens, that were grown better affected to had bad experience. Gracchus therefore out the Roman fide, fince the Heads that incli- himself into Cume: whence he issued at ned them to rebellion, were cut off. About such time, as the Magistrates of that City a thousand men Hannibal in that fight lost : were expected by the Campans. The Sacrifice which was no great marvel; his forces be- was to be performed by night, at aplace caling then divided, and imployed in fundry | led Hame: three miles from Cuma. There parts of Italy at once. Naples was even in lay Marins Alfins the chief Magistrate of Cathose dayes, a strong City; and required a pua, with fourteen thousand men; not years work to have takenit by force. Wher- wholly intent either to the Sacrifice, orto fore the earnest desire of Hannibal to get it, any danger that might interrupt it; but rawas alwayes frustrate. Upon the Town of ther devising how to surprize others, than Cume they of Capua had their plot, and were fearing himself to be affailed. The Conful in hope to take it by cunning. They fent to therefore, fuffering none to go forth of cume, the chief Magestrates of the Cumans, desiring that might bear word of him to the enemies, them (as being also Campans) to be present issued out of the Town when it grew darks at a folemn facrifice of the Nation, where his men being well refreshed with meat they would consult about their general and sleep, the day before, that they might good : promising to bring thither a suffici- hold out the better in this nights service. So ent guard to affure the whole Affembly from he came upon the Capuans unawares, and any danger that might come by the Romans. flew more than two thousand of them, toge-This motion the Commans made shew to enther with their Commander, losing not tertain; but privily sent word of all to above a hundred of his own men. Their

and happily chosen Consul in so dangerous off. By this his providence, he escapeda a time. His Colleague should have been greater loss, than he had brought upon the Posthumus Albinus, that was lately flain by Enemies. For when Hannibal was informthe Gauls: after whole death Marcellus was ed how things went at Hame, forthwith he chosen, as being judged the fittest man to en- marched thither, hoping to find those counter with Hannibal. But the Roman Au- young fouldiers, and flaves, bufied in making gures either found some religious impedi- spoil, and loading themselves with the booty, or at least they fained so to have done, be- which partly for anger, partly for defire of cause this was the first time, that ever two gaining it, and partly at the urgent en-durst not trust him with so much power, as lones, or Slaves, that lately had been armed. should enable him to wrong the state at were no small part of his followers. These. and the rest of his men, he continually trained; and had not a greater care to make his dictions.

Whilst the Consul was thus busied at Linternum, the Senators of Cume fent him word of all that had paffed between them and the Capuans. It was a good occasion to against the Enemy; of whom hitherto they T. Sempronius Gracebus, the Roman Conful. Camp he took; but tarried not long to rifle Gracehus was a very good man of war, it, for fear of Hannibal, who lay not far ment that nullified the election of Marcellus'; But they were all gotten fafe within Cume; Plebeian Consuls were chosen together. treaty of the Capuans, Hannibal affailed the

the next day. Much labour, and with ill fuc- The people of Rome were very intentive cels, the Carthaginians and their fellows as necessity constrained them, to the work front about this town. They raifed a wooden that they had in hand. They continued Fa-Tower against it; which they brought bins in his Consulship; and joyned with him close unto the walls; thinking thereby to Marcus Claudius Marcellus; whom they had force an Entry. But the Defendants, on the appointed unto that honour the year beinfide of the wall, raifed against this an high fore. Of these two, Fabius was called the Tower; whence they made refistance, and Shield: and Marcellus, the Roman Sword. In found means at length to confume with fire Fabius it was highly, and upon just reason. the work of their Enemies. While the Car- commended, That being himfelf Conful and thavinians were busie in quenching the fire, holding the Election, he did not stand upon the Romans, fallying out of the Town at nice points of formality, or regard what two gates, charged them valiantly, and men might think of his ambition, but caused drave them to their Trenches , with the himself to be chosen with Marcellus ; knowflaughter of about fourteen hundred. The ing in what need the City stood of able Conful wifely lounded the Retreat, ere his Commanders. The great name of these men were too far engaged, and Hannibal in Confuls, and the great preparations which a readiness to requite their service. Neither the Romans made, served to put the Campans would he in the pride of his good success, in fear, that Capua it selfshould be besieged. adventure forth against the Enemy; who To prevent this, Hannibal, at their earnest presented him battle the day following, near entreaty, came from Arpi (where he lay, unto the wals. Hannibal therefore seeing no hearkening after news from Tarentum) and likelihood to prevail in that which he had having with his presence comforted these taken in hand, brake up the siege, and re- his friends, fell on the sudden upon Putco'i, turned to his old camp at Tifata. About a Sea-town of Campania; about which he these times, and shortly after, when Fabius spent three dayes in vain, hoping to have the other Conful had taken the field; fome won it. The garrison in Putcoli was fix thoufmall Towns were recovered by the Ro- land strong: and did their duty so well, mans, and the people severely punished for that the Carthaginian, finding no hope of their revolt.

venge of their defection.

good fuccess, could only shew his anger up-The Carthaginian Army was too small, to on the fields there and about Naples ; which fill with garrifons all places that had yield- having done, and once more (with as ill ed; and withall to abide (as it must do) success as before) assailed Nola, he bent his strong in the field. Wherefore Hannibal course to Tarentum: wherein he had very attending the supply from home, that should great intelligence. Whilest he was in his enable him to strike at Rome it self, was progress thither; Hanno made a journey driven in the mean time to alter his course against Beneventum : and T. Graccus, the last of war: and instead of making (as former- years Consul, hasting from Nuceria, met ly he had done ) a general invalion upon him there; and fought with him a battel. the whole Countrey, to pass from place to Hanno had with him about seventeen thouplace; and wait upon occasions, that grew land foot, Brutians and Lucans for the most daily more commodious to the enemy, than part; befides twelve hundred horse; very few tohim. The Countrey of the Hirpines and of which were Italians, all the rest Numidi-Samnites was grievously wasted by Marcel- ans and Moors. He held the Romans work lus, in the absence of Hannibal; as also was four hours, ere it could be perceived to Campania, by Fabius the Conful; when which fide the victory would incline. But Hannibal having followed Marcellus to Nola, Gracebus his fouldiers, which were all (in a and received there the loss before mention- manner ) the late-armed flaves, had receiveed, was gone to winter in Apulia. These peo- ed from their General a peremptory denunple shewed not the like spirit in defending ciation, That this day or never they must their lands, and fighting for the Carthagini- purchase their liberty, bringing every man an Empire, as in former times they had done, for price thereof, an enemies head. The when they contended with the Romans, in [weet reward of liberty was fo greatly detheir own behalf, to get the Soveraignty. fired, that none of them feared any danger They held it reason, that they should be in earning it: howbeit that vain labour improtected b, such as thought to have domi- posed by their General, of cutting off the nion over them: whereby at once they over- Ilain enemies heads, troubled them exceedburdened their new Lords; and gave unto lingly; and hindred the fervice by imploytheir old, the more easie means to take re- ment of so many hands in a work so little concerning the victory. Gracchus there-

Үуууу 2

ed it: proclaiming aloud, That they should same trade, and subject to the same inconvecast away the heads, and spare the trouble niencies, which enteeble Rome it self. Sicil of cutting off any more; for that all should and Sardinia, that were wont to yield great have liberty immediately after the battel, if profit, hardly now maintaining the Roman they won the day. This encouragement Armies, that lay in those Provinces, to hold made them run head-long upon the Enemy; them fafe, and in good order. As for the Ciwhom their desperate sury had soon over- tizens of Rome, every one of them suffered thrown, if the Roman-horse could have his part of the detriment, which the Commade their part good against the Numidi- mon-wealth sustained, and could now do an. But though Hanno did what he could, least for his Country, when most need was: and pressed so hard upon the Romans bat- as also the number of them was much detel, that four thousand of the slaves, ( for creased; so as if money should be raised fear either of them, or of the punishment upon them by the Poll, yet must it be far less which Gracehos had threatned before the than in former times. The Senate therefore battel unto those that should not valiantly diligently considering the greatness of the behave themselves) retired unto a ground war within the bowels of Itary, that could of ftrength; yet was he glad at length to not be thence expelled, without the exceedfavehimfelf by flight, when the Gross of his ing charge of many good Armies; the peril, Army was broken; being unable to remedy wherein Sicil and Sardinia stood, bothof covered ( as was the cultom of flaves manu- fublifted. mised) with caps of white wooll. The picture of this Feast (as a thing worthy of remembrance) was afterwards hung up in a Table open the publick wants; and plainly faid, by Gracehus, in the Temple of Liberty; which his Father had built and dedicated. of mony for victuals, weapons, apparel, or fmall importance.

fore finding his own error, wifely correct- worse do than before; as living upon the the loss. Leaving the field, he was accom- the Carthaginians, and of many among the panied by no more than two thousand, most Naturals, declining from the friendship or of which were horse; all the rest were either subjection of Rome; the threats of the Maceflain or taken. The Roman General gave donian, ready to land in the Eastern parts of unto all his fouldiers that reward of liberty Italy, if they were not at the cost to find him which he had promifed : but unto those work at home; the greater threats of Afarnfour thousand, which had recoyled unto bal, to follow his Brother over the Alps, as the Hill, he added this light punishment; soon as he could rid himself of the scipio's That as long as they served in the wars, they in Spain; and the poverty of the Commonshould neither eat nor drink otherwise than wealth, which had not mony for any one of standing, unless sickness forced them to these mortal dangers; were driven almost break his order. So the victorious Army even to extream want of counsel. But being returned to Beneventum: where the newly urged by the violence of fwift necessity, sigenfranchised Souldiers were feasted in pub- nified in the letters of the two Scipie's from lick by the Townsmen; some sitting some spain; they resolved upon the only course, standing, and all of them having their heads without the which the City could not have

They called the people to affembly Wherein Quintus Fulvius the Prætor laid That in this exigent, there must be no taking This was indeed the first battel, worthy of the like things needful to the Souldiers; great note, which the Carthaginians had lost but that fuch as had stuff, or were Artificers; fince the coming of Hannibal into Italy: the must trust the Common-wealth with the victories of Marcellus at Nola, and of this Loan of their commodities and labors, until Gracchus before at Hame, being things of the war were ended. Hereunto he so effectually exhorted all men, especially the Publi-Thus the Romans, through industry, by cans or Customers, and those which in forlittle and little, repaired the great Breach in mer times had lived upon their dealing in their Estate, which Hannibal had made at the common Revenues, that the charge was Canna. But all this while, and long after undertaken by private men; and the Army this, their Treasury was so poor, that no in- in Spain, as well supplied, as if the Treasury dustry nor art could serve to help it. The had been full. Shortly after this, Marcus fruits of their grounds did only ( and per- Attilius Regulus , and Publius Furius Philus , hapshardly ) ferve to feed their Towns and the Roman Cenfors; taking in hand the re-Armies, without any surplusage, that might dress of disorders within the City, were be exchanged for other needful commodi- chiefly intentive to the correction of those, ties. Few they were in Italy that continued that had mil-behaved themselves in this preto pay them tribute: which also they could fent war. They began with L. Cecilius Metellus ;

tended no further, than to putting men out of rank; or making them change their The twelve hundred Talents wrongfully

attellus; who after the battel at Canne . finall help to conferve the dignity of the had held discourse with some of his Compa- Senate: the commonalty being chnoxious nions, about flying beyond the Seas; as it unto the Cenfors; which were alwayes of Rome, and all Italy, had been no better than that Order, and careful to uphold the reloft. After him they took in hand those, putation thereof. But the Common-weal that having brought to Rome the meffage of being now impover shed by War, and having their fellows made prisoners at Canna, re- small store of Lands to lett, or of Customs turned not back to Hannibal, as they were that were worth the farming; Reculus and bound by oath; but thought themselves Philus troubled not themselves much with thereof fufficiently discharged, in that they perusing the Temples, or other decayed plahad stepped once back into his Camp, with ces, that needed reparations : or, if they took pretence of taking better notice of the aview of what was requilite to be done in Captives names. All these were now pro- this kind; yet forbore they to set any thing nounced infamous by the Cenfors: as also in hand, because they had not wherewith were a great many more; even whofoever to pay. Herein again appeared a notable had not ferved in the wars, after the term generofity of the Romans. They that had which the Laws appointed: Neither was been accustomed in more happy times, to the note of the Cenfors at this time (as other- undertake fuch pieces of work, offered now wise it had used to be) hurtful only in re- themselves as willingly as the Censors, as if outation : but greater weight was added there had been no fuch want : promiting lithereunto, by this Decree of the Senate, fol- berally their cost and travel; without exlowing; That all Such as were noted with in- pectation of any payment, before the end of famy by these Cenfors, should be transported in- the War. In like fort, the Masters of those to Sicil, there to serve until the end of the War, slaves, that lately had been infranchised by under the same hard conditions, that were Gracchus, were very well contented to forimposed upon the Remainder of the Army bea- bear the price of them, until the City were ten at Cannæ. The office of the Cenfors was, in better case to pay. In this general inclito take the Lift and account of the Citizens; nation of the Multitude, to relieve, as far to chuse or displace the Senators; and to forth as every one was able, the common fet notes of disgrace (without further pu- necessity; all the goods of Orphans, and of nishment) upon those whose unhonestor Widows living under Patronate, were unseemly behaviour fell not within the brought into the Treasury; and there the compass of the Law. They took also an account of the Roman Gentlemen: amongst for the suffernance of these Widows and Orwhom they distributed the publick Horses phans: whilst the whole stock was used by of fervice, unto fuch as they thought meet; the City. This good example of those which or took them away for their mif-behaviour. remained in the Town, prevailed with the Generally, they had the overfight of mens | Souldiers abroad: fo that (the poorer fort lives and manners: and their censure was excepted) they refused to take pay; and much reverenced and teared; though it ex- called those Mercenaries, that did accept it.

Tribe; or (which was the most that they extorted from the Carthaginians; nor any could do) caufing them to pay some Duties injuries following, done by the Romans in to the Treasury, from which others were the height of their pride, vielded half so exempted. But, besides the care of this ge- much commodity, as might be laid in balneral Tax, and matters of Morality, they lance against these miseries, whereinto their had the charge of all publick Works; as Estate was now reduced. Nevertheles if mending of High-wayes, Bridges, and Wa- we confider things aright, the calamities of ter-courses; the reparations of Temples, this War did rather inable Rome to deal Porches, and fuch other buildings. If any with those Enemies, whom the forthwith man incroached upon the Streets, High- undertook, than abate or flacked the growth wayes, or other places that ought to be com- of that large Dominion, whereto the atmon; the Ceniors compelled him to make tained, ere the youngest of those men was amends. They had also the letting out of dead, whose names we have already men-Lands, Customs, and other publick Reve-tioned. For by this hammering, the Roman nues to farm : fo that most of the Citizens metal grew more hard and folid: and by of Rome were beholding unto this office; as paring the branches of private fortunes, the maintaining themselves by some of the Root and Heart of the Common-wealth was Trades thereto belonging. And this was no corroborated. So grew the City of Athens, when Xerxes had burnt the Town to athes, and taken from every particular Citizen, all nope of other felicity, than that which The Romans win fome Towns back from Hanrefted in the common happiness of the univerfality. Certain it is, (as Sir Francis Bacon hath judiciously observed) That a State, whose dimension or stem is small, may aptly ferve to be foundation of a great Monarchy, which chiefly comes to pais, where all regard of domestical prosperity is laid aside ; and every mans care addressed to the bene- the War: so their Generals abroad omitted fit of his Country. Hereof I might say that no part of industry, in seeking to recover our Age hath been a great example, in the what had been loft. The Town of Calline. united Provinces in the Netherlands; whose Fabius besieged. It was well defended by present riches and strength grew chiefly the Carthaginian Garrison; and likely to from that ill affurance, which each of their have been relieved by those of capua, if ved it felf to hold, whill the generality was affiftance of his Colleague. Nevertheless. oppressed by the Duke of Alvas, were it so, the place held out so obstinately, that Falike, as, by extreme industry, and straining that the enterprise was not great; yet as dif-

ø. XIV.

nibal. Hannibal wins Tarentum. The flege of Capua. Two Victories of Hannibal. The Journey of Hannibal to the gates of Rome. Capua taken by the Romans.

A S the people of Rome strained themfelvesto the utmost, for maintaining Towns, or almost of their Families, percei- Marcellus from Nola, had not come to the that the people had thereby grown as war- bins was purposed to give it over: faying, themselves to fill their publick Treasury, they ficult, as a thing of more importance. But are all grown wealthy, strong at Sea, and able Marcellus was of a contrary opinion. He to wage great Armies for their fervices by faid, that many fuch things, as were not at Land. Wherefore if we value at such a first to have been undertaken by great Comrate as we ought, the patient resolution, con- manders, ought yet, when once they were taformity to good Order, obedience to Magi- ken in hand, to be profecuted unto the best strates, with many other Vertues, and above effect. So the fiege held on: and the Town all other, the great love of the Common- was pressed so hard, that the Campans dwelweal, which was found in Rome in these dan- ling therein, grew fearful, and craved pargerous times: we may truly say, That ley; offering to give it up, so as all might the City was never in greater likelihood to have leave to depart in fafety, whither they prosper. Neither can it be deemed other- pleased. Whilst they were thus treating of wife, than that if the same affections of conditions : or whilst they were issuthe people had lasted, when their Em- ing forth, according to the composition alpire, being grown more large and beau-ready made; (for it is diverfly reported) tiful, should in all reason have been more Marcellus seizing upon a Gate, entred with dear unto them; if the riches and delicacies his Army, and put all to fword that came in of Alia had not infected them with fenfuali- their way. Fifty of those that were first gotty, and carryed their appetites mainly ten out, ran to Fabine the Conful, who faved to those pleasures, wherein they thought them, and sent them to Capua in safety; all their well-being to confift; if all the Ci- the rest were either slain, or made prisotizens and subjects of Rome could have be- ners. If Fabius deserved Commendations, lieved their own interest to be as great, in by holding his word good unto these fifty; I those wars which these latter Emperours know not how the slaughter of the rest, or made for their defence, as in these which imprisonment afterward of such as escaped were managed by the Confuls: the Em- the heat of execution, could be excused by pire, founded upon so great vertue, could Marcellus. It may be that he helped himnot have been thrown down by the hands felf after the Roman fashion, with some aquiof rude Barbarians, were they never fo vocation, but he shall pay for it hereafter. In many. But unto all Dominions God hath like fort was Mount Marfam in Gafcoin tafet their periods: Who, though he hath ken by the Marshall Monluc, when I was a given unto Man the knowledge of those young man in France. For whilft he enterwayes, by which Kingdoms rife and fall; rained parley about composition; the beyet hath left him subject unto the affections, sieged ran all from their several guards, which draw on these satal changes, in their upon hasty defire of being acquainted with times appointed. The Marshall therefore discovering a part of the Walls unguarded, entred by Scalado, and put all (ave the Governour unto the fword. Herein

the Governour of Mount Marjam commit- Carried an Axe with a bundle of Rods before fick at Nola.

down the Country.

ship, we will speak hereafter.

him: eleven of the twelve Lictors, which had been betrayed by their Princes; and ted two gross errors; the one, in that he the Contul, fuffered him, in regard of due gave no order for the Captains and Com- reverence, to pass by them on horse-back. panies, to hold themselves in their places; which was against the custom. But the Son the other, in that he was content to parlet perceiving this, commanded the last of his without Pledges for assurance given and re- Lictors to note it : who thereupon bade the ceived. Some fuch overfight the Governour old Fabine alight, and come to the Conful of Calline seemeth to have committed; yet on his feet. The Father chearfully did so; neither the advantage taken by Marcellus, laying, It was my mind, Son, to make tryal. or by Monluc, was very honourable. When whether thou didit underfiand thy felf to be this Work was ended, many small Towns of Conful. Cassius Altimus a wealthy Citizen the Samnites, and some of the Lucans and of Arpi, who after the battel at Canna, had Applians, were recovered: wherein were holpen the Carthaginian into that Town. taken or flain, about five and twenty thou- beeing now the fortune of the Romans to fand of the Enemies; and the Country grie- amend, came privily to this Conful Fabius, yoully wasted by Fabius, Marcellus lying and offered to render it back unto him, if he might be therefore well rewarded. The Hannibal in the mean while was about Conful purposed to follow old examples: Tarentum, waiting to hear from those, that and to make this Altinim a pattern to all had promifed to give up the Town. But Traitors 5 uting him as Camillus and Fabricius M. Valerius the Roman Propretor had thrust had done those that offered their faithful lo many men into it, that the Traitors durst fervice against the Falifei, and King Pyrrhus. not ftir. Wherefore the Carthaginian was But Q. Fabius the Father, was of another fain to depart, having wearied himself in opinion: and said, it was a matter of danvain with expectation. Yet he wasted not gerous consequence, That it should be the Country, but contented himself with thought more tase to revolt from the Rohope, that they would please him better in mans, than to turn unto them. Wherefore time following. So he departed thence to-ward Salapia, which he chose for his win-the Town of Cales, and there kept as prisotring-place; and began to victual it when ner; until they could better resolve, what Summer was but half past. It is said, that he to do with him, or what use to make of was in love with a young Wench in that him. Hannibal understanding that Altinius Town, in which regard if he began his Win- was gone, and among the Romans, took it ter more timely than other wise he required, not forrowfully; but thought this a good oche did not like the Romans; whom necessi- casion to seize upon all the mans riches, ty inforced, to make their Summer last as which were great. Yet that he might feem long as they were able to travel up and rather fevere, than covetous, he fent for the wife and children of Allinius into his Camp: About this time began great troubles in where having examined them by torment, sicil, whither Marcellus the Conful was partly concerning the departure and intenfent, to take fuch order for the Province, as tions of this fugitive, partly, and more strictneed should require. Of the doings there, ly, about his riches, what they were, and which wore out more time than the Conful- where they lay, he condemned them as partakers of the treason, to be burnt alive ; and The new Confuls chosen at Rome, were took all their goods unto himself. Fabius 2 Fabius the Son of the present Consul, the Consul shortly after came to Arpi: which and T. Sempronius Gracebus the second time. he won by Scalado, in a stormy and rainy The Romans found it needful for the pub- night. Five thousand of Hannibal's Soullick service, to imploy oftentimes their best diers lay in the Town; and of the Arpines able men: and therefore made it lawful, themselves, there were about three thouduring the war to recontinue their Officers, fand. Thefe were thrust formost by the Carand chuse such as had lately held their pla- thaginian Garrison; when it was understood, ces before; without regarding any distance that the Romans had gotten over the Wall, of time, which was otherwise required. The and broken open a Gate. For the Souldiers old Fabius became Lieutenant unto his held the Towns-men suspected; and there-Son: which was perhaps the respect, that fore thought it no wisdom to trust them at most commended his Son unto the place. It their backs. But after some little resistance, is noted, That when the old man came into the Arpines gave over fight, and entertained the Camp, and his Son rode forth to meet parley with the Romans: protesting, they

913

against their wills. In process of this dis- reason of this cruelty, or severity, the people course, the Arpine Prætor went unto the of Tarentum grew to hate the Romans more Roman Conful: and receiving his faith for generally and earnestly than before. As for fecurity of the Town, prefently made head the Conspirators, they followed their business against the Garrison. This notwithstanding, the more diligently, as knowing what relike it is that Hannibals men continued to ward they were to expect, if their intention make good refistance. For when almost a should happen to be discovered. Wherefore thousand of them that were Spaniards, of they sent again to Hannibal; and acquaintfered to leave their companions, and ferve ing him with the manner of their plot. on the Romans fide, it was yet covenanted, made the same composition with him for that the Carthaginians should be suffered to the Tarentines, which they of Capua had pass forth quietly, and return to Hannibal. made before. Nico, and Fhilomenes, two of This was performed: and so Arpi became the chief among them, used much togo forth Roman again, with little other lois, than of of the Town on hunting by night; as if they him that had betrayed it. About the same durst not take their pleasure by day, for fear time Cliternum was taken by Sempronius Tu- of the Carthaginians. Seldom or never they ditanus one of the Prators: and unto Cneus milled of their game : for the Carthaginians Fulvius, another of the Prætors, an hundred prepared it ready for their hands, that they and twelve Gentlemen of Capua offered their might not feem to have been abroad upon fervice; upon no other condition, than to other occasion: From the Camp of Hannibal have their goods restored unto them, when it was about three dayes journey to Tarentheir City thould be recovered by the Ro- tum, if he should have marched thither with mans. This was a thing of small importance: his whole Army. This caused his long abode but considering the general hatred of the in one place the less to be suspected; as also, Campani towards Rome, it ferved to disco- to make his enemies the more secure, he ver the inclination of the Italians in those caused it to be given out, that he was sick. times; and how their affections recoyled But when the Romans within Tarentam, from Hannibal, when there was no appear- were grown careless of such his neighbourance of those mighty succours, that had hood, and the Conspirators had set their bubeen promised from Carthage. The Confen- fines in order; he took with him ten thoutines also, and the Thurines, people of the sand the most expedite of his horse and soot; all his care bent upon Tarentum; which if he he heard tell in the evening, that some Nu-

were become subject to the Carthaginians of where they suffered death as Traytors. But Brutians, which had yielded themselves to and long before break of day, made all speed Hannibal, returned again to their old alle-thitherward. Fourscore light horse of the giance. Others would have followed their Numideans ran a great way before him, example, but that one L. Pomponius, who of beating all the wayes, and killing any that a Publican had made himself a Captain, and they met, for fear left he, and histroopfolgotten reputation by some petty exploits in lowing him, should be discovered. It had gotter reputation by one petty expires in lowing time, mount be discovered. It are forraging the Country, was flain by Hanno; been often the manner of fome few Numi-with a great multitude of those that followed him. Hannibal in the mean while had Wherefore the Roman Governour, when could take, it seemed that it would stand midians were abroad in the fields, took it himingood stead, for drawing over that for a fign, that Hannibal was not as yet difhelp out of Macedon, which his Carthigini-lodged; and gave order, that some compaans failed to fend. Long he waited ere he nies should be fent out the next morning, to could bring his desire to pass: and being strip them of their booty, and send them loth to hazard his forces, where he hoped to gone. But when it grew dark night; Hanniprevail by intelligence; he contented himbal, guided by Philomenes, came close to the felf with taking in some poor Towns of the Town: where, according to the tokens Salentines. At length, his Agents within agreed upon, making a light to shew his ar-Tarentum, found means to accomplish their rival; Nico, that was within the Town, anpurpose, and his wish. One Phileas, that was swered him with another light, in sign that of their conspiracy, who lay at Rome as Em he was ready. Presently Nico began to set baffadour, practifing with the Hostages of upon one of the Gates, and to kill the the Tarentines, and fuch as had the keeping watch-men. Philomenes went toward anoof them, conveyed them by night out of the ther gate: and whiftling (as was his man-City. But he and his company the next day ner) called up the Porter; bidding him make were so closely pursued, that all of them haste, for that he had killed a great Bore, o were taken, and brought back to Rome, heavy, that scarce two men could stand were commanded to kill all the Komans, and not to hurt the Citizens. For better performance hereof, Hannibal willed the Conspirators, that when any of their friends appearthem; inveighed bitterly against the Romans, as tyrannous oppreffours; and spake wise busined, than his affairs required.

Thus with mutual loss on both sides. done, and having gotten such spoil as was time passed: and the Roman forces, growto be had of the Souldiers goods in the ing daily stronger, @ Fulvius Flaccus, with Town, he addressed himself against the Citadel; hoping that if the Garri on would fally out, he might give them such a blow as should make them unable to defend the Piece. According to his expediation it partly fell out. For when he began to make his approaches, the Romans in a bravery fallying reduced them. But to fill up these Legions. forth, gave charge upon his men: who fell back of purpose according to direction, till they had drawn on as many as they could and so far from their strength, as they durst adventure. Then gave Hannibal a fign to his Carthaginians, who lay prepared ready Wars; making yet a Law, that their years for the purpole: and fiercely fetting upon the of fervice, whereinto they were bound by Enemy, dravehim back with great flaugh-order of the City, should be reckoned, for ter, as fast as he could run; so that after-their benefit, from this their beginning so wards he durst not iffue forth. The Citadel stood upon a Demi-Island, that was plain Before the Roman Army drew near, the ground; and fortified only with a Ditch | Campans felt great want of victual, as if they

under it. So the Porter opened the wicket: | balintended to fortific in like fort against the and forthwith entred two young men, loa- Citadel; to the end that the Tarentines might den with the Bore; which Hannibal had pre- be able, without his help, to keep thempared large enough, to be worthy the look- felves from all danger theace. His work in ing on. While the Porter stood wondring at few dayes went so well forward, without the largeness of the beast, Philomenes ran him impediment from the belieged, that he conthrough with his Bore-spear: and letting in ceived hope of winning the piece it self, by fome thirty armed men, fell upon all the taking a little more pains. Wherefore he watch; whom when he had flain, he entred made ready all forts of engines, to force the the great gate. So the Army of Hannibal en- place. But whilft he was bufied in his works. tring Tarentum at two Gates, went directly there came by Sea a ftrong supply from Metoward the Market place, where both parts tapontum: which took away all hope of premet. Thence they were distributed by their vailing; and made him return to his former General, and fent into all quarters of the Ci- counsel. Now for a fauch as the Tarentine fleet ty, with Tarentines to be their guides. They lay within the haven, and could not pals forth, whilest the Romans held the Citadel: it feemed likely that the Town would fuffer want, being debarred of accustomed trade and provisions by Sea: whilest the Roman ed in fight, they should bid him be quiet, garrison by help of their shipping, might eaand of good chear. All the Town was in filly be relieved, and enabled to hold out. anuproar: but few could tell what the mat- Against this inconvenience, it was rather ter meant. A Roman trumpet was unskilfully wished by the Togentines, then any way founded by a Greek in the Theater: which hoped, that their fleet could get out of the helped the suspition, both of the Tarentines, haven to guard the mouth of it, and cut of all that the Romans were about to spoil the supply from the Enemy, Hannibal told them. Town: and of the Romans, that the Citi- that this might well be done: for that their zens were in commotion. The Governour Town standing in plain ground, and their fled into the Port: and taking boat, got into streets being fair and broad, it would be no the Citadel, that flood in the mouth of the hard matter to draw the Gallies over land. Haven; whence he might easily perceive and lanch them into the Sea without. This the next morning, how all had passed. Han- he undertook, and effected: whereby the nibal assembling the Tarentines, gave them Roman garrison was reduced into great ne-to understand, what good affection he bore cessity; though with much patience it held out, and found Hannibal oftentimes other-

Thus with mutual loss on both fides, the Appius Chindius, lately chosen Confuls, prepared to beliege the great City of Capua. Three and twenty Legions the Romans had now armed. This was a great and hafty growth from that want of men, and of all necessaries, whereinto the loss at Canna had they were fain to take up young Boyes that were under seventeen years of age: and to fendCommissioners above fifty miles round, for the feeking out of fuch Lads as might appear serviceable, and pressing them to the young, as if they had been of lawful age. and Wall against the Town, whereunto it had already been besieged. This happened was joyned by a cawfey. This cawfey Hanni- partly by floth of the Nation, partly by the

had in foregoing years made upon their mies Rampart. There was great booty; or grounds. They fent therefore Embassadors (which was all one to the Souldiers) an onito Hannibal; desiring him to succour them nion of much that might be gotten in that ere they were closed up, as they feared to Camp. Wherefore some Ensign-bearers be shortly. He gave them comfortable threw their Ensignes over the Rampart. words, and fent Hanno with an Army to sup- willing their men to fetch them out, unless ply their wants. Hanno appointed them a they would endure the shame and dishoday; against which they thould be ready nour following such a loss. Fear of such ignowith all manner of carriages, to store them miny (than which nothing could be greater) felves with victuals, that he would provide. made the Souldiers adventure fo desperate-Neither did he promise more than he per-ly, that Fulvius, perceiving the heat of his formed. For he caused great quantity of men, changed his purpose, and encouraged grain, that had been laid up in Cities round those that were somewhat backward, to about, to be brought into his Camp, three follow the example of them that had alreamiles from Beneventum. Thither at the time dy gotten over the Trenches. Thus the appointed, came no more than forty Carts Camp was won: in which were flain above or Wagons, with a few pack-horfes, as if fix thousand; and taken above seven thouthis had been enough to victual Capua. Such fand, besides all the store of victuals, and was the retchlesne's of the Campans. Hanno carriages, with abundance of booty, that was exceeding angry hereat: and told them Hanno had lately gotten from the Roman they were worse than very beasts; since Confederates. This misadventure, and hunger could not teach them to have greathe nearer approach of both the Consuls, ter care. Wherefore he gave them a longer made them of Capua fend a pittiful Embafday; against which he made provision to sage to Hannibal: putting him in mind of store them throughly. Of all these doings all the love that he was wont to protest unword was fent to the Roman Confuls, from to their City; and how he had made shew the Citizens of Beneventum. Therefore Q. to affect it no less than Carthage. But now, Fulvius the Conful, taking with him fuch they faid it would be loft, as Arpi was lately, strength as he thought needful for the fer- if he gave not strong and speedy succour. vice, came into Beneventum by night; where Hannibal answered with comfortable words: with diligence he made inquiry into the be- and fent away two thousand horse, to keep haviour of the Enemy. He learned, that Han- their grounds from spoil, whilest he himself no with part of his Army was gone abroad to was detained about Tarentum, partly by make provisions; that some two thousand hope of winning the Citadel, partly by the Wagons, with a great rabble of Carters and disposition, which he saw in many Towns other Varlets, lay among the Carthaginians adjoyning, to yield unto him. Amongthe in their camp; so that little good order was Hostages of the Tarentines, that lately had kept: all thought being set upon a great filed out of Rome, and being overtaken, harvest. Hereupon the Consul bade his men suffered death for their attempt; were some prepare themselves to assail the enemies of the Metapontines, and other Cities of the Camp: and leaving all his impediments Greeks, inhabiting that Eastern part of Italy, great waste and spoil, which the Romans some of his men had getten over the enewithin Eeneventum, he marched thither- which was called of old, Magna Gracia. ward to early in the morning, that he was These people took to heart the death of there with the first break of day. By com- their Hostages, and thought the punishment ing so unexpected, he had well near forced greater than the offence. Wherefore the the Camp on the sudden. But it was very Metapontines, as soon as the Roman garrison strong, and very well defended: so that the was taken from them to defend the Citadel longer the fight continued, the less desire of Tarentum, made no more ado, but openhad Fulvius to lose more of his men in the ed their gates to Hannibal. The Thurines attempt; seeing many of them cast away, would have done the like, upon the like and yet little hope of doing good. There- reason, had not some companies layn in their fore he faid, that it were better to go more Town; which they feared that they should leisurely and substantially to work; to send not be able to master. Nevertheless, they helfor his fellow-Conful, with the rest of their ped themselves by cunning:inviting to their Army; and to lye between Hanno and gates Hanno and Mago, that were near at home ; that neither the Campans should hand : against whom whilest they proffered depart thence, nor the Carthaginians be able their service to Atinius the Roman Captain, to relieve them. Being thus discoursing, they drew him forth to fight, and recoyling and about to found the retrait; he faw that from him, closed up their gates. A little selves to the siege of Capua.

CHAP. III.

he thought good, as if they had been dif- hindhim. charged by the decease of their Leader; so These two great blows, received the one

formality they used in pretending fear, lest thousand men. The Fathers were unwilthe enemy should break in together with the ling in such a time, to reject the vertue of Romans, insaving Atinius himself, and send- any good Souldier, how mean soever his ing him away by Sea; as also in consulting condition were. Wherefore they gave him asmall while (because perhaps many of their the charge of eight thousand: and he himchief men were unacquainted with the pra- felf being a proper man, and talking braveflice) whether they should yield to the Car- ly, gathered up so many voluntaries, as althe inian or no. But this disputation lasted most doubled his number. But meeting not long: for they that had removed the thus with Hannibal, he gave proof of the chief impediment, eatily prevailed in the difference between a stout Centurion, and rest; and delivered up the Town to Hanno one able to command in chief. He and his and Mago. This good fuccess, and hope of fellows were all (in a manner) flain, scarce the like, detained Hannibal in those quar- a thousand of them escaping. Soon after ters, whilest the Consuls fortifying Beneven- this, Hannibal had word, that Cneus Fulvius tum to secure their backs, addressed them a Roman Prætor with eighteen thousand men was in Apulia, very careless and a man Many difasters befell the Romans, in the insufficient for the charge which he held. beginning of this great enterprise. T. Sempro- Thither therefore he hasted to visit him: nius Gracchus, a very good man of War, that hoping to deal the better with the main had of late been twice Conful, was flain, strength of Rome, which pointed at Capua, either by treachery of some Lucans, that when he should have cut off those forces drew him into ambush, or by some Carthagi- that lay in the Provinces about, under men nian stragglers, among whom he fell un- of small ability. Coming upon Fulvius, he awares. His body, or his head, was very ho- found him and his men fo jolly, that needs nourably interred, either by Hannibal him- they would have fought the first night. felf. cr(for the reports agree not) by the Ro- | Wherefore it was not to be doubted, what mans; to whom Hannibal fent it. He was ap- would happen the day following. So he bepointed to lie in Beneventum, there to secure stowed Mago with three thousand of his the back of the Army that should befiege lightest armed, in places thereabout most fit Capua. But his death hapned in an ill time, to for ambush. Then offered battel to Fulvius, the great hinderance of that business. The he soon had him in the trap : whence he Volones or Slaves lately manumifed, for fook made him glad to escape alive ; leaving all. their Enligns, and went every one whither fave two thousand of his followers, dead be-that it asked some labour to seek them out, presently after the other, much assonished and bring them back into their Camp. Ne- the Romans, Nevertheless, all care was taken, vertheless, the Consuls went forward with to gather up the small reliques of the broken their work, and drawing near to Capua, did Armies: and that the Confuls should go all acts of hostility, which they could. Mago substantially forwards with the fiege of the Carthaginian, and the Citizens of Capua Capua: which was of great confequence. gave them an hard welcome, wherein above both in matter of reputation, and in many fifteen hundred Romans were lost. Neither other respects. The two Consuls sate down was it long ere Hunnibal came thither, who before the Town, and C. Claudius Nero, one fought with the Confuls, and had the better; of the Prætors, came with his Army from infomuch that it caused them to dislodge. Sweffula, to their affistance. They made Pro-They removed by night, and went feveral clamation, That who oever would iffue out waies : Fulvius towards Canna, Claudius into of Capua before a certain day prefixed, should Lucania. Hannibal followed after Claudius, have his pardon, and be suffered to enjoy all who having led him a great walk, fetcht a that unto him belonged: which day being compass about, and returned to Capua. It past, there should be no grace expected. This so fell out, that one Marcus Centenius Penula, offer was contumeliously rejected; the Caa stout man, and one that with good com- puans relying on their own strength, and the mendations had discharged the place of a succours attended from Hannibal. Before Centurion, lay with an Army not far from the City was closed up, they sent messengers thence, where Hannibal rested, when he was to the Carthaginian; which found him at weary of hunting after Claudius. This Penu-la had made great vaunts to the Roman Se-hope of gaining the Tarentine Citadel: of nate, of wonders which he would work, if which expectation failing, he turned to Brunhe might be trusted with the leading of five dusum, upon advertisement that he should Zzzzz 2

him of their danger with earnest words; and sended his Trenches against them; and so were with words as bravely re-comforted. well repressed them, that he drave them at He bade them consider, how, a few dayes length back into their City. Neverthelessin fince he had chased the Consuls out of their pursuing them to their gates, he received a fields; and told them, that he would prefent- wound that accompanied him in short space ly come thither again, and fend the Romans after to his grave. 2. Fulvius was held hargoing as fast as before. With this good an der to this task by Hannibal, and the Cartha. iwer the Mellengers returned, and hardly ginian Army. The Roman Camp was even at could get back into the City; which the Ro- point to have been loft; and Hannibal his mans had almost intrenched round. As for Elephants, of which he brought three and Hannibal himself, he was of opinion, that Car thirty, were either gotten within the rampua, being very well manned, and heartily part, or else (for the report varies) being devoted unto his friendship, would hold out some of them slain upon it, fell into the ditch. a long time, and thereby give him leifure to and filled it up in fuch fort, that their bodies do what he thought requisite among the Ta- served as a bridge to the Assailants. It is rentines, and in those Eastern parts of Italy; said, that Hannibal in this tumult caused whilst the Roman Army spent it self in a te- some fugitives that could speak Latin well. dious siege. Thus he lingred, and thereby to proclaim aloud as it were in the Consuls gave the Confuls time both to fortifie them- name, That every one of the Souldiers should selves at Capha, and to dispatch the election shift for himself, and fly betimes unto the of new Magistrates in Rome; whilst he himfelf purfued hopes that never found fuc-

Claudius and Fulvius, when their term of office was expired, were appointed to continue the fiege at Capua; retaining the same there was to raise the fiege by force. Armies, as Proconfuls. The Towns-men often fallied out, rather in a bravery, than nian. The purchase of Capua had (as was likelihood to work any matter of effect; the thought) with held him from taking Rome Enemy lying close within his Trenches, as it felf: and now his defire of winning the Taintending without other violence, to subdue rentine Citadel, had well-near lost Capua; them by famine. Yet against the Campan in respect of which, neither the Citadel.nor horse (fortheir foot was easily beaten)the the City of Tarentum were to have been Romans used to thrust out some troops, that much regarded. Falling therefore into adeshould hold them skirmish. In these exer- sperate anger with himself and his hard forcifes the Campans usually had the better, to tune, that of so many great victories he had the great grief of their proud Enemy; who made no greater use: on the sudden he enscorned to take foil at the hands of such Re- tertained an haughty resolution, even to set bels. It was therefore, devised that some upon Rome; and carry to the walls of that active and couragious young men should proud City, the danger of War that threatlearn to ride behind the Roman men at arms; ned Capua. This, he thought, would be a leaping up, and again dismounting lightly, as mean, to draw the Roman Generals, or one occasion served. These were furnished of them at least, unto the desence of their like the Velites, having each of them three own home. If they role from the fiege with be let in. There the Capuans met him, told opposing himself to the Campans, easily denext hills, for as much as the Camp was already loft. But all would not ferve. The fraud was detected; and the Army having fitten there fo long, had at good leifure strongly intrenched it felf, so as little hope

This did extremely perplex the Carthagior four small darts: which alighting in time their whole Army, then had he his defire: If of conflict, they discharged thick upon the they divided their forces, then was it likely, Enemies horse; whom vanquishing in this that either he or the Campans, should well kind of service, they much disheartned in enough deal with them apart. Neither did the main. The time thus passing, and fa- he despair, that the terrour of his coming mine daily increasing within the City, Han- might so astonish the multitude within nibal came at length, not expected by the Rome, as he might enter some part or other Romans: and taking a Fort of theirs, called of the City. His only fear was, left the Cam-Galatia, fell upon their Camp. At the same pans, being ignorant of his purpose, should time the Capuans issued with their whole think he had forsaken them; and thereupon power, in as terrible manner as they could forthwith yield themselves to the Enemy. devise: setting all their multitude of unser- To prevent this danger, he sent letters to viceable people by the walls, which with a Capua by a fubtle Numidian; who running as loud noise of Pans and Basons, troubled those a fugitive into the Roman Camp, conveyed that were occupied in fight. Appius Claudius | himfelf thence over the innermost Trenches into the City. The Journey to Rome was lages, that fled out of all parts round about. Wound, to continue the fiege at Capua.

offer to pursue or coast him. Then hasted without peril. Of Numidians that had shifthe away toward Rome, staying no longer in ed aside, and fallen (upon some displeasures) any one place, than he needs must. Yet from Hannibal to the Romans, there were found he the Bridges over Liris broken some twelve hundred then in Rome; which down by the people of Frigella: which, asit were appointed by the Confuls, to pass stopped him a little on his way; so it made thorow the Town, from the Mount Avenhim the more grievoully to spoil their time, to the Gate Collistua, where it was Lands, while the Bridges were in mending. thought that their fervice might be useful; The nearer that he drew to Rome, the grea- among broken wayes, and Garden-walls lyter waste he made: his Numidians running ing in the suburbs. The faces of these n.en, to be performed with great celerity: no The Mellengers of these news came apace, fmall hope of good success resting in the one after another into the City; some few suddenness of his arrival there. Wherefore bringing true advertisements; but the most he caused his men to have in a readiness ten of them reporting the conceits of their own dayes victuals ; and prepared as many boats, fear. All the Streets and Temples in Kome as might in one night transport his Army were pettred with women, crying, and prayover the River Vulturnus. This could not be ing, and rubbing the Altars with their hair, done so closely, but that the Roman Gene- because they could do none other good. The rals, by some fugitives, had notice of his pur- Senators were all in the great Market, or pose. With this danger therefore they ac- place of Assembly; ready to give their adquainted the Senate; which was therewith vice, if it were alked, or to take directions affected, according to the diversity of mens given by the Magistrates. All places of opinions, in a case of such importance. Some most importance were stuffed with souldiers: gave counsel to let alone capua, yea, and all it being uncertain, upon which part Hinniplaces elle, rather than to put the Town of bal would fall. In the midit of this trepi-Rome into peril of being taken by the ene- dation, there came news that Quintus Fulmy. Others were so far from allowing of vius, with part of the Army from Capua, was this, as they wondred how any man could hasting to the defence of the City. The Ofthink, that Hannibal, being unable to relieve fice of a Proconful did expire, at his return Capua, should judge himself strong enough home, and entring into the Gates of Rome. to win Rome; and therefore stoutly faid, Wherefore, that Fulvius might lose nothing That those Legions, which were kept at by coming into the City, in time of such home for defence of the City, would ferve need, an Act was passed, That he should have the turn well enough, to keep him out and equal power with the Confuls during his fend him thence, if he were so unwise as to abode there. He and Hannibal arrived at come thither. But it was finally concluded, Rome, one soon after another: Fulvius hathat Letters should be sent to Fulviss and ving been long held occupied in passing over Claudius, acquainting them perfectly with Vulturnus; and Hannibal receiving impedithe forces, that at the present were in Rome: ment in his journey, as much as the Counwho, fince they knew best what the strength try was able to give. The Confuls, and Fulwas which Hannibal could bring along with viss incamped without the Gates of Rome, him, were best able to judge, what was need-attending the Carthaginian. Thither they ful to oppose him. So it was referred unto called the Senate : and as the danger grew the discretion of these Generals at Capua, to nearer and greater; so took they more caredo as they thought behoveful: and if it ful & especial order against all occurrences. might conveniently be, neither to raise Hannibal came to the River Anio, or Anien, their flege, nor yet to put the City of Rome three miles from the Town; whence he adinto much adventure. According to this De- vanced with two thousand horse, and rode cree of the Senate, & Fulvius took fifteen along a great way under the Walls, viewing thousand foot, and a thousand horse, the the tight thereof, and considering how he choice of his whole Army; with which he might best approach it. But he either went, hasted toward Rome; leaving App. Claudius, or (as the Roman Story faith) was driven who could not travel by reason of his away, without doing or receiving any hurt. Many tumults rose in this while among the Hannibal having passed over Vulturnus, people; but were suppressed by the care and burnt up all his boats, and left nothing that diligence of the Senators. Above the rest, might transport the Enemy, in case he should one accident was both troublesome, and not before him; driving the Country, and kill- and their furniture, wherein they differed ing or taking multitudes of all forts and not from the followers of Hannival; bred fisch mistaking, as caused a great uproar who had sent the As into the Camp. But in mong the people: all crying out that Aven- this present example of the Romans, appears tine was taken, and the Enemy gotten with- withall a great magnanimity; whereby in the walls. The norse was such, that men they sustained their reputation, and augcould not be informed of the truth : and the mented it no lefs, than by this bold attempt ftreets were fo full of cattel, and hulband- of Hannibal it might feem to have been dimimen, which were fled thither out of the Vil- nithed. Neither could they more finely have lages actioning, that the pullage was stopt checked the glorious conceits of their eneup; and the poor Numidians pitifully bea- my, and taken away the difgrace of that ten from the house tops, with stones and fear, which clouded their valour at his first other weapons that came next to hand, by coming; than by making such demonstratithe desperate multitude, that would have ons, when once they had recovered spirit, run out at the Gates, had it not been certain how little they esteemed him. To this purwho lay under the Walls. To remedy the posetherefore that very piece of ground on like inconveniences, it was ordained, That all which the Carthaginian lay encamped, was which had been diffators, Confuls, or Con- fold in Rome: and fold it was nothing under fors . Should have authority as Magistrates , till the value, but at as good a rate, as if it had the Enemy departed. The day following Han- been in time of peace. This dignity comnibal palledover Anien, and presented bat- ing to his ear, incensed Hannibal so much, tel to the Romans, who did not wifely if that he made port-fale of the Silver-smiths they undertook it. It is faid, that a terrible shops, which were near about the Market or showre of rain, caused both Romans and Car- Common place in Rome; as if his own title theginians to return into their feveral to the houses within the Town were no Camps, and that this happened two dayes whit worfe, than any Roman Citizens could together, the weather breaking up and clea- be unto that piece of ground, whereon he ring as foon as they were departed afunder : raifed his Tent. But this counter-practice certain it is that Hannibal, who had brought was nothing worth. The Romans did feek to along with him no more than ten dayes pro- manifest that affurance which they justly vision could not endure to itay there, until had conceived; Hannibal, to make shew of his victuals were all spent. In which regard continuing in an hope, which was already the Romans, if they suffered him to waste his past. His victuals were almost spent : and time and provisions, knowing that he could of those ends, that he had proposed unto not abide there long, did as became well himself, this Journey had brought forth none advised men: if they offered to fight with other, than the same of his much daring. him, and either had the better, or were part- Wherefore he brake up his Camp: and doed (as is faid) by some accident of weather, ing what spoil he could to the Roman Territhe commendations must be given to their tory, without sparing religious places, wherefortune. The terror of Hannibals coming to in wealth was to be gotten, he passed like a the City, how great soever it was at the first, tempest over the Country, and ran toward yet after some leisure, and better notice ta- the Eastern Sea so fast, that he had almost ken of their forces, which appeared less than taken the City of Rhegium before his arrival the first apprehension had formed them, was was feared or suspected. As for Capus, he much and foon abated. Hereupon it helped gave it lost : and is likely to have curfed the well, that at the same time the Supply appointed for spain, after the death of the two lime to relieve that fair City, fince he Scipio's, were fent out of the Town, and went had no other way to vent his grief. forth at the Gate, whilft one Carthaginian lay before another. In all Pinck terrours, as Proclamation anew, that whoso would they are called, whereof there is either no yield before a certain day, might fafely do cause known, or no cause answerable to the it. This, and the very return of Fulvisa, greatness of the sudden consternation; tisa without any more appearance of Hannibal, good remedy to do somewhat quite contra- gave the Capuans to understand, that they ry to that which the danger would require, were abandoned, and their case desperate were it such as men have sushioned it in their I o trust the Roman pardon proclaimed, every amazed conceits. Thus did Alexander cause ry mans conscience of his own evil deterts, his fouldiers to disarm themselves, when told him, that it was a vanity : and some they were all on a sudden in a great fear of faint hope was given, by Hanno and Bostar, they wist not what. And thus did Clearchus Captains of the Carthaginian Garrison

Q. Fabius returning back to Capus, made pacific a foolish uproat in his Army, by pro-claiming a reward unto him that could tell again, if means could only be found, how to convey such Letters unto him as they should set them free from that cruel rewould write. The carriage of the Letters venge, which the Enemies fought upon of Boftar and his fellow.

his proceedings. If this were fo, justly might ing them first a good while with rods; after they curse their own malice, which had cast which he struck off their heads. theminto this remediless necessity. How- This terrible example of vengeance, was undertaken by fome Numidians; who their bodies. About feven and twenty of running as fugitives, out of the Town into the Senators there were, that liking well the Roman Camp, waited fit opportunity to of his motion, ended their lives together by make an escape thence with their packets, drinking poylon. All the rest hoping for But it happened ere they could convey more mercy than they haddeserved, yielded themselves away, that one of them was de- simply to discretion. So one of the Towntected by an harlot following him out of gates was fet open; whereat a Roman Legithe Town; and the Letters of Bostar and on, with some other Companies, entring, dif-Hanno were taken and opened, containing a armed the Citizens; apprehended the Carvehement entreaty unto Hannibal, that he thaginian Garrison; and commanded all the would not thus for fake the Capuans and Senators of Capua to go forth into the Rothem.For(faid they)we came not hither to man Camp. At their coming thither, the Promake War against Rhegium and Tarentum, contuls laid Irons upon them all, and combut against the Romans: whose Legions, manding them totell what store of gold and wherefoever they lye, there also should the silver they had at home, tent them into sate Carthaginian Army be ready to attend custody; some to Cales, others to Theanum. them; and by taking such a course, have Touching the general multitude, they were we gotten those victories at Trebia, Thrafy- reserved unto the discretion of the Senate, mene, and Canna. In fine, they befought him, yet fo hardly used by Fulvius in the mean that he would not dishonour himself, and while, that they had little cause of hope or betray them to their enemies, by turning comfort in this adversity. Ap. Claudius was another away; as if it were his only care, brought even to the point of death, by the that the City should not be taken in his full wound which he had lately received; yet view; promifing to make a desperate fally, was he not inexorable to the Campans; as haif he would once more adventure to fet up- ving loved them well in former times, and on the Roman Camp. Such were the hopes having giving his Daughter in marriage to that Pacuvius, of whom he spake before. But But Hamnibal had already done his best ; this facility of his Colleague, made Fulvius and now began to faint under the burden the more haity in taking vengeance; for of that War, wherein as afterward he pro- fear, lest upon the like respects, the Roman tested he was vanquished by Hanno and his Senate might prove more gentle, than he Persians, in the Carthaginian Senate, rather thought behoveful to the common fafety, than by any force of Rome. It may well be, and honour of their state. Wherefore he as a thing incident in like cases, that some took the pains to ride by night unto Theaof those which were besieged in Capua, had num, and from thence to Cales; where been sent over by the Hannonians, to ob- he caused all the Campan prisoners to suffer serve the doings of Hannibal, and to check death; binding them to stakes, and scourg-soever it were, the Letters directed unto which the Carthaginians could not hinder, Hannibal, fell (as is shewed) unto the Ro- made all Towns of Italy the less apt to follow man Proconsuls hands; who cutting off the vain hope of the Campans; and bred a the hands of all such counterfeit fugitives, general inclination, to return upon good as carried such messages, whipt them back conditions to the Roman side. The Atellans, into the Town. This miserable spectacle Calatines and Sabatines, people of the Camsbrake the hearts of the Campans, fo that the pans, that in the former change had followmultitude crying out upon the Senate, with ed the fortune of Capua, made also now the menacing terms, caused them to affemble like submission, for very fear and want of and confult, about the yielding up of Capua ability to relift. They were therefore uled unto the Romans. The bravest of the Se- with the like rigour, by Fulvius; who dealt nators and such as a few years since, had so extremely with them all, that he brought been most forward in joyning with Hanni- them into desperation. Wherefore some of bal, understood well enough whereunto the their young Gentlemen burning with fire of matter tended. Wherefore one of them in-vited the rest home to supper; telling them, means by night-time, to set on fire many that when they had made good chear, he houses, that a great part of the City was like would drink to them such an health, as to have been consumed. The beginning of the fire in divers places at once, argued that it mighty men in that Island, were the Ringwas no casualty. Wherefore liberty was pro- leaders; being incited by Hanno a Carthagiclaimed unto any flave, and other fufficient nian, that promifed the affiftance of his reward to any free man, that should disco- Country. Neither were the Carthavinians in ver who those locendiaries were. Thus all this enterprise so careless, as in the rest of came out; and the Campans being detected their main undertakings, about the fame by a flave of their own (to whom above his time. Yet it had been better if their care liberty promised, was given about the summ had been directed unto the prosecution of of an hundred marks ) had the punishment that main business in Italy; whereon this answerable to their deserts. Fulvius hereby and all other hopes depended. For it would being more and more incented against this have sufficed, if they could have hindred wretched people, held them in a manner as the Romans from fending an Army into Sarprisoners within their Walls: and this ex- dinia. Harlecoras with his followers might treme severity caused them at length to be- well enough have served to drive out Duincome suppliants unto the Roman Senate; that tis Mutius the Prætor; who lay fick in the some period might be set unto their miseries. Province; and not more weak in his own That whereupon the Senators resolved in body, than in his train. But whilst they the end, was worse than all that which they sought revenge of that particular injury, had fuffered before. Only two poor women whereof the fense was most grievous; they in Capua (of which one had been an harlot) neglected the opportunity of requiring were found not guilty of the late rebellion. those that had done them wrong, and of The rest were, some of them, with their the securing themselves from all injuries in wives and children fold for flaves, and their the future. Their fortune also in this engoods conficated; others laid in prison, and terprise was such, as may feem to have enreferved to further deliberation: but the ge- couraged them from being at the like nerallity of them commanded to depart out charge, in cases of more importance. For, of Campania by a certain day, and confined whereas they fent over Aldrubal, furnamed unto several places, as best liked the angry the Bald, with a competent Fleet and Army, victors. As for the Town of Capua, it was affilted in this expedition by Hanno the Aufuffered to stand, in regard of the beauty thor of the rebellion, and by Mago a Gentleand commodious fight: but no corporation man of the Earchine house, and near kinfonly a Roman Provoft was every year fent whole Fleet, by extremity of foul weather, to govern over those that should inhabit it, was cast upon the Ealeares; so beaten, and people of Rome, after many great loffes in ner quite vanquished, ere these their friends the present War. After this, the glory of could arrive to succour them. Hannibal began to thine with a more dim Titus Manlius was fent from Rome with light than before: his oyl being far spent two and twenty thousand foot, and twelve and that which should have revived his hundred horse, to settle the estate of that flame, being unfortunately flied; as shall be Island, which he had taken in, and annexed told in place convenient.

922

ø. XV.

How the Carthaginians, making a party in reputation of those men, and their families, sicil by the Carthaginians and their friends, race after him, were the most ready and best were brought to a quiet and happy end by approved means, to procure the benefit of the industrious valour of the Romans. The the people subdued. Hereby the Romans sardinian rebellion was great and sudden: held very sure intelligence in every Proabove thirty thousand being up in arms, ere vince, and had alwayes in readiness fit men the Roman forces could arrive there to sup- to reclaim their subjects, if they fell into any or form of policy was allowed to be therein; man to Hannibal: it so fell out, that the and to do justice. This was the greatest ad, in such evil plight, that the Sardinians had and most important, hitherto done by the even spent their hearts, and were in a man-unto the Roman Dominion, long before this, in his Consulship. It was a laudable custom of the Romans, to preserve and uphold in their feveral Provinces, the greatness and Sardinia and Sicil, held War against the by whom each Province had been first sub-Romans in those Islands, and were over- dued unto their Empire. If any injury were done unto the Provincials, if any grace were to be obtained from the Senate, or 7 Hilft things passed thus in Italy, the whatsoever accident required the assistance commotions raised in Sardinia and of a Patron; the first Conqueror, and his press it. One Harscoras with his Son Hyoftus, such disorder, as would otherwise have required at Calaris, or Carallis, where mooring his ving Sardinia in quiet. thins, he passed up into the Country, and The war in Sicil was of greater lengths required a greater charge and trouble. The wonn the Town. All other Cities of the Ille coming of Manlius retained in obedience that had rebelled, following the example of all that were not already broken too far out. Cornus, and yielded unto the Roman; who. Yet was Harlecoras fo strong in field, that impoting upon them such increase of tribute, Manines was compelled to arm his Mariners: or other punishment, as best forted with the without whom he could not have made up nature of their leveral offences, or their that number of two and twenty thousand, ability to pay, returned back to Calaris with whereof we have spoken before: he landed a great booty, and from thence to Rame lea-fought out the enemy. Hyoftus, the Sou and every way more burdenfome to Rome: of Harlicorus, had then the command of the as also the victory brought more honour Sardinian Army lescunto him by his Father, and profit, for that the Romans became who was gon abroad into the Country, to thereby, not only favors of their own, as in draw in more friends to their fide. This Sardinia, but Lords of the whole Country, young Gentleman would needs adventure by annexing the City and dominion of Syrato get honour, by giving battle to the Ro- cufe, to that which they enjoyed before Soon mans at his own discretion. So he rashly ad- after the battle at canne, the old King of Syventured to fight with an old Souldier; by racuse died; who had continued long a stedwhom he received a terrible overthrow; fait friend unto the Romans, and greatly reand loft in one day above thirty thousand of lieved them in this present war. He left his his followers. Hyoftus himself, with the Kingdom to Hieronymus his grand-child, rest of his broken troops, got into Cornus, that was about fifteen years of age ; Gelo his the chief Town of the Illand; whither Man- Son, that should have been his heir, being lius pursued them. Very soon after this de- dead before. To this young King his sucfeature came Asdrubal with his Carthagini- ceffor, Hiero appointed fifteen tutors; of ans: too late to win all Sardinia in such which the principal were Andronodorus Zoihalt as he might have done, if the tem- lus, and Themistius; who had married his pest had not hindred his voyage; yet soon daughters or the daughters of Gelo. The rest enough, and strong enough to save the were such, as he judged most likely to pre-Town of Cornus, and put a new spirit in- serve the Kingdom, by the same Art, whereto the Rebels. Manlius hereupon with by himselfhad gotten, and so long kept it. drew himself back to Calaris; where he But within a little while, Andronodorus waxhad not staved long, ere the Sardinians (such ling weary of so many coadjutors, began to of them as adhered to the Roman party | commend the fufficiency of the young craved his affistance; their Country being Prince, as extraordinary in one of his years; wasted by the Carthaginians, and the rebels, and said, that he was able to rule the Kingwith whom they had refused to joyn. This dom without help of any Protector. Thus drew Manlius forth of Calaris; where, if he by giving over his own charge, he caused had stayed a little longer, Afdrubal would others to do the like; hoping thereby to get have fought him out with some blemish to the King wholly into his hands; which came his reputation. But the fame of Asdrubal and to passin a fort, as he desired. For Hieronyhis company, appears to have been greater mus, laying afide all care of government, than was their strength. For after some trial gave himself wholly over to his pleasures: made of them in few skirmishes, Manlius or, if he had any regard of his Royal digniadventred all to the hazard of a battle; ty, it was only in matter of exterior shew; wherein he flew twelve thousand of the ene- as wearing a Diadem, with ornaments of mies; and took of the Sardinians and Car- purple, and being attended by an armed thaginians three thousand. Four hours the guard. Hereby he offended the eyes of his battle lasted; and victory at length fell to people, that had never feen the like in Hiero; the Romans, by the flight of the Islanders, or in Gelo his Son. But much more he ofwhole courages had been broken in their un- fended them, when by his infolent behaprosperous fight, not many dayes before. The viour, suitable to his outward pomp, he gave death of young Hyoftus, and of his Father proof, that in course of life, he would revive Harsicoras, that slew himself for grief, toge- the memery of Tyrants dead long since, ther with the captivity of Asdrubal himself from whom he took the pattern of his habit. with Mago and Hanno the Carthaginians, He grew proud, lustful, cruel, and dangemade the victory the more famous. The van- rous to all that were about him; so that such quished Army fled into Corms, whither of his late tutors as could escape him by Manlius followed them, and in thort space flight, were glad to live in banishment : the rest being most of them put to death by the but Grand-children of a banished strace. Tyrant: many of them dying by their own fan. These grew into such favour with Hishands, to avoid the danger of his displea- ronymus, that they drew him whither they fure, that feemed worse than death it self. listed. So that when App. Claudius the Ro-Only Andronodorus, Zoilus, and one Thraso, man Prætor, hearing what was towards. taking little heed of dangers far off, regard-Rome, the prevalent fortunes of Carthage. had laid out in vain, to shoulder up a falling house. Wherefore he dealt with Hannibal; who readily entred into good correspon- in Hieronymus the new King. dence with him, that was maintained by

rest

continued in grace with him, and were his made a motion of renewing the Confedera-Counsellours, but not of his Cabinet cy, between the people of Rome, and the King These, howsoever they agreed in other of syracuse; his messengers were dismissed points, were at some differtion about the with an open scoff. For Hieronymus would main point of adhering, either to the Ro- needs have them tell him the order of the mans, or to the Carthaginians. The two for- fight at Canna, that he might thereby learn mer of them were wholly for the Kingsplea- how to accommodate himself, faying, that fure, which was fet on change : but Thrafo, he could hardly believe the Carthaginians: having more regard of his honour and profit, fo wonderful was the victory, as they rewas very earnest to continue the amity with ported it. Having thus dismissed the Romans. Rome. Whilft as yet it remained some- he sent Embassadours to Carthage, wherehe what doubtful which way the King would concluded a league: with condition, at first. incline, a conspiracy against his person was that a great part of the Island should be andetected by a Groom of his; to whom one nexed to his Dominion; but afterward that Theodorus had broken the matter. Theo- he should reign over all sicil; and the Cardorus hereupon was apprehended, and tor- thaginians rest satisfied with what they mented; thereby to wring out of him the could get in Italy. At these doings Appins whole practice, and the names of the under- Claudius did not greatly ftir; partly for the takers. Long it was ere he would speak indignities that were offered; partly for that any thing: but yielding (as it feemed ) in the it behoved not the Romans to entertain end, unto the extremity of the torture, he more quarrels than were enforced upon confessed, that he had been set on by Thra- them by necessity; and partly (as may seem) fo; whom he appeached of the treason, to- for that the reputation, both of himself, and gether with many more, that were near in of his City, had received such blemish, by love or peace unto Hieror 1888. All these that which happened unto him in his jourtherefore were put to death, being innocent lacy, as much discountenanced him when he of the crime wherewith they were charged. came into Sicil, and forbade him to look But they that were indeed the Confpira-big. The money that Hiere had bestowed tors, walked boldly in the streets, and never formerly upon the Romans, wherewith to thrunk for the matter: affuring them- relieve them in their necessity, this Appins felves, that the resolution of Theodors was to carry back unto him; it being refuwould yield to no extremity. Thus they all fed by the Roman Senate, with greater braescaped, and soon after found means to exe- very than their present fortune would alcute their purpole. The King himfelf, low.Butinftead of returning the mony with when Thraso was taken out of the way, quick- thanks, as he had been directed, and as it ly refolved upon fiding with the Carthagi- had been noted abroad that he should do; nians, whereto he was very inclinable be- the war against Philip King of Macedon fore. Young men, when first they grow Ma- (whereof we have spoken before) compelsters of themselves, love to seem wifer than led the Romans to lay aside vain-glory, and their Fathers, by taking different courses. fend word after him, that he should configu And the Liberality of Hiero to the Romans, in that mony over to Marcus Valerius; of whole their great necessity, had of late been such, voyage into Greece, the City had not as might have been termed excessive, were otherwise wherewith to bear the charge. it not in regard of his providence; wherein he took order for his own estate, that de-claudius (which name in the whole continupended upon theirs. But the young Nephew | ance of that Family is taxed with pride) his errand was changed, from a glorious oftened only the things present; the weakness of tation of the Roman magnanimity, into such a pitiful tune of thanks-giving, as must needs and the much money that his Grand-father have bred forrow and commiseration in fo true a friend as Hiero; or, if it were delivered after his death, matter of pastime and scorn,

But whilst Hieronymus was more defirous Hippocrates and Epicides, Carthaginians born, of war, than well resolved how to begin it; his own death changed the form of have fought to murder all without diffe-State of spraeufe; which thereby might have and that, fince he beheld their orderly pro-

things, and bred a great innovation in the rence, that any way belonged to the Tyrant; prospered more than ever, had it been wisely ceeding, and their care, not to ravish their ligoverned. Hippocrates and Epicides, of whom berty perforce, but to wed it unto them for we fpake before, were fent about the evershe was willingly come to them forth of Country with two thousand men, to solicite his strength, and surrendered up the charge the Towns, and perswade them to shake committed unto him, by one that had been off their obedience to the Romans. The an evil Master both to him and them. Here-King himself with an Army of fifteen thou-upon great joy was made, and Prætors chofind horse and foot, went to Leontium a Ci- sen (as in former times) to govern the City. ty of his own Dominion: hoping that the of which Andronodorus was one, and the fame of his preparation, would make the chief. But fuch was his defire of Soveraignwhole Island fall to him in all hatte; and ac- ty, and so vehement were the instigations cept him for Soveraign. There the Conspirator of his wife, that shortly he began to prators took him on the sudden, as he was pal cife with Hippocrates, Fpicides, and other fing thorow a narrow street: and rushing Captains of the Mercenaries; hoping to hetween him and his guard, struck him make himself strong by their help, that were dead. Forthwith liberty was proclaimed; least pleased with the change. Hippocrates and the found of that word to joy fully an- and Epicides had been with the Syracufian swered by the Leontines, that the guard of Pixtors, and told them, that being sent from Hieroninus had little courage to revenge Hannibal to Hieronymus, they, according to their Mafters death. Yet, for fear of the worst, instructions of their Captain, had done him, a great largess was promised unto the Soul- whilst he lived, what service they could; diers, with rewards unto their Captains; and that now they were defirous to return which wrought so effectually, that when ma- home. They requested therefore that they ny wicked acts of the murdered King were might be friendly dismissed, and with a conreckoned up, the Army as in detestation of voy, that might keep them from falling inhis bad life, suffered his carkass to lye un- to the hands of the Romans, and set them buried. This news ran quickly to Syracuse; safe at Locri. This was easily granted; both whither some of the Conspirators, taking al- for that the syracusan Magistrates were fo of the Kings horses, posted away sto signi- well contented to earn thanks of Hannibal, fie all that had passed, to stir up the people with such a little courtesse; and for that to liberty, and to prevent Andronodorus, if they thought it expedient to rid their Town he or his followers would make offer to quickly of this troublesome couple, which usurp a tyranny. The Syracustans hereupon were good Souldiers, and gracious with the presently took arms, and made themselves Army, but otherwise lewd men. It was not Masters of their own City. Andronodorus the desire of these two Sicilians, to be gone on the other fide fortified the Palace, and so hastily as they made shew; they were the Island; being yet uncertain what to do: more mindful of the business for which Hanbetween desire of making himself a sove- nibal had sent them. Wherefore they infinuaraign Lord, and fear of suffering punishment ted themselves into the bosomes of such as asa Tyrant, if his enterprise miscarried. His were most likely to fill the Army with tuwife Demarata, that was the daughter of mult, especially of the Roman fugitives, and Hiero, cherished him in his hopes; putting those that had cause to mistrust what should himin mind of that well-known Proverb, become of themselves, when the Romans which Dionysius had used ; That a Tyrant and Syracusans were come to agreement. Should keep his place, till he were baled out of it Such instruments as these, Andronodorus had by the heels, and not ride away from it on great need of: as also of many other, to help horse-back. But fear, and better counsel, him in his dangerous attempt. He sound prevailed so far, that Andronodorus, having Themistiur, that had married Harmonia, the slept upon the matter, dissembled his af Sifter of Hieronymus, ready to take his part; fections, and deferred his hope unto better as being carried with the like passions of his opportunity. The next day he came forth, own, and of his wife. But feeking to inand made a speech unto the people; telling create the number of his adherents, he rethem that he was glad to fee, how prudent- vealed the matter to one, that revealed all ly they behaved themselves in so great a to the rest of the Prætors. Hereupon it solchange; that he had flood in fear, left they lowed, that he & Themiflim, entring into the would not have contianed themselves with Senate, were slain out of hand: and afterin the bounds of discretion; but rather ward accused to the people, of all the evil Aaaaaa 2

gates,

which they had done, whileft Hieronymus | many acts of hostility against the Romans lived, as by his authority; and now fince at- first in secret, afterward more openly and tempted, in feeking to usurp the tyranny boldly. Marcellus, rightly understanding themselves. It was also declared, that the the purpose of these two brethren, sent word daughters of Hiero and Gelo were accessary unto the Syracusians, that they had already to this dangerous treason: and that the un- broken the league; and that the peace would quiet spirits of these women would never never bekept sincerely untill this turbulent cease to work, until they had recovered pair of brethren were expelled the Island those royal ornaments and Soveraign po- Epicides, fearing to fustain the blame of his wer, whereof their family was now dif- brothers proceedings, and more defirousto possessed. These daughters therefore of set forward the war, than to excuse any Hiero and Gelo were also condemned to breach of peace; went himself unto the dye, and executioners presently sent by Leontines, whom he perswaded to rebel the entaged people, to take away their against the Syracuscass. For he said, that lives. Demarata and Harmonia had perhaps deserved this heavy sentence : but there was little reason why the Leontines Heraclea, the daughter of Hiero, and wife of should not be enfranchised by his death, as Solippus, being altogether innocent, was mur- well as the Syracufians ; yea or much radered, together with her two young daugh- ther, all things confidered; fince in their ters, in the halty execution of this ralh judg-ment. Her husband sospepus was a lover of proclaimed. Wherefore, since they of sythe Common-wealth; and in that respect so racuse were not contented to enjoy the Freehated by Hieromymus, that being fent Em- dom purchased among the Leontines; but baffadour to King Ptolomy, &c. he durst not thought it good reason, that they should return home, but stayed in Egypt as a bani- bear Dominion over those that had broken shed man. This consideration when it was the Chain, wherewith both the one and the too late, together with some pitiful acci- other were bound : his advice was, that such dents accompanying the flaughter, fo affect- their arrogancy should be checked betimes. ed the multitude, that (pardoning them- ere it could get any colour of right by prefelves)all cryed out upon the Authors of fo Comption. Hereunto occasion was given by foul a butchery. Being thus incensed against one article of the League, made of late by the Senate; and knowing not otherwise how the Romans and Syracusans. For it was to satisfie their anger, they called for an agreed, That all which had been subject to election of new Prætors, in the room of Hiero and Hieronymus, should henceforth be Andronodorus and Themistius, that were late- Vasfals unto the State of Syracuse. Against ly flain : meaning to substitute such in their this article, if the Leontines would take explaces, as the Senators should have little ception, and thereby challenge their own cause to like. At the election were present due; Epicides told them, that in this novela great rout, not only of the poorer Citi- ty of change, they had fit opportunity to zens, but of fouldiers that preffed into the recover the freedom, which their fathers throng. One of these named Epicides Præ- had lost not many ages before. Neither was tor; another named Hippocrates: and the it unreasonable, which this crafty Carthagiless that the old Prætors and Senators ap- nian propounded; if the Leontines had been proved this nomination, the more eager was subdued by the same hand, which took lithe multitude; and by a general cry forced berty from the Syracusans. But seeing they them to be accepted. These being made had long fince yielded unto spracuse, and Prætors did what they could to hinder the been subject unto that City, by what form agreement that was in hand, between the foever it was grounded; this claim of liber-Syraculians and the Romans. But having ftri- ty was rather feafonable, than just. Neverven in vain, and seeing that the people stood theless, the motion of Epicides was highly in fear of Ap. Claudius, and of Marcellus that approved : infomuch that when meffengers was lately come into sicil; they gave way came foon after from syracuse, to rebuke the unto the time, and inferred the old league of Leontines, for that which they had done Hiero to be re-confirmed, which afterward against the Romans; and to denounce unto they purposed to dissolve by practice. The Hippocrates and Epicides, that they should Leontines had some need of a garrison; and to get them gone, either to Locri, or whither them was sent Hippocrates the Prætor, at else they listed, so that they stayed not in tended by such fugitives, and mercenary Sicil: word was returned, That they of fouldiers, as were most burdensome to Syra- Leontium had not requested the Syracusians, cuse. Thither when he came, he began to do to make any bargains for them with the

Romans, nor thought themselves bound to so presented themselves to the Army. Six observe the covenants, which others with- hundred men of Crete were in the vantout warrant had made in their names. This guard; that had been well used by Hierongperemptory answer was forthwith reported mus: and some of them greatly bound unto unto Marcellus by the Syracultans; who Hannibal, who had taken them prisoners in offered him their affistance in doing justice the Italian war, and lovingly dismissed them. upon the Leontines their Rebels; with con- Thefe Cretians therefore welcomed the two dition. That when the Town was taken, it brethren, and bade them be of good chear. might be theirs again. Marcellus required faying, That no man should do them harm. nobetter fatisfaction: but forth-with took as long as they could use their weapons. the business in hand, which he dispatched in Herewithall the Army was at a stand; and one day. At the first affault Leontium was the rumour of this accident ran swiftly taken, all fave the Castle; whereinto Hippo- from man to man, with general approbation. crates and Epicides fled: and stealing thence | The Prætors thought to help the matter by away by night, coveighed themselves into severity, which would not serve. For when the Town of Herbesus. The first thing that they commanded these two traitors to be Marcellus did, when he had won the Town, laid in Irons, the exclamation was so violent was the same, which other Roman Captains against them, that fain they were to let all used after victory, to seek out the fugitive alone, and return, uncertain what course to Roman flaves and renegado's, whom he cauftake, unto Megara, where they were lodged ed all to die: the rest both of the Towns- the night before. Thither when they came, men and Souldiers, he took to mercy, for- Hippocrates devised a trick, whereby to help bearing also to strip or spoyl them. But the himself, and better the uncertain case fame of his doings was bruited after a con- wherein he stood. He caused Letters of his trary fort. It was faid, that he had flain Man, own penning, to be intercepted by some of Woman and Child, and put the Town to his most trusty Cretans, directed ( as they fack. These news met the Syracustan Army made shew ) from the Syracustan Prætors to upon the way, as it was going to joyn with Marcellus. The contents hereof were. That Marcellus, who had ended his busines be- Marcellus had well done, in committing all fore. About eight thousand Mercenaries to the sword among the Leontines: but that there were, that had been sent forth of sy- it further behoved him, to make the like racuse, under solis and Dinomines, two of dispatch of all the mercenaries belonging to the Prætors; to serve against the Leontines Syracuse; which were offensive, all of them and other rebels. These Captains were holdingeneral, to the liberty of the City, and nest men. and well affected to their Coun- the peace with Rome. When this counterfeit try: but the Souldiers that followed them, Epiftle was openly rehearfed, the uproar had those diseases, with which all mercena- was such, that softs and his fellow Prætor, ries are commonly infected. They took the were glad to for take the Camp, and fly for matter deeply to heart, that their fellow their lives. All the Syraculians remaining fouldiers (as now they termed those against behind, had been cut in pieces by the enwhom they went) had been so cruelly but- raged Souldiers, if the two Artificers of the chered: and hereupon they fell to mutiny ; fedition had not faved their lives; rather though what to demand, or with whom to to keep them as pledges, and by them, to be angry, they could not tell. The Prætors win their friends within the Town, than for therefore thought it best, to turn their un- any good will. They perswaded also a misquiet thoughts another way, and fet them chievous knave, that had ferved among it the awork in some place else; for as much as at Leontines, to justifie the bruit of Marcellus Leontium there was no need of their service. cruelty, and to carry home the news to Sy-So towards Herbesin they marched; where racuse, as an eye-witness. This incensed not lay Hippocrates and Epicides, the architects only the multitude, but some of the Senate; of all this mischief, devising what further and filled the whole Town with causeless harm they might do; but now fo weakly indignation. In good time (faid some ) was accompanied, that they seemed unable to the avarice and cruelty of the Romans deescape the punishments belonging to their tected: who had they in like fort gotten offences past. Hereof the two brethren were into Syracuse, would have dealt much worse, no less well aware: and therefore adven- where their greedy appetites might have tured upon a remedy little less desperate been tempted with a far greater booty. than their present case. They issued forth of Whilst they were thus discoursing, and de-Herbesus unarmed, with Olive branches in vising how to keep out the wicked Romans, their hands, in manner of Suppliants; and Hippocrates with his Army came to the mulet; for want of help, they would be be- rour in the very beginning; but didhis best traved to their enemies. The Prætors, with both by Land and Sea. Nevertheless all his the best and wifest of the Senate, would fain labour was disappointed, and his hope of have kept him out : but the violence of the prevailing by open force, taken from him by touldiers to to ce a gate, was no whit greatheill fucceis of two or three of the first afcor, than the head-firong fury of those with- faults. Yet was it not the vertue of the Dein the Town that laboured to break it open. fendants, or any strength of the City that So he entred and immediately fell upon the bred fuch despair of halty victory. But there Plators, whom (being for saken by all men) lived at that time in Syracuse Archimedes the he put to the fword, and made flaughter of noble Mathematician : who at the request them and their followers till night. The of Hiero the late King, that was his kinfman. next day he went opently to work; and, af- had framed fuch engines of war, as being in ter the common example of Tyrants, gave this extremity put in use, did more mischief liberty unto all flaves and prisoners; and to the Romans than could have been being fortified with adherents of the world wrought by the Canon, or any instruments and basest fort, made himself and his bro- of Gun-powder; had they in that age been ther Prætors, in Title, but in effect, Lords known. This Archimedes discourling once of Stracule. great alteration, he thought it no time for wherein it is, if there were fome other him to fit itill, and attend the further iffue, earth, or place of fure footing, whereon a He fent Embassadors to Syracuse, that were man might stand. For proof of this bold not admitted into the Haven, but chased out affertion, he performed some strange works; as enemies. Then drew he near with his Ar- which made the King entreat him to conmy: and lodging within a mile and a half vert his study unto things of use: that might of the Town, lent before him, some to re-preserve the City from danger of enemies. quire a parlee. These were entertained with- To such Mechanical works, Archimedes, and out the walls by the two new Prætors: to the Philosophers of those times, had little whom they declared. That the Romans were affection. They held it an injury done uncome thither, not with purpose to do hurt, to the liberal sciences, to submit learned but in favour of the syracusans, which were Propositions, unto the workmanship, and opprefied by Tyrants; and to punish those gain, of base handy-crafts men. And of that had murdered and banished so many of this opinion Plato was an Authour: who the principal Citizens. Wherefore they re- greatly blamed some Geometricians, that quired that those worthy men, their Con- seemed unto him to prophane their science, tederates, which were chased out of the by making it vulgar. Neither must we rash-Town, might be suffered to return anden- ly task a man so wife as Plato, with the imjoy their own : as also that the Authors of putation of supercillious austerity, or affethe great flaughter lately committed, might cted fingularity in his reprehension. Forit them: but fince it was directed unto others, made known to be undervalued; as falling they should do well to return, when those within compass of the meanest wit; and part or other, be taken at the first assault. labour of workmanship grows to be the gates, exhorting the Citizens to let him in. Wherefore he omitted no violence or terwith Hicro, maintained that it were poffible When Marcellus was advertised of this to remove the whole earth out of the place be delivered up. Hereto Epicides briefly hath been the unhappy fate of great invenanswered, that if their errand had been to tions to be vilified, as idle fancies, or dreams, him, he could have told what to fay to before they were published; and being once to whom they were fent, had the govern- things that every one could well have perment in their hands. As for the War which formed. Hereof (to omit that memorable they threatned, he told them, they should example of Columbus his discovery, with the find by experience. That to beliege syracufe much different forts of neglect, which he unwas another manner of work, than to take der-went before and after it) in a familiar Leontium. Thus he fent them gone; and and most homely example we may see most returned back into the City. Immediately apparent proof. He that looks upon our began the fiege, which endured longer than English Brewers, and their fervants, that are the Romans had expected, the quick and daily exercised in the Trade; will think it easie winning of Leontium, did put Marcellus ridiculous to hear one say, that the making in hope, that so long a circuit of walls as of Malt was an invention, proceeding from compassed Syracuse, being manned with no some of an extraordinary knowledge in nabetter kind of Souldiers, than those with tural Philosophy. Yet is not the skill of whom he had lately dealt, would in some the inventors any whit the less, for that the trade of ignorant men. The like may be said, nical trade, or teach the Art of murdering of many handy-crafts: and particularly in men, it was besides his purpose. the Printing of Books; which being devised | Marcellus had caused certain of his Quin-

and bettered by great scholars and wife quereme Gallies to be fastened together, and men, grew afterward corrupted by those, to Towers erected on them to beat the defenwhom the practice fell; that is, by fuch as dants from the wall. Against these Archimecould flubber things easily over, and feed des had fundry devices; of which any one their workmen at the cheapest rate. In fort might have repelled the affailants : but this respect therefore, the Alchymists, and all all of them together shewed the multiplicity others that have, or would feem to have of his great wit. He shotheavy stones, and any secret skill, whereof the publication long pieces of timber, like unto the yeards might do good unto mankind; are not with of thips; which brake fome of the Gallies by out excuse of their close concealing. For their force and weight. These afflicted such it is a kind of injustice, that the long travels as lay far off. They that were come nearer of an understanding brain, beside the loss the walls, lay open to a continual volly of of time, and other expence, should be cast shot, which they could not endure. Some away upon men of no worth; yield less be- with an Iron grapple were taken by the nefit unto the Author of a great work, than prow, and hoysted up, shaking out all the to meer strangers; and perhaps his ene- men, and afterwards falling down into the mies. And furely, if the pattion of Envy water. Some by strange Engines were lifted have in it any thing allowable and natural, up into the Air, where turning round a as having Anger, Fear, and other like Affe- while, they were broken against the walls ctions: it is in some such case as this; and or cast upon the rocks: and all of them were ferveth against those, which would usurp so beaten that they durst never come to any the knowledge, wherewith God hath denied second assault. In the like fort was the Landto indue them. Nevertheless, if we have Army handled. Stones and timber, falling regard unto common charity, and the great upon it like hail, did not only over-whelm affection that every one ought to bear unto the men, but brake down the Roman Engines the generallity of mankind, after the exam- of battery; and forced Marcellus to give over ple of him that suffereth bis Sun to shine upon the assault. For the remedy hereof it was the just, and unjust: it will appear more conceived, that if the Romans could early commendable in wife men, to enlarge them- before day get near unto the walls, they selves, and to publish unto the world, those should be (as it were) under the point-blank, good things that lay buried in their own bo- and receive no hurt by these terrible Instrusoms. This ought specially to be done, ments, which were woond up hard to shoot when a profitable knowledge hath not an- a great compass. But this vain hope cost manexed to it some dangerous cunning, that my of the affailants lives : For the shot came may be perverted by evil men to a mischie- down right upon them; and beating them voususe. For if the secret of any rare An- from all parts of the wall, made a great tidore, contained in it the skill of giving some slaughter of them, all the way as they fled deadly and irrecoverable poison: much bet- (for they were unable to tarry by it) even ter it were, that such a Jewel remain close in till they were gotten very far off. This did the hands of a wife and honest man, than be- fo terrifie the Romans, that if they perceived ing made common, bind all men to use the any piece of timber, or a ropes end, upon the remedy, by teaching the worst men how to wall, they ran away, crying out, That Ardo mischief. But the works which Archime | chimedes his Engines were ready to disdes published, were such attended unto ve- charge. Neither knew Marcellus how to ry commendable ends. They were Engines, overcome these difficulties, or to take away ferving unto the defence of Syracufe; not from his men, that fear, against the cause fit for the Syracufians to carry abroad, to whereof he knew no remedy. If the Engines the hurt and oppression of others. Neither had stood upon the walls, subject to firing, did he altogether publish the knowledge, or any such annoyance from without; he how to use them, but referred so much to his own direction; that after his death more make them unserviceable. But all, or the most of the same kind were not made, nor those of them were out of sight, being erected in of his own making were employed by the the streets behind the walls; where Archime-Romans. It sufficed unto this worthy man, des gave directions how to use them. Where-that he had approved unto the vulgar, the fore the Roman had no other way left, than dignity of his Science; and done especial be- to cut off from the Town all province of nefit to his Country. For to enrich a Mecha- victuals, both Ly Land and by Sea.

For the enemies having so goodly an Hathe disposition of the Islanders changed so thaginians that were strong by Sea, willing come from Rome, which escaped from Himilhe confumed with famine, as the beliegers to yet many places revolted unto the Carthasibe weatied out, by lying in Leaguer before nians, and flew or betrayed the Roman Garfo strong a City, having no probability to risons. carry it. Yet, for want of better counfel to In the midft of these troubles, Winter enfollow, this was thought the best, and most forced both parts to take breath a while:

honourable courfe. In the mean while, Himileo, Admiral of a fore syracuse, that he might not seem to have Carthaginian Fleet, that had waited long given over the fiege, went unto Leontium. about Sicil, being by Hippocrates advertised where he lay intentive to all occasions. In the of these passages, went home to Carthage, and beginning of the Spring he stood in doubt. there to dealt with the Senate, that five and whether it were better to continue the latwenty thousand Foot, three thousand borious work of besieging Syracuse, or to Horses and twelve Elephants, were com-turn all his forces to Agrigentum, against Himitted unto his charge, wherewith to make mileo and Hippocrates. But it would greatly war upon the Romans in Sicil by Land. He have impaired his reputation, if he had gone took many Towns; and many that had from Syracufe: as unable to prevail; and he anciently belonged unto the Carthaginians himfelf was of an eager disposition, ever undid vield unto him. To remedy this mif- willing to give ground, or to quit, as not chief and to stay the inclination of men, feisible, an enterprise that he had once taken which following the current of Fortune, be- in hand. He came therefore to Syracufe: gan to turn unto the Carthaginians; Mar- where though he found all the difficulties cellus with a great part of his Army, role remaining as before; and no likelihood to from stracule, and went from place to place take the City by force or famine; yet was about the Island. He took Felorus and he not without hope, that continuance of Herbelus, which yielded unto him. He took time would bring forth somewhat, which alfo Megara by force and fackt it : either to might fulfull his defire. Especially he affayterrifie others that were obstinate, especial- ed to prevail by treason; against which no ly the Syraculians, or elfe because Rome was place can hold out. And to this end he dealt at this time poor, and his Army must have with the Syracustan Gentlemen that werein somewhat to keep it in heart. His especial his Camp sexhorting them to practice with desire was to have saved Agrigentum: whi- their friends that remained in the City. This ther he came too late; for Himileo had got- was not easie for them to do, because the ten it before. Therefore he returned back Town would hearken to no parlee. At length toward Syractife; carefully, and in as good a flave unto one of these banished men, mak-order as he could, for fear of the Carthagi-ing shew to run away from his Master, got nian that was too strong for him. The cir- into syracuse; where he talked in private cumspection that he used, in regard of Hi- with some few, as he had been instructed. mileo, ftood him in good ftead against a dan- Thus began Marcellus to have intelligence ger that he had nor mistrusted. For Hippo- within the City: whence the Conspirators crates, leaving the charge of syracuse unto used to send him advertisement of their prohis brother, had lately issued out of the City, ceedings, by a fisher-boat that passed forth with ten thousand foot, and five hundred in the night: but when they were grown to horse, intending to joyn his forces with Hi- the number of fourscore, and thought themmileo. Marcellus fell upon him, erecither felves able to effect somewhat of imporwas aware of the other: and the Romans, tance, all was discovered; and they like being ir good order, got an easie victory Traitors put to death. In the mean while, against the dispersed and half unarmed sy- one Damasippus a Lacedamonian, that had racustans. The reputation hereof helped a lit- been sent out of the Town as an Embassiador tle to keep the Sicilians from rebellion. Yet to Philip King of Macedon, was fallen into the it was not long, ere Himilco, joyning with hands of Marcellus. Epicides was very desi-Hippocrates, ran over all the Island at his rous to ransome him: and many meetings pleasure, and presented battail to Marcellus, were appointed for that purpose, not far even at his Trenches; but the Roman wifely from the walls. There, one of the Romans refuse At. Bomilear also a Carthaginian, en-looking upon the wall, and wanting the

This was a very desperate piece of work. racuse, and victualled the City. After this. ven; the Sea in a manner free; and the Car- again, that although another Legion was to Supply them: were not likely fo foon to co, and fafely arrived at Marcellus his Camp:

and Murcellus, leaving some of his Army betred with a great fleet into the Laven of Sy-more compendious Art of Geometry, fell to numbring the itones: and making an efti-| led the reft to diflodge. The Romans Pribution of wine. A better opportunity Sicil farewell. Then durft not Epicides rethe walls, which he took by Scalado. Syra- faint hope of hearing any good news. cule was divided into four parts ( or five, if were fortified as diftinct Cities. When thereter opportunity than before, to deal with the reft. For there were now a great many, as well of those in Acradinia and the Island much terrified by the lots of those parts, which the Romans had taken and fackt. As for the weapons of Archimedes, little harm, or none they did, unto those that were sheltred under strong houses: although it may feem, that the inner walls were not altogether unfurnished of his help; since they by force. The Roman fugitives and Renegathe rest of the City: being sure to be rewarded with cruel death, if Marcellus could prevail. Hippocrates and Himilco, were daily expected; and Bomilear was fent away to Carthage, to bring help from thence. It was not long ere Hippocrates and Himilco came : who fell upon the old Camp of the Romans, mate of the height judged it less than it had (though somewhat less) afflicted with the been formerly deemed. Herewith he ac- fame pestilence, insomuch that Bomilear did quainted Marcelluss: who causing better no put the City of Carthage in hope, that he tice to be taken of the place; and finding might be taken where he lay, if any great that ladders of no extraordinary length forces were fent thither. This Bomilear wantwould reach it, made all things ready, and ed no defire to do his Country fervice: but waited a convenient time. It was the weakest his courage was not answerable to his good cart of the Town, and therefore the most will. He arrived at Pachinus with a strong firongly guarded: neither was there hope to fleet: where he stayed; being loth to double prevail by force against Archimedes, if they the Cape; for that the winds did better ferve failed to take it by surprise. But a fugitive the enemy than him. Thither failed Evicides out of the Town brought word, that a great out of syracuse: to acquaint him with the feast was to be held unto Diana, which was necessities of the City; and to draw him on. to last three dayes: and that, because other With much intreaty, at length he came forgood chear was not so plentiful within the ward : but meeting with the Roman fleet, City, as in former times, Epicides, to grati- that was ready for him, he stood off into the fiethe people, had made the more large di- | deep; and failed away to Tarentum, bidding could not be wished. Wherefore Marcellus turn into Syracuse, but went to Agrigentum: in the dead of the Festival night, came unto where he expected the islue; with a very

The Sicilian Souldiers that remained alive Epipola were reckoned as one) each of which of Hippocrates his Army, lay as near as they could fafely, unto Marcellus, and fome of fore Murcellus had gotten some pieces, he them, in a strong Town three miles off. Thele had the commodity of a better and fafe had done what good they could to Syracufe. longing, with good store of booty; and bet- by doing what hurt they could unto the Romans. But when they were informed, that the State of Sicil was given as desperate by the Carthaginians: they fent Embassadours inner parts of the Town, as of those that to treat of peace; and made offer to comwere already in the hands of Marcellus, that pound, both for themselves, and for the began to hearken unto composition, as being Town. Hercunto Marcellus willingly gave ear: for he had stayed there long enough; and had cause to fear, that after a little while, the Carthaginians might comethither strong again. He therefore agreed both with the Citizens, and with the Souldiers that lay abroad; that they should be Masters of their own, enjoying their liberty and proper laws; held out a good while, and were not taken yet fuffering the Romans to possess whatsoever had belonged unto the Kings. Hereupdoes, were more careful than ever to defend on they, to whom Epicides had left his charge, were put to death, new Prætors chosen; and the gates even ready to be opened unto Marcellus: when fuddenly the Roman fugitives disturbed all. These perceiving their own condition to be desperate. perswading the other Mercenary Souldiers, That the Citizens had bargained only for whilst Epicides fallied out of Acradinia upon themselves, and betrayed the Army to the Marcellus. But the Romans made such de- Romans. Wherefore they presently took fence in each part, that the Affailants were Arms, and fell upon the new chosen Prærepelled. Nevertheless they continued to tors; whom they slew, and made election beset Marcellus: whom they held in a man- of fix Captains that should command over ner as straightly besieged, as he himself did all. But shortly it was found out, that befiege the Town. But the pestilence at there was no danger at all to the Souldiers; length confumed, together with the two excepting only the fugitives. The Treaty Captains, a great part of the Army, and cau- was therefore again fet on foot, and wanted little little of conclusion: which yet was delay- treaty of peace held with the syracultans to ed: either by some fear of the Citizens, that make a bargain under-hand against them. had feen (as they thought) proof of the Ro- with a Captain of the Mercenaries? These man avarice in the fack of Epipole Tyche, and things were objected against Marcellus, at Neapolis, the parts already taken; or by some his return home : but the Scnators thought defire of Marcellus to get the Town by force, it a great deal better, to comfort the Syracuthat he might use the liberty of a Conquer- flans with gentle words, and promise of good or, and make it wholly subject to Rome. Me- usage in time to come; than to restore the ricus a Spaniard was one of the fix Captains booty, and give over the Dominion of a Cithat had been chosen in the last commotion: ty, so great, wealthy, strong, and many waves a man of fuch faith, as usualy is found in important. Nevertheless if we consider the Mercenaries; holding his own particular be- many inconvenienes and great mischiefs nefit above all other respects. With this Cap- whereunto Syracuse was obnoxious; both tain, Marcellus dealt secretly: having a fit in- by evil neighbours, and by that very form strument, of the same Nation, one Belligenes, of policy, after which it was governed we that went in company with the Roman Em- may truly affirm, that it received no small balladors, daily pailing to and fro. This benefit, by becoming subject unto Rome, For crafty Agent periwaded Mericus, That the thereby it was not only affured against all Romans had already gotten all Spain: and forraign enemies, domestical conspiracies. that if ever he purposed to make his own and such Tyrants as of old had reigned fortune good, either at home in Spain, or therein; but freed from the necessity of haany where elfe; it was now the only time to nishing, or murdering, the most worthy do it; by conforming himself to the will of Citizens; as also from all factions, intestine the Roman General. By such hopes the Spa- feditions, and a thousand the like miseries.

against the Syracustans, cannot well be com- secure under the protection of Rome; and mended as honeft:neither was it afterwards was no more molefted, by the difease of am-Eor the benefits of Hiero to the Romans had it was throughly cured. But such benefit, unto the people of Rome, advantage against ing. them. The poor Citizens could not make good their prits against the hired Souldiers and therefore were fain to yield unto the time, and obey those Ministers of Hanaibal that ruled the Army. But as long as the lift they had taken Carthage it felf; that main: were free after the death Hieronymus; and rained war by Land and Sea against them. now of late, when they had gathered coar All the goodly works and Imageries, whererage by the flight of Epicides : it had been with Syracuse was marvelloully adorned, their chief care to maintain amity with the were carried away to Rome; and nothing the principal of Epicides his followers; and banished men, that had escaped from Hippolately and in former times, because of this Among other pitiful accidents; the death their defire unto the peace. What though it were true, that the Rascality, and some | Marcellus himself. He was so busie about his nill Captain was easily won, and fent forth that were wont to grow out of the jealousie. his own brother among the Syracujian Em- wherein they held their liberty in vain. bassadours to ratissie the covenant with Neither enjoyed that City, from her first foundation, any fuch long time of happines. This under-hand dealing of Marcellus as that wherein it flowrithed, when it refted throughly approved at his coming to Rome. bitich; wherewith by Marcellus his victory been such, as deserved not to be requited arising from wrongs done, serves not to with the ruine of his Country: much less, make injustice the more excusable: unless that the mileries of his people, oppressed we should approve the answer of that thief, (though partly through their own folly by who being found to have stollen a filver cup an Army of Mercenaries, should minister from fick man, said, He never leaves drink-

by the reason of Marcius, the Roman was let into possession of all Syracuse: Merein, the booty that it found, was faid to ave been no less, than could be hoped for, people of Rome. They had lately flain many left untouched; fave only the houses of those many of themselves had also been flain, both crates and Epicides, into the Roman Camp. of Archimedes was greatly lamented, even by ill advised persons; joyned with the souldi- Geometry, in drawing figures, that he hearers in hatred of the Romans, by occasion of kened not to the noise, and uproar in the the flaughter which they heard to be done City, no, nor greatly attended the rude at Leontium, and afterward beheld in those Souldier that was about to kill him. Mercelparts of their own City which was taken? Its took heavily the death of him; and cau-Ought therefore the Roman General, in a fed his body to be hourourably buried. Uptime ) was placed a Cylinder and a Sphere, ried him unto the fight, upon a foolish defire with an inscription of the proportion be- to get victory, without the help of Mutines tween them; which he first found out. An their Country-man. Wherefore they fent invention of fo little use, as this may feem, unto the Roman General, and bade him be pleased that great Artist better, than the de- confident; for that it was not their purpose viting of all those Engines, that made him so to shew themselves his enemies that day, but famous. Such difference is in the judgement only look on, and fee the proud Carthaginiof learned men, and of the vulgar fort. For ans well beaten by whom they had been mifmany an one would think the money loft, used. They made good their promise, and that had been fpent upon a Son, whose ftu- had their defire. For Marcellus, finding likedies in the University had brought forth lihood of truth in their message, did so lustifuch fruit, as the proportion between a ly fet upon the enemies, that he brake them Sphere and a Cylinder.

CHAP. III.

in Sicil vielded unto the Romans, except Agrigentum. Agricentum and a few places thereabout. At It Hanno could have been contented, to Agricentum lay Epicides with one Hanno a follow the directions of one, that was a bet-Carthaginian, and Mutines an African, that ter man of War than himself, and not to was lately fent from Hannibal. This Mutines have hazarded a battel without need; the by many good pieces of fervice, had added Romans would shortly have been reduced fome credit to the beaten Carthaginian fide; into terms of great difficulty in their Siciliand withall made his own name great. By an War. For Marcellus was shortly after to his perswasions, Hanno and Epicides adven- leave the Province; and soon upon his detured to meet Marcellus without the Town, parture, there landed in the Itland a supply and not behave themselves as men expect- of eight thousand foot, and three thousand ing to be belieged. Neither was he more Numidian horse, that were fent from Carvaliant in counsel, than in execution. Once thage. The fame of this new Army drew and again he fet upon the Romans, where many of the Siciliansinto rebellion. The they lay encamped, and drove them fear- Roman Army confilting (for the most part) fully into their Trenches. This bred envy of the Legions of Canna, took it very hainin Epicides and Hanno; especially in Hanno, outly, that no good service done, could bring that having been lately fent from Carthage, them into the favour of the Senate; but that, with commission and authority from the as banished men, they were sent far from State, thought himself wronged greatly by home, and not suffered to return back to Hannibal; in that he had fent unto him this Rome with their General. Mutines had paci-Mutines, to be his companion, and to take fied his Countrey-men the Numidians, and upon him, like as good a man as himself. The like an honest man, did what he could for indignity feemed the greater, when Mutines those whom he served, without contending being to step aside into Heraclea, for the pa- against the foolish pride of Hanno; finding cifying some troubles there among the Nu- that there was a great alteration; and a greamidians; advised (as directing Hanno and ter might have been, if the Army lately over-Epicides) not to meddle with the enemy, un- thrown had been entire. M. Cornelius the til his return. So much therefore the ra- Roman Prator, used all diligence, both to ther would Hanne fight; and offered battel pacifie his own men, and to hinder the Carunto Marcellus, before he fought it. It is like, | thaginians. He recovered those Inland towns that a great part of the Roman Army was left that had rebelled : and though he could not behind in Syracuse, as need required; which hinder Mutines from over-running all the made the Carthaginians the better able to Country; yet he hindred the Country from deal with those that came against them. But revolting unto Mutines. Above threetwo Armies; far greater were the odds be- ginians held in Sicil: of which Agrigentween the Captains. For how loever the peo- tum was the principal, and far bigger than ple of Carthage would give authority by fa- any of the rest. Thence issued Mutines as vour ; yet could they not give worth and often as he pleased, in despight of the Roagainst their Captains; and being there- that followed the contrary part. But Hanno, on his Tomb (as he had ordained in his life- | that the vain-glorious envy of Hanno carat the first charge ; and with the slaughter After the taking of Syracufe, all the Towns of many thousands, drove them back into whatfoever difference on was between the score Towns, great and small, the Carthaability, in matter of war. The Numidians, mans: not only to the fuccour of his own having before conceived some displeasure adherents, but to the great waste of those fore some of them gone away to Heraclea, instead of being pleased with all these good were much more offended, when they faw (ervices, was filled more and more with envy, against the man that performed them. Army and Adherents in Sicil, to the mer-He had (belike) received instruction from cy of the Romans, that henceforward conold Hanno at Carthage, not to fuffer Hannibal, tinued Malters of the whole Island. or any Hannibalian, to have a share in the honour of these sicilian Wars: which were gentum, did tharp execution of justice upon therefore perhaps the more diligently sup- all the Citizens. The principal of them he carefully followed his advertisements. Neither was there much cunning needful, to the performance of that which Mutines had undertaken: For he with his Numidians did forcibly feize upon a gate; whereat they let in some Roman Companies, that lay near in a readiness for the purpose. Hanno, when first he heard the noise, Deellus came to Rome : where for his thought it had been no worse matter, than good services done in the Island of sicil, fome such tumult of the Numidians, as he he had granted unto him the honour of had been well acquainted with of late. But the lesser Triumph, which was called Ovawhen, making halte to pacifie the trouble, tion. The greater Triumph was denyed he saw and heard, the Romans intermixed, him: because he had not finished the war, among those discontented followers of Mu- but was fain to leave his Army behind him tines, forthwith he betook himself to flight: in the Province. He stayed not long in Levinus the Conful having taken Aeriplied, whilft Italy was neglected, that should scourged with rods, and afterwards beheadhave been regarded more than all the rest ed, as was the manner of the Romans: all the Wherefore to shew his authority, and that rest of them he sold for slaves, and confiscait was not in the power of Hunnibal, to ap- ted their goods; fending home to Rome the point unto him an Atliftant, or Director: mony that was raifed of the booty. This was He took away from Mutines his charge, indeed a time, wherein Rome stood in no less and gave it to his own Son; thinking there- necessity of gold, than of fteel: which may by to discountenance the man, and make have been the reason, why Levinus dealt him little effected, as one out of Office, fo cruelly with the Agrigentines. Nevertheamong the Numidians. But it fell out quite less, the fame of such severity bred a terror contrary: and this spightful dealing occa- among all the Dependants of the Carthaginifioned the loss of what soever the Carthagini- ans, so that in great haste they sought to ans held in Sicil. For the Numidians were fo make their peace. About forty Towns yieldincented by the indignity offered unto their ed themselves quickly unto the Romans: Country-man being such a brave Comman-twenty were delivered up by Treason; and der, that they offered him their service to fix only stayed to be wonn by force. These requite the wrong; and were thenceforth things done, Lavinus returned home to absolutely at his own disposition. M. Vale- Rome; carrying with him about four thourius Lavinus, the Roman Conful, was newly fand men from Agatirna; that were a compacome into the Province, when this fell ny of out-laws, bankrouts, and banished men out : and with him did Mutines enter into accustomed to live by spoil of others in these intelligence. For he could no longer brook troublesome times. He bestowed them about these indignities; but being neither a Car- Rhegium in Italy, where they might exercise thaginian, nor favoured by those that bore their own occupation against the Britians all the sway in Carthage: He thought it thievish kind of people, that were enemies the wifest way, to play the best of his own unto those of Rhegium, and to the Romans. As game, and forfake that City, which was for Mutines, he was well rewarded, and made likely to perish by the evil counsel that go- Citizen of Rome: where he lived in good acverned ir. He did not therefore, as his compt; accompanying the two Scipio's in Country-men had lately done, content him- their journey against Antiochus, and therein felf to see his Adversaries reap the bitter doing (asit is said) very especial service. So fruits of his own malicious over-weening: by this enterprise of sicil, the Carthaginians and to suffer that harm, in doing whereof wasted much of their forces, that with greahe would not bear a part ; but conspired ter profit might have been employed in Itaagainst them to deliver up Agrigentum, and ly : leaving yet unto the Romans, in the end to help to expel them utterly out of sicil. of this war, the entire possession of this The Consul was glad of his friendship; and Island; which they wanted when it began.

Bbbbbb 2

ø. XVI.

How the War paffed between the Romans and Hannibal in Italy, from the taking of Capua to the great victory of Metaurus.

C'Hortly after the winning of Capua, Marand faving himself, with Epicides, in a small Rome, before he was again chosen Consul Bark, set fail for Africk; leaving all his together with M.Valerius Lavinus, who sucagainst Hannibal.

Before the Confuls departed out of Rome,

ceeded him in the Government of Sicil, and to further confideration. The Senate could was, at the time of his election, making war ill tell, what to determine or do, in a case of against King Philip in Greece. Great Com- such extremity. For manifest it was that plaint was made against the Conful Marcel- the multitude had already indured somuch. lus, by the Syracustans, for that which he had as well it could undergo; and somewhat done unto them: they alledging their great more, than could with honesty have been friendship to the people of Rome, in the time imposed upon it. Nevertheless it was imposed of their late King Hiero; and affirming that lible to maintain the war against the Cartheir City did never willingly break the thaginians; or to keep the Macedonian out of alliances excepting when it was oppressed by Italy without a strong seet. Wherefore some fuch Tyrants, as were not greater enemies were of opinion; That fince the common to Rome, than to all good men that lived in Treasure was so empty, the people must be Syracuse. The Conful, on the other side; reck- forced, by right or wrong, to take the buroned the labours & dangers whereunto they den upon them. At laft the Confuls began to had put him: willing them to bemoan them- fay, That no perfu alions would be to efselves to the Carthaginians that had holpen sectual with the people, as good examples : them in their necessity; and not unto the and that if the Senators would follow the Romans, whom they had kept out. Thus Confuls, like it was that the people also each part having some good matter to al- would follow the Senate. Wherefore they ledge, the Senate made fuch an end of the propounded, and it was immediately concontroversie, as best agreed with the benefit cluded, that every one of them should bring of their own Common-wealth : blaming the forth, and put into the Treasury, all the motoo much rigour of Marcellus; yet not re- ny that he had; and that no Senator should floring the booty that he had taken, nor keep any veticlof gold, or plate what foever; making the syraculians free from their sub-excepting one Salt-feller, and a Bowl jection . but comforting them with gentle wherewith to make their offerings unto the words, and hopeful promifes, as hath been gods; as also a Ring for himself, with such shewed before. The two new Confuls Mar- other tokens of ingenuity for his wife and cellus and Levinus, were appointed to make children, as every one did use, and those of as war, as their lots should fall out; the one in small value as might be. This advice of the Italy, the other in Sicil. The Isle of Sicil fell Confuls was not more thankfully accepted unto Marcellus, which Province he willing- by the Senate, than the ready performance ly changed with his Colleague; to the end thereof by the Senate was highly applaudthat the Syracultans ( whose cause had not ed, and nastily followed by the Gentlemen of as yet been heard in the Senate ) might not Rome. Neither did the Commonalty refule feem hindred by fear, from uttering their to do that, which their betters had openly grievances freely. Afterwards, when his bu- done before them. For fince the publick nefinels with them was dispatcht, he gently un- ceffity could no otherwise be holpen; every dertook the patronage of them: which re- one was contented, that his private estate mained long in his Family, to the great be- should run the same fortune with the Comnefit of their Country in times following. So mon-wealth, which if it suffered wrack in Valerius, the other Conful, was fent into Si- vain could any particular man hope to enjoy al, whose doings there have been already the benefit of his proper substance. This magrehearled: but Marcellus was employed nanimity deserved well that greatness of Empire, whereof it was the foundation.

Convenient order being thus taken for an they were much troubled with prefling of Army and Fleer: Murcellus went forth of the Souldiers to the war, and most of all, with City against Hannibal; and Levinus toward getting Mariners for their Navy. They were sicil. The Army of Hannibal was greatly diall of the poorer fort, that used to be em- minished by long and hard service : neither ployed in Sea-fervices, especially in rowing. did his Carthaginians seem to remember him, These could not live without present wa- and think upon sending the promised supply, ges: neither was there mony enough in the or any such proportion as he needed. His cre-Treasury to give them pay. Wherefore it dit also among his Italian friends, was much was ordained, that they should be set out at wakened, by the loss of Capua: which gave the expence of private men; who in this ne- them cause to look unto themselves; as if in ceffity of the State, were driven to fultain his help there were little trust to be repoall publick charges. Hereat the people mur- fed, when they should stand in need. This he mured, and were ready to fall into sedition; well perceived; yet could not tell how to had not the Confuls deferred the matter un-remedy. Either he must thrust Garrisons inThe fifth Book of the first Part to all the Towns that he suspected, and there | five thousand Numidians, ready to set fail by so diminish his Army, that he should not for spain; whither, when he came, it was be able to keep the field; or else he must appointed that Afdrubal should forthwith leave them to their own fidelity, which now take his journey into Italy, of which there began to waver. At length his jealousie had been so much talk. These news did not grew so outragious, that he sacked and was more comfort Hannibal and his followers. ited those places that he was unable to de- than terrifie the Romans. Wherefore each fend: thinking that the best way to enrich did their best; and the Remans, to prevent himself; and make unprofitable to his ene- the threatning mischief, and win as much as mies, the purchase from which he could not they could upon Hannibal, before the comhinder them. But by this example, many ing of his Brother; Hannibal, on the contrawere quite alienated from him: and some of ry, to hold his own, and weaken the Romans those, whom before he had least cause to as much as he was able. He had intelligence doubt. The Town of Salapia yielded unto that Cn. Fulvius, a Roman Prator, lay near Mucellin; and betrayed unto him a gal- unto Herdones, to get the Town by practice. lant Regiment of Numidian horse, the best It was not long since, near unto the same of all that ferved under Hannibal; which place, another Cn. Enlvius had loft his Arwas a greater lofs, than the Town it felf. Bla- my. Therefore Hannibal made great marches fins the author of this rebellion, could not thitherward; and came to Herdones ere Fulbring his defire to effect; without getting vius heard news of his approach. As foon as the consent of one Dalius, that was his bitter he came, he offered battel to the Roman Praenemy. Wherefore he brake the matter to tor; who accepted it with more hafte than this Dailing in private, and was by him accu- good speed. The Roman Legions made good sed unto Hannibal. But when he was conven- relistance a while, till they were compassed ted and charged of Treason, he so stoutly round with the Carthaginian horse. Then fell denyed it, and by way of recrimination, to they to rout, and great flaughter was made vehemently pressed his accuser with the of them. Fulvius himself, with twelve Trifame fault : that Hannibal thought it a mat- bunes or Coronels, were lost : of the common ter devised out of meer malice; knowing wel | Souldiers, that were flain, the number is unneither of them could bring any proof of teen thousand. The Town of Herdonea, befins did not cease to press his adversary Fulvius, Hannibal did set on fire: and putting but was fain to catch advantages, where he fought with him a battel : which beginning might get them; the Romans now being at nine of the clock in the morning, lasted grownstronger in the field than he. The best until night, and ended, by reason of the themselves with ill speed in many petty en- Hannibal departed thence into Apulia, whiterprises, and laid afide all this while the ther Marcellus followed him. At Venusia they care of Italy, to follow business of far less im- met, and had many skirmishes; but none of fo long promised and expected. This, if they some ambush. But Marcellus, though he was had done in better feafon; Rome it felf might very eager of battel, would yet adventure have been strucken down, the next year after that great blow received at Cannæ. But fair ground. fince that which is past cannot be amended; Hannibal must force himself to make a good us Maximus, and Q. Fulvius, he that lately countenance; and tell his followers; that had taken Capus, were chosen Consuls. Fathis mighty succour would come time bins considering how much the Roman af-

Hannibal his men.

what enemies they were; and feeing that certain; some reporting seven, others thirwhat he affirmed. This notwithstanding, Bla- cause it was at point to have yielded unto anew, and urge him from time to time, with those to death that had practifed with the fuch lively reason; that he who could not Enemy, carried away the multitude; whom be believed by Hannibal, was contented at he bestowed among the Thurians and Metalength to win the favour of Marcellus. Pre pontines. The Conful Marcellus hearing of fently after this, the Conful took by force, this, wrote unto the Senate : and exhorted Maronea and Meles, Towns of the Samnites; them to be of good chear; for that he would wherein he flew above three thousand of shortly abate the enemies pride. He followed the Carthaginian apace ; and overtaking him Hannibal could not look to all at once; at Numifire in the Countrey of the Lucans, was, that his Carthagine ans, having wearied darkness, with uncertain victory. Afterward portance; had now at length resolved, to importance. Hannibal removed often; and fend presently the great supply, that had been sought to bring the enemy within danger of nothing, but by open day-light, and upon

Thus passed the time away, until Q. Fabienough. For Musanissa was at Carthage with fairs were bettered by the taking of Capua, purpofed himfelf, to deal with Hannibal in open field. He followed him therefore to Cannulum. Marcellus was so impatient of his disho- rentum nour, that he rated his men, as Pesants, and purposed that year to befiege Tarantum: hope; and the enemy, not with tanding their which if he could win; like it was, that late victory, as ready to molest them as bescarce one good City would afterwards re- fore. In this second battail Marcellus got the main true to Hannibal. Wherefore he vehe- victory: which he purchased at fo dear a mently exhorted his Colleague, and Mar- rate; that neither he, nor Hannibal, had cellus. (to whom was continued them com- great caufe to vaunt, the second night. For mand of those Legions that served under him if eight thousand of the Caribagians were the year before) to press the Carthaginian so slain, and three thousand of the Roman side. hard, as he might have no leifure to help in this next battail, the difference was no Tarentum. Marcellus was very glad of this greater, than even to recompence the late charge : for he thought no Roman fitter than received overthrow : especially since the number of the Romans that were wounded, was fogreat, as difabled Marcellus from purand thence from place to place: defiring [uing Hannibal; who diflodged by night. ever to come to battail, but upon equal Nevertheless t fufficed, that Fabius the Conterms. The Carthaginian had not mind to ful hereby got leifure, to follow his business hazzard much in fight : but thought it at Tarentum without any diffurbance. @ Fulenough to entertain his enemy with fkir- vins the other Conful about the same time. mish; as being desirous to keep his Army took in many of the Hirpines, Lucans, and ftrong until the coming of Astribal. Yet Volcentes, that willingly yielded themselves, could he not avoid the importunity of Mar- and betrayed the Garrifons of Hannibal that cellus, nor brook the indignity of being dai- lay in their Towns : whom Fulvius enterly braved. He therefore bade his men to be tained in loving fort; gently rebuking them lufty, and to beat foundly this hot-spirited for their errours past, without punishing Roman Captain, that would never suffer those that had been authors, or buside doers them to be at quiet; until they once had in the rebellion. That rabble of Sicilian cooled well his courage, by letting him thieves, which Levinus had lately brought blood. Hereupon followed a battail; where- from Agaierna, was then also set on work to in Hannibal had the victory; took fix En- besiege Caulonia, a Town of the Brutians: figns; and flew of the Romans almost three and nothing was omitted, that might serve thousand, among which were some of mark. to divert Hannibal, from the succour of Ta-

937

2. Fabius the Conful, having taken Manbase cowards: telling them, that they were duria a Town of the salentines, sate down the first of the Roman Legions; which had before Turentum: making all preparation been beaten by Hannibal, by plain force and that seemed needfull to carry it either by asmanhood, without being circumvented by fault or long fiege. Of the Garrisons in the any stratagem. with these and many other Town, a good part were Erutians, placed the like words, which they were ashamed there by Hannibal, under a Captain of their to hear, he did so vex them; that thinking own Nation. This Captain fell in love with themselves better able to endure any vio- a Tarentine wench; whose brother served lence of the enemy, than such displeasure under Fabius. Hereof she gave notice by letof their General; they befought him to par- ters to her brother, as thinking belike to don them, and lead them forth once again draw him from the Roman fide; by telling to fight. He did so : and placing those him how rich, and of what great account Companies formost, that had lost their En- her lover was. But her brother made the figns the day before, bade them be careful Conful acquainted with these news : and to win a victory; whereof the news might faid, that if the Brutian were far in love, he be at Rome, before the report of their might perhaps be won, by intreaty of his hameful overthrow. Hannibal was angry, Miltris, to do what the would have him. to fee that nothing could make this Enemy The Conful hearing this, and finding likeliquite: and therefore was ready to fight hood in the matter, willed his fouldier to again; fince all other motives, continued convey himself into the Town as a sugitive, the same, and his men had been heartned by and try what good might be done. It fell the late victory. But the Romans were stir- out according to his defire. The Souldier red up with defire of revenge, and of repair- grew acquainted with this Brutian Captain: ing their honour loft, which affections gave and partly by his own perswasions, partly a sharp edge unto their valour: whereas the by the flattering intreaty of his fifter; wan Caribaginians were grown dull, and weary him to betray the Town to the Romans. by feeing themselves disappointed of their When they had agreed upon the business, and refolved how to order it; the fame hasted away to relieve Tarentum. But when Souldier got out of the Town by night, and he came within five miles of the City, he acquainted the Conful with his proceedings: had news that it was loft, This grieved him: telling him in which part that Brutian kept yet he faid no more than this, The Romans watch, and what might conveniently be have also their Hannibal; we have loft Tarendone. So in the night time, i abine gave an tum in tuch fort as we got it. That he might alarm to the City; especially about those not seem to turn back amazed, or in any fear parts of the wall, which were farthest from of the victorious Conful; he incamped a the place where he meant to enter. The few dayes together, fo near as he was unto Captains in the Town prepared to make Tarentum: and thence departed to Metaresistance in those places, where the noise pontum, bethought himself how to take Fa-did threaten them with greatest likelihood bins in a trap. He caused the chief of the of danger. But Fabius himself with the Metapontines to write unto Fabius, and offer choice of hismen, came in great filence to to betray into his hands, the Carthaginian the quarter of the Brutians: who being Garrison; with condition, that he should in wrought by their Captain, helped the Ro- that respect, forgive them all offences past. mans to get up, and break open the next These letters were sent by two young men gate, whereat the Army was let in. The Ta- of the same City; who did their errand so rentines and Carthaginian Souldiers, made well, that the Conful wrote back by them head against Fabius in the Market place:but unto the Metapontines, and appointed the ( as hapneth in like cases, where the main day, when they should expect him. Hereof confidence is already taken away ) not very Hannibal was exceeding glad: and at good obstinately. Nico, Democrates and Philomenes, leisure made ready his ambuthes for the wawith those that before had let in Hannibal, ry Fabius. But whether some secret notice of used now the last of their courage in dying the plot were given; or whether indeed(as against the Romans. Carthalo, who command- it is related) some tokens in facrificing, tered the Carrifon within the Town, offered rified the superstitious Roman; the journy himself prisoner: hoping to be well used, to Metapontum was deferred. Hereupon the because of his hospitality that had passed same two Messengers were employed again: between his Father and the Conful. But he but being apprehended, and threatned with was flain by the way, ere he could come at torture, they discovered all. Fabius. The Romans did put all indifferently to the fword, in such fort, that they spared all their wars: for they got every where, few of the Brutians. This flaughter of the fave only at Caulonia; where they had loft Brutian, was thought to have been made a company of such lewd fellows, that it may by appointment of the Conful, to the end feem good fortune, to have been fo rid of that he might feem to have won the Town them. But their common poverty, and difabihad the glory which he expected, nor pre- Roman Colonies were then in Italy: of which,

This year was happy to the Romans, in by force and not by treason: though he lity to maintain their charge, continued, and thereby failed of his purpose; and neither grew greater than it was before. Thirty ferved his reputation offaithful dealing, and twelve refused to contribute any longer to keeping his word. The booty found in 1a- the Wars For it was confidered; that the Lerentum was very great: wherefore the Roman gions of Canna, and those unhappy Com-Treasury, whither it was carried, had great panies that had been beaten under the one need. As for the Imageries, and other curi- and the other Cn. Fulvius, were transported Ofities that were in the City, Fabius was con- into Sicil; where they lived, in a fort, as tented to let them alone : and being told of banished men. This grieved their friends at fome Idols that feemed worthy to be car- home, and made them reckon up the more ried away, being very goodly pieces, in such diligently those other miseries which they habit and positure as if they were fighting : daily felt. Ten years together they had been he faid Let us leave unto the Tarentines their exhausted with levies of men, and impositions of money: in every of which years Hannibal being gotten clear from Marcel- they had received some notable overthrow. In this case the least that they could fear; They fled at his coming: but he was so near, or rather the best that they could hope; was that they were fain to betake them to a hill, to fall into the hands of the enemy to be which ferved to no other purpose, than to made prisoners. For Hannibal did gently send bear off the first burnt. There they defen- home their people that was taken by him: ded themselves a little while, and then they whereas the Romans did banish from their yielded. When this business was done, he homes, those that had escaped. It was thereneither men, nor mony. It was well for the arrival. tion of their ill deferving.

hopeful and fortunate success Nevertheless, many of the Hetrurians, especially the Are-fore likely to come to pals within a while, they were fain to open their most pals that they should be all consumed : fince new treasury; and thence take out the gold than touldiers were daily pressed forth of their had been laid up to serve them in cases of Towns; and the old ones never returned. greatest extremity. Of the mony thus extra-Such talk was frequent among those of the cted, one quarter was delivered to Fabine Colonies: especially where they that were the Consul, to set him well out against the transported into Sicil, had most compassio- Turentines; all the rest was fent into Spain nate friends. Wherefore it was concluded by to scipio, for the maintenance of his Army; the people of Ardea, Sutrium, Alba, and and to provide that Afdrubal might not pass other good Towns, to the number of twelve, from thence into Italy. It is likely that That they should boldly deny unto the Ro- Fabins did not spend all his mony; finding mans their farther help. This was thought such easie success at Tarentum, as was shewthe likeliest way to obtain peace: where- ed before. But to stop the journey of Aldruof other wife they faw little hope, as long as bal; neither the mony fert into $pain, nor Hannibal lived. When the Confuls heard any victories won by $\sigma_{iji0}$ could fuffice. Nethe Embassadors of these Towns make such vertheless, it fell out happily for the people declaration, and protest their difability of of Rome, that this year, and the next were giving any further help; they were much ipent, before his coming; and they better amazed. They willed the Emballadors to prepared, than at less warning they could return home, and bring a better answer, have been, to entertain him. Here it were not forasmuch as this was none other than trea- amiss to note, that fince the Komans, being fon: they bade them to consider, that the in so great a necessary of mony, were driven people were not Campans or Tarentines, but to furnish the Army in Spain, with the greathe off-fpring of the Romans; and no less telt part of all their flock that was left: it partakers of the Empire, than they that in- must needs be, that either the booty taken in habited the Mother-City. But all would new Carthage, was far less than fame had renot serve, the Embassadors continuing to ported it; or else that Scipio had not as yet protest, that they had already done what won it: howsoever Livie rather inclines to they could; and that they had remaining, those, who say that he got it soon after his

Romans, that the other eighteen Colonies, M. Claudius Marcellus, and T. Quintus did not imitate these twelve; but shewed Crispinus, were chosen Consuls after Fabius themselves willing to undergo whatsoever and Fulvius. In their year it was, that Asarushould be laid upon them, without shrinking bul took his journey out of Spain, though he under the burden. This their offer was fo came not into Italy until the year following. highly pleafing to the Confuls; that the Em- after the great battle at Canna, Hannibal baffadours of those faithful Colonies, were had lost much time about Cuma and Naples, brought unto the Senate, and produced into in feeking to make himfelf Master of a the Assembly of the people : where, with good haven; for the landing of those succommemoration of all their former good fer- cours that were promifed from Carthage. The vices, this their present love unto the State hope that he reposed in Philip, caused him to was magnified, and thanks accordingly be- turn his principal care to the Eastern parts stowed upon them; with promise, that it of Italy; where he made ready a fair enshould not be forgotten. As for the Embas- trance for the Macedonian, if he had been fadours of those twelve Colonies, that refu- ready to come; but fince his hope was vanishfed to contribute; it was thought best, nei-ed, and the long promised succour of Asaruther to detain them in the City, nor yet to bal was (though far later than had been exdismis them, nor take any notice of them at pedient ) ready to strive : he began to all; but leave them to their own confidera- deal with the people of Hetruria, through whose Countries his Brother was to pass, It may greatly be doubted, what the ex- that therein he might make a party against ample of these twelve people would have the Romans. The loss of Capua, Tarentum, and wrought in those that were so willing to many other Towns, might have terrified all help the State, if Asdrubal had been then other of the Italian Towns, from harkning coming into Italy. For then must the Romans to any solicitation of the Carthaginians. Yet have betaken themselves wholly to their the poverty of the Romans, and the weariness own defence; whereas now, to the great of their adherents, together with the fame comfort of their subjects, they employed of a greater Army coming than that which their forces in the conquest of Italy, with Hannibal brought into Italy; did imbolden one of the best Cities which the Carthaginivantage; referving his own numbers as full as he could, unto a time of greater imployment. In this lingring manner of War, Marcellus took no pleafure: but fought to compell the Enemy to battel, whether he would wellenough be forced, if Hannibal continued terred, where he thought good. as he began, to trifle away the time at Venusia. To the same purpose a part of the Garrifon that lay in Tarentum, was appointed to go by land to the affistance of Cincins . But Hannibal had an eye behind him. He laid an am-

Ccccc

tines, to take such counsel as they thought of Hannibal to waste their Army by little and most expedient for themselves, without re- little : which to do, he neglected no advangard of their fidelity to Rome. The Roman tage. There lay between him and them an Senate. hearing the rumour of this confpi- Hillock, overgrown with wood, that feemed racy fent Marcellus the new choien Conful fit to cover a number of men: who lying into Hetruria: whole coming did so terrefie there undiscerned, might fall upon suchas them, that they refred quiet for a while. All should straggle from the Roman camp; and the year following they were deviling how out them off. Therefore he fent thither hy to break out: as contrarywife the Koman night fome companies of Numidians: whom Propretors, partly by terrour of severe judg- he willed to keep themselves close, and atments and inquisitions; and partly by the tend their best advantage. To this piece of force of two or three Legions, with which ground the Confuls thought it fit to remove they visited all suspected places, kept them their camp : Marcellus thinking that he nehonest against their wills, and took many ver lay near enough unto Hannibal. Thither Hostages for better assurance. The two Con- therefore both of them rode to view the fuls had an earnest defire, to make strong place, accompanied with the son of Marcellus. War upon Hannibal without more tempo- a few Colonels, and other principal men: riling: periwading themselves, that in bat- and not many more than two hundred horse. tel they should be too strong for him. Criffi- most of them Hetrurians. The Numidian Cennus had further his particular defire, to make | tinel gave warning of their approach to his his Confulthin notable by the winning of fellows who discovered not themselves, until fome good Town: as Fulvius and Fabius they had furrounded the Confuls and their had gotten honour by Capua and Tarentum. train. The Confuls, as necessity compelled Therefore he went about the fiege of Lorris them, defended themselves : hoping to be quickly relieved from their camp that was an then held in Italy : and brought thither near at hand. But the Hetrurians ran away all forts of Engines; fending for a Freet out from them, at the first : and left them in that of Sicil to help him. But Hannibal was not great danger, to the weak affiltance of no flow to relieve the City: the rame of whole more than forty horsemen, that were of the approach, made Crispinus desist irom his en- Colonie of Fregella. These Fregellans abode terprise, and retire unto his Colleague, that by the Confuls, and did what they could to lay at Venulia. Thirher followed Hannibal; have brought them fafe off. But when Marto whom the Confuls daily offered battel. cellus was stricken thorow with a Lance and This great man of War had no need to stand fell down dead; then began every one to upon his reputation: which was already so shift for himself, and escape as they might, confirmed, that his resusing to fight, was crissians the other Conful, had his deaths not likely to be ascribed unto fear; but ra- wound, being stricken with two Darts; and ther deemed as part of his wisdom. He en- young Marcellus was likewise wounded ; yet tertained the Confuls with many light skir- these two recovered their camp: The rest mishes, and fought to take them at some ad- of the Colonels and Officers, together with the Lictors that carried the bundle of Rods and Axes before the Confuls, were all flain or taken. To the dead body of the Conful Marcellus, Hannibal gave honourable Funeral, according to the cuftom of those times: or no. The Admiral of the Roman Fleet and bestowing his ashes in a filver pot, coabout Sicil, L. Cincius, was commanded again vered it with a crown of gold; and fo fent to affail the Town of Locri: which might them to young Marcellus, to be by himin-

Presently after this, Crispinus bethought himself, how that the fignet Ring of Marcellus was faln into the custody of Hannibal; who might use it to his own purposes, ere that which had happed were well known bushin the way, between Tarentum and Lo- abroad. Wherefore he sent word unto all cri, whereinto the Romans fell: and having the Towns about; that his Colleague was loft above three thousand of their Company, slain, and that Hannibal had gotten his Ring: were well glad, the rest of them, to quit their | wishing them in that regard, to give no creenterprise, and save their own lives within dit unto any letters therewithal signed. This Tarentum. As for the Confuls, it was the defire providence of Criffinus was not more than

requifite. For his messenger was but a little | not to commit their Army unto rath heads. hefore come to Salapia, when another Mefjenger arrived there tent from Hannibal bringing letters in the name of Marcellus, and fealed with the captive Ring; whereof the contents were: That it was his purpose to he willed that the Souldiers of the Garrison should be in a readiness, for such implovful mind which he bare against that City; that had therein been betrayed. The Salapiback the Meslenger, which was a Roman fugitive, without letting him perceive any fign of distrust in them. This done, they prepared all things in a readiness, for the enterrainment of fuch a friend. Late in the night he came thither; with a troop of Roman fugitives armed Roman-like, leading the way. These all talking Latine together, called unothers, were taken themselves; being said at on all hands by the Salapines, that quickly made an end with them.

engines, and whatfoever was in ther Camp, to the enemies disposition.

The Roman Senate hearing of these accidents, fent unto Crispinus the surviving Conful, and requested him to name a Dictator wealth, and dispatch the election of new

Among those that stood for the Consulship, C. Claudius Nero, was the most eminent. He was of great Nobility, a good Souldier, and one, whose many fervices in this present War, did forcibly commend unto the place. come the fame night unto salapia; where Yet he seemed a little too violent; and one, whose temper needed the allay of a more staid wir. The Fathers therefore endeavourment as he should think needful. The device ed to joyn unto him in the Consulship, M. Liwas plain, and no less plain was the revenge- vins : one that had born the same office long before. This M. Livius had been Conful hecause of his brave Numidian companies with L. Amilius Faulus, in the year foregoing the beginning of this War. After their ans hereupon bethought themselves, how to Consulthip, wherein they did good service. take their enemy in his own fnare. They fent they had both of them been called into judgement by the people : and this Livius condemned ; #milius hardly escaping. Though it hash been once already noted; yet I cannot forbear to remember it again : how it pleased God to upbraid the unthankful Romans, with the malicious judgement, given by their multitude upon honourable men. For in the battel at Canna, it was apto the Watch, and bade open the gate; for parent what lamentable effects the memory the Conful was there. The gate was opened of their injustice wrought; when L. Emilius fair and leifurely, and the Port-cullis drawn rather choic to yield to the froward ignoup no higher than needs it must be, to let rance of his Colleague; and afterward to thementer. But when fix hundred of them die in the greatest overshrow that ever fell were gotten in, down fell the Port-cullis upon the State of Rome, than by refifting the again : and they that thought to have taken pernicious courses of Terentius Varro, to cast himfelf anew upon the danger of the popular fury. As for M. Livius, he is even now ready, and will fo continue, to tell the peo-Hannibal being thus over-reached with ple of their faults in a givers manner. Eight this stratagem, hasted away to Locri; where- years together after his condemnation, had unto Cincius the Admiral of the Roman fleer he been ablent out of the City, and lived about Cicil, did lay hard fiege. The first ap- in his Country Grange still vexing himpearance of the Numidians, Hannibal his felf with the indignity of his condemnation. Vanteurrors, made the Romans in all confu- Marcellus and Lavinus, being Confuls two fed hafte, run to their fhips: leaving all their or three years ago, had brought him into Rome: where he lived private in discontented fort, as might appear, both by his careleineis in apparel, and by the wearing of his long hair and beard; which in that time were thebadges of men afflicted. Very that might take charge of the Common-lately he was compelled by the Cenfors, to poll his hair, and come into the Senate: Magistrates, with other business; where unto where he used to six silent, and signifie his himfelf was difabled by his hurts. He did fo: aftent or diflike to what was proposed, eiand soon after died. Then was it thought ther in short formal words, or in passing needful, that new Confuls should be chosen from fide to fide, when the house was dividout of hand: forasmuch as two Roman Ar- ed. At length it happed, that in some business mies lay so near unto the Enemy, without weightily concerning one that was his kinsany General. Especially it was defired, that man; he stood up and made a set speech: Election should be made of such men as whereby he drew all the Fathers to attentiwere not only valiant, but well advised: on; and bade them enquire of him, and take fince the best, and most fortunate of their better notice, what he was, and what he great Darers, M. Marcellus, by losing himself had been. The Senate was much altered fince to strangely, had given them a fair warning, he had left it; many brave men were lost;

Cccccc 2

to fill up the number, than to answer to the had, four served in spain, two in sicil, and dignity of the place; and they that were two in Sardinia: therest were so disposed. left of ancient standing, had even spent their inteveral parts of Italy, where need seemed Vertues to no great effect. Wherefore all to require, that only two Legions were left began to fay; that it was great pitty, fo wor- to each of the Confuls. But the Confuls were thy and able a man as this Livius, had been men of execution; and would not be tyed to all this while forgotten; one of whom the the punctual observance of what the Senare Gommon-wealth stood in great need, yet thought fit. M. Livius would not stir out had not used in this dangerous war. Now of Rome, against so mighty a power as followfeeing that the Consuls ought, one of them, ed Afdrubal, untill he had first obtained. to be cholen a Patric tur, the other of necessi- that he might carry with him as many as tv a Pheleian : and fince neither Fabius, nor could well be spared from other imploy-Valerius Lacenus, being both of them Pairicrans, could be joyned with Claudius Nero: fen Companies. It was true, that two Legions every one was of opinion, that there could appointed to ferve under Lucius Portius a not be chosen and coup'ed together, two Prætor of that year, among the Cifalpine fitter men than C. Claudius, and this Marcus Gauls, might be reckoned as an additament Livius. But Livie would not endure to hear to the forces of Livius; to whom the War of this. He faid it was unreasonable, that one condemned as a dithonest man thould afterwards be chosen Ruler of the City. If they had done ill to truft him with one Confulfhip, what meant they then to offer him another? With these and the like phrases he refitted their defires : till by perswasions and cial instance of Livie, did obtain, that all examples rehearfed, of such as had patiently | might be left to their own discretion. For digested injuries done by the people, and re- news came that Astrubal was already paspayed good for evil; he was contented to ac- fing the Alps; the Ligarians, who dwelt in cept the honour.

Here we may behold a true figure of that Emblem, with which Themistocles checked the ingratitude of the Athenians; resembling himfelf to a Plane-tree, the branches and boughs whereof men break in fair weather ; thought best, the two Consuls went forth but run under it for shelter in a storm. Such of the City; each his several way. The unthankfulness to well deserving men, is people of Rome were now quite otherwise not rarely found in the outragious multitude. Neither was the late example hereto lins Paulus, and C. Terentius Varro, were fent much unlike, of Philip the fecond King of Spain his dealing with the Duke of Alva. For upon them, to direct their Generals, or bid although he had committed the Duke to them dispatch, and win the victory betimes: prison, upon some small offence conceived, without all regard of his former deferts: yet when his intended Conquelt of Portugal, little. For fince few years had paffed, whererequired the service of a man, more than or in some one of their Generals had not been dinarily sufficient; he stood no longer up- slain; and since it was manifest, that if eion the scanning of late displeasures; but em- ther of these present Consuls were deseated, ployed the same Duke, whom he had newly or put to the worst; the two Carthaginians difgraced. This is wildom often taught by would forthwith joyn, and make short work necessity.

new ones were cholen; such as rather ferved | and maintain them. Of these which they ments; and those, or the most of them, choagainst Asdrubal was allotted. So might also two other Legions , that were among the Salentines, near unto Tarentum, unto another of the Prætors, be accounted a part of Clandius his Army, thar was fent against Hannibal. Nevertheless, the Confuls, by the espethe Country about Genna, with their neighbour people, were in readiness to joyn with him; and L. Portius fent word, that he would adventure no further, than he fafely might. When all was ordered as themselves affected, than they had been, when L. Emiagainst Hannibal. They did no longer take but rather they stood in fear, lest all diligence, wisdom and valour should prove too with the other: it seemed a greater happi-It was a dangerous year toward, when ness than could be expected, that each of C. Claudius Nero, and M. Levius were chosen them should return home Victor; and come Consuls. Afdrubal was already come into off with honour, from such mighty opposi-France, and waited only, to have the wayes tion, as he was like to find. With extream of the Alps thawed by warm weather, for his passe un into the passe under the his passe under the his passe under the fine the battle of Canne: though it were this time the service of three and twenty Legions: and wanted not employment for ma- Carthage, had continued the War in Italy. ny more, if they had known how to levy But there was now arrived another Son of

amiltar; and one, that in his present Expe- Brother of Hannibal it was thought needful. dition, had seemed a man of more sufficien- by these mischievous Partizans of Hanno, to cy than Hannibal himself. For whereas in use the violent opposition of more earnest that long and dangerous march, thorow malice. Nevertheless, As divibal was a good barbarous Nations, over great Rivers and Patriot; and therefore endured patiently Mountains, that were thought unpailable, such indignities, as Mutines could not long Hannibal had loft a great part of his Army: digeft. His Journey into listy being refolthis Aldrubal in the same places, had multi-ved upon: he lay with part of the Army at olied his numbers; and gathering the people, Eetula, not far from the Mines of Silver; that he found in the way, descended from whence he was to furnish his Expeditions. the Alos like a rowling Snow-ball, far grea- Thither came Scipio; and drave him out of ter than he came over the Pyrenees at his his Campsthough he were strongly lodged, first setting out of spain. These considerati- before the other Carthaginian Captains ons, and the like, of which fear presented could or would come to his affistance. The many unto them; caused the people of Rome, overthrow seems not to have been so great. to waitupon their Confuls out of the Town, as it must have been supposed; if no way lay like a pensive train of Mourners: thinking open to those that fled. Rather it appears, upon Marcellus and Eristinus; upon whom that Asdrubal dealt like a provident man, and in the like fort they had given attendance feeing that his Camp was likely to be forced, the last year; but saw neither of them return fent away all his mony with the Elephants alive, from a less dangerous War. Particu- before him: but stayed behind himself to larly old Q. Fabius gave his accustomed ad- fustain the Romans a while, until his carvice to M. Livius, that he should abstain riages might be out of danger. Herein he from giving or taking battel, untill he well had his defire, afterwards he gathered his understood the Enemies condition. But the broken troops together; and retired in such Conful made him a froward answer, and fort, that scipio thought it not good to purfaid, that he would fight the very first day: sue him, and so passed over Tagus. Then for that he thought it long, till he should taking unto him the forces assigned for his either recover his honour by victory; or by expedition, he marched away toward the feeing the overthrow of his own unjust Ci- Pyrenees: leaving the care of spain unto his tizens, satisfie himself with the joy of a great, Brother Mago, and to Astrubal the Son of though not an honest revenge. But his mean- Gesco; that thought himself the fittest man

ing was better than his words. felf, whom Hannibal had fent into the first coming of Hannibal, were verily perswa-

for the administration thereof. Fain would Of the overthrow that Astrubal received scipio have stopped him in his fourney, by in spain by Scipio, a little before he took his fending to defend against him the ordinary Journey into Italy; such mention hath al- way of the Mountains. But whether Addruready been made, as agreed with the report bal took another way, or whether he forced of that noble Historian Livie. Yet I think it the guards that Scipio had fent to keep the not amissto add in this place, what may be Pyrenees ( as the defence of hard passages be gathered out of the remaining fragments commonly forts to no good effect) he was of Polybius his History concerning that aconot letted in his voyage by any such impedicident: Asdrubal had wrestled with many ment. Coming into Gaul, and following the difficulties in Spain; by reason of those Cap-tains that were sent from the City of Car-Nations that lay in his way, so well affected, thage, to joyn with him in the administration either to him or to his mony, that no passaof that Province: they being, as it may ges were defended against him, nor any sort feem of the Hannonian faction; which is to of refiftance made; but he, and his Army fay, thus far forth Traytors, that they pre- well entertained and their number much inferred the advantage of their own fide, be- creased, by access of such as were desirous fore the good of their Common-wealth. In to take his pay. Of these he had the better what particulars they wronged this worthy choice; for that he was driven to winter Son of Amilear, and how they hindred his in their Country; whilst that the passages for the Alps were closed up with Ice and since of those Books, wherein Polybius hath exactly handled these matters, there are to for greatly molested Hannibal in his Journey us remaining only a few broken pieces. But over the Alps, were easily won to take part by the spightful dealing of Hanno in Sicil with Asdrubal, when he travelled thorow with Mutines, a better man of War than him- their Country. For these poor men, at the Island: we may conceive, that against the ded, that it was his purpose to 100 them of to fill up the number, than to answer to the had, four served in spain, two in sicil, and dignity of the place; and they that were two in Sardinia: therest were so disposed. left of ancient standing, had even spent their in leveral parts of Italy, where need seemed Vertues to no great effect. Wherefore all to require, that only two Legions were left began to faysthat it was great pitty, fo wor- to each of the Confuls. But the Confuls were thy and able aman as this Livius, had been men of execution; and would not be tyed to all this while forgotten; one of whom the the punctual observance of what the Senate Gommon-wealth frood in great need, yet thought fit. M. Livius would not fit out had not used in this dangerous war. Now of Rome, against so mighty a power as followfeeing that the Consuls ought, one of them, ed Asarubal, untill he had first obtained. to be chosen a Patrician, the other of necessi- that he might carry with him as many as ty a Phileian : and fince neither Fabius, nor Valerius Lavanus, being both of them Patricians, could be joyned with Claudius Nero: fen Companies. It was true, that two Legions every one was of opinion, that there could appointed to ferve under Lucius Portius a not be chosen and coup'ed together, two Prætor of that year, among the Cifalpine fitter men than C. Claudius, and this Marcus Gauls, might be reckoned as an additament Livius. But Livie would not endure to hear to the forces of Livius; to whom the War of this. He faid it was unreasonable, that one against Asdrubal was allotted. So might also condemned as a dithonest man, should after had done ill to trust him with one Conful- ther of the Prætors, be accounted a part of thip, what meant they then to offer him ano- Clandin his Army, thar was fent against Hancept the honour.

necessity.

new ones were chosen; such as rather served | and maintain them. Of these which they could well be spared from other imployments; and those, or the most of them, chotwo other Legions, that were among the wards be chosen Ruler of the City. If they Salentines, near unto Tarentum, unto another? With these and the like phrases he re- nibal. Nevertheless, the Consuls, by the espefitted their desires : till by perswasions and cial instance of Livie, did obtain, that all examples rehearfed, of such as had patiently might be left to their own discretion. For digested injuries done by the people, and re- news came that Asdrubal was already paspayed good for evil; he was contented to ac- ling the Alps; the Ligurians, who dweltin the Country about Genua, with their neigh-Here we may behold a true figure of that bour people, were in readiness to joyn Emblem, with which Themistocles checked with him; and L. Portius fent word, that he the ingratitude of the Athenians: resembling would adventure no further, than he safely himself to a Plane-tree, the branches and might. When all was ordered as themselves boughs whereof men break in fair weather ; thought best, the two Consuls went forth but run under it for shelter in a storm. Such of the City; each his several way. The unthankfulness to well deserving men, is people of Rome were now quite otherwise not rarely found in the outragious multi-affected, than they had been, when L. Emitude. Neither was the late example hereto lins Paulus, and C. Terentius Varro, were fent much unlike, of Philip the second King of against Hannibal. They did no longer take Spain his dealing with the Duke of Alva. For upon them, to direct their Generals, or bid although he had committed the Duke to them dispatch, and winthe victory betimes: prison, upon some small offence conceived, but rather they stood in fear, lest all diliwithout all regard of his former deserts: gence, wisdom and valour should provetoo yet when his intended Conquelt of Portugal, little. For fince few years had paffed, whererequired the service of a man, more than or in some one of their Generals had not been dinarily sufficient; he stood no longer up- slain; and since it was manifest, that if eion the feanning of late displeasures; but em- ther of these present Consuls were deseated, ployed the same Duke, whomhe had newly or put to the worst; the two Carthaginians difgraced. This is wildom often taught by would forthwith joyn, and make short work with the other: it seemed a greater happi-It was a dangerous year toward, when ness than could be expected, that each of C. Cliudius Nero, and M. Levius were chosen them should return home Victor; and come Consuls. Afdrubal was already come into off with honour, from such mighty opposi-France, and waited only, to have the wayes tion, as he was like to find. With extream of the Alps thawed by warm weather, for difficulty had Rome held up her head, ever his passege into Italy. The Romans used at since the battle of Canna: though it were this time the service of three and twenty Le- so, that Hannibal alone, with little help from gions: and wanted not employment for ma- Carthage, had continued the War in Italy. ny more, if they had known how to levy But there was now arrived another Son of amiltar; and one, that in his present Expe- Brother of Hannibal it was thought needful. dition, had feemed a man of more fufficien- by these mischievous Partizans of Hanno to cy than Hannibal himself. For whereas in use the violent opposition of more earnest that long and dangerous march, thorow malice. Nevertheless, As drubal was a good harbarous Nations, over great Rivers and Patriot; and therefore endured patiently Mountains, that were thought unpatlable, fuch indignities, as Mutines could not long Hannibal had loft a great part of his Army: digeft. His Journey into list being refolthis Aldrubal in the same places, had multi- ved upon: he lay with part of the Army at olied his numbers; and gathering the people, Betula, not far from the Mines of Silver; the Alps like a rowling Snow-ball, far grea- Thither came Scipio; and drave him out of ter than he came over the Pyrenees at his his Campsthough he were strongly lodged, first setting out of spain. These considerati- before the other Carthaginian Captains ons, and the like, of which fear presented could or would come to his assistance. The many unto them; caused the people of Rome, overthrow seems not to have been so great. larly old 2 Fabius gave his accustomed ad- sustain the Romans a while, until his caring was better than his words.

litand: we may conceive, that against the ded, that it was his purpose to rob them of

that he found in the way, deteended from whence he wasto furnish his Expeditions. no wait upon their Confuls out of the Town, as it must have been supposed, if no way lay ike a pensive train of Mourners: thinking open to those that fled. Rather it appears, upon Marcellus and Eriffinus; upon whom that Afdrub.d dealt like a provident man, and in the like fort they had given attendance feeing that his Camp was likely to beforced, the last year; but saw neither of them return fent away all his mony with the Elephants alive, from a less dangerous War. Particu- before him: but stayed behind himself to vice to M. Livius, that he should abstain riages might be out of danger. Herein he from giving or taking battel, untill he well had his defire, afterwards he gathered his understood the Enemies condition. But the broken troops together; and retired in such Conful made him a froward answer, and fort, that scipio thought it not good to purfaid, that he would fight the very first day! fue him, and so passed over Tagus. Then for that he thought it long, till he should taking unto him the forces assigned for his either recover his honour by victory; or by expedition, he marched away toward the feeing the overthrow of his own unjust Ci- Pyrenees: leaving the care of spain unto his tizens, satisfie himself with the joy of a great, Brother Mago, and to Asarbal the Son of though not an honest revenge. But his mean- Gesco; that thought himself the fittest man for the administration thereof. Fain would Of the overthrow that Asdrubal received scipio have stopped him in his Journey, by in Spain by Scipio, a little before he took his fending to defend against him the ordinary Journey into Italy : such mention hath al- way of the Mountains. But whether Afdruready been made, as agreed with the report bal took another way, or whether he forced of that noble Historian Livie. Yet I think it the guards that Scipio had fent to keep the not amissto add in this place, what may be Pyrenees ( as the defence of hard passages be gathered out of the remaining fragments commonly forts to no good effect) he was of Polybius his History concerning that ac- not letted in his voyage by any such impedicident: Aldrubal had wrestled with many ment. Coming into Gaul, and following the difficulties in Spain; by reason of those Cap- steps of his Brother Hannibal: he found the tains that were fent from the City of Car- Nations that lay in his way, so well affected, thage, to joyn with him in the administration either to him or to his mony, that no passaof that Province: they being, as it may ges were defended against him, nor any fort feem, of the Hannonian faction; which is to of refistance made; but he, and his Army fay, thus far forth Traytors, that they pre- | well entertained, and their number much inferred the advantage of their own fide, be- creafed, by access of fuch as were defirous fore the good of their Common-wealth. In to take his pay. Of these he had the better what particulars they wronged this worthy choice: for that he was driven to winter Son of Amilear, and how they hindred his in their Country; whilft that the passages courses undertaken, it cannot be known; of the Alps were closed up with sce and since of those Books, wherein Polybins hath Snow. The Mountainers likewise, that had exactly handled these matters, there are to so greatly molested Hannibal in his Journey us remaining only a few broken pieces. But over the Alps, were easily won to take part by the spightful dealing of Hanno in Sicil with Asdrubal, when he travelled thorow with Mutines, a better man of War than him- their Country. For these poor men, at the felf, whom Hannibal had fent into the first coming of Hannibal, were verily perswatheir cattel; and to make spoil or that both of them relted, without making offer little wealth which they had painfully fora- to light. It feemed perhaps unto Hannibal. ped together out of the defolate rocks. But who knew the Country very well; that his now in process of time, they were better in- Brother might with little impediment overformed. Therefore, understanding that come the way to Canufum: where, if he there were two mighty Cities far dif-joyned could once again deal with both the Conafunder, which made War upon each other, fuls, and all the Roman forces together, he he Land and Seas and that the Alps did on- had reason to hope for such another victory, ly lye in the way: they gladly condescend- as once he had gotten in the same open Couned to take their part in the fortune of the try. If this had fo falo out; Rome would invaders. The like affection upon greater have been undone for ever. But the Carthacause, was afterward found in the Cifalpine ginians should not have need to wish any Gauls. The Ligurians also joyned with Jecond victory, in the naked Campans about Aldrubal: and to would the Hetrurians have Canna; If fuch an Army as this which Aldrudone, if he had arrived in their Country. bal now brings, had come to fecond Hanni-There was no other Roman Army near than bal, when he was in full strength; and the L. Portius with his two Legions; of whom Romans not able to keep the field. Wheiethere was no great fear. Therefore did of fore this worthy General had good reason drubal: fet upon Placentia, a Koman Colony: afterward to fay that Hanno was the man. in hope to make his coming the more ter- who by delaying the supply, did beat him rible, by the destruction of that Town. But out of Italy; which elle no power of the there he loft a great deal of time, and final- Romans could have done. Iv was driven to quit the enterprise: by Whilst Nero waited upon the Carthaginiundertaking which , he gave the Roman ans, and thought it enough to hinder them Confuls leadure to make ready for him; and from meeting with the Army that was comcaused his Brother Hannibal ( who upon ing to their succour: he was advertised of the first bruit of Asdrubal he io timely, and Asdrubal his approach; by Letters and Meseafily passing the Alps, was about to leave sengers intercepted, as they were going to his wintring Camps, and go forth to meet Hannibal. These gave notice, that Asdrubal with him) to fit still a while, as well aware, had left the fiege of Placentia, and drew onthat Placentia would not be taken in wards apace being already come within

what speed he could to meet with Hannibal, by Livie the Consul. Of these news Claudius and stop him from joyning with his Brother. Nero was nothing joyful. For if Hannibal He had about forty thoutand foot, and five could once be joyned as head, unto that great hundred horse: with which he dayly offer-body of an Army, which Asdrubal brought ed battel to the Carthaginians; and had of with him: it was most apparent, that howhim the better in many fkirmilhes. Hannibal foever the fortune of Rome fnould avoid for was once driven to make a tedious march the prefent, any great calamity; yet the vefrom the borders of the Salentines and Apu- ry continuance of fo figure a war at home, lians, unto the Country of the Bratians, would enforce the Latines, and other faiththere to encrease his forces; which were ful Associates, to faint under the burden; as otherwise too weak for the Journey intend- twelve of the thirty Roman Colonies had ed. Afterward coming to Grumentum, a already done. Wherefore he refolved, that Town of the Lucans; he there fought un- it were better to make any desperate advenprofoeroully with Nero the Conful. Never- ture, than to fuffer the conjunction of two theless, he got off, and marched away to Ve | fuch malevolent Planets: whose pestilent innulia. But Nero followed him, and had there fluence, if not on the fudden, yet within few again the letter of him. Wherefore he was years, was like to work most lamentable driven to return to Metapontum : where effects. It feemed apparent, that his Colleague joyning with Hanno, that had made ready a was unable to stay the progress of Asarubal: good Army, he affayed again, to make way neither were there any good Legions in a by force to his Brother. So he passed on readiness, that could do service in such a ward, and came again to Venulta, having needful case; excepting those, that were al-Nero ttill at his heels. Thence went he over ready imployed under the two Confuls. the River Aufidus, to Canufum, where he fate Hereupon he concluded, that it was not down, not tar from the place, in which he expedient for him to tye himself to his own had obtained his most memorable victory. charge, which was the war against Hanni-

two hundred miles of his Bother; not with-C. Claudius Nero the Roman Conful, made standing all opposition that could be made There also did Nero sit down by him: and bal: but rather that it behoved him, to help where more necessity required; and to car- | mans to come to battle, having long dewhich was of the less importance. Six thoutook, that were the very choice of his Artel should be hung out; which was commonly a Purple Coat over the Generals Pa-

ry part of his forces unto his Colleague. This fired it, and hitherto not found occasion becould not be without much danger. Yet fore. But when he had put his men in order. fince the meeting of the two Carthaginian and was riding before the head of his Army, Brethren, was far more dangerous to the to behold the Enemies countenance: it Roman Common-wealth: it seemed the best seemed to him, that they were more than way to put Fortune in trust, with that they had been; and some of their arms and horses looked as though they had wanted fand foot, and a thousand horse he therefore dressing, after a long Journey. Hereupon he began to withdraw his Army back into the my; and making thew, as if he would on- Camp: and gave order, that if no prifoly ften aside, to do some small piece of fer- ners could be taken, by whom he might be vice near at hand; away he posted as fast as certified of the truth; yet should there good he could, to affift his fellow-Conful. His observation be made, whether the Enemies Mellengers ran before him, to give warning Camp were enlarged, or no; or what other to all Towns by which he was to pass, alteration could be noted, that might shew that they should be ready to meet him with their forces to be encreased. The Camp, as victuals, and all other necessaries for his hath been said, was not extended: butthe Army, Livius the other Conful, at that trumpet, that founded only once in the time, lay encamped near unto Sena Gallica; Quarter of L. Portius the Prætor, did now, and Aldrubal, within half a mile of him. In contrary to former custom, found twice in fix dayes Nero had finished his Journey thi- the Quarter of Living the Conful. Hereat Afther; and when he drew near, fent Messen- drubal greatly mused: and being well acgers before him, to give notice of his com-ing. Livie thought it fittest that he should for a sure token, that the other Consul was flay in some place of covert until dark night, and then enter secretly into the Camp: left bal were alive, and in good case, he was not the Enemy, perceiving this access of able to conjecture: but thought it the best strength, should accordingly frame his coun way, to go leisurely to work, till he might fels. This was done; and a token given, that be better informed. Upon confidence in his the Colonels, Captains, and all Souldiers, as own forces, he had not cared hitherto, well horse as foot, that Nero had brought how near he lay to the Romans; nor troubwith him, should be lodged and entertained led himself perhaps with over-strongly forby men of their own fort. Their Company tifying his own Camp. Yet when he now was somewhat increased by Voluntaries that perceived, that somewhat was fallen out joyned with him on the way. Nevertheless beside his expectation, he changed his resoit was not needful that the Quarter which lution; and held it no dishonour to remove received them, should be enlarged; since a little further off. So he dislodged secretly they had brought with them nothing but by night, intending to get over the River their arms. The next day they held a Metaurus; whereby to keep himself as long Counsel of war: wherein some were of opi- as he could, from necessity of battel. But nion, that it were best for these new arrived whether it were so, that his guides did steal Companies to refresh themselves a few days away from him in the dark, so that he could after their weary Journey, before they not find the way to the Foords; or whether should be drawn forth to battel. But against his carriages were too heavy, and hindred this, Nero was very earnest: and befought his speed: far he had not gone, ere the Conhis Colleague, to make use of him out of ful Nero was at his heels with all the Roman hand; that he might betimes return to his horse, and stayed him from pessing any furown Camp, ere Hannibal (hould have no- ther. Soon after came L. Portius with the tice of his absence. The Souldiers also of light armature : whom the other Consul Nero were full of spirit; perceiving that followed anon with all the Legions; in the honour of the victory was like to be good order, and ready for battel. Afdrubal, theirs: forasmuch as the battel would not seeing himself overtaken with necessity to have been undertaken, without this their fight, omitted no care and circumspection. coming to help. Finally, it was agreed when His Gauls, in whom he reposed least confithe Counsel brake up, that the sign of bat- dence, he placed in his left wing upon a Hill, which the Enemy should not, without much difficulty, be able to climb : in the right wing he stood himself with his Afdrubal was no less willing than the Ro. Africans and Spaniards; his Ligurians he stowed in the front of his battels. On the Chizzel, wherewith he gave them a stroke Roman fide, Nero had the leading of the between the ears, in the joynt of the neck. right wing. Livius of the left, and Porcius of next unto the head, wherewith he killed the the battel. Both Romans and Carthaginians bealts upon a sudden, This speedy way of well understood, how much depended up- preventing such harm as the Elephants, beon the fortune of this day; and how little ling hurt, were wont to do to the squadrons hope of fatety there was unto the vanquish- following them, is faid to have been the deed. Only the Romans herein feemed to have vice of Asdrubal himself, who died in this had the better in conceit and opinion; that battel. they were to fight with men defirous to have fled from them. And, according to this pre- bal, both by Polybius, and by Livie. Heis fumption, came Livius the Conful with a faid at all times to have shewed himself worproud bravery, to give charge on the Afri- thy of Amilear his Father, and Hannibal his cans, by whom he was to sharply entertained, Brothersto have striven with great patience that the victory seemed very doubtful. The against many difficulties, whereinto he fell Africans and Spaniards were fout Soul- by the means of those Captains that were diers, and well acquainted with the manner tent from Carthage into Spain; to have perof the Roman fight. The Ligurians also were formed in this last battel all duties of a wora hardy Nation, and not accustomed to give thy General; and finally, when he sawthe ground; which they needed the leis, or were loss irrepairable, to have ridden manfully able now to do, being placed in the midit. Li- into the thickest of his Enemies; where, vius therefore, and Porcius found strong fighting bravely, he was flain. Of the numopposition : and with great slaughter on ber that died with him in this battel, the reboth fides, prevailed little or nothing. Befides port of Livie and Polybius do very much difother difficulties, they were exceedingly agree. For Livie faith, that the Caribagitroubled by the Elephants that brake their nians had no less an overthrow, than was first ranks; and put them in such disorder, as that which they gave to the Roman at Canthe Roman Enligns were driven to fall back. ne: that fifty fix thousand of them were All this while Claudius Nero, labouring much Ilain, five thou and four hundred taken in vain against a steep Hill, was unable to prisoners, and above four thousand Roman come to blowes with the Gauls, that stood Citizens, whom they had captives with opposite unto him, but out of danger. This them, delivered and set at liberty. He saith made Afdrubal the more confident; who, also, that of the Romans and their Affociates feeing his own left wing fafe, did the more there were flain eight thousand: and of the boldly and fiercely make impression on the booty, that it was exceeding great; not only other fide, upon the left wing of the Ro- in other kinds, but in gold and filver. Con-Ligurians and Gauls escaped as they could; Country, above their lives. and faved themselves by timely slight. Of the Elephants, four were taken alive: the Rome, than had been the fear of the event. rest were slain: some by the Enemies wea- For ever since it were known in what sort pons, others by their own guides that rode Nero had left his Army, the whole City was them. For when any of them, being fore troubled, as much as lately at Hannibal his wounded, began to wax unruly, and rush coming thither. Men thought it strange, that placed in the midit; and his Elephants he be- 1 the guide had in readiness a Mallet and a Great commendations are given to Aldrumans. But Nero perceiving that the place cerning the booty, Polybius hath no mention wherein he stood, was such as would com- of it. Likely it is to have been as rich as Lipel him to remain idle till the fight were viereporteth it; for Asdrubal came well stoended; took a part of his forces and led | red with mony. But Folybins (who had no them round behind the forces of Porcius and defire to make this battel of Metaurus, a pa-Livius: which having compassed, he fell rallel unto that of Canna) reports no more upon Afdrubal, and charged him in the than about ten thousand of the Carthaginian flanck. Here began the victory to be mani- | fide; and two thou fand of the Roman, to have fest on the Roman side. For Nero, finding been slain. The number of the prisoners he mone to refift him in front, ran all along the doth not mention: but only faith, That some depth of Afdrubal his battle : and falling up- of the Carthaginian Princes were taken on the skirts thereof, disordered the Ene- alive; and that all the rest died in the batmies, and putall to rout. Of the Spaniards tell. Whereby it may feem that they were therefore and Africans, that were laid at on all Barchines : for a fouch as they preferred every fide, the greatest part was slain. The the honour of themselves, and of their

The joy of this victory was no less in back upon their own battels following them, the Conful should make such a great adventure, as thus to put the one half of all the wards to flow, till it could not be contained

Roman forces unto hazzard of the Dice. For within any banks. Hannibal having loft in what if Hannibal should chance to have no- this unhappy fight besides the worthy Gentice of this his departure, and either purfue tleman his brother ) all the hope that so him, or setupon the Army that staid behind, long sustained him in Italy, withdrew himself much weakned, and without a General? into the Country of the Brutians: and thi-Thus did they talk ; yet referving their ther he caused all the Lucans, that were of censure unto the success; with liberty to ap- his party, to remove; as likewise all that prove or condemn, according to the iffue. In dwelt in Metaponium. For he wanted men to the mean time the people filled the Market- defend fo many places, as he held at the place, the Women ran to the Tumples with present, because they lay too far assuder. Vows and Prayers; and the Senators were Wherefore he drew them all into a lesser daily in councel, waiting still ready at hand compass, in the utmost corner of Italy, it beupon the Magistrates; as if some great mating a country of much fastness, and the peo-ter were likely to fall out, that would ask ple exceedingly devoted to his service. In every ones help. In brief, they were all fo this bufiness Nero gave him no memorable full of melancholy, that when the first news impediment : either because Hannibal was of victory came, there were not many that too strong for him, having all his forces uniwould believe it. Afterwards, when Messen-ted; or because it is likely that this remove gers arrived from the Confuls, with Letters of the Lucans and Metapontines, was not becontained all that had passed, there was not forethe end of Summer, when their harvest only great and joyful concourse of all forts was gathered in : at what time the Senate of men unto the Temples, but the very face | called him home to Rome.M.Livius the other of the City was altered; and men from Conful tarried among the Cifalpine Gaules thenceforth began to follow their private untill the end of summer; there to set things bufiness; making contracts one with ano- in such order, as he thought requisite : which ther ( which they had long forborn to do ) done, he wrote unto the Senate, that there &attending their own affairs in such wise, as was no more need of him and his Army in if Hannibal were already driven out of Italy. that Province, but that L. Porcius, with the Nero returning to his Camp, threw forth two Legions that were there before, might openly the head of Asarubal before the Car- very well discharge the place. For this cause thaginians: and producing his African pri- he defired leave to return home; and that foners bound, fent two of them loose to he might bring his Army with him. The give Hannibal notice of what had hapned. | Senate well understood his meaning: which These two prisoners might have served was to have the honour of triumph as he well enough to certifie Hannibal of the mifad well deferved. But for a fouch as it was well venture, without doing wrong to the dead known, what interest Nero had in the late body of Afdrubal: especially since Hanni- victory:order was so given, that not only Libal, in honourable, and far different vie with his Army should come home; but manner, had given burial to Gracchus and likewise Nero, though leaving his Army be-Marcellus; yea, to all the Roman Generals, hind him, to confront Hannibal. So the howhose carkasses fell into his hands. But it nour of triumph was granted to them both: may seem, that howsoever the People of in the pomp whereof, Livie made the grea-Carthage wanted much of the generous dif- ter shew, as riding in a Chariot, and followpolition, which was found among the Ro ed by his Souldiers, because in his Province, man, in their love unto the Common-weal: and upon his day of command, the victory yet in dealing with enemies, they were far was gotten: his Army also being present at more civil, and less prone to the infolency the triumph. But Nero that rode on horseof revenge. The best excuse of this outrage back, and without such attendance, was the done by Nero, is that he hoped much more more extolled by the People and Souldiers; by the sudden terrour of such a spectacle, by whom, the victory was in a manner wholthan by the simple relation of that which ly ascribed unto his great worth. Neither Paffed, to make a deep impression of fear wanted L. Veturius Philo, and Q. Cecilius Meinto the Carthaginians. It may also be tellus, Lieutenants to the Generals, the due faid, That he forgot himself, being over- acknowledgement of their good service. loyed with the greatness of his prosperity. For they were commended unto the People, For it was the battel of Metaurus that as men worthy to be chosen Consuls: and weighed down the ballance, and turned the Confuls they were chosen for the year fol-Tide of the Roman fortune : which being lowing. But nothing was done by them, then at the lowest Ebbe, ceased not after- worthy of memory in their Consulship. Nei-Dddddd ther indeed from this year, which was the fand Afdrubal withdraw himself into Lulita. thirteenth of the present war, until the nia (which is now Portugal) whither the eighteenth year wherein it ended, was Romans had ill means to follow; being althere any matter of importance wrought in together unacquainted in those parts. Mago light; fave only the taking of Locri from the had foon ended his business, and returned Carthaginians by furprile. For Hannibal into Spain: where he met with one Hanno wanted itrength, wherewith to make any (the lame perhaps that had lately been in-great offer: and the Komans had little mind ployed in Sicil) who brought new forces to provoke him; but thought it well that he out of Africk; and came to succeed in was quiet. Such opinion had they conceived place of Afdrubal the Barchine. It is not unof him, that though all about him went to likely that spain was now the better, and ruine, yet in him alone, they thought there more readily furnished with men and all was force enough to hold himself upright. things needfull from Carthage: when that son And furely, very notable are the commen- of Amilear, whose authority had been greatdations given unto him by Polybins, whom est, was thencedeparted. For hereby might Livie therein follows. That making war upon a People, of all other the most war-like, it felf, against that noble race of Warriors; he obtained to many victories by his own good conduct: and that leading an Army, compounded of fo many fundry Nations, Africans, Spannards, Gaules, Carthaginians, Italians and Greeks, which were neither in raised of him at home, or whether upon Language, Laws, Conditions, or any other thing, one like to another the held them all in fuch good order, that they never fell to fedition among themselves, or against their General. But that which Livie adds hereto, is vet perhaps of greater admiration: That he fustained his Army, without help from other levied above nine thousand men. places from this time forward upon the hungry foil of the Brutians : which when it was best manured in time of peace, could hardly tive, as it may seem to the proceedings of fuffice to nourish the Inhabitants. It's therefore apparent, that by his proper worth and he is reported by some Writers to have sent vertue, he kept his Army in such order and part of his forces into Italy, to the affiftobedience, tather than by any greatness of ance of C. Claudius Nero, and M. Livius the reward and booty; fince after the death of Confuls. But hearing of the levy made by leave him; until he be drawn into Africk by anus got intelligence by some fugitive Celtitain, and lead us unto the end of this War.

ø. XVII.

How P. Cornelius Scipio the Roman made entire conquest of Spain.

†. I.

How the Carthaginians were driven by Scipio Mago faved himself with all the horse, and from the Continent into the Ifle of Gades.

Ago and Afdrubal the fon of Gesco, the factious diligence of old Hanno approve when it should appear, that things did profper much the better by being left unto the handling of other men. Whether it wereupon defire to make good fome fuch opinion confidence in the forces that he brought over: Hanno took the field, and led Mago with him; as purpoling afresh to set upon the Romans. So he entered into the country of the Celtiberians, not very far from new Carthage: where, by money and over perswasions, he

P. Scipio in the mean while contained himself in the Eastern parts of Spain: atten-Asdrubal, the son of Amilcar; against whom Aldrubal, he made no invalion upon the Hanno and Mago among the Celtiberians, he wealthier parts of Italy; but held himself still fent M. Syllanus the Propretor, withten among the poor Brutans. Where we must shouland foot, and five hundred horse. 874-Scipio; whose doing will henceforth enter- berians, who became his guides, that their Country-men incamped apart from the Carthaginians in great diforder: as men fearing no danger, because they were at home. Wherefore as closely as he was able, he drew neer to these Celtiberians: and falling upon them on the sudden, gave them such an overthrow, that Hanno and Mago coming to their fuccour, instead of heartning and re-inforcing them, became partakers of the losold Companies of foot, which were about two thousand: and in ten daies journey brought them fafe to Asdrubal. The rest of N took upon them the charge of spain, the Africans were either flain or taken: when Afdrubal the fon of Amilcar depart- among whom, Hanno had the ill luck to be ed thence into Laly. These agreed toge- taken prisoner; though he kept himself out ther , that Mago should make a voyage to of the fight until all was lost. As for the Celtithe Baleares; there to levy a supply of men; berians, they knew better how to make shift;

and faved most of themselves by running relying upon those, that might perhapsa ?-

was much troubled with the danger wherein twenty Towns, had promifed him the last the stood, by the coming thither of Afdru- Winter, to raife three thousand foot and five hat Ten thousand foot, and eighteen hun- hundred horse for his service: he resolved to dred horse he did therefore send out of makeuse of those, and some few others, that spain (as it is reported by fome Authors to might help to make a fliew; and yet not be the defence of his own Country or was per- able to do any great harm, if they would haps, about to fend them: and thereupon re- revolt. So with five and forty thousand home. But when he had word of the great camped. At his first coming, Migo and forethe end of the Summer, then might he him unprepared, whilit he was making ginians. But when it was noised abroad, that the Carthaginians, there were daily skirall which hath followed Afdrubal into Italy, mishes between the horse and light arma-

him on the other fide very doubtful of order at the Hill foot, upon which he

tray him in his greatest need. Yet fince one It could not otherwise be, but that scipio colchus, that was Lord of eight and mained at new Carthage, intentive to the foot, and three thousand horse, he sought necessity and success of his Country-men at out the Enemy; near unto whom he invictory at Metaurus, which fell out long be- Mafaniffa fell upon him; with hope to take well adventure, to take in hand the entire his lodgings. But he laid certain troops of conquest of Spain; which must needs be horse in covert : which, breaking upon much alienated from the Carthagininas, by them unexpected, caused them to fall off. the report of such an overthrow. The spa- | They made at first an orderly retreat : but will Souldierds that ferved under Hannibal, being more hardly pressed, they shortly Sthosethat had been sent over into Africk, betook themselves to plain flight. After this were as pledges heretofore, by whom their incounter, which added fome courage to Country was held obnoxious to the Cartha- the Romans, and abated the prefumption of were fallen into the hands of the Ro- ture, on both fides; wherein was nothing mans; and that Hannibal with his Army done of importance. Afdrubal drew forth his was closed up in a straight, whence he could Army, and arranged it before his Trenches : not get out: then did it greatly behove the like did scipio; each of them to shew spaniards to conform themselves unto the that he durst fight, yet not proceeding any will of the Vectors. That it was the fue- farther. Thus they continued many dayes: cess of things in Italy, which gave such confi- Astrubal being still the first that issued forth dence unto scipiosit was the more probable, in the morning; and the first that, in the because he took not this great enterprise in evening, withdrew himself into his Trenches. hand, untill the Summer was almost spent. The Spanish Auxiliaries were placed on both Astribal therefore used the benefit of the lides in the wings; the Carthaginians were feason; and by disposing his Army into ma- in the midst, with their Elephants before ny garrisons, hindred the Enemy from do- them; and opposite to the con the other side ing any great exploit before winter. So the were the Roman Legions. When they had in very length of way, and the time of the year, this order confronted one another, though caused scipio to return back : without any at far distance, many dayes together : it other matter performed, than that his Bro- grew to be the common opinion; that they ther L. Scipio took by affault the Town of should shortly meet in the same form, and be matched on each part, with the enemies Against the next years danger, Asdrubal long before designed. But Scipio, when he prepared a great Army: and spared not cost, purposed indeed to fight, altered the form of nor travel, in strengthening himself, for the his Army; and withall, came forth earlier tryal of his last fortune in Spain. With than he had been wont. He canfed his men feventy thousand foot, four thousand horse, and horses to be well fed betimes in the and two and thirty Elephants, he took the morning before day: and then fent forth his field: which number I believe, that he could horse and light armature, to train out the hardly have raised, without boldly deny- Carthaginians with their bellics empty:using ing the truth of those reports that came herein the same trick, whereby he might refrom Italy. Scipio thought his Roman Legions member that Hannibal had beaten his Fatoo weak to encounter with fuch a multi- ther in the battel of Trebia. His Roman Legitude. Wherefore he judged it needful to use ons he bestowed in the wings; his spaniards the help of his spanish friends. But the death in the battel. Asdrubal fent forth his horse in of his Father and Uncle, that were cast away all haste, to entertain the Romans; whilst by the treason of such false Auxiliaries, made | he himself arranged his men, in their wonted

Dddddd 2

incamped.

could not be different which part had the kens to no perswasson. The Camp of Asdrahal better: fince, being over-prelied on either had that day been taken, if a ftorm of rain. fide, they had a tafe retrait unto their foot; which fell violently on the sudden, and bred and one troop seconding another by course, some superstition in the Romans, had not returned to charge. This fight was protra- caused them to give over. Eted by Scipio to a great length: because his men, having well fed themselves, were like his men; but caused them, hungry, and to hold out better than the enemy. But over-laboured as they were, to take pains about noon he canfed his wings to advance in fortifying the Camp; wherein he feared to a good pice; leaving their battel of spamards far behind them, that came on lei- have in the strength of his Trenches, when furely, according to direction. The spanish he had lost the hearts of his Spanish fouldiers. Mercenaries that flood in Afdrubalhis wings, One Attanes, that was Lord of the Turdeber, to the Latine and Roman Souldiers that great Band of his fubjects: many followed came against them; for they were fresh Soul- this example; and soon after two strong diers, levied in haltesand fighting only in re- Towns were yielded up to Scipio, and the incamped. In the skirmishes of the horse it by the obstinate passion of fear, which hear-

The same night Asdrubal gave no rest to be affaulted. But little affurance could he were no way comparable, tave only in num- tani, fled from him to the Romans, with a spect of their pay. Being therefore charged Garrisons betrayed. It seems that the perverse in front by the Legions, and in flank, at the fortune of this late battel, whereupon Afdrufame time, by the Roman Velites, and by some balhad set his rest, bred in the Spaniards a cohorts, that were appointed to wheel about disposition, to believe the more easily those for the same purpole, they were sorely pref- reports which they heard from Italy. For fed, and with much difficulty made re- henceforward, they never did good office to fistance. The Carthaginians would fain have the Carthaginians. Asdrubal, perceiving this, succoured them; but that they durst not withdrew himself, and marched away faftir out of their places, because of the Spa- fter than ordinary pace, toward the Ocean rish battel which was coming against them; Sea. Scipio followed the next morning, and though it were as yet far off. Thus the best overtaking the Carthagnians with his horse, part of Asdrubal his Army stood idle, un- caused them so often to make stand, that til the wings were broken. For, had he they were at length attatched by the Roman adventured to meet with the Spaniards, he Legions, Here began a cruel flaughter: for must have cast himself into the open space there was no resistance made, but all fell that lay before him between the Roman to rout, fave only feven thousand that with wings: to the depth whereof when he had Afdrubal himself recovered a very strong arrived, he should have found himself in- piece of ground, which they fortified in closed in such fort, as was the Consul Pau- haste. The place he made shift a while to delus at the battel of Canne. Wherefore he fend:but wanting there necessaries to sustain did only imploy his Elephants; which did, himself long, he was forsaken by some of according to their manner, no greater harm those few, that continued hitherto partakers to his Enemies, than to his friends. When of his fortune. Wherefore he refolved to they were chafed with wounds, they could make thift for one; and stealing from his no longer be ruled as their guides : but ran, | Company by night away to the Sea side, that as chance led them, and troubled both was not far thence, he took shipping; and parts; or those perhaps the more, that were set fail for Gades. When scipio understood the more unwilling to kill them. In pro- that Asdrubal was thus gone, he left Syllanus cess of the fight, the Romans who had well with ten thousand foot, and a thousand refreshed their bodies in the morning, horse, to besiege their (Camp, which was not endured lusty; when the others began to taken in haste, for Mago and Masanissa staid faint with travel and heat of the day. in it) whilest he with the rest of the Army Wherefore perceiving their advantage, they did what was needfull in the Country followed it the more hotly; and gave not abroad. It was not long ere Mago and Majaover, till they had forc't the enemy to niffa followed Afdrubal to Gades: and their change his place, and run from him. Afdru- Army dispersed it self; some flying over to bal did his best to have made an orderly re- the Romans, others taking what way they treat; and afterward again to have caused like. So upon all the Continent of Spain, his men to turn head at the Hill foot. But the there were only three Towns left, Illiturgi, Romans would not fuffer the victory to be fo | Caftulo, and Aftapia, that made continuance of extorted from them: neither was it easie to war against the Romans: of which only caput fresh courage into the vanquished, led sale had a Carthaginian Garrison, consisting of fuch as had taved themtelves by flight in of which in all likelihood he might eafily be the late overthrows. Hereby it feems that moved to feek revenge. He had also been bethe report of those Historians was ill ground ed, who faid, that Caffulo yielded long fince over a Captain into Africk; who instructed unto the Romans; though Hannibal took a him fo well in marshalling his forces, as he wife in that City. For this was one of the last thereby often became victorious. Upon these three towns that held out on the Carthaginian fide. Illiturgi had sometimes been inclin- to Rome, and made league with the City in able to the Romans; if not altogether at time of great extremity. So that hereby P. their devotion. Yet after the death of the Scipio conceived hope of laying a good fountwo elder Scipio's, following too earnestly dation to the War, which he intended in the Carthaginian fortune, it not only rebel- Africk, upon the friendship of this ill neighled, but with great cruelty betrayed and bour to the Carthaginians. For which cause flew the poor men that escaped thither from he tent over C. Lalius his Emballador, to deal the overthrows. Aftapa was a Town that fill with Syphax: who declaring that the Caradhered to the Carthaginians, and, which thaginians did very ill in Italy, and had nowas worle, had thriven by the spoil of the thing now at all to do in Spain, easily per-Romans and their Confederates. Wherefore swaded the King to take part with those that (though not until the next year) Scipio had the better, and were without question went against these, and took himself Illitur his better friends. Only syphax requested that gi, and Castulo: Illiturgi by assault, and with the Roman General should visit him in pera general flaughter of the Inhabitants; Ca fon, to conclude the League; by which he fulo. by treason of one Cerdubellus. Astapa was to enter into conditions of more imporwas taken by Lucius Marcius; or rather tance, than in any former Treaty. Hereto destroyed by the Inhabitants. For a great Scipio condescended; thinking the friendpile of wood was raifed in the Market place: Thip of fo great a King, that was neighbour whereinto was thrown all the gold, and fil- to Carthage, and not far diffant from Spain. ver. with what soever else was precious; the well worthy of the adventure. So with two women and children standing by it under a Quinquereme Gallies he took Sea, and arrifure guard, that should kill and burn them ved in the Kings Port, at the same time with if the Romans got into the Town. This pro- Afdrubal. This would have been very danvision being made, all the Inhabitants that gerous unto him, had he been descryed by could bear Arms, rushed forth desperately, his enemies surther at Sea: but in the Haven and fell upon the Roman Camp; where ftri- they forbear to make offer one upon the ving beyond their power, they were every other. Syphax might well be proud; feeing one flain. Then was the Town forthwith fet at one time, two fuch Captains of two most on fire, by those that had taken charge to do powerful Cities, came to delire his friendit: and many of the Romans confumed with thip. He would have brought them to treat the flame; whilst they rushed over-hastily of peace: But the Roman excused himself, to catch the gold and filver, which they by want of fuch Commission from the Sefaw lying on the pile ready to melt.

Gades, found no cause of long stay there: but entred into Covenant; which in time of perreturned home to Carthage, with feven Gal-lies: leaving Mago behind him, to wait upon occasion, if any thould be offered. He visited in his way home, Syphax, King of the Mafefili, a people of the Numidians; hoping to Funeral games held by Scipio. A Duel between win him to the friendship of the Carthaginians. But he met with Scipio, as it were with his evil Angel, in the Kings port: who landing at the same time, carried syphax quite Cipio returning into Spain, and resting another way. For Scipio having driven the Othat Winter, took vengeance the next Carthaginians out of Spain, did forthwith be- year, upon those of Illiturgi, Caftulo, and think himself, how to finish the war, by put- Aftapa, as hath been said before. The conting them to the like diffres in Africk. Here- quest of the Country being then in a manner unto it seemed that the help of syphax would at an end; he performed at new Carthage, with be much available: a King that had many great folemnity, fome Vows that he had times fallen out with the Carthaginians, and made, and honoured the memory of his Fa-holding to P. and Cn. scipio, that fent him reasons the Numidian King sent Embassadors nate. He feasted them together : and short-Astrubal being beaten into the Island of ly dismissed Scipio, with whom he readily two panish Frinces. A digression concerning Duels.

†. II.

fustained much hurt by their procurement; ther and Uncle, with funeral games, especially of those that fought at sharp, according only reservee to bravery. In England to the manner of the times. Neither was it there was a great Combat fought between needful that he mould trouble himself with Edmond Ironside, and Canutus the Dane, for preparing ilayes for that spectacle, to hazard no less matter than the Kingdom. Theuse their lives, as was used in the City of Rome: of them was very frequent in the Saxon for there were enow, that either offered, times; almost upon every occasion, great themselves a Voluntaries, or were sent from or small. In the reign of Edward the third. their Princes, to give proof in fingle combat, who fultained the party of Mountfort. of the valour that was in their feveral Coun- against the Earl of hloys, contending for the tries. Some also there were, that being in Dutchy of Britain; there was a fight for contention, which they could not, or would honour of the Nations, between thirty of the not otherwise end agreed to deferr the de- Britons, and thirty English: two of which cifion of their Controversies, to tryal of the English, were Calverlie, a brave Captain; fword, in fingle fight. Among thefe, the and that Sir Robert Knokes is who afterwards most eminent, were Corbis and Orfice; Colen- became a renowned Commander in the germans: that contended for the principa- French wars, and did tigging honour his lity of a Town called ther. Corbis was the blood, whereof the Lord Karller is descendelder, and the elder brothers fon: where- ed. It were infinite to reck in the Namples forehe claimed the Lordhip, as eldeft of of the like, found in English French and Hathe house, after the manner of our Irifb lian Histories. Most of them have been Tampfiry. But the father of Orfus flood lately | combats of bravery, and of gayeté de cour.as feized of the principality : which though the French termit; for honour of feveral himself received by the death of his elder Nations; for love of Miltresses; or whatbrother yet this his Son would not let it go foever elfe gave occasion unto men, desirous back, but claimed to hold it as heir unto his to fet out themselves. But besides those of father, and old enough to rule. Fain would this fort, there are two other natures of Screio have compounded the matter. But combats; which are, either upon accusatithey answered peremptorily, that all their on for life, or upon trial of Title and Inherifriends and kindred had already laboured in trance, as in Writ of right. And of this latter vain to take up their quarrel; and that nei- kind, was that, of which we freak even now. ther God nor Man, but only Mars, their god between Corbis and Orfua. Unto these (me of battel, should be Umpire between them. I thinks) may be added, as of different con-So they had their wills: and the elder, who dition from the rest, the combat upon Wawas also the stronger, and more skilful at his ger; such as were that between David and weapon, casily vanquished the fool-hardi- Goliah, or that between the Horatii and Cu-

ness of the younger. and perhaps more ancient, than any other is adventured upon the head of Champions. kind of fight. We read of many performed Upon an acculation for life there was a combefore the War of Troy; by Thefeus, Her- bat appointed between the Lord Henry of cules, Fellux, and others: as also of two Boulinbrook Duke of Hereford, and Montray Tribes of Juda, and as many of the Penja | fed that he had belyed him, and was there-Roman; were of less importance, as having Rape, or burning of places (offences punishratii, in which without regard of Title, the Such combates have been very ancient; Dominion of Nations, one over the other, more at the War of Troy, the one between Duke of Norfolk. There was a combat per Anan Puris and Menelaus; the other between formed by Sir John Anfley and one Cattring-Kan Heller and Aj. ic. Neither want their ex- ton: whom Ansley charged with treason: and amples of them among the Hebrews: where- proved it upon him, by being victorious, Kan of that between David and Goliah; and The like was fought between Robert of others performed by some of Davids Worthies, against those that challenged them, are between a Navarrois, and one Wells of Herical Control of the state of the st greatly celebrated. Unto the same kind ap Grimsby, whom the Navarrois accused of partains the fight between twelve of the creason: but, being beaten in fight, confesmites. The Romans had many of them : fore drawn and hanged. Whether our tryal whereof that was principal, in which they by battel do determine, that the falle accuventured their Dominion upon the heads of fer, if he be vanquished, shall suffer theputhree brethien the Horatii, against the three nishment which had been due to the offenbrethren, Curatii, that were Albans. The der, if the accusation had been proved; I combat of Manlius Torquatus; and shortly cannot affirm. But we every where find, That after: of Valerius Corvinus,, with two Cham- if he which is accused of treason, or accordpions of the Gauls, which challenged any ing to the customs of Normandy, of Murder, eth.lofeth only his caufe, not his life. Neither it a matter of no fmall glory, to have it faid. bravery but in Camp close, that is, within Charles the lifth had patiently endured. rails. Now this trial by combat was so or-from this beginning is derived a challenge dinary in France, before the time of S. Lewis of combat, grounded upon none of those and Philip the fair his grand-child, as every occasions that were known to the Ancient. Lord of Fee, Eccles affical or Temporal, For, the Honour of Nations, the Tryal of had power to grant it within his own Jurie Right, the Wager upon Champions, or the diction. And it feemeth, that the French Objection and Refutation of capital offen-Kings, and other Lords, made their profit ces, are none of them, nor all of them togehereby. For in the * Memorials of the Cham- ther, the argument of half so many Duels, as ber of Accounts, is found an Article to this ef- are founded upon meer private Anger, yea. fect; That if a Combat were once accepted, or upon matter feening worthy of anger in and after, by confent of the Lord, were taken the opinion of the Duellists. So that in these up, each of the parties should pay two shil- daies, wherein every man takes unto himlings fix pence; but if it were performed, felf a Kingly liberty, to offer, accept, and then should the party vanquished forfeit an appoint perional combats, the giving of the hundred and twelve shillings. And upon this Lye, which ought to be the Negation only custom grew the French Proverb, which in accusations for life, is become the most they use when as any man hath had an hard fruitful root of deadly quarrels. This is held and unjust judgement; saying, That He was a word so terrible, and a wrong so unpartried by the Law of Loray, or Berne ; on le donable as will admit no other recompence, battu oaye l' amende, where he that is beaten than the blood of him that gives it. Thus gives the recompence. Of these frequent tri- the fashion, taken up in hast by the French als by battel that great learned man Tvo, Bi- Gentlemen, after the pattern of their King, shop of chartres did often complain, and is grown to be a custome: whence we have specially against the French Church-men: as derived a kind of Art and Philosophy of appears by * his Letters to the Bishop of quarrel; with certain grounds and rules. Orleans, to the Arch-deacon of Paris, to Remi from whence the points of honour, and the best Archbishop of Sens, and to others; dependencies thereof, are reduced. Yea, wherein he rebukes the judgement of their there are (among many no less ridiculous) wherein he records the judgethat the judgethat forme for mystical curiosities herein, as that it rings of combat. But this liberty and kind of tryal, is held a far greater dishonour, to receive was retrencht by s. Lewis, and Philip the from an enemy a flight touch with a Cane, fair; fo that no man could decree or grant than a found blow with a Sword; the one it, save the King himfelf. It hath fince been having relation to a slave, the other to a granted, though more sparingly, by the souldier I confest that the difference is pret-French King, as to the Lord of Carogues, a ty: though for my own part, if I had had gainst Jaques le Gris; and to Julian Romero any such lealianated enemy in former times, the spaniard, against Moro his countryman; I should willingly have made with him such wherein Sir Henry Knevet, Father to the an exchange; and have given him the point Lord Knevet now living, was Patron to Ro- of honour to boot, mero that had the victory; and lastly to But let us examine indifferently the ofthe Lord of Chaft. Now in those challenges, fence of this terrible word, the Lye, with their upon acculation of Treason, Murder, or conditions who are commonly of all other other offence deferving death (and in those the most tender in receiving it. I say, that the only ) the rule held, That le defendeur estoit most of these, who present death on the ac tenu de proposer ces deffences par un dementir; points of their swords to all that give it The defendant was bound to plead not guilty, by themouse nothing so much in their conversa-

edby death ) be overcome, He shall suffer ment confesser le crime ; filchtly confess the the pains appointed for those crimes. In com- crime. But after such time as Francis the hats for tryal of right, it is not fo : neither French King upon some dispute about breach is the Appellant or Defendant bound to of Faith, had fent the Lye unto the Emberof fight in person, but he may try it by his Charles the fifth, thereby to draw him to a Champion, as did Paramour and Low, or of personal combat; every petty companion in fered to do, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. France, in imitation of their Mafter . made And in this case, he that is beaten or yield- giving of the I permortality it self; holding are the combats upon accusation, or tryal of That the meanest Gentleman in France right, fought in open field, as are those of would not put up, what the great Emperor giving the accuser the Lye: otherwise it was tion and course of life, as to speak and swear concluded, that the defendant did taifible- failly. Yea, it is thereby, that they shift and

954

thuffle in the World, and abuse it. For how I will not deny but it is an extream rudeness few are there among them, which having af- to tax any man in publick with an untruth fumed and fworn to pay the moneys and (if it be not pernicious, and to his prejudice other things they borrow, do not break their against whom the untruth is uttered: ) But word and promife, as often as they ingage it? all that is rude, ought not to be civillized Nay, how few are there among them, that with death. That were more to admire and are not Lyarsly Record, by being fued in | imitate a French custome, and a wickedone. fome Court or other of Justice, upon breach | than to admire and to follow the councel of of word or bond? For he which hath pro- God. But you will fay that these discourses mifed that he will pay money by a day, or favour of cowardize. It is true; if you call promifed any thing elfe, wherein he faileth; it cowardize to fear God or hell: whereas hathdirectly lied to him to whom the pro- he that is truly wife, and truly valiant. mile hath been made. Nay, what is the pro- knowes that there is nothing elfe to be fearfession of love that men make now-adaies? ed. For against an Enemies sword, we shall What is the vowing of their fervice, and of find ten thousand seven penny-men (waged all they have, used in their ordinary comple- at that price in the wars) that fear it as litments, and (in effect ) to every man whom the, or perchance less, than any profest they bid not good morrow, or falute, other | Sword man in the world. Diligentiffina in than a courteous and Court-like kind of tutela fui Fortitudo; Fortitude is a diligent lying? It is (faith a wife French man, deri- preferver of it felf. It is (faith Ariffotle) a meding therein the Apish custome of his Coun- diocrity between doubting and daring, Sitry un marche & complot fait ensemble, se cut non Martyrem pona; fic nec fortem pugmacquer, menter, & piper les un les autres ; A na, sed causa : As it is not the punishment kind of merchandife, and complot made among that makes the Martyr : fo it is not fighting them, to meck belye, and deride each other : that declares a valiant man : but fighting in a and fo far now-adaies in fashion, and in good cause. In which, who soever shall resoluse; as he that useth it not, is accounted vedly end his life, resolvedly in respect of either dull or Cynical. True it is not with - the cause, to wit, in defence of his Prince, standing (omitting the old distinction ) that Religion, or Countrey: ashe may justly be there is great difference between these man- numbred among the Martyrs of God; so nerly and complemental lyes, with those may those that die with malicious hearts, which are sometime perswaded by necessity in private combats, be called the Martyrs upon breach of promise; and those which of the Devil. Neither do we indeed take men tife out of cowardize and fear; the lat- our own revenge, or punish the injuries ofter confessing themselves to be in greater fered us, by the death of the injurious. For awe of men, than of God; a vice of all other | the true conquest of revenge is, to give him, stiled the most villanous. But now for of whom we would be revenged, cause to the Lye it felf, as it is made the subject of all repent him : and not to lay the repentance our deadly quarrels in effect, to it I say, of another mans death upon our own con-That who foever giveth another man the scences; Animasq; in vulnere ponere; And Lye, when it is manifest that he hath lyed, to drown our souls in the wounds and blood of doth him no wrong at all; neither ought it our enemies. Hereupon you will again alk to be more hainoully taken, than to tell him, me, if I condemn, in generous and noble spihe hath broken any promife which he hath rits, the defence of their honours, being otherwise made. For he that promiseth any | prest with injuries? I say that I do not, if thing, teils him, to whom he hath promifed, the injuries be violent. For the Law of Nathat he will perform it; and, in not per- ture, which is a branch of the Eternal Law: forming it, he had made himself a Lyar. On and the Laws of all Christian Kings and the other fide, He that gives any man the Lye, States; do favour him that is affailed, in the when he himself knowes that he, to whom it slaughter of the assailant. You will secondis given, hath not lyed; doth therein give ly alk me, Whether a Noble-man, or a the Lye directly to himself. And what cause Gentleman, being challenged by Cartel by havel, if I say that the Sun thines when it one of like quality, be not bound in point doth shine, and that another fellow tels me of honour to satisfie the challenger in pri-I lye, for it's midnight; to profecute fuch an vate combat? I answer, that he is not: beone to death, for making himself a foolish cause (omitting the greatest, which is the Ruffian and a lyar in his own knowledge? point of Religion ) the point of the Law is For he that gives the Lye in any other dif-directly contrary and opposite to that, pute, than in defence of his Loyalty, or which they call the point of honour; The Life; gives it impertinently, and Ruffian-like. Law which hath dominion over it, which you will stile those Actshonourable, where what is this honour, I mean honour indeed, the Hang-man gives the Garland. For, fee- and that which ought to be fo dear unto ing the Laws of this Land have appointed us:other than a kind of History, or fame folthe Hang-man to second the Conqueror, lowing actions of vertue, actions accompaand the Laws of God appointed the Devil nied with difficulty or danger, and underto second the Conquered, dying in malice : taken for the publick good? In these he that Ifay, that he is both base and a fool, that is imployed and trusted, if he fail in the peraccepts of any Cartel fo accompanied. To formance, either through cowardize, or this, perchance it will be answered, That any other base affection; it is true that he the Kings of England, and other Christian loseth his honour. But the acting of a private Kings, have seldome taken any such advan- combat, for a private respect, and most comtage over men of quality, who upon even monly a frivolous one, is not an action of terms have flain their private enemies. It is vertue, because it is contrary to the Law of true, that as in times of trouble and com- God, and of all Christian Kings:neither is it buftion they have not often done it; so did difficult, because even and equal in persons our Noble-men and Gentlemen in former and arms: neither for a publick good, but ages, in all important injuries, sue unto the tending to the contrary; because the loss or King, to approve themselves by battel and mutilation of an able man, is also a loss to publick combat. For as they dared not to the Common-weal. brave the Law; sodid they disdain to submit themselves unto the shameful revenge power to save every mans fame and reputathereof; the same revenge (because it dete- tion, as far as reputation may sustain injury fteth murder) that hath declared against a by words, I think no man doubteth. For to common Cut-purse or other Thieves: repent us of any evil words that we have Navlet it be granted that a pardon be pro- given, and to confess that we have done cured for such offenders: yet it is not the man- him wrong, unto whom we have given flaver freed from his pardon. For these two them, is a sufficient satisfaction; and as standing; that is, to require justice by Grand that gives ill words in choler, and suddenly he further faith (for I use his own words) point of reputation. Concerning blows, or by Battel, upon that appeal; the man-can judge it, which can destroy it; except | lands, or of our lives; and I say so too. But

Now that a Marshall of England hath remedies hath the party grieved notwith- may fall out, more than fufficient. For he Affize, or by battel, upon his appeal, which denyes them, or repents himself of them up-(faith Sir Thomas Smith) is not denyed; and on advisement hath the disadvantage in That if the Defendant (to wit, the man- which are indeed not to be given but to flayer) be convinced either by great Affize those that are servile, whether sufficient recompence will be made for them, it shall apflaver shall die notwithstanding the Princes pear by a notable example of a most worthy pardon. So favourable (faith the same learned Gentleman Monster de Plessis, that was strick-Gentleman ) are our Princes, and the Law of en in France not long fince by a Baron of the our Realm, to justice & to the punishment of same nation. The satisfaction which was blood violently thed. It may further be de- given him by a judgement of the Constable manded, how our Noblemen and Gentlemen and Marshals of France, was this. In the open shall be repaired in honour, where an ene- Court, wherein the Constable gave judgemy, taking the start either in words or blows ment, M. de Plessis was fet in a chair under shall lay on them an infamy unsufferable: the degrees where the Constable and Mar-Isay, that a Marshals Court will easily give shals sate: the Baron, who had given him satisfaction in both. And if we hold it no the blow, did kneel before him on both his difgrace to submit our selves for the recovery knees, holding in his right hand a sword with of our Debts, Goods, and Lands; and for all the point towards himself, and in his left things else by which the lives of our selves hand the like cudgel or bastinado, whereour wives, and children, are sustained, to with he had stricken M. de Plesses, both which the Judges of the Law; because it may be weapons he delivered into Plejis hands, subfelony to take by violence even that which mitting himself to such revenge, as it should is our own : why should we not submit our please him to take with either of those selves unto the Judges of honour in cases of weapons; the Constable and Marshals havhonour; because to recover our reputation | ing formerly left it to the will of Plels, to by strong hand, may be murder? But yet use his own discretion in the revenge of his again, it may be objected, that the loss of own wrongs. Now whether the Baron had honour ought to be much more fearful unto reason to please himself, as one beforehand us, than either the loss of our goods, of our in point of honour, (who struck M. de Plessis

Eeeeee

like a Ruffian coming behind him, and having | wrath of God upon supream Governours. the advantage of company, and his horses than the permission. ready, shifted himself away on the sudden; His Majesty therefore ( which Henry the but being afterwards taken, was taught IV. of France also endeavoured) hathdone to repent himselfin this shameful manner:) a most Kingly and Christian-like deed in or whether Monfier de Fleifis ( of whose Scotland, which the most renowned of all valour no man doubted ) had not far just- his Prædecessors could never do: in beating er cause to rest sat sfied, since he might at down and extinguishing that hereditary his pleasure have beaten or wounded his prosecution of malice, called the deadly fonds enemy, but forgave him: let any wife man a conquest, which shall give him the honour judge. To this if it be faid, That the Ba- of Prudence and Kingly power for everron was constrained to make his submission more. And we have cause to hope, that his that his repentance was enforced, and not royal care shall be no less happy in prayentvoluntary; and therefore no difgrace unto ing the like mischief, which threatens Enghim: I answer, that one may say as well, land, by the audacious, common, and brave. that it is no diffrace to a Thief, when he vet outragious vanity of Duelists. is brought to the Gallows, to repent him of the Robberies by him committed, be- of man-flaughter, it must be added. That cause his repentance also is constrained. And each of these are of great Latitude, and it is true, that enforced repentance is no worthy of reproof and vengeance proportigrace in respect of a force, but in respect of onably, more or less, in their several degrees. the fact: which (but for our fins to God) There is much difference between Lies of makes all repentance shameful: because all necessity upon breach of promise, or comforced repentance is inflicted upon us for plemental lies; and fuch pernicious lies, as somewhat unworthy of a Gentleman, and proceed from fear and cowardize, or are of an honest man. Nay, voluntary repentance uttered by falle witnesses: the former fort it felf, as it hath relation to men, arifeth ei- being excusable by weakness or levity; the ther out of the fear of the ill that may befall latter being altogether detestable. No less. us, or out of the acknowledgement of our if not more difference there is between kilown weakness. Certainly as wisemen, and ling of a man in open field, with even weavaliant men do rather deride petty injuries pons; and that killing, which the Scriptures or sudden injuries, that are not offered call killing by guile, dolo or per insidias; though from malice fore-thought, than revenge our Laws do not much distinguish them in them: fomen, apt to quarrel, do commonly suspect their own valour; and rather de king his own priviledge, commandeth that fire, that thereby the world thould believe them to be of great daring, than know any fuch resolution in themselves. For he th ... knows himself indeed to be an honest man fcorns to hunt after opinion.

Now the same power which the Constable and Marshals of France have, hath also a is found, between coming presumptuously every mans reputation may be preferred; we without a canfe, upon hope of spoil, after may therefore as well submit our selves to such manner as the net is spread before the the Judge of honour in all disputes of honor, eyes of the Birds. Francis the first, Queen as we do submit our selves in all controver- Mary of England, and the Kings Majesty now fies of livelihood and life, to the Judges of reigning, have given notable teltimony of the Law. And, out of doubt, the institution their justice, upon three Noble men, who of this Court of Chevalrie in England, in committed guilful murder. Of the first kind, France, and elsewhere: was no less charita- King Francis upon the Lord of Talard: who ble than politick. For the blood of man, being (faith the French Historian) de hante violently spilt, doth not bring forth hony bees & ancienne lignee, & support de pluseurs as that of Bulls doth, which sting but the fin- grandes alliances; who being of high and angers, or the face: but it produceth that mon- cient linage, and supported by divers great strous beaft, Revenge, which hath stung to alliances, of which the Cardinal of Bellay (in death, and eaten up, of feveral nations, fo especial favour with the King ) was one; many noble personages; as there is nothing was notwithstanding delivered over into

Unto this that I have spoken of lying, and punishment. For in the latter, God, forsathe guilful murderer be drawn by force, from the protection of his Altar. Neither End. 11. is every guilefull murder performed by the fword, nor by overt violence: but there is a guilfull murder alfo, by poyfoning : and by the pen,or by practice. For fuch distinction Marihal of England, or his Deputies: by upon a man, to flay him with guile; and ly Exolin whose judgement in all disputes of honour, ing in wait for blood privily, for the innocent, Property more lamentable, nor more threatning the the hands of the Hangman. 9 Mary, upon a Noble

ny other respects very dear unto her, His Ma- Submerge; A fair lesson to all Judges, to dwell jij, upon a Baron of Scotland; whose almayes in themselves, and not to suffer their house was no less ancient and faithful, than consciences to float upon the waves of imaginasimfelf valiant, and greatly friended both ry favour, which in the end overwhelms them. at home and abroad. Of killing guilfully And as for the Admiral, though it might by poylon, and of punishment following have been answered unto his friends, if any fuch wicked Artifans, every age hath had bewail his calamity as undeferved, That he too many examples. Of killing guilfully by was tryed, according to his own defire, by the pen ( that I may not speak of any Eng- the Laws of his Country, and by the Judges ... life Judge ) the Author of the French Re of Parliament ; yet the Kings justice, turcherches gives unto us two notable instances: the one of des Fshars, who (faith Pasquier) fit mourir Montaigu grand Maistre de France, pour contenter l'opinion celuy dont il estoit lors idolaftre ; & Dien permit que depuis il fut pendu & estrangle; Who caused Montaigu great Mafter of France to die to content his mind (to wit the Duke of Burgoyne) whom at that time Ethars worshipped as his Idol; but Godpermitted, that be himself was soon after hanged and strangled. The other was of the Great Francis the first, upon his Chancellor roget: who to fatisfie the Kings passion, pra- fell dangerously tick, in such fort that the tifed the destruction of the Admiral Cha rumour of his death ran current throughbot; a man most nobly descended, and of great out Spain. This encouraged Mandonius and fervice. For as in other men, fo in Kings Indibilis, petty Kings, that had for faken the the passion of love grows old, and wears Carthaginians, and followed Scipio a while out by time. So the Kings affection being before, to take arms against the Romans. changed towards the Admiral, he charged They were vainly perswaded, that after the him with some offences, which he had for | Carthaginians were driven out; they themmerly committed: The Admiral prefuming lielves should become the mightiest in all upon the great good service which he had Spain. But seeing now, that things were no done the King in Piemont, and in the defence way answerable to the greatness of their of Marfeilles against the Emperour, gave the hopes; they thought it best, to take the pre-King other language than became him; and lent advantage, and hammer out their own desired nothing so much, as a publick trial. fortunes. So they rashly fell upon the Suesse-Hereupon the King (it being easie to pro- tani and Sedetani, confederates of the Rovoke anill disposition) gave commission to mans; and wasted their Country. Part of the the Chancellor, as Præsident, and other Roman Army lying at Sucro, instead of mak-Judges, upon an information of the Kings ing head against these Rebels, grew to be af-Advocate, to question the Admirals life; The fected with the like distemper. They had not Chancellor, an ambitious man, and of a large repedfuch profit of the Roman conquests, as conscience, (which is not rare in men to- might satisfie their desires; or as they thought wards the law hoping highly to content the ealie to be gotten if they might be their King; wrought with some of the Judges with own Carvers. Wherefore, when the death of fo great cunning; with others with so sharp Scipio was reported, they thought that the threats; and with the rest, with so fair pro- time served very well, to enrich themselves mises; as albeit nothing could be proved with the spoil of the Country. Many outrages

Noble man of her own Religion, and in ma- | d'une imaginare faveur, qui pour fin de jeu le mounting all other his passions, gave back unto him his Honour, his Offices, his Liberty, and his Estate.

+. III.

The last Acts of Scipio in Spain, His return to Rome, where he is chosen Conful.

He last business that troubled Scipio in Spain, grew by the rebellion of the people, and mutiny of his Souldiers. He against the Admiral, worthy of the Kings di- they committed: and, which was greatest spleasure, yet the Chancelior subscribed, and of all, driving away their Colonels, that got others to subscribe, to the forfeiture of should have bridled their fury ; they chose his Estate, Offices, and Liberty, though not out of their own number two base fellows, able to prevail against his life. But what was Albinus Calenus, and Atrius Umber, to their the Chancellors reward ( the King hating Commanders. These took upon them all the falshood in fo great a Magistrate) other than Ensigns of Pro-consuls, or Pro-pretors; as his own degradation, arraignment and con- if this their election had been like to that, demnation? Belle les on certes (faith Pajquier) a wherein Lucius Marcius was chosen by the tout Juge pur de-meurer toussours en soy, & ne Souldiers after the death of the two Scipio's: laisser stuttuer sa conscience debans les vaques But whilest they were devising what ex-Eeeeec 2

(HAP. III.

ploits they might do, for the enriching of came directions from Carthage, that letting themselves, in a time of such combustion as all care of Spain alone, he should thence dewas expected, there arrived more certain part from his fieet into Italy; and there wage news, that Scipio was both alive, and in good an Army of Gauls and Ligurians, to joyn health. There came also new Colonels, sent with Hannibal. For this purpose, was mony unto them from their General: who mild- fent unto him from Carthage; and he himself ly rebuking their want of confideration, and laid hold upon all that he could find in the feeming to be glad that they had no further Town of Gader; without fparing either priover-shot themselves; led them to cartha- vate men, the common treasury, or the Tem. gena, there to receive their pay. Before their ples. In this voyage thence, he landed at coming, Scipio had resolved to do exempla- Carthagena; hoping to have taken it by furrv inflice on the principal offenders; and to prife. But he failed in the attempt, and was put the whole multitude of them in fear of lo beaten to his ships, that he returned back what they had deserved. Therefore he to repose himself a while at Gades. The Gacaused Syllanus to make ready their Compa- ditanes, offended with the robberies and nies which lay before in the Yown, as it were spoil that he had made at his taking leave of to make an Expedition against Mandonius them, would not suffer him again to enter and Indibilis: he caused Albius and Atrius into their City. By thisheforesaw, that it with some thirty other of their Complices, would not be long ere they became Roman. to beferretly apprehended in their lodgings: Wherefore fending Meffengers into the he called the Mutiners to affembly 3 and hav- Town, to complain of this uncourteous deaing them unarmed as they were, encircled ling, he allured their Magistrates forth unto round by Syllanus and his companies, pre- him; whom, notwithstanding all the excuse pared for the purpose; he bitterly inveigh-ed against them all as Traitors. This done, ed. This done, he followed his former in-Albius and Atrius, with the other prisoners tended voyage; bidding Spain farewell for were haled to the stake, where they were ever. whipt and beheaded, as was the Roman cuftome toward such offenders. The rest of to the Romans, presently after the departure the Souldiers, to the number of eight thou- of Mago. Then did Scipio deliver up the Profand, were caused to take their oath of obe- vince, to those that were fent from Rome to dience anew; and received every man his succeed him therein: & himself with ten ships pay when he was fworn.

arms: notwithstanding that they had certain it was denied him: for that it had as yet been word of Scipio his life and health. Well they granted unto no Proconful, excepting to could have been contented to be quiet:but fuch, as received that dignity after a Conby the severity used to the Roman Souldiers, Sulfhip, as it were by prorogation. Butto they stood in fear, as being spaniards, and make amends for this repulse, the election greater offenders, of harder measure. Scipio of new Consuls being then in hand, by genewent against them, and found them in a val- ral voice of the City, P. Cornelius Scipio was ley, that was scarce large enough to hold chosen Consul, and P. Licinius Crassins joyned all their Army. In the entrance thereof he with him. This Craffus, being high-Priest, or fought with them : and fending Lelius with Bishop of the Romans, might not by the cuall his horse, to setch a compass about the stome of those times, go far from the City; hills, and charge them in rear, he overthrew as being to intend the matters of their fuperthem. Indibilis and Mandonius had after this, fittion: though Cafar, and others, who in ages no hope remaining to preferve themselves following held the same office, were stayed and their estates, otherwise than by making by no such religious impediment, from befubmission. Mandonius therefore came to ing far and long absent. Hereby it came to Scipio: and humbly craving pardon, both for pass, that Scipio, desiring to have the war himself and for his brother Indibilu, obtain- transferred into africk, was in no danger to acknowledge themselves less free Princes chance of lot, in the division of Provinces; than formerly they had been.

Afterwards Scipio went toward Gades: and was met on the way by Masanista; who fecretly promifed to do him all fervice, if the people of Rome would fend him to make war in Africk. Unto Mago that lay in Gades,

The Isle and City of Gades, was yielded returned home. At his coming to Rome, he Mandonius and Indibilis continued in made fuit for the honour of a triumph. But ed his request; yet so, that they were taught to lose that honourable charge, by any misfor that his Colleague was not capable of employment fo far off.

5. XVIII.

6. XVIII.

drubal and Syphax.

meeting of the Senate in the Capitol: year a Province; which the Conful neverwhere it was decreed, that scipio should theless propounded in such wise, as if it were he allowed, to bestow part of the money a matter already concluded, and no longer which he had brought out of spain into the to be argued. Scipio on the other fide, infiftrreasury; upon the setting forth of solemn ed upon this one point; that it was better to playe, that he had vowed to make whilft he make an offensive, than a defensive war, espeheintended to make in Africk. To the same doubted not, but P. Licinius his Colleague purpose, did the spanish Embassages avail would be as well able to discharge it now as much in the Senate; especially that of the others had done in times of greater danger. against the purpose of the Consul; whereof found it expedient. the chief were that the Treasury was unable drubal to passinto Haly: shewing that it was victories; and made the unsteady Gauls rea-

greatly to be feared, left the like might happen again; and that a new Army, notwith-Scipio obtains leave to make war in Africk. Itanding the good success of Scipio, (ifit His preparations. Of Malanissa who was hapned to be good) might be sent from Carjorned with Scipio. The victories against Af thage, to the utter endangering of Rome . whilest the Roman forces were employed abroad. But the main point which he urged. P. Cornelius Scipio, and P. Licinius Graf was, that neither the Senate had ordained, man, entring into their Confulship, held a nor the People commanded, Africk to be that was busied in his Spanish wars. This helped | cially against such as the Carthaginians, who well to revive the memory of his victories al- being ill provided of able men at home, did ready gotten; and to give hope unto the furnith themselves, by help of mony, with le-People of greater victories in the war, which | vies made abroad. As for the care of Italy, he Saguntines: who magnified his actions high- So promifing to draw Hannibal into Africk. lyand defervedly; Taying, that they were for defence of his own home; and taxing as the most happy of all their countrymen, since | civilly as he could, the envy of Fabius, which they being present, had seen him chosen Con- withstood such a gallant enterprise, he proful, and should carry home such joyful news. | posed the matter again to the Senate. Much The Saguntine Embassadors were lovingly altercation there was about the manner of entertained by the Senate: as their faith to his proceeding: for a much as it was notifed Rome ( though costly it were both to them | abroad, that if he could not bring the Senate and to the Romans) had well deserved. Ne- to his mind, he would carry it by the people. vertheless, when Scipio proposed, that Africk | This offended many of the ancients: who remight be decreed unto him for his Province, | fented in this honourable man, a little spice there wanted not many, even of the princi- of that arrogancy, which in following ages pal men, that vehemently gainfaid him. Of grew to be much hotter, in those that had these was Q. Fabius Maximus the chief: who commanded long abroad. But in conclusion. feens to have been troubled with that di- | Scipio referred himfelf wholly to the Senates feafe, which too often caused men, renowned good will and pleasure; whereby he obtainfor long approved vertue, to look afquint up- ed thus much, That the Isle of Sicil might on the actions of those, that follow them in be appointed unto him for his Province; the same kind. He alledged many reasons with leave to pass over into Africk, if he

Want of money, and no great liking to his to fultain the charges of a war in Africk; and voyage, made the Roman Senate have little that it was extreamly perilous to hazzard care to furnish out Scipio to the war, by him fogreat forces, where they could not at plea- intended upon Africk. Herewithall it fell fure be recalled unto the defence of Romeit out, that Mago, coming on the fudden self, if need required. Hereunto he added ma- from the Ealeares to Genna, and winning the ny words concerning the danger wherein | Town, bred a fear of no less terrible invasion Haly stood, not only of Hannibal, but of Mago upon Italy, than that which Afdrubal had his brother, that was arming the Ligurians: lately made. He could not indeed raise any as also concerning the honour of the Conful; great Army of the Ligarians; for that he which would (he faid)be greater in setting found them distracted with civil wars. Italy free from enemies, than it could be in Therefore he was driven to make choice of doing any harm to Africk. Neither did he his party; and to help those whom he forget, both to elevate the spanish wars, as thought fittestfor his turn, against the others. of less moment than the intended voyage | This troublesome business, though it occupiagainst Carthage, nor withall to lay great ed more of his time than he could willingly blame upon Scipio, for having suffered of have spared: yet it got him reputation by his feerfed Legions of the Romans, that under felf upon the advice of many, shall often Proconfuls, and Prators, lay ready to be em- find himself deceived: the counsel of those ployed where need should require; were di- many being wholly directed by the Empire rected unto the borders of Lomburdy and of a few, that over- sway the rest. 2. Fabius Liguria, there to make head against Mago. was accounted the Oracle of his time : for But all his menaces passed away in vapour. his wary nature forted well with the busi-For a fleet, either coming to his aid from ness, that fell out in the chief of his employ-Carthage, or by him fent thither (the report ment. Unto him therefore 2. Fulvius adis uncertain) loaden with the booty that he hered; with other of the Senators, that were had taken, fell into the hands of the Roman grown old in following one course; from Prætor, that governed in Sardinia. This did which they could not shift, as the change of much disable him : and though after a time required. But the People (who though while, there came letters from Carthage, to- they could not well advice, and deliberate. gether with store of money, heartning him in yet could well apprehend ) embraced the his proceedings; yet some impediments needful resolution of Scipio: in such fort, which he found, and that fatal voyage of that belides his Roman forces, he had from scipio into ofrick disturbed all; and made divers parts of Italy about seven thousand him be re-called home.

year Neither was any thing done by him, of Axes, Beed-hooks, Hand-mils, and the like which the Roman Hiltorians have been plea- implements; Firre for building of thips, fed to take notice. Only it is faid, that he many thousands of Targets, Helmets and fpent his Summer by the Temple of Juno La- | Spears of all kinds: every place furnished cinia, where he railed an Altar, with a huge him with that commodity, which it best Title of all that he had performed, graven could afford. in Funick and Greek letters. Such account of winnings past, is common iy in Gamesters that ligence of Scipio was correspondent. In the are at the height of their fortune, a cause of compass of five and forty dayes he had both remission and carelesness; in those that are fell'd his Timber, built, and lanched twenty upon the lofing hand, a cause both of the Trireme, and ten Quinquereme Gallies; wherefame for the present, and shortly after of de- with he transported his Army into sicil. In jection, when they find a notable change. A Sicil he found, besides other forces, two Legreat pestilence insesting both the Carthagi- | gions, that had served at Canna: which were nian and the Roman Camp, is said to have old Souldiers, and (as he himself well knew) been the occasion of this years idleness; not guilty of the overthrows for which they which fell out not much amis for the City of had long undergone a heavy sensure. They Rome, that was marvelously impoverished by had served under Marcellus and Lavinus, at this war; and had already tryed the utmost the taking of many Cities and strong pieces: way to defray the charges, which grew insupportable. To relieve the present necessity, it was well thought upon, that a great part of Campania (not many years fince confifcated) should be sold, or iet out: in which bargain, that the City might receive no loss, the and such as loved well their ease. These heaftenth part of the fine was ordained, as a re- terward discharged from the War, highly to

to Scipio. Neither was he allowed to make to as many Roman Gentlemen, which he press of Souldiers for his African voyage; neither did he over-much labour to obtain Whilest he was providing to have things in it. That which the Senate refused, the people a readines for Africk, the banished Locriums, did for him : or rather they did it for themfelves; that were therein wifer than the Senate. It is usually found in Councels of estate, that the busic, or obstinate heads of a few crasts-men, that wrought for the Carthaginito the wisdom, that hath gotten it felf a by the Romans, promised to betray the place, name, by giving happy direction in troubles if they might be ransomed and rewarded.

dy to enter into his pay. Hereupon the di- forepast. Therefore, he that reposeth him.

Voluntaries. He had also provision from the Against Hannibal was nothing done this several Towns: Corn, Iron, Canvas for fails, Unto this willingness of the people, the diin which regard, they were like to be of good use to him in Africk, where would be Itore of fuch employment. For increasing the number of his horse, he pressed three hundred Sicilians, all wealthy young men, ward unto the detectors of lands concealed. their contentment: but with condition; that Of this, or other mony, none was given they should deliver their Horse and Arms, brought over with him for the purpole. that followed the Roman fide, made him acquainted with an intelligence, whereby they hoped to recover their City. Some handido carry all the rest. And many times men ans in one of the Citadels of Locri, (forthere make a furrender of their own judgements, were two in the Town)being taken prisoners schio being advertised of this gave order high commendations at their return. to have the attempt made by night : which happily succeeded, and that Citadel was furprifed. The other Citadel was ftrongly de-Hannibal out; whom the comming of Scipio caused thence to depart; and caused likewise the Carthaginian Garrison to abandon the other Citadel. Many outrages were commitwith the Prætor appointed for that Illand;

Scipio had already employed Lelius in Africk; rather to make discovery, than to work any other great effect of war. He took fended by the Carthaginian Garrison, which a great booty: and struck no little cerror infent to Hannibal for aid. The Romans in like to the Carthaginians; who faw their affairs fort, fearing lest that their paucity should to be upon terms of change. But the greatest make them too weak for Hannibal, craved fruit of his journey was, That speaking help of the Consul Scipio. The Towns-men with Masanissa, he well informed himself of were doubtfully affected: but the best, and the state of Africk; and knew what was to most of them inclining to the Romans, kept be expected of those two Kings, that had promised to joyn with the Romans at their landing.

Concerning Mafanisfa his revolt from the Carthaginians, and his compact made underted by the Roman Souldiers, that were left hand with the Romans, Livie doth profes, Livilly, 20 by Scipio in custody of the Town. Where- That there was no such evident cause therefore a vehement complaint was made by the of at the prefent; but that the long continu-Locrians unto the Roman Senate; not only ance of his faith and contrancy; in following against those of the Garrison: but much times, must help to prove, that this his more against Pleminius the Captain, who change, was not without some good cause. gave bad example, and was worse than all But Appianus (an Historian far inferiour to the rest. Besides many Murders, Robberies, Livie, both in worth and time) gives one Rapes, and other villanies, the Temple of reason so probable of this, and many acci-Proferpina, that had a great fame of fanctity, dents thereto belonging, as that it carryes was spoyled by these barbarous Thieves. with it a great appearance of necessary truth. The Locrians therefore advised the Senate Only the doubt is, How it could any way tomake present amends to the goddess for come to pass, that the knowledge of such a this facriledge: faying that the like had ne- matter should have escaped the diligence of ver been committed, without notorious re- Livie, if it had been true: unless we should venge by her taken upon the Authors. The believe, that he wilfully forbear to rehearse Senate gave good ear to this complaint, a Tragedy; the forrow whereof would cause comforted the Locrians, and redreffed the men to think amifs of Scipio. Howfoever it iniuries done unto them; fent for Pleminius, was thus * Appian tells it: and many circum- Apiac, injuries done unto them they it ances of things done, confirm it. Afterbal Misses de with other principal offenders; whom they it ances of things done, confirm it. Afterbal Misses de Bill. Parile cast into prison, and used according to their the Son of Gesco, had a fair daughter, whom deserts: as also they restored unto Proserpina both King Syphax and Masanisa loved. Maher money twice told. But old Q. Fabins was Sanifa, being brought up at Carthage, and benot herewithal contented. Helaid much of ing withall a goodly Gentleman of person; the blame upon Scipio, that had placed such and excellent in qualities, was chosen by a man in Locre; and had not carefully Afdrubal to be his fon-in-law. When the Virhearkned to the complaints made against gin was betrothed unto him, he went into him, but suffered him to run on in these his Spain, and there did great service. But afterwicked courses. By the tharp invective that wards, the Carthaginian Senate thought the Fabius made, others took courage to speak marriage of Asdrubals daughter to be a matwhat they pleased, as well against the de-ter of State: and bestowed her upon symeanour of Scipio, as against the dissolute- phax, without standing to acquaint her tanels of his Army; which lay, as they faid, idle ther or Masanissa therewithall: This they in Sicil, neither mindful of any service to- did, for that syphax was the more mighty ward, nor fit for it if need should require. Prince; and for that the indignity of the re-Finally, things were fo far urged, that ten pulse, had made him become their enemy. Legates were sent over into Sicil, together Hereof Majaniffa was advertised; and forthwith entred into intelligence with scipio, fetwoof the Tribunes, and one of the Ædiles; cretly as he thought; yet not so secretly, but who should examine these matters; and ei- some notice was taken of it : which would ther cause the General to return into Italy, or have cost him his life, had he not with great continue him in his charge, as they thought circumspection conveighed himself home, it. The end of all was, they found him fo into his fathers Kingdom. Thus far forth well prepared against Carthage, as that they we may believe Appianus: all thenarration haltened him on his journey, and gave him well cohering with things palt, and follow-nisha, the daughter of Afdrubal, was pro- pleafing unto Scipio. He excused himself of mised by the Carthaginians unto syphax: his promise lately made: and fignified his yet fince this their courtesse proceeded from alliance with the Carthaginians; adding, tear, he thought it wisdom to continue and That he could not chuse but fight for the increase the same their fear, by making fair defence of Africk, wherein he was born and 1 . . . . promises to the Romans, untill Afdrubal had reigned; and for the defence of his beloved fent for his daughter from Caribage, and the wives Country, if it were invaded. Nevermarriage was confummated. In other mat-the lefs he promifed to remain a Neuter. fo ters concerning the war it felf, wherein sp. long as the Romans and Carthaginians held pian differs much from Livie, and from Po- war abroad, far enough from Africk, ashilibiur, whom (as appears by the broken thereo they had done. This meffage haftened pieces of his works remaining ) Livie did Scipio in his expedition, much more than heed unto his reports.

Numidians: whose father dying, the Crown the assente, and the forwardness descended, by order of the Country, unto of many adventurers. Lest therefore the Defalces the brother, not unto Mafanissa the failing of this hope, should work too great fon. But this Uncle of Mafaniffa thortly dy- a change in common opinion, He thought it ed: and his elder fon, who took poffession the best way to prevent all discourse, and of the kingdom, was vanquished, and slain fet the war undertaken immediately on foot. in battel by a Rebel, that made himself Pro- The Embassadors he dismissed in haste, tector over the younger which was a child. with letters to their King: wherein he wil-The Traitor fortified himself against Masa- led him to consider, that what he had pronissa, whose return he feared, by Alliances mised, he had also sworn; and therefore with the Carthaginians and Syphax. But all should do well to make it good. Having sent would not serve: He and his Pupill, were them away, He called his Souldiers togedispossessed of their Estates by Majanisa; ther; and bade them make ready for the that was a skilfull Warriour, and well belo- voyage, which he intended no longer to ved for the memory of his father Gala. The defer. For, faid he, Masanissa hath been with Carthaginians in reason would have been Lalius: and Syphax hath newly tent to glad, that Masanissa, who had done them me; greatly wondring upon what I should notable service, was thus confirmed in his thus stay; and saying, That they will Estate, had they not been guilty of the inju- provide for themselves, if I fail their exry by them done unto him; whilest his Un-pectation by tarrying any longer. This fine cle or Cousin reigned, and he seemed unlike- tale prevented all further inquisition, that ly to stand them in any stead But syphax, by might else have been made concerning the their procurement, and perhaps by his own message of these Embassadors: whose folmalice, towards his Corrival, warred upon lowers had been feen walking up and down him; and over-charging him with numbers, Syracufe. And left any thing should after drave him out of his Kingdom. Nevertheles wards break out, that might hinder the bull-Majaniffa, still retained the hearts of his peo- uefs, Scipio immediately fent about his fleet ple; and thereby remained strong enough, unto Lylibaum: and requesting by letters to infest both syphax and the Carthagini- M. Pomponius, that was Prætor in Sicil, to ans; though he was often put in diftress, by meet him there; hafted thither with his Argreat forces that were fent against him. He my At Lylivaum he agreed with the Prator, therefore keeping much about the leffer syr about the division of the Legions between tis, between the borders of the Carthagini- them, which to leave behind for defence of ans, and the Nation of the Garamants, expe- the Island; and which to carry with himincted the coming of the Romans: yet fo, as to Africk. What numbers he transported, itis he made long roads over all the Country, not certain: some Historians reckoning even as far as Hippo; and when Lalius arri- only ten thousand foot, and two and twenty ved thereabouts, exhorted and encoura- hundred horse; others increasing them to ged him to halten on Scipio to the invalion five and thirty thousand, horse and foot.

cour was reposed more hope of good success, I hold it needless to set them down: fince than could be expected from the good will they were points of ordinary care, and of poor Mafaniffa, sent an Embassage into which it is like that neither he, when he

Only it feems, that howfoever Sopho- | Sicil about the same time, which was little follow; it will be no offence, to take little any perswasion could have done. For the promifed affiftance of syphax had not a little Masanissa was the son of Cala, a King of the advanced his enterprise; in procuring both Concerning his directions for embarquing, But syphax, in whose great aid and suc- and other matters belonging to their course, took his voyage into spain, nor othersupon | better advise them to set sail for Vin like occasions, have omitted; they being al- make war upon the Enemies at their fo word for word fet down by an Historian, doors. who borrowed them from Livie, and fitted them to a Prince of later age.

a fore-land then called the fair Promonterie: which how far it was from Carthage. or toward what point of the Compais, I Carthage beyond the River Bagradas: it may fturb his landing; and flain Hanno a young rather feem, that he landed within the Pro Gentleman, that was their Leader. He had montory of Apollo; whence the way to Otica also taken and sacked a Town of the Carthawas not long. This is also strongly proved; ginians: wherein, besides other booty, he for that out of Carthage were fent, the next took eight thousand prisoners; all which he day, five hundred horse to trouble him in his conveighed abourd his Hulks or Ships of difembarking. Neither was it so hard for burden, and sent them back loaden into si-Masanista, that roved about the Contry cil. He took likewise a Town called salera. with a troop of horse to find out the Roman, which he held and fortified. In Salera lav though they landed far from the place to the another Hanno, with four thousand Numidihad met with Lelius at Hippo that was far- field, than for defence of walled places, with his Army & Carriages, to overcome the their Leader, that had thus housed them. trouble of a long journey, and fetch a great | Wherefore he fent Mafaniffa before him: who compass to Otica, by Land; when he might rode up to the gates; and, by making a have disembarqued nearer unto it. Never- bravado, trained out the improvident Hanthelessit may pass as a conjecture. That Sci- no so far, that he drew him unto a place. pio came first of all to Emporia, a plentiful where the Romans lay in wait for him. The charge to the Masters of his ships, at the taken or slain. With those that fled, the fetting forth from Lilybaum, to shape their Romans entered pell-mell into the Town, course for that coast. The Countrey there- which presently they made their own. about was very rich, and fit for fullenance Thence went Scipio to Otica, a City of great of an Army: neither were the Inhabitants importance, of which mention hath been forfignified unto Lalius, when he spake with by Land and Sea, and using all his engines howfoever they made brave promifes, would in no likelihood of prevailing. And now the

The Carthaginians had at time neitner any Captain of great worth at home, nor This Roman Army landed in Africk, near to better Army than of raw Souldiers; that were levied, or to be levied in hafte. Afdrubal the of fon Gefco, the same that had lately been chased out of Spain by scipio, was their cannot precifely affirm; because it is uncer- best man of war. And good enough pertain, whether it were that Cape or Head- haps he was thought by Hanno and his felland which bore the name of Mercury, and lows, of whose faction he was : or if ought lay to the North-east of Carthage; or whe- were wanting in him, yet his Riches and Nother that of Apollo, which lay Northerly bility, together with the affinity of King Sifrom Carthoge, and by West. The coming of phax, made him passable. He was then with Malaniffa unto Scipio at his first arrival, helpt the King his son-in-law, working him no to confirm the opinion of Xylander, who doubt against the Romans: when letters thinks the fair Promonter; to have been the were brought from Carthage both to Syphax fame. that was also called Mercuries Cape, and to him, informing them of the Invasion: fince with little difficulty Mafaniffa might entreating the one of them to give affiltance. come thither from the leffer Syrtis, where- and commanding the other to make his reabout was his common abiding. But foraf- pair unto the City , where he was chosen much as without any memorable impedi- General. But ere these could be ready, seiment soon after his arrival, Scipio encamped pio had beaten the troop of Carthaginian before Utica, that stood Westward from horse, that were sent out of the City to diwhich he usually reforted, like as before he | an horse: whose service being fitter, for the ther off; as it would have been for Scipio, made Scipio to perceive the unfkilfulness of Region about the leffer syrtis; fince he gave victory was eafily gotten, and Hanno either warlike, or well provided to make refi- merly made and fate down before it. Forty stance. Thus much perhaps Masanisa had dayes he spent about it, affailing it toth him at Hippo: thinking that the Romans, of battery, whereof he had plenty, yet was not come strong enough to fight at head. But Summer was quite spent : so that it was time when he saw their Fleet and Army to be for him to choose a place, and fortifie his fuch, as not only served to invade the lands Winter-Camp, which must be well stored of Carthage, but threatned a conquest of the against the year following. Whilest thus City and whole Estate : then might be necessity urged him to leave Utica: and nisha, the daughter of Afdrubal, was pro- pleasing unto Scipio. He excused himself of mised by the Carthaginians unto Syphax: his promise lately made: and fignified his vet fince this their courtesie proceeded from alliance with the Carthaginians; adding, tear, he thought it wisdom to continue and That he could not chuse but fight for the increase the same their fear, by making fair defence of Africk, wherein he was born and 1: The promifes to the Romans, until Afdrubal had reigned; and for the defence of his beloved fent for his daughter from Carthage, and the wives Country, if it were invaded. Nevermarriage was confummated. In other mat-the less he promised to remain a Neuter, so ters concerning the war it felf, wherein sp. long as the Romans and Carthaginians held pian differs much from Livie, and from Po- war abroad, far enough from Africk, ashilybius, whom (as appears by the broken therto they had done. This mellage haltened pieces of his works remaining) Livie did Scipio in his expedition, much more than follow; it will be no offence, to take little any perswasion could have done. For, the heed unto his reports.

Numidians: whose father dying, the Crown the assent of the Senate, and the forwardness descended, by order of the Country, unto of many adventurers. Lest therefore the Desales the brother, not unto Masanissa the failing of this hope, should work too great fon. But this Uncle of Masanissa shortly dy- a change in common opinion, He thought it ed: and his elder fon, who took possession the best way to prevent all discourse, and of the kingdom, was vanquished, and slain fet the war undertaken immediately on foot. in battel by a Rebel, that made himself Pro The Embassadors he dismissed in haste, tector over the younger which was a child with letters to their King: wherein he wil-The Traitor fortified himself against Masa- led him to consider, that what he had promissa, whose return he feared, by Alliances mised, he had also sworn; and therefore with the Carthaginians and Syphax. But all should do well to make it good. Having lent would not serve: He and his Pupill, were them away, He called his Souldiers togedispossessed of their Estates by Masanisa; ther; and bade them make ready for the that was a skilfull Warriour, and well belo- voyage, which he intended no longer to ved for the memory of his father Gala. The defer. For, faid he, Masanissa hath been with Carthaginians in reason would have been Lalius : and Syphax hath newly tent to glad, that Masanissa, who had done them me; greatly wondring upon what I should notable service, was thus confirmed in his thus stay; and saying, That they will Estate, had they not been guilty of the inju- provide for themselves, if I fail their exry by them done unto him; whilest his Un- pectation by tarrying any longer. This fine cle or Cousin reigned, and he seemed unlike- tale prevented all further inquisition, that ly to stand them in any stead But syphax, by might else have been made concerning the their procurement, and perhaps by his own message of these Embassadors: whose folmalice, towards his Corrival, warred upon lowers had been feen walking up and down him; and over-charging him with numbers, Syracuse. And lest any thing should afterdrave him out of his Kingdom. Nevertheles wards break out, that might hinder the buff-Mafaniffa, ftill retained the hearts of his peo- uess, Soipio immediately fent about his fleet ple; and thereby remained strong enough, to infest both Syphax and the Carthaginians; though he was often put in diftress, by great forces that were fent against him. He my At Lylibaum he agreed with the Prator, therefore keeping much about the lefler Syr tis, between the borders of the Carthagini- them, which to leave behind for desence of ans, and the Nation of the Garamants, expe- the Island; and which to carry with himincted the coming of the Romans: yet fo, as to Africk. What numbers he transported, it is he made long roads over all the Country, not certain: fome Historians reckoning even as far as Hippo; and when Lalius arri- only ten thousand foot, and two and twenty ved thereabouts, exhorted and encoura- hundred horse; others increasing them to ged him to haften on Scipio to the invasion five and thirty thousand, horse and foot.

of Africk. cour was reposed more hope of good success, I hold it needless to set them down: fince than could be expected from the good will they were points of ordinary care, and of poor Mafanissa, sent an Embassage into which it is like that neither he, when he

Only it feems, that howfoever sopho-\Sicil about the fame time, which was little promifed affiftance of syphax had not a little Masimista was the son of Gala, a King of the advanced his enterprise; in procuring both unto Lylibaum : and requesting by letters M. Pomponius, that was Prætor in Sicil, to meet him there; hasted thither with his Arabout the division of the Legions between Concerning his directions for embarquing, But syphax, in whose great aid and suc- and other matters belonging to their course, took his voyage into spain, nor othersupon better advise them to set sail for Utic like occasions, have omitted; they being al- make war upon the Enemies at their fo word for word fet down by an Historian, doors. who borrowed them from Livie, and fitted them to a Prince of later age.

The Carthaginians had at time neitner any Captain of great worth at home, nor This Roman Army landed in Africk, near to better Army than of raw Souldiers; that a fore-land then called the fair Promon- were levied, or to be levied in hafte. Afdruterie: which how far it was from Carthage, but the of fon Gefee, the same that had lately or toward what point of the Compals, I been chased out of Spain by scipio, was their cannot precifely affirm; because it is uncer- best man of war. And good enough pertain, whether it were that Cape or Head- haps he was thought by Hanno and his felland which bore the name of Mercury, and lows, of whose faction he was : or if ought lay to the North-east of Carthage; or whe- were wanting in him, yet his Riches and Nother that of Apollo, which lay Northerly bility, together with the affinity of King Stfrom Carthage, and by West. The coming of phax, made him passable. He was then with Masamissa unto Scipio at his first arrival, helps the King his son-in-law, working him no to confirm the opinion of Xylander, who doubt against the Romans: when letters thinks the fair Promontors to have been the were brought from Carthage both to Syphase fame, that was also called Mercuries Cape, and to him, informing them of the Invalion : fince with little difficulty Majanifia might entreating the one of them to give affiftance, come thither from the leffer Syrtis, where- and commanding the other to make his reabout was his common abiding. But foraf pair unto the City, where he was chosen much as without any memorable impedi- General. But ere these could be ready, seiment foon after his arrival, Scipio encamped pio had beaten the troop of Carthaginian before Utica, that flood Westward from horse, that were sent out of the City to di-Carthage beyond the River Bagradas: it may Rurb his landing; and flain Hanno a young rather feem, that he landed within the Pro Gentleman, that was their Leader. He had montory of Apollo; whence the way to Utica also taken and sacked a Town of the Carthawas not long. This is also strongly proved; ginians: wherein, besides other booty, he for that out of Carthage were fent, the next took eight thousand prisoners; all which he day, five hundred horse to trouble him in his conveighed aboord his Hulks or Ships of dif-embarking. Neither was it so hard for burden, and sent them back loaden into si-Masanissa, that roved about the Contry cil. He took likewise a Town called Salera, with a troop of horse to find out the Romans, which he held and fortified. In Salera lay though they landed far from the place to the another Hanno, with four thousand Namidiwhich he usually resorted, like as before he an horse: whose service being fitter, for the had met with Lelius at Hippo that was far- field, than for defence of walled places, ther off; as it would have been for Scipio, made Scipio to perceive the unskilfulness of with his Army & Carriages, to overcome the their Leader, that had thus housed them. trouble of a long journey, and fetch a great | Wherefore he fent Masanissa before him: who compass to Vica, by Land; when he might rode up to the gates; and, by making a have disembarqued nearer unto it. Never- bravado, trained out the improvident Hanthelessit may pass as a conjecture, That Sci- no so far, that he drew him unto a place, pio came first of all to Emporia, a plentiful where the Romans lay in wait for him. The Region about the leffer syrtis; fince he gave victory was eafily gotten, and Hanno either charge to the Masters of his ships, at the taken or slain. With those that fled, the fetting forth from Lilybaum, to shape their Romans entered pell-mell into the Town, course for that coast. The Countrey there- which presently they made their own. about was very rich, and fit for fullenance | Thence went Scipio to Utica, a City of great of an Army: neither were the Inhabitants importance, of which mention hath been forwarlike, or well provided to make refi-merly made, and fate down before it. Forty stance. Thus much perhaps Masanisa had dayes he spent about it, assailing it toth fignified unto Lalius, when he spake with by Land and Sea, and using all his engines him at Hippo: thinking that the Romans, of battery, whereof he had plenty, yet was howsoever they made brave promises, would in no likelihood of prevailing. And now the not come strong enough to fight at head. But | Summer was quite spent : so that it was time when he saw their Fleet and Army to be for him to choose a place, and fortifie his such, as not only served to invade the lands Winter-Camp, which must be well stored of Carthage, but threatned a conquest of the against the year following. Whilest thus City and whole Estate : then might he necessity urged him to leave Otica: and flame enterprise, rather than any hope of better little entreaty to withdraw himself home fuccels, caused him to stay there: Asdrubal into his Kingdom, and rest a Neuter. But it and Syphax gave him the honour of a fair is not unlikely, that such a friend as this pretence to leave the fiege. Afdrabal had King, had been highly entertained and homade a levy of thirty thousand foot, and noured in the City of Carthage, which was three thousand horse: yet adventured not near at hand, as often as during this Winter with this ill-trained Army to draw near un- it had pleased him, or as he had been invito the Romans, before the coming of syphax. ted, to make a step thither and repose him-Syphax brought with him unto Carthage fifty felt a while : his wife Queen Sophonisha lythousand foot, and ten thousand horse: ing also there at the same time, to cherish which joyning unto the forces of Afdrubal, him in his resolution. Howsoever it were. whey marched bravely toward Scipio; who Syphax did only make an overture of peace: thereby took occasion to dislodge. He propounding it as reasonable, That Hannichose for his Winter-Camp the banks of bal should be recalled out of Italy by the an In-let, that had good harbour for his Na- Carthaginians: and that the Romans in like vy. His foot-men he lodged on a Promonto- fort should quietly depart out of Africk. and ry, joyning to the Continent by an arm of so make an end of the war: wherewith now Land: his horse-men he bestowed upon both Africk and Europe were disquieted. lower ground, on the other shoar: in the Unto this would not Scipio at the first give bettom of the Creek he mored his ships; and ear: yet being pressed earnestly by many there he quartered the Mariners, with all messages from Syphax, and desiring to conthat belonged unto the Fleet. The whole tinue the intercourse of Embassadors; he camp he strongly fortified, and so attend- began to make shew, as if he would consider ed the season of the year, when it should of the motion. He was given to understand ferve him again to fight. Of cattel and by those whom he had sent unto the King. other booty Masanisa had brought in great, that the Enemies had their camps without ftore, by driving the Country, before any great defence of earth, full of wooden the coming of Aldrubai and syphax. Corn Cabins, and covered with boughs: and that was fent him from Scieil and Sardinia. Syphax, used coverings of Mats and Reeds; Likewise apparel for his Souldiers, was sent others that came later, had thatched their from home, or from Sardinia: though lodgings with dry boughs and leaves: under scarce enough to serve turn, for that it was which they lay carelesly without their a matter of more cost. The ships that Trenches. Upon this advertisement hebepaffed without action.

ety of his wife, who had caused him to enter ed as much as he desired : upon the

thame of taking the repulse in his first great | into this war : he might be moved with a also he had gotten some: and great store the Numidians, such of them as came first with brought these things, he fraighted home- thought himself, That it would not be hard wards with such part of his booty, as he for him to set their camps on fire, and therecould best spare: especially with captives by give them a notable overthrow. Withto be fold for flaves. Afdrubal and Syphax out help of some such stratagem, he foresaw encamped near unto Scipio: not so strongly that it would be a work of great difficulty fortifying themselves, as did the Romans, for him, to proceed in his wars when time either for that they wanted the severer insti- should ferve. It was a plain open Country tution, which the Romans used in the disci- wherein he lay: and the Enemies had great pline of war, or for that they prefumed up- advantage of him in number, especially in on their multitude, against which they horse; which upon such ground could not found in Scipio no disposition to issue forth be resisted by the Roman Legious. Thelonof his strength, and fight. So the Winter ger therefore that he thought upon the matter; the more needful he found it for When Spring drew near, Scipio thought himself, to make some sudden attempt upit good to allay his old friend the Numidian on their Camp. To this end he fent many King, if perhaps he might be won by per- Embaffadours, under pretence of treating swalions to forsake the Carihaginians. It about the Peace; but indeed of purposeto was confidered, that those Barbarians were discover all that might concern the intended naturally unconstant ; and particularly, surprise. With these Embassadours he sent, as that Syphax had given proof before this of Attendants, many old Souldiers, difguifed his much levity. It might therefore be like flaves; that wandring (as it were) hoped, that having wearied himself by idle up and down the Camp, might observe lodging a whole Winter in the Camp: and the wayes and entrances, with whatfobeing peradventure no less weary with sati- ever else was needful. When he had learn-findden he fent word to Syphax, that it was have taken by calualty upon the Numidians vain to hold any longer treaty, forasmuch that lay farther off, whereas if it first apas he could not get the consent of his Coun- peared in the camp of Afdrubal, it would be cil of war; whithout whose approbation, suspected as the doing of enemies, and give all that himself could do, was no more, than Syphax warning to look to himself. To this the good will of one man. This he did, to end therefore Scipio marched fair and foftthe end that, without any breach of faith, ly; that Lalius and Masanisa, who had a lonhe might put his design in execution. The ger journey, and were to fetch a compass Truce being thus cut off, Asdrubal and sy- about for fear of being discovered, might phax were very pensive: as having lately have time to get before him, and do their perswaded themselves, that their trouble was seat. It was about two or three a clock in the almost at an end. But since it could be no morning, when the camp of syphan began to hetter, they began to devise, by what art blaze: which not only the Numidians, but they might draw Scipio out of his Camp, their King himfelf, imputed unto calualty; and provoke him to battel in those Plains. as thinking themselves safe enough from This if they could do, they hoped to make enemies, for that the Carthaginians lay inhis Council of war repent as greatly the re- resposed between them and the danger. fusal of peace, as did Marcus Atilius after Wherefore as if there were no more to do, the like presumption. But if he should re- some starting half asleep; and others that fule to come forth of his Trenches, what elfe had fitten up late at drinking, ran out of remained than to befiege him? Which they their Cabbins to quench the fire. But fo themselves were well able to do by land; great was the tumult, that they neither and the Carthaginian Fleet should do by Sea, could rightly understand in what case they that was making ready for the purpole. were, nor give any remedy to the mischance By such discourses these two comforted as it was supposed. Many were smothered themselves; recompencing (in conceipt) the and burnt in the flame, which grew grealoss of their hopes past, with that victory to ter and greater: many, leaping into the Trencome. But herein they were extreamly and ches for fear of the fudden mischies, were worthily disappointed: for that consulting trampled to death by the multitude that fol-about the future, they provided not against lowed them. They that estaped the fire fell present danger, but continued in the same upon the enemies sword, which was ready negligence, which was grown upon them to receive them. Especially Masanilla, that by the long discourse of peace. As for Scipio, best knew the Country, did great executihe was not idle; but made preparation on upon them: having laid all the wayes, by out of hand, as it were to do somewhat which he foresaw that they would seek to against Otica. Two thousand Souldiers he escape. The Carthaginians perceiving this had made ready, and appointed to take the fire, thought none other than that it was a fame piece of ground, whereon he lay pittiful mischance : so that some ran out to against Otica before. This he did partly to help the poor Numidians; carrying only keep secret that which he had in hand, lest what would serve to quench the fire. being suspected by his own Souldiers, the Others ran up to the Rampart: where fear-Enemy might happen to have notice of it; less of any danger toward themselves, they partly to hinder those of Utica from setting stood beholding the greatness of the flame, upon the few, that he purposed to leave be and lamenting the missortune. This fell hind him in his Camp. He caused his men out right as Scipio would have it. Hetherethat night to sup well, and betimes that they fore lost no time: but setting upon those might be ready for the journey. After sup- that were running towards the Numidians, per, he appointed such Companies as he he killed some, and pursued the rest back inthought fit, to the defence of his Camp; all to their camp, which in a little while he the rest of the Army he led forth, about nine made to burn as bright, as did that of $50 of the clock at night. The Carthaginians phax. Asdrubal seeing this, and knowing that lay from him feven miles and an half: whom the Ramans were there, did not stand to he purposed to undertake himself with the make resistance, but shifted only for himself, one half of his Army; the other half he and escaped with a few of his horse about committed to Lalius and Masanisa, whom he him If Hannibal, or any of the Barchine factifent before him to fet upon the camp of sy on, had been taken in fuch a manner : it is phax, that was farther off. It was his mean, more than probable that old Hanno would ing, that the camp of Sypher should be have judged him worthy to be crucified. It on a light fire, ere he would meddle with the would then have been faid, that with less Carthaginians. For the fire might feem to than one half of 30000 men, he might at least have given some bad recompence, to loss. The two next Towns adjoyning would them that were taking pains in kindling needs be valiant, and make countenance of these fires, had he not been only careful war: but their strength not being answerahow to fave his own fearful head. Ne- ble, they were foon taken by Scipio, who exten e verthelels Polybius acknowledgeth, and it is abandoned them to the pleasure of his Soul-Tobs. 144 most likely to have been true, That if diers. This being done, he returned to the Aldrubal, or any of those about him, would siege of Utica. have firicken to fnew valour, when the Camp was once on fire: He should not they had good reason, when instead of eithereby have done any manner of good, because of the tumult and consternation. I shall not need to tell what a fearful thing it mentable overthrow. Necessity enforced was, to hear the cries of fo many thou- them to make halty provision for the fufands that perished by fire and sword, or ture: but how to doit, few of them saw to behold the cruel flame that confumed any means. Some gave advice to crave peace them ; which (as Polybine affirms ) none of scipio: others to fend for Hannibal out of that hath being is able to describe. It is Italy; but the most, and they which finally enough to fay, That of those many thou- prevailed, were of opinion, That notwithfands, very few did escape; which accompa- standing the loss of this Army, they might nied Afdrubal and Syphax in their feveral well defend themselves against the Romans. wayes of flight. Belides there also there by raising new forces: especially, if syphax were some scatterers, especially of the Numidians, that faved themselves in the dark : cluded, that they should bend all their care but they were not many, as after shall ap this way, levying in all haste another Army; pear. Surely it must needs have been very and sending Embassadours to deal with hard to tell, how many were bunrt or other- syphax, who lay then at a Town called Abba, in the dark of night. Wherefore Livie, who diately the same their unfortunate Commanin the rest of this relation, as often else- der, Afdrubal the fon of Gesco, was employ-were in thesetwo Camps.

Ffffffa

The Carthaginians were fore troubled, as ther Peace or Victory, which they lately hoped for, they heard news of such a lawould not leave them. It was therefore conwise made away, and what numbers escaped not passing eight miles from Carthage. Immewhere, doth follow Polybins, may feem to ed to make new levies of men : and Queen have followed some less worthy Author, and Sophonisha went forth with Embassadours him no good Arithmetician, in casting up to her husbandssphax, who having gatherthe fumm. For he reckons only two thou- ed together as many as he could of his subfand foot, and five hundred horse, to have jects that had escaped from the late slaughescaped; forty thousand to have perished ter, was thinking to return into his own by fword or fire: and above fix thousand Kingdom. Sophonisha laboured so with her to have been taken prisoners: the whole husband, that at length she won him to number of all which together, is far short her own desire. And it fell out at the same of fourscore and thirteen thousand, which time, that four thousand Spaniards, waged by the Carthaginians, were brought over to Afdrubal, putting himself into the next serve in Africk. Of these were made such Town that was very strongly fortified, brave reports, as if their courage, and the thought there to find the Romans work, un- Arms which they used, were not to be retil the Carthaginians at good leifure might listed. Even the multitude within Carthage repair their Army. He had with him no believed these tales, and were more glad more than two thousand foot, and five hun- than they had cause to be; which is great dred horse: which he thought sufficient to wonder, since in one age, the whole coundefend the Town; if the Towns men would try of spain had been twice conquered; first, not be wanting to themselves. But he found by the Carthaginians themselves, and after the Inhabitants of the place very earnest in by the Romans. But with Syphax these tales contention, whether it were better to fight, or to yield. Unto this disputation, he well Embassadors helped with a lye, saying, That foresaw, that the arrival of scipio would soon there were come ten thousand of these tergive an end. Wherefore, left they should lay rible Spaniards. Upon this confidence, the hold upon him, and feek the Victors favour people of Carthage and their friends gatherby delivering him up: he shrunk away ed such spirit, that in thirty dayes they betimes and made all haste to Carthage. As made up an Army, confisting well-near of for the town which he left ; it opened the thirty thousand men, reckoning the Spaniards gates to Scipio, at his first coming: and there- and Syphax with his Numidians in the numby preserved it self from all manner of ber. So they incamped in a Region called, CHAP. III. The great Fields, about five dayes journey and Scipio stayed behind, carrying the war mediately followed him.

about him: and that Majaniffa, with his Numidians, and Lalius, with some of the Ro-Numidians; and what good might be done forthwith to embarque them elves for Italy. among them, by the reputation of a victory. In this their trepidation Scipio came to

from Vica. Scipio hearing of this, came from town to town. Many places vielded from Otica thither, to visit them : leaving be- for fear ; many were taken by force ; and hind him his impediments, with some part all the subjects of Carthage wavered in their of his Army, to make a shew of continuing sidelity, as if the time were now come, the fiege. Two or three dayes, after the meet- wherein they might take notice of those uning of both Armies, passed away in skirmish, reasonable burdens, which their proud Mawithout any great thing done. It had now sters had laid upon them, for maintenance heen time for Asdrubal to follow the exam- of the war in Spain and Italy. What to do in ple of the Roman Fabius, and feek to weary this case, the Carthaginians could hardly reout the Enemy by delayes. But either folve. Fortune was their enemy; they had (which is likely) he was a far worse Com- lost their Armies and many of their Towns: mander, or elseit was not in his power, to neither durst they make bold to trouble give such directions as best pleased himself. their own subjects with any violent exacti-The fourth day the Armies met in battel : on of men or money ; who nevertheless of wherein the Romans were marshalled by Sci-their own free will were likely to give little pio after their wonted manner, having their help. Very much it grieved them to fend for Halian horse in the right wing; and Masa- Hannibal out of Italy: yet since there was no nilla with his Numidians in the left. On other hope remaining, than in him and his the contrary side, Aldrubal and his Carthagi- good Army; it was decreed, That Embassanians had the right wing; Syphax the left; dors should be forthwith sent to call him and the Spaniards, the battel. The victory home. Some there were that gave advice, to was gotten without many blows: for the fet out a fleet against that of Scipio, and untrained followers of Syphax and Astrubal, rode before Otica, weakly manned, that could not sustain the first charge of the Ita- easie to be taken, whilest Scipio himself was lians, or of Masanisa. Only the spaniards busied in the Island Countrys. Some were of fought along time, even untill they were all opinion, that it should be their principal in a manner flain: rather as men desperate, care, to fortifie by all means the City of and not hoping for mercy, fince they were | Carthage: upon the fafety whereof they faid thus come over to fight against scipio, who all depended: adding, that whilest they had otherwise deserved of them, than upon were true, and at unity among themselves, any likelihood or conceit of victory. This they might well enough subsist, and expect their obstinacy was beneficial to those that those opportunities, with which Fortune fled; for that it hindred the Romans from (doubtles) would prefent them. These counmaking any great pursuit, Hereby Asdrubal, fels were not rejected; but order was forthand Syphax escaped: Asdrubal, to Carthage; with taken, both for all things concerning and sphax home to his own Kingdom: whi- the defence of the City, and for the attempt ther his wife was either gone before, or im- upon the Roman fleet at Utica. Nevertheless, it was confidered, that thereby they should Scipio, having thus gotten the mastery of only protract the war; without any advanthe field, took counsel about the prosecuti- cing their own affairs towards likelihood on of the war. It was resolved upon as the of victory, no, though it should fall out, best course, That he himself, with part of that all the ships at Otics might be taken, or the Army, should attempt the Cities round destroyed. Wherefore the determination held concerning Hannibal, that he should immediately come over into Africk, as the man Legions, should follow after syphax ; last refuge of Carthage. The Council was no not permitting him to take rest within his sooner broken up, than all the Senators beown Kingdom, where easily else he might took themselves to the execution of that repair his forces, and put them to new trou- which was decreed: some, to the fortificable. This advice, it feems that Mafaniffe tion of the Town: fome, to make ready the gave: who knew best the quality of the Fleet; and some, appointed thereunto,

The least that could be expected, was his Tunes, a City in those dayes very strong, and restitution into his own Kingdom, usurped standing in prospect almost of every part by sphax: which to accomplish, it no less of Carthage. This place, or rather some deconcerned the Romans at the present, than it fensible piece adjoyning, he easily took; did himself. According to this order con- the garrisons for saking it, and running away, cluded, Lelius was sent away with Masanissa: as soon as he drew near. But whilest he was about there to incamp, and fortifiehim- one occasion of that small loss that followfelf against the City, he might perceive the ed. They that stood upon the Bridge were Carthaginian Fleet fetting forth, and making neither able to relieve them, nor yet could towards Vtica: What this meant, he readily freely bestow their weapons among the Carconceived; and stood in great fear, lest his thaginians, as before; for fear of hurting own thips that were very ill prepared for these their friends, that were intangled and Sea-fight (as being heavily loaden with on- mixed among the enemies. The Carthaeim. gines of battery, and wholly disposed in such ans had brought with them grappling hooks order, as was most convenient for assaulting hanging at Iron chains. These they threw upthe town ) should make bad resistance, on the masts & yards, which served as arches against a fleet appointed for that special fer- to joyn the bridge together : then rowing vice. Wherefore he halted away towards backwards, they tore all afunder; in fuch Utica, to affist with his presence in this need- fort, that one ship followed another, and all ful case. It fell out well, that he had sent his the first rank was broken, or defaced. The carriages, and all the great booty which he Defendants had no other way, than to fave drew along with him, thither before, at his themselves as hastily as they could, by shiftgoing to Tunes. For had not he now made ing into the next rank of ships, that lay begreat expedition, he should have come too hind them untouched. Neither did the Carlate. Neither could he indeed have been thaginians trouble themselves thy further there in due time, if the Carthaginians had in this laborious work : but having haled used such diligence as was convenient. But away six ships of burden, and towed them they rested one night in harbour by the out of the Haven, returned home to Carthage. way; and at their coming to Utica, they tar- Their welcome was greater than their viryed a while to make a bravado; presenting ctory; because among so many grievous themselves in order of battel, as if the Ro- losses, only this exploit had succeeded well, mans would have put forth to Sea against though it were of small importance. them. But scipio had no fuch intent: he Whilest things thus passed about Carthought it would be sufficient, if he could thage, Lalius and Masanisa, in their journey preserve his Gallies. As for the pleasure of against syphax, found as good success as could their bravery at Sea; it should little avail be defired. The fame of the victories althe Carthaginians, if they got nothing by it, ready gotten restored Masanissa to his Kingand loft their whole estate by Land. Where- dom, without farther contention: the Mafore he took his ships of burden, and fastning fastlining fastlining subjects, joy fully receiving him, and them together with cables, in four ranks, one forfaking the usurpers. But here they stayed behind another, made a four-fold bridge not : neither indeed would syphax permit over the channel of the Haven; whereon them to be quiet. He had fuch abundance he placed a thousand of his choise men, with of men and horses, that he felt not greatly store of Darts, and other casting weapons, the losses past: and therefore being solicited to make defence. Some other spaces heleft, by Asdrubal and sophonisba, he prepared whereat his Frigots, and other small Vestels, again for war. But beside the instigation might run out and back again upon any ad- of his beloved wife the loss of the Mafeffli vantage or need : but these he covered with | would let him take no rest: neither was it planks, using the masts and yards of his the purpose of Lalim and Masanisa, togiveships instead of rafters, to joyn all together, him any breathing time. It is common in that his men might help one another, and men, to depart no less unwillingly from that the bridge it self not be torn afunder Scarce which they have gotten by extortion, than was this work finished, when the Carthagini- from their proper inheritance; but to think ans, seeing none issue forth against them, came all alike their own, whereof they are in into the Haven. The fight between them poffession, be the title unto some part never and the Romans that were in the Hulks was fo unjust. Hereunto alludes the fable of rather like to the affaulting of a wall, than the young Kite; which thought that the to any Sea-fight. For they that stood upon had vomitted up her own guts, when it was the bridge, had fure footing, and threw their only the garbage of some other fowl, that strength and violence; which the Carthagi- to digest. But whether or no, syphax, like weapons downwards, with their whole the had hastily swallowed, and was not able nians out of their Gallies, that were lower the young Kite, believed the Kingdom of and uniteady, could not do, but the Koman the Masaffli to be part of his entrails : Leli-Frigots and long boats, adventuring forth w and Masanisa will shortly give him some from behind the bridge, were greatly over- what that shall make him cast his gorge. born by the force of the Gallies; and were For to this purpole chiefly are they come profecuting his hope of victory: fome Ro- in the Kingdom. it sufficed, that they forsook the place, as she had done of syphax. It was not long,

for far. It concerned the Romans to dispos- | and fled, and that their King, upon whom all less (if it might be) the King, whose false depended, was in the Romans hand. Masunifand hollow friendship towards them, had fa told Latins, that this victory should make and none converted into strong enmity; as al- | an end of the Numidian war, if presently foto fet in his place another, who might do they hasted away to Cirta the chief City of shem fuch good offices, as syphax had lately the Kingdom; whither he himself defired done unto the Carthaginians. How eafily this to be fent before with the Horse, carrying might be effected, Masanissa knew bost, as Syphax along with him. Hereunto Latine being well acquainted with the nature of agreed. Mafanissa coming to Cirta, before those Countries; wherein, even to this day any news of the Kings milchance was there though there be many strong Towns, yet the arrived, called out the chief of the City to fortune of a battle is enough, to translate parlee: wherein by many fair promises and the Kingdom from one Competitor to ano- threats, but especially by shewing unto them ther. So they met with spphax, who came spphax bound, he prevailed so far, that the against them with no less an Army, than his gates were forthwith opened unto him; and former, and marthalled in the Roman order, according to the skill, which he had learn like to be their King hereafter. Among the ed of the Roman Centurion, long ago fent rest, Queen Sophonisha yielded her felf inunto him out of spain from Cn. scipio. But to his hands, and vehemently befought him, though he could teach his men how to that she might not be delivered up unto the march in orders yet could be not teach them Romans. Her youth, and excellent beauty, fo to fight couragiously. They were a rabble commended her fuit, that M. Janissa forthof all forts, gathered up in hafte : and few of with granted it; and to make good his prothem had feen war before. Encamping neer mile, marryed her himself that very day; unto the Romans, it fell out, as commonly, thereby to prevent Lelius and Scipio from that some small troops of horse on both determining otherwise ofher, since she was fides, encountered one another in the mid- his wife. But Lelius, when he came thither. way: and they that had the worlt, were fe- took the matter hainoully, fo that at first he conded by other of their fellows. By conti- would have haled her away, together with nuance of the skirmish, more and more were syphax and other prisoners, and have sent drawn out from either Camp: fo that at her unto scipio. But being over intreated length Sphax, unwilling to dif-hearten his by Mafaniffa, he fuffered the matter to rest men by taking any foil at their first meet- a while as he found it, and referred all to ing with the Enemy, came up with all his scipio's discretion; to whom he sent away horse, which were the best part of his forces, syphax and other captives immediately; and therewith over-charged Masarisa, whose following shortly after himself with Masanumbers were far less. But whilest he was nissa, when they had done what was needful man foundrons of Foot came against him At the coming of Syphax, there was through their own troops of horse; which great joy in the Roman Camp: the mighty fell to the fides, and made a lane for them. Armies which he had lately brought into So their battel standing now more firm, than the field; and his entertainment of Scipio a little before; Spphax was unable, though and Asdrubal, both at one time, when Rome he laboured much in vain, to make them and Carthage together fought his friendship; give ground. Masanissa likewise, and his with such other commemoration of his past troops grew confident upon this affiltance: and present fortune, ministring to every and charging afresh the Enemy, that could one a large argument of discourse. Scipio not make way forward, caused him to give demanded of him, what had moved him, not back Herewithal the Legions came in fight : only to for fake the Roman friendship, but to which terrified so the Numidian horse, that make war upon them, unprovoked. He they began presently to dis-band. Fain briefly answered, That his wife had moved would Syphax have stayed them from him so to do; calling her a Fury, and a peflight: and to that end made head in per- stilent creature: and saying, that Masaniffa on against the Romans; with hope, that was no wifer than himself, since he had his men would be ashamed to leave him. now taken the same woman to his wife, But it fell out unhappily, that he was cast who would shortly draw him to the same from his horse, which received a wound, courses. Hereat Scipio was greatly troubled: and so taken prisoner. Of others that were and stood in great doubt, lest this perilous flain or taken: the multitude was not great. woman should deprive him of Masanisa, ere Mafaniffa and Lalius came unto him: | and challenged her, as a part of the booty both of whom together he lovingly welcom- belonging to the Romans, Masanista faid, the ed; and highly commended in publick, for was his own wife, and unto him betrothed their notable fervice in this Expedition. many years before. But Scipio would not hear Then taking Majaniffa apart, he brake with of this: or if it were true, yet he faid it was him, as touching Sophonisba: letting him no reason, that Masanisia should keep her in understand that the Komans had title to her possession, as long as it was disputable, unan head, and that the was a mischievous enemy whom the might appertain. Whereforehe of theirs. Wherefore he intreated him to willed him first of all to produce her, and moderate his affections: and not to deface then afterwards to make his claim unto her. the memory of his great fervices already wherein he should have no wrong. Heredone ( for which he should be highly re- | withall he sent to fetch her away : and Mawarded to his own contentment ) by com- fanisa accompanied the messengers, as it mitting a great offence upon little reason. were to deliver her: but making her ac-Masanija blusht, and wept: and finally pro- quainted with the necessity, gave unto hera miled to be governed by scipio, whom he cup of poilon, wherewith the ended her life, nevertheless intreated, to think upon his before they came that should have apprefaith given to Sophonisba, that the should hended her. So he shewed unto the Romans not be delivered into the Romans power. So her dead body, which he royally interred. he departed to his own Tent, where, after The sudden violence of Masaniffa his love, fome time front in agony, he called unto him and the ready confent of Sophonisha to mara fervant of his that had the custody of his ry with him, add not so much credit unto poyfon (which Princes used then to have in this relation of Appian, as doth the want of a readiness, against all mischances that might all other evident cause (which Livie notes) in the make them unwilling to live: ) and temper- of the sudden falling out between him and ing a potion for Sophonisha, fent it unto her the Carthaginians, under whom he had been with this message; that gladly he would trained up, and done them great service. have had her to live with him as his wife : Howfoever it were; scipio, hearing of this but fince they who had power to hinder him tragical accident, fent for Masanifia, and comof his defire, would not yield thereto, he fent | forted him as well as he could, left his meher a cup, that should preserve her from fall- lancholy should lead him to some inconveing alive into the hands of the Romans; wil- nience. Having therefore gently rebuked him ling her to remember her birth and estate, for his rashness, he brought him forth in preand accordingly to take order for her felf.

At the receit of this Message and Present, the only faid; That if her husband had ferved of the City of Rome, he proclaimed no better token to fend unto his new wife, him King, and gave unto him a Crown of she must accept of this; adding, that she gold, with other Royal ornaments. This might have dyed more honourably, if she was indeed the ready way to divert his had not wedded so lately before her funeral. thoughts from the sad remembrance of that And herewithall she boldly drank off the which was past, unto the more chearful poison. Thus Livie reporteth. But Appian contemplation of good fortune, that began varies from this; and fets it down agreeably to smile upon him. to that which hath been spoken before, concerning the præcontract between Masa. took upon them to create or proclaim a nissa, and Sophonisba. He saith, that after King. Which honour though Masanissa well the taking of Syphax, Embassadours from deserved: yet would not the Title havere-Cirta met with Lalius and Masanisa upon dounded unto his great benefit : neither their way thither, yielding up their City, should he have been much beholding to and the Kings Palace: and that sophonisba, them for it, if he had not by their means for her own private, sent messengers to ex- recovered possession of his Country, togecuse her marriage with Syphax, as made ther with the greatest part of Syphax his against her will, by compultion of those in Dominions. It seemeth not unlikely, that whose power she was. Majanisa readily ad- had he remained a Nester in these wars, and mitted this excuse; and accepted her to sustained himself with his troop of horse, wife. But when Scipio had received informa- in such fort as he did before the coming of tion from Syphan, how cunning in perswasion the Romans; he might nevertheless have sophonisha was: and that all her thoughts recovered his proper inheritance, by the laboured for the good of Carthage; he fell love of his own subjects without other sence of the Army: where extolling his noble acts, and shewing how highly he had de-

This was the first time that the Romans out about her with Masanissa at his return, help, when syphax had once or twice been . vanquished.

felves 5 neither could they have wished a and of those that sat in Councel with him. Extrapte fitter opportunity, than of fuch a man upon istign bravely, That it was not their custome to jectunto their power, for they would not State; and in process of time grew so proud advantage. of this their imaginary prerogative, that It was not unknown to Scipio, or to his they imputed as a singular benefit unto Kings assistants, in what poor case the City of Rome that no way depended upon them, the falu- then was; and how unable to defray the tation by*that name, though it were not ac- charges of continuing the War. Neither were the Carthaginians, notwithstanding the thence redounding.

ø. XIX.

calamity, that was befallen their good friend while held out against Scipio, and could not sphaz, and understood that Masanissa yet be forced by him and his Army, though their mortal enemy, had got possession of so often victorious in the field. Scipio therehis Kingdome. To increase their fear, fore accepted their submission, and told Scipio returned again to Tunes in view of them, That though he came into Africk, to their City: where he made an end of that make a conquest, and not peace: yet having Fortification, which he had begun at his the Conquest as it were in his hand, he would last being there. The Carthaginians had not deny to grant them the Peace which neither forces, nor courage, to withstand they defired; for thereby should all Natihim : but their hearts to failed them , ons understand, that the people of Rome did that they fent forth unto them thirty Em- follow the rule of Justice, both in making baffadours, Princes of the City, which were war, and in concluding it. The Conditions vanquished. As for the inlargement of his their Privy Councel, to make suit for peace. Kingdome, it was not more than he deserv- These being admitted into the presence of ed: neither were the Romans then in case, Scipio, did not only prostrate themselves to make a conquest of Numidia for them on the ground; but kissed the * feet of him * External Answerable to this base adoration was Liv. 1, 30 whom to bestow it, that was their affured their speech that followed. They confessed friend & pallable withall among the Numidi- themselves to have unjustly broken the ans as being (for the Masassia were a Numidi- Peace between them and Rome; and to have an Tribe) a great Prince of the same Nation. deserved what soever punishment it should Yet this liberality of the Romans, was noised please the Romans to inflict upon them. Yet abroad as very glorious : and the Romans they humbly befought Scipio and the reft. themselves, in a politick fort of gravity, took that in common regard of those missortunes highly upon them; as if even their faluting whereto all men are subject, they would him by the name of King, had been a matter thew mercy unto the City of Carthage, and of great consequence. He thrived indeed let it remain, as a monument of their clewell after it: & by their maintenance waxed mency; which, by the folly of her Citizens, mighty in times following, incroaching upon had now twice deserved to be overthrown. his neighbours on all fides; but most of all Herewithail they did not forget, to lay the upon the State of Carthage, whereat they were blame upon Hannibal: who without their little displeased. Hence it grew that Vermina appointment had begun the War ; and was the fon of Syphax (of whom we shall shortly maintained in his doings by a Faction, with-(neak more ) which held some pieces of his out the good liking of the whole City. By fathers Kingdome, desiring friendship of the this it appears, that these Embassadours were Romans, and promifing by all means to de- no Barchines: but rather, that they were Hanferve their love, requested therewithall, that no, and the choice of his company; who had they would call him King. But though it now their long defired work in hand, of fuwere for that never any before him had made ling unto the Romans for peace. What soever this a matter of fuit: yet the Roman Senate they were, it must needs be that they were was Puntilious herein, and answered very most insolent men over those that were subgive the honour of that appellation, fave on- have made fuch adoration to the Romans in y unto fuch Kings, as had greatly deserved of their own necessity, unless they themselves their City. Thus they made it a matter of had expected the like, wherein they had the loss of so many Armies, in such ill case, as the Romans themselves had very lately been. For they had money enough, wherewith to wage more men: they had a City far stron-The Carthaginians desired Truce, and break it. | ger than Rome; and they had the Sea free. But they wanted the Roman resolution: and "He Carthaginians were extreamly dif- therefore distrusted the walls of Carthage ; mayed, when they heard of the great though Vica, a weaker City, had all this which

Gggggg

which he imposed upon them, were these ; of Italy, either to chase the Romans out That they thould render up unto him all the of Africk, or to obtain peace for Carprisoners that they had taken, together with thage, by terror of their great Names and all Renegadoes and fugitive flaves: That they Armies, upon more easie conditions should withdraw their Armies out of Italy Wherefore they made an idle discourse of and Gaule: That they should not meddle in the League, that was concluded between spain, nor yet in any Island between Italy them and Luctatius Catulus, at the end and Africk: That they should deliver up all of the former war. This League they said their thips of war, fave twenty; and that all things well confidered, did still remain they should pay a great summ of mony, with in force : neither had there since been any certain hundred thousand bushels of wheat war at all, between the people of Rome and barley. To consider of these Articles, and the Carthaginians. For it was only Hanhe gave them three daies: and when they | nibal, that without any leave from Carhad approved them, he granted a Truce; thage, had of his own head believed and that they might fend Embailadors unto the razed the Town of Saguntum: and after Roman Senate.

972

went home into his Kingdome, as if the war had done (the quiet of Italy. This being fo. had been already at an end. Syphax was a their Message was none other than to delittle before feut with Lalins unto Rome : fire, that the League before spoken of made where the fame of these victories filled men in the time of Catulus, might hereafter stand with joy, and gave hope, that the long en- in force; as indeed it hitherto did, and dured miseries would be shortly at an end. ought to do. The Senators had cause to Wherefore all the Temples were fet open, wonder at this tale, hearing these Embassaand an holy day appointed for thank (giving dors make (asit were) a jest of war, that and supplication to their Gods. Lelius was had been so terrible. Wherefore they asked accompanied with Embaffadors from King them a great many questions, concerning Majanisja: who gratulating the happy fuc- that peace made by Luctatius, and other cels of the Romans in their African war, and passages following between the two Cities. giving thanks unto the Senate for the be- But they excused themselves, by their age: nefits done by scipio unto their Master, made ( for they were all young men) and said, request for the Numidians, such as were | That those things were beyond their knownow his Subjects and prisoners in Rome, that | ledge and remembrance. Forthwith it apthey might be beltowed upon him, who by peared, That all was but collusion, and that rendring them to liberty, should do an act they sought no other than to gain time, very plaufible, that would make him graci- untill they might repair the war. Wherefore ous among his people in the beginning of they were fent home, in company of Lalins, his reign. The Roman Senate were not be- without any conclusion at all of peace, and hind with Masanissa in complement : but in effect, without answer. This notwithstandthewing themselves to be highly pleased with ling, we find in Polybius, That the Senate reall that Scipio had done, and should do for ceived dvertisement from scipio, of that him, they called him King again; released his which had passed between him and the Numidians that were captives; and fent him | Carthaginians in this Treaty of peace: aptwo purple Caslocks, that had each of them proved the Conditions by him propounded, one gold button, with fuch other prefents, as and gave him licence thereupon, to proceed in time of their poverty might ferve to testi- unto Conclusion. This may with good reafie their good will. Scarcely were these and Lalius gone from Rome, when the news came, that Embaffadors from Carthage were hopes must rest upon the most uncertain arrived to defire peace. These Embassadors listue of one battel between Hannibal and were not admitted into the City, but were Scipio: wherein if fortune should be averse lodged without : untill Lalius being fent to them, their forces in Africk were no betfor came back from Ofia, to be present when ter than quite loft. their demands were to be heard. Then was audience given them in the Temple of Bello- the Carthaginian, Embaffadours came back na; that stood in the Suburbs, Theerrand from Rome, a Fleet out of sicil, wherein were of these Embassadors, was peace, but the two hundredships of burden, and thirty meaning of them and of their City was on- Gallies, being bound for Africk, to victual ly to win time, and get respite for war ; the Roman Camp ; was jower-taken by that adventured in like fort, without Com-This done, Masanissa was dismissed, and mission, to pass the Alpes, and trouble (as he on be believed, fince it was not unknown that if the war continued, all these goodly

Matters thus hanging in suspence, before until Hannibal and Mago should come out foul weather at Sea, and hardly escaping wrak, was dispersed, and driven aground | tians ; where he is in a manner believed, and Pett up in a corner of Italy, among the Bru- took this in ill part; not as fearing any dan-

in divers parts of the Bay of Carthage, even unable to fir : so that ye are like to find his in view, and under command of the City. help wanting in your greatest need. Or let it be There was at that time, as we find in Appian, Supposed that he were now in Africk, and ready and may gather out of Folybins, a great to give us battel : yet should it well agree with dearth of victuals in Carthage, which caused your wisdome to doubt what might befal, rethe people to cry out upon their Magi- membring that he is aman, and not invincifirates, that they should not let such a boo ble. Now if it should happen that be were ty escape them, saying, that the danger offa- overcome, what refuge have ye left unto your mine was greater and worse, than of break- selves against hereaster ? What gods will ye ing Truce. Whether it were fo, that hunger either swear by, to be believed, or call upon in urged them, or that they yielded to their your mifery? What words, and lamentable unger than, or that the multitude in Car- gesture will ye beneeforth use, to move compag-thage understood (as it seems) that all this som? Surely ye have already wasted all your discourse of Peace in hand, was no better force of persuation, and shall not again deceive than meer mockery, and therefore cared us, if ye refuse the grace, whereof at this prenot for observation of particular points, fent ye are capable. It is no marvel though when they meant deceit in the whole. It was the Garthaginians were angry, when they the manner in Carthage, as likewise in Alex- heard themselves upbraided with the base andria, for all the rafcality, together with demeanour of their Embassadours. For it was women and boys, to be medling in uproars : not the general opinion of the City, that the the clamors of the boyes being in such tumults | Truce was broken by themselves: though it, no less violent than of the men. Wherefore had pleased Hanno, or such as were of his fait is no marvel, if little regard were had of ation, to gratifie the Romans with all manner reason, or of honour, in any such commotion. of submission; and to renounce not only A Fleet was fent out under Afdrubal, to ga- their hope of the future, but all justification ther up the dispersed Roman ships of burden of matters past. And indeed it seems, that the (for the Gallies, by force of Oars, recovered Roman Embassadors were very much delighthe station whereto their camp adjoyned) ted, in the rehearfal of that point which and bring them into Carthage; which was was yielded unto them, as knowing that done, Scipio was hereat much offended: not thereon depended the justice of the quaronly for the loss; and for that the Town rel. But the Carthaginians took this in foill was thereby relieved: but for that by this part, that hardly they could refrain from breach of Truce, he forefaw the intention of doing violence unto the men, who had used the Carthaginians to renew the war, and put unto them such insolent speeches. Yet the him to more trouble. Wherefore he fent Em- fury of the multitude was in some fort apbaffadors unto them, both to require fatis | pealed; either by Hanno, whom Appian, faction for the injurie done; and to deterr (I know not why) calls Hanno the Great: or them from entertaining any other hope, by the very reverence, due unto the place of thanin the peace which they had so much those that had uttered such liberal words. defired Thefe gave the Carthaginians to un- So they were dismiffed in friendly fort, alderstand that Letters were come from Rome though it were without answer to their unto Scipio, with allowance to conclude Proposition. There were also two gallies apthe Peace; upon those conditions which he pointed for their fafe convoy home; though had propounded. But (fay they) we hold it with little intent of good unto their persons. france That ye, who o letely have caff your selves Adrubal was then in the mid way, as men to be ground before us, and kiffed our feet failed from Carthage towards Utica. He, effect on nousellal manner of bumilies, confest whether only definous to please the multi-log sone, solves to beaue periodossity broken, the tude, of whose disposition he was informa-league that mee between me, and thereby to ed, or whether directed by publick order have deserved such punishment as is due unto to cut off these Embassadours in their way Rebeli ; Should so soon forget what ye then ut- homeward, lay waiting for them behind a fered, and run beadlong again into the same Cape, that was a little beyond the mouth of crimes for which se acknowledged your selves the River Bagradas. Their Convoy having morely to be delroyed, having only recourse brought them on the way, as far as to the line of the delroyed, having only recourse brought them on the way, as far as to the line of the delroyed, having only recourse the mouth of Bagradas, withed them a good voy-like confidence which is report in Hannibal, age; and so took leave of them, as if they had been then in lafety, fince the Roman that he should be so that he was even in fight. The Embaladors are from the confidence who long be hath been much neglected, forafmuch as their atten- mins, were earnestly bent to have done fomedants did fo abruptly leave them. But no foo- what: but their diligence was in a manner ner had they doubled the Cape, than Afdru- fruitless. In some skirmishes with Hannihal hal fell upon them, in fuch manner, as they they had the better; in some the worse: might well discern his purpose: which was and a few poor Towns they got from him to have stemmed them. They rowed hard as it were by stealth; his care being more therefore: and being in a Quinquireme, to preserve his Army, than to keep those that had more banks of Oars, than had any places that were weak. Galive of Aldrubal, they flirt away, and made him over-shoot himself. Yet he gave great pieces of work in hand, that their chief them chase, and had well-near surprised enemy was become not the chief part of them. But they discovered some Roman Com- their care. Their thoughts were mainly bent panies on the shoar over against them, and upon Africk, wherein they were at no small therefore adventured to run their Vessel charges to maintain the Army, which as was aground: whereby they faved their own hoped ) should bring the War to a short and lives, though a great part of their company happy conclusion. They stood neverthelesin were flain, or hurt. This practice of the Car- much fear of Mage, the brother of Hannibal theginians was inexcufable; and for the fame | who took exceeding pains among the Lieucause perhaps were the Citizens heartned rians and Gauls to raise an Army, wherein fuch a dishonourable attempt, by those with to kindle anew the War in Haly, that that were defirous to continue the war; that | began to wax cold. Mago folicited also the thereby they might be driven to frudy no- Hetrarians, and found them fo ready to fire thing elfe, than how to get the victory, as in his behalf, that if he could have entred having none other hope remaining. Yet their Country strong, it might have proved likely it is, that the same fear, which had caused them to make such earnest suit for of Africk, than shortly it was for Hannibal peace, would also have caused them to be to make speed unto the defence of Carthage. better advised, than thus to abandon all hope These dangers caused the Romans to imploy of Treaty; had they not been given to un- one of their Confuls or Pro-confuls with an confidence, but verily perswaded themselves, Ligurians : forasmuch as it was uncertain, that he would change their fortune, and upon which fide Mago would break on: were those that Scipio, in the pride of his any great power. fortune, had of late propounded.

Gggggg 2

6. XX.

parture.

Ver fince the loss of that battel at his iffue. Wherefore Quintilius the Prattor tak-taurus, Hannibal remaining in the Counting unto him all the Roman Horfe, thought try of the Brutians, waiting for another to have shaken the Enemies to pieces. The Supply from Carthage. The Roman Con- Legions at the same time gave a loud hout: fuls that succeded unto Claudius and Livi- and Strained themselves hard, as if at that w, by whom Afdrubal was overcome and brunt the victory should have been carried ger toward, but thinking themselves too | Cn. Servilius Capio, who followed Sembra-

The Romans had at this time fo many derstand, that Hannibel was already landed Army, among the Hetrurians; another in Africk, in whom they reposed no small among the Gauls; and a third among the teach the Romans to hold themselves con-Being thus busied, it is no wonder though tented with more easie conditions, than they forbore to overcharge Hannibal with

As for Mago, when things were in lome readiness for his setting forwards, he met in the Country of the Infubrians, which is about Milan, with M. Cornelius the Roman Procon-In what fort Hannibal frent the time after ful, and P. Quintilius Varrus one of the Pra-the Estile of Metaurus: The doing of tors. With these he fought a battel, where-Mago in Italy. Hannibal and Mago in though his vertue shewed it felf worthy called out of Italy. How the Romans of his Father and Brethren: yet his fortune were diversly affelled by Hannibal's de- was Carthaginian. The fight continued a long while doubtful; in such fort that the Roman Commanders began to distrust the flain, were contented to be quiet all their before them. But Mac opposed his keyear. Neither did Licinius the Colleague phants to the Horse, the service of store of scipio, ought worthy of remembrance beatts being fiver for field use, then against Hannibal, being hindred by the Petal the I quadrons of Fool. The figure sent and fillence that was in his Army. Semprontus braying of these Elephans, did for atright the Consul, who followed Licinius; and the Horse, that they started and, and were feattered over the field; their Riders be- ment, and imbarqued thorrly his Army; ing unable to manage them. Hereby the but dyed of his wound about Sardinia in the manner of fight was more available against About the same time Hannibal received those that were loose, than against the the like command from Carthage, to return groops that were close and thick. Then fell into Africk. He heard it with great imparithe Elephants upon the Legions: which en- ence; gnathing his teeth, and groaning, and retrained them after the accustomed man- hardly keeping in the tears; that were ready ner, with a shour of darts, and killed four to burst out, whilest the Embassadours were of them; caufing all the rest to give back. delivering their errand. When their message This not with standing the same Legions were was done: He told them, that this was yet fo vehemently prefled by the Enemy; that plain dealing. For, faid He, They that now dimore for shame of running away, than by really bid me come home, have long ago done any great force to make reliftance, they their best to hale me out of Italy; though mora held their ground. The Proconful there- closely and crookedly they went to work, by fore brought up those forces, which he had stopping the supply that should have enabled me kept unto the last, to succour where need to manage the War here. Scipio therefore imployed some of his Gault, whom he had bome by the heels: it is Hanno that hath in readiness for the like occasion. But the wronght this noble feat; and overwhelmed the Gauls discharged their parts very ill. They bonse of the Barchines, for lack of other means were son beaten off, and recoiled so hastile do it, with the raine of Carthage. He had ly, that they brought fear upon all the rest. before prepared a Fleet in readiness, doubt-When Mago faw that his men began to ing that which after came to pass: wherein thrink, he put himself in the head of his he imbarqued, belides his own men, as ma-Army; and held them fo well to it, that ny of the Italians as were content to be parkeeping their order, they made a fair Re-takers of his fortune. Many there were that trait, with their faces toward the Enemy. (firtuak back from him, and refused to do But at length he received a grievous wound fervice in this expedition: of whom, such as. in his thigh; whereof shortly after he he could take, he slew; not sparing those that dyed. He was taken up, and carried out fled into the Temple of Jano Lacinia, which of danger by some of his own men: the had been held an inviolable Sactuary unto rest of them, after little further resistance, that day. He was indeed then wholly transprovided every one for himfelf: So the Ro- ported with rage ; and departed out of Italy mans obtained victory, not without great no less passionate, than menare wont to be, coft: as purchasing the death of about five when they leave their own Countreys to go thousand enemies, with the loss of two thou- into exile. He looked back unto the shoar fand and three hundred of the Prætors Ar- accusing both gods and men; and cursing his my, besides those that dyed of the Procon- own dulness, in that he had not led his Arfuls Legions; also besides divers Colonels, thy from Canne, hot and bloodyed as it was, Captains, and Centlemen of mark that fell directly unto the walls of Rome. With fuch in this hot piece of service. Neither were vexation of spirit He quitted the possession thereany prisoners taken; whereby it may of Italy; wherein he had lived almost half might affure them from pursuit. However Romans; in the first beginning of this War, were, this victory would have much imwith what exceeding joy in times following ported for the affurance of Haly; if the they should entertain the news of Hannibal has of Carthage could longer have permit the defervaliant sons of Amilear to abide think) less earnestly have preside the Carthage. threin. But Mago with-drawing himself thaginum to send him over thither. When byease journeys, because of his wound fure advertisement was brought unto the into Liguria, found there Embassadonre from City, that Hannibal was gone with all his Arsubject strength of the subject of t not flaying any longer to think upon the was of opinion, That the danger did ftill reconquest of Maly, Winder Carthage it felf was main the same, though the place were changready to be loft. He obeyed this Command- ed : for that Hannibal at his coming into

Numidians got advantage upon them; whose way homewards. feem that the Enemies did not fall to rout, his time; before they had recovered some ground that If it could have been foretold unto the

Africk, would find P. Scipio other manner | in Roman blood, and wearing the spoils, not of work, than he had been troubled with at only of good Souldiers, but of brave Capany time before; and would do greater mat- tains, by them flain. Such talk used the peoters in his own Country, than ever he was ple of Rome, faying, That Scipio was like to able to perform abroad in a land of strang- meet in battel with many that had flain Roers. The remove of the War from their own man Prætors, yea, and Consuls with their doors, and the conceit of that victory for own hands: with many that had been first which they hoped; was enough to make in getting over the Trenches of feveral Rothem presume further, than at other times they would have done. When therefore the at the fiege of towns; briefly, that he should Sacuntine Embassadors brought unto them a now be opposed by an Army, as good as ever great mass of Gold and Silver, together with had served in war, and following the dreadfome Agents of the Carthaginians taken by ful name of Hannibal. them in Spain : only the Carthaginian prifoners were excepted, the treasure was rendred back unto the Saguntines that had furprised it. Upon like considence of the future, Hannibal in Africk prepares to fight with Scia little before this, order was taken for the repayment of those monys that had been borrowed in time of more necessity from private men. Hence also proceeded the severe chastisement laid upon those 12. Colonies, that for want either of means, or of good will, had refused to give aid to the Romans. They were Leptis, almost an hundred miles from commanded, and inforced to give double Carthage, Eastward from the Headland of the number of Foot to that which they had Mercury, and somewhat more than one debeen wont to set out for the Wars, with a gree to the South. He was ill provided of proportion of Horseanswerable to the very Horse; which it was not easie for him to most of their ability. So consident were the transport out of Italy. Therefore it behoved Romans grown (though their wealth were him to land, as he did, somewhat far from not as yet suitable to the greatness of their the enemy; that he might furnish himself of spirit)upon the good success of the battel at these and the like needful helps against the Mejaurus, and the hopes which they reposed day of battel. From Leptis he passed on to in Scipio. All this notwithstanding, when Adrumetum, and so along through the Inthey considered more nearly of that which land Country gathering friends unto him by might happen: and were informed that the the way. Tychem a Numidian Prince, and terrible Army, whereof Haly had been few familiar friend of Syphax, was faid to have dayes fince discharged, was landed safe in in those dayes the best Horses of service, Africk: they began to revolve a thousand that were to be found in Africk. Himtherefearful matters in their heads, and to stand in fore did Hannibal allure unto his party: doubt, lest 2 Fabius ( who died about the making him understand, that if the Romani same time) would be found a true Prophet. got the victory, it should be easie for Maja-For, bethinking themselves of that which missa, by their countenance and help to opmight comfort them in their hopes : they press both him, and as many other of the found in the victories against Syphax and Af- neighbour Princes, as hindred his prospect. drubal no specialty of so great worth, as This argument, and the same of him that might promife the like success against ano used it, prevailed with Tychem; who shortly ther manner of General, followed by other after brought unto the Carthaginian two manner of men, than were either of those thousand Horse. Appian further adds, That two. The Numidian King had been wone to Mezetullus, (the fame who had made him bring into the field a rascal multitude of half self Protector over Masanisa his Countins; skullions, that were good for nothing; be- and was Head of a Family, and adverse to ing himfelf a fit Captain for fuch Souldiers. the Numidian Kings of that race) brought Likewise Astrubal the son of Gesco was a Com- to Hannibal another thousand Horse: as mander well thought of by the Carthaginian likewife, that Verming the Son of Syphan, Senate, but otherwise, one, that in the field holding a great part of his Fathers Kirgdom, hardened from their childhood with incre- Vermina; as we find in Livin, came with more dible patience, fleshed many hundred times than 16. thousand men ( for he lost more

man Camps, or in winning the tops of walls

o. XXI.

pio; treats with him about peace in vain: loseth a battel at Nedagra, and perswades the Carthaginians to (ue for peace. Of the peace garnted from Rome to Carthage.

T TAnnibal disembarqued his Army at was only good at faving himfelf by a fwift began at the fame time to affail the places retrait. But now there came an Army of men, that yielded obedience to Majaniffa. This was too late.

hard estate, or ( at least ) so impatient of the had lately passed, especially how their Citifate wherein they were; that they could not attend the leifure of those preparations. which would have made the victory affured. When they confidered the worth of Hanwind, and the greatness of his Acts: it offended them to think, that they had been fo hase as to make humble suit unto the Rocause by War. But when as they bethought themselves of their own sufferings, which, for want of Roman magnanimity to endure them, appeared greater than indeed they were : then cried they out earnestly that it was no time to linger, but presently to fight; that so they might see an end of these troubles, either good or bad; and to this purpose they sent their Mandates to Hannibal: requiring him without any further protradion, to do what he could do out of hand. good Lords, and had power to dispose of of their forces, He thought it reasonable that they should suffer him to do as a General ought to do; and to choose his own times. Nevertheless, to give them satisfactithere encamped.

The breach of Truce made by the Carthaginians: the violence done to his Embassadours: and the news of Hannibal his being landed in Africk, made Scipio to understand therefolution of the Carthaginians, which was, not to yield unto any conditions unprofitable for themselves, as long as they wereable to make resistance. Wherefore he fent unto Majanissa: and informed him of allthat was fallen out; praying him to come away with speed, and lay all other business apart. Ten Roman Companies, of Horse and Foot together, Masaniffa had with him; that were lent unto him by Scipio, to do him service in the establishing and inlarging of his Kingdom. But he well understood, that those and many more besides all his own forces, would but little avail him; if Hanmibal should drive the Romans out of Africk. Wherefore taking fuch order as he could

had been at Rome, returned back under the standing this, admired the bravery and cou-

than fo many ) to succour Hannibal when it | conduct of Lalius and Fulvius, who brought them fave into the Roman Camp. There The Carthaginians were at this time in such when they arrived and understood what zens had behaved themselves towards the Roman Embassadours : they made little doubt, how their own heads should answer for fuch notorious outrage. To confirm them in this opinion. M. Bebius one of the late Embassadours that had been in Carthage, being left by Scimans for peace; whilest they had such a pio to take charge of the Camp, laid hands brave Champion alive, to maintain their upon them and detained them; fending word unto his General, who was gone abroad to make War in the Country, that he had them in his power, and that now the Carthaginians might be repaid in their own Coyn, for the injury by them lately done. Scipio was very glad to hear of this; and commanded Bæbies to use them with all posfible courtefie, and fend them fafe home. By thus doing, He brake the hearts of his enemies; and caused them to acknowledge themselves (which was a great victory) far Hannibal made answer, That they were his less honourable than the Romans. This notwithstanding, he made more cruel War uphim and his Army; but fince he was General on them than before: taking their Towns by force; and putting them to lack, without hearkning to any Composition. It was the manner of the Romans, as often as they took a Town by affault, to put all that came in on, He made great marches to Zama; and their way to the fword, what soever they were, without regard. This they did to make themselves terrible: and the better to work fuch impression in the minds of those, with whom they had to do; they used oftentimes to kill the very Dogs and other Beafts, that ran athwart them in the streets : hewing Exert. ! their bodies afunder: as men delighted in Pago. shedding of blood. This being their practice lib., 10. at other times; it is likely that now they omitted no piece of cruelty; when they meant to give proof of their vehement indignation, and revengful minds, for the injuries received. Hence it partly grew, that the Carthaginians were fo earnest in pressing Hannibal to fight.

Hannibal being incamped at Zama, fent forth his Scouts and Spies, to discover where the Romans lay, what they were adoing and as much as might be, of their demeanour. Some of these were taken, and brought unto Scipio : who instead of truffing them upon the sudden, for the safety of his own up, gave them free leave to view his Camp Kingdome; with four thousand Horse, and at pleasure, appointing one to conduct fix thousand Foot, he made all haste unto them up and down, and shew them whatfoever they defired. This done, He gave Soon after the beginning of these new them leave to depart; and sent them away troubles, the Carthaginian Embassadours that Sase unto their General. Hannibal under-

rage of his enemy : with whom on the fud- | ject. Tet ( faidhe ) mine own example man den he grew fo desirous to have an Enter peradventure suffice to teach thee moderation. view, and personal conference; and figoi For I am that same Hannibal, who after my fied so much unto him by a messenger sent victory at Canna, won the greatest part of of purpose. Of this motion the Roman liked Italy; and devised with my self, what well: and returned answer, that He would should do with your City of Rome, which I meet him shortly in a place convenient. The hoped verily to have taken. Once I brought next day Malanilla came with his Army: mine Army to your walls, as thou half line whom scipio taking with him, removed un- brought thine to ours of Carthage: but now to a Town callad Nedagara; near unto fee the change! I stand here intreating the which he fat down, in a place otherwise to grant us peace. This may serve as a docommodious, & close by a water that might cument of Fortunes instability. I have fourth opportunely serve his Camp. Thence he sent with thy Father Scipio; He was the first of the word unto the Carthaginian, That the time Roman Generals that ever met me in the and place did fitly ferve, if he had ought to say to him. Hannibal thereupon removed mould come, that I flould have such limits of mould come, that I flould have such limits of as now at the present, with his son. But this is the enemy; where he incamped well to his even one of Fortunes pageants, whereof he own good liking in all things else; excepting that his men were driven to take much the like in thy self; who knows how soon of ? Think pains, in fetching their water somewhat noon M. Atilius: If he would have bear und unio far off. Then was order taken for their such perswassons, as I now use to thee, he might meeting : and the two Generals each of have returned home to Rome an happy man. them with a troop of Horse, rode forth of and so maist thou do now, if any reasonable their Camps, till they came unto a piece of offer will give thee satisfaction. How sail ground; which was before well fearched thou? Canft thoube contented, that all Spain, for fear of ambush. There they will their Sicil, Sardinia, and whatsoever Islands else followers to stand off: and themselves with are scituate between Italy and Africk be each of them one Interpreter, encountred abandoned by the Carthaginians for ever, each other in the mid-way between their and left unto the Romans, to bear dominion Companies. They remained a while filent, therein ? Thou shalt have glory enough by effeviewing one the other with mutual admi- Ging thus much: and the Romans may well ration. Then began the Carthaginian, fa- be glad of fuch a bargain. Asforus, our own luting the Roman, to deliver his mind to this quiet shall henceforth give us contentment. effect : That it had been better both for And the same contentment of ours, shall make Carthage, and Rome, if they could have li- us faithfully observe the peace with you. But if mited and contained their ambition within thou thinkest all too little, I must desire thee the shores of Africk and of Italy ; for that to ponder well how great an hezzard thou the Countreys of Sicil and Spain, about must undergo for obtaining a very little which their fathers and themselves had more, than that which thou maist have with ftriven, were no fufficient recompence for fo out contention. It is now in thine own power many Fleets as had been loft, and of so much to lay hold upon good fortune, if it please thee: blood as had been shed, in making those stay but untill to morrow night, and thou maist costly purchases. But fince things past could take such fortune as it please the Gods. The iffut not be recalled : He faid, That it was meet of battel is uncertain, and many times befor them to consider, unto what extream guileth expectation. Men and steel we shall them now at length to make an end of their oblitinate contention, and pray the gods to endue them with greater wildom hereafter.

It is I Hannibal that now defire peace with rather fix his mind upon uncertain hopes, begun. than upon a contemplation of that mutadangers their own Cities had been exposed, each of us bring into the field; but of the viby the greedy defire of extending their Em- Gory neither of us have affurance. Letus therepires abroad; and that it was even time for fore without more ado make peace. And do not And to fuch peacable disposition, He affirm- thee, which I would never do, if I thought it ed that his own years, and long tryal of not expedient for my Country. And thinking Fortune, both good and evil, had made it expedient, I will alwaies maintain it, like him inclinable. But much he feared, that at I have maintained, unto my power, as long Scipio, by want of the like experience, might as the Gods did not envy me, the war by me

Hereunto Scipio made answer, That it was bility, whereto all humane affairs arefub- no ambitious desire of ruling in Sicil and you peace.

in Spain which had moved the Romans to first the Hastati, divided into their Manienter into this or the former War: but that ples, or small Battalions, with a reasonable the defence of the Mamertines, and after- distance between them: Not far behind these wards of the Saguntines, their confederates, followed the Principles, like wife divided; and had caused them to put on those arms; which so after them the Triarii. But herein Scipio the gods by the final issue of the Wars had altered a little the ordinary custome of the approved, and would approve to be most Romans: He placed not the Miniples of his just. As for the mutability of Fortune, he Principes opposite unto the void spaces faid, that he was not thereof ignorant; and between the Haffati, that so the Haffati, as that without any note of infolence or over-was ufual, might tall back between the weening, he might well refuse the conditi-Principes; but he placed them directly one ons offered. For was it not plain that all behind another, as it were, in File. This he thele Countreys, with which the Carthaginians did, because of the Elephants, whereof Hannow so willingly departed, were already won nibal had many. For of those beasts the from the Romans? If, faid he, these conditions danger was less whilest there was open way had been propounded whilest as yet ye detained to let them through. Therefore he took some part of Italy, they might peradventure such order, that when they had passed not have been rejected. But as the case now through the spaces between the first Battastands. I fee no reason why I should remit unto lions, they should not come upon the Prinjou any one piece of these my former demands cipes in Front. Unto his Pelites, or those to which the Carthaginians have yielded at of the light armature that were to begin ready, and thought me to be gracious in dea- the fight he gave direction, that when they ling so moderately. Rather I say, that the in- found themselves to be overcharged, either juries which they have done me fince, have made by the Enemies; or ( which was most to be them unworthy of obtaining peace upon (o) feared) by the Elephants, they should run friendly terms. But I cannot blame thee, Han- back through those lanes that were between nibal, though thou wouldst be glad to make thy the Maniples; and that those which were citizens understand, from how much of their swiftest, or otherwise best able, should conburden they are by thy means eased. Only thou tinue on their flight, until they were got must think, that in like fort it concerns me in behind all their own Army; thereby leavhonour not to let them be gainers or favers by ing room enough unto those that were the wrongs which they have done of late. Thou wounded, or cast behind, to lave themselves knowest well, that besides those offers which on the void ground, that was betwirt the thou here hast made, they were well contented first and second, or the second and third to restore unto us ransome free, all prisoners battels, without cloying up the way bethat they have of ours, to pay us five thousand tween the Maniples, which he defired to talents, to deliver up their Gallies, and to de- keep open. His Italian horse he placed in liver hoftages for affurance of fair dealing, the left wing, under C. Lelius. In the right And must they now be discharged of all this wing was Masanissa with his Numidians. He by their breach of truce, their spoiling of our himself riding up and down, exhorted his fleet, and their violating our Embassadours? men to do valiantly; using words, not ma-Not fo. But if they can be contented, besides all ny, but forcible. He bad them remember this, to make such amends as Ishall require, for what they had atchieved, since their comthese injuries newly done; then will I take ad- ing into Africk, He told them, that if this wice with my countel what answer to give you; day were theirs the War was at an end; and otherwise you may even prepare for war, and that their victory in this War, should make blame your own selves for that I have denied them Lords of all the World, for that afterwards, none would be found able to refift Hereupon they brake off: and returned them. On the contrary, if they were beaten, each to his own Camp, with no other news he asked them whither they would flie. than war; bidding their Souldiers prepare They were far from home, yea, and far for a battel, wherein should be decided the from their own standing Camp: neither quarrel between Rome and Carthage. The was there any place in Africk, that would next morning at break of day they issued give them shelter: if they fell into the Carinto the field: a notable march, and fuch as thaginians hands, they knew what to expect. hath very feldom been found: whether we And therefore there was none other way, regard the Generals, their Armies, the two but death or victory:unless they would live Cities that contended, or the great impor-like wretched slaves under most merciles tance of the battel at hand. Scipio ordered Enemies. In such necessity he said that they his men after the Roman manner: placing which confider themselves to be, and Hhhhhh have never been known to fail of getting That it was one P. Scipio, even the father of victory. Elephants, that were more thanfourfcore in Legions, which they yonder beheld, were Front of his Battle. Next behind these he for the most part of them, the very worst of made his Vant-guard all of Mercenaries, Li- the Roman Souldiers; even such, as for their gurians, Gaules, Ealcares and Moors. Then dastardly flight out of fundry battels, could followed his Battel; which was of Carthagi- no longer be trufted to bear Arms in their nians and Africans, more interested in the own Country. As for the rest, they were quarrel than were those Mercenaries; though young men, the sons of Cowards, and bred not so good souldiers: but to help ( if it up in the continual fear of those weapons, by might be) their want of courage, they had which their fathers were daily flain or chaly fent from King Philip. More than the space companions, upon whose vertue he meant and were the only men, in whom he reposed ble. any confidence. Opposite to Lelius, in his Such exhortations used the two Generals own right wing he bestowed the Carthagi- before the fight. When they drew near tonian Horse. Tychaus and the Numidians he gether, the Numidian horsemen on both sides placed in his left wing against Masanisa. He began to skirmish. The Trumpets and other was indeed far too weak for the Enemy in instruments of war, sounded to battel: and Horse, both in number and in goodness. For Hannibal commanded his Elephants to break Ticheus and Mezetullus had no more than upon the Romans. Of these Elephants (as fa. The Carthaginians also were no more, nor of the left wing, turned back for fear: and none other, than fuch as could be levied in ran upon their own Numidian horse; which the haste of a few dayes; and the remainder they affrighted and disordered. Masanisa have ferved well to supply all other defect.

take resolution answerable thereunto, at Canna. He willed them to remember. this man, whom they had first of all compel-Hannibal on the other fide placed his led to run away. He told them, that these with them four thousand Macedonians, late- sed. Wherefore he intreated these hisold of a furlong, behind these came his Rere- wholly to repose himself, that they would ward, confifting of those brave Souldiers this day strive to make good their honour, which had served him in his Italian wars; and to purchase the same of men invinci-

three thousand; and those not so well exer- they were alwayes an uncertain kind of cifed, as were the four thousand of Masanif- help) those that stood near unto the point of those, that had of late been often van- espying this, gave charge upon the same Nuquished, and accustomed to flye. But it was midians; and not fuffering them to rally no time for Hannibal, neither had he perhaps themselves, drave them quite out of the field. authority, to make these his companions The rest of those beasts made a great spoil alight and serve on foot, setting better men of the Roman Velites, whom they followed in their faddles. All that he could have done, into the spaces between the Maniples: but was to stay a little longer, and expect more without any harm to the Battalions themhelp. Had Vermina the fon of Syphax come felves; which gave them open way, accordthither, as he did in a few dayes after, with ingly as Scipio had well provided. Divers of fixteen thousand and upwards, the most of them receiving many wounds, and growing them Horse, the advantage of number might | therewith furious, could no longer be governed, but ran back upon the right point Yet fince the Lords of Carthage would brook of their own battel, and beyond that into no delay, Hannibal must be fain to comfort the open field. Herewithal they disordered himself with the hope that he reposed in the Carthaginian Horse, which were in that his old Italian fouldiers; whose vertue had wing: against whom they gave to Lelius the wrought greater wonders, when it was more same advantage that Masanisa had against strongly opposed. He encouraged therefore the Numidians; which he used in like fort. In his men, with words agreeable to their seve- the mean while, the battels of foot advancral conditions: promiting unto the Mercena- ed, and drew near together with a flow and ries bountiful rewards; threatning the Car- stately pace, till they were almost within a thaginians with inevitable fervitude if they weapons cast: at what time they gave a shout lost that day: but especially animating his and ran one at the other. The Mercensries old fellow-fouldiers, by the many victories for a time feemed both in audacity, and in which they had obtained against far greater | quickness to have the better of the Romans; numbers. He bad them to look upon the wounding many, and doing more harm, Enemies and make an estimate, whether than they took. But the Roman discipline afthey were any thing like so many, as that ter a while prevailed against the boistehuge Army which they had slaughtered rous violence of these untrained Barbarians.

Whereunto it helped not a little, that the when they had overcome the bad way, all in hattel of the Principes, following fomewhat one Front with the Haftati, and made of near after the Hastati, encouraged their fel- them his two Cornets. This done he advanlows & shewed themselvs ready, if need were, ced towards Hannibal: who entertained to relieve them. Contrariwife, the Merce- him after another manner, than ever he had naties, received no manner of help or com- been received in his life before. All the days fort, from those that should have seconded work till now, seemed to have been a matmany of the Carthaginians beaten down and charged the Hannibalians in the Rear; and flain, through their own indifcretion, by over-bearing them by meer violence, comtheir own Mercenaries. The Roman Haftati pelled them to fall to Rout. in like fort, fighting with desperate men in a in this battel there dyed of the Romans throng, had their hands so full of work, fifteen hundred and upwards: on the Carmeet with Hannibal, was covered with take such peace as could be gotten. Whereheaps of dead bodies and weapons; and so fore the Carthaginians not knowing what lippery with blood, that Scipio began to other course to take, resolved to send Emfland in great doubt, left the orders of his baffadors again, and try the favour of Battalions should be dissolved in passing that Scipio, whose Arms they could not now way. In such case, if he should sight with resist. that warlike Army, which he faw before them. For the new-levied Carthagians and ter of pastime, in regard of the sharp Con-Africans, when they faw their hired fouldi- flict, that was maintained between these noers give back, did also themselves retire. This table Souldiers. The Romans were encoucaused the Ligurians, Gaules, and the rest, raged by their having prevailed all the day to think themselves betrayed: whereupon before: they were also far the more in numthey enclined unto flight. The Carthaginian ber. But these old Souldiers of Hannibal were fresh; (and perhaps the better men.) fore, so as it resuled to give way unto the They fought with such obstinate resolution, Mercenaries for their fale retreat; and yet that no man gave back one foot; but rather withal forbore to make head against the chose to die on the ground whereon he Enemies, that pursued them. It was no time stood. So that, after a long time it was unto alk them what they meant by this : Fear certain which part had the worfe: unless it and Indignation caused those that were at may feem, that the Romans were beginning once chased by the Romans, and betrayed, as to shrink; forasmuch as the return of Ma- * Extent. they thought, by their own fellows, to turn faniffa and Lelius from pursuit of the Ene- Polything. their arms with an heedless fury against mies Horse, is said to have been most happy, both the one and the other. Thus were and in a needful time. These upon a sudden

that the Principes were fain to come up unto thaginian fide, above twenty thousand; bethem, and help to over-bear this great fides as many that were taken; of whom. Somedley of enemies, that were together by pater Captain of the Macedonians was one. the ears among themselves. In this place The singular skill that Hannibal shewed in was made a great flaughter, both of the this his last fight, is highly commended by Mercenaries and of the Carthaginians: which Polybine; and was acknowledged, as Livie hindering one another, could neither fight, reports, by scipio himself. But the Enemies nor eafily flye. Such of them as escaped, were too strong for him in Horse: and being ran towards Hannibal: who kept his ground, enjoyned, as he was, by the State of Carthage, and would not ftir one foot, to help or fave to take battel with fuch diladvantage, he these Run-awayes. He caused his men to could work no marvels. He saved himself bend their Pikes at those of his own fide, with a few horses and stayed not in his that would have rushed upon him: whom journey, till he came Adrumetum. Thence he he thereby compelled to turn aside beyond was sent for to Carthage; from which he his battel, and fave themselves in the open had been absent six and thirty years. At his field. The ground over which, the Ro- coming into the Senate, He faid plainly, mans were now to march, ere they could That there was none other way left, than to Scipio having spoiled the Enemies Camp, him, remaining yet entire, and without returned back to Utica : where he found fear expecting him; He might be well affured | P. Lentulus newly arrived, with fifty Galto receive a notable overthrow. He caused lies and an hundred Ships of burden. With therefore the Hallati to make a stand there this Fleet, and that which he had before, He where they were, opposite to the main bat- thought it best to make towards Carthage: tel of the Hannibalians. Then drawing up rather of purpose to terrifie the City, than his Principes and Triaris, he placed them, with any hope to take it. His Legions he committed unto Cn. Offavius; whom he wil- | there. But a Dictator was chosen of purpose. led to meet him there by land. Then fending Lelius away to Rome with news of the victory , fet fail from Utica towards Carthage. He was encountred on the way by ten Em of Africk: and was therein so earnest, that baffadors from the City: who bearing up though neither the Senate, nor People, would with the Admiral Gally, began to use the grant him his desire; yet he needs would be pittiful gesture of suppliants. But they re- going, procuring only leave of the Senate. ceived none other answer, than that they that be being Consul might join with Scipio, should meet him at Tunes, where he would give them audience. So rowing along before the City, and viewing it more in bra- things in a readiness for the journy, wherein very than with meaning to attempt it; he re- no man cared to further him, Winter came turned back to Utica, and called back Offa- on, and he was only toft at Sea with foul wiss thither, with whom in person he set for- weather; first upon the Coast of Hetruria. wards to Tunes. As they were in their journy and afterwards by Sardinia; where his of more horse than foot, to the succour of ful news to Rome, of the victory obtained

Hahhhhh 2

to restrain the ambition of this Confai Servilius. After him followed Tiberius Clau. diss, who made fuit for the same Province were it with no more than equal authority. But ere he could have his Fleet, and all thither, they heard the news, that Vermina Consulship expired, and so he returned the fon of Syphax, was coming with an Army home a private man. Then came the joythose that were already vanquished. This against Hannibal, and that the war was now Vermina seems to have been both careless of even at an end. Yet was Lentulus the new getting intelligence how things paffed, and Conful so passionate, in desiring Africk for his gry desective in all other duties requisite in Province, that he said he would suffer nothe Commander of an Army. Part of the thing to pass in the Senate, until he had first Roman foot, with all their power of Horfe, his will. Much ado there was about this; and was fent against him: which did not only after many contentions, both in the Senate. beat him, but so compass him in, that he and before the people, at last it was ordehardly escaped himself with a few; leaving red, That if peace were granted, it should fifteen thousand of his followers dead be- be granted by scipio; if the war continued, hind him, and twelve hundred taken prifo- Scipio should have command therein by ners. If this good company had been with Land, and the Conful at Sea. The ambition Hannibal at Nadagara, they should have been of these men, caused Scipio to give the more far better conducted, and might well have favourable answer unto the Carthaginien changed the Fortune of the day; which the Embassadors. He willed them to consider Carthaginian lost by default of Horse. But what they had deserved; and in regard there-God had otherwise determined. It is not to of, to think themselves well dealt withal; in be doubted, that this victory, though it were that he was contented to leave unto them no great access unto the former; yet served their liberty and their own Laws, without well to daunt the Carthaginians, and imprint appointing any Governour over them, or in them the greater fear of Scipio. When Garrison to hold them in subjection; leaving he came to Tunes, there met him thirty Em- also unto them their possessions in Africk, baffadors from Carthage: whose behaviour, such as they were at the beginning of this though it was more pittiful than it had been war. As touching the relt he was at a point, before, yet procured it less commiseration, that, before he either granted them peace or by reason of their late false dealing, after truce, they should make satisfaction for they had in like fort humbled themselves. wrongs which they had done, whilst the late Nevertheless it was considered, what a long | Treaty was in dependance. Hereunto if they and laborious work it would prove, to be would yield, then required, He, That immed fiege the mighty City of Carthage. And par- ately they should deliver up to the Romans at ticularly, Scipio stood in great doubt, lest prisoners, fugitives, and renegade's, that they had the honour of this war, if it were protracted, of theirs: likewife all their Gallies, excepting tent should be taken out of his hands, and given and all their Elephants. That they should make to one of the Confuls. Cn. Servilius Capio, that | no war at all thenceforth out of Africk, nel-Conful who had charge of the war against ther jet within Africk, without licence of Hannibal at such time as he departed out of the Romans : That the Country; , Towns , Italy: was bold to pass over into the sile of goods whatsever, belonging any miss unto still (as it were in chase of Hannibal by him Masanisa, or to any of his dreessers, which thence to have proceeded into Africk, and taken from Scipio the command of the Army for the Roman Army, and mages for their scipio the command of the Army for the Roman Army, and mages for their scipio the command of the Army for the Roman Army, and mages for their sciences.

Auxiliaries, during the time of Truce, untill company of Scipio his Embassadours, who the Peace were fully concluded; that they related unto the Senate and People thefe fould pay ten thousand Talents of Silver, in joyful news. About the same time arrived the term of fifty years, by two hundred Ta- at Rome Embaffadours from Philip King of lints a year, and that for observance of Con- Macedon: who, together with the Carthaditions, they should give an hundred hostages : ginians, were fain to wait a while for audisuch as Scipio would choose, being none of ence, till the election of new Confuls, then in them under fourteen years of age, nor above hand was finished; and order taken, for the shirty.

ing the Peace: and perswaded them to accept it, as wanting ability to defend themvice they resolved to yield unto the Conditions propounded by Scipio: to whom they paid out of hand five and twenty thouof damages, and injuries by them done to his Fleet and Embassadours. Scipio granted them Truce for three moneths, in which time they might negotiate with the State of Rome, about confirmation of the League. But herewithal he gave injunction, that Embassadours any whither else, nor yet difand what their errand was.

At this time Hanne, and they of his Faction, were become wife and honourable men,

Provinces of them, and the new Prætors. With these conditions the Embassadours Then were the Macedonian Embassadours returned home, and reported them unto called into the Senate: who first answering the City. They were very unpleasing; and unto some points, wherein the Romans had therefore one Gefco ftood up to speak against lately signified unto their King . that they them; and exhorted the people, who gave found themselves grieved; returned the good attention, that they should not conde- blame upon those Greeks themselves. that frend unto fuch intolerable demands. But had made their complaint at Rome. Then ac-Hannibal perceiving this, and noting withal cufed they Marcus Aurelius: who being one what favourable audience was given to this of the three Embassadours, that had lately vain Oratour, by the unquiet, yet unwar- been fent from Rome unto King Philip, tarried like multitude, was bold to pull him down in Greece behind his fellows, and there levyfrom his standing, by plain force. Hereat ing men, made war upon the King, without all the people murmured, as if their com- any regard at all of the league, that was mon liberty were too much wronged, by between him and the Romans. Further they fuch infolence of this presumptuous Cap- desired of the Senate, That one Sopater, a tain. Which Hannibal perceiving, rose up Macedonian Gentleman, with other of their and spake unto them, saying; That they Countrymen, that had lately served Hanniought to pardon him, if he had done other- bal for Pay; and being taken prisoners in wile than the customes of the City would Africk, were kept in bonds by Scipio, might allow; forasmuch as he had been thence be released and delivered unto them. Unto absent ever since he was a Boy of nine years all this M. Farius, whom Aurelius had sent old, until he was now a man of five and to Rome for that purpose, made a sharp anforty. Having thus excused himself of the swer. He said, that the Greeks, which were diforder, he discoursed unto them concern- confederate with Rome, enduring so many injuries at the hands of Philip, that M. Aureline was fain to stay behind, to help them as he selves, had the Demands of the Enemy been might; which else were like to be brought yet more rigorous. Finally , upon good ad- under the Kings subjection. As for Sopater, he affirmed him to be one of the Kings Counsel, and very inward with him: one that ferved not for money, but carryed mofand pounds weight in Silver, in recompence ney with him, and four thousand men, fent from the King to the aid of Hannibal. About these points , when the Macedonian Embasfadours could make unto the Senate no good . answer, they were willed to return, and tell their Master, That war he sought, and war he should find, if he proceeded as he had they should neither in the mean while send begun. For in two main points He had broken the League, that was between him and missany Embassadours to them sent, without the Romans: first, in that he had wronged first making him acquainted what they were, their Confederates; and secondly, in that he had aided their Enemies against them, with men and money.

These quarrels with Philip, that promised by the mileries whereinto Carthage was to open a way into Greece and the Eastern fallen, through their malicious counsels. Af Countreys, helped well the Carthaginian drabal, surnamed the Kid, a venerable man, Embassadours in their solicitation of Peace. and a great friend of Hanno, was chief of They appeared a very reverend company, the Embassages which they fent to Rome for when they entred into the Senate: and Afobtaining peace. They went thither in drubal above the rest was much respected, as mans from necessity of fending Embassadours to Carthage, upon the like errand. He in commission. liberally granted, that the justice of the quarrel had been wholly on the Romans fide; was given, and accepted, without any confaving, that it was the fault of some violent troversie or disputation. The Prisoners, Fnmen, through which the Peace was broken. gitives, and Renegado's, were delivered up Yet could be not altogether excuse the City, to scipio: likewise the Gallies, and the Elethat had been too vehement in the profe- phants. Scipio took more vengeance upon cution of bad counsel. But if Hanno, and the Renegado's than upon the Fugitives: himself might have had their wills, the Car- and upon those of the Romans, than upon shaginians, even at the best of their Fortune, the Latines, or other Italians. The Latines he should have granted the peace, which they beheaded: the Romans he crucified. About now desired. Herewithal he commended the the first payment of their money, the Carthamoderation of the Romans, as no small ar- ginians were somewhat troubled. For gument of their valour; by which alwayes though perhaps their common Treasurv they had been victorious. To the same ef- could have spared two hundred Talents for fect spake the rest of the Embassadours: all the present; yet since the pension was annuof them entreating to have the peace ratifi- al , and to continue fifty years : it was ed ; though some with more lamentable thought meet to lay the burden upon the words than others, according to the divers | Citizens. At the collection of the fum there ty of their stile. They had patience enough was piteous lamentation, as if now the Roto endure such reproof of Perjury, as they man yoke had begun to pinch them; so as themselves might have laid upon the Ro | many, even of the Senators, could not formans, if their diligence and fortune had bear weeping. Contrariwise, Hannibal could been fuch as the Romans was. Among the not refrain from laughter. For which, when rest, when one of the Senators demanded, he was checked by Afdrubal Hedne, and told, by what gods they would swear to keep the That it worst of all beseemed him to laugh, peace hereafter : Asdrubal made answer ; fince he had been the cause why all others especial friends; of whom they gave in wri- the remedy. ting almost two hundred names. Whereupon the Senate ordained, that two hundred | ced Masanissa, and magnified him in presence of those Prisoners, which the Embassadours of the Army, with high commendations not would choose, should be sent over into undeservedly. To him also he configned Africk, and be freely reftored to liberty by over those towns of King Syphax, which the Romans at that present held; wherein,

one, whose good offices had kept the Ro- | company of the ten Delegates, that were appointed by the Senate to joyn with Scrpie

At their coming into Africk, the peace Even by the same gods, that are so severe unto did weep; He answered, That laughter did not alwayes proceed from joy; but sometimes Lentulus the Conful, interpoling the au-from extreamity of indignation: Tet, faid He, thority of his office, would have hindred the My laughter is more feafonable, and left abfurd, Senate from proceeding unto conclusion of than your tears. For ye should have wept when peace; for that hereby he was like to lose ye gave up your Ships and Elephants, and the honour, which he purposed to get by when ye bound your own hands from the use of making war in Africk. But the matter was arms, without the good leave of the Romans propounded unto the people, in whom relt- first obtained. This miserable condition keeps w ed the Soveraign Command of Rome; and under, and holds us in affared fervitude. But by them referred wholly unto the pleasure of these matters ye had no feeling. Now, when of the Senate. So it was decreed, That Scipio, a listle money is wrang out of your private with ten Delegates, sent unto him from purses, ye have thereof some sense. God grant Rome of purpole, should make a League with that the time come not hereafter, wherein je the Carthaginians, upon such Conditions as | shall acknowledge, that it was the very hall feemed belt: which were none other, than part of your misery for which ye have shed these the same which he had already propound- tears. Thus discoursed Hannibal unto those, ed. For this favour the Carthaginian Embaf- who tasting the bitter fruits of their own fadours humbly thanked the Senate; and malicious counsel, repented when it was too craved licence, that they might visit their late; and instead of cursing their own dif-Countrymen, which were prisoners in Rome: orders, which had bred this grievous diafterwards, that they might ransome and sease, accused the Physician, whose noble carry home with them some that were their endevours had been employed in procuring scipil being to take leave of Africk produ-So they took leave, and returned home, in to fay truth, he gave him but his due; and of the Romans, to infult over the calamities African.

that which otherwise he knew not well how of mighty Princes, by leading them contuto bestow. But the love of the Romans, and meliously in Triumph; yea, though they friendship of Scipio, was fully answerable, were such, as had alwayes made fair and now and hereafter, to all the defervings of courteous war. But hereof we shall have this Numidian King. About Carthage there better example ere the same age pass. It rested no more to be done. Wherefore the was neither the person of Syphax, nor any Ramans lembarqued themselves for Sicil: other glory of the spectacle, that so much where when they arrived at Lylibaum, Scipio beautified the Triumph of Scipio; as did the with some part of his Army took his way contemplation of that grievous war past. home to Rome by Land; and fent the rest whereof the Romans had been in a manner Free m. ? hefore him thither by Sea. His journey without hope that ever they should fet Italy free. Polib. ib. through Italy was no less glorious than any This made them look chearfully upon the triumph: all the people thronging out of Author of fo great a conversion; and filled the Towns and Villages, to do him honour them with more joy, than they well could as he passed along. He entred the City moderate. Wherefore they gave to Scipio the in Triumph : neither was there ever be- Title of the African: stiling him by the name fore, or after, any triumph celebrated with of that Province, which he had subdued. so great joy of the people, as was this This honourable kind of surname, taken of Scipio; though, in bravery of the pomp, from a conquered Province, grew afterthere were others in time shortly follow- wards more common, and was usurped by ing, that exceeded this. Whether syphax men of less defert : especially by many of were carried through the City in this Tri- the Cafars, who fometimes arrogated unto umph, and dying foon after in prison; or themselves the title of Countreys, wherewhether he were dead a while before: it in they had performed little or nothing; cannot be affirmed. Thus much may be as if such glorious Attributes could have avowed, that it was a barbarous custome made them like in vertue unto Scipio the

CHAP. IV.

Of Philip the father of Perseus King of Macedon; his first Asts and War with the Romans, by whom he was subdued.

How the Romans grew acquainted in the East-Countreys, and descrous of Warthere. The beginning of many Princes, with great Wars, at one time. The Ætolians over-run Peloponuefus. Philip and his Associates make War against the Etolians. Alteration of the state in Sparta. The Etolians invade Greece and Macedon, and are invaded at home by Philip.

the great similitude found in observed in the change of Empires, before worldly events, the limitation those times whereof we now write, how the of matter hath been assigned as Assyrians or Chaldeans invaded the kingdom a probable cause. For since Na- of the Medes, with two hundred thousand ture is confined unto a subject that is Foot, and threescore thousand Horse; but not unbounded; the works of Nature failing in their intended conquest, they bemaft needs be finite, and many of them re- came subject within a while themselves unto semble one the other. Now in those acti- the Medes and Persians. In like manner ons, that feem to have their whole depen- Dariss, and after him Xerxes, fell upon the dance upon the will of man, we are less to Greeks with such number of men, as might wonder, if we find less variety: fince it is no have seemed refistless. But after that the Pergreat portion of things which are obnoxi- fians were beaten home again, their Emous unto humane power; and fince they pire was never fecure of the Greek: who at an the same affections, by which the wills all times of leisure from intestine War, of fundry men are over-ruled, in managing devised upon that conquest thereof, which the affairs of our daily life. It may be finally they made under the great Alexander. mans from necessity of fending Embassa- appointed by the Senate to joyn with Scapie dours to Carthage, upon the like errand. He in commission. Yet could he not altogether excuse the City, to scipio : likewise the Gallies, and the Elethose that violate their Leagues.

especial friends; of whom they gave in writthe remedy. ting almost two hundred names. Whereupon the Senate ordained, that two hundred ced Masanissa, and magnified him in presence of those Prisoners, which the Embassadours of the Army, with high commendations not would choose, should be sent over into undeservedly. To him also he configned Africk, and be freely restored to liberty by over those towns of King Syphan, which Scipio, when the peace was fully concluded. the Romans at that present held; wherein,

one, whose good offices had kept the Ro-| company of the ten Delegates, that were

liberally granted, that the justice of the At their coming into Africk, the peace quarrel had been wholly on the Romans fide; was given, and accepted, without any confaving, that it was the fault of some violent proverse or disputation. The Prisoners, Fumen, through which the Peace was broken. gitives, and Renegado's, were delivered up that had been too vehement in the profe- phants. Scipio took more vengeance upon cution of bad counsel. But if Hanno, and the Renegado's than upon the Fugitives; himself might have had their wills, the Car- and upon those of the Romans, than upon shaginians, even at the best of their Fortune, the Latines, or other Italians. The Latines he should have granted the peace, which they beheaded: the Romans he crucified. About now desired. Herewithal he commended the the first payment of their money, the Carthamoderation of the Romans, as no small ar- ginians were somewhat troubled. For gument of their valour; by which alwayes though perhaps their common Treasurv they had been victorious. To the same ef- could have spared two hundred Talents for fect spake the rest of the Embassadours: all the present; yet since the pension was annuof them entreating to have the peace ratifi- al , and to continue fifty years : it was ed; though some with more lamentable thought meet to lay the burden upon the words than others, according to the divers | Citizens. At the collection of the sum there ev of their stile. They had patience enough was piteous lamentation, as if now the Roto endure such reproof of Perjury, as they man yoke had begun to pinch them; so as themselves might have laid upon the Ro many, even of the Senators, could not formans, if their diligence and fortune had bear weeping. Contrariwise, Hannibal could been such as the Romans was. Among the not refrain from laughter. For which, when zeft, when one of the Senators demanded, he was checked by Afdrubal Hadas, and told, by what gods they would swear to keep the That it worst of all beseemed him to laugh, peace hereafter : Afdrubal made answer ; fince he had been the cause why all others Even by the Same gods, that are fo severe unto did weep; He answered, That laughter did not alwayes proceed from joy ; but sometimes Lentulus the Conful, interpoling the au- from extreamity of indignation : Tet, faid He, thority of his office, would have hindred the My laughter is more seasonable, and less absurd, Senate from proceeding unto conclusion of than your tears. For ye should have meet when peace; for that hereby he was like to lose ye gave up your Ships and Elephants, and the honour, which he purposed to get by when ye bound your own hands from the use of making war in Africk. But the matter was arms, without the good leave of the Romans propounded unto the people, in whom rest- first obtained. This miserable condition keeps w ed the Soveraign Command of Rome; and under, and holds us in assured servitude. But by them referred wholly unto the pleasure of these matters ye had no feeling. Now, when of the Senate. So it was decreed, That Scipio, a listle money is wrung out of your private with ten Delegates, fent unto him from purses, ye have thereof some fense. God grant Rome of purpole, should make a League with that the time come not hereafter, wherein ye the Carthaginians, upon such Conditions as shall acknowledge, that it was the very leaft feemed best : which were none other , than part of your mifery for which ye have fed thefe the same which he had already propound- lears. Thus discoursed Hannibal unto those, ed. For this favour the Carthsginian Embaf- who tafting the bitter fruits of their own fadours humbly thanked the Senate; and malicious counsel, repented when it was too craved licence, that they might visit their late; and instead of cursing their own dis-Countrymen, which were prisoners in Rome: orders, which had bred this grievous diafterwards, that they might ransome and sease, accused the Physician, whose noble carry home with them some that were their endevours had been employed in procuring Scipil being to take leave of Africk produ-So they took leave, and returned home, in to fay truth, he gave him but his due; and to bestow. But the love of the Romans, and meliously in Triumph; year though they friendship of Scipio, was fully answerable, were such, as had alwayes made fair and now and hereafter, to all the defervings of courteous war. But hereof we shall have this Numidian King. About Carthage there better example ere the same age pass. It rested no more to be done. Wherefore the was neither the person of syphax, nor any Romans lembarqued themselves for Sicil: other glory of the spectacle, that so much where when they arrived at Lylibaum, Scipio beautified the Triumph of Scipio; as did the with some part of his Army took his way contemplation of that grievous war past. home to Rome by Land; and fent the reft whereof the Romans had been in a manner same of before him thither by Sea. His journey without hope that ever they flould fet Italy free, Pople fee through Italy was no less glorious than any This made them look chearfully upon the triumph: all the people thronging out of Author of so great a conversion; and filled the Towns and Villages, to do him honour them with more joy, than they well could of the Romans, to infult over the calamities African.

that which otherwise he knew not well how of mighty Princes, by leading them contu-

as he passed along. He entred the City moderate. Wherefore they gave to Scipio the in Triumph: neither was there ever be- Title of the African: stiling him by the name fore, or after, any triumph celebrated with of that Province, which he had subdued. so great joy of the people, as was this This honourable kind of surname, taken of Scipio; though, in bravery of the pomp, from a conquered Province, grew afterthere were others in time shortly follow- wards more common, and was usurped by ing, that exceeded this. Whether syphax men of less desert : especially by many of were carried through the City in this Tri- the Cafars, who fometimes arrogated unto umph, and dying foon after in prison; or themselves the title of Countreys, wherewhether he were dead a while before: it in they had performed little or nothing; cannot be affirmed. Thus much may be as if fuch glorious Attributes could have avowed, that it was a barbarous custome made them like in vertue unto Scipio the

CHAP. IV.

Of Philip the father of Perseus King of Macedon; his first Acts and War with the Romans, by whom he was subdued.

«. I.

How the Romans grew acquainted in the East-Countreys, and desirous of Warthere. The beginning of many Princes, with great Wars, at one time. The Etolians over run Peloponnefus. Philip and bis Affociates make War against the Ætolians. Alteration of the state in Sparta. The Etolians invade Greece and Macedon, and are invaded at home by Philip.

ture is confined unto a subject that is Foot, and threescore thousand Horse; but not unbounded; the works of Nature failing in their intended conquest, they bemust needs be finite, and many of them re- came subject within a while themselves unto semble one the other. Now in those acti- the Medes and Persians. In like manner ons, that feem to have their whole depen- Darius, and after him Xerxes, fell upon the dance upon the will of man, we are less to Greeks with such number of men, as might wonder, if we find less variety : fince it is no have seemed resistles. But after that the Pergreat portion of things which are obnoxi- lians were beaten home again, their Emous unto humane power; and fince they pire was never secure of the Greeks: who at are the same affections, by which the wills all times of leisure from intestine War, of fundry men are over-ruled, in managing devised upon that conquest thereof, which

F the great similitude found in jobserved in the change of Empires, before worldly events, the limitation those times whereof we now write, how the of matter hath been affigued as Affyrians or Chaldeans invaded the kingdom a probable cause. For since Na- of the Medes, with two hundred thousand the affairs of our daily life. It may be finally they made under the great Alexander.

If Nabuchodonofor with his rough old Soul- | Greece : all the reft, this done, would foldiers, had undetaken the Medes: or Cyrus low it felf. How to deal with the Greeks with his well-trained Army, had made at- Philip and Alexander had shewed a way. tempt upon Greece; the iffue might, in hu- which, or perhaps a better, they might learn mane reason, have been far different. Yet by getting more acquaintance with the Niwould it then have been expedient for tion. them, to employ the travel and vertue of their men, rather than the greatness of their ended, which followed soon after the wars names against those people; that were no of Pyrrhus and of the Tarentines : then less valiant though less renowned than their were the Romans at good leasure to hearken own. For the menacing words uled by Grus, after news in Greece; and to entertain any and some small displeasures done to the good occasion, that should be on that side Greeks (in which kind it may be, that Na- presented. They had also then a strong buchodonofer likewife offended the Medes Fleet: and were become, though not otherand Perfians ) were not fo available to vi- wife very fkilfull Marriners; yet good fightctory, as to draw on revenge in the future. ersat Sea. So it fell out as happily as could Great Kingdoms, when they decay in be wished, that the Illyrian Queen Tenta strength, suffer as did the old Lion, for the made at the same time cruel war upon the oppression done in his youth ; being pinch- Greeks: wasting their Countrey, and facked by the Wolf, gored by the Bull, yea and ing their Towns, only because they were kickt by the Als. But Princes are often car- unable to refift, though they had done her rved away from reason, by mit-understand- none offence Into this quarrelaif the Romans ing the language of Fame; and despising the were desirous to enter; the Queen was not were not possible that their own glory with Her, was, in their own opinion, a mat-King of Sales pre-But when the Romans by their victory space of 4. years, new Kings began to reign tended in against Pyerhus had found their own vertue in the most of all Countreys known; and 3.

When therefore the first Punick war was vertue that makes little noise, adventure flow to give them cause. And their happy ac-lies to provoke it against themselves; as if it complishing of that war, which they made should be foiled by any of less-noted excel- ter not unworthy to make their Patronage lence. Against the same stone, whereat Xerxes, to be defired by the Greeks. But no such and before him (as I take it) Evilmerodach, thing hapned: though they fent Embassahad frumbled, Pyrrhus the Epirot had dasht dours, as it were to offer themselves; by fighis foot. He was not indeed the King of all nifying, that for the love of Greece they had Greece though most of mark, and a better undertaken this Illyrian war. Thus began Souldier than any other Greekish King, when the first acquaintance betwirt the Greeks he entred into the war against the Romans. and Romans: which afterwards encreased This war he undertook as it were for his very haltily, through the indifcretion of minds fake; having received no injury; but King Philip the Macedonian; whose business hoping by the glory of his name, and of the with them, now being the subject of our sto-Greeks that ferved under him, to prevail Irv, it is meet that we should relate (though fo easily against the barbarous Romans, that Comewhat briefly )the beginning of his reign, they should only serve as a step to his fur- and his first Actions. It was like to prove ther intended conqueits, of sici and Africk. busic time in the world, when, within the vincible to be of richer metal, than was the more of them young boyes, in 3. of the greatest ing beaten thining valour of the Greeksthan did all the kingdoms. This hapned from the third year bravery of the Epirot (his Elephants, and of the hundred thirty ninth Olympiad, unto what foever elie had ferved to make him ter- the third of the Olympiad following. For rible) serve only to make the Romans, in in this time died Seleucus Cerannus King of time following, to think more highly of Asia and Syria, in whose room succeeded his themselves. * For fince they had overcome brother Antiochus, afterwards called the broken the the best Warrior in Greece, even Him, that, Great. Ptolomy Philopater succeeded in the being thus beaten by them, could in a year Kingdom of Egypt unto his father Energeter. after make himtelf Lord of Greece and Ma. And Philip the fon of Demetrin being 16.01 cedon: what should hinder them from the 17. years old, received the Kingdom of Maconquest of all those unwarlike Provinces, cedon, together with the Patronage of the which in compass of 12. years a Macedoni- Achaans and most of the Greeks, by the dean King of late memory had won? Cer- cease of his Uncle Antigonus Doson, that was any of his tainly there was hereunto requisite no called the Tutor or Protector. About the r. parati- more: than to bring to their own devotion fametime also was the like change in capthat time. by fome good means, the whole Country of padocia, Lacedamon, and the Countreys about reign in Cappadocia. Lycurgus found means along with their looty, through a part of to make himself King over the Lacedamoni- the Country, wherein he might very easily ans, whose Common-weal, fince the flight have districted hem; and afterwards prefof Cleamener, had continued in a manner fed them to cear, when they had recovered headless; and Acheus, a kiniman of Antiochus, ground of Avantage, that they easily debut a Rebel unto him, occupied the Regions feated at his Army. So they departed home near unto Mount Taurus, and kept a while rich, and well animated to return again. the State of a mighty King. Lastly, in the As for the Achrans, they got hereby onsecond and third years of the one hundred by the friendship of the Alessenians: with and fortieth Olympiadit was, that open war whom, by licence of King Philip, they made brake out between Rome and Carthage; Confederacy. Shortly after, the Atolians and that Hannibal began his great Invasion invaded Teleponnosus again: having no more upon Italy. Those troubles of the Western to do, than to pass over the narrow world, which were indeed the greatest, Straights of the Corinthian Bay, called we have already followed unto an end: now the Gulph of Lepanto, wherethey might Of Antiochus, Ptolomy, and the rest; we shall land in the Countrey of the Eleans. There speak hereafter, when the Romans find joyned with them, in this their second inva-

them out.

of the Acheans, and many other his depen- of war unto the Coast of Greece: made bold dants. That Countrey, having freed it felf to feek adventures again, and did great mifby the help of Antigonus from the danger chief. Demetrius Pharius, a creature of the (accounted great) of an easie subjection unto Romans, commanded a part of these Illyri-Cleamenes; was now become no less obnoxi- ans: who shortly repented him of this his ous to the Macedonian, than it should have voyage; which caused him to lose his Kingbeen to the Spartan; and therewithal it lay dom, as is shewed before. But this Demetrius open unto the violence of the Atolians, who went another way, and fell upon the Islands despited even the Macedonian Kings, that of the Cyclades in the Agean fea: whence rewere Patrons thereof. The Atolians were no turning, he did some good offices for King men to be idle; nor were much addicted un- Philip, or his friends. The rest of the Illyrians to any other Art than war. Therefore want- under scerdilaidas, or scerdileius, having ing employment, they fell upon the Meffeni- gotten what they could elsewhere by roving ans that were their own Clients, and (except- at Sea, accompanied the Atolians into Peloing the Eleans, that were anciently of their ponnessis: who made greater havock in the consanguinity) the only good friends which Country now, than in their former Expedithey had at the present in Peloponnes ws. Their tion, and returned home without finding invasion was no less unexpected, than it was any resistance. unjust: whereby with greater case they made spoil of the Countrey; finding none unto Philip, when he came to Corinth. And prepared to make resistance. The Acheans, because men were desirous to satisfie themwere called by the Meffenians to help: which felves with some speedy revenge: there they did the more willingly: because the were that urged to have some grievous pu-Atolians pasting without leave through nishment laid upon the Lacedamonians; who their Territory, had (as was their manner) were thought underhand to have favoured done what harm they lifted. Old Aratus the Etolians, in meer despight of the Acheans could hardly abide these Etolians; as both and Macedonians; by whom themselves had knowing well their nature, and remembring lately been subdued. It is true, that the the injuries, wherewith most ingratefully Lacedamonians had been so affected: and they had requited no small benefits done to (which was worse) at the arrival of Philip, him) for any other service, than leading of hoped soon to appeale, and meant always to

Mount Turrus. For Ariarathes then began his Army. He fuffered them to pass quietly tion, a great number of the Illyrians: who rhilip, foon after the beginning of his neglecting that Condition imposed upon reign, came into Peloponnesus; greatly defired them by the Romans, of setting out no Ships

Of these things great complaint was made them by the Acheans. He was therefore fo they flew such friends of his , as having hasty to fall upon this their Army, that he checked their inclination, seemed likely to could hardly endure toftay few dayes until appeach them of the intended rebellion. the time of his own Office came ; being Neither durft they well commit themselves chosen Prætor of the Acheans for the year to judgement: but intreated the King, that following. But his anger was greater than his courage: and he shewed himself a narmy: since their Town was lately much man fitter (as hath been already noted of disquieted with civil discord, which they

greateft ver the British Seas, invited us to Soal gand et that Sprin ds : a hered gether, remain at his devoter. Philip was eafily a needless point, and defired to be held exfatisfied with the state of that he (or rather cufed, until Philip (of whole meaning they old Arotus, who they what w governed him) needed not to have made any doubt) should did wit-wed stand the Law I warms : but first proclaim the war. The Meffenians, for for that a greater work was soloned which whose cause the war was undertaken, exought not to be interrupted. There mer at Co cufed themselves, by reason of a Town which rinth in presence of the king, the for fulla- the Ætolians held upon their borders, and dors of the Admans, Beolines, . Fre to, and faid, that they durft not be over-bold, until Mearmanians: all complaining upon the #to- that bridle were taken out of their mouths. lians : and defiring to have War decreed As for the Lacedemonians, the chief of them against them, be common aftent. Philip fem studied only, how to manage the treason his letters unto the Atolians, requiring them for which their City had been so lately parto make ready their answer in some conve- doned; and therefore disaiffed the Embafnient time: if they could alledge any thing sadors of the Confederates, without any in excuse of that which they had done. They answer at all. They had three years togereturned word, that a Diet thould be holden ther continued subject aganst their wils to at Rhium for that purpose: whither if it plea- the Macedonians, expecting still when Cleafed him to come, or fend, he should be well menes should return out of Egypt to reign informed of them and their whole meaning. over them again, and maintain, as he was The King prepared to have been there at wont, the honour of their City. In this the day. But when the Atolians understood regard they chose not any Kings, but were this for certain, they adjourned the Councel contented with the rule of Ephori. Of these unto afurther time: faying, That fuch weigh-try matters ought not to be handled, fave in the great Parliament of all Atolia. This trick of Law notwithstanding, open War was proclaimed against them. And they, asit counsels: being perhaps a little moved with were, to shew how well they had deserved respect of the benefit, which might redound it, made election of scopus to be their unto themselves, by adhering firmly to those Prætor, that was Author of these invasions which at the present bore rule over them. made on Peloponnes and the only man, in Others, and those the greater part were still a fort, upon whom they must have laid the devising, how to make all ready for Cleomeblame of these actions, if they would have ner against his return; and sought to joyn shifted it from the publick.

CHAP. IV.

he prepared builly for the War against the nian faction had the more authority, and year following. He also assayed the Illyrian, durst more freely speak their minds: but the Scerdilaidas, with fair words and promises; contrary side was the more passionate, and whom he easily won from the Etolian side, spared not by murders or any other violent forasmuch as the Etolians had couzened courses, to set forward their desire. Neither him of his share, when he was partner with did it suffice, that about these times there them in their late robberies. In like fort the came certain report of Cleomenes his death. Acheans, who had first of all others pro- For it was the liberty and honour of sparta, claimed the War in their own Countrey, which these intended; fancying unto themfent unto the Acarnanians, Epirots, Meffeni- selves the glory of their Ancestors in such ans, and Lacedamonians: requesting them Ages past, as it were not like to come againforthwith to declare themselves, and to de- Cleomenes was, they knew, the most able man with the Ætolians, which were the most like-After this, Philip went into Macedon, where ly to give him strong affistance. The Macedonounce war unto the Atolians; without flay- to restore them unto their greatnes & lustre; ing (as it were) to await the event. Hereun- which once he had in a manner performed: to they received divers answers according But since he was dead, and that, without to the qualities of those with whom they injury to his well-deserving vertue, they dealt. The Acarnanians, a free-hearted and might proceed to the election of new Kings: valiant, though a small Nation, and borde- Kings they would have, and those of the ring upon the Atolians, of whom they stood race of Hercules, as in former times; for that in continual danger; said, that they could without such helps, they must continue lit-not honestly refuse to shew their faithful the better than subjects unto the Macedonimeaning in that War, which was concluded an, and far lefs by him respected, than were by general affent. The Epirots that were the Acheans. Thus were they transported more mighty, were nevertheless more cun- by contemplation of their old Nobility and ning and referved: so that they flood upon fame. Some of the most working spirits among them, procured the Ætolians to fend; they first made preparation. Philip was not peace. There he did great spoil, and won ans, that were consederate with Philip and divers Towns; whereof two he retained, the Achaans. and annexed unto the State of Lacedemon.

their Confederates had expected, when dity thereof, they hoped shortly to make an Embassie to Sparta: which propounded ready: the Epirots gave uncertain answer: the matter openly unto the people, whereof the Messenians would not stir : all the burno one of the Citizens durst have made him- den must lye upon themselves and the poor felf the Author. Much disputation, and hot, Acarmanians, whom the Atolians, by fathere was, between those of the Macedonian vour of the Eleans, could invade at pleaparty, and these their opposites: in such wise sure, as they were like to do; and by help that nothing could be concluded; until by of the Lacedamonians, could affail on all maffacre or banishment of all, or the chief, parts at once. It was not long ere the Ætothat foake against the Ætolians : the di- lians, passing over the Bay of Corinth , surversity of opinion was taken quite away. prised the Town of Agira: which if they Then forthwith a League was concluded be- could have held, they should thereby grievtween the Lacedamonians and Atolians : oully have molested the Achaans, for that it without all regard of the Macedonians or stood in the mid-way between Agium and Acheans, who had spared the City, when they Sycion, two of their principal Cities, and might have destroyed it. Then also they gave open way into the heart of all their went in hand with the election of new Kings: Country. But as Ægira was taken by surwherein their diligence was so nice, and so prise: so was it presently lost again, through regardful of their ancient Laws, as touching greedines of spoil; whilest they that should the choosing of the one King, that we may have made it their first care, to assure the justly wonder, how they grew so careless place unto themselves, by occupying the ciin making choice of the other. In the one tadel and other pieces of strength, fell heedof their Royal Families they found Agespo- lesly to ransack private houses, and thereby lis, the fon of Agespolis, the son of King Cle- gave the Citizens leave to make head, by ombrotus: and him they admitted to reign whom they were driven with great flaughover them, as heir apparent to his grand-ter back unto their Fleet. About the same father. This Aespolis was a young Boy, time, another Ætolian Army landing among standing in need of a Guardian; and had an the Eleans, fell upon the Western Coast of Uncle, his Fathers Brother, that was fit for Achaia; wasting all the Territory of the the Government. Yet because the Law re- Dymeans and other people, that were first quired, that the fon, how young foever, should beginners of the Achean Confederacy. The have his fathers whole right and Title: the Dymaans and their neighbours made head Lacedemonians, though standing in need of against these Invaders; but were so well beaa man, were to punctual in observation of ten, that the enemy grew bolder with them the Law, that they made this child their than before. They fent for help unto their King, and appointed his Uncle Cleamenes to Prætor, and to all the Towns of their Sociebe his Protector. But in the other branch ty in vain. For the Acheans having lately of the Royal Family, though there was no been much weakened by Cleomenes . were want of heirs: yet would not the people now able to do little of themselves: neither trouble themselves about any of them, to could they get any strength of Mercenaries; examine the goodness of his Claim; but forasmuch as at the end of Cleomenes his war made election of one Lycurgus, who having they had covetoully with held part of their no manner of title to the Kingdom, be due from those that served them therein. So flowed upon each of the Ephori, a Talent, through this disability of the Acheans, and and thereby made himself be saluted King insufficiency of their Prætor; the Dymeans, of sparta, and a Gentleman of the race of with others, were driven to with-hold their Hercules. This Lycurgus to gratifie his Par- contribution heretofore made for the pubtifans, and to approve his worth by action, lick fervice, and to convert the money to invaded the Country of the Argives: which their own defence. Lycurgus also with his Lalay open and unguarded, as in a time of cedamonians, began to win upon the Arcadi-

Philip came to the borders of the Ætoli-After fuch open hostility, the Lacede- ans, whilst their Army was thus employed a monians declared themselves on the Etoli- far off in Peloponnesus. The Epirots joinlian fide; and proclaimed War against the ed all their forces with him; and by such their willing readiness, drew him to the siege Thus the beginnings of the War fell out of a Frontier piece, which they defired to get much otherwise, than the Acheans and into their own hands; for that, by commo-them-

(HAP. IV.

fpent forty dayes, ere he could end the the Achean Embassadors; news came our business; which tended only to the benefit of Macedon, that the Dardanians were of the Epirots. Had he entred into the heart ready with a great Army to fall upon the of Æsolia at his first coming in; it is thought Country. These Dardanians were a barthat he might have had an end of the War. barous people, divided by Mount Hamus But it happens oft, that the violence of great from the Northern part of Macedon, and Armies is broken upon small Towns or were accustomed to seek booty in that Forts: and not feldom, that the impor-tunity of Affociates, to have their own de-own times. Having therefore intelligence, fires fulfilled, converts the preparations of that Philip was about to make a journey great Kings to those uses for which they into Peloponnesus; they purposed in his never were intended; thereby hindering absence, which they thought would be the prosecution of their main designs. Thus was our King Henry the eighth led selves in his Countrey: as had been their aside, and quite out of his way, by Maxi- manner upon the like advantages. This milian the Emperour to the fiege of Tour- made the King to dismis the Achean Emmay: at fuch time as the French King Lewis baffadors, (whom he should have accomof Termin was loft, and that his Cavallery, bid them have patience until another

200

Paris. in such fort, as their Prætor Scopas adventu- returning in his last Voyage from the Cycla-The state of the s neither Temple, nor any other of the good- Macedon, towards which they were already ly buildings therein, but overturned all: and on their way. among the rest, he threw down the Sta- All that summer following the King rested tua's that were there erected, of the Macedo at Lariffa in Theffaly, whilest his people dian Kings. For this he was highly honoured gathered in their Harvest. But the Ætolians by his Country-men at his return; for a for a funch refted not. They avenged them felves upon as hereby they thought their Nation to be the Fpirots: whom for the harms by them Peloponness, but even to Macedon it self. with all extremities of War, among which, like spoil in the Country of the Eleans, than two thousand Foot, and an hundred themselves Masters of Ambracia. There he whereto he was vehemently solicited hu the twelfth, hearing that the strong City panied home with his Army) and to wherein rested his chief confidence, two year. So he took his way home-wards: thousand were beaten by the Earl of and as he was passing out of Acarnanie Effex with seven hundred English; was into Epirus, there repaired unto him Dethinking to withdraw himself into Britain, metrius Pharius, with no more than one in fear that Henry would have come to Ship; that was newly chafed out of his Kingdom by the Romans. This Demetrim The stay that Philip made at Ambrachus, had lately shewed himself a friend to Antidid wondroully embolden the Atolians: gonus Dofon in the wars of Cleomenes: and red to lead all their forces out of the Coun- des, was ready at their first request, to take try; and therewith not only to over-run part with Philips Captains. Thefe,or the like Macedon upon the Agean Sea : which, being was ever after. The Dardanians hearing of forfaken by the Inhabitants at his coming, the Kings return, brake up their Army, and he took, and razed to the ground. He spared gave over for the present their invasion of grown terrible, not only (as before) unto and Philip done in Etolia, they requited But this their pride was (oon abated; and the most notable was the ruine of the most they rewarded shortly at home in their own famous Temple of Dodona. When Winter Country, for their pains taken at Dium. grew on, and all thought of War, until ano-Philip having dispatched his work at Am- ther year, was laid aside: Philip stole a bracus, made a strong invation upon Ato- journy into Peloponness, with 5000. Foot, & lia. He took Phatia, Metropolis, Veniade, about 400. Horse. As soon as he was within Pagnium, Elaw, and divers other Towns Corinth; He commanded the gates to be and Castles of theirs: of which he burnt shut, that no word should be carryed forth some, and fortified others. He also beat of his arrival. He sent privily for old Arathe Etolians in fundry skirmishes : and two to come thither unto him: with whom wasted all the Countrey over, without he took order, when, and in what places, receiving any harm. This done, while he would have the Achaan Souldiers ready he was about to make a cut over the to meet him. The enemies were then abroad Straights into Peloponnesus , and to do the in the Country , without somewhat more immediately following. He won Pfophis, an the rest of the winter. exceeding strong Town, in the borders of Before the Kings arrival in Pcloponnelus, and given to the Acheans of his meer motilike liberality he used towards others, that he came to the City of Olympia: where having done facrifice to Jupiter, feasted his Cap

Horfe; little thinking to meet with oppo- | the Ætolians: but they made fuch hatte from fition. Indeed they had little cause to fear: him, that he could not overtake them, till fince the Acheans themselves were not aware they had covered themselves within the that the King was in their Land with his Town of Samicum; where they thought to Macedonians; until they heard, that these have been fafe. But Philip assaulted them two thousand Eleans, Etolians, and their fel- therein to forcibly, that he made them glad lows, were by him surprized, and all made to yield the place; obtaining license to deprisoners, or flain. By this exploit which he part with their lives and arms. Having perdid at his first coming, Philip got very much formed so much in this expedition, the King reputation, and likewise he purchased reposed himself a while in Migalopolis, and both reputation and love, by divers actions then removed to Argos, where he spent all

areadia, which the Eleans and Etoliant then held. He won it by affault at his new King, had gotten somewhat in Areadia; first coming : wherein it much availed and threatned to do great matters. But when him, that the Enemy, not believing that he they were admonished, by the calamity that would undertake such a piece of work at fell upon the Eleans, of the danger hanging such an unseasonable time of the year, was over their own heads; they quitted their careless of providing even such store of wea- winnings, and withdrew themselves home. pons, as might have served to defend it. The This Lycurgus, as he had no other right to the Town was preserved by the King from sack; Kingdom of Sparta, than that which he could buy with mony, so was he neither free on, before they requested it. Thence trom danger of conspiracies made against went he to Lason, which yielded for very him: nor from those jealousies, with which fear; hearing how easily he had taken Pfophis. Usurpers are commonly perplexed. There had ancient title unto places by him recove- Kingdom, purposed to make way thereunto red. Then fell he upon the Country of Elis, by massacre of his opposites; and afterwards where was much wealth to be gotten : for to confirm himfelf, by propounding unto the that the people were addicted to husbandry, multitude such reformation of the State as and lived abroad in Villages; even such as was most popular: namely, by making an were of the wealthier fort among them. So equal distribution of all the lands among the whole number of the Citizens, according to the ancient institution of that Commontains, and refreshed his Army three days; He | wealth. He won to his party some two hunproceeded on to the spoil of those, that had dred men; with whom he fell upon the Ephori. taken pleasure to share with the Atolians, as they were together at supper, & slew them in the spoils of their otherwise-deserving all. Then went he to Lycurgus his house: who neighbours. Great abundance of Cattel he perceiving the danger, stole away and fled. took, with great numbers of flaves, and it remained that he should give account much wealth of all forts, fuch as could be of these doings to the people, and procure found in rich villages. Then he fell in hand them to take part with him. But their with the Towns, whereinto a great multi- minds not being hereto predisposed; they so tude of the Country people were fled. Some little regarded his goodly offers, as even of these were taken at the first affault. Some whilst he was using his best perswasions, they yielded for fear. Some prevented the labour were consulting how to apprehend him. Chiof his journey, by fending Embassadors to lon perceived whereabout they went, and yield before he came. And some that were shifted presently away. So he lived afterheld with Garrisons against their wils, took wards among the Acheans a banished man, courage to fet themselves at liberty, by see- and hated of his own people. As for Lycurgus ing the King so near : to whose Patronage he returned home : & suspecting thenceforth thenceforth they betook themselves. And all those of Hercules his race, found means many places were spoiled by the Ætolians to drive out his fellow King young Agespote Captains; because they distrusted their whereby he made himself Lord alone. His ability to hold them. So the King won more doings grew to be suspected, in such fort, as Towns in the Country, than the sharp- once he should have been apprehended by nels of winter would suffer him to stay there the Ephori. But though his actions hitherto days. Fain he would have fought with might have been defended; yet rather than to adventure himself into judgment, to take and whip them. If any of them of he chose to flie for a time, and so journ among fered (as there were some of them that his friends the Ætolians. His well-known could not refrain) to help their fellows; vehemency in opposition to the Macedoni- them he laid by the heels, and punished as ans, had procured unto him such good liking Mutiners. Hereby he thought to bring it to among the people, that in his absence they pass by little and little, that they should be began to confider the weakness of their own qualified with an habit of blind obedience; furmifes against him; and pronouncing him and think nothing unjust that pleased the innocent, recalled him home to his Estate. King. But these Acheans were tenderly sen-But in time following, he took better heed lible in matters of liberty: whereof if they unto himself: not by amending his conditi- could have been contented to fuffer any liton (for he grew a Tyrant, and was fo ac | the diminution, they needed not have trouknowledged) but by taking order, that it bled the Macedonians to help them in the should not be in the power of the Citizens war against Cleomenes. They bemoaned to expel him when they lifted. By what themselves unto old Aratus: and besought actions he got the name of a Tyrant; or at him to think upon some good order, that what time it was, that he chased Agesipolis they might not be oppressed by degrees. out of the City; I do not certainly find. Aratus forthwith dealt earnestly with the Like enough it is, That his being the first of King; as in a matter more weighty than at three usurpers, which followed in order first it might feem. The King bestowed one after another, made him to be placed in gracious words upon those that had been the rank of Tyrants; which the last of the wronged, and forbade Apelles to follow the three very justly deserved. Whatsoever he course begun. Hereat Apelles was inwardwas toward fome private Citizens, in the ly vexed, though he diffembled his choler war against Philip, he behaved himself as a for a time. He thought so well of his own provident man, and careful of his Coun- Project, that he could not endure to lav treys good.

ø. II.

to them.

This man, seeming to himself a great Polipiece of service to his Prince, if he could reduce the Achaans unto the same degree of fubjection, wherein the Mucedonians lived. To bring this to pass; during the late Expedition he had caused some of the Macedonians to thrust the Achaans out of their lodgings, and to strip them of the booty that they had gotten. Proceeding further, fome of that Nation; cauting his Ministers Arasus had laboured. This was thought a it aside; being perhaps unable to do the King any valuable service, in business of other nature. He purposed therefore hereafter to begin at the head: fince, in biting How Philip was misadvised by ill Counsellors: at the tail, the fish had shot away from his who afterwards wrought treason against mouth. It could not otherwise be than that him; and were justly punished. He invadeth among the Acheans there were some, who the Ætolians a second time: and forceth bore no hearty affection to Aratus. These them to fue for peace: which is granted un- he enquired out, and fending for them, entertained them with words of Court : promiling to become their especial friend, and WHilest the King lay at Argos devising commend them unto the King. Then brake upon his business for the year fol- he his purpose with the King himself: letlowing, fome ambitious men that were ting him know, that as long as he continued about him, studied so diligently for their to make much of Aratus, he must be fain own greatness, as they were like to have to deal precisely with the Acheans, and as it spoiled all that he took in hand. Antigonus were by Indenture, according to the letter of Doson had left unto Philip such Counsellors, the Contract: whereas if he would bepleaas to him did feem the fittest men for go- fed, to give countenance unto those others verning of his youth. The chief of these whom he himself commended, then should was Apelles; that had the charge of his per- the Acheans, and all other Peloponnesians, son, and also the ordering of his Treasures, be quickly brought to conform themselves unto the duty of obedient Subjects. By tician, thought that he should do a notable such perswasions, he drew the King to be present at Ægium, where the Acheans were to hold election of a new Prætor. There with much more labour, than would have been needful in a business of more imporance, the King by fair words and threatnings together, obtained fo much, That Eperatus, a very insufficient man, but one of Apelles his new favourites, was chosen Przas occasion fell out; he was bold to chastise tor, instead of one more worthy, for whom good introduction unto greater matters ning to the Kings offers. All this was a false that should follow. The King from thence lye, divised by Apelles himself, upon no other patied along by Patras and Dyma, to a very ground than his own malice. Thilip had ftrong Castle held by the Eleans, which was no sooner heard this tale, but in a great called Ticker. The garrifon yielded it up rage he fent for the two Arati, and bade Afor fear, at his first coming: whereof he pelles rehearse it over again to their faces. was glad, for that he had an earnest desire Apelles did so, and with a bold countenance, to bestow it upon the Dymauns, as he pre- talking to them as to men already convicted. fently did.

while he heard of no messengers from the this cliuse, as it were, in the Kings name: Since Fleans, to fue for peace. For at his depart the King hath found you fuch ungrateful ture out of their Country the last Winter, wretches; it is his meaning to hold a Parliahe had let loofe one Amphidamus a Captain ment of the Acheans; and therein having of theirs, that was his prisoner; because he made it known what ye are, to depart into found him an intelligent man, and one that Macedon, and leave you to your felves. Old undertook to make them forfake their alli- Aratus gravely admonished the King; That ance with the Atolians, and joyn with him whenfoever he heard any accusation, espeupon reasonable terms. This if they could be cially against a friend of his own, or a man contented to do, he willed Amphidamus to of worth, He should forbear a while to give let them understand, That he would render credit, untill he had diligently examined the unto them freely all prisoners which he had business. For such deliberation was Kingly, of theirs; That he would defend them from and he should never thereof repent him. At all forrain invasion; and that they should the present he said there needed no more, hold their liberty entire, living after their than to call in those that had heard his talk own Laws, without paying any manner of with Amphidamus, and especially him that Tribute, or being kept under by any garrihad brought this goodly tale to Apeller. For fon. These conditions were not to be despitive would be a very absurd thing, That the fed, if they had found credit, as they might King should make himself the Author of a Castle of Tichos, and made a new invasion whereof there was none wher evidence, fellor, thereby took occasion to supplant discerned. Aratus. He faid that old Aratus, and his fon

And when he had faid all the reft, ere either The King thought it strange, that all this Thilip or they spake any word; He added have done. But when Philip came to the report in the open Parliament of Achaia, upon their Country: then began the Eleans, than one mans yea, and anothers no. Hercof (that were not before over-hasty to believe the King liked well; and said that he would fuch fair promises ) to suspect Amphidamus make sufficient inquiry. So passed a few as a Traitor, and one that was set on work dayes: wherein whilest Apelles delayed to for no other end, than to breed a mutual bring in the proof, which indeed he wanted, diffidence between them and the Etolians. Amphidamus came from Elis, and told what Wherefore they purposed to lay hands upon had befall him there. The King was not forhim, and fend him prisoner into Atolia. getful, to examine him about the conspiracy But he perceived their intent, and got away of the Arati: which, when he found no betto Dyma: in good time for himself; in bet- ter than a meer device against his honourater for Aratus. For the King (as was faid) ble friends; he entertained them in loving marvailing what should be the cause, that manner as before. As for his love to Apelles, he heard no news from the Eleans, concern- though it was hereby somewhat cooled; yet ing the offers which he had made unto by means of long acquaintance and daily them by Amphidamus : Apelles his Coun-employment, no remission therein could be

The unreftful temper of Apelles, having together, had such devices in their heads, as with much vehemency brought nothing to tended little to the Kings good: And long pass, began (as commonly Ambition uleth) of them he faid it was, that the Eleans did to swell and grow venemous for want of thus hold out. For when Amphidamus was his free motion. He betskes himself to his dismissed home, the two Arati, (the father cunning again : and as before, being checkt and the son) had taken him aside and given in his doings with those of the vulgar, he had him to understand, that it would be very prepared a snare for the Arati: so railing of prejudicial to all Peloponnesus, if the Eleans them, he thinks it wisdom to lay for the King once became at the devotion of the Mace- himself, and for all at once which were donian: And this was the true cause, why about him. In such manner sometime, the neither Amphidamus was ver yeareful in do- Spider thought to have taken the Swallow ing this meilage; nor the Eleans in heark- which drave away flyes out of the chimny;

CHAP, IV

but was carryed (net and all) into the Air by | spiracy with Leontius and Megaleas: bind. the bird, that was too strong to be caught, ing himself and them by Oath, to cross and and held by the fubtle workmanship of a bring to nought, as well as they were able. Cob web. Of the four that next unto Apel all that the King should take in hand. By so his were left by Antigonis in chief place doing, they thought to bring it to pass, that about Philip; Taurion, his Lieutenant in Pe- very want of ability to do any thing withloponness, and Alexander Captain of the out them; should make him speak them fair. Guard, were faithful men, and fuch as would and be glad to submit himself to their dinot be corrupted, The other two, Leonius rections. The King it is like had flood in Captain of the Targettiers, and Megaleas some awe of them whilest he was a child: chief of the Secretaries, were eafily won and therefore these wise men perswaded to be at Apelles his disposition. This politition themselves, that by looking big upon him: cian therefore studied how to remove the and imputing unto him all that fell out ill other two from their places, and put some through their own misgovernment of his Creatures of his own into their rooms. A- affairs, they might rule him as a child still. gainst Alexander he went to work the ordi- Apelles would needs go to Chalcin, there to nary way, by calumniation and privy detra- take order for the provisions, which were to ction. But for the supplanting of Taurion he come that way out of Macedon: The other used more finenes; loading him with dai- two staid behind with the King, to play ly commendations, as a notable man of war, their parts; all more mindful of their wick-and one, whom for his many vertues the King might ill spare from being alwayes in His Fleet and Army being in a readines: his presence. By such Art he thought to have Philip made countenance, as if he would removed him, as we fay, Out of Gods bleff- have bent all his forces against the Eleans; ing into a warm Sun. In the mean feason to whose aid therefore the Etolians fent Aratus retired himself: and sought to avoid men, little fearing that the mischief would the dangerous friendship of the King, by have fallen, as soon after it did, upon themforbearing to meddle in affairs of State. Selves. But against the Eleans and those that As for the new Prætor of Achaia, lately came to help them, Philip thought it enough chosen by such vehement instance of the to leave the Acheans, with some part of his King; He was a man of no dispatch, and one and their Mercenaries. He himself with the that had no grace with the people. Where- body of his Army putting to Sea, landed in fore a great deal of time was loft, whileft the Isle of Cephalenia : whence the Etolians, Philip wanted both the money and the dwelling over against it, used to furnish Corn, wherewith he should have been fur-nished by the Acheans. This made the King understand his own errour: which he of Palea, that had been very serviceable to wifely fought to reform betimes. He per- the Enemy against him and his Confedefwaded the Acheans to rejourn their Parli- rates; and might be very useful to him, if he ament from Agium, to Sycion, the Town of could get it. Whilest he lay before this Aratus. There he dealt with the old man and Town, there came unto him fifteen ships of his son, perswading them to forget what was war from Scerdilaidas; and many good past; and laying all the blame upon Apelles, Souldiers, from the Epirots, Acarmanians, their excursions by Sea.

even by the ministry of those whom he most by him corrupted, had not hindred the hated. Wherefore he entred into con- victory. The King was angry with this,

The fifth Book of the first Part

on whom thenceforth he intended to keep a and Messenians. But the Town was obstinate; more diligent eye. So by the travel of these and would not be terrified with numbers. worthy men, he easily obtained what he It was naturally fenced on all parts save one would of the Acheans. Fifty talents they gave on which fide Philip carryed a Mine to the him out of hand; with great store of Corn; wall, wherewith he overthrew two hunand further decreed, That fo long as he him dred foot thereof. Leontins Captain of the felf in person followed the wars in PeleponTargettiers, was appointed by the King to mef m, he should receive ten talents a moneth.

But he, remembring his Being thus enabled, he began to provide covenant with Apelles, did both wilfully fhipping, that so he might invade the Etoli- forbear to do his best : and caused others to ans , Eleans , and Lacedamonians , that were do the like. So the Macedonians were put maritime people, at his pleasure, and hinder to foile, and many slain, not of the worst Souldiers: but such as had gotten over the It vexed speller beyond measure, to see breach, and would have carried the Town, things go forward so well without his help; if the Treason of their Captain, and some thought upon breaking up the siege. For it got not to raze a goodly Temple, the chief was easier unto the Towns men to make up of all belonging unto the Linhans; in rememthe gap in their wall, than for him to make brance of their like courtefie, shewed upon is wider. Whilest he stood thus perplexed the Temples of Dinm and Dodana. This burand uncertain what course to take : the ning of the Temple, might (questionless) Mellenians and Acarnanians lay hard upon more for the Kings honour have been forhim, each of them desirous to draw him into born. But perhaps he thought, as Monseur their own Countrey. The Messenians alledg- du Gourgues the French Captain told the ed, that Lycurgus was busie in wasting their Spaniards in Florida, That they which had Countrey: upon whom the King might no faith, needed no Church. At his return come unawares in one day; the Etestan winds from Thermum, the Ætolians laid for him: which then blew, ferving fitly for his Navi- which that they would do, he believed begation. Hereto also Leontins perswaded; fore, and therefore was not taken unawares. who confidered that those winds, as they Three thousand of them there were that lywould easily carry him thither, so would ing in ambush, fell upon his skirts: but he they detain him there perforce (blowing laid a Counter-ambush for them, of his ilall the Dog dayes) and make him fpend lyrians; who staying behind the rest, did the Summer to small or no purpose. But set upon the backs of the Esolians, whilest Aratus gave better counsel, and prevailed: they were busily charging in Rear the Arhe shewed how unfitting it were, to let the my that went before. So with slaughter of Etolians over-run all Theffaly again , and the enemy, he returned the same way that some part of Macedon, whilest the King he came: and burning down those places that withdrew his Army far off to feek small he had taken before, as also wasting the adventures. Rather, he said that the time Country round about him, He safely carried now served well to carry the war into Eto- all that he had gotten aboard his fleet. Once lia; fince the Prætor was gone thence abroad the Ætolians made countenance of fight, ifon roving, with the one half of their strength. suing out of Stratus in great bravery. But As for Lycurgus, he was not strong enough they were beaten home faster than they came, to do much harm in Peloponnesse: and it and followed to their very gates. might suffice, if the Acheans were appoint- The joy of this victorious expedition beed to make head against them. According ing every way compleat, and not deformed to this advice, the King set fail for Etolia, (as commonly happens) by any finister acciand enters the Bay of Ambracia, which di- dent; it pleafed the King to make a great feast vided the Atolians from Acarmania. The unto all his friends and Captains. Thither Acarnanians were glad to see him on their were invited among the rest Leonius, with borders; and joyned with him as many of his fellow Megaleas. They came because they them as could bear arms, to help in taking could not choose: but their heavy looks vengeance upon their bad neighbours. He argued, what little pleasure they took in the marched up into the inland Countrey: and Kings prosperity. It grieved them to think, taking some places by the way, which he that they should be able to give no better filled with Garrisons to affure his Retreat; account unto Apelles, of their hindering the He passed on to Thermum, which was the Re- Kings business; since Apelles himself, as will ceptacle of the Ætolians, and surest place of be shewed anon, had played his own part defence in all extremities. The Countrey with a most mischievous dexterity. Finding round about was a great fastness, environed Aratus on the way home to his Tent : they with rocky Mountains of very narrow freep, fell to reviling him, throwing stones at him, and difficult ascent. There did the Etolians so that they caused a great uprore: many use to hold all their chief meetings, their running in (as happens in such cases) to take Fairs, their election of Magistrates, and part with the one or the other. The King their folemn Games. There also they used fending to enquire of the matter, was truly to bestow the most precious of their goods, informed of all that had passed: Which made as in a place of greatest security. This opi- him fend for Leontine and his fellows. But nion of the natural strength, had made them Leontine was gotten out of the way : Megacareless in looking unto it. When Philip less, and another withhim, came. The King therefore had overcome the bad way, began to rate them for their disorder : and there was nothing else to do than to take they, to give him froward answers: insospoil: whereof he found such plenty, that he much, as they said at length, That they thought the pains of his journy well recom- would never give over, till they had re-Penced. So he loaded his Army : and confum- warded Aratus with a mischief as he deser-

but there was no remedy: and therefore he | ing all that could not be carried away, forward. Leontise hearing of this comes boldly Countrey. All Greece and Macedon was up to the King, with his Targettiers at his heels: in arms against them, and their weak Allies and with a proud grace demanded, who it the Eleans and Lacedemonians. Neither was was that had dared to lay hands upon Me- it certain, how long the one or other of galeas, yea, and to cast him into prison? Why these their Peloponnesian friends should be faid the King, it was even I. This resolute able to hold out, fince they were not strong answer, which Leontins had not expected, enough to keep the field, but had already made him depart both fad and angry; fee fuffered those miseries of war, which by a liting himself out-frowned, and not knowing the continuance would make them glad, each how to remedy the matter. Shortly after to feek their own peace, without regard of Megaleas was called forth to his answer, and their Confederates. Wherefore the Etolians was charged by Aratus with many great readily entertain'd this negotiation of peace: crimes. Among which were , The him and taking truce for thirty dayes with the derance of the Kings victory at Palea, and the King, dealt with him by intercession of the touching Leontius, that stood by as a looker at a Diet of the Nation, that should be held on, than Megaleas that was accused. In con- at Rhium; whither if he would vouchfafe fo ftrong, and his answers thereto so weak; them conformable to any good reason. that he, and Crinon one of his fellows, were condemned in twenty Talents: Crinon being time and Megaleas thought to have terrified remanded back to prison; and Leontins be- the King, by raising sedition against him in upon the way home-wards, as the King was effect. The Souldiers were easily and quickly returning to Corinth. finess of this year. For as soon as he was at were not rewarded with so much of the Corinth, he took in hand an Expedition booty, as they thought to belong of right against the Lacedemonians. These and the unto them. But their anger spent it self in a Eleans had done what harm they could in noise, and breaking open of doors, without Peloponnesus, whilest the King was absent. further harm done. This was enough to in-The Acheans had opposed them as well as form the King (who easily pacified his men they could; with ill success, yet so, as they with gentle words) that some about him were hindred them from doing such harm as else very false. Yea, the Souldiers themselves rethey would have done. But when Philip penting of their infolence, defired to have came, he over ran the Country about Lace- the Authors of the tumult fought out, and had been grievously afflicted, as before is on sake) of the King: who seemed no

Kkkkkk

996

wed. Hereupon the King committed them to | shewed, by Philip in the centre of their own Compact made with Apelles: matters no less same Embassadours, to intreat his presence clusion, the presumptions against him were to come, they promised that he should find

Whilest these things were in hand. Leon. coming Bail for Megaleas. This was done the Army. But this device forted to no good incensed against many of the Kings friends, Philip dispatched well a great deal of bu- who were said to be the cause, why they damon: and was in a manner at the Gates of punished according to their deserts. The Sparta, ere men could well believe that he King made shew as if he had not cared to was returned out of Etolia. He took not in make fuch inquisition. But Leontine and Methis Expedition any Cities, but made great galess were afraid, lest the matter would wast in the fields: and having beaten the enemy in some skirmishes, carried back with ger. Wherefore they sent unto Apelles, the him to Corinth a rich booty of cattel, flaves, Head and Architect of their treason, requeand other Country spoil. At Corinth he sting him speedily to repair unto Corinth, found attending him, Embassadors from the where he might stand between them and Rhodians and Chians, that requelted him to the Kings displeasure. Apelles had not all fet Greece at quiet , by granting peace unto this while been wanting to the bufiness, the Esolians. They had gracious audience: undertaken by him and his treacherous and he willed them to deal first with the companions. He had taken upon him, as a Etolians, who if they would make the same man that had the Kings heart in his own request, should not find him unreasonable, hand : and thereby was he grown into The Atolians had sped ill that year : neither such credit, that all the Kings Officers in faw they any likely hopes for the years fol- Macedon and Theffaly addressed themselves lowing. The Army that they had lent forth unto him, and received from him their dito waste Thefaly and Macedon , found such Spatch in every businels. Likewise the Greek opposition on the way; that not daring to in all their flattering Decrees, took ocproceed, it returned home without bringing casion to magnifie the vertue of Apelle, any thing to effect. In the mean feason they making slight mention (only for fashibetter than the Minister and Executioner I fink under the burden of his own poverty. of Apelles his will and pleasure. Such was the By this the King understood more perfectly arrogancy of this great man, in fetting him- the fallhood, not only of Megaleus, but of felf out unto the people : but in managing Apelles; whose cunning head had laboured the Kings affairs, he made it his special care, all this while to keep him so poor. Wherethat money and all things needful for the fore he fent one to pursue Megaleas that publick service, should be wanting. Yea, was fled to Thebes. As for Apelles, he comhe enforced the King for very need, to fell his own Plate and houshold vessels: was need to show. It is in and another that was inward with him, to prison; wherein thinking to resolve these and all other dis- all of them shortly ended their lives. Meficulties, by only faying, Sir, be ruled wholly galeas also, neither daring to stand to trial. by me, and all shall be as you would wish. Here- nor knowing whither to flie, was weary to if the King would give affent, then had of his own life, and flew himfelf about the this Politician obtained his hearts desire. same time. Now taking his journey from Chalcis in the The Ætolians, as they had begun this Ifle of Enbra, to the City of Corinth where war upon hope of accomplishing what they Philip then lay : he was fetcht in with great lifted in the Nonage of Philip : fo finding that pomp and royalty, by a great number of the vigour of this young Prince tempered the Captains and Souldiers; which Leon-with the cold advice of Arata, wrought tim and Megaless drew forth to meet him very effectually toward their overthrow; on the way. So entring the City with a they grew very desirous to make an end of goodly train, he went directly to the Court, it. Nevertheless, being a turbulent Nation. and towards the Kings chamber. But Philip and ready to lay hold upon all advantages, was well aware of his pride, and had vehe- when they heard what was happened in the ment suspition of his falshood. Wherefore Court, the death of Apelles, Leontius, and one was fent to tell him, that he should wait Megaleas, together with some indignation a while, or come another time, for the King thereupon conceived by some of the Kings was not now at leisure to be spoken with. It Targettiers, they began to hope anew, that was a pretty thing, that fuch a check at his these troubles would be long lasting, and made all his attendants forfake him, as a man thereupon brake the day appointed for the in difgrace; in such fort, that going thence to meeting at Rhium. Of this was Philip nothing his lodging, he had none to follow him fave forry. For being in good hope throughhis own Pages. After this, the King vouch- ly to tame this unquiet Nation; he thought fafed him now and then some slender graces : it much to concern his own honour , that but in consultations, or other matters of pri- all the blame of the beginning and contivacy, he used him not at all. This taught Me- nuing the War should rest upon themselves. galeas to look to himself, and run away Wherefore he willed his Confederates to betimes. Hereupon the King fent forth Tau- lay afide all thought of peace, and to pretion his Lieutenant of Peloponnesus, with all pare for War against the year following; the Targettiers, as it were to do some piece wherein he hoped to bring it to an end. offervice, but indeed of purpose to appre- Then gratified he his Macedonian Souldiers. hend Leontine in the absence of his follow- by yielding to let them winter in their own ers. Leontise being taken, dispatched away Country. In his return homeward, he cala messenger presently to his Targettiers, to led into judgement one Ftolomy, a companifiguifie what was befaln him : and they on with spelles and Leontins in their Treaforthwith fent unto the King in his behalf. fons : who was therefore condemned by They made request, That if any other the Macedonians; and suffered death. These thing were objected against him, he might were the same Macedonians, that lately not be called forth to trial before their re- could not endure to hear of Leanting his turn : as for the debt of Megaleas, if that were imprisonment ; yet now they think the man all the matter, they faid they were ready to worthy to die that was but his adherent. make a purse for his discharge. This affection So vain is the confidence, on which Reof the Souldiers made Philip more hasty than bels use to build, in their favour with the else he would have been, to take away the Multitude.

Traitors life. Neither was it long, ere letters During his abode in Macedon, Philip won of Megaleas were intercepted, which he some bordering Towns, from which the wrote unto the Ætolians; vilifying the King Dardanians, Ætolians, and other his ill with opprobrious words, and bidding them neighbours, were accustomed to make rodes not to hearken after peace, but to hold out into his Kingdom: when he had thus proa while, for that Philip was even ready to vided for fafety of his own; the Etolians might might well know what they were to expect. 1 a great Oration: telling, how happy it was But there came again Embaliadors from the for the Greeks, that they might at their own Rhodians and Chians, with others from Ptolo pleasure dispute about finishing War bemy King of Agypt, and from the City of tween themselves, without being molested Bizantium, recontinuing the former folici by the Barbarians. For when once either tation about the peace. This fashion had the Romans or Carthaginians had subdued been taken up in matters of Greece, ever one the other; it was not to be doubted. fince the Kings that reigned after Alexander, that they would forthwith look Eastward. had taken upon them to fet the whole Coun and feek by all means to fet footing in try at liberty: No looner was any Province Greece. For this cause he saidit were good. or City in danger to be oppressed and sub- that their Country should be at peace withdued by force of war, but presently there in it self : and that Philip, if he were were found Interceffors, who pittying the defirous of War, should lay hold on the effusion of Greekiff blood, would importune opportunity, now fitly ferving to enlarge the stronger to relinquish his advantage. his Dominion, by winning somewhat in By doing such friendly offices in time of Italy. need, the Princes and States abroad fought to bind unto them those people, that were give, when they stood in fear of danger how foever weak in numbers, yet very threatning them at hand : but being foon good Souldiers. But hereby it came to after weary of rest, as being accustomed to pals, that the more froward fort, especially enrich themselves by pillage, they were so the Etolians, whose whole Nation was ad- far from observing and following their own dicted to falshood and robbery, durst enter good counsel, that they invited the Roboldly into quarrels with all their neigh- mans into Greece, whereby they brought bours: being well affured that if they had themselves and the whole Countrey (but the worlt, The love of Greece would be fuffi- themselves before any other part of the cient for to redeem their quiet. They Country) under servitude of strangers. had, fince the late Treaty of Peace, done The Condition of this Peace was simple, what harm they could in Peloponnesis: but That every one should keep what they being beaten by the Acheans, and standings in fear to be more foundly beaten at home, they defired now, more earnestly than before, to make an end of the War as foon as they might. Philip made fuch answer unto the Embassadours, as he had done the former year; That he gave not occasion to the beginning of this War, nor was at the present afraid to continue it, or unwilling to end it : But that the Ætolians , if they had a defire to live in rest, must first be dealt withal, to signific plainly their determination, whereto himself would

Kkkkkk 2

999

CHAP. IV

Philip had at this time no great liking unto the Peace, being a young Prince, and in away, till the great battel of Canne: after hope to increase the honour which he daily which he joyned in league with Hannibal, as got by the War. But it happened in the hath been thewed before. Demetring Phamiddest of this Negotiation, that he was riss bore great malice unto the Romans; him to take part with Hannibal: and not to otherwise been far more expedient for Phifit still, as an idle beholder of the Italian lip, to have supported the weaker of those War. Hereby he grew more inclinable than two great Cities against the more mighty. before unto Peace with the Atolians : which For by fo doing , he should perhaps have was concluded shortly in a meeting at Nan- brought them to peace upon some equal pattus. There did Agelaus an Atolian make terms; and thereby, as did Hiero; a far

Such advice could the Etolians then held at the present, without making restitution, or any amends for dammages

ø. III.

Philip, at the persuasion of Demetrius Pharius, enters into League with Hannibal against the Romans. The tenour of the League between Hannibal and Philip.

"His being agreed upon: the Greeks betook themselves to quiet courses of return such answer as he should think life; and Philip to prepare for the business of Italy, about which he consulted with Demetrius Pharius. And thus passed the time advertised by letters out of Macedon, what a and knew no other way to be avenged upon notable victory Hannibal had obtained them, or to recover his own loft Kingdom, against the Romans in the battel at Thrasy than by procuring the Macedonian, that was mene. These letters he communicated unto in a manner wholly guided by his counsel, Demetrius Pharius: who greatly encouraged to take part with their enemies. It had busie piece.

of the History of the World.

Macedon.

Denne Jupiter, and Juno, and Apollo, before * the the Corcyraans, nor over those of Apollonia, friends, familiar, and brethren, upon Cove- mon consent. nunt; that the sufery of the Lords the Carthaginians, and of Hannibal the General, and those that are with him , and of the Rulers of Provintes of the Carthaginians , using the same Laws, and of the Uticans, and as many Cities and Nations as obey the Carthaginians, and of the Souldiers and Affociates, and of all Towns and weaker Prince, have both fecured his own | Nations with which we hold friendflip in Italy, Estate, and caused each of them to be de- Gaule, and Liguria, and with whom we shall firous of chief place in his friendship. The hold friendship, or make alliance hereafter in iffue of the counsel which he followed, will this Region; be preferred by King Philip and appear foon after this. His first quarrel with the Macedonians, and juch of the Greeks the Romans; the trouble which they and the as are their Associates. In like manner, shall Atolians did put him to in Greece; and the King Philip and the Macedonians, and other Peace which they made with him for a the Greeks his Affociates, be faved and pretime, upon such Conditions that might ea- ferved by the Carthaginian Armies, and by the fily be broken, have been related in another Uticans, and by all Cities and Nations that place, as belonging unto the second Punick obey the Carthaginians, and by their Associates War. Wherefore I will only here set down and Souldiers, and by all Nations and Cities in the tenour of the League between him and Italy, Gaule, and Liguria, that are of our Carlbage, which may seem not unworthy Aliance, or shall hereaster joyn with Us in to be read, if only in regard of the form it Italy. We shall not take Counsel one against felf then used: though it had been over- the other, nor deal fraudulently one with the long to have been inserted into a more other. With all readiness and good will, without deceit or subtlety, We shall be enemies unto the enemies of the Carthaginians, excepting those Kings, Towns, and Havens, with which We have already league and friendship. We al-The Oath and Covenants be for shall be enemies to the enemies of King Phitween HANNIBAL General of the lip, excepting those Kings, Cities, and Na-Carthagmans, and Xenophanes, tions, with which we have already league and Embassadour of Philip King of Romans, have ye also with them, until the Gods shall give Us a new and happy end. Ye shall aid Us with those things whereof we have "His is the Leagure ratified by Oath, which need, and shall do according to the Covenants Hannibal the General, and with him between Us. But if the Gods shall not give Mago, Myrcal, and Barmocal, as also the Se- unto Ton and Us their help in this War against nators of Carthage that are present, and all the Romans and their Affectates; then if the the Carthaginians that are in his Army , have Romans offer friendship, We shall make friendmade with Xenophanes the son of Cleoma- ship in such wife , that ye shall be partakers of chus Athenian , whom King Philip the fon the fame friendship , With Condition , That of Demetrius hath fent unto m, for himself and they shall not have power to make War upon the Macedonians, and his Affociates : Before You : Neither shall the Romans be Lords over God of the Carthaginians, Hercules and To- nor Dyrrhachium, nor over Pharus, nor Dilaus : before Mars, Triton, Neptune : before malle, nor the Parthini, nor Atintania. They the Gods accompanying Arms, the Sun, the Shall also render unto Demetrius Pharius all Moon, and the Earth : before Rivers and that belong unto him, as muny as are within Meadows, and Waters : before all the Gods the Romans Dominions. But if the Romans that have power over Carthage: before all the (after such peace made) shall make War upon Gods that rule over Macedon, and the rest of Ton or Us; We will succour one another in Greete: before all she Gods that are Presidents that War, as either shall have need. The of War, and present at the making of this same shall be observed in War made by any League. Hannibal the General hath said, and other, excepting those Kings, Cities, and all the Senators that are with him, and all the States, with whom we hold already league Carthaginians, in his Army: Be it agreed be- and friendship. To this league, if We or tween You and Us , that this Oath stand for Te fall think fit to add or detract , such adfriendship and loving affection, that We become dition or detraction shall be made by our comø. IV.

How Philip yielded to his natural vices , being therein foothed by Demetrius Pharius. His desire to tyrannize upon the free States his Affociates : With the troubles into which he thereby fell , whilest he bore a part in the and grows bateful to the Achæans.

Titherto Philip had carried himself as a vertuous Prince. And though with old man : but talked in private with such of more commendation of his wisdom, he might the Messenians as repaired unto him. He have offered his friendship to the Romans, asked the Governours, what they meant to that were like to be oppressed, than to the stand thus disputing : and whether they had Carthaginians, who had the better hand: not Laws to bridle the insolence of the unyet this his medling in the Punick War, ruly Rabble: Contrariwise, in talking with proceeded from a royal greatness of mind, the heads of the popular Faction, he said it with a desire to secure and increase his own was strange, that they being so many would estate, adding therewithal reputation to suffer themselves to be opposed by a few; as his Country. But in this business he was if they had not hands to defend themselves guided (as hath been faid) by Demetrius from Tyrants. Thus whilest each of them Pharius: who looking throughly into his prefumed on the Kings affiltance; they nature, did accommodate himself to his de thought it best to go roundly to work, ere fires : and thereby shortly governed him as that he were gone, that should countenance he lifted. For the vertues of Philip were not their doings. The Governours therefore indeed such as they seemed. He was lustful, would have apprehended some seditious bloody, and tyrannical: defirous of power Orators, that were, they faid, the stirrersup to do what he lifted, and not otherwise list- of the multitude unto sedition. Upon this ing to do what he ought, than so far forth, occasion, the people took Arms: and runas by making a fair shew he might breed in ningupon the Nobility and Magistrates, kilmen such good opinion of him, as should led of them in a rage, almost two hundred. help to serve his turn in all that he took in Fbilip thought, it seems, that it would be easie hand. Before he should busie himself in Italy, to worry the Sheep, when the Dogs their he thought it requisite in good policy, to Guardians were slain. But his falshood and bring the Greek that were his Affociates, double dealing was immediately found out under a more absolute form of subjection. Neither did the younger Aratus forbear to Hereunto Apelles had advised him before: tell him of it in publick, with very bitter and he had liked reasonably well of the and disgraceful words. The King was ascourfe. But Apiller was a boyfterous Counfellor, and one that referring all tohis own than was commendable, or excufable: and glory, thought himself deeply wronged, if yet further intending to take other things he might not wholly have his own way, but in hand wherein he should need the help were driven to await the Kings opportuni- and countenance of his best friends; he was ty at other times. Demetrius Pharius could content to smother his displeasure, and well be contented to observe the Kings make as fair weather as he could. He led humours: and guided, like a Coach-man, old Aratus afide by the hand; and went up with the reins in his hand, those affections into the Castle of Ithome, that was over which himself did only seem to follow. Messene. There he pretended to do facri-Therefore he grew daily more and more fice : and facrifice he did. But it was his in credit : fo as, without any manner of con- purpose to keep the place to his own use: tention, he supplanted Aratus; which the for that it was of notable strength, and violence of Apelles could never do.

There arose about these times a very hot time, the contention among them grew for violent, that Philip was intreated to compound the differences. He was glad of this: resolving so to end the matter, that they should not henceforth strive any more about their Government : for that he would affume it wholly to himfelf. At his coming this scend Punick War. He poisoneth Aratus: ther, he found Aratus busie among them to make all friends, after a better manner than agreed with his own fecret purpofe. Wherefore he consulted not with this reverend would serve to command the further parts of Peloponnesus, as the Citadel of Corinth, Faction among the Meffenians, between the which he had already, commanded the en-Nobility and Commons: their vehement trance into that Country. Whilest he was thoughts being rather diverted (as happens therefore facrificing, and had the entrails often after a forreign War) unto domestical of the beast delivered into his hands, as was objects, than allayed and reduced unto a the manner; he shewed them to Araim, and more quiet temper. In process of no long gently asked him, whether the token that in possession of this place, he should quietly them. Thus instead of settling the Coungo out of it, or rather keep it to himself. He try, as his intended Voyage into Haly rethought perhaps, that the old man would quired : he kindled a fire in it which he have foothed him a little; were it only for could never quench, until it had laid hold defire for to make amends for the angry words newly spoken by his son. But as Araam flood doubtful what to answer, Demetrias Pharine gave this verdict : If then be a the Roman came into those parts; who not Southfayer, thou maift go thy way, and let flip only maintained the Epirots against him, this good advantage; if thou be a King, thou but procured the Etolians to break the must not neglett the opportunity, but hold the Peace, which they had lately made with Oxe by both his horns. Thus he spake ; re- him. Sembling Ithome and Acrocorinthus unto the two horns of Pelepenne [we. Yet would Philip needs hear the opinion of Aratus: who told him plainly, That it were well done to keep of, though Philip did the offices of a good the place, if it might be kept without breach Captain: yet when leisure served, he made of his faith unto the Meffenians: But if, by it apparent that he was a vicious King. He feizing upon Ithome, he must lose all the had not quite lest his former desire, of opother Castles that he held, and especially the pressing the liberty of the Messenians; but ftrongest Castle of all that was left unto made another journey into their Countrey. him by Antigonus, which was his credit; with hope to deceive them as before. They then were it far better to depart with his understood him better now than before; and Souldiers, and keep men in duty, as he had therefore were not hasty to trust him too his enemies.

present : but not without some dislike thence- Confederates were desirous to help him in fremed them, in contradicting his will. Net- his Counfellor and Flatterer, not his Perver-nians into Pelopounefus.

siege to Apollonia; having no good colour to the increase of Idolatry. of these doings: but thinking himself strong The living memory of Aratus their Paenough to do what he lifted, and not feeing tron, and fingular Benefactor, could not but he saw therein did signifie, That being now | whence they should procure friends to help on his own Palace. Whilest he was thus labouring to bind the hands that should have fought for him in Italy , M. Valerius

1001

Thus began that War; the occurrents whereof we have related before, in the place whereto it belonged. In managing wheredone hitherto, by their own good wills, than far. When he faw that his cunning would by fortifying any strong places against not serve, he went to work by force; and them, to make them of his friends become calling them his enemies, invaded them with open War. But in that War he could do To this good advice, Philip yielded at the little good; perhaps, because none of his forth growing between him and the Mrati: fuch an enterprise. In this attempt upon whom he thought more froward than be. Meffene, he lost Demetrius Pharius; that was ther was the old man defirous at all, to deal ter; as appears by his growing daily more any longer in the Kings affairs, or be inward naught in following times. The worfe that with him. For, as he plainly discovered his he sped, the more angry he waxed against tyranhous purpofes; fo likewise he perceiv those that seemed not to favour his injuried, that in reforting to his house, he had ous doings. Wherefore, by the ministery been dishonest with his sons wife. He therefore staid at home: where at good leafure Aratus; and shortly after that, he poysoned he might repent, that in despight of Cleo- also the younger Aratus : hoping that these menes, his own Countrey-man, and a tem- things would never have been known, beperate Prince, he had brought the Macedo- cause they were done secretly, and the poyfons themselves were more sure than mani-Philip made a Voyage out of Peloponne- fest in operation. The Sicyonians, and all for into Epiron, wherein Aratus refuied to the people of Achaia, decreed unto Aratus bear him company. In this journey he found more than humane honours, as Sacrifices, by experience what Aratus had lately told Hymns, and Processions, to be celebrated him, That unhonest counsels are not so pro- every year twice, with a Priest ordained fitable in deed, as in appearance. The Epi- unto him for that purpole; as was accustorots were his followers and dependants; and med unto the Heroes, or men, whom they so they purposed to continue. But he would thought to be translated into the number needs have them fo to remain, whether they of the gods. Hereunto they are faid to have purposed it or not. Wherefore to make been encouraged by an Oracle of Apollo: them the more obnoxius unto his will, he which is like enough to have been true, feized upon their Town of Oricum, and laid fince the help of the Devil is never failing work in the Acheans a marvellous diflike of that wicked King which had made him of Philopoemen General of the Achaens: thus away. He shall therefore hear of this hereafter, when they better dare to take counsel for themselves. At the present, the murder was not generally known or believed : neither were they in case to subsist, without hishelp that had committed it. The derates, sufficed to retain them: especially, obliged unto himself the Dymeans by an inestimable benefit : recovering their Town, after it had been taken by the Romans and Ætolians; and redeeming their people wheresoever they might be found, that had been carried away captive, and fold abroad the memory of offences past: if the malignity of his natural condition had not otherwhiles broken out, and given men to un-derstand, that it was the Time, and not his whereof he was not ashamed, he took Poly old mans death. But of such faults he shall be told, when the Romans make War upon him the second time: for, of that which happened in this their first Invasion, I hold it superfluous to make repetition.

CHAP. IV.

ø. V.

and Machanidas, Tyrant of Lacedamon, battel between them, wherein Machanidas is

TT happens often, that the decease of one eminent man discovers the vertue of ano-Atolians were a most outragious people, ther. In the place of Aratus there stood up great darers, and shameless robbers. With Philopamen: whose notable valour, and great these the Romans made a league: whereof skill in Arms, made the Nation of the Achethe Conditions were foon divulged, especi- ans redoubtable among all the Greeks, ally that main point, concerning the divisi- and careless of such protection, as in former on of the purchase which they should make, times they had needed against the violence namely, That the Atolians should have the of their neighbours. This is that Philope. Countrey and Towns; but the Romans the men, who being then a young man, and spoil, and carry away the people to sell for having no command, did especial service to flaves. The Acheans, who in times of greater Antigonus at the battel of Sellafia against quiet, could not endure to make strait alli- Cleonsenes. Thence forward untill now he ance with the Atolians, as knowing their had spent the most part of his time in the uncivil disposition; were much the more life of Crete: the Inhabitants whereof beaverse from them, when they perceived how ing a valiant people, and seldom or never at they had called in the Barbarians (for fuch peace between themselves; he bettered did the Greeks account all other Nations among them his knowledge, and practice in except their own) to make havock of the the Art of War. At his return home, he had Country. The same consideration moved al- charge of the Horse: wherein he carried fo the Lacedemonians to stand off a while, himself so strictly, travelling with all the before they would declare themselves for Cities of the Confederacy to have his solthe Etolians, whose friendship they had lowers well mounted, & armed at all pieces; embraced in the late war. The industry as also he so diligently trained them up in therefore of Philip, and the great care which all exercise of service, that he made the he seemed to take of the Acheans his Confe-debeans very strong in that part of their forces. Being afterward chosen Prætor or at fuch time, as their own necessity was General of the Nation, he had no less thereto concurrent. More particularly he care to reform their military discipline throughout, whereby his Countrey might be strong enough to defend it felf, and not any longer (as in former times) need to depend upon the help of others. He perswaded the Acheans to cut off their vain expence of bravery, in apparel, houshold-stuff, and for flaves. Thus might he have blotted out curious fare, and to bestow that cost upon their Arms: wherein by how much they were the more gallant, by fo much were they like to prove the better Souldiers, and Wertue, which caused him to make such a their furniture. They had served hitherto shew of goodness. Among other foul acts, with little light Bucklers, and slender Darts, to cast afar off; that were useful in skircratia the wife of the younger Aratus, and mishing at some distance, or for surprises, carried her into Maccdon: little regarding or sudden and hasty Expeditions, whereto how this might serve to confirm in the peo- Aratus had been most accustomed. But when ple their opinion, that he was guilty of the they came to handy-strokes, they were good for nothing, fo long as they were wholly driven to rely upon the courage of their Mercenaries. Philopamen altered this: caufing them to arm themselves more weightily, to use a larger kind of shield, with good swords, and strong pikes, fit for service at hand. He taught them also to fight in close order, and altered the form of their em- his light armature a good way before him; battelling: not making the Files so deep as so as Machanidas was fain to do the like. To had been accustomed, but extending the second these, from the one and the other Front, that he might use the service of many side came in continual supply; till at length hands.

in which he first was Prator of the Achaans, fight: being so far advanced, each before when Machanidas the Tyrant of Lacedamon their own Phalanx, that it could no othercaused him to make trial, how his Souldiers wise be discerned which pressed forward, or had profited by his discipline. This Macha- which recoyled, than by rising of the dust. nides was the successor unto Lycurgus, a man Thus were Machanidas his engines made unmore violent than his fore-goer. He kept serviceable, by the interposition of his own in pay aftrong Army of Mercenaries: and he men; in fuch manner as the Cannon is hinkept them not only to fight for Sparta, but dered from doing execution, in most of the to hold the City in obedience to himfelf per- battels fought in these our times. The merforce. Wherefore it behoved him not to cenaries of the Tyrant prevailed at length: take part with the Acheans, that were favo- not only by their advantage of number, but by friendship of the Etolians: who, in making their opposites in degree of courage; where-Alliances, took no further notice of vice or in usually the hired Souldiers of Tyrants vertue, than as it had reference to their own exceed those that are waged by free States. profit. The people also of Lacedemon, For as it is true, that a free people are much through their inveterate hatred unto the more valiant than they which live opprefied Argios, Acheans, and Macedonians, were by Tyranny, fince the one, by doing their in like fort (all or most of them) inclinable best in fight, have hope to acquire someto the Etolian Faction. Very unwisely. For what beneficial to themselves, whereas the in feeking to take revenge upon those, that other do fight (as it were) to affure their had lately hindered them from getting the own servitude: so the Mercenaries of a Ty-Lordship of Peloponness ; they hindered rant, being made partakers with him in the themselves thereby from recovering the Ma- fruits of his prosperity, have as good cause ftery of their own City. This affection of to maintain his quarrel as their own; whereas the Spartans, together with the regard of they that ferve under a free State, have no his own fecurity, and no small hope of good other motive to do manfully, than their that would follow, suffered not Machanidas bare stipend. Further than this, when a to be idle; but alwayes made him ready to free State hath gotten the Victory, many fall upon his neighbours backs, and take of companies (if not all) of forreign Auxiliathan were theirs.

having stronger friends and weaker oppo- ficient to take from Philopamen the honour fition, than Cleomenes had found. But Phi- of the day ; had he not wifely observed the lopemen was ready to entertain him at Man- demeanour of Machanidas, and found in him tinea; where was fought between them a that error which might restore the Victory. great battel. The Tyrant had brought into The Tyrant with his Mercenaries gave chace the field upon Carts a great many of engines, unto those that fled: leaving behind him in wherewith to beat upon the Squadrons of good order of battel his Lacedemonians; his enemies, and put them in disorder. To whom he thought sufficient to deal with prevent this danger, Philopamen fent forth the Acheans, that were already dishearened all the Mercenaries, both of the Acheans Eight moneths were spent of that year, and of Machanidas, were drawn up to the rers of liberty; but to strengthen himself (as Polybius well observeth) by surmounting Polyb. ibidi theirs what he could, whilest they were en-forced, by greater necessity, to turn face good fellows will not take much pains to another way. Thus had he often done, espe- bring the War to an end. But the Victory of cially in the absence of Philip: whose sudden a Tyrant, makes him stand in need of more coming into those parts, or some other op- such helpers; because that after it he doth position made against him, had usually made wrong to more, as having more subjects; and him fail of his attempts. At the present he therefore stands in fear of more, that should was ftronger in men, than were the Acheans, feek to take revenge upon him. The ftipenand thought his own men better Souldiers diaries of the Acheans, being forced to give ground, were urged fo violently in their re-Whilest Philip therefore was busied else treat by those of Machanidas; that shortly where, he entered the Country of the Man- they betook themselves to flight: and could tineans: being not without hope to do as not be staid by any perswasions of Philopa-Cleamenes had done before him ; yea and per- men, but ran away quite beyond the battel haps to get the * Lordship of Peloponnesun , as of the Acheans. This disafter had been suf-

CHAP. IV.

by the flight of their companions. But when this his rashness had carried him out of Philip having peace with Rome, and with all fight, Philopemen advanced towards the Lacedamonians that stood before him. There lay between them athwart the Country a long ditch, without watter at that time, and therefore passable (as it seemed) without much difficulty, especially for Foot. The Lasedemonians adventured over it, as think- ed they indeed after a while (fuch was their ing themselves better Souldiers than the discipline and continual exercise) to ac-Achaans; who had in a manner already loft count themselves in matter of War inferiour the day. But hereby they greatly difordered to any, that should have brought against their own Battel; and had no fooner the them no great odds of number. As for the foremost of them recovered the further Macedonian, he made no great use of them. bank, than they were stoutly charged by the But when he had once concluded peace with Acheans, who drave them headlong into the the Romans and Etolians, he studied how ditch again. Their first ranks being broken, to enlarge his Dominion Eastward; fince all the rest began to shrink : so as Philopamen the fortune of his friends the Carthaginians getting over the ditch, easily chaced them declined in the West. He took in hand maout of the Field. Philopamen knew better ny matters together, or very neerly togehow to use his advantage, than Machanidas ther, and some of them not honest: wherehad done. He suffered not all his Army to in if the Acheans would have done him difband and follow the chace, but retained fervice, they must by helping him to oppress with him a sufficient strength, for the custo- others that never had wronged him, have dy of a bridge that was over the ditch, by taught him the way how to deal with which he knew that the Tyrant must come themselves. He greatly hated Attalus King back. The Tyrant with his Mercenaries re- of Pergamm, who had joyned with the Romans turning from the chace, looked very heavily and Etolians in War against him. when he saw what was fallen out. Yet, with a lusty troop of Horse about him, he made yet a Nobleman, otherwise than as he was towards the bridge: hoping to find the Achaans in diforder; and to fet upon their backs. as they were carelesly pursuing their Victory. But when he and his Company saw Philopamen ready to make good the bridge against them; then began every one to look, which way he might shift for himself. The Tyrant, with no more than two in his company, rode along the ditch fide; and fearchditch it felf, as he was getting over it, flew four thousand: and more than four thou-Mercenaries, probable it is, that the loss need.

1004

6. VI.

Greece , prepares against Asia. Of the Kings of Pergamus, Cappadocia, Pontus, Paphlagonia, Bithynia, and their Lineages. Of the Galatians.

DY this Victory the Acheans learned to think well of themselves. Neither need-

This Attalus, though a King, was scarce ennobled by his own, and by his Fathers vertue. His fortune began in Phileterm his Uncle: who being guelded, by reason of a mishap which he had when he was a child, grew afterwards thereby to be the more efteemed: as great men in those times repoled much confidence in Eunuchs, whole affections could not be obliged unto wives or children. He was entertained into the faed for an easie passage over. He was easily mily of Docimus, a Captain following Autidiscovered by his purple Cassock, and the gonus the first; and after the death of Anticostly trappings of his Horse. Philopamen gonne, he accompanied his Master, that betherefore leaving the charge of the bridge took himself to Lysmachus King of Thrace. unto another, coasted him all the way as he Lysmachus had a good opinion of him; and rode, and falling upon him at length in the put him in trust with his money and accounts. But when at length he stood in fear him there with his own hand. There died in of this King, that grew a bloody Tyrant; this Battel on the Lacedamonians side about he sled into Asia, where he seized upon the Town of Pergamus, and nine thousand tafand were taken prisoners. Of the Achean lents belonging to Lysmachus. The Town and money, together with his own fervice, was not greatly cared for; fince that War he offered unto Seleucus the first, that then was at an end, and for their money they was ready to give Lylmachus battel. His might hire more when they should have offer was kindly accepted, but never performed; for that selences, having flain 14smaches, died shortly after himself, before he made use of Phileterns or his money. So this Eunuch still retained Pergamus, with the Country round about it; and reigned therein twenty years as an absolute King. He faid to have been a poor Carter; and the strength, they forced their Neighbour Prinvounger perhaps not much better, before ces and Cities to pay them tribute: in the fuch time, they were raifed by the for tharp exaction whereof, they had no more rune of this Eunuch. Phileterus left his respect unto Attalus, than to any that had Kingdom to the elder of these, or to the worse deserved of them. By this they comfon of the elder, called Eumenes. This En- pelled him to fight against them: and he bemenes enlarged his Kingdom; making his ing victorious, compelled them to contain advantage of the diffention between Selen- themselves within the bounds of that Procus Calinicus and Antiochus Hierax , the vince , which took name from them in time fons of the second Antiochus. He fought a following, and was called Galatia. Yet conbattel with Hierax, neer unto Sardis, and tinued they still to oppress the weakest of won the Victory. At which time to animate their neighbours, and to fill up the Armies his men against the Gaules that served under of those that could best hire them. his Enemy, he used a pretty device. He wrote the word * Victory upon the hand of his the posterity of such, as had saved them-Soothfayer, in fuch colours as would eafily felves and their Provinces, in the flothful come off: and when the hot liver of the reign of the Persians; or in the busie times beast that was facrificed, had cleanly taken of Alexander, and his Macedonian followers. the print of the letters, He published this The Cappadocians were very ancient. For unto his Army as a Miracle, plainly fore- the first of their line had married with Aiefshewing that the gods would be affistant in fa, fifter unto the great King Cyrus. Their that Battel.

tation; and found themselves work in quar- have already sometimes mentioned. sels of their own making. They caused Prufine King of Bithynia to cease from his War against Bizantium. Whereunto when he had The Town of Chios taken by Philip, at the incondescended; they nevertheless within a while after invaded his Kingdom. He obtained against them a great Victory; and used it with great cruelty, sparing neither age nor sex. But the swarm of them increafing, they occupied the Region about Hellef-Pont where, in feating themselves, they were much beholding unto Attalus. Never-had two brethren: of which the elder is theless, presuming afterwards upon their

The Kings reigning in those parts, were Country was taken from them by Perdiccas. After this Victory, he grew a dreadful as is shewed before. But the son of that enemy to Selencus: who never durst attempt King, whom Perdiccas crucified, espying his to recover from him, by War, the Territory time while the Macedonians were at civil that he had gotten and held. Finally, when wars among themselves; recovered his Dohe had reigned two and twenty years, he minion, and passed it over to his off-spring. died by a furfeit of over-much drink , and The Kings of Pontus had also their beginleft his Kingdom to Attalus, of whom we ning from the Perstan Empire; and are said now entreat, that was fon unto Attalus the to have iffued from the royal house of Achayoungest brother of Philetarus. Attalus was menes. The Paphlagonians derived themselves an undertaking Prince, very bountiful, and from Pylemenes, a King that affifted Priamus no less valiant. By his own proper forces he at the war of Troy. These, applying themreftored his friend Ariarabes the Cappado- felves unto the times, were alwayes conformcian into his Kingdom, whence he had been able unto the strongest. The Ancestors of expelled. He was grievously molested by Prusias had begun to reign in Bythinia, some Acheus : who fetting up himself as King few generations before that of the great against Antiochen the Great, reigned in the Alexander. They lay somewhat out of the leffer Afa. He was besieged in his own City Macedonians way : by whom therefore, heof Pergamus: but by the help of the Tello- ving other employment, they were the less fage, a Nation of the Gauls, whom he called molested. Calantue, one of Alexanders Capover out of Thrace, he recovered all that he tains, made an expedition into their Counhad loft. When these Gauls had once got- try, where he was vanquished. They had ten footing in 4/4, they never wanted em- afterwards to do with a Lieutenant of Antiployment, but were either entertained by gonw, that made them somewhat more humsome of the Princes reigning in those quar-ble. And thus they shuffled, as did the ters, or interposed themselves without invi- rest, until the reign of Prussas, whom we

6. VII.

Stance of Prusias, King of Bithynia, and cruelly destroyed. By this and the like actions. Philip grows hateful to many of the Greeks: and is warred upon by Attalus King of Pergamus, and by the Rhodians.

Pauss as a neighbour King, had many quarrels with Attalus; whose greatness L11111 2

he suspected. He therefore strengtheaed him- faith of this King. But most of all others hereby he mightily offended no small part newly conceived against Philip. of Greece. Embaffadours came to him whilft what little trust was to be reposed in the two acres of their wall stood only upon felf, by taking to wife the daughter of Phi- was Attalus moved with confideration of the lip; as Attalus, on the contrary side, entred Macedonians violent ambition, and of his into a strict Confederacy with the Etolians, own estate. He had much to lose; and was Rhodians, and other of the Greeks. But not without hope of getting much, if he when Philip had ended his Ætolian war, and could make a strong party in Greece. He had was devising with Antiochus about tharing already, as a new King, followed the exambetween them two the Kingdom of Egypt, ple of Alexanders Captains, in purchafine wherein Ptolomy Philopater, a friend unto with much liberality the love of the Athethem both, was newly dead; and had left nians; which were notable Trumpeters of his fon Ptolomy Epiphanes, a young child, his other mens vertue, having loft their own. On heir : the Bythinian entreated this his Fa- the friendship of the Etolians he had cause ther-in-law to come over into Alia, there to to presume; having bound them unto him by win the Town of the Ciani, and bestow it good offices, many & great, in their late war upon him. Profias had no right unto the with Philip. The Rhodians that were mighty Town, nor just matter of quarrel against it : at Sea, and held very good intelligence with but it was fitly feated for him , and there- the Egyptians , Syrians , and many other withal rich. Philip came, as one that could Princes and States, he easily drew into a not well deny to help his Son in law. But streight alliance with him, by their hatred

Upon confidence in these his friends, but helay at the fiege, from the Rhodians, and most of all, in the ready affistance of the divers other States: intreating him to for- Rhodians, Attalus prepared to deal with the fake the enterprise. He gave dilatory, but Macedonian by open war. It had been unotherwise gentle answers: making shew as seasonable to procrastinate, and expect if he would condescend to their request, whereto the doings of the enemy tended; when he intended nothing less. At length since his desire to fasten upon Asia was manihe got the Town: where, even in presence fest, and his falshood no less manifest, than of the Embassadours, of whose solicitation was such his desire. They met with him he had feemed so regardful, he omitted no shortly not far from Chios, and fought with part of cruelty. Hereby he rendred him- him a battel at Sea: wherein though Attalia felf odious to his neighbours, as a perfidi- was driven to run his own Ship on ground, ous and cruel Prince. Especially his fact was hardly escaping to land: though the Admiral detested of the Rhodians, who had made of the Rhodians took his deaths wound: and vehement intercession for the poor Ciani: though Philip after the battel took harbour and were advertised by Embassadours of under a Promontory, by which they had purpose sent unto them from Philip, That fought, so that he had the gathering of the howsoever it were in his power to win the wracks upon the shore: Yet forasmuch as Town as foon as he lifted, yet in regard of he had fuffered far greater loss of Ships, and his love to the Rhodians, he was contented men, than had the enemy; and fince he durst to give it over. And by this his clemency, not in few dayes after put forth to Sea, when the Embassadours said, that he would mani- Attalus and the Rhodians came to brave him felt unto the world what flanderous in his Port; the honour of the victory was tongues they were, which noised abroad adjudged to his enemies. This notwithfuch reports, as went of his falshood and standing, Philip afterwards besieged and oppression. Whilest the Embassadours were won some Towns in Caria: whether only in declaming at Rhodes in the Theater to this a bravery, and to despight his opposites: or effect; there came some that made a true whether upon any hopeful defire of conrelation of what had hapned: shewing that quest, it is uncertain. The stratagem, by philip had sacked and destroyed the Town which he won Prinassus, is worthy of noting. of Cios, and, after a cruel flaughter of the He attempted it by a mine : and finding the Inhabitants , had made flaves of all that earth fo ftony , that it refifted his work ; he escaped the sword. If the Rhodians took nevertheless commanded the Pioners to this in great despight, no less were the Ato- make a noise under ground; and secretly in lians inflamed against him: fince they had the night time he raised great mounts about fent:a Captain to take charge of the Town; the entrance of the mine, to breed an opinibeing warned before by his doings at List on in the besieged, that the work went marmachia and Chalcedon (which he had with vellously forward. At length he sent word drawn from their Confederacy to his own) to the Towns men, that by his undermining,

wooden

purfuit.

6. VIII.

Colution of the Abydeni.

to make a noise in Rome; and fill the peo- things must be published abroad, if only to ples heads, if not with a defire of making predispose men unto the war, and give it war in Macedon, at least with a conceit that the more honest colour. it were expedient so to do. The Roman Se- Philip was a man of ill condition; and nate was perfectly informed of the state of therefore could not thrive by intermedling those Eastern Countries; and knew, that in the affairs of those that were more mighthere was none other Nation than the ty than himself. He was too unskilful, or Greek, which lay between them and the otherwise too unapt, to retain his old Lordship of Asia. These Greeks were facti- friends: yet would he needs be seeking new ous, and seldom or never at peace. As for enemies. And he found them such, as he dethe Macedonian; though length of time, and served to have them: for he offered his help continual dealings in Greece ever fince the to their destruction, when they were in mireigns of Philip and Alexander, had left no fery, and had done him no harm. It behoved that grievous war with Hannibal: wherein ceffity: which whileft it binds one party, or Vitens.

wooden props, to which if he gave fire, and they had given by Loan to the Republicks entred by a Breach, they should expect no all their mony : neither had they as yet remercy. The Prina fians little thought, that he ceived, neither did they receive until fifteen had fetcht all his earth and rubbish by night or tixteen years after this, their whole sum a great way off, to raise up those heaps back again. That part of payment also which they faw; but rather that all had which was already made, being not in prebeen extracted out of the mine. Wherefore fent mony, but much of it in Land : it bethey suffered themselves to be out-faced, hoved them to rest a while; and bestow the and gave up the Town as loft, which the more diligence in tilling their grounds, by enemy had no hope to win by force. But how much they were the less able to bestow Philip could not stay to settle himself in those cost. Wherefore they took no pleasure to parts. Attalus and the Rhodians were too hear, that Attalus and the Rhodians had fent strong for him at Sea, and compelled him Embassadours to solicite them against Phito make haste back into Macedon; whither lip, with report of his bold attempts in they followed him all the way in manner of Alia: or that M. Aurelius, their Agent in Greece, had fent letters of the same tenour to the Senate, and magnified his intelligence, by fetting out the preparations of this dangerous enemy, that folicited not only the The Romans, after their Carthaginian War, Towns upon the Continent, but all the: feek matter of quarrel against Philip. The Islands in those Seas , visiting them in Athenians upon flight cause, proclaim War person, or sending Embassadours, as one that against Philip; moved thereto by Attalus; meant shortly to hold war with the Romans whom they flatter. Philip wins divers upon their own ground. Fhilip had indeed no fuch intent: neither was he much too the Roman Embassadour. The furious resulting the control of the first was the much too the Roman Embassadour. The furious resulting the control of the furious resulting the control of the furious resulting the control of the control Greece, to be refifted by Attalus and the Rhodians; especially with the help of the Hele Asiatique matters, which no way Etolians their good friends, and (in a manconcerned the Romans, yet ferved well ner) his own professed enemies. But such difference between him and the Naturals: him therefore, either to have strained his yet most of them abhorred his Dominion, forces to the utmost in making war upon because he was originally forfooth a Barba- them; or in defisting from that injurious rian: many of them hated him upon anci-courfe, to have made amends for the wrongs ent quarrels: and they that had been most past, by doing friendly offices of his own. beholding unto him, were nevertheless wea- accord. But he, having broken that League ry of him, by reason of his personal faults. of peace, which is of all other the most na-All this gave hope, that the affairs of Greece tural, binding all men to offer no violence would not long detain the Roman Armies: willingly, unless they think themselves justespecially since the divisions of the Country ly provoked; was afterwards too fondly were fuch , that every petty Estate was perswaded , that he might well be secure of apt to take Counsel apart for it self; with- the Romans, because of the written Covenants out much regarding the generality. But of peace between him and them. There is the poor Commonalty of Rome had no great not any form of Oath, whereby such Araffection to such a chargeable enterprise. ticles of peace can be held inviolable, save sy Fide-They were already quite exhausted, by only * by the water of Styx, that is, by New de fan.

1006

CHAP. IV.

more.

that he shall be a loser who starts from the Citizens, with their wives and children, in Conditions; it may so long (and so long as solemn a pomp as they could devise, to only) be prefumed, that there shall be no meet and honour the King. They enterbreach. Till Hannibal was vanquished, the tained the Romans that were with him, in Romans never hearkened after Philip: for very loving manner: but towards Attalme necessity made them let him alone. But himself they omitted no point of observance when once they had a peace with Carthage; which their flattery could suggest. At his then was the River of Styx dryed up : and first coming into the City, they called the then could they swear as * Mercury did in people to Assembly: where they defired the Comedy, by their own felves, even by him to honour them with his prefence, and their good fwords, that they had good reason let them hear him speak. But he excused to make war upon him. The voyage of so- himself; saying, That with an evil grace he pater into Africk, and the present war against should recount unto them those many be-Attalm, were matter of quarrel as much nefits, by which he studied to make them as needed: or if this were not enough; know what love he bore them. Wherefore the Athenians helped to furnish them with it was thought fit, that he should deliver in

of no more than their own barren Territory, claration were; first, what he had willingly took state upon them nevertheles, as in done for their fake: then, what had lately their ancient fortune. Two young Gentlemen paffed between him and Philip: laftly, an exof Acarnania entring into the Temple of Ce- hortation unto them, to declare themselves res, in the dayes of Initiation (wherein were against the Macedonians, whilest he with delivered the mysteries of Religion, or ra- the Rhodians and the Romans, were willing ther of idolatrous superstition, vainly said to and ready to take their part : which if they be available unto felicity after this life) now refused to do, he protested, that afterdiscovered themselves by some impertinent wards it would be vain to crave his help. questions, to be none of those that were ini- There needed little intreaty: for they were tiated. Hereupon they were brought before as willing to proclaim the war, as he to the officers: and though it was apparent, defire it. As for other matters, they loaded that they came into the place by meer error, him with immoderate honours: and obtainnot thinking to have therein done amis; yet, ed, That unto the ten Tribes, whereof the as it had been for some hainous crime, they body of their Citizens consisted, should were put to death. All their Countrey-men be added another, and called after his at home took this in ill part; and fought to name; as if he were in part one of their revenge it as a publick injury, by war upon Founders. To the Rhodians they also dethe Athenians. Procuring therefore of Phi- creed a Crown of Gold, in reward of their lip fome Macedonians to help them , they vertue ; and made all the Rhodians free Cientred into Attica: who wasted it with fire tizens of Athens. and fword; and carried thence a great | Thusbegan a great noise of war, wherein booty. This indignity stirred up the high-little was left unto the Romans for their minded Athenians; and made them think part; Attalus and the Rhodians taking all upon doing more, than they had ability to upon them. But while these were vainly misperform. All which at the present they could spending the time, in seeking to draw the do, was to fend Embassadors to King Attalus; Ætolians to their party : that contrary to gratulating his happy success against Philip, their old manner were glad to be at quiet: understood that the Roman Embassadors, the Hellespont. Likewise passing over the hovering about Greece for matter of intellito renew the war. The Athenians came out weak an aid to make good the place. The both unto performance, making it apparent, of their City, all the Magistrates, Priests, and writing, what he would have to be pro-The Athenians, being at this time Lords pounded. He did fo. The points of his Deand intreating him to visit their City. Atta Philip won the Towns of Maronea and Elus was hereto the more willing, because he nus, with many other strong places about gence, had a purpose to be there at the same won it , though he was fain to stay there time. So he went thither, accompanied, be long. The Town held out, rather upon fides his own followers, with some of the an obstinate resolution, and hope of succour Rhedians. Landing in the Piraus, he found from Attalus and the Rhedians, than any the Romans there, with whom he had much great ability to defend it felf against so mighfriendly conference: they rejoycing that he ty an Enemy. But the Rhodians fent thither continued enemy to Philip; and he being only one Quadrireme Gallie: and Attalus no less glad, when he heard of their purpose no more than three hundred men, far too great negligence of them that had taken fo lador; and had the Town immediately much upon them. lius, and P. Sempronius, were fent unto Pio- ry one of them; and fet their Town on firet lomy Epiphanes King of Egypt , to acquain him with their Victory against Hannibal and when Philip denied to accept them upon the Carthaginians; as also to thank him for reasonable conditions. But having in delicehis favour unto them shewed in that War, rate fight, once repelling him from the and to defire the continuance thereof, if Breach, loft the greatest number of their they should need it against Philip. This Egyptian King was now in the third or fourth nours and Ancients of the City to change year of his reign, which (as his father this refolution; and take such peace as gould philopater had done before him) be began a be gotten. So they carried out their Gold very young boy. The courtefie for which the and Silver to Philip: about which, whileft Romans were to thank him, was that out of they were busie, the memory of their outh Egypt they had lately been supplied with wrought so effectually in the younger fores corn, in a time of extream Dearth; when that, by exhortation of the Priefts, they fell the mileries of War had made all their own to murdering their women, children; and Provinces unable to relieve them. This mef- themselves. Hereof the King had so little fage could not but be welcome to the Eggp | compassion, that he said, he would grant the tian: fince it was well known, how Philip and Abydeni three dayes leifure to die: and to antiochus had combined themselves against that end forbade his men to enter the Towis him, conspiring to take away his Kingdom. or hazzard themselves in interrupting the And therefore it might in reason be hoped, violence of those mad sools. that he, or his Councel for him, should offer to supply the Romans with corn: since this their Macedonian Expedition concerned his Estate no less than theirs.

But as the errand was for the most part complemental; so had the Embassadors both leisure and direction from the Senate, to look unto the things of Greece by the way. dancy upon Attalas. Hereto Philip answered, Prefumptuous. But I would wish ye to remem-

Roman Embassadors wondred much at this | than the Roman. So he dismissed the Embasvielded to his discretion. The people had Thefe Embaffadors, C. Claudius, M. Amy. entertained a resolution, to have died evebinding themselves hereto by a fearful dath Youth; it was thought meet by the Gover-

ø. IX.

The Romans decree War against Philip, and fend one of their Confuls into Greece, as it were in defence of the Athenians their Confederates. How poor the Athenians were 4 this time both in quality and estate.

Wherefore they agreed, that M. Emplims the youngest of them should step aside, and the youngest of them should step aside, and the ship, to trie if he could make him suntines: which indeed it neerly resembled though Rome was not alike it. See fled in the was like to carry. Emylius, coming to Phi- quarrel. But to help themselves with preip, tells him that his doings are contrary to tence for the War, they had found out the League that he had made with the Ro another Saguntum, even the City of Athens mans. For Attalas and the Rhodians, upon which if the Macedonian should win, then whom he made War, were Confederate with rested there no more to do, than that he Rome: and the Town of Abydus, which he should presently embarque himself for was now belieging, had a kind of depen- Italy, whither he would come, not as Hamnibal from Saguntum, in five moneths, but in That Attalio and the Rhodians had made the short space of five days sayling. Thus War upon him: and that he did only requite P. sulpitius the Conful told the multitude. them with the like. Do you also (faid Emy. when he exhorted them to make War upon line) requite these poor Abydeni with such ter- Philip; which at his first propounding they rible War , for any the like Invalion by them had denied. The example of Pyribus was first made upon you? The King was angry to by him alledged; to shew, what Philip, hear himself thus taken short : and there- with the power of a greater Kingdom, fore he roundly made answer to Empline : might dare to undertake : as also the for-It is your youth, Sir, and your beauty, and (above tunate voyage of Scipio into Africk; to shew all,) your being a Roman, that makes you thus the difference of making War abroad, and admitting it into the bowels of their own ber the League that ye have made with me, and Country. By such arguments was the Comto keep it : If ye do otherwise, I will make je monalty of Rome indeed to believe, that understand, that the Kingdom, and Name of this War with the Macedonian was both Macedon is in matter of War , no less noble just and necessary. So it was decreed : and immediately the same Consul hasted away | Pyrats and Free-booters, were by the more towards Macedon, having that Province al- eloquent than war-like Athenians, in this lotted unto him before, and all things in declining Age of their Fortune and Vertue. a readiness, by order from the Senate; who called a Siege. From such detriment the arfollowed other Motives than the people rival of claudius, and shortly after of three must be acquainted with. Great thanks Rhodian Gallies, easily preserved them. As were given to the Athenian Embassadors, for the Athenians themselves, they that had of their constancy (as was faid) in not been wont, in ancient times to undertake the changing their faith at such times as they conquests of Egypt, Cyprus, and Cicil; to Rood in danger of being besieged. And make War upon the great Persian King, and indeed great thanks were due to them, to hold so much of Greece in subjection . as though not upon the same occasion. For the made them redoubtable unto all the rest; people of Rome had no cause to think it a had now no more than three Ships, and those benefit unto themselves; that any Greek open ones, not much better than long boats. Town, refusing to sue unto the Macedonian Yet thought they not themselves a whit the for peace, requested their help against him. worse men, but stood as highly upon the But the Senate, intending to take in hand the Conquest of the Eastern parts, had rea- had been still their own. fon to give thanks unto those, that ministred the occasion. Since therefore it was an untrue fuggestion, That Philip was making The Town of Chalcis in Eubera taken and ready for Italy : and fince neither Attalus, the Rhodians, nor any other State in those quarters, defired the Romans to give them protection : thefe busie-headed Athenians, who falling out with the Acarnanians, and consequently with Philip, a matter of Maygame, (as was shewed before) sent Embaliadors into all parts of the World, even to Ptolomy of Egypt, and to the Romans, as well as to Attalus and others their neighbours; must be accepted as cause of the War, and Authors of the benefit thence redounding.

glory and vertue of their Ancestors, as if it

ø. X.

fackt by the Romans & their Affociates, that lay in Garrison at Athens. Philip attempteth to take Athens by surprise: wasteth the Countrey about, and makes a journy into Peloponnesus. Of Nabis the Tyrant of Lacedæmon, and his wife. Philip offers to make War against Nabis for the Achæans. He returneth home through Attica, which he spoileth again: and provides against the Enemies. Some exploits of the Romans. Divers Princes joyn with them. Great labouring to draw the Ætolians into the War.

Nevertheless as it loves to fall out where Philip returning home from Abydu, the meaning differs from the pretence; the heard news of the Roman Conful his bedoings of P. Sulpitius the Conful were fuch, ing about Apollonia. But ere he stirred forth as might have argued Athens to be the least to give him entertainment, or perhaps bepart of his care. He failed not about Pelo- fore he had well resolved, whether it were ponness, but took the ready way to Mace- best a while to sit still, and try what might don, and landing about the River of Apfin, be done for obtaining of peace, or whether between Dyrrhacium and Apollonia, there to make opposition, and resist these Invaders began the War. Soon upon his coming, with all his forces: he received advertisethe Athenian Embassadours were with him ment from Chaleis of a grievous mishap there and craved his help: whereof they could befallen him, by procurement of the Athemake no benefit whilest he was far from niams. For C. Clauding with his Romans, them. They bemoaned themselves as men finding no such work at Athens as they had besieged, and intreated him to deliver expected, or was answerable to the fame them. For which cause he sent unto them that went abroad, purposed to do somewhat C. Claudius with twenty Gallies, and a com- that might quicken the War, and make his petent number of men: but the main of his own imployment better. He grew foon weaforces he retained with him, for the profe ry of fitting as a Scar-crow, to fave the cution of a greater design. The Athenians Athenians grounds from spoil; and therefore were not indeed besieged: only some Ro- gladly took in hand a business of more vers from Chalcie, in the Isle of Eubea, and importance. The Town of Chalcie was vefome bands of adventures out of Corinth ry negligently guarded by the Macedonian used to take their Ships, and spoil their Souldiers therein, for that there was no Enefields, because they had declared themselves my at hand: and more negligently by the against King Philip, that was Lord of these Towns-men, who reposed themselves upon two Towns. The robberies done by these their Garrison. Hereof claudian having a little before break of day, took it by Sca- forth at a gate, whereto they faw Philip lado. He used no mercy, but slew all that make approach. The King was glad of this; came in his way: and wanting men to keep reckoning all those his own, that were thus it, (unless he should have left the heartless hardy. He therefore only willed his men to Athenians to their own defence) he let it on follow his example; and prefently gave fire; confuming the Kings Magazines of charge upon them. In that fight he gave fin-Corn, and all provisions for War, which gular proof of his valour: and beating down were plenteoully filled. Neither were he many of the Enemics with his own hands, and his Affociates contented with the great drave them with great flaughter back into abundance of spoil which they carried the City. The heat of his courage transportaboard their Ships, and with inlarging all ed him further than discretion would have those, whom Philip, as in a place of most allowed, even to the very gate. But he retifecurity, kept there imprisoned: but to red without harm taking; for that they flew their despight and hatred unto the which were upon the Towers over the gate, King, they overthrew and brake in pieces could not use their casting weapons against the Statues to him there erected. This him, without much indangering their own done, they hasted away towards Athens: people that were thronging before him into where the news of their exploit was like to the City. There was a temple of Hercules , a be joyfully welcomed. The King lay then place of exercise, with a Grove, and many at Demetries, about some 20. miles thence; goodly Monuments besides, neer adjoyning whither then these tidings, or part of them, unto Albens: of which he spared none; but were brought him, though he saw that it suffered the rage of his anger to extend, was too late to remedy the matter; yet he even unto the sepulchres of the dead. The made all haste to take revenge. He thought next day came the Romans, and some Comto have taken the Athenians, with their trufty panies of Attalis his men from Agina; too friends, busie at work in ransacking the late in regard of what was already past: but Town, and loading themselves with spoil: in good time to prevent him of satisfying but they were gone before his coming. Five his anger to the full, which as yet he had thousand light-armed foot he had with him, not done. So he departed from thence to and three hundred horse: whereof leaving Corinth, and hearing that the Acheans held at Chalcis only a few to bury the dead, he a Parliament at Argos, he came thither to marched from thence away speedily to them unexpected. ward Athens: thinking it not inpossible to The Acheans were devising upon War: take his enemies in the joy of their Victory, as full of negligence, as they had taken Chalcis. Neither had hemuch failed of his expered up in the room of Machanidas, did greater Ration, if a Foot-post that stood Scout for mischief than any that went before him. This the City upon the borders, had not descried Tyrant relied wholly upon his mercenahim afar off, and swiftly carried word of ries: and of his subjects had no regard. He his approach to Athens. It was mid-night was a cruel oppreffor, a greedy extortioner when this Post came thither; who found upon those that lived under him; and one all the Town alleep, as fearless of any dan- that in his natural condition smelt rankly ger. But the Magistrates, hearing this re- of the Hangman. In these qualities, his port, caused a Trumpet out of their Citadel wife Apega was very fitly matched with to found the Alarm, and with all speed made him, since his dexterity was no greater in ready for defence. Within a few hours Phi- spoiling the men, then hers in sleecing their advertisement, failed thither by night, for kept of their own, besides the great multifear of being descried: and arriving there rude of Citizens; they adventured to iffue lip was there; who sceing the many lights, wives; whom she would never suffer to be and other figns of busie preparation usual in at quiet, till they had presented her with fuch a case, understood that they had news all their jewels and apparel. Her husband was Liv. Liz. of his coming; and therefore willed his fo delighted with her property, that he men to repose themselves till it were day. It caused an Image to be made, lively repreis like, that the paucity of his followers fenting her; and apparelled it with such didhelp well to animate the Citizens, which costly garments as she used to wear. But it except beheld them from the walls. Wherefore was indeed an Engine, ferving to torment 2006 Lts. though Claudius were not yet returned men. Hereof he made use, when he meant to (who was to fetch a compass about by Sea, try the vertue of his Rhetorick. For calling and had no cause of haste) yet having in the unto him some rich man, of whose money he Town some mercenary Souldiers, which they was desirous; he would bring him into the room where this counterfeit Apega stood, agreed before, for preparing War against and there use all his art of perswasion, to get Nabis, he brake up the Assembly, with every what he defired, as it were by good will. mans good liking; whereas in former times. If he could not so speed, but was answered he had been thought no better than one of with excuses; then took he the refractory the Kings Parasites. denyer by the hand, and told him, that perhaps his Wife Apega (who sate by in a Chair) in his purpose with the Acheans. Neverthecould perswade more effectually. So he led less he gathered up among them a few him to the Image, that role up and opened Voluntaries; and fo returned by Carinth back the arms, as it were for imbracement. Those into Attica. There he met with Philocles arms were full of tharp iron nails, the like one of his Captains, that with two thouland whereof was also sticking in the breasts, men had been doing what harm he might though hidden with her clothes: and herewith the griped the poor wretch, to the strength, he attempted the Castle of Eleusne. pleasure of the Tyrant, that laughed at his the haven of Pyreus, and even the City of cruel death. Such, and worse (for it were Athens. But the Romans made such haste long to tell all here that is spoken of after him by Sea, thrusting themselves into him) was Nabis in his government. In his every of these places; that he could no more dealings abroad he combined with the Ato- than wreak his anger upon those goodly lians, as Machanidas and Lycurgus had done before him. By these he grew into acquaintance with the Romans; and was compre- destroyed all the works of their notable hended in the League which they made with Artificers, wrought in excellent Marble; Philip, at the end of their former War. Of Philopemens vertue he stood in fear : and having long ago been Masters of the Sea. therefore durst not provoke the Acheans, as had brought from other places, where best long as they had such an able Commander. choice was found. Neither did he only But when Cacliades, a far worse Captain, was pull all down : but caused his men to break their Prætor, and all, or the greatest part of the very stones, that they might be unsertheir Mercenaries were discharged; Phi- viceable to their reparation. His loss at lopumen being also gone into Crete, to fol- Chalcis being thus revenged upon Athens. low his beloved occupation of War; then he went home into Macedon: and there did Nabis fall upon their Territory; and made provision, both against the Roman wasting all the fields, made them distrust Consul that lay about Apollonia; and their own fafety in the Towns.

1012

preparing for War, when Philip came among Among his other cares, he forgot not the them, and had set down what proportion Atolians : to whose Parliament, shortly of Souldiers every City of their Corpora- to be held at Naupactus , he fent an Emtion should surnish out. But Philip willed bassage, requesting them to continue in them not to trouble themselves with the care his friendship. Thus was Philip occuof this bufiness; forasmuch as he alone would pied. ease them of this War, and take the burden upon himself. With exceeding joy and upon the River of Apple. Thence he sent thanks they accepted of this kind offer. forth Applitus his Lieutenant, with part of to fend a few men to Corinth, and some Com might fecurely pursue the War against Na-So passing the Decree, upon which they had The success of this Expedition, though

It grieved the King to have thus failed Temples, with which the Land of Attica was at that time singularly beautified. So he which they had in plenty of their own : or against the Dardanians, with other his bad Against this Tyrant the Acheans were neighbours, which were likely to infest him.

Sulpitius the Roman Conful encamped But then he told them, That whilest he the Army to waste the borders of Macedon. made War upon Lacedamon, he ought not to Apultius took fundry Castles and Towns; leave his own Towns unguarded. In which using such extremity of sword and fire at respect he thought they would be pleased Antipatria, the first good Town which he won by force, that none durst afterwards panies into he Isle of Eubwa; that so he make resistance, unless they knew themselves able to hold out. Returning towards the bis. Immediately they fourd out his device; Conful with his spoil, he was charged in the which was none other, than to engage their Reer, upon the passage of a brook, by Nation in his War against the Romans. Athenagoras a Macedonian Captain : but the Wherefore their Prætor Cycliades made him Romans had the better, and killing many answer, That their Laws forbade them to of these enemies, took prisoners many more, conclude any other matters in their Parlia- to the increase of their booty, with ment, than those for which it was assembled. which they arrived in safety at their Gamp. it were not great, yet ferved to draw into I then against it, who fought to break it now. the Roman friendship those that had for It would have troubled the Romans, to an. These were Pleuratus, the son of Scerdi- the Macedonian had spoken the very truth. Lidas the Illyrian: Aminander King of the in shewing whereunto this their Patronage, Athamanians, and Bato the fon of Longarus. their assistance unto the Consul, who thanked them: and faid, That he would shortly of eloquence, and matter of recrimination make use of Pleuratus and Bato, when he en- enough, to make Philip odious. These afof Aminander, whose Country lay between the Etolians and Thessaly, might be perhaps by the name of Barbarians; knowing in available with the Ætolians, to ftir them up against Philip.

CHAP. IV.

the Etolian Parliament at hand. Thither came Embassadors from the Macedonian, Romans, and Athenians. Of which, the Macedonian spake first, and said: That as there and all the rest of Greece, should feel the was nothing fallen out, which should occa- fame that Attica had felt; yea, that Athens it fion the breach of peace between his Master felf, together with Minerva, Jupiter, Ceres, and the Atolians; so was it to be hoped, that and other of the gods, were like to have they would not suffer themselves, without felt, if the Walls and the Roman arms had not good cause to be carried away after other defended them. mens fancies. He prayed them to confider, how the Romans heretofore, had made shew, as if their War in Greece tended only to the of all those, in whose defence they had heredefence of the Etolians, and yet notwith- tofore taken Arms, went roundly to the standing had been angry, that the Ætolians, by making peace with Philip, had no longer need of fuch their Patronage. What might that the Atolians had without their conit be that made them to buffe, in obtruding fent made peace : whereof fince the Etolians their protection upon those that needed it must excuse themselves, by alledging that not? Surely it was even the general hatred, the Romans, being busied with Carthage, which these Barbarians bore unto the Greeks. wanted leisure to give them aid convenient; For even after the same fort had they lent so this excuse being now taken away, and their help to the Mamertines: and afterwards the Romans wholly bent against their comdelivered Syracuse, when it was oppressed by mon Enemy, it concerned the Etolians to Carthaginian Tyrants; but now both Syra- take part with them in their war and victory, cufe and Messana, were subject unto the Rods unless they had rather perish with Philip. and Axes of the Romans. To the same effect he alledged many examples, adding, That which were so vehement, in offering their in like fort it would happen to the Etoli- help ere it was desired, were themselves carans: who if they drew such masters into ried unto the War by more earnest motives. Greece, must not look hereafter to hold, as than a simple desire to help those friends, now free Parliaments of their own, wherein with whom they had no great acquainto consult about War and Peace: the Ro- tance. This may have been the cause, why fend them fuch a Moderator, as went every year from Rome to Syracufe. Wherefore he though he told his Country-men, That by merly no good inclination to the Macedoni- frame a good answer to these objections. For which they offered with fuch importunity, Prince of the Dardanians. They offered did tend. Wherefore the Athenians were fet on by them to speak next : who had store tred into Macedon: but that the friendship firmed, that it was a great impudence in the Macedonian Embassador, to call the Romans what barbarous manner his own King had, in few dayes past, made War upon the gods So the present care was wholly set upon themselves, by destroying all their Temples in Attica. Herewithal they made a pittiful reherfal of their own calamities: and faid, that if Philip might have his will, Ætolia,

> Then fpake the Romans: who excusing, as well as they could, their own oppression point in hand. They faid, that they had of late made War in the Ætolians behalf, and

It might easily be perceived, that they mans would ease them of this care, and Dorymachus the Etolian Prætor shifted concluded, that it was best for them, whilst referving themselves, till the matter were as yet they might, and whilst one of them as inclined one way or other, they might afyet could help the other, to continue in terwards take part with those that had the their League with Philip: with whom if at better fortune. His answer was, first, in any time, upon light occasion, they hapned general terms; That over-much haste was to fall out, they might as lightly be recon- an enemy to good counsel: for which ciled : and with whom they had three years cause they must further deliberate, ere they ago made the peace which still continued; concluded. But coming nearer to the matalthough that the very same Romans were ter in hand, he passed a Decree. That the Mmmmmm 2

CHAP. IV.

CHAP. IV.

the States, and therein conclude upon this bu- that the King was unwilling to hazzard all fines; any Law to the contrary notwithstand- at first upon a Cast, and therefore sent for ing: whereas otherwise it was unlawful to Perseus with his Companies, to increase his treat of such affairs, excepting two of their own forces: yet being no less unwilling to great Parliaments, that were held at fet lose too much in reputation; he made shew

1014

s. XI.

the Roman Fleet.

of the Atolians. He thought them hereby ed some notable detriment, if the Kings didisappointed in the very beg nning, of one rections had been well followed. For when great help; and meant himself to disappoint Athenagoras began to fall back, they them of another. His son Ferseus, a very charged him so hotly, that they drave him boy, was fent to keep the Streights of Fela- to an hasty flight, and pursued him as hard gonia against the Dardanians; having with as they were able. But the Captains of the him some of the Kings Councel, to govern Targettiers, not staying to let them run into both him and his Army. It was judged, as the danger, discovered themselves before it may feem, that the presence of the Kings was time; and thereby made frustrate the fon, how young foever, would both encou- work to which they were appointed. The rage his Followers, and terrifie the Enemies, Conful hereby gathered, that the King had by making them at least believe, that he some desire to try the fortune of a battel: was not weakly attended. And this may which he therefore presented the second have been the reason, why the same Perseus, time: leading forth his Army, and setting it a few years before this, was in like manner in order, with Elephants in the front : a lest upon the borders of Atolia by his fa- kind of help which the Romans had never ther; whom earnest business called thence used before, but had taken these of late another way. No danger of enemies be- from the Carthaginians. Such are the alteing left on either hand; it was thought that rations wrought by Time. It was scarce the Macedonian Fleet under Heraclides, above fourscore years ere this, that Pyrthu the Conful.

Macedon towards Illyria, about the Moun- ans and Greeks have none. Philip had patitains of Candavia; that running along from ence to let the Conful brave him at his Hamus in the North, until they joyn in the Trenches: wherein he did wisely; for the Ro-South with Pindus, inclose the Western man had greater need to fight, than he. Sulparts of Macedon. Two or three dayes they picius was unwilling to lose time: neither lay in fight the one of the other, without could he without great danger, lying fo near making offer of battel. The Contul was the the Enemy, that was strong in horse, send his first that issued forth of his Camp into the men to fetch in corn out of the fields. Whereopen field. But Philip was not confident in fore he removed 8. miles off: prefuming that with Ikirmifi. These were easily van-quished by the Romans, and driven back pleasure: eventill their presumption, and his

Prætor might at any time call an Affembly of into their Camp. Now although it was so a day after, as if he would have fought. He had found the advantage of a place fit for ambush, wherein he bestowed as many as he thought meet of his Targettiers: and for The meeting of Philip with the Romans, and gave charge to Athenageras, one of his Capshirmifting with them on his borders. The tains, to provoke out the Romans to fighte Ætolians invade his Dominions, and are instructing both him and his Targettiers. beaten home, Some doings of Attalus and how to behave themselves respectively, as opportunity should fall out. The Romans had no mistrust of any ambush . having Dillip was glad to hear, that the Romans fought upon the same ground a day before. had sped no better in their solicitation Wherefore perhaps they might have sustainwould ferve to keep Attalus , with the carried Elephants out of Greece into Italy, to Rhodians and Romans, from doing harm by affright the Romans, who had never feen Sea, when the Kings back was turned: who any of those beasts before. But now the same took his journey Westward against Sulpicius Romans (whilst possibly some were yet alive, which had known that Expedition of Pyr-The Armies met in the Country of the rbus) came into Macedon, bringing Elepeffaretii, a people in the utmost borders of phants with them: whereof the Macedonithe strength which he had then about him; Philip would not adventure to meet him on and therefore thought it better to fend forth even ground: and so the more boldly he sufsome of his light-armed Mercenaries, and fered his Forragers to over-run the Counfome part of horse, to entertain them try. The King was nothing forry of this: but own supposed fear, should make them care- | Consul with as much dulness, for his dayes less. When this was come to pass, he took service. A little longer stay would have deall his horse, and light-armed foot, with livered the King from these enemies withwhich he occupied a place in the mid-way, out any blow: fince when all the fields between the Forragers and their Camp, about them were walted, they must needs There he stayed in covert with part of his have retired back to the Sea. On the other forces , to keep the passages that none side , it was not thought unlikely , That if fould escape. The rest he sent abroad the the Romans following the King, had set up-Countrey, to fall upon the stragglers: wil- on his Camp, at such time as he fled thither, ling them to put all to the fword, and let half amazed with either being flain or tanone runhome with news to the Camp. The ken, they might have won it. But that noflaughter was great: and those which esca- ble Historian, Livie, (as is commonly his ped the hands of them that were fent abroad manner ) hath judiciously observed. That to fcowre the fields, lighted all or most of neither the one, nor the other, were much them upon the King and his companies in too blame in this days work. For the main their flight : so as they were cut off by the body of the Kings Army lav safe in his way. Long it was ere the Camp had news Camp; and could not be so assonished with of this. But in the end there escaped some : the loss of two or three hundred horse, that who though they could not make any per- it should therefore have abandoned the defeet relation how the matter went: yet by fence of the Trenches. And as for the Kine telling what had hapned to themselves, himself, he was advertised, that Pleuratur raised a great multitude. Sulpicius here- the Illyrian, and the Dardanians, were falupon fends forth all his horse, and bids them len upon his Country; when they found the help their fellows where they saw it need passage thereinto open, after Persen was ful: He himself with the Legions follow-called away from custody of the Streights. kiffed.

ed with improvident rafiness; and the therefore he returned back to Apollonia.

ed. The companies of horse divided them- This was it which made him adventure to felves, accordingly as they met with adver- do somewhat betimes; that he might set tifements upon the way, into many parts: the Romans going the fooner, and afternot knowing where was most of the dan- wards look unto his troublesome neighger. Such of them as lighted upon Philips bours. In consideration of this, Philip was Troops, that were canvassing the field, took desirous to clear himself of the Romans, as their talk where they found it : But the foon as he might. And to that purpose he sent main bulk of them fell upon the King him- unto the Conful; requesting a day of truce felf. They had the disadvantage; ascoming for burial of the dead. But instead of so dofewer, and unprepared, to one that was reading, he marched away by night, and left fires dy for them. So they were beaten away; as in his Camp to beguile the enemy, as if he their fellows also might have been, if the had not stirred out of the place. Sulpicius, King had well bethought himself, and given when he heard of the Kings departure, was over in time. But while , not contented not flow to follow him. He overtook the Mawith fuch an harvest, he was too greedy cedonians in a place of strength, which they about a poor gleaning; the Roman Legions had fenced (for it was a woody ground) by appeared in fight: which emboldened their cutting down trees, and laying them athwart horfe to make a re-charge. Then the dan- the way where it was most open. In making ger apparent, enforced the Macedonians to of fuch places good, the Macedonian Phalook to their own safety. They ran which lank was of little use; being a square batway they could: and (as men that lie in tel of pikes, not fit for every ground. The wait for others, are seldom heedful of that Archers of Crete were judged, and were inwhich may befal themselves) to escape the deed, more serviceable in that case. But they Enemy; they declined the fairest way; so were few; and their arrows were of small as they were plunged in Marishes and Bogs, force against the Roman shields. The Macewherein many of them were loft. The Kings donians therefore helped them by flinging of borfe was flain under him: and there had stones. But to no purpose. For the Romans been cast away, if a loving subject of his got within them; and forced them to quit be had not alighted, mounted him upon his the place. This Victory (fuch as it was) laid own horse, and delivered him out of open unto the Contul some poor Towns peril, at the expence of his own life, thereabout; which partly were taken by that running on foot was overtaken and strong hand, partly yielded for fear. But the spoil of these, and of the fields adjoyning, In the common opinion Philip was charg- was not sufficient to maintain his Army; and

The Dardanians, hearing that Philip was | having been long absent from Italy: whither come back, withdrew themselves a pace out fain, they would have returned, when by of the Country. The King fent Athenagoras their Colonels they were shipped for Maceto wait upon them home; whilest he him felf went against the Atolians. For Damocritto the Prator of the Atolians, who had whereof the miss is not great, since he did reserved himself and his Nation unto the nothing memorable. Valerius Antius, as we event of things, hearing report, that Philip finde in Livie, hath adorned this Villim with was beaten once and again : as al'o that a great exploit against Philip. Yet fince Livie Plearatus and the Dardanians were fallen himself, an Historian to whom few of the upon Macedon; grew no less busie on the best are matchable, could finde no such fudden, than before he had been wife. He thing recorded in any good Author : we perswaded his Nation to take their time: may reasonably believe, that Villius his year and so, not staying to proclaim War, joyn- was idle. ed his forces with Aminander the Athamanian; and made invasion upon Theffaly. They the Romans found more trouble than could took, and cruelly facked a tew Towns: have been expected with the Gauls. Their whereby they grew confident; as if, with Colony of Placentia, a goodly and strong out any danger, they might do what they Town, which neither Hannibal, nor after lifted. But Philip came upon then ere they him Asdrubal, had been able to force: looked for him: and killing them as they was taken by these Barbarians, and burnt lay dispersed, was like to have taken their in a manner to the ground. In like fort Cre-Camp, if Aminander more warie than the mona was attempted: but faved her felf, Atolians, had not helped at need, and made taking warning by her neighbours calamithe Retrait through his own mountainous ty. Amilcar a Carthaginian, that stayed be-Country.

affisted by Attalus and the Rhodians, had their enterprises. This when the Romans taken some small Islands in the Agean Sea. heard, they sent Embassadours to the Car-They took likewise the Town of Oreum in thaginians: giving them to understand, That the Isle of Eubera: and some other places if they were not weary of the peace, it bethereabout. The Towns were given unto hoved them to call home, and deliver up, Attalus, after the same Compact that had this their Citizen Amilear; who made War formerly been made with the Atolians: the in Italy. Hereunto it was added (perhaps goods therein found were given unto the left the meffage might feem otherwise to Romans : and the people, for flaves. Other have savoured a little of some fear) That of attempts on that fide were hindred: either the fugitive flaves belonging to the Romans, by foul weather at Sea : or by want of dar- there were some reported to walk up and ing, and of means.

ø. X 1 I.

Villius the Roman Conful wastes a yeer to no effect. War of the Gaules in Italy. An Embassadour of the Romans to Carthage Mafanissa, and Vermina. The Macedoni an prepares for defence of his Kingdom: and T. Quintius Flaminius is fent against Hus the time ran away: and P. Villius a new Conful, took charge of the War in Macedon. He was troubled with a mu-don. How Villius dealt with them, it is uncertain. For the History of his year is lost:

In the beginning of this Macedonian War. hind Asdrubal, or Mago in those parts: was About the same time the Roman Fleet, now become Captain of the Gaules, in these down in Carthage: which if it were fo, then ought they to be restored back to their Masters: as was conditioned in the late peace. The Embassadours that were sent on this errand, had further charge to treat with Mafanissa, as also with Vermina the fon of Syphax. Unto Masanissa, besides matter of complement, they were to fignifie what pleasure he might do them, by lending them iome of his Numidian Horse, to serve in their War against the Macedonian. Vermina had entreated the Senate, to vouchsafe unto him the name of King : and promifed thereafter to deserve it, by his readiness in doing them all good offices. But they were fometiny of his oldest Souldiers : whereof two what scrupulous in the matter, and said, thousand, having served long in Sicil and That having been, and being still (as they Africk, thought themselves much wronged, took it) their Enemy, He ought first of all in that they could not be suffered to look to desire peace; for that the name of King, unto their own estates at home. They were was an honour which they used not to con-(belike) of the Legions that had served at fer upon any, save only upon such as had Canna: as may feem by their complaint, of royally deserved it at their hands. The authority to make peace with him; was wholly committed unto these Embassadors. whom, upon such termes as they should think sit; The Romans begin to make War by negotiatiwithout further relation to the Senate and People: For they were then busied with greater cares. The Carthaginians made a gentle answer, That they wholly disclaimed Amilear: banishing him, and confiscating his good. As for the Fugitives, they had restored as many as they could finde; and would in that point, as far as was requifite, give fatisfaction to the Senate. Herewithal they fent a great proportion of Corn to Rome ; and the like unto the Army that of peace.

at the Army.

6. XIII.

on. T. Quintius wins a paffage against Philip. Thefaly wasted by Philip. the Romans, and Atolians. The Acheans for saking the Macedonian . take part with the Komans. A treaty of peace, that was vain. Philip delivers Argos to Nabis the Tyrant , who presently enters into League with the Ro-

He Romans had not been wont in former times, to make War after such a was in Macedon. King Majariffa would have trifling manner. It was their use, to give batlent unto the Romans two thousand of his tel to the enemie, as soon a they met with Numidian horse: but they were contented him. If he refused it, they besieged his with half the number; and would accept Towns: and so forced him to try the forno more. Vermina met with the Embassa- tune of a day, with his disadvantage in redours , to give them entertainment , on the putation , when he had long forborn it (asit borders of his Kingdom; and without any would be interpreted) upon knowledge of disputation, agreed with them upon terms his own weakness. But in this their War with Philip, they began to learn of the sub-learn of the sub-learn of the sub-learn of the sub-thus were the Romans bussed in taking the Greeks, the art of Negotiation: wherein order for their Macedonian War, that they hitherto they were not grown fo fine, as might pursue it strongly, and without in within a little while they proved. Their terruption. As for Amilear and his Ganles, Treasury was poor, and stood indebted, they laid fiege unto Cremona; where L. Fu- * many years after this unto private men, for . Ling rius a Roman Prætor came upon them, part of those moneys that had been borrow-iib. 34: fought a battel with them, and overcame ed in the second Punick War. This had them. Amilcar the Carthaginian died in this made the Commonalty averse from the Mabattel : and the fruit of the Victory was cedonian War; and had thereby driven the such, as both made amends for losses past, Senators, greedy of the enterprize, to make and left the work easie to those, that after-use of their cunning. Yet being weary of wards should have the managing of War the slow pace wherewith their business went among those Gaules. So was there good leiforward, they determined to increase their fure to think upon the business of Mace-Army, that they might have the less need don: where Philip was earefully providing to relie upon their Confederates. So they to give contentment unto his Subjects, by levied eight thousand Foot, and eight hunpunishing a bad Counseller whom they had dred Horse (the greater part of them of ted : as also to affure unto himself the Acha- the Latines) which they sent with T. Quinans, by readring unto them some Towns tius Flammins, the new Conful, into Macethat he held of theirs; and finally to don. Their Navie, and other means could arengthen his Kingdom, not only by exer well bave served, for the setting forth and cifing and training his people, but by forti-transportation of a greater Army; but by fying the passages that led thereinto out of straining themselves to the most of their Epirus. This was in doing when Villius , hav- ability , they should (besides other difficuling unprofitably laboured to finde way into ties incident unto the sustenance of those Macedon, taking a journey (as sulpicius had that are too many and too far from home) done before him) wherein he could not be have bred fome jealousse in their friends of supplied with victuals, determined at length to trie a new course. But then came yea, perhaps have increased the number of advertisement , that T. Quintius Flaminius their enemies, more than of their own Soulwas chosen Consul, and had Macedon aldiers. This present augmentation of the latted him for his Province; whose coming forces was very requisite; for that Attalus, was expected; and he very thortly arrived about the fame time, excused himself unto them by his Embassadour; requesting that either they would underrake the defence of his Kingdom against Antiochus, who invaded it; or elfe that they would not take it uncourteoully;

CHAP. IV

Philip, and returned home, to look unto that was very easie; he was compelled to that which most concerned him. Their and sit still, without doing any thing for the fwer was remarkable. They faid, That it space of forty dayes.

very foon appear. Country; and, which by long dependance such discourse. on the Macedonian, was become (in a manner) part of his Kingdom, whereof it made or three dayes together, to have prevailed the South border. Nevertheleis, the desire against the difficulties of that passage which of winning this passage, was greater than Philip kept. When he had well wearied the likelihood. For the river of Apples run- himself, and could not resolve what course ning along through that valley which alone to take: there came to him an Heards-man was open between the Mountains, made it fent from Charopus a Prince of the Epirols all a deep Marifo and unpassable Bogge: a that favoured the Romans, who having long very narrow way excepted, and a path cut kept beafts in those Mountains, was out of the main rock by mans hand. Where throughly acquainted with all by-paths, and fore Quintius affailed to climb in the Mount therefore undertook to guide the Romans, tains : but finding himself disappointed of without any danger, to a place where they courteoufly, that he quitted the War with my, who neglected not the guard of them was not their manner to use the aid of their This long time of rest gave hope unto Phin friends, longer then their friends had good hp, that the War might be ended by comopportunity, and could also be well con- polition, upon some reasonable terms. He tented to affoord it; That they could not therefore so dealt with some of the Epirots. honestly take part with Attalus, their good (among whom he had many friends) that friend, though he were against Antiochus, He and the Consul had a meeting together. whom they held in the like account; but, But nothing was effected. The Conful That they would deal with Antiochus by would have him to fet all Towns of Greece Embassadors, and (as common friends unto at liberty; and make amends for the injuboth of the Kings ) do their best to per- ries, which he had done to many people in fwade an atonement between them. In fuch his late Wars Philip was contented to give liloving fashion did they now carry them- berty to those whom he had subdued of late: felves, towards their good friend the King but unto fuch, as had been long subject unto Antiochus; who reciprocally at their intrea- him and his Ancestors, He thought it ty, withdrew his Army from the Kingdom against all reason, that he should relinquish of Attalw. But how little they regarded his claim and dominion over them. He these terms of friendship, after that once also said, That as far forth as it should apthey had made an end with Philip, it will pear that he had done wrong unto any Town or people whatfoever, He could well T. Quintius halting away from Rome, came be pleased to make such amends, as might betimes into his Province, with the supply seem convenient in the judgement of some decreed unto him; which confifted for the free State, that had not been intereffed in most part, of old Souldiers, that had ferved those quarrels. But herewithal Quintim in Spain and Africk. He found Villius the was not satisfied. There needed (he said) old Conful, (whom at his coming he pre- no judgement or compromise; forasmuch as fently discharged) and King Philip of Mace- it was apparent, that Fhilip had alwayes don, encamped one against the other, in the been the invader; and had not made War, Streights of Epirus; by the river of Apfus, or as one provoked, in his own defence. After Aous. It was manifelt, that either the Ro- this altercation, when they should come to mans must fetch a compass about, and seek particulars: and when the Consul was retheir way into Macedon, through the poor quired to name those Towns, that he would Country of the Daffaretians; or else win, have to be set at liberty; the first that he by force, that passage which the King de named were the Thessalians: These had fended. In taking the former way, they had been subjects (though conditional) unto the already two years together mif-frent their Macedonian Kings, ever fince the dayes of time, and been forced to return back with- Alexander the Great, and of Philip his Faout profit, for want of victuals: whereof ther. Wherefore, as foon as Flaminius had they could neither carry with them store named the Thessalians; the King in a rage fufficient, nor find it on the way. But if they demanded what sharper condition He could once get over these Mountains, which would have laid upon him, had he been but divided the South of Fpirus from Theffaly, vanquished. And herewithal abruptly he then should they enter into a plentiful flang away: refusing to hear any more of

After this the Conful strove in vain two this hope, through the diligence of his ene- should have advantage of the Enemy. This guide,

guide, for fear of treacherous dealing, was I withdraw himfelf home into his Kingdom of fast bound: and being promised a great reward, in case he made good his word, had fuch Companies as was thought fit, appointed to follow his directions. They travelled by night (it being then about the full of the Moon) and rested in the day-time, for fear of being discovered. When they had recovered the hill-tops, and were above the Macedonians, (though undiscovered by them, because at their banks) they raised a great smoke, whereby they gave notice of their success unto the Consul. Some skirmishes, whilst these were on their journy . T. Quintiw had held with the Macedonian; thereby to avert him from thought of that which was intended. But when on the third morning he saw the smoke arise more and more plainly, and thereby knew that his men had attained unto the place whither they were fent, he pressed as near as he could unto the Enemies Camp, and affailed them in their strength. He prevailed as little as in besieged: and having made a fair breach, former times, until the shoutings of those that ran down the hill, and charged Philip defended both by the Inhabitants, and by on the back, aftonished so the Macedonians, a Macedonian garrison therein. Philip also at that they betook themselves unto flight. The the same time, having somewhat recollected King, upon first apprehension of the danger, his spirits, hovered about Tempe with his made all speed away to save himself. Yet Army, thrusting men into all places, that anon confidering, that the difficulty of the passage must needs hinder the Romans having well near spent his victuals, and seefrom pursuing him: he made a stand at the ing no hope to prevail at Rhage: brake up end of five miles, and gathered there toge his siege, and departed out of Thessaly. He ther his broken troops, of whom he found had appointed his Ships of burden to meet wanting no more than two thousand men. him at Anticyra, an Haven Town of Phocis, The greatest loss was of his Camp and provisions: if not rather perhaps of his reputation: for that now the Macedonians began invaded; not so much for hatred unto the to stand in fear, lest being driven from a place of such advantage, they should hardly make good their party against the Ene- in he had business, or was shortly like to my, upon equal ground. Neither was Philip have. Many Towns in Phocis he won by himself much better perswaded. Wherefore affault : many were yielded up unto him for he caused the Thessalians, as many of them as fear; and within short space he had (in efin his hasty retrait he could visit, to forsake fect) mastered it all. their Towns and Country, carrying away with them as much as they were able, and brother, being then Admiral for the Rospoiling all the rest. But all of them could mans in this War, joyned with King Attalus not be perswaded, thus to abandon (for the and the Rhodian Fleet. They won two Cipleasure of their King) their ancient habita- ties in Enbea; and afterward laid siege unto tions, and all the substance which they had Cenchree, an Haven and Arcenal of the Cogotten. Some there were that forcibly refifted him; which they might the better do, prise did somewhat help forward the Achefor that he could not stay to use any great l'ans, in their desire to leave the part of Phicompulsion. He also himself took it very lip; since it might come to pass, that Cogrievously, that he was driven to make such | rinth it self, ere long time were spent; and waste of a most pleasant and fruitful Coun-that Cenchree, with other places appertainto make him break off his purpole, and Romans.

Macedon.

The Atelians and Athamanians, when this fellout, were even in a readiness to invade Theffaly; whereinto the ways lay more open, out of their leveral Contries. When therefore they heard for certainty , that Philip was beaten by the Romans : they foreflowed not the occasion, but made all speed, each of them to lay hold upon what they might. T. Quintius followed them within a little while: but they had gotten so much before his coming, that he, in gleaning after their harvest, could not find enough to maintain his Army. Thus were the poor Thesfalians, of whose liberty the Romans a few days fince had made shew to be very defirous, wasted by the same Romans and their Confederates; not knowing which way to turn themselves, or whom to avoid. T. Quintius won Phaleria by affault : Metropolis and Piera yielded unto him. Khage he vet was unable to force it : fo froutly it was were like to be diffreffed. So the Conful. on the Gulon of Corinth: which Country being friend to the Macedonian, he prefently people, as because it lay conveniently seated between Theffaly and other regions, where-

In the mean time L Quintim the Confuls rinthians on their Eastern Sea. This entertry, which had ever been well affected un fing to Corinth, now very thortly thould be to him: To that a little hindrance did ferve, trendered unto their Nation, by favour of the

Nanana

CHAP. IV.

the Acheans to preferr the friendship of the their Masters cause. Rather it gave the Romans , before the patronage of Philip; Acheans to understand, Thathe, who could whereto they had been long accultomed. be satisfied with so little at their hands, knew For this King had so many ways offended them in time of peace, that they thought it ciprocal demand. Yet were there many in best courseto rid their hands of him, whilst that great Councel, who remembring the being intangled in a dangerous War, he benefits of Philip and Antigonus, laboured wanted means to hinder the execution of earnestly for the preservation of the ancifuch counsel as they mould hold the fafelt. ent League. But in fine, the sense of late in-His tyrannous practifes to make himfelf juries, and expectation of like or worfe their absolute Lord: his poysoning of Ara- from him in the suture; prevailed against tus their old Governour: his false dealing the memory of those old good turns, which with the Mellenians, Epirots, and other peo- he (and Antigonus before him) had partly ple their Contederates , and his own de- sold unto them, and partly had used as baits, pendants : together with many particular whereby to allure them into absolute outrages by him committed : caused them subjection. Neither was it perhaps of the long fince to hold him as a necessary evell, even least importance; That the Romans were whilft they were unable to be without his strong, and likely to prevail in the end. So affistance. But fince by the vertue of Philo- after much altercation, the Decree passed. pamen, they were grown somewhat consi- That they should thence-forward renounce. dent in their own strength: so as without the Macedonian, and take part with his enefift, as having him to friend: then did they dians they forthwith entred into fociety; *Platie : fent murderers to take away the life of * Phi- those Embassadors from Rome, which they Philippon, lopamen. But failing in this enterprise; and determined to send thither of purpose. The joyn them in fociety with the Romans.

These news were very welcome to T. Romans and their Confederates, King Atta- it felf fo plainly, in the behalf of Philip, that lus, the Rhodians and Athenians, to treat they which were his Partifans within the should have Corinth restored unto them, into his hands, if they might have any the Embassadors of Philip, whom he had aim, he easily compelled the Achean Garrialso fent for this business, admonishing the son to quit the place. Acheans of their Alliance with the King, This getting of Argos, together with the and of their faith due unto him; requested good defence of Corinth, and some other them, that they would be contented to re- Towns, as it helped Philip a little in his remain as Neuters. This moderate request putation, so they gave him hope to obtain

But there were other motives, inducing of Philips Embassadors did no way advance the Macedonians help they could as well fub- mies in this War. With Attalus and the Rhoonly think how evil he was; and thereupon with the Romans (because no League would rejoyce the more, in that he was become no be of force, until the Senate and people had longer necessary. It angred him to perceive approved it) they forbore to decree any sohow they stood affected: and therefore he ciety at the present, until the return of being detected, he did thereby only fet fire Megalopolitans, Dymeans, and Argives, having to the Wood, which was throughly dry before, and prepared to burn. Philopamen many respects they were bound, rose up out wrought fo with the Acheans, that no dif- of the Councel, and departed before the pafcourse was more familiar with them, than sing of the Decree; which they could not what great cause they had to withdraw resist, nor yet with honesty thereto give althemselves from the Macedonian. Cycliadus, a sent. For this their good will, and greater, principal man among them: and lately their which they shortly manifested, the Argives Prætor, was expelled by them, for shewing had so little thank, that all the rest of the himself passionate in the cause of Philip; and Acheans may be the better held excused, Ariftenus choien Prætor, who laboured to for escaping how they might, out of the hands of fo fell a Prince.

Soon after this, upon a solemn day at Ar-Quintius. Embassadors were sent from the gos, the affection of the Citizens discovered with the Acheans, making promife, that they Town, made no doubt of putting the City if they would forfake the Macedonian. A imall affiftance. Philocles a Lieutenant of Parliament of the Acheans was held at Syci- the Kings, lay then in Corinth, which he on, to deliberate and resolve in this weighty had maniully defended against the Romans case. Therein the Romans and their adhe- and Attalus. Him the Conspirators drew to rents desired the Achaans to joyn with them Arges; whither coming on a sudden, and in making War upon Philip. Contrariwife, finding the multitude ready to joyn with with his honour hemight feek it: and when he was much given to gybing) with fundry (the Winter being now come on ) a new fcoffs; and especially with one, which made Consul would shortly be chosen; who should the Roman Consul understand what mantake the work out of Titus his hands, if it ner of companions these Atolians were. For were not concluded the fooner. Titus had he faid, That he had often dealt with them; the like respect unto himself; and therefore as likewise the best of the Greeks; desiring thought it best, since more could not be them to abrogate a wicked law, which perdone, to pre-dispose things unto a Conclu- mitted them to take spoil from spoil : yet fion, for his own reputation. The meeting could he get no better an answer, than that was appointed to be held on the Sea-shore, they would sooner take Etolia out of Etolia. in the Bay then called the Malian, or Lami- Titus wondred what might be the meaning Except as Bay, now (asis supposed) the Gulf of Ziton; of this strange Law. So the King told him, Popolicy in the Egean Sea, or Archipelago. Thither That they held it a laudable cultome, as came Titus with Animander the Athamani often as War happened between their. ar; an Embaffador of Attalus; the Admiral friends, to hold up the quarrel, by feuding Rhoder; and some Agents for the Atolians Voluntaries to serve on both sides, that and Acheans. Philip had with him fome few (flould fpoil both the one and the other. As of his own Captains, and Cycliadas, lately ba- for the liberty of Greece, he faid it was nished for his sake out of Achaia. He refu-fed to come on shore: though fearing (as he ful thereof, since divers Tribes of their own, faid none but the immortal Gods: yet mif-doubting some treachery in the Ætolians. The demands of Titus in behalf of the Ro-whether the Romans would give him leave mans, were, That he should set all Cities of to make slaves of those Ætolians, which Greece at liberty; deliver up to the Romans were no Greeks. Titus hereat smiled, and and their Confederates, all prisoners which was no whit offended, to hear the Atolians he had of theirs, and Renegadoes; likewife well ratled up; touching whom he began whatfoever he held of theirs in Ilyria: and to understand, how odious they were in all whatfoever about Greece or Asia he had got- the Country. As for that general demand ten from Ptolomy then King of Egypt , atter of fetting all Greece at liberty , Philip achis fathers death. Attalus demanded restitution to be made, entire of Ships, Towns, and Temples by him taken and spoiled in the last of consider, what might beseem his own late. War between them. The Rhodians, and other petry Estates, should thus presume, would have again the Country of Perca, lying over against their Island; as also that he under countenance of the Romans; to take flouid withdraw his garrifons out of divers upon them, as if by their great might he Towns about the Hellesport, and other Ha-flouid be thereunto compelled: it was, he vens of their friends. The Acheans defired faid, a strange and ridiculous insolence. reflicution of Argos and Corinth: about the The Acheans he charged with much ingraone of which they might, not unjustly, quartude; reciting against them some Decrees rel with him; the other had been long his of their own; wherein they had loaden both own by their confent. The Etolians took Antigonus and him, with more than huupon them angerly, as Patrons of Greece: mane honours. Nevertheless, he said, that willing him to depart out of it, even out of he would render Argos unto them: but as the whole Country, leaving it free; and with touching Corinth, that he would further al to deliver up unto them, whatfoever he deliberate with Titus himself. Thus he held that had at any time been theirs. Nei- addressed himself wholly to the Roman ther were they herewithal content: but in General; unto whom if he could give fatisfolently declaimed against him, for that which he had lately done in Thessay; corrupting (as they said) the rewards of the Virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said) the virginia (as they said)

some good end by Treaty, whilest as yet | self by force of Arms. He answered them (as cores, by destroying, when he was vanquishing the offerers: or if he gave them any occa-cores, by destroying, which else they might have sonly in helping Prussar, his soned, those towns, which ene they might have host, it was only in helping triplat, instongotten. To answer these malapart Ætolians, in-law; neither did he see why they should rather seek amends at his hands, than he at nearer the shore. But they began to plie him theirs. For whereas they complained, afresh: telling him that he must obey his that spoiling a Temple of Venus, he had betters, unless he were able to defend him- cut down the Grove, and pleasant walks

1020

thereabouts: what could be do more, than | a time unfit for fervice in the War; and fince. fend Gardners thither with young plants; if one King of another would stand to alk fuch recompence? Thus he jested the matter out: but offered nevertheles, in honour of the Romans, to give back the Region of Peræa tothe Rhodians; as likewise to Attalus, the Ships and Prifoners of his, whereof he had then possession. Thus ended that dayes conference, because it was late : Philip requiring a nights leifure to think upon the fon: knowing well, that the name of a King. Articles, which were many, and he ill provided of Counsel, wherewith to advise about them. For your being fo ill provided of Counsel (faid Titus) jou may even thank tended to procure that his own command of your felf; as having murdered all your friends, the Army in Greece might be prorogued. And that were wont to advise you futhfully. The next day Philip came not, until it was late at night; excusing his long stay by the weightiness of the things propounded, whereon he obtained it for him, partly by their authocould not fuddenly tell how to refolve. But rity, partly by good reasons which they alit was believed, that he thereby fought to ledged unto the Senate. abridge the Ætolians of leifure to rail at him. And this was the more likely, for that had audience at Rome, spake bitterly against he defired conference in private with the the King, with good liking of the Senate; Roman General. The sum of his discourse, as which was more desirous of Victory. than Titue afterward related it, was, That he of fatisfaction. They mangified the honouwould give the Acheans both Argos and Co rable purpose of the Romans, in undertakrinth; as also that he would render unto At- ing to set Greece at liberty. But this (they talse and the Rhodians what he had promi- faid) could never be effected: unless especial fed the day before; likewise to the Ætolians, that he would grant some part of their dispossessed of Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetridemands; and to the Romans, whatfoever as. In this point they were fo vehement, prothey did challenge. This when Titm his affor ducing a Map of the Country, and making ciates heard, they exclaimed against it, say- demonstration how those places held all the ing, That if the King were suffered to retain rest in servility; that the Senate agreed to any thing in Greece, he would shortly get have it even so as they desir . When possession of all which he now rendred up. therefore the Embassadors of rhilip were The noise that they made came to Philips brought in, and began to have made a long who flood in doubt , lest a new Consul Towns? As for Corinth, whereto the Achamight happen to defraud him of the honour, ans had some right; (though their right which he expected by ending of the War. were no better, than that, having stoln it So he easily prevailed with the rest to as- from one Macedonian King in a night, they fent hereunto: forasmuch as it was Winter, had, after mature deliberation, made it without authority of the Senate, he fhould he unable to proceed resolvedly either in War or Peace. Further, he willed them to fend their feveral Embassadors to Rome. which intimating unto the Senate what each of them required, should easily hinder Philip from obtaining any thing to their prejudice. Among the rest, he perswaded King Aminander to make a journey to Rome in pertogether with the confluence of fo many Embassadors, would ferve to make his own actions more glorious in the City. All this to the fame end had he dealt with some of the Tribunes of the people at Rome: who had already (though as yet he knew not fo much)

1022

The Embaffadors of the Greeks, when they care were taken, that the King should be ear : who thereupon defired a third day of Oration; they were briefly cut off in the meeting; and protested, that if he could not middest of their Preface, with this one deperswade them, he would suffer himself to mand: Whether their Mafter would veild up be perswaded by them. So the third day | Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetrias. Hereto they they met early in the morning : at what made answer, That concerning those places, time the King intreated them all, that they the King had given them no direction or would with fincere affection hearken unto commission what to say or do. This was good offers of peace; and immediately con- enough. The Senate would no longers hearclude it, if they could like well of those ken to Philips defire of peace: wherein they Conditions which he had already tendred; faid he did no better than trifle. Yet might or otherwise, that they would make truce his Embassadors have truly said, That neiwith him for the present , and let him ther the Atolians, Acheans , nor any of their fend Embassadors to Rome, where he-would fellows, had in the late Treaty required by referr himself to the courtesse of the Se- name, that Chalcis and Demetrias should be yielded up. For which of them indeed This was even as Quintius would have it : | could make any claim to either of these ready condescended to give it back unto Wherefore they were all banished, and them, And this perhaps would have been their goods confiscated. The rest of the chief alledged, even against the Greeks, in excute Citizens that stayed behind, were comof the King, by some of T. Quintim his friends; that so he might have had honour Gold and Silver. Also a great imposition of to conclude the War, if a successor had been money was laid upon all those that were decreed unto him. But fince he was appoint thought able to pay it. Such as made their ed to continue General: neither his friends contribution readily, were dismissed withat Rome, nor he himself, after the return of out more a do. But if any stood long upon the Embassadours into Greece, cared to give the matter: or played the theeves in purear unto any talk of peace.

ken him, and joyned with their common had their torments to boot. This done, the enemies; thought even to deal with them Tyrant began to make popular laws: namein the like manner, by reconciling himfelf ly, such as might serve to make him graciunto Nabis, whom they hated most. There ous with the rascal multitude: abrogating were not many years past, fince the Laceda- all debts, and dividing the lands of the rich monians under Cleomenes, with little other among the poor. By such art of oppressing help then their own strength, had been al- the great ones, it hath been an old custom most strong enough both for the Macedoni- of Tyrants, to assure themselves of the Vulans and Acheans together. But now the con- gar for a time. dition of things was altered. Nabis his force As soon as Nabis had gotten Argos, He sent confifted, in a manner, wholly in his Merce- the news to T. Quintius and others to joyn paries: for he was a Tyrant, though stiling with him against Philip. Titus was glad of himself King. Yet he forely vexed the Ache- it : so as he took the pains to cross over ans: and therefore seemed to Philip one the Streights into Peloponnesus, there to likely to stand him in great stead, if he meet with Nabis. They had soon agreed could be won. To this purpose it was (though King Attalus who was present with thought meet, that the Town of Argos, the Conful, made some cavil touching Arwhich could not otherwise be easily defend- | gos ) and the Tyrant lent unto the Roman, ed, should be configued over into his hands ; fix hundred of his Mercenaries of Crete: as in hope, that such a benefit would serve to also he agreed with the Acheans, upon a tie him fast unto the Macedonian. Philocles Truce for four moneths, reserving the final the Kings Lieutenant, who was appointed conclusion of peace between them until the to deal with Nabis, added further, That it War of Philip should be ended; which after was his Masters purpose to make a streight this continued not long. alliance with the Lacedamonian, by giving fome daughters of his own in marriage unto Nabis his fons. This could not but be well taken. Yet Nabis made some scruple in accepting the Town of Argos; unless by decree of the Citizens themselves he might be called into it. Hereabout Philocles dealt with the Argives : but found them so averse, that, in open assembly of the people, they detelted the very name of the Tyrant, with many railing words. Nabis hearing of this. thought he had thereby a good occasion to rob and fleece them. So he willed Philocles. without more a do, to make over the Town which he was ready to recieve. Philocles accordingly did let him with his Amy into it strongest places therein. Thus dealt Philip himself. with the Argives : who for very love had

away by bargain unto another) Philip had al- | fled out of the City at the first tumult. loyning their own goods: they were put to Philip feeing that his Acheans had forfa- the whip, and belides loss of their wealth.

6. XIV.

The battel at Cynoscephala, wherein Philip was vanquished by T. Quintius.

Titus Quintius, as foon as he underflood that he was appointed to have command of the Army, without any other limitation of time, than during the pleasure of the Senate; made all things ready for diligent pursuit of the War. The like did Philip: who having failed in his negotiation of peace, and no less failed in his hopes of getting Nabis to friend in that by night 5 and gave him poffession of the War, meant afterwards wholly to rely upon

Titus had in his Army about fix and twenforsaken the Acheans, to take his part. Early ty thousand : and Philip a proportionable in the morning, the Tyrant made himself number. But neither of them knew the o Pho. is master of all the gates. A few of the prin-thers strength, or what his Enemy intended vir. To cipal men, understanding how things went, to do. Only Titus heard that Philip was in

CHAP. IV

Thestaly, and thereupon addressed himself! As soon as he was on the hill-top; it did to feek him out. They had like to have met him good to fee that they of his own light unawares, neer unto the City of Phere: armature were busie in fight, almost at the where the vant-currers on both fides dif- very Camp of the Enemies; whom they covered each other; and fent word thereof had repelled fo far. He had also liberty to unto their feveral Captains. But neither of choose his ground, as might serve best his them were over-hafty to commit all to ha advantage; forasmuch as the Romans were zard upon to thort warning. The day fol- quite driven from all parts of the Hill. But lowing each of them fent out three hundred of this commodity he could make no great Horse, with as many light-armed Foot, to use: the roughness of the place among make a better discovery. There met, and those Dogs heads, as they were called, ferfought a long while: returning finally back ving nothing aptly for his Phalanx. Neverinto their icveral Camps, with little ad- theless he found convenient room, wherein vantage unto either fide. The Country at to marshall the one part of his Army: and bout Phera was thick fet with trees : and o- gave order unto his Captains, to follow therwise full of gardens and mud-walls; with the rest, embattelling them as they which made it unproper for the service of might. Whilest he was doing this: He perthe Macedonian Phalanx. Wherefore the ceived that his Hofemen and light armature King dislodged, intending to remove back began to shrink; as being fallen upon the into Scotufa, in the Frontier of Macedon; Roman Legions, by force whereof they where he might be plentifully served with were driven to recoyle. He sets forward all necessaries. Titus conceived aright his to help them : and they no less hastily meaning: and therefore purposed also to draw unto him for succour; having the march thitherwards; were it only to waste Romans not far behind them. the Country. There lay between them a great As the Legions began to climbe the Hill; ledge of hills, which hindered the one from Philip commanded those of his Phalanx to knowing what course the other took. Ne-charge their pikes, and entertain them. vertheless they encamped not far asunder, Here Titus found an extream difficult piece both the first and the second night; though, of work. For this Phalanx being a great neither of them understood what was be- square battel of armed pikes, like in all come of the other. The third day was very points to those which are now used in our tempestuous, and forced each of them to modern Wars: and being in like manner take up his lodging where he found it by used, as are ours; was not to be refisted by chance. Then fent they forth discoverers the Roman Targettiers, as long as the Phaagain, in greater number than before. These lanx it self held together undissolved. The meeting together, held a long fight, where- Macedonians were embattelled in very close in at first the Macedonians had the worse, order: so that two of them stood opposite But Philip anon fent in such strong supply; to one of the Romans; as also the pikes of that if the relistance of the Etolians had the first rank had their points advanced not been desperate, the Romans their fel- two or three foot before their fore-manlows had been driven back into their Camp. Wherefore it is no marvel if the Romans Yet all reliftance notwithstanding, the Ma- gave back: every one of them being troucedonians prevailed : fo that Titm himfelf bled (as it were) with ten enemies at once; was fain to bring forth his Legions, that and not able to come nearer to the next of were not a little discouraged, by the defeat them, than the length of a dozenfoot; or of all their Horse, to animate those which thereabout. Titus finding this, and not knowing how to remedy it, was greatly It was altogether besides the Kings pur- troubled: for that still the Phalanx bare pose to put the fortune of a battel in trust down all which came in the way. But in that day, with so much of his Estate as might the mean while he observed, That they thereon depend. But the news came to him which were appointed by Philip to make his thick and tumultuoully, how the enemies left wing, were not able through the much fled, and how the day was his own, if he unevenness of the ground, to put themcould use an occasion, the like whereof he selves in order: so as either they kept their should not often find. This caused him to places on the Hill-tops; or else (which was alter his purpose: insomuch as he embattel- worse) upon desire either of beholding the led his men; and climed up those hills, pastime, or of seeming to be partakers in which, for that the knops thereon had some the work, ran foolishly along by the side refemblance unto Dogs heads, were called, of their fellows, which were occupied in

1026

by a word figuifying as much. Cynoscephala, light.

Of this their diforder hemadegreat and work; and mainly helpful to making present use. He caused the right wing of of the Victory compleat. He considered his battel to march up the Hill against these that Philip, in pursuing the right wing of the ill-ordered troops: his Elephants leading Romans, was run on fo far, as that himfelf the way, to increase the terrour. The Mar with his follows, in mounting the Hill to edonians were readier to dispute what charge the left wing of the Macedonians, fould be done in fuch a case, than well ad was already gotten above the Kings head. vifed what to do; as having no one man ap Wherefore he turned to the left hand, and pointed to command that part inchief. In-making down the Hill after the Kings deed if they should have done their best, it lanx, fell upon it in the Rere. The hindercould not have ferved; fince the ground most ranks of the Phalanx, and all of them whereon they stood, made their weapons indeed save the first five, were accustomed, unuleful. For let it be supposed, that Pbi- when the battels came to joyning, to carry he having fix and twenty thouland in his their pikes upright; and with the whole Army (as he is faid to have been equal to weight of their bodies to thrust on their the Enemy in number) had four thousand fore-men: and so were they doing at the Horse, four thousand Targettiers, and four present. This was another great inconventthousand light armed : so shall there remain ence in the Macedonian Phalanx. That it fourteen thousand Pikes: whereof himself served neither for offence nor defence, exhad embattelled the one half in a Phalanx; cept only in Front. For though it were fo, the other half in the left wing, are they that Alexander, when he was to fight with whom Quintim is ready now to charge. Daring in Mesopotamia, arranged his Phalanx The Phalanx having usually fixteen in File, in such order, that all the four sides of it mult, when it consisted of seven thousand, were as so many Fronts looking fundry have well-near four hundred and forty in wayes, because he expected that he should rank: but four hundred would ferve, to be encompassed round: yet is it to be unmake a Front long enough; the other forty derstood, that herein he altered the usual or seven and thirty Files might be cut off, form; as also at the same time he embatteland reckoned in the number of the Target- led his men in loofe order, that fo with eafe tiers, or light-armed. Allowing therefore, they might turn their weapons which way as Polybine doth , to every man of them need should require. Likewise it is to be by, as Polybins doth, to every man or them need mount required.

White three froot of ground: this Front must have confidered, That Alexanders men being thus white three froot of ground: this Front must have confidered, That Alexanders men being thus white the confidered was a fit only to keep their own occupied twelve hundred foot, or two hundifpofed, were fit only to keep their own dred and forty paces; that is, very near a ground; not being able to follow upon the quarter of a mile in length. Such a space enemy, unless their hindmost ranks could of open Champian, free from incumberance have marched backwards. But in this preof Trees, Ditches, Hillocks, or the like im- fent case of Philip, there was no such provipediments, that must of necessity disjoyn sion for resistance. Therefore his men, being this close battel of the Phalanx, was not otherwise unable to help themselves, threw every-where to be found. Here at Cynofee- down their weapons and fled. The King phale philip had fo much room , as would himfelf had thought until now, that the foronly fuffice for the one half of his men; the tune of the battel was every where alike, rest were fain to stand still and look about and the day his own. But hearing the noise them , being hindred from putting them behindhim , and turning a little afide with a felves in order, by the roughness of the troop of horse, to see how all went; when Dogs beads. But the Romans, to whom all he beheld his men cafting down their weagrounds were much alike, were not hin-pons, and the Romans at his back on the dred from coming up unto them; nor higher ground; he prefently betook himfound any difficulty in mastering those Ene felt to flight. Neither staid he afterwards in ry first impression of the Elephants, caused sed in this overthrow) untill he was gotten them to give back; and the coming on of into his own Kingdom of Macedon. the Legions, to betake themselves to flight. There died of the Roman Army in this A Roman Tribune or Colonel, seeing the battel, about seven hundred: of the Macedovictory on that part affured, left the profe- nians about eight thousand were sain; and sution of it unto others: and being follow- five thouland taken prisoners. ed by twenty Ensignes or Maniples, that is, (asthey might fall out) by some two thoufand men, took in hand a notable piece of mies, whose feet were in a manner bound any place (except only a small while about by the discommodity of the place. The ve- Tempe, there to collect such as were disper-

HAP. IV.

CHAP. IV

Theffaly, and thereupon addressed himself As soon as he was on the hill-top; it did to feek him out. They had like to have met him good to fee that they of his own light unawares, neer unto the City of Phere: armature were busie in fight, almost at the where the vant-currers on both sides discovered each other; and sent word thereof had repelled so far. He had also liberty to unto their several Captains. But neither of choose his ground, as might serve best his them were over-hafty to commit all to hazard upon so short warning. The day sol-quite driven from all parts of the Hill. But lowing each of them fent out three hundred of this commodity he could make no great Horfe, with as many light-armed Foot, to make a better discovery. These met, and fought a long while: returning sinally back into their teveral Camps, with little advantage unto either side. The Country at the many and the many and the more returned to marshall the one part of his Army; and vantage unto either fide. The Country a to marthall the one part of his Army; and bout Phera was thick fet with trees: and otherwife full of gardens and mud-walls; with the reft; embattelling them as they which made it unproper for the service of the Macedonian Phalanx. Wherefore the ceived that his Hosemen and light armature King dislodged, intending to remove back began to shrink; as being fallen upon the into Scotufa, in the Frontier of Macedon; Roman Legions, by force whereof they where he might be plentifully ferved with were driven to recoyle. He fets forward all necessaries. Titus conceived aright his to help them : and they no less hastily meaning: and therefore purposed also to draw unto him for succour; having the march thitherwards; were it only to wafte the Country. There lay between them a great ledge of hills, which hindered the one from Philip commanded those of his Phalanz to knowing what course the other took. Ne-charge their pikes, and entertain them. vertheless they encamped not far asunder, Here Titus found an extream difficult piece both the first and the second night; though, of work. For this Phalanx being a great neither of them understood what was be-square battel of armed pikes, like in all come of the other. The third day was very points to those which are now used in our tempestuous, and forced each of them to modern Wars: and being in like manner take up his lodging where he found it by used, as are ours; was not to be resisted by chance. Then fent they forth discoverers the Roman Targettiers, as long as the Phaagain, in greater number than before. These lanx it self held together undissolved. The meeting together, held a long fight, where- Macedonians were embattelled in very close in at first the Macedonians had the worse, order: so that two of them stood opposite But Philip anon fent in fuch strong supply; to one of the Romans; as also the pikes of cedonians prevailed : fo that Titus himfelf bled (as it were) with ten enemies at once; was fain to bring forth his Legions, that and not able to come nearer to the next of werein flight.

1026

fled, and how the day was his own, if he unevenness of the ground, to put themcould use an occasion, the like whereof he selves in order: so as either they kept their should not often find. This caused him to places on the Hill-tops; or else (which was alter his purpose: insomuch as he embattel- worse) upon desire either of beholding the led his men; and climed up those hills, pastime, or of seeming to be partakers in by a word fignifying as much. Cynoscephala. light.

that if the relistance of the Ætolians had the first rank had their points advanced not been desperate, the Romans their sel- two or three soot before their fore-man. lows had been driven back into their Camp. Wherefore it is no marvel if the Romans Yet all relistance notwithstanding, the Ma- gave back : every one of them being trou-

were not a little discouraged, by the defeat them, than the length of a dozen foot; or of all their Horse, to animate those which thereabout. Titus finding this, and not knowing how to remedy it, was greatly

It was altogether besides the Kings pur-troubled: for that still the Phalanx bare pose to put the fortune of a battel in trust down all which came in the way. But in that day, with so much of his Estate as might the mean while he observed, That they thereon depend. But the news came to him which were appointed by Philip to make his thick and tumultuoully, how the enemies left wing, were not able through the much which, for that the knops thereon had some the work, ran foolishly along by the side refemblance unto Dogs heads, were called, of their fellows, which were occupied in

Of this their disorder hemadegreat and work; and mainly helpful to making present use. He caused the right wing of of the Victory complear. He considered his battel to march up the Hill against these that Philip, in pursuing the right wing of the ill-ordered troops : his Elephants leading Romans , was run on fo far , as that himfelf the way, to increase the terrour. The Mar with his follows, in mounting the Hill to adonians were readier to dispute what charge the left wing of the Macedonians, fould be done in fuch a case, than well advised what to do; as having no one man appointed to command that part in chief. Indeed if they should have done their best, it lanx, fell upon it in the Rere. The hindercould not have served; since the ground most ranks of the Fhalanx, and all of them whereon they flood, made their weapons indeed fave the first five, were accustomed, unuseful. For let it be supposed, that Phihe having fix and twenty thousand in his their pikes upright; and with the whole Army (as he is faid to have been equal to weight of their bodies to thrust on their the Enemy in number) had four thousand fore-men: and so were they doing at the Horse, four thousand Targettiers, and sour present. This was another great inconvenitionand light-armed: so shall there remain ence in the Macedonian Phalanx. That it fourteen thousand Pikes: whereof himself served neither for offence nor defence, exsee as Polybins doth, to every man of them need should require. Likewise it is to be considered, That Alexanders men being thus ry first impression of the Elephants, caused sed in this overthrow) untill he was gotten them to give back; and the coming on of into his own Kingdom of Macedon. the Legions, to betake themselves to flight. There died of the Roman Army in this victory on that part affured , lest the profe- nians about eight thousand were slain; and sution of it unto others: and being follow- five thouland taken prisoners. ed by twenty Enfignes or Maniples, that is, (asthey might fall out) by some two thoufand men, took in hand a notable piece of

had embattelled the one half in a Phalanx; cept only in Front. For though it were fo, the other half in the left wing, are they that Alexander, when he was to fight with whom Quintins is ready now to charge. Darius in Mesopotamia, arranged his Phalanx The Phalanx having usually fixteen in File, in such order, that all the four files of it must, when it considered of feven thousand, were as so many Fronts looking sundry have well-near four hundred and forty in rank: but four hundred would ferve, to be encompassed round: yet is it to be unmake a Front long enough; the other forty derstood, that herein he altered the usual make a Front long chough; and other sort, form; as also at the same time he embatteland reckoned in the number of the Target- led his men in loofe order, that fo with eafe tiers, or light-armed. Allowing therefore, they might turn their weapons which way occupied twelve hundred foot, or two hundisposed, were fit only to keep their own dred and forty paces; that is, very near a ground; not being able to follow upon the quarter of a mile in length. Such a space enemy, unless their hindmost ranks could of open Champian, free from incumberance have marched backwards. But in this preof Trees, Ditches, Hillocks, or the like im- fent case of Philip, there was no such provipediments, that must of necessity disjoyn fion for resistance. Therefore his men, being this close battel of the Phalanx, was not otherwise unable to help themselves, threw every-where to be found. Here at 63nofce-down their weapons and fled. The King Phale Philip had fo much room, as would himself had thought until now, that the foronly suffice for the one half of his men; the tune of the battel was every where alike, rest were fain to stand still and look about and the day his own. But hearing the noise them , being hindred from putting them behindhim, and turning a little afide with a felves in order, by the roughness of the troop of horse, to see how all went; when Dogs-beads. But the Romans, to whom all he beheld his men cafting down their weagrounds were much alike, were not him-pons, and the Romans at his back on the dred from coming up unto them; nor higher ground; he prefently betook himfound any difficulty in mastering those Ene felt to flight. Neither staid he afterwards in mies, whose feet were in a manner bound any place (except only a small while about by the discommodity of the place. The ve Tempe, there to collect such as were disper-

A Roman Tribune or Colonel, feeing the battel, about feven hundred: of the Macedo-

ø. X V.

T. Quintius falleth out with the Ætolians, mans quarrel with Antiochus.

noised through all Greece, that the Victory the Kingdom. Which done, he returned to at Conoscephale was gotten (in a manner) Thessalonica. wholly by their valour. They had gotten indeed the most of the booty by sacking the swerable to his desire : but seeing what bad Macedonian Camp, whilest the Romans were fortune accompanied his affairs, in all other busied in the chale. Titus therefore being parts at the same time, he thought it wisoffended both at their vain-glory, and at dom to yield unto necessity; and therefore their ravenous condition; purposed to teach sent in all haste Limnens and Demosphene; them better manners, by regarding them as with Cycliadas the banished Achean, in flightly, as they thought highly of them- whom he reposed much confidence, Emselves. He also well perceived, That by bassadours unto Titus. These had confeusing them with any extraordinary favour, rence a long while in private, with Titus he should greatly offend the rest of his con- and some of his Roman Colonels: by whom federates in Greece; who detested the Ato they were gently entertained, and in very lians much more vehemently , than ever friendly wife dismissed. It feems that they had they had done the Macedonians. But this Commission, to refer all unto Titus his own displeasure brake not forth yet a while.

Larissa, a City in Thessaly, which he presently Truce for fifteen dayes : in which time, the took. Before his coming, Philip had fent King himfelf might come and speak with thither one of his Courtiers to burn all his the Roman General. In the mean feafon, letters, and passages whatsoever in writing, many suspicious rumours went of Titm, as betwixt him and others : of which many if he had been corrupted with great rewere there kept. It was well done of the wards from the King, to betray the Greek King, that among the cares of so much adhis Confederates. Of these bruits the Etoversity , he forgot not to provide for the lians were chief authors: who being wont fafety of his friends. Yet by thus doing, they to regard neither friendship nor honesty, of Larifa might well perceive, that he gave where profit led them a wrong way, judg-them as already loft. Wherefore we find not that they, or any of their neighbours, did day appointed for the meeting betwirt him make delay of opening their gates to Titus. and Philip , Titus had fent letters unto his At the same time, the Town of Leucas, border- Affociates; willing them to have their Aing upon Arcanania, was taken by the Roman gents ready by a time appointed, at the en-Fleet, and very foon after, all the Arcanani trance of Tempe, where the treaty should ans, a warlike Nation, and in hatred of the be held. There when they were all affem-Etolians ever true to Philip; gave up bled, they entred into confultation before themselves unto the Romans, hearing of the the Kings arrival, what should be most ex-Victory at Cynoscephale. The Rhodians also pedient for the common benefit of them all, were then in hand with the conquest of Pa and for every state in particular. The poor rea, a Region of the Continent over against King Aminander belought them all, and the Island; whereof they had demanded especially the Romans; that they would restitution in the late Treaty of Peace. think upon him; and, considering his They did herein more manly , than any weakness which he confessed , make such other of the Greeks: forasmuch as they provision, that after the Romans had turned awaited not the good leafure of the Ro- their backs, and were gone home, Philip man; but with an Army of their own, might not wreak his anger upon him who and some help which they borrowed of was not able to result. Then spake Alexanthe Acheans and other their friends gave der, one of the Etolians: who commendbattel to Dinocrates the Kings Lieute ing Titus forasmuch as he had thus assembled confequently recovered the whole Province. It angred Philip worse then all this, that the Dardanians gathered courage out of his af. and grants truce unto Philip, with conditions upon which the peace is ratified. Li- and spoiling, as if all had been abandoned berty proclaimed unto the Greeks. The Ro- to their discretion. This made him gather an Army in all hafte of 6000. Foot, and 500 horse : wherewith coming upon them, he "He Ætolians wonderfully vaunted drave them, with little or no los of his own, themselves, and defired to have it and great slaughter of theirs, hastily out of

In this one enterprise he had success anspleafure brake not forth yet a while.

After the battel, Titus made haste unto lifered id. There was granted unto him a nant. wherein they had the Victory, and the Confederates to advise upon their own minds freely: added, That in the main of It was to be hoped, that he would then at the purpose, which he had in hand, he was length give up to the Atolians a many of utterly deceived: for that by making peace Towns, (which he there named) bidding with Philip, he could neither affure the Ro- him speak whether he would or no. Hs anmans of their quiet, nor the Greeks of their fwer was, that they might take them all. But liberty. There was, he faid, none other end Titte interpoling himself, said it should be to be made of the War, which could agree otherwife. These were Thessalian Towns, and either with the purpose of the Senate and should be all free; one of them only exceppeople of Rome, or with the fair promises ted, which not long ago had refused to made by Titus himself unto the Greeks, than commit it felf to the faith of the Romans, the chafing of Philip quite out of his King- and therefore should now be given to the dom. And to this effect he made a long dif- Atolians. Hereat Phaneas cried out, that it course. But Titus answered, That this Eto was too great an injury, thus to be defraudlian was ill acquainted, either with the good ed of the Towns that had sometimes bepleasure of the Senate and people of Rome, longed unto their Common-weal. Rather or with the laudable customs which they he willed Titus to consider, that by an angenerally held: for that it was not the cient Covenant between him and the Romanner of the Romans, to feek theutter de- mans, all the Towns taken ought to be struction of any King or Nation, at such time their own, and the Romans to have nothing as they first made War with them, until by fave the pillage and captives. It is true, fome rebellion they found it a matter of ne- that there had been such a condition in the cessity, to take such a rigorous course. And former War: but it ceased to be of any vahereof he alledged the Carthoginians as a lidity, as foon as the Atolians made peace notable example: adding, That victory, to with Philip. And thus much Titus gave them generous minds, was only an inducement to to understand; asking them whether they moderation. As concerning the publick be- thought it reasonable, that all the Towns nefit of Greece, it was (he faid) expedient, in Greece, which had let in the Romans by that the Kingdom of Macedon should be composition, should be delivered into subjegreatly weakned and brought low; not that ction of the Atolians. The rest of the Confeit should be utterly destroyed : forasmuch derates were very much delighted with these as it served as a bar to the Thracians, Gaules, angry passages between the Romans and the and a multitude of other falvage Nations, which would foon over-flow the whole con- fear any hard measure; fince Titue was fo tinent of Greece, if this Kingdom were not earnest in the behalf of those Thessalians, to interposed. Wherefore he concluded, that give them liberty, though they had flood if Philip would yield unto those demands, out against him, even till very fear made thought otherwise, it should be at their neths. own pleasure, to take Counsel apart for themselves as they thought good. Then be- peace so readily to the Macedonians , besides gan Phaneas, another of the Etolians, to fay, that laudable custom by him before alledgthat all was come to bothing : for that ere ed, was, the fame of Antiochus his coming long, Philip would trouble all the Greeks, no with an army from Syria, and drawing near less than he had done in time before. But toward Europe. He had also perhaps yet a Titue interrupted him , and bade him leave greater motive ; even the confideration that his bablings; faying, That himself would take his successor m ght happen to defraud him such order, as that Philip, were he never so of the honour, if the War should happen defirous, should thenceforth not have it in to be protrected. And he was in the right, his power to molest the Greeks.

whom Titus used friendly : and suffering him States of Greece, came unto Rome, new Conto repose himself that night, held a Coun- suls were choten: who (especially the one cel the day following : wherein the King of them) stood very earnestly against the yielded unto all that had been required at peace; alledging frivolous matter of their his hands; offering yet further to stand to own suspition, in hope to get the honour of the good pleasure of the Senate, if they concluding the War. The Senate began to would have more added to the Conditions | be doubtfully affected, between the Embaffa-

good, and had willed them to deliver their Phaneas the Atchan, infulting over him, faid Atolians : neither had they great reason to wherewith he had pressed him in the former them open their gates. Wherefore they op-Treaty; then was there no reason to de- posed not themselves; but gave their conny him peace. As for the Ætolians: if they lent willingly unto a Truce for four Mo-

The chief cause that moved Titus to grant For when his letters, together with Embaf-The next day King Philip came thuher: fadors from the Macedonian , and fundry ever was demanded; and the letters of Ti- formerly had made. Letters also were then two, preffing them to accept this offer, on the fent by Titus unto Prufias King of Bithmia. one fide, and the importunity of the Conful giving him to understand, what agreement on the other; who faid, that all these good- was made with Philip in behalf of the Greeks; ly shews were fraudulent, and that the King and how the Senate held it reasonable, that would rebel, as foon as the Army was the Ciani, most miserably spoiled and oncalled out of Greece. But the matter was ta- pressed by Philip, to gratifie this Bithynian ken out of the Senators hands by two of the his fon-in-law, thould be restored to liberty. Tribunes, that referred it to an Affembly of and permitted to enjoy the same benefit of the People; by whose soveraign authority the Romans, which other of their Nation it was concluded, that peace fould be did. What effect these letters wrought, it granted to the King. So ten Embassadors was not greatly material; since the Ro-were sent from Rome, over into Greece: in mans were shortly bussed with Antiochus. which number were they that had been in such wise, that they had not leisure to exby their advice, that Titus should go through will. with the business of Peace. These would All Greece rejoyced at the good bargain very fain have retained those three impor- which Titus had made with Philip. Only tant Cities of Corinth, Chalcis, and Deme- the Etolians found themselves agrieved tries, until the estate of Greece were some that they were utterly neglected : which was what better fetled. But finally, Titus pre- to the rest no small part of their contentvailed fo, that Corinth was (though not im- ment. The Beotians continued to favour the mediately) rendred unto the Acheans; and Macedonian; and thereby occasioned much all the other Greek Towns which Philip trouble unto themselves. There were some held, as well in Alia as in Greece, restored un- among them well-affected to the Romans: to liberty.

Qoooo

Philip, were, That before the celebration they were no better than loft, for the good Example of the next * Isthmian Games , He should will which they had born unto him; unless withdraw his Garrifons out of all the Greek at this time, when he lay close by them with Towns which he held, and confine them over his Army, their Prætor, which was head of to the Romans: That he should deliver up the opposite Faction, might be made away. unto them all Captives that he had of theirs, Titus refused to have a hand in the executiand all Renegado's. Likewise all his Ships on, yet nevertheless did animate them in of War, referving to himself only five of the their purpole. So they committed the fact. leffer fort, and one of extraordinary great- and hoped to have kept themselves undisness, wherein fixteen men laboured at eve-covered. But when the murder came out, ry oar : Further, that he should pay a and somewhat was confessed by those which thousand talents, the one half in hand, the were put to torture: the hatred of the peoother in ten years following, by even portible brake out violently against the Roman: *Livila3. ons. Hereto * Livie adds, That he was forin such wise, that howsoever they durst not bidden to make War out of Macedon, with- take Arms against them, yet such of them out permiffion of the Senate. But I find not as they found stragling from their Camp, that he observed this Article; or was at they murdered in all parts of the Counany time charged with the breach of it. Four try. This was detested within a while, and hundred talents he had already delivered many of the dead bodies found. Hereupon to Titus, together with his younger (on De- Titus requires of the Baotians, to have the metrius, to remain as hostage for his true murderers delivered into his hands; and for dealing in this matter of peace, at such time live hundred Souldiers, which he had lost as he litely fent his Embassadors to Rome : by them, to have paid unto him five hundred stage, remained still in custody of the Ro- wasting their Country; and besiegeth two

dors of Philip, offering to stand to whatfo- | mans, as a part of the bargain which Titue Confuls before Titus: and it was ordained amine the conformity of Prusas to their

who, seeing how things were like to go, The Conditions of Peace granted unto made their complaint unto Titue; faying, that when it was promifed, that the money, and talents. In stead of making any such amends, his fon, should be restored back unto him, if they paid him with excuses; which he the Senate were not pleased with the agree- would not take as good satisfaction. He ment. Whither this money were reckoned sends Embassadors to the Acheans, and Atheas part of the thousand talents, I cannot nians, informing them what had hapned: find : and it seemeth otherwise, forasmuch and requested them not to take it amis, as young Demetrius, who, together with though he dealt with these their friends as thos four hundred talents, was given for hothey had deserved. Herewithal he falls to fuch Towns of theirs, as did feem to be most | unto their Lord, That he should do well to culpable of the murders lately done. But abstain from the free Cities in Afia, and not the Embaffadors of the Acheans and Atheni- vex them with War: as also to restore whatans (especially of the Acheans, who offered, (oever he had occupied, belonging to the if he needed them, to help him in this Wars, Kings, Ptolomy or Philip. Moreover they wilvet besought him rather to grant peace unto led him by these his Embassadors, that he the Beotians) prevailed fo far with him, that should not pass over his Army into Europe; he was pacified with 30. talents, and the pu- adding, That some of them would visit him

of the History of the World.

many States of Greece distracted: some they fell to accomplishing their promises among them rejoycing that they were free unto the Greeks; to the rest they gave what from the Macedonian; others greatly doubt- they had promifed. But the Phocians and Loing, that the Roman would prove a worfe crians they gave unto the Etolians; whom neighbour. The Etolian would have been they thought it no wisdom to offend overglad of any Commotion; and therefore much, being shortly to take a greater work published rumours abroad, That it was the in hand. The Acheans of Phthiotis they anpurpose of the Romans, to keep in their own nexed unto the Thessalians; all save the hands all those places, wherein Philip lately Town of Thebes in Philiptis, the same which had his Garrisons. Little did they, or the had been abandoned by T. Quintius to the rest of the Greeks, conceive, that this Mace Atolians in the last Treaty with Philip. The donian War ferved as an introduction to the Atolians contended very earnestly about War to be made in Assa against King Antio- Pharfalus and Lencas. But they were put off chus; where grew the fruit, that was to be with a dilatory answer, and rejected unto reaped of this and many other victories. the Senate: for howsoever somewhat the Wherefore to flay the progress of bad ru-mors, when the Islames were held, meet that they should have their wills, as which in time of peace were never without it were in despight of Titus. So the Acheans great solemnity and concourse; Titus in were restored Corinth, Triphylia, and Herea. that great affembly of all Greece, caused pro- So the Corinthians were made free indeed, clamation to be made by found of Trumpet (though the Romans yet a while kept the to this effect, That the Senate and people of Acrocorinthus) for that all which were par-Rome, and Titus Quintius Flaminius the Ge- takers of the Achaan Common-wealth, enneral, having vanquished King Philip and joyed their liberty in as absolute manner as the Macedonians, did will to be at liberty, they could desire. To Pleuratus the Illyrian free from Impositions, free from Garrisons, were given one or two places, taken by the and living at their own Laws, the Corinthi- Romans from Philip: and upon Aminander ans, Phocians, Locrians, Eubwans, Acheans were bestowed those Castles, which he had of Phibiotis, Magnesians, Thessalians, and Per- gotten from Philip during this War; to reign rhebians. The suddenuess of this Procla in them, and the grounds which they commation aftonished men: so as though they manded, as he did among his Athamanians. applauded it with a great shout, yet present- The Rhodians had been their own Carvers. ly they cried out to hear it again, as if they Attalus was dead a little before the Victodurst scarce credit their own ears. The Greeks ry; and therefore lost his share. Yet many were Crafts-masters in the Art of giving that were with Titus in Councel, would thanks; which they rendred now to T. Quin- have given the Towns of Oreum and Euretia, tins with fo great affection, as that they in the Isle of Enbara, to his fon and succeshad well near smothered him, by thronging for King Eumenes. But finally it was couofficiously about him.

in their War against Antiochus, then could Kingdom of Macedon, bordering on Epirus, dence hereof, no sooner were the Isthmian | cause it was also set at liberty, and made it a games at en end, than Titus, with the Romans free eftate by it felf. that were of his Councel, gave audience to Hagessanax and Lyssa, King Antiochus his ed, that all care should be used, not how nihments of fuch as were known offenders. in person ere it were long, to talk with him In like fort, though not fo violently, were further concerning these points. This done. cluded, that these as well as the rest of the This good will of the Greeks, was like to Eubwans, should be suffered to enjoy their be much more available unto the Romans liberty. Orestes, a little Province of the have been the possession of a few Towns, and lying towards the Ionian Sea, yet yea, or of all those Provinces which were yielded unto the Romans long ere this, and named in the Proclamation. Upon confi- fince continued true to them: for which

Embassadors: whom they willed to signifie to avoid the War with King Antiochus, but

perity. Wherefore Embassadors were sent, against this King, the Romans now had, or both to Antiochus himself, to pick matter of shortly after found: as also how their Emquarrel; and about unto others, to pre- baffadors and Agents dealt and fped abroade dispose them unto the affisting of the Romans I refer unto another place.

1020

how to accomplish it with most ease and prof- | therein. What ground and matter of Was

CHAP. V.

The Wars of the Romans with Antiochus the Great, and his Adherents.

ø. I.

What Kings of the races of Seleucus and Ptolomy reigned in Afia and Egypt before Antiochus

by Ptolony Caraunus, at an Altar called Ar- He took in hand an enterprise against Ptoloread that any mans life hath been preserved, the Chaldean dedicated his History of Allyor any mischance avoided by the predicti- ria; the same which hath fince been excelons of such Divellish Oracles. Rather I be- lently falisfied by the Friar Annius. He left lieve , that many such predictions of the behind him one son , called Antiochun Theor; Heathen gods, have been ante-dated by their and one daughter, called Apame, that was Priests; or by others, which devised them married unto the King of Cyrene. So he died after the event.

Selencus, was dearly beloved of his father: Olympiad following, in the fiftieth or one and who furrendred unto him his own wife fiftieth year of the Kingdom of the Greek, Stratonica, when he understood how much when he had reigned ninteen years. the young Prince was enamoured on her. Antiochin , furnamed Thees , or the god, Wherefore Ptolomy Ceraunus had great cause had this vain and impious title given to him, to fear, that the death of selencus would not by flattery of the Milestans; whom he delibe unrevenged by this his Successor. But vered from Timarchus, a Tyrant that oppres-Antiochus was contented to be pacified, ei- sed them. He held long and difficult, but ther with gifts , or perhaps only with fair fruitless War with Ptolomy Philadelphas words containing himself within Asia; and King of Egypt; which finally he compoundletting Cerannus enjoy that quietly , which ed, by taking to wife Berenice the daughter he had purchated in Europe, with the blood of Ptolomy. of Selencus. It is said of this Antiochus, that although he married with the Queen Straterine, S. Hierom and other Interpreters have he forbore to embrace her , till his father Kings daughter of the South shall come to the was dead. So that perhaps his incestuous King of the North to make an agreement; and love was partly, if not chiefly, that cause of that which followeth. his not profecuting that revenge, whereunto Ptolomy Philadelphin was a great lover of Nature should have urged him. Afterwards Peace and Learning; and (setting apart his he had Wars with Antigonie Gonatus, and incestuous marriage with his own Sister Arwith Nicomedes King of Bithjuia. Alfo Luta- finoe) a very excellent Prince: howfoever, rise and Leonorius Kings or Captains of the the worthieft of all that race. It was he Gauls, were set upon him by the same Nico- that built, and furnished with Books, that famedes. With these he fought a great battel: mous Library in Alexandria: which to Telencus Nicanor, the first of his race, wherein, though otherwise the enemies had King of Alia and Syria, died in the end all advantage against him, yet by the terror of the hundred twenty and fourth of his Elephants, which affrighted both Olympiad. He was treacheroully slain their horses and them, he won the Victory. gos; having (as is faid ) been warned be my Philadelphus: but finding ill fucces in Gariet fore by an Oracle, to beware of Argos, as the beginning, he foon gave it over. To this had the fatal place of his death. But I never King Antiochus Soter it was , that Berofus Page. about the end of the hundred twenty and Antiochus Soter, the fon and heir of this ninth Olympiad, or the beginning of the tonica in his fathers life, yet out of modelty understood that Prophecy of Daniel : The Daniel held in liavery throughout all Hegypt; and out her brother troomy Emergers Aing of Hegypt, came to refeue her with an Army; though too late; for fine was flain before.

Wherefore the Hegger spielding unto the Kings defire, prefented him with an Hebrew copy: which function in the Hebrew copy: which function in the Hebrew copy: which function in the Hebrew copy: which function in the Hebrew copy: which function in the Hebrew copy: which function is Father, that had fifteen for the Hebrew copy: which function is a function of the Hebrew copy: which function is the Hebrew copy: which function is the Hebrew copy: which function is the Hebrew copy: which function is the Hebrew copy: which is called) the Seventy, Jesse the son of Syrach, Ptolomy Energetes, who came against him, is thought by Genebrard to have been one; had not been drawn back into his own who that he lived in this Age, it feems to me Countrey, by some Commotions there in very sufficiently proved by Jansenius, in his hand. For there were none that would bear Preface unto Ecclesafticus. The whole armes against Ptolomy, in defence of their passage of this business between Philadel own King: but rather they sided with the phus and the high Priest, was written (as Egyptian; who took Laodice the Kings mo-(a) Josephow affirms) by Ariftem that was ther, and rewarded her with death as the (i) M. (a) Josephus america) by Aristan that was that, and the selection of the employed therein. Forty years Ptolomy Philadelphus was King; reckoning the time ing freed from this invation, by occasion of ights wherein he joyntly reigned with his fa-thole domestical troubles which recalled lock ther. He was exceedingly beloved of his maker the people; and highly magnified by Poets, and dangerous piece of work, even to make War other Writers. Towards his end he grew upon his own subjects, because of their bad more voluptuous, than he had been in his affection towards him; when it had been former years: in which time he boafted, much better, by well deferving to have that he alone had found out the way how changed their hatred into love. A great ame the that he alone had round out the way now the that he alone had round out the way now the that he alone had round out the way now the that he prepared: in furnishing and manunto his honourable deeds, it might have ing whereof he was at such charges, that he ftood with reason : otherwise the Gout, scarce left himself any other hope, if that thick the with which he was often troubled, was should miscarry. Herein he embarqued himwith which he was own errour. He felf, and putting to Sea, did meet with fuch the men was the first of the Kings derived from 4sold keanders Successors, that entred into League a very few of his friends that hardly escafee lie keanders Successors, that entred into League a very few of his friends that hardly escafee lie in the call and the sold in the call and the control of the call and the control of the call and the control of the call and the control of the call and the control of the call and th the last among those Royal Families, which else in a manner than his naked body, turni the last among those to wan me med Most; it may be now much more jully suspected: since a new Edition of & h come torth; paged from sauts; (as the Papills term those bods, wherein drey have changed what they please) and let forth by Midthispirate Celega An Dom. 1578.

adorn and to honour the more, he fent unto | murdered Berenice, together with a fon that Eleazar, then high Priest of the Jews, for the had born to Antiochus. Juline reports, 190, 127, the Books of Moles and other Scriptures, that Berenice faved her felf, together with The benefits of this King unto the Jews had the young Prince her child, a while in the formerly been very great; for he had fet Sanctuary at Daphne : and that not only at liberty as many of them, as his father fome Cittee of Asia prepared to succour her, held in savery throughout all #gpp; and but her brother Ptolomy Energeter King of Ptolomy caused to be translated into Greek, years been King, began his reign. His subby seventy two of the most grave and jects were highly offended at his wicked learned persons that could be found among nature; which they discovered in his first all the Tribes. In this number of the 72. entrance. Wherefore it was like, that his E-Interpreters, or (as they are commonly state would have been much endangered, if with the Romans: as also his off spring was ped. This calamity, having left him nothing ed nevertheless to his great good; as anon after it feemed. For when his subjects understood in what fort the gods (as they conceived it) had punished him for his offences : they had commiseration of his Fittate; and, prefuming that he would Antiochmo Theos had another wife called thenceforth become a new man, offered un-Lasdice, at such time as he married with Be- to him their service with great alacrity. This remice the daughter of this Ptolomy. After revived him, and filled him fuch a spirit; as his fecond marriage, he used his first wife thinking himself well enough able to deal with no better regard, then if she had been with the Agoptian, he made ready a mighty his Concubine. Laodice hated him for this: Army for that purpole. But his fortune was yet adventured not to feek revenge, until no better at Land, that it had been at Seaher own fon Selencus Callinicas was of ability He was vanquished by Ptolomy in a great tobe King. This was two or three years af- battel: whence he escaped hardly; no better the death of Ptolomy Philadelphus : at ter attended , than after his late Shipwrack. what time she poysoned her husband Theos; Hasting therefore back to Antioch, and fearand, by permiffion of selences her fon, ing that the enemy would foon be at his neels ; He wrote unto his brother Antiochus | Antiochus Hierax (or the Hawk) which furmierax wholay then in Asia, praying him to name was given him, because he soughthis bring fuccour with all speed; and promi- prey upon every one, without care whether nog, in recompence of his faith and dili- he were provoked or not) foared away as far sence, the Dominion of a great part of Asia. as he could, both from his brother, and from antiochus was then but fourteen years old, his own Gaules. Having fetcht a great com-

extreamly ambitious; and therefore pass through Mesopotamia and Armenia. He ad of fuch an occasion to make himself fell at length in Cappadocia; where his fat. He levied a mighty Army of the ther-in-law King Artamenes took him up. wherewith he fet forward to help He was entertained very lovingly in outbrother, or rather to get what he could ward shew; but with a meaning to betrav nimfelf. Hereof Ptolomy being adver- him. This he foon perceived: and theretiled; and having no defire to put himfelf fore betook him to his wings again; though in danger more then he needed; took Truce he knew not well, which way to bend his with Seleucus for ten years. No fooner was flight. At length he resolved to bestow him-Selencus treed from this care of the Agypti- felt upon Ptolomy; his own conscience telling an War, but his brother Anticchus came up him, what evil he had meant unto Selencus on him, and needs would fight with him, his brother; and therefore what little good as knowing himself to have the better Ar- he was reciprocally to expect at his hands. my. So Selenem was vauquished again; Infidelity can find no fure harbour. Ptolomy and faved himself with so tew about him, well understood the perfidious and turbuthat he was verily supposed to have perith- lent nature of this Hierax. Wherefore he ed in the battel. Thus did Gods Justice laid him up in close prison : whence though take revenge of those murders by which the by means of an harlot, he got out; yet fly-Crown was purchased; and settled (as ing foom his keepers, he fell into the hands of might have been thought) on the head of thieves, by whom he was murthered. Near this bloody King. Antiochus was very glad about the fametime died Selencus. The Parto hear of his brothers death, as if thereby thians and Bactrians had rebelled against he had purchased his hearts desire. But the him, during his Wars with his brother. He Gaules, his Mercenaries, were gladder then therefore made a journey against Arlaces he, For when he led them against Eumenes founder of the Parthian Kingdom: wherein King of Pergamus, being in hope to get ho- his evil fortune, or rather Gods vengeance, nour by making a Conquest in the beginning adhered so closely to him, that he was taken of his Reign : the e perfidious Barbarians prisoner. Arfaces dealt friendly with him, took counsel against him, and devised how to and dismissed him, having every way given ftrip him of all that he had. They thought him royal entertainment : but in returning it very likely, that if there were none of the home, he brake his neck by a fall from his Royal house to make head against them; horse, and so ended his unhappy reign of it would be in their power, to do what twenty years. He had to wife Laodice the should be best pleasing to themselves, in the sister of Andromachus, one of his most trusty lower Alia. Wherefore they laid hands on Captains: which was father unto that Aches Antiochie; and enforced him to ransome us, who making his advantage of this affihimself with money, as if he had been their nity, became shortly after (as he stiled hime lawful Prisoner. Neither were they so con-self) a King; though rather indeed, a great tented: but made him enter into such Com troubler of the world in those parts. By polition with them, as tended but little to Laodice he had two fons; Selencus the third, his honour. In the mean while Seleucus had furnamed Ceraunus; and Antiochus the gathered a new Army: and prepared once third, called afterwards the Great. more to try his fortune against his brother. Selencus Ceraunus reigned only three Eumenes hearing of this, thought the feafon years: in which time he made War upon fit for himself, to make his profit of their Attalus the first, that was King of Pergamus. discord. Antiochus fought with him, and Being weak of body through fickness, and was beaten : which is no great marvail, in want of money, he could not keep his fince he had great reason to it and in no less men of War in good order: and finally he fear of the Gaules, his own Souldiers, than was flain by treason of Nicanor and Apaturiof the enemy with whom he had to deal. us a Gaule. His death was revenged by Ache-After this, Eumenes won much in Afia; us, who slew the Traitors, and took charge whilest Antiochus went against his brother. of the Army : which he ruled very wisely, In the second battel, fought between the and faithfully a while; Antiochus the bro-brethren, Selencus had the upper hand: and ther of Selencus being a Child. ø.II. 6. II.

The beginning of the Great Antiochus his reign. of Ptolomy Euergetes, and Philopater. Kings of Agypt. War between Antiochus and Philopater. The rebellion of Molo: an expedition of Antiochus against him. Alexander.

Ntiochus was scarcely fifteen years old, was unto his Lord, and finally unto him-felf; the success of things will shortly dif-Not long after nearest unto Egppi, were held by the Egppii all the Countrey, as far as unto Babylon.

42; either as having fallen to the share of Xenætus, whilest he was yet on his journey, riolomy the first, at iten time as the great Anticonus was vanquithed and flain in the battel at Islus; or as being won by this Euergetes, in the troublesome and unhappy reign of Selenens Callinious. The victories of this Energetes in Syria, with the contentions that lafted for many fucceeding ages The recontinuance of Antiochus hu Egypti- between the Ptolomies and the Selencide: an War : with the passages between the two were all foretold by Daniel in the Prophecy Kings: the Vittory of Ptolomy , and peace before cited , which is expounded by S. concluded. Of Achæus, and his rebellion; Hierome. Thus Ptolomy Energetes reigned his greatness, and his fall. Antiochus his six and twenty years; and died towards expedition against the Parthians, Battrians, the end of the hundred thirty and ninth and Indians. Somewhat of the Kingsreign- Olympiad. It may feem by that which we ing in India, after the death of the Great find in the Prologue unto Jefus the fon of Syrach his book, that he should have reigned a much longer time. For Siracides there faith that he came into Egypt in the eight A when he began his reign , which lasted and thirtieth year , when Euergetes was fix and thirty years. In his minority he was King. It may therefore be, That either this wholly governed by one Hermias, an ambi- King reigned long together with his father: tious man, and one which maligned all ver- or that those eight and thirty years were the tue, that he found in any of the Kings faith- years of Jefus his own age; if not perhaps ful fervants. This vile quality in a Coun-reckoned (as the Jews did otherwhiles fellor of fuch great place, how harmful it reckon) from some notable accident that

Not long after the death of Euergetes. Hermias the Counsellor, and in a manner Soon after the beginning of Antiochus his the Protector of King Antiochus, incited his reign . Ptolomy Energetes King of Ægypt di- Lord unto War against the Ecoptians : for ed, and lest his heir Ptolomy Philopater, a the recovery of Colofyria and the Countries young Boy likewife, as hath elfewhere been adjoyning. This Counfel was very unfeaforemembred. This was that Energetes, who nably given, when Molo, the Kings Lieuterelieved Aratus and the Acheans: who af- nant in Media, was broken out in rebellion, terwards took part with Cleomenes: and and fought to make himfelf absolute Lord lovingly entertained him, when he was cha- of that rich Country. Nevertheless Hermifed out of Greece by Antigonus Gonatus. He as, being more froward than wife, maintainannexed unto his Dominion the Kingdom ed stiffely, that it was most expedient and of Cyrene by taking to wife Bernice, the agreeable with the Kings honour, to fend daughter of King Magas. He was the third forth against a rebellious Captain , other of the Ptolomies; and the last good King of Captains that were faithful; whilest he in that race. The name of Energetes, or the person made War upon one that was like doer of good, was given to him by the himself, a King. No man durst gain-fay the Egyptians; not fo much for the great spoils resolution of Hermias; who therefore sent which he brought home, after his victories | Xenætas an Achean, with fuch forces as he in syria; as for that he recovered some of thought expedient, against the Rebel; those Images or Idols, which Cambyses, when whileit in the mean season an Army was he conquered Agypt, had carried into Per preparing for the Kings expedition into Casa. He was ready to have made War upon lossina. The King having marched from the Jews, for that Onias their high Priest, Apamea to Laodicea, and so over the Desarts out of meer covetoulness of money, refu-into the Valley of Malfias, between the fed to pay unto him his yearly tribute of Mountains of Libanus and Anti-libanus, 20. talents: but he was pacified by the wif- found his way there stopped by Theodotus dom of Josephus a Jew, to whom afterwards an Atolian, that ferved under Ptolomy. So he let in farm the Tributes and customs that he consumed the time there a while to none belonged unto him in those parts of Syria effect: and then came news, that Xenætas, which he held. For Calofyria, with Palastina, his Captain, was destroyed with his whole and all those parts of the Country that lay Army; and Molo thereby become Lord of

and drew near to the River of Tygris, re- | Sea, or Bay of Persia, He hasted unto sula: against their wills drawn by their Comman- there to give order concerning this business. with him, died fighting in defence of the their own swords. Camp: the rest were slaughtered without After this Victory , came joyful news, which he presently took: and, mastering within a little while the Province of Babyloniu, and all the Countrey down to the red it convenient to visit his frontiers, were it ceived many advertisements, by such as fled where at his first coming, he won the City; over unto him from the Enemy, That the but failing to take the Castle that was exfollowers of Molo were, for the most part, ceeding strong, returned back to Selencia.

1034

der to bear arms against their King. This The report of these things coming to Anreport was not altogerher falfe; but Alolo tiochus, whilest he lay (as is said before) in himself stood in some doubt lest his follow- the Vale of Mapfyas; filled him with great ters would leave him in time of necessity. forrow, and his Camp with trouble. He took **Emeries** therefore making shew, as if he had Counsel what to do in this needfull case: prepared to pass the River by Boats in face and was well advised by Epigenes, the best of his enemy; left in the night time such man of War he had about him, to let alone as he thought meet to defend his Camp: this enterprise of Caloffria; and bend his and with all the flower of his Army went forces thither, where more need required over Tygri, in a place ten miles lower than them. This Counsel was put in execution Mole his Camp. Mole heard of this, and fent with all convenient hafte. Yet was Epigenes forth his horse to give impediment: but offmissed by the way, and soon after flain. hearing that Xenatas could not fo be stop- by the practice of Hermias: who could not ped, He himfelf difloeged, and took his endure to hear good Counsel given, conjourney towards Media; leaving all his bag-gage behind him in his Camp. Whether he did this, as distrusting the faith of his own presence of the King was more available, Souldiers; or whether thereby to deceive than any odds which he had of the Rebel his Enemy: the great folly of Xenatas made in strength. Molo distrusted his own followhis stratagem prosperous. For Xenetas, haders : and thought, that neither his late ving born himself proudly before, upon the good success, nor any other consideration, countenance of Hermias, by whom he was would ferve to hold them from returning to advanced unto this charge; did now pre- the Kings obedience, if once they beheld fume that all should give way to his authori- his person. Wherefore he thought it safest ty, without putting him to much trouble of for him to affail the Kings Camp in the night using the sword. Wherefore he suffered his time. But going in hand with this, He was men to feast with the provisions which they discovered by some that fled over from him found ready in the forfaken Camp : or ra- to the King. This caused him to return back ther he commanded them so to do, by mak- to his Camp: which by some errour, took ing Proclamation, That they should cherish alarm at his rturn: and was hardly quiup themselves against the journey, which eted, when Antiochus appeared in fight. The he intended to take the next day, in purtuit King was thus forward in giving battel to of the Rebels that fled. And to the same Molo, upon considence which he had that purpose he busied himself, in transporting many would revolt unto him. Neither was the remainder of his Army , which he had he deceived in this his belief. For not a few left on the other side of Tygris. But Moio men or Ensigns: but all the left wing of the went no further that day, than he could enemy which was opposite unto the King, easily return the same night. Wherefore changed side forthwith as soon as ever they understanding what good rule the Kings had fight of the Kings person; and were men kept : he made such hatte back unto ready to do him service against Molo. This them, that he came upon them early in the was enough to have won the Victory: but morning; whileft they were yet heavy with Molo (hortned the work, by killing himfelf; the Wine and other good cheer that they had as did also divers of his friends, who for fear spent at supper. So Xenatus and a very few of torments, prevented the Hang-man with making refiftance; and many of them ere that the Queen Laodice daughter of Mithrithey were perfectly awake. Likewife the dates King of Pontas, which was married un-Campon the other fide of Iggris, was eafily to Antiochin a while before, had brought taken by Molo: the Captains flying thence, forth a fon. Fortune feemed bountiful unto to save their own lives. In the heat of this the King : and therefore he purposed to Victory, the Rebel marched unto Seleucia, make what use he could of her friendly difonly to terrifie the Barbarians, that borde- | with fuch infidelity, as any offender might red upon him. Hereunto his Counsellor Her- know to be unpardonable. By these means miss gave affent : not fo much respecting he emboldned the Traitor : who being althe Kings honour, as confidering what good ready detected, might better hope to mainmight thereby happen to himself. For if it tain his former actions by strong hand, than should come to pass, that the King were to excuse them or get pardon by submission. raken out of the World by any casuality: Antiochus had at that time a vehement dethen made he no doubt of becoming Prote- fire to recover Caloffria, or what elfe he for to the young Prince; and thereby of could, of the Dominions of Ptolony Philolengthening his own Goverment. Antio- pater in those parts. He began with Seleuchus therefore went against Artabanes, who cia, a very strong City near to the mouth reigned among the Atropatians; having the of the River Orontes; which ere long he greatest part of his Kingdom situate between won, partly by force, partly by corrupting the Castian and Euxine Sea. This barbarous with bribes the Captains that lay therein. King was very old and fearful; and there This was that Selencia, whereto Antigonus fore yielded unto what foever conditions the Great, who founded it, gave the name of it pleased Antiochus to lay upon him. So Antigonia: but Seleucus getting it shortly inthis journey Antiochnes got honour, fuch after, called it Selencia; and Ptolomy Exeras well contented him; and then returned getes having lately won it, might if it had so had been concealed.

homewards. Upon the way, a Physicion of pleased him, have changed the name into his brake with him as concerning Hermias; Ptolomais. Such is the vanity of men, that informing him truly how odious he was to hope to purchase an endless memorial unto the people; and how dangerous he would their names, by works proceeding rather be shortly unto the Kings own life. Antio-from their greatness, than from their ver-ches believed this, as having long suspected tue; which therefore no longer are their the same Hermias; but not daring for fear of own, than the same greatness hath continuhim to utter his suspitions. It was therefore ance. Theodotus the Etolian, he that before agreed, that he should be made away on the had opposed himself to Antiochus, and defudden: which was done, he being trained fended Calofyria in the behalf of Ptolomy; forth by a fleight, a good way out of the wasnow grown forry, that he had used so Camp, and there killed without warning or much faith and diligence, in fervice of an undisputation. The King needed not to have thankful and luxurious Prince. Wherefore used so much art in ridding his hands of a asa Mercenary, he began to have regard to man so much detested. For howsoever he his own profit : which thinking to find greaseemed gracious whilest he was alive: yet ter, by applying himself unto him that was they that for fear had been most obsequious (questionless) the more worthy of these two to him, whilest he was in case to do them Kings; he offered to deliver up unto Antiohurt, was as ready as the foremost, to speak chus, the Cities of Tyrus and Ptolomais. of him as he had deserved, when once they Whilst he was devising about this Treason, were secure of him: yea, his wife and chil- and had already sent messengers to King dren, laying then at Apamea, were stoned to Antiochus: his practice was detected, and he death by the wives and children of the Ci belieged in Ptolomais by one of Ptolomies tizens ; whose indignation brake forth Captains, that was more faithful than himthe more outragiously, the longer that it felf. But Antiochus hasting to his rescue, vanquished this Captain who met him on the About these times, Acheus (of whom we way: and afterwards got possession, not onspake before) thinking that Antiochus might ly of Tyrus and Ptolomais, with a good Fleet happen to perish in some of these expediti- of the Egyptian Kings that was in those Haons which he took in hand; was bold to fet a vens : but of fo many other Towns in that Diadem upon his own head, and take upon Country, as emboldned him to think upon him as a King. His purpose was to have in- making a journey into Egypt it self. Agathovaded Syria: but the fame of Antiochus his cles and Solibius bore all the fway in Egypt returning thitherwards, made him quit the at that time : Ptolomy himself being loath to enterprise; and study to set some handsome have his pleasures interrupted, with business colour on his former presumption. It is ve- of so small importance, as the safety of his ry strange that Antiochus neither went Kingdom. Wherefore these two agreed against Acheus; nor vet dissembled the no- together, to make provision as hastily, tice which he had taken of these his traite- and yet as secretly as might be for the War: rous purposes: but wrote unto him, signify- and nevertheless at the same time, to ing that he knew all, and upbraiding him press Antiochus with daily Embassadours

Pppppp

1036

These were all entertained in Memphis, by Agathocles and Sosibius: who intreated the end of their disputation, as far from them to deal effectually with Antiochus. But concluding, as at the beginning. Ptolomy dewhilft this treaty lasted, great preparations manded restitution; Ansiochus thought, that were made at Alexandria for the War: he had not as yet gotten all that was his wherein these two Counsellors perswaded own : Also Ptolomy would needs have Achathemselves reasonably, that the victory us comprehended in the league between would be their own; if they could get, for them, as one of their Confederates; But Anmoney, a sufficient number of the Greeks to tiochus would not endure to hear of this, take their parts. Antiochus heard only what exclaiming against it as a shameful thing, was done at Memphi, and how desirous the that one King should offer to deal so with Governours of Agypt were to be at quiet : another, as to take his rebel into protection. whereunto he gave the readier belief, not and feek to joyn him in Confederacy with only for that he knew the disposition of Ptolong, but because the Rhodians, and other was expired, and Antischus prepared to take Embaffadours, coming from Memphis, dif- the field again: contrary to his expectation. courfed unto him all after one manner; as be- he was informed, That Ptolomy, with a very ing all deceived by the cunning of Apathocles and his fellow : Antiochus therefore ha- out of Egypt. Setting forward therefore to ving wearied himfelf, at the long fiege of a meet with the Enemy, he was encountred Town called Dura, which he could not win : on the way by these Captains of Ptolong, and being desirous to refresh himself and his that had resisted him the year before. They Army in Selencia, during the winter which held against him the passages of Libanus, then came on, granted to the Agyptian a whence nevertheless he drave them: and Truce for four moneths, with promife that proceeding onward in his journey, won fo he would be ready to hearken unto equal many places, that he greatly encreased his Conditions, when they should be offered. It reputation; and thereby drew the Arabians, was not his meaning to be so courteous, as with divers of the bordering people, to he would fain have seemed, but only to bull become his followers. As the two Kings his enemies afleep, whilest he took time to drewnear together : many Captains of Ptorefresh himself; and to bring Achem to some long for sook his pay, and fled over to Antiegood order, whose treason daily grew more chus. This notwithstanding, the Agyptian open and violent. The same negligence had the courage to meet his enemy in the which he thought the Egyptian would have field. The battle was fought at Raphia: where used, he used himself, as presuming that when it was not to be decided, whether the Eg-

courtefie of the Greeks, desiring to take up of Babylon, and the Countries about the River of Euphrates. Thus whilest neither of them greatly cared for peace; they were in his own Soveraign Lord. When the Truce puissant Army, was coming up against him time of the year better ferved, little force ptians, or the Asiatiques were the better Soulwould be needful; for that the Towns diers, (for that the strength of both Armies would voluntarily yield unto him, since Pto- consisted in Mercenaries, chiesty of the long provided not for their defence. Nevertheles, he gave Audience to the Embassa of the Kings was the more fortunate. Ptolodours, and had often conference with those my, with Arsmoe his Sister and Wife, rode that were fent out of segpt : pleafing him- up and down encouraging his men; the like felf, well to dispute about the justice of his did Antiochus on the other side : each of quarrel which he purposed shortly to make them rehearling the brave deeds of his Angood by the fword, whether it were just or cestors; as not having of their own, whereby no. He faid, that it was agreed between Se to value themselves. Antiochus had the more leucus his Ancestor, and Ptolomy the Son of Elephants, as also his being of Asia, had they Laci, That all Syria, if they could win it from been fewer, would have beaten those of Antigonus, should be given in possession to Africk. Wherefore by the advantage of those Selencus : and that this bargain was after | bealts, He drave the Enemies before him, ward ratified, by general consent of the in that part of the battel wherein he fought Confederates, after the battel at Ipfus. himself. But Ptolomy had the better men But Piolomies men would acknowledge no by whose valour he brake the Gross of his fuch bargain. They said that Ptolomy the enemies battel, and won the victory:

whilest Antiochus was heedlesly following rable. As for the Egyptian, he was not only upon those, whom he had compelled to re- flothful, but hindred by a rebellion of his tire. Antiochus had brought into the field a- own subjects, from helping his friends hove leventy thousand foot, and fix thousand abroad. For the people of Egypt, of whom horse; whereof though he lost scarce ten Ptolomy, contrary to the manner of his Prothousand foot, and not four hundred horse; genitors, had armed a great number to yet the fame of his overthrow took from ferve in the late expedition; began to enterhim all those places which he had lately won. tain a good opinion of their own valour, When therefore he was returned home to thinking it not inferiour to the Macedonian. Antioch: He began to stand in fear, lest Pto- Hereupon they refused to suffer as much as lams and Acheus, fetting upon him both at formerly they had done: fince they less efteeonce, should put him in danger of his whole med, than they had done, the force of the Estate. This caused him to send Embassadors Kings mercenary Greeks: which had hitherto the Egyptian, to treat of peace; which to kept them in straight subjection. Thus with the tedious business of War. So Ptolomy force of the multitude was finally broken; vet having staid three moneths in Syria, re- King Ptolomy thereby wasted much of his turned home into Egypt, clad with the re- strength, and much of histime, that might putation of a Conqueror; to the great ad- have been spent, as he thought, much better miration of his subjects and all those that in revelling: or, as others thought, in sucwere acquainted with his voluptuous and couring Acheus. As for Antiochus, He had flothful condition.

between these two Kings : or if he had on of War against Acheus. To this purbeen included therein; yet would not the pose he entred into League with Attalus; Repptian have taken the pains, of making a that so he might distract the forces of his fecond expedition for his fake. The belt Rebel, and find him work on all sides. Fiwas, that he thought himself strong enough, nally, his diligence and fortune were such, if fortune were not too much against him, to that within a while he had pent up Acheus deal with Antiochus. Neither was he con- into the City of Sardes; where he held him fident without great reason: for besides his about two years besieged. The City was very many victories, whereby he had gotten all strong, and well victualled: so as there appeathat belonged unto Antiochus on this fide of red not, when the second year came, any Tanus, he had also good success against At- greater likelihood of taking it, than in the talus King of Pergamus: that was an able first years fiege. In the end, one Lagoras a man of War, and commanded a strong Ar- Gretan found means how to enter the Townmy. Neither was he, as Molo the Rebel had The Castle it self was upon a very high been, one of mean regard otherwise, and rock, and in a manner impregnable; as alcarried beyond himself by apprehending so the Town-wall adjoyning to the Castle, in no fooner made his peace with the Egyptian, Achens was not comprised in the league than he turned all his care to the preparatithe advantage of some opportunity: but that part which was called the Same, was Coulin-german to the King, as hath been in like manner fituate upon steep Rocks, shewed before; and now lately the Kings and almost inaccessible; that hung over a brother-in-law, by taking to wife a younger deep bottom, whereinto the dead carkales daughter of the same Mithridates King of of Horses, and other beasts, yea, and some-Pontus, which was also called Laodice, as was times of men, used to be thrown. Now it was her Sifter the Queen , Antiochus his wife. observed by Lagoras , that the Ravens and These things had added Majesty unto him, other birds of prey, which haunted that and had made his followers greatly to re- place by reason of their food which was there spect him, even as one to whom a Kingdom never wanting, used to flye up unto the top was belonging. Neither made it a little for of the Rocks, and to pitch upon the wals, him, That King Piolomy of Egypt held him where they rested without any disturbance. in the nature of a friend : and that King An- Observing this often, he reasoned with himticchus was now lately vanquished in the self, and concluded that those parts of the battel at Raphia: and had thereby loft all his wall were left unguarded, as being thought gettings in Spria. But all these hopes and unapproachable. Hereof he informed the likelihoods came to nothing: for the King King: who approved his judgement, and gave of Pontus, if he would meddle in that unto him the leading of such men, as he dequarel between sons-in-law, had no rea- fired for the accomplishing of the enterprise. fon to take part against the more honou- The success was agreeable to that which

Pppppp 2

Lagoras

Lagoras had afore conceived: and though in the faith of Bolis, and of one Cambylus with much labour, vet without resistance, he whom Bolis had won unto the business, did scaled those rocks, and whilest a general as- somewhat trouble him. They were men fault was made, entred the Town in that part, to him unknown: and Cambylus was a folwhich was at other times unguarded, then lower of Antiochus; under whom he had the unthought upon. In the same place had the command of those Cretans, which held one Persians, under Cyrus, gotten into Surdes ; of the Forts that blocked up the Castle of when Crasus thought himself fecure on that Sardes. Nevertheless other way to escape he fide. But the Citizens took not warning faw none, than by putting himfelf to some by the example of a loss of many ages pair: adventure. When the mellenger had thereand therefore out of memory. Achem held fore passed often to and fro, it was at length ftill the Castle: which not only seemed by concluded, That Bolis himself should come nature impregnable, but was very well sto- speak with Achem, and conduct him forth. red with all necessaries, and manned with a There was none other than good faith meant fufficient number, of fuch as were to him well by any of the rest, save only by Bolis and unto their fide. But the Contents of the Epithan he in multiplicity of name is beyond any the Critists in elsering the which were that he should be considered that were always Lyars, evil brafts, and flow bellies. (e)? Pul. 18/14. It assured. Antiochus therefore was constrained Cambylus; which were Cretans, and (as all theles. to waste much time about it: having none their Countrymen, fome few excepted, have I do not other hope to prevail, than by familhing the been, and still are, ) false knaves. These two there are inclosed. Besides the usual rediousness of held a consultation together, that was, assumed expectation, his business called him thence (a) Polybim observes it, rightly Cretical: nei- Edecu expectation, his buttiers cancer than the activities away into the higher Asia, where the Ballri-ther concerning the safety of him whose deans, and Parthians with the Hyrcanians, had liverance they undertook, nor touching the tal, who erected Kingdoms taken out of his Domini-discharge of their own faith; but only how in his his ons, upon which they still incroached to get most with least adoe and danger to standard But he thought it not fafe, to let Acheus themselves. Briefly they concluded, That first libes, break loofe again. On the other fide there of all, they would equally share between he trade were some Agents of Piolomy the Egyptian, them ten Talents, which they had already con our and good friends unto Achem; that made received in hand : and then, That they would have it their whole study, how to deliver this reveal the matter to Antiochus; offering to Comm, befieged Prince. If they could refcue his per- deliver Achem unto him, if they might be with all fon, they cared for no more: but prefumed well rewarded both with prefent money, and and we that when he should appear in the Countrys with promise of consideration answerable though the would soon have an Arto the greatness of such a service, when it is to the greatness of such a service, when it is to the greatness of such a service, when it is to the greatness of such a service, when it is to the greatness of such a service, when it is to the greatness of such a service, when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such a service when it is to the greatness of such as the such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the greatness of such as the service when it is to the service when it is to the servi my at command, and be strong enough to should be dispatched. Antiochus hearing this lean de hold antiochus as hardly to work as at promise of Cambylus, was no less glad, than anas, san bride of Cambylus, was no les one Bolis a Cretian, that was acquainted the comfortable promifes of Bolis. At my and well with all the wayes in the Country, and length when all things were in readinds on the man and the comfortable promifes of Bolis. particularly with the by paths and exceed- both fides , and that Bolis with Arians ciling ing difficult passages among those Rocks, wasto get up into the Castle, and conveigh a Pein, whereon the Castle of Sardes stood. Him Achess thence: He first went with Camp-the tast they rempted with great rewards, which he Iso to speak with the King, who gave him ve bendan thould receive at the hands of follows, as ry private audience; and confirmed unto the bands of follows. well as of Achem ; to do his best for per- him by word of mouth the affurance of his weight formance of their desire. He undertook the liberal promises. And after that, putting honor business: and gave such likely reasons of on the countebance of an honest man; and to be bringing all to good effect, that they wrote of one that was faithful unto Ptolomy; whom foliar tinto Achem, by one Arianus, a trufty mellenger, whom Bolis found means to conveigh inmus up into the Castle. At his coming this looper to the Caftle. Theraith of these Negotiators ther, he was lovingly entertained 5 yes forms Achem held most assured. They also wrote questioned at large by Achems, touching all Archem unto him in privie Characters, or Ciphers, the weight of the business in hand. But he elim wherewith none fave he and they were ac discoursed so well, and with such gravity; shered quainted : whereby he knew, that it was no that there appeared no reason of district large faired device of his Enemies, in the name ing either his faith or judgement. He hard of his friends. As for the meffenger, he was was an old Souldrer, had long been a me a trufty fellow, and one whom Aches; Captain under Ptolomy, and did not thruft of found by comments of the com found by examination, heartily affected himself into this business; but was invited in the business; but was invited in the business.

And in such order came they now forth : him belonging in the lesser Afia. Arianus going before as Guide : the rest fol- Some years passed after this, ere Antiochus lowing as the way ferved, and Bolis in the was ready for his expedition against the Rear. Achens made none acquainted with his Parthians and Hyrcanians. The Parthians purpose, till the very instant of his depar-were a little Nation of obscure beginnings, ture. Then fignified he the matter to his Wife and commonly subject unto those that ruled Disdice; and comforting her with hope as in Media. In the great shuffling for Provin-

by honourable and faithful me. He had fall of them very officious towards Achaus; also taken a safe course, in wining (as it lending him their hands, and taking such feemed) that other Country-maiof his, who care of him, as easily gave Eolis to understand kept a Fort that itood in thei way; and that he was the man; and fo by their unfeathereby had already fundry tmes given fonable duty, they undid their Lord. When fase passage and repassage unto Aianus. But they came to the place where Cambylus lay against all these comfortable bpes , the in wait, Bolis whistled, and presently clapsed importance of fo great an advenure stirred Acheus about the middle, holding him falt up fome diffidence. Acheus therefore dealt that he could not ftir. So they were all tawifely, and faid, that he word yet stay ken by the Ambush, and carried forthwith in the Castle a little longer: bt that he to Antiochus; who sate up watching in his meant to fend away with Boli three or Pavilion, expecting the event. The light of four of his friends; from whon, when he Achaus, brought in bound unto him, did fo received better advertisement, concerning astonish the King that he was unable to speak the likelihood of the enterpile, then a word, and anon brake out into weeping. would he issue forth himself. Hereby he Yet was he before informed of the plot, took order, not to commit himelf wholly which might have kept him from admiratiunto the faith of a man unknovn. But as on: as also the next morning betimes, assem-Polybius well notes, he did not consider that bling his friends together, he condemned Ahe played the Cretian with a ma of Crete: chaus to a cruel death: which argues, that he which is to say, that he had to do with one, was not moved with pity towards this unwhose knavery could not be avoided by cir happy man. Wherefore it was the general recumspection. Bolis and Cambylw had laid gard of calamities, incident unto great their plots thus, That if Acheus came forth fortunes, that wrung from him thefe tears : as alone, then should be easily be taken by the ambush prepared for him: if he were accomboth him and his friends to wonder: though panied with many of his friends, hen should it be so, that such a course as this of his, in Arianns be appointed to lead the vay, as one imploying two mischievous knaves against that of late had trodden it oft : and Bolis fol one Traitor, doth not rarely succeed well; aclowing behind, should have at eye upon cording to that Spanish Proverb, A un traj-Achens to prevent him, not only from cica dor dos allevosos. The death of Achens ping in the tumult, but from breaking his brought fuch aftonishment upon those which own neck, or otherwise killinghimself: to held the Castle, that after a while they gave the end that being taken alive, he might be up the place and themselves unto the King; to Anticolns the more welcome Present. whereby he got entire possession of all to

well as he could, appointed four of his speces, after the death of Alexander the Governctal friends to bear him company. They ment over them was committed by Antipawere all disguised : and one of them alone ter, to one Philip, a man of small regard: took upon him to have knowledge of the foortly they tell to Eumenes; then to Antigo-Greek tongue; fpeaking & answering as need "" : and from him, together with the Meder, Mould require for all , as if the reft had been to Selencus ; under whose posterity they Barbarians. Bolis followed them, craftily continued until the Reign of Selencus Calinideviling upon his business, and much perple- cus, being ruled by Lieutenants of the sy-red: For (faith Polybius) though he were of rian Kings. The lustful insulency of one of Crete, and prone to furmife any thing to the these Lieutenants, together with the miswijfilief of another; yet could be not fee in fortune of Callinicus, that was vanquished and The dark, nor know which of them was Ache- thought to be flain by the Gauls , did ftir m; to whether Acheur himself were there. up Arfaces, a nobleman of the Countrey, to The way was very uneafie, and in some seek revenge of injuries done, and aniplates dangerous; especially to those that mate them to rebel. So he slew the Kings the wit not. Wherefore they were fain to Lieutenant; made himself King of the Thay in divers places, and help one another up. Parthians, and Lord of Hyrcania; fought profor down. But upon every occasion they were peroully with those that disturbed him in Lagoras had afore conceived: and though in the faith of Bolis, and of one Cambylme with much labour, vet without resistance, he whom Bolis had won unto the business, did scaled those rocks, and whilest a general as somewhat trouble him. They were men fault was made, ettred the Town in that part, to him unknown: and Cambylus was a folwhich was at other times unguarded, then lower of Antiochus; under whom he had the unthought upon. In the same place had the command of those Cretans, which held one Persians, under Cyrus, gotten into Sardes; of the Forts that blocked up the Castle of when Gress thought himself secure on that Sardes. Nevertheless other way to escape he fide. But the Citizens took not warning faw none, than by putting himself to some by the example of a lois of many ages pair adventure. When the mellenger had thereand therefore out of memory. Achem held fore passed often to and fro, it was at length ftill the Castle: which not only seemed by concluded, That Eolis himself should come nature impregnable, but was very well fto- speak with Achem, and conduct him forth. red with all necessaries, and manned with a There was none other than good faith meant fufficient number, of fuch as were to him well by any of the rest, save only by Bolis and found by examination, heartily affected himself into this buffness; but was invited is in which were that he should be confident that were always Lyan, evil brafts, and flow belies. (e) 2 pd. bill. it.

affured. Antrochus therefore was constrained Cambylus; which were Cretans, and (as all therefore to waste much time about it: having none their Countrymen, fome few excepted, havel do my other hope to prevail, than by familhing the been, and still are,) false knaves. These two calling inclosed. Besides the usual tediousness of held a consultation together, that was, ashmed expectation, his business called him thence (a) Polybim observes it, rightly Cretical: nei- Edent away into the higher Afia, where the Balliri- ther concerning the fafety of him whole de desired ans, and Parthians with the Hyrcanians, had liverance they undertook, nor touching the in, who erected Kingdoms taken out of his Domini-discharge of their own faith; but only how his las ons, upon which they still incroached, to get most with least adoe and danger to find But he thought it not fafe, to let Acheus themselves. Briefly they concluded, That first lines, break loofe again. On the other side there of all, they would equally share between he trade were some Agents of Piolomy the Egyptian, them ten Talents, which they had already each out and good friends unto Achem; that made received in hand: and then, That they would have it their whole study, how to deliver this reveal the matter to Antiochus; offering to Com besieged Prince. If they could rescue his per- deliver Achans unto him, if they might be with a fon, they cared for no more: but prefumed well rewarded both with prefent money, and and and the that when he should appear in the Countrys with promise of consideration and when he would soon have an Arto the greatness of such a service, when it he country are command, and be strong enough to should be dispatched. Antiochus hearing this leam my at command, and be triong enough to hold Antrochus as hardly to work as at promife of Cambylus, was no less glad, than mins, hold Antrochus as hardly to work as at any time before. Wherefore they dealt with were the friends of Achieus well pleafed with inferi one Bolis a Cretian , that was acquainted the comfortable promifes of Bolis. At my well with all the wayes in the Country, and length when all things were in readiness on dies, particularly with the by paths and exceed-both fides, and that Bolis with Ariand clies ing difficult passages among those Rocks, wasto get up into the Castle, and conveigh and on wherein the Castle of Sardes stood. Him they rempted with great rewards, which he less to speak with the King, who gave him vefliould receive at the hands of Ptolomy, as ry private audience; and confirmed unto well as of Achem 5 to do his best for per- him by word of mouth the affurance of his west formance of their defire. He undertook the liberal promifes. And after that, putting ham business: and gave such likely reasons of on the countebance of an honest man, and on a bringing all to good effect, that they wrote of one that was faithful unto Ptolomy, whom by hot unto Achem, by one Arianm, a trufty meffen- he had long ferved, he accompanied driager, whom Bolis found means to conveighin must up into the Castle. At his coming this to the Castle. The faith Chastle Described News up into the Castle. to the Cassle. The faith of these Negotiators ther, he was lovingly entertained; yet son Achem held most assured. They also wrote questioned at large by Achem, touching H Andrew unto him in privie Characters, or Ciphers, the weight of the business in hand. But he of in wherewith none fave he and they were ac discoursed so well, and with such gravity sees quainted: whereby he knew, that it was no that there appeared no reason of district. Fained device of his Enemies, in the name ing either his faith or judgement. He the one of his friends. As for the meffenger, he was was an old Souldier, had long been a media a trufty fellow, and one whom Achana Captain under Ptolomy, and did not thrust din a kept a Fort that itood in thei way; and that he was the man; and fo by their unfeathereby had already fundry tme; given fonable duty, they undid their Lord. When fafe paffage and repaffage unto sianus. But they came to the place where Cambylus lay against all these comfortable boes, the in wait, Bolis whistled, and presently clapsed importance of fo great an advenure stirred Achaus about the middle, holding him falt up fome diffidence. Acheus therfore dealt that he could not stir. So they were all tawisely, and said, that he word yet stay ken by the Ambush, and carried forthwith in the Castle a little longer: bt that he to Antiochus; who sate up watching in his meant to fend away with Boli three or Pavilion, expecting the event. The fight of four of his friends; from whon, when he Achem, brought in bound unto him, did fo received better advertisement, concerning astonish the King that he was unable to speak the likelihood of the enterptie, then would he iffue forth himfelf. Hereby he took order, not to commit himelf wholly which might have kept him from admiratiunto the faith of a man unknown. But as on: as also the next morning betimes. assem-Polybius well notes, he did not consider that bling his friends together, he condemned Ahe played the Cretian with a mn of Crete: chaus to a cruel death: which argues, that he which is to fay, that he had to do with one, was not moved with pity towards this unwhose knavery could not be avoided by cir happy man. Wherefore it was the general recumspection. Bolis and Cambyles had laid gard of calamities, incident unto great their plots thus, That if Acheus came forth fortunes, that wrung from him these tears : as alone, then should be easily be tiken by the also the rarity of the accident, that made ambush prepared for him: if he were accom- both him and his friends to wonder: though panied with many of his friends, hen should it be so, that such a course as this of his, in Arianni be appointed to lead the vay, as one imploying two mischievous knaves against that of late had trodden it oft : and Bolis fol one Traitor, doth not rarely succeed well; aclowing behind, should have at eye upon cording to that Spanish Proverb, Aun tray-Acheus to prevent him , not only from cica dor dos allevofos. The death of Acheus ping in the tumult, but from breaking his brought fuch altonishment upon those which own neck, or otherwise killinghimself: to held the Castle, that after a while they gave the end that being taken alive, he might be up the place and themselves unto the King; to Antischus the more welcome Present. whereby he got entire possession of all to And in fuch order came they now forth : him belonging in the lefter Afia. Arianus going before as Guide : the rest fol-

by honourable and faithful me. He had fall of them very officious towards Achaus; also taken a safe course, in wining (as it lending him their hands, and taking such feemed) that other Country-maiof his, who care of him, as easily gave Eolis to understand

1039

Some years passed after this, ere Antiochus lowing as the way served, and Bolis in the was ready for his expedition against the Rear. Achieus made none acquainted with his Parthians and Hyrcanians. The Parthians purpose, till the very instant of his depar- were a little Nation of obscure beginnings, ture. Then fignified he the matterto his Wife and commonly subject unto those that ruled Libdice; and comforting her with hope as in Media. In the great shuffling for Provinwell as he could, appointed four of his fpe- ces, after the death of Alexander the Governcial friends to bear him company. They ment over them was committed by Autipawere all disguised: and one of them alone ter, to one Philip, a man of small regard: took upon him to have knowledge of the fhortly they tell to Eumenes; then to Antigo-Greek rongue; fpeaking & answering as need "us . and from him, together with the Medes, fibild requirefor all, as if the reft had been to Seleucus; under whose posterity they Barbarians. Bolis followed them, craftily continued until the Reign of Selencus Calinideviling upon his businels, and much perple- cm, being ruled by Lieutenants of the syred: For (faith Polybins) shough he were of rran Kings. The luftful infolency of one of Crete, and prone to surmise any thing to the these Lieutenants, together with the miswifelief of another; yet could he not fee in fortune of Callinicus, that was vanquished and Medalk, nor know which of them was Ache- thought to be flain by the Gauls , did ftir wit dir whether Acheus himself were there. up Arfaces, a nobleman of the Countrey, to The way was very uneafie, and in some seek revenge of injuries done, and aniplates dangerous; especially to those that mate them to rebel. So he slew the Kings kuswit not. Wherefore they were fain to Lieutenant; made himself King of the "hay in divers places, and help one another up. Parthians, and Lord of Hyrcania; fought profor down. But upon every occasion they were peroully with those that disturbed him in his beginnings; and took Selencus Callinicus | The issue tereof was such as gave to neiprisoner in battel, whom he royally enter- ther of thekings hope of accomplishing his tained and diffified. Hereby he won repu- defires, withut exceeding difficulty. Wheretation as a lawful King: and by good go- fore Arfaces raved peace, and at length obvernment of his Countrey, procured unto tained it: miochus thinking it not amis. himself such love of his Subjects, that his to make his a friend, whom he could not name was continued unto his fucceflors; like make a subjet. as that of the Ptolomies in Egypt, and that of the next expedition of Antiochus, was the Cafars afterwards in Rome. Much about against Entydemus King of the Backrians; the same time the Eastrians rebelled : one that inced had not rebelled against him shough these at length, and all belonging or his Ance:ors:but having gotten the Kingunto the Seleucide beyond Euphrates, increa- dom from nose that had rebelled, kept it fed the Parthians dominion. Now Antiochus himfelf. Vith Euthydemus he fought a batwent against them with so strong an army, tel by the Rver Artus, where he had the Vithat they durst not meet him in plain field; ctory. But the Victory was not so greatly but kept themselves in woods or places of to his honor, as was the testimony which he ftrength, and defended the Straights and gave of his swo private valour, in obtain-passages of mountains. The resistances they ing it. Hewas thought that day to have demade availed them not. For Antiochus had meaned hin more courageously, than did with him fo great a multitude, and fo well any one mas in all his Army. His horse was forted, as he needed not to turn out of the flain under him; and he himself received way, from those that lay fortified against a wound in ais mouth, whereby he lost some him, in Woods and Straights between their of his teethAs for Euthydeman, He withdrew mountains; it being easie to spare out of so him elf bacs unto the furthermost parts of great a number, as many as fetching a com- his Kingdom, and afterwards protracted chus hereby found, That Arfaces was no thought requisite. thing strongly provided for the War.

1040

pass about, might either get above the ene- the War, seeking how to end it by compositimies heads; or come behind, and charge on. So Enbassadors passed between the them on the back. Thus did he often imploy Kings: Attoches complaining, That a against them his light armature: wherewith Countrey of his was unjustly usurped from he caused them to dislodge, and give way him: Enthylemne answering, That he had unto his Phalanx; upon which they durft not won it from the children of the Ufurpers: adventure themselves in open ground. Ar- and further, That the Ballrians, a wild Nafaces, the second of the name, (for his father tion, could hardly be retained in order, save was dead before this) was then King of Par by a King of their own; for that they borthis : who though he was confident in the dered upon the Scythians, with whom if they fidelity of his own subjects; yet seared to should join, it would be greatly to the danencounter so mighty an Invader. His hope ger of all the Provinces that lay behind was, that the bad wayes and Desarts would them. These allegations, together with his have caused Antiochus, when he was at own weariness, pacified Antiochus, and Echatane in Media, to give over the jour- made him willing to grant Peace, upon reaney, without proceeding much further. fonable Conditions. Demetrine, the fon of This not fo falling out : He caused the Enthydemus, being a goodly Gentleman, and Wels and Springs in the Wilderness, through employed by his father, as Embassador in this which his Enemy must pass, to be dammed Treaty of Peace, was not a little available unup and spoiled. By which means, and the to a good conclusion : for Antiochus liked refistance before spoken of, when he could him so well, that he promised to give him in not prevail, He withdrew himself out of marriage, one of his own daughters; and the way; fuffering the Enemy to take therewithal permitted Euthydemus to retain his pleasure for a time, in wasting the Count the Kingdom, causing him nevertheless to trey : wherein without some Victory obtain- deliver up all his Elephants; as also tobind ed , he could make no long abode. Antio- himself by oath, to such Covenants as he

So Antiochus leaving the Ballrian in quiet, Wherefore he marched through the heart of made a journey over Caucausus, and came Parthia: and then forward into Hyrcania to the borders of India, where he renewed where he wan Tambrace, the chief City with Sophagafenus, King of the Indians, the of that Province. This indignity and ma fociety that had been between their Anosny other losses, caused Arfaces at length, stors. The Indians had remained subject unwhen he had gathered an Army that feem to the Macedonians for a little while, after ed strong enough, to adventure a battel. Alexanders death. Eumenes in his War against Antigonus, raised part of his forces out of their Countrey. But when Antigonus (after his victory ) turned Westward, and The level reign of Ptolomy Philopater in Awas overbusied in a great Civill War : then did one Sandrocottus, an Indian, ftis up his Country men to rebellion; making himself their Captain, and taking upon him, as protector of their liberty. This Office and Title he soon changed, though not without some contention, into the Name and Majesty of a King. Finally he got unto himfelf (having an Army of fix hundred thousandmen) if not all India, yet as much of it as had been Alexanders. In this estate he had well confirmed himfelf, ere Selencus Nicanor could find leifure to call him to account. Neither did he faint, or humble himfelf at the coming of Selencus; but met him in the field, as ready to defend his own, fo strongly and well appointed, that the Macedonian was contented to make both peace ment of his Empire. Within two or three and affinity with him, taking only a reward years Ptolomy Philopater died : leaving his of fifty Elephants. This League, made by fon Ptolomy Epiphanes, a young Boy, his fucthe Founders of the Indian and Syrian King- cellour in the Kingdom: unlikely by him to doms, was continued by some offices of love be well defended against a neighbour so between their children, and now renewed mighty and ambitious. This Ptolomy surnaby Antiochus: whose number of Elephants med Philopater, that is to say, a lover of his were increased thereupon, by the Indian Father, is thought to have had that surname King, to an hundred and fifty: as also he was given him in meer derision; as having made promifed, to have some treasure sent after away both his Father and Mother. His him; which he left one to receive. Thus young years being newly past, his childparted these two great Kings. Neither had hood when he began to reign, may seem to only in feeming.

6. 11 I.

gypt: with the Tracical end of his favourites, when he was dead. Antiochus prepares to war on the young child Ptolomy Epiphanes, the fon of Philopater. His irresolution in preparing for divers wars at once. His voyage towards the Hellespont. He feeks to hold amity with the Romans. who make friendly shew to him; intending nevertheless to have war with him. His doings against the Hellespont; which the Romans made the first ground of their quarrel

"His expedition being finished, Antiochus had leifure to repole himself a while ; and ftudy which way to convert the terrour of his puissance, for the enlargethe Indians, from this time forwards in many discharge him of so horrible a crime, as his generations, any business worthy of remem | Fathers death : yet the beastliness of all his brance with the Western countries. The po- following life, makes him not unlike to have sterity of Sandrocottus is thought to have done any michief, whereof he could be retained that Kingdom unto the dayes of accused. Having won the battles at Raphiah, Augustus Cafar: to whom Porus, then reign- He gave himself ever to sensuality, and was ing in India, fent Embaffadors with prefents, wholly governed by a Strumpet called Agaand an Epiftle written in Greek, wherein thoclea. At her instigation He murdered his among other things, he faid, That he had own wife and fifter; which had adventured command over fix hundred Kings. There is her felf with him, in that only dangerous alfo found, scattered in fundry Authors, the action by him undertaken and performed mention of fome which held that Kingdom, with honour. The Lieutenant-ships of his in divers Ages, even unto the time of Con Provinces, with all Commands in his Army, fantine the Great : being all peradventure and Offices whatfoever, were wholly referof the fame race. But Antiochus, who in this red unto the disposition of this Agathoclea. Treaty with Sophagafenus carryed himself as and her brother Agathoeles, and Oenanthe a the worthier person, receiving presents and filthy bawd that was mother unto them after marching home through Drangiana both. So these three governed the Realmat and Carmania, with such reputation, that all their pleasure, to the great grief of all the the Potentates, not only in the higher Alia, Countrey, till Philopater died; who having but on the hither side of Taurus, humbled reigned seventeen years, lest none other son themselves unto him, and called him The than Ptolomy Epiphanes, a child of five years Great : faw an end of his own greatness old, begotten on Arstone that was his fister within few years ensuing, by presuming to and wife. After the Kings death Agathocles stand upon points with the Romans: whose began to take upon him, as protector of Greatness was the same in deed, that his was young Epiphanes, and Governour of the Lund. He affembled the Macedons (which were the Kings ordinary forces in pay, not all born in Macedonia, but the race of those whom he suspected of conspiracy against bringing forth unto them his lifter Agatho. room of the Palace, and there stripped our clea, with the young King in her arms; be- of all his apparel to be tormented. But gan a folemn Oration. He told them, That whileft the whips were brought forth, and the deceased Father of this their King , had all things even in a readinets for that purfifter; but unto the faith of them : on whole Agathocles, a fad report of Tlepolemus his bevaliant right hands, the whole state of the ling at hand. Hereupon the Examiner . and therefore that they would be faithful, and, of the room; leaving Moeragenes the Soulas great need was, defend their King against dier alone by himself, and the doors open. row, and counterfeiting tears: yet the Blahad conceived extream hate, against these pieces. three pernicious Misgovernours of the old

CHAP. V.

1042

that abode in Egypt with Ptolomy the first , him; and delivered him unto a follower of and would not be accounted Agyptians; as his own, to be examined by torture. This neither would the Kings themselves) and poor Souldier was carried into an inner committed the child into the arms of his pose, there was brought unto the minister of Kingdom did now rely. He besought them his Torturers, one after another, went out the Treason of one Tlepolemus an ambitious He perceiving this, naked as he was, conman; who traiteroully went about to let the veighed himself out of the Palace, and got Diadem upon his own head, being a meer unto the Macedonians of whom he found ftranger to the Royal blood. Herewithall some in a Temple thereby at dinner. The he produced before them a witness, that Macedonians were as fierce in maintenance should justifie his accusation against Tlepole- of their Priviledges, as are the Turks Tanimus. Now though it were fo, that he deli- zaries. Being allured therefore that one of vered all this with a fained passion of for their fellows had thus been used, they fell to Armes in a great rage, and began to force the cedons that heard him, regarded not any Palace: crying out, That they would fee word that he spake; but stood laughing, the King, and not leave him in possession of and talking one to another, what a thame- a dangerous man. The whole multitude in less dissembler he was to take so much upon the City, with loud clamours, made no less him, as if he knew not how greatly he was ado than the Souldiers, though to less effect. hated. And so brake up the Assembly: he So the old Bawd Genantha fled into a Temthat had called it, being scarce aware how ple: her Son and Daughter stayed in the Agathocles therefore, whom the old Kings Court, until the King was taken from them, favour had made mighty, but neither wife and they, by his permission which he casily nor well qualified thought to go to work, as gave, and by appointment of those that now had formerly been his manner; by using his had him in their hands, delivered up to the authority, to the suppression of those that sury of the people. Agathocles himself was he distrusted. He haled out of the Temple stabbed to death, by some which therein the mother-in-law of Thepolemus; and cast did the Office offriends; though in manner her into prison. This filled Alexandria with of enemies. His fifter was drag'd naked up rumours, and made the people (though ac and down the streets; as was also his mocustomed to fuffer greater things, whilest ther, with all to them belonging; the enrathey were committed in the old Kings ged multitude committed upon them a barname) to meet in knots together, and utter barous execution of justice: biting them, one to another their minds, wherein they pulling out their eyes, and tearing them in

These troubles in Egypt, served well to King. Besides their consideration of the pre- stir up King Antiochus; who had very good fent injurie done to Tlepolemus, they were leasure, though he wanted all pretence, to somewhat also moved with fear of harm; make war upon young Piolomy. Philip of which in way of requital, Tlepolemus was Macedon had the same desire to get what likely to do unto the City. For he was parthe could of the childes estate. But it thought a man most unapt for Government, hapned well, that Ptolomy Philopater in the as afterwards he proved, yet no bad Soul Funich War, which was now newly ended, dier, and well beloved of the Army. It was had done many good offices unto the Roalso then in his power, to stop the provision mans. Unto them therefore the Egyptians of victuals which was to come into Alexan- addressed themselves, and craved help a dria. As these motives wrought with the gainst these two Kings: who though they people, so by the remedy which Agathocles secretly maligned one the other; yet had used, were the Macedons more hastily, and entred into covenant to divide between more violently stirred unto uproar. Hefe-them all that belonged unto this Orphan; creily apprehended one of their number | whose Father had been confederate with themboth. So * M. Lepidus was fent from That thefe his Embafiadors were lovingly beginning of the War with Thilip, as hath nation of what belonged unto their honour. ere all these Victories of Scopus came to no- irresolution, how not with standing his atthing. For the very next year following, tempts upon both of their Kingdoms, he ofwhich was (according to Enfebius) the fame fered one of his Daughters to Ptolomey, and rest, the Jews, with great willingness, re- he sought to make of each of them a spoil. therefore by him very gently entreated.

hear to invade; and gave it out, that he over-fwelling-fortunes. Howfoever it was, meant to bestow a Daughter of his own in he sent an Army to Sardes by Land. under Marriage unto Ptolomey: either hoping, as two of his Sons: willing them there to stav may feem, that the Country would willingly for him; whilest he himself, with a Fleet submit it self unto him, if this young Child of an hundred Gallies, and two hundred parts of Asia, whilest Philip was held over- places as held for the Egyptian. It was a noclude a perfect Amity between him and coming should tend unto any hurt, either of them. It is not lightly to be over-passed, them, or of their Confederates. As touching

Rome, to protect from all violence the King entertained at Rome; and dismitted, with a of Egypt; especially against Antiochus. As Decree and answer of the Senate, altogefor the Macedonian; he was very foon found ther to the honour of King Antiochin. But buffed with War at his own Doors. Also this answer of the Romans was not fincere; Scopus the Ætolian, being a Penfioner to the being rather framed according to regard of Fgyptian, was sent into Greece to raise an Ar- the Kings good liking, than of their own inmy of Mercenaries. What Lepidus did in tent. They had not yet made an end with Egypt, I do not find: and therefore think it Philip: neither would they gladly be trounot improbable, that he was fent thither bled with two great Wars at once. Whereonly one of the three Embassadors, in the fore, not standing much upon the nice examiheen shewed before. As for Scopas; he short- they were content to give good words for ly after went up into syria with his Army; the present. In the mean time Antiochus fights where, winning many places, among the rest with Scopas in Syria, and shortly prepares to of his Acts, he subdued the Jews, who seem win some Towns elsewhere, belonging unto to have veilded themselves a little before un- Ptolomy; yet withall he sends an Army to Antiochus, at such time as they saw Westward, intending to make what profit him prepare for his War, and despaired of he can of the distractions in Greece. Likewise receiving help from Egypt. But it was not long it is confiderable, as an argument of his much year that Philip was beaten at Cynoscephala; another to Eumenes the Son of Attalus, new-Antiochus vanquished Scopas in battel, and ly King of Pergamus: feeking each of their recovered all that had been loft. Among the friendinips at one and the same time, when turned under his obedience; and were Thus was he acting and deliberating at once; being carried with an inexplicable defire of The Land of Egypt, this great King did for- Repugnancies, which is a difease of great and should happen to miscarry; or else that greatother Vessels, intended to pass along by the ter purchase might be made in the Western Coasts of Cilicia and Caria, taking in such laboured by the Romans. It appears that he table act of the Rhodians, that, whileft the wasvery much distracted; hunting (as we War of Philip lay yet upon their hands, they fay) two Hares at once with one Hound. The adventured upon this Great Antiochus. They quarrels between Attalus, Philip, and the fent unto him a proud Embassage; whereby Greeks, promised to afford him great advan- they gave him to understand, That if he pastage, if he should bring his Army to the Hel- sed forward beyond a certain Promontory in lespont. On the other side, the state of Egypt Cilicia, they would meet with him, and fight being such as hath been declared, seemed with him; not for any quarrel of theirs unto easily to be swallowed up at once. One him; but because he should not joyn with while therefore he took what he could get Philip their enemy, and help him against the in Spria: where all were willing (and the Romans. It was infolently done of them, nei-Jews, among the rest, though hitherto they ther seemed it otherwise, to prescribe such lihad kept faith with the Egyptian ) to yield mits unto the King : yet he tempered himhim obedience. Another while, letting Egypt felf, and without any shew of indignation, alone, he was about to make invafion upon gave a gentle answer; partly himself to their Attalus his Kingdom; yet suffered himself Embassadors; partly unto their whole City. easily to be perswaded by the Roman Em- by Embassadors which he thither sent. He baffadors, and defifted from that enterprise. shewed his defire to renew the ancient Con-Having thus far gratified the Romans; he tederacies between his Ancestors and them: fends Embaffadors to the Senate, to con- and willed them not to be afraid, left his would molest: they were (he said) his very conference between T. Quintius, that he had good Friends; whereof, he thought there oppressed Lysmachia, by thrusting thereinto needed no better proof, than the entertain- a Garrison. Hereupon Philip made answer. ment and answer by them newly given to his That his Garrison did not oppress the Town. Embaffadors

The Rhodians appear to have been a cunning People, and such as could fore-fee what gone. That this answer was good and subweather was like to happen. This answer of stantial, though it were not acceptable as the King, and the relation of what had paf- such; might appear by the miserable case, in fed between his Emballadors and the Senate, which Antiochus found Lysimachia at his commoved them not a whit, when they were ing thither. For the Town was utterly rainformed shortly after, that the Macedonian fed by the Earbarians, and the people carried War was ended at the Battel of Conoscepha- away into slavery. Wherefore the King le. They knew that Antiochus his turn took order to have it re-edified : as also to would be next; and prepared to be forward redeem those that were in bondage; and to on the stronger side. Wherefore they would recollect as many of the Citizens as were disnot be contented to sit still, unless the persed in the Country thereabout. Likewise Towns on the South Coast of Asia, belonging he was careful to allure thither, by hopeful to Ptolomy their Friend and Confederate, promises, new Inhabitants, and to replenish were suffered to be at quiet. Herein also the City with wonted frequency. Now to they did well; for that they had ever been the end that men should not be terrified from greatly beholding to all the Race of the Pto- coming thither to dwell, by any fear of the lomies. They therefore in this time of neces- neighbour Thracians : he took a Journey in fity, gave what aid they could unto all the hand against those barbarous people, with Subjects of the Egyptian in those parts. In the one half of his Army; leaving the other fhip. Contrari wife, if he leaned to Antiochus, as he must be partaker in his overthrow; so was he sure to be oppressed by him, as by an over-mighty Neighbour, if he happened to win the Victory.

where he took fuch order as he thought convenient for reducing of Smyrna and Lampsacus to obedience; that had usurped their Liberty, and obstinately strove to maintain it, in hope that the Romans would protect them. In the beginning of the Spring he failed unto the Hellespont; where, having won fome Towns that Philip had gotten not long before this, he passed over into Europe fide; and in short space mastered the Chersonefus. Thence went he to Lysimachia : which the Thracians had gotten and destroyed, when Philip withdrew his Garrison thence, 10. TOr the Romans, though they were to employ it in the Roman War. The Ato.

the Romans whom they thought that he lians objected as a crime unto Philip, in the but fave it from the Barbarians : who took and fack'd it, as foon as the Macedonians were like manner did King Eumenes, the Son of half to repair the City. These pains he took, Attalis, prognosticate as concerning the War partly in regard of the convenient situation, that followed, between Antiochus and the and former glory of Lysimachia ; partly for Romans. For when King Antiochus made a that he thought it highly redounding unto friendly offer, to bestow one of his Daugh- his own honour, to recover and establish tersupon him in marriage : He excused him the Dominion in those parts which his forefelf, and would not have her. Attalus and father Selencus Nicator had won from Lyfina-Phileterus, his Brethren, wondred at this. But chus, and thereby made his Kingdom of greahe told them, that the Romans would furely ter extent than it occupied in any following make war upon Antiochim; and therein time. But for this ambition he shall dearly finally prevail. Wherefore he faid, that by pay: and as after that Victory against Lysimaabstaining from this affinity, it should be in chue, the death of King Selencus followed his power to joyn with the Romans, and thortly; fo shall a deadly wound of the Kingftrengthen himself greatly with their friend- dom founded by Selencus ensue very speedily after the reconquest of the same Country, which was the last of Seleucus his Purchases.

ø. I V.

with Antiochus, whereof notice was alrea- by Titus, were at Lylinuchia, He haftened dy taken both by their friends and by their thither; whither also came P. Lentulus enemies : yet was it much against their will (another of the ten Counsellors) from Bar. to keep the rumour on foot, which they gille, to be present at the Conference. Hegelimeant shortly to make good, of this intend- anax and Lifes were also there; the fame, ed war, fo long as they wanted matter of who had lately brought from Titus those pequarrel; whereof they were furnished, by remptory Conditions, which the Embassathis enterprise of the Kings about Lysens, dors present shall expound unto their Massia. It was not long, since King Attalus, a friend and a helper of the Romans in their from his Thracian Expedition. The meetwar with Fhilip, could obtain of them none ing and entertainment between him and other help against Antiochio, than Embas- these Romans, was in appearance full of love. fadors to speak for him, because the one of But when they came to treat of the business these Kings was held no less a friend than in hand; this good mood was quite altered. the other. Neither did there afterwards L. Cornelius, in two or three words, briefly pass between them any other offices, than ve- delivered his errand from Rome: which Kingdom of Pergamm: also very shortly af- whereof he had lately gotten poffession. ter he sent Embassadors to them, to make a Hereunto he added, and that very earnestly, perfect League of amity between them. This That he must also give up the Towns of late was whileft as yet they were busied with belonging unto Philip; and by him newly Philip, and therefore had reason to answer occupied. For what could be more absurd, his good will with good acceptation : as they than fuch folly in the Romans , as to let Andid in outward thew. But when the Mace- tiochie enjoy the profit of that war, wherein donian war was at an end, and all, or most of they had laboured so much, and he done all the States in Greece, were become little nothing? Further he warned the King, that better than Clients unto the Romans: then he should not molest those Cities that were was all this good correspondence changed free : and finally he demanded of him, upon into terms of worfe, but more plain mean- what reason he was come over with so ing. For T. Quintim, with histen Counsel- great an Army into Europe; for that other lors fent from Rome, required (as hath been cause of his journey there was none pro-*thewed before) with a commination of war, bable, than a purpole to make war upon this Kings gratulation of their victory ; as al- the Romans? To this the King made answer. so his long professed amity, and defire to con- That he wondred why the Romans should tinue in the fame.

left T. Quintius, with his ten Affistants, should controversie between him and the other happen to forget any thing to their parts be- Kings, had been still of old belonging to the purpole to deal with the King about those seized on by them, or by others from whom controversies, that were between him and they received them, at such time as his An-Ptolomy. What other private instructions cestors, being Lords of those Countries, were Cornelius had, we may conjecture by the ma- hindred by multiplicity of business, from naging of this his Embassage. For coming looking unto all that was their own. Finalto Selymbria: and there understanding that ly he willed them, neither to stand in fear of P. Villium and L. Terentium, having been fent him, as if he intended ought against them ry friendly. Antiochus at the request of their was, That Antiochus had reason to deliver Embassadors, withdrew his Invation from the back unto Ptolomy those Towns of his. fo trouble themselves, with thinking upon Thefe ten Counsellors were able to inform the matters of Alia: wherewith he prayed T. Dumtium, and acquaint him with the them to let him alone: even as he, withpurpose of the Senate: whereof yet it seems out such curiosity, suffered them to do in that he was not ignorant before; fince, in Italy what they thought good. As for his regard of Antiochia, he was the more incli- coming over into Europe: they faw well nable unto peace with Philip. It was there enough what bufiness had drawn him thifore agreed, when they divided themselves ther; namely the war against the barbato make progress through divers quarters of rous Thracians : the rebuilding of Lysima-Greece for the execution of their late De-chia, and the recovery of Towns to him becree, That two of them should visit King longing in Thrace, and Chersonesus. Now con-Antiochur; and the reft, where occasion fer cerning his title unto that country, He derived, nie diligence to make a party strong ved it from Selences: who made conquest against him. Neither was the Senate at thereof, by his victory against Lysimachus. Rome unmindful of the business; wherein Neither was it so, that any of the places in longing; L. Cornelius was lent from Rome, of Macedonians or Egyptians; but had been unable to smother their desire of war

Qqqqqq 2

Antiochus himself wintred about Ephosus; The Romans hold friendly correspondence with Antiochus, during their War with Philip: after which they quarrel with him. The deings of Hannibal at Carthage: whence he is chased by his Enemies, and by the Romans: His flight unto the King Antiochus. The Etolians murmur against the Romans in Greece. The War of the Romans and Achzans, with Nabis the Tyrant of Lacedamon. The departure of the Romans out of Greece. T. Quintius bis Triumpb. Peace denied to Antiochus by the Romans.

hestow this City upon one of his Sons, that with honesty and good faith. But as he was fhould reign therein: nor yet to be grie further proceeding on his voyage, he was ved with his proceedings in Alia; either perfectly informed that Ptolomy was alive. against the free Cities, or against the King of This made him bear another way from Egypt; fince it was his meaning to make the Egypt: and afterwards a tempest, with a free Cities beholding unto himfelf, and to grievous shipwrack, made him without joyn ere long with Ptolomy, not only in any further attempt on the way, glad to friendship, but in a bond of near affinity. have safely recovered his Port of Selucia. Cornelius having heardthis, and being per- Thence went he to Antiochia, where he winhaps unable to refute it, would needs hear tered : fecure as might appear. of the Roman further, what the Embassadors of smyrna and war. of Lampfacus, whom he had there with him, could say for themselves. The Emballadors During the Treaty at Infimachia, (at leastof Lampfacus being called in, began a tale; wife not long before or after it) one of their mans, having not laid their complaints in such ed some fit occasion of taking Arms again. fort, as they might be a convenient founda- They who dealt thus plainly, did not mean thereby to corroborate the present peace, and particularly the Ætolians, That conhis Egyptian voyage. Both he, and his fel- should all be well. low Embaffadors, had good leave to depart all together : and the King forthwith made their War intended against Antiochus. The ready, to be in Fgpt with the first. To his fame hereof arriving at Carthage, gave mat-Son Scleucus he committed his Army, and ter unto the enemies of Hannibal, whereleft him to oversee the building of Lysma- with both to pick a thank of the Roman Sechia: but all his Sea-forces he took along nate, and to chase out of their City this hohe requested to deal with him in this mat- them in the Civil administration : and given from Lylimachia; since it was his purposeto ter of peace, after such fort as might stand

But the Romans had not fo done with him. wherein they seemed to accuse the King be- Embassadors that had been sent unto the fore the Romans, as it were before compe- Macedonian, gave him counsel, as in a point tent ludges. Antiochus therefore interrup highly tending to his good; not to rest ted them, and bade them hold their peace, contented with the peace which was grantforasmuch as he had not chosen the Ro- ed unto him by the Romans, but to desire mans, but would rather take the Citizens of fociety with them, whereby they should be Rhodes, to be Arbitrators between him and bound to have the same friends and enemies. And this he advised him to do quickly, be-Thus the Treaty held some few dayes, fore the War brake out with Antiochus: without any likelihood of effect. The Ro- left otherwisehe might seem, to have awaittion of the war by them intended: nor yet to be satisfied with weak excuses. In like having purpose to depart well satisfied, and manner some of the Greeks, were solicited; were doubtful how to order the matter, in stantly and faithfully they should abide in fuch wife as they might neither too rudely, the friendship of the people of Rome. It like boiftrous Galle-Greeks, pretend only the was needless to say plainly whereto this engoodness of their swords: nor yet over mo- treaty tended: the froward answer made destly, to retain among the Greeks an opinion by the Ætolians, declares them to have well of their justice, forbear the occasion of ma- understood the purpose. They complained, king themselves great. The King on the that they were not alike honoured by the other fide was weary of these tedious guests; Romans after the victory, as they had been that would take none answer and yet scarce during the War. They that so complainknew what to fay. At length came news, ed were the most moderate of them. Others without any certain author, That Ptolomy cryed out that they had been wronged, and was dead. Hereof neither the King, nor the defrauded of what was promifed unto them: Romans, would take notice, though each of upbraiding withal the Romans, as men to them were desirous to hasten into Egypt: them beholding: not only for their victory Antiochus to take possession of the King- over Philip, but even for helping them to dom, and L. Cornelius, to prevent him there- fet foot in Greece, which else they never of, and fet the Country in good order. Cor- could have done. Hereto the Roman gave nelius was sent from Rome Embassador both gentle answers : telling them that there was to Antiochus and to Itolomy: which gave no more to do, thanto fend Embassadors to him occasion to take leave, and prepare for the Senate, and utter their grieß: and then

Such care took the Romans in Greece, for with him, and failed unto Ephofus. Thence nourable man, whom they so greatly hated. he sent Embiliadors to T. Quintim: whom He had of lace exercised his vertue against them an overthrow, or two, in the long [ laid out. So he found, That the ordinary Robe. The Judges at that time bore all the charges of the Common wealth did notex-(way in Carthage: holding their places during hault the Treasury: but that wicked Magilife; and having subject unto them, the lives, strates, and corrupt Officers, turning the goods, and fame of all the rest. Neither greatest part of the moneys to their own did they use this their power with modera- use, were thereby tain to load the people. tion; but conspired in such wise together, with needless burdens. Hereof he made. that who so offended any of them, should such plain demonstration, That these Robhave them all to be his enemies : which be- bers of the common Treasure were coming once known, He was fure to be soon ac- pelled to restore, with shame, what they culed and condemned. In this their im- had gotten by knavery : and fo the Carthanotent rule of the City, Hannibal was chosen ginians were freed from the necessity of Przetor. By vertue of which Office, though making such poor shifts, as formerly they he was superior unto them during that year: had used, when they knew not the value of vet had it not been their manner to bear their own Estate. But as the vertue of Hannimuch regard unto such an annual Magi- balwas highly commended by all that were ftrate, as at the years end must be accounta- good Citizens: so they of the Roman Fable to them, if ought were laid unto his ction, which had, fince the making of the charge. Hannibal therefore sending for one peace until now, little regarded him, began of the Questors, or Officers of the Treasury, to rage extreamly: as being by him stript of to come and speak with him: the proud their ill-gotten goods and ill-employed au-Questor set lightly thereby, and would not thority, both at once, even when they come: For he was of the adverse Faction thought themselves to have been in sull to Hannibal; and men of his place were to possession of the vanquished Carthage, whatfoever : and in what fort it was thence when they obtained it. But the Romans were be chosen into the Order of Judges: in con- Wherefore they fent letters to their friends templation whereof, he was filled already at Rome: wherein they complained as if with the spirit of future Greatness. But he the Earchine Faction grew strong again, and had not to do with such a tame Prætor, as Hannibal would shortly be in arms. Questiwere they that had occupied the place be- onless, if oppressing the City by injustice, fore. Hanuibal (ent for him by a Pursivant; and robbing the Treasury, were the only and having thus apprehended him, brought way to hold Carthage in peace with Rome: him into judgement before a publick affem these Enemies to the Barchines might well bly of the people. There he not only cryout, That having done their best already flewed what the undutiful stubbornness of to keep all inquiet; they saw none other this Questor had been; but how unsuf likelihood than of War. But having no ferable the insolency of all the Judges at the other matter to alledge, than their own inpresent was: whose unbridled power made ventions: they said, That Hannibal was like them to regard neither Laws nor Magi- unto a wild beaft, which would never be strates. To this Oration when he perceit tamed; That secret messages past between ved that all the Citizens were attentive and him, and King Antiochus: and that he was favourable; He forthwith propounded a wont to complain of idleness, as if it were Law, which passed with the general good harmful to Carthage; with what else to like liking; That the Judges should be chosen effect they could imagine. These accusatifrom year to year , and no one man be con- ons they directed not unto the Senate: but tinued in that Office two years together. addrelling their letters craftily, every one to If this Law had been passed, before he pass the best of his own friends at Rome, and such sedover Iberus: it would not perhaps have as were Senators; they wrought so well, been in the power of Hanno, to have that neither pulicke notice of their Conspibrought him unto necessity of reforming racy was taken at Carthage; nor the authorianother grievance, concerning the Roman ty of the Roman Senate, wanting to the fur-Tribute. This Tribute the Carthaginians therance of their malicious purpole. Only were fain to levie by Taxation laid upon P. Scipio is said to have admonished the Fathe whole Commonalty, as wanting money thers, that they should not thus dishonourain their publike Treasury, wherewith to bly subscribe, and become seconds to the acdefray either that, or divers other needful cusers of Hannibal: as if they would oppress, charges. Hannibal confidering this, began by suborning or countenancing false witnesto examine the publicke Revenues; and to les against him; the man, against whom in take a perfect note, both how much came war they had not of long time prevailed, nor into the Treasurie, by waies and means used their victory in such base manner,

1048 not all fo great minded as Scipio : they | aright, that he was fled. But the more comwithed for some such advantage against Han- mon opinion was, That the Romans had nibal; and were glad to have found it. Three made him away. At length came news where Embassadors they sent over to Carthage, C. he had been seen; and then the Reman Em-Servilius , Q. Terentius , and M. Claudius baffadors, having none other errand thither. Marcellus: whose very names imports suffici- accused him (with an evil grace) as a trouent cause of bad affection to Hannibal. These | bler of the Peace ; whereby they only difhaving past the Sea, were entertained by those that had procured their coming: and being by them instructed how to carry themfelves, gave out, That they were fent to end men to understand, that he fled not thus fome controversies, between the Carthagini. ans and Masanissa. But Hunnibal had kept fuch good espial upon the Romans, that he . knew their meaning well enough: against ally: as one, in whose great worth and howhich he was never unprepared. It were nour the Tyrians, by reason of affinity beenough to fay, That he escaped them by tween their Cities, thought themselves to flight : but in the actions of fo famous a man, have interest. Thence went he to Antiocha I hold it not impertinent to reherse the particularities. Having openly shewed himself, as was his manner, in the place of Allembly. He went forth of the Town when it began Jus, that exceedingly rejoyced at his comto wax dark, accompanied with two which ing. were ignorant of his determination; though fuch as he might well truft. He had appoint he had gotten Hannibal: fo had the Romans ted Horses to be in a readiness at a certain no great cause to be therefore forry: otherplace: whence riding all night, He came to wife than as they had much difgraced thema Tower of his own by the Sea-fide. There felves, by discovery of their impotent mahad he a thip furnished withall things lice, in chasing him thus out of his Country. needful; as having long expected the neceffity of fome such journey. So he bade great Commander to make stout Souldiers Affick farewell; lamenting the misfortune of base Affatiques; as it had been by his of his Country, more than his own, training and dicipline, to make very fervice-Paffing over to the Isle of Cercina; He found able and skilful men of War of the Spaniards. there in the Haven some Merchants ships Africans, Gaules, and other Nations, that ly: and the chief among them began to it supposed, that one mans worth, especial-covered the mischief by them intended against him, and the malice of the Senate: missing the while their purpose, and causing without great reason.

Hannibal coming to Tyre, the Mother-City of Carthage, was there entertained Rovand, finding the King departed, vifited his Son in Daphne: who friendly welcomed him, and fent him unto his Father at Eshe-

As Antiochus had cause to be glad in that For it would not prove alike easie unto this of Carthage. They faluted him respective- were hardy, though unexperienced. Or were enquire, whither he was bound. He faid ly being fo extraordinary, could alter the na-He went Embassadour to Tyre: and that he ture of a cowardly people: yet was it thereintended there in the Island to make a Sa- withall considerable, that the vanities of Ancrifice; whereto he invited all the Mer- tioches, the pride of his Court, the baseness chants, and Masters of the Ships. It was of his Flatterers, and a thousand other such hor weather: and therefore he would needs vexations, would be far more powerful in hold his Feast upon the shore; where, be- making unprofitable the vertue of Hannibal, cause there wanted covert. He made them now a desolate and banished man, than had bring thither all their Sails and Yards to be been the villany of Hanno and his Compliused instead of Tents. They did so; and ces, hindering him in those actions, wherein feasted with him till it was late at night: at he had the high Command, and was secondwhich time he left them there asleep: and ed by his warlike brethren. Wherefore the putting to Sea, held on his course to Tyre. name of this Great Carthaginian, would on-All that night, and the day following, He ly help to ennoble the Roman Victory : or if was fure not to be pursued. For the Mer- it further served to hearten Antiochin, and chants did neither make hast to send any make him less careful to avoid the war; news of him to Carthage, as thinking him to then should it further serve, to justifie the Robe gone Embassidour: neither could they, mans in their quarrel. And it seems indeed without some loss of time, such of them as that it was no little part of their care, to get made most speed homeward, get away from a fair pretence of making war. For Antis-Cercina; being bussed a while in fitting their chen, as is said before, having newly sent Emtackle. At Carthage, the mils of so great a buffadors to T. Quintius, requiring that the person was diversly construed. Some gueffed Peace might faithfully be kept:it was not prohable, that he had any meaning to take lentertainment. Wherefore there was none Arms, unless by meer violence he were other way, than to do somewhat against thereto inforced. Only the Atolians were these their suspected Enemies: especially agreatly suspected, as a turbulent people, defrom of innovation, and therefore practifing ance: whilest Antiochus was far away in Sy. with this Great King; whom they wished to fee among them in Greece. In this regard. and to appeale them; they had of late been City among the Vulgar; but found fuch creanswered with gentle words by one of the dit with the chief of the Senate, that in the ten Counsellers, That the Senate would following year, against which rime it was exgrant them whatfoever with reason they pected that Antiochus should be ready to should ask. But this promise was too large, take his great enterprise in hand : P. Cornelius and unadvised. For when their Embassadors came to Rome, the Senate would grant them fecond Confulfhip, with intention to be Genothing: but wholly referred them to T. neral in the War, against the King and his Quintiss, who favoured them leaft. Hereat Hannibal. For the present, the busines with they murmured, but knew not how to right Nubis was referred unto Titus, to deal with themselves, otherwise than by speaking such him as he thought good. This would be a be thence gone. were wont to upbraid the rest of the Greeks friendship with him, two or three years bewith the vain liberty which the Romans had fore this, as is already shewed, whilest he gainst Nabis, who could worst make refistria, and not intentive to his bufinels. Thefe reports went not only current through the Scipio the African, defired, and obtained, a words, as might haften the Romans out of fair colour of his longer tarriance in Greece. Greece for very shame, who had no desire to Therefore he was glad of the employment : whereof also he knew that many of the The daily talk at Rome, was, of War with Greeks would not be forry: though for his Antiochus; but in Greece, when the Romans own part, he wanted all good pretence of would leave the Country. For the Atolians taking it in hand. For Nabis had entred into proclaimed, faying, That these their Deli- had War with Philip: and had further been verers had lain heavier Fetters upon them, contented for the Romans fake to be at peace than formerly they did wear; but yet bright- with the Asheans : neither fince that time er and fairer than those of the Macedonian : had he done any thing, whereby he should likewise, that it was a gracious act of Titm, draw upon himself this War. He was to take from the Legs of the Greeks their indeed a deteltable Tyrant, and hated of chain, & tie it about their Necks. There was the Acheans: as one, that besides his own indeed no cause of tarrying longer in Greece, wicked Conditions, had formerly done to if the Romans had no other meaning than them great mischief. Titus therefore had a what they pretended. For Philip had made plaufible Theme whereon to discourse beno delay, in accomplishment of that which tore the Embaffadors of all the Confederate was laid upon him: all the Towns of Greece Cities, which he caused to meet for that purwere at liberty, and the whole Country at pose at Corinth. He told them that in the peace, both with the Romans, and within War with Philip, not only the Greeks, but the Relf. As for Antiochus, He made it his Romans themselves had each their motives daily fuit, That the Peace between him and apart (which he there briefly rehearfed) Rome, such as it was, might be confirmed that should stir them up, and cause them to and strengthened by a League of more af be earnest. But in this which he now profurance. Nevertheles, T. Quintius would pounded to them concerning Nabis, the Roneeds fear that Antischus meant forthwith mans had none other Interest, than only the to seize upon Greece, as soon as he and his making perfect of their Honour, in setting Army were thence departed. And in this all Greece at Liberty: which Noble Action regard, he retained still in his own hands was in some fort maimed, or incompleat, Chalcis, Demetrius, and the Acrocorinthus: whilest the Noble City of Argos was left in by benefit of which Towns he might the subjection to a Tyrant that had lately occubetter withstand the dangerous Invasion like pied it. It therefore belonged unto them, the to be made by Antiochus. Suitable unto the Greeks, duly to consider, whether they doings of Quintins, were the reports of the thought the deliverance of Argos a matter ten Embasiadors, that had been sent over to worthy to be undertaken : or whether otheraffift him : when they returned back into wife to avoid all further trouble, they could the City. Antiochus, they faid, would que be well contented to leave it as it was. This stionless fall upon Greece : wherein he should concerned them, and not the Romans : who find not only the Etolians, but Nabis the in taking this work in hand, or letting it Tyrant of Lacedemon, ready to give him alone, would wholly be ruled by the Greeks answer hereunto very eloquently, and as compell him by force of Arms, to submit pleasing as he could devise. He gave thanks to the Romans for what was past; extolled that was now at unity. These words had been their Vertues at large; and magnified them reasonable, if they had proceeded from bethighly in regard of this their proposition : ter men. But it was apparent, that no regard wherein unrequested they freely made offer of the common Liberty wrought so much to continue that Bounty, which at the vehement request of their poor Associates they had already of late extended unto the unto themselves, that worse would use it. upon them, out of their own imagination. to foretell what harm these their Benefactors meant to do hereafter: when as Thankfulness would rather have required an Acknowledgement of the Benefits and Pleasures al-Friends unto the Romans, were now de- his power to conclude upon any thing. frauded of some places, antiently to them themselves. The Athenian Embassador made swithdrawing thence his Garrison; or else himself to the good pleasure of all Greece. with these Atolians; as did their own ravenous defire of oppressing others, and getting Greeks. To this he added, That great pity the whole Dominion in Greece, which Philip it was to hear such notable Vertue and high had lost. Neither could they well diffemble Deserts ill spoken of by some: which took this; making it no small part of their Grievance, That the old League was forgotten: wherein it had been covenanted. That the Romans should enjoy the spoil of all, but leave the Towns and Lands in possession of the Ætolians. This, and the remembrance ready received. Every one found the mean- of a thousand mischies by them done in ing of this last clause, which was directly former times, made the whole Assembly, espeagainst the £10lians. Wherefore Alexander cially the Acheans, cry out upon them: enthe Atolian role up, and told the Athenians treating the Romans to take fuch order betheir own : putting them in mind of their fore they went, that not only Nabis might antient glory, in those times when their City be compelled to do right; but the Atolian had been the Leader of all Greece, for de- thieves be enforced to keep home, and leave fence and recovery of the Liberty general: their neighbours in quiet. All this was highly from which Honour they were now fo far to the pleasure of Titus: who saw, that by faln, that they became Paralites unto those discountenancing the Etolians, He was bewhom they thought most mighty; and by come the more gracious with all the rest. their base assention, would lead all the rest. But whether it pleased him so well that Aninto servitude. Then spake he against the tiochus his Embassadors did presently after Acheans. Clients that had been a long time lie hard upon him, to draw the peace to unto the Macedonian; and Souldiers of Phi- some good conclusion, it may be greatly lip, until they ran away from his adversity. doubted. He cast them off with a slight an-Thele, he faid, had gotten Corinth, and must fwer : telling them, That the ten Embassanowhave War be made for their sakes, to dors or Counsellors which had been sent the end that they might also be Lords of unto him from Rome, to be his Assistants in Argos: whereas the Atolians, that had first these matters of weight, were now returned made War with Philip, and alwayes been home; and that without them it was not in

Now concerning the Lacedamonian War, belonging. Neither did he thus contain him- it was very foon ended. For Titus used felf, but objected unto the Romans, fraudu the help of all his Confederates; and made lent dealing: forasmuch as they kept their as great preparation against Nabis, both by Garrisons in Demetrias, Chalcis, and the Land and Sea, as if he should have had to Acrocorinth; having been always wont to do with Philip. Besides the Roman Forces, profess, That Greece could never be at Li- King Eumenes with a Navy, and the Rhodian berty, whilest those places were not free. Fleet, were invited to the Service: as also Also now at last, what else did they seek by Fhilip of Macedon sent aid by Land; doing this discourse of War with Nabis, than busi- therein poorly, whether it were to get favour nesses wherewith to find themselves occupi- of the Romans; or whether to make one aed, that so they might have some seeming mong the number, in seeking Revengeupon cause of abiding longer in the Country? But Nabis, that had done him injury. But the most they should do well, if they meant as they forward in this Expedition were the Achespake, to carry their Legions home out of ans, who set out ten thousand Foot, and 2 Greece, which could not indeed be free, till thousand Horse. As for the Etolians, rather their departure. As for Nabis, the Etolians to hold good fashion, and sound their dispothemselves did promise, and would under- sitions, than in hope to speed, their help was take, That they would either cause him to required; whereof they excused themselves yield to reason, and relinquish Argos freely, las well as they thought best.

the Acheans now become the prime friends it else do than terrifie the people; who must of the Romans in Greece; having removed thereby understand, that it was a mortal the Etolians from that degree of favour : crime to be suspected ? And to the same like as they themselves hereafter (though not purpose his cruelty extended it self unto in all haste) shall be supplanted of the same lome poor wretches: whom he accused of a Lacedemonians, against whom they are now meaning to flie to the Enemy. These were marching.

wife, began a conspiracy against the Lacede- He turned the more freely, all his thoughts monians that held their Town; meaning to toward the Enemy, that came on apace. He open their gates unto the Roman. But ere welcomed them with a fally: wherein, as Titus drew near, they were all detected and commonly happens, the Souldiers of the flain: excepting a very few, that escaped out Town had the better at first; but were at of the Town. The fame of this Commotion, length repelled with loss. Titus abode not caused the Army to march apace toward many dayes before sparta: but over-ran the Argos; with hope to be there, before things Country; hoping belike to provoke the were at quiet. But there was no stir within Tyrant forth to battail. The Roman Fleet the Wals: the execution done upon the first at the same time with King Eumenes and the movers, having terrified all the rest of the Rhodians, laid siege unto Gyttheum, the on-Citizens. Titus then thought it better, to ly or principal Town that Nabis had. Likeaffail Nabis in the head of his strength at La- ly they were to have taken it by force when cedemon, than to confume time about other there appeared hope of getting it by treashould thereon fall most heavily.

thousand, wherewith to defend himself somewhat more faithful, slue the Traitor; afagainst these Invaders. Five thousand of ter whose death, he himself alone made the them were Mercenaries: the rest, of his own better defence. Yet when T. Quinting with Countrey; but such as were of all others part of his Army came thither to Gyttheum: the worft, as manumifed flaves, malefactors this Captain of the Town had not the heart and base Peasants, unto whom his Tyrannie to abide the uttermost, and await what eiwas beneficial. Of the goood and worthy ther Time or his Master might do for him, Citizens he stood in doubt; and since he but was contented to give up the place, yet could not hope to win their love, his mean- upon Condition, to depart in safety to Sparing was to hold them quiet by fear. He called ta with his Garrison. Pythagoras, the Son-inthem all to an affembly, and compass law of Nabis, and brother unto his Wife, fing them round in with his Army, told them was come from Argos, whereof he had the of the danger that was toward him and them. Government, with a thousand Souldiers Ifthey could agree within themselves; they Mercenaries, and two thosand Argives: might, hefaid, hope the better to withstand it being (as may seem) the Tyrants purpose, bulent heads were invited by light occa- would have held longer out. But when sions, to raise tumults, and work dangerous they heard that it was lost, then began they found most reason to suspect. So should he only that he would appoint a time and place keep them innocent perforce; and thereby for Nabis to meet and speak with him. preserve not only the City and his own per- This was granted. In that Parlee the Tyfon from danger, but them also from the pu rant spake very reasonable for himself: nishment, which elsethey might have incur- proving, that he suffered wrong, and had red. Hereupon he cites and apprehends done none, and that by many good arguabout fourfcore of them; whom he leads ments: whereof the fum was. That whatfoeaway to prison, and the next night putteth ver they now did, or could object unto him. they neither should offend, nor yet break had made with him. Whereupon the inferloofe. As for the death of them, if it should red, That neither for his keeping the Town openly whipt through all the ftreets, and Some of the Argives, more bold than flain. Having thus affrighted the Citizens: places; especially at Argos: for the free- son. There were two Governours within dom whereof fince the War was made, pity the Town equal in authority : whereof the it were, that the calamities of the War one, either for fear, or defire of reward, had a purpose to let in the Romans. But the Nabis had in readiness an Army offifteen other finding what was in hand, and being the common Enemy. But forasmuch as tur- to relieve Gyttheum: which he thought treasons: it seemed unto him the safest, and to think upon finishing the War, by some (withal) the mildest course, to arrest before reasonable Composition. Pythagoras therefore hand, and put in ward, all those whom he was sent his Embassador to Titus: requesting them all to death. Thus was he sure that was of elder date than the League which they happen to be noised abroad : what could of Argos, nor for any other cause by them alledged, Rerer him, fince Argos, and all other their alle- short work ) before the City of Sparta: gations what foever, had not hindered them, they were contented to make peace with in time of their own need of him, from en- the Tyrant, upon fuch Conditions as Titus tring into that League with him: which should think meet. Besides the restitution was never broken on his part, nor ought to of Argor, and all the places thereon depenbe on theirs. But Quintius was not herewith ding; Titus propounded many other Condifatisfied. He charged him with tyranny : and tions to Nabis , and some of them very griegave instance, as easily he might, of divers vous. He would not suffer the Lacedemobarbarous cruekies by him committed. In all nian to have ought to do in the Isle of Crete: which points forasmuch as they knew this no, nor to make any Confederacies, nor war. Nabis to be guilty, before they made Peace either in that Island or elsewhere; not to and Confederacy with him; it was expedi- build any Town or Castle upon his own ent, that some other cause of this Invasion Lands : not to keep any other shipping. should be alledged. Whereto he said further, than two small Barks; besides many other That this Tyrant had occupied Meffene, a troublesome injunctions; with imposition Town Confederate with the Romans: That of an hundred talents in filver to be paid he had bargained to join with Philip; when out of hand, and fifty talents yearly, for he was their enemy, not only in League, but also in affinity: and that his Fleet had of these Covenants he demanded five hostarobbed many of their ships, about the Cape ges, such as he himself should name; and of Malea. Now touching this Piracy, fince one of them to be the Tyrants own Son. If in the Articles by Titus propounded unto Nabis, there was no restitution mentioned, draw the war from Nabis, because it was nother than of ships, by him taken from the Greeks his neighbours, with home he had enough, if not more than enough, to take long held war : it may feem to have been Argos from him; which he him felf did offer. objected, only by way of Complement, though it were for fear, to deliver up. But if and to enlarge the volume of those com- it were thought reasonable, to dispense a plaints, that were otherwise very frivolous. little with the Roman faith, in regard of the As for Messene, and the bargain of Alliance great benefit which thereby might redound made with Philip: they were matters fore- unto the state of their best friends in Greece going the League, that was made between by the extirpation of this Tyranny: then the Romans and this Tyrant : and therefore should this enterprise, when once it was tanot to have been mentioned. All this it ken in hand, have been profecuted unto the feems that Ariftanus, the Prætor of the very utmost. As for this middle course which alledged, they ought to make war upon that Winter (asthere was no hope of making Acheans, very well perceived : who therefore the Romans held : as it was not honourable doubting lest the Romans ( that were wont unto them, to enrich themselves by the sooil to talk so much of their own justice, honour, of one that had not offended them; nor and faithfull dealing) (hould now relent, pleasing to the Acheans, who judged it ever and forbear to molest him, who, though a after a great blemish to the noble acts of The wicked man, was yet their Confederate, and tw: fo did it minister unto the Ziolians, and had never done them wrong: framed his to fuch as curiously pried into the faults of discourse to another end. He entreated Nabis those which took upon them to be Patrons to consider well of his own estate:and to set- of Greece, no barren subject of malicious distle his fortunes, whilest he might do it with- course. For fince Philip, a King, and descenouthazzard: alledging the examples of ma- ded of many famous Kings, might not be fufny Typants that had ruled in the neighbour- fered by these Masterly Romans, to hold cities, and therein committed great outrages; any one of those Countreys or Towns in yet were afterwards contented to furren- Greece, that had belonged unto his Ancestors: der their Eftates, and lived in great security, it was thought very Arange, that Lassdamon, honour, and happiness, as private men. once the most famous City among all the Thus they discoursed until night. The next Greeks, was by the same Romans left in posday Nabis was contented to relinquish Ar leffion of a Tyrant; that had usurped it but gos; and requested them, to deliver unto yesterday; and he therein rooted by their him in writing their other commands, that he authority, as their friend and Confederate. might take counsel with his friends. The Nabis on the other fide thought himselfuniffue of all was, that, in regard of the charges, mercifully dealt withall, by the felf-fame whereat the Confederates must be, for main- Romans, whose amity he had prefered in tenance of an Army to lie in Leaguer all time of a doubtfull war, before the lowe and affinity of the Macedonian King, that had ther Embaffage to Rome, defiring peace and chief this he could.

the Citizens had laid hold without staying had newly escaped.

Grette: Antiochus was about to fend ano- mans had before made War. Ail forts of committed the City of Argos in o his hands. friendthip of the Senate. Things being But fally had he dealt with the Macedonian: therefore in appearance wholly disposed unand fally was he dealt with by those, to to quiet, Scipio the African, that was chosen whom he did betake himself. Among these Contul at Rome, could not have his desire, of Articles propounded, there was nothing being fent Commander into Greece. The unthat pleased him, fave only that for the ba- fincere meaning of Antiochus, and the tumulnifted Lacedemonians, ( of whom a great tuous disposition of the Atolians, were held number were in the Roman Camp; having as confiderations worthy of regard; yet not among them Agespolis the natural King of sufficient causes of making war. Neither ansparia, that being a young child was driven peared there any more honest way, of conout by Lycurgue the first of the Tyrants ) futing the Etolians, and of throughly perthere was made no provision, to have them swading all the Greeks ( which was not to restoredunto their City and Estates; but be neglected, by those that meant to affure only leave required for as many of their unto themselves the patronage of Greece ) wives, as would be so contented, to live that the good of the Country was their sole abroad with them in banishment. Wherefore intent : than by withdrawing thence their he forbore to give confent unto these de- Legions, and leaving the Nation unto it self. mands; and fustained an affault or two; till occasion should be ripe, and call them hoping belike that the enemics would foon over again. Wherefore after Titus had frent be weary. But his fearful nature shortly a Winter there, without any matter of emovercame the resolution, which the sense of ployment, either found, or at any near dithese injuries had put into him. So yielding stance appearing, he called an Assembly of unto alithat had been propounded, He deli Delegates, from all parts of Greece to Gavered the hoftages; and thereupon obtained rinth: where he meant to bid them farepeace that was confirmed afterwards at Rome well. There he recounted unto them all by the Senate and People. From this time that paffed fince his coming into those parts forward. He thought the Romans far more and willed them to value the Roman friendwicked than himself; and was ready upon ship, according to the difference of estate. the first advantage, to do them all the mif- wherein the Romans found and left them. Hereto he added some wholesome counsel; The Artificial had heard news that Lacede- touching the moderate use of their liberty, men was even at point of being taken. This and the care which they ought to have of credied them; and gave them heart to think living peaceably and without faction. Lastly upon their own good. So they adventured he gave up Acrocorinthus to the Acheans; tofet upon the Garrison; which was much withdrawing thence the Roman Garrison. weakened, by the remove of the three and promiting to do the like ( which very thousand carried thence by Pythagoras to foon he did ) at Chalcis and Demetrias; that helialie Tyrant at Sparta. There needed foit might be known, what lyars the Ætoliunto their liberty no more, than that all of ans were, who had accused the Romans, of them jointly thould fet their hands to the a purpose to retain those places. With joyful gettie ofit. which no fooner they did than acclamations did the Greeks teftifie their they altraitied it. Presently after this came good liking of that which Titus had faid and 7. Swimmer to Argor, where he was joyfully done : as alfo (at his request) they agreed to welcomed. He was deservedly acknow- ransome and enlarge all Romans, that had ledgen as author of that benefit, whereon been fold into their Countrey by Hannibal.

Thus Titus Crowned his actions in Greece for him and that he might the better enti- with an happy end : and by leaving the the himself thereto, he caused the liberty of Countrey before his departure was urged, the Mreives to be proclaimed at the Nemaan lett therein behind him the memory of his games a stratifying it by his authority. The vertue and benefits, untainted by jealoufic City was annexed again to the Councel of and suspition of any evil meaning. At his Achers whereby the Acheans were not coming to the City, He had the honour of a more frengthened; than the Argives them Triumph; which was the goodlieft of all that felves were fecured from danger of relapse, Rome had until that day beheld. Three daies into the same extremities out of which they together the shew of the pomp continued: as being fet out with the spoils of a Coun-After this, Titus found little business or trey, more abundant in things worthy of none wherewith tofet on work his Army in fuch a spectacle, than any wherein the Ro-

Refere 2

Arms, with Statues and curious pieces of | should thus infift on points no way concer-Brass or Marble, taken from the Enemy, ning them, and take upon them to prescribe were carried in the first daies Pageant. The unto the King, what Cities of Afia he fould fecond day, was brought in all the treasure let at liberty; from what Cities they would of Gold and Silver: Some in the rude Mats give him leave to exact his wonted Tributes: unwrought; some in divers forts of Coin; either putting or not putting his Garrisons and some in Vessels of sundry kinds, that into them, as the Senate should think fire. were the more highly prized by the work. Hereto Quintim answered, that fince they manship. Among these were ten shields, all went so distinctly to work, He would also or Silver; and one of pure Gold. The do the like. Wherefore he propounded unto third day Titus himself entered the City in them two Conditions, and gave them their Les Triumphant Chariot. Before him were choice whether to except : Either that it carried an hundred and fourteen Crowns of should be lawful for the Romans to take Gold, bestowed upon him by divers Ct- part in Afea with any that would feek their ties. There were alfoled the beafts for Sa- triendthip ; Or it King Antiochus milliked crefice, the Prifoners, and the hoftages: this, and would have them forbear to medamong which, Demetries the Son of King die in Asia, that then he should abandon Philip, and Armenes the Son of Nabin, were whatfoever he had gotten in Europe. This principal. After him followed his Army; was plain dealing, but no reasonable nor and (which added much grace, and good li-pertinent answer, to that which the Kings king to the shew) the Roman Captives, by Embassadors had propounded. For ifthe Rohis procurement redeemed from flavery in mans might be hired to abstain from Asia, by Greece.

audience of the Senate for many Embassa- Lampfacus, or any other Asiatiques, whom they ges, that were come out of Greece and Asia. were pleased to reckon as their Confederates. They had all very favourable answers, ex bind them in honour to make War with a cepting those of King Antiochus: whom the King that sought their love, and had never Senate would not hear, but referred over done them injury. But they knew very well. to T. Quintim, and the tenthat had been his that Antiochin could not without great shame Counsellors; because their business was said be so base, as to deliver up unto them the to be somewhat intricate. Hereat the Kings City of Lysmachia, whereon he had of late Embassadors wondered. They said unto 72- been at so much cost; in building it up even the and his Affociates, that they could not from the foundation, and repeopling it with di cern wherein consisted any perplexity of Inhabitants, that had all been dispersed. their message. For all treaties of peace and or captive to the Barbarians. And so much friendship, were either between the Victor the Embassadors with great indignation aland the vanquished; between those, that ledged : faying, That Antiochus defired having warred together, were upon equal friendship of the Romans; but so, as it might terms of advantage; or between those that stand with his honour. Now in point of hohad lived alwaies in good agreement, with nour the Romans took upon them as if their out any quarrel. Unto the Victor, they faid, cause were far the superior. For it was they that the vanquished must yield; and patient- said, their purpose to set at liberty those to: they held it strange, that the Romans tions their King would accept. For lack of a the gift of all that Antiochus had lately won Not long after this triumph , He procured in Europe : then did not the affairs of Smyrna. ly endure the impolition of some Covenants, Towns which the King would oppress and that else might seem unreasonable. Where hold in subjection : especially since those War had been made, and no advantage got Towns were of Greekifb blood and language; ten: there was it usual to demand and fell, in that regard under the patronage make restitutions of things and places claim- which Rome had afforded unto all Greece beed, gotten or loft; accordingly as both parts fides. By this colour they might foon have left could agree. But between those which had Antiochin King of not many subjects on the never fallen out, there ought no Conditions hither fide of Emphrates. Neither did they forof establishing friendship to be proposed : bear to fay, That unless he would quit what fince it was reasonable, that each part should ne held in Europe, it was their meaning not hold their own ; and neither carry it felt only to protect those which relied upon them as superiour to the other, in pre-cribing in Asia, but therein to make new Alliances: ought that might be troublesome. Now of namely (as might be understood) with such this last kind, was the league and friendship as were his subjects. Wherefore they urged that had been so long in conclution, betwirt his Embassadors to come to a point, and Antiochus and the Romans. Which being tell them plainly which of these two Condipleafing answer, which the Embassadours laying ambushes, and not discouraged with polition to let him live in peace.

Romans for justice in vain.

all, as hath already been shewed; by this other. their fellowship in Arms, grew to be such! Divers overthrows, though none that were willing partakers each of others fortune, great, these Ligarians gave unto the Romans: in that Countrey, by means of Hannibal his not how to make War, fave on their own passage there through. Neither is it likely that ground. the re-conquest would have been more diffibacks. The Ligurians were a stout Nation, Indian shewed unto the Great Alexander, as light and swift of body; well practifed in an Embleme of his large Dominions. For could not hereto make, little wanted of any overthrow, but forthwith ready to fight giving presently defiance to the King. But again. Their Countrey was mountainous, they fuffered themselves to be intreated, and rough, woody, and full of straight and danwere contented once again to fend over gerous pallages. Few good Towns they P. Villius, and others that had been already had: but many Castles, exceedingly well with the King at Lysimachia; by whom they fortified by nature: to as without much lamight receive a final answer, whether these bour, they could neither be taken or besieddemands made by Quintius and his Affoci- ed. They were also very poor; and had litates would be accepted, yea, or no. By this the or nothing that might give contentment respite of time, and the fruitless Treaties unto a victorious Army that should sooil enluing, Antiochus got the leisure of two their Land. In these respects, they served years 3 or thereabouts, to prepare for War; excellently well to train up the Roman Soulfinding in the Romans all that while, nodif- diers to hardness and military patience: teaching them (besides other exercises of War ) to endure much, and live contented with a little. Their quarrel to Rome, grew $. V. partly from their love unto the Gaules, their neighbours and companions: partly from the Gauls, Ligarians, and Spaniards. Of their delight in robbing and spoiling the M. Portius Cato. Injuries done by Masa- Territory of their borderers, that were subniffa to the Carthaginians, that fue to the ject unto Rome. But their obstinate continuance in the War which they had begun, feems to have been grounded upon the Con-THE Insubrians, Bojians, and other of dition of all Salvages: To be friends or foes, THE Insubrians, Bojians, and other of dition or an savages. To the Gifalpine Gaules, together with the by custome, rather than by Judgement: and by custome of such posterior or such posterior of such posterior or such posterior Ligurians; made often and (in a manner ) to acknowledge no such vertue in Leagues, continual war upon the Romans in Italy, or formal conclusions of peace, as ought to even from such time as Hannibal and his bro- hinder them from using their advantage; or ther Mago departed thence, untill such time taking revenge of injuries when they return. as they themselves were utterly subdued: to mind. This quality is found in all, or most which was not, before the Romans were al- of the West-Indians : who, if they be demost at the very height of the Empire. These manded a reason of the Wars between them Nations, having ferved under Mago for and any of their neighbours, do use comwages, and afterwards having gotten Amil- monly this answer, It hathfill been the custome car a Carthaginian, to be Leader unto them for us and them, to fight one against the

that seldome afterwards either the Gaules but many more, and greater, they received. or Ligarians did stir alone: but that their Often they fought peace, when they found Companions, hearing it, were ready to se-themselves in distress, and brake it again as ; cond them. How the Romans first prevailed, often, when they thought it profitable so to and got large possession in Gallia Cisapina, do. The best was, that as their Countrey now called Lumbardie: it hath been long was a good place of exercise unto the Rofince rehearled between the first and second mans, so out of their own Countrey they did Punich Wars. As also it hath fince appeared, little harm : not sending any great Armies how they loft the greatest part of their hold far from home; perhaps, because they knew

The Country of Spain, as it was the first cult or tedious unto the Romans, than was part of the Continent out of Italy that bethe first purchase: if, besides the greater came subject unto the Romans : so was it the employments which they had of their Ar last of all their Provinces, which was wholly mies abroad, their forces appointed unto this and throughly by them subdued. It is likened war, had not been distracted by the Liguri- in figure by some Geographers unto an Oxeans: that alwaies made them to proceed hide: and the Romans found in it the prowarily, having an eye to the danger at their perty of that Oxe-hide which Calanus the would rife from the ground. And thus wa themselves against those that were strangers. it with Spain. Seldom did it happen that yet usurped the Dominion over them. But those parts from which the Roman Armies the forces which Scipio had left behind him lay farthest, were not up in rebellion. The in that Country, being well acquainted spaniards were a very hard Nation, and with the manner of War in those parts, funeafily ftirred up to arms; but had not much pressed this rebellion by many Victories: knowledge in the art of war, nor any good and, together with subjection, brought peace Captains. They wanted also (which was upon the Countrey; which lasted five years. their princial hinderance) good intelli-gence among themselves: and being divi-ded into many small Signiories, that had lit-remaining the cause of the War; which as tle other communion than of language, they ter five years brake out again. The Spanifeldom or never provided in general for the ards fought a battel with the Roman Procommon good of their Country; but made conful, whom they flew; and had a great it their chief care, each of them to look un-to their own Territory, Such private respects hopes. Yet the happy success of their Wars made them often to fall afunder, when ma- in Greece, made the Romans think it enough ny had united themselves together, for cha- to send thither two Prators, and with each fing out of the Romans. And there were the of them fome two Legions. Thefe did fomecauses of their otten overthrows: as defire what: yet not so much, but that M. Portise of liberty; rather then complaint of any Cato, who was Conful the year following, wrong done to them, was the cause of their and sent into that Province; sound at his often taking arms.

to make evaculation of this Cholerick Spanish pily, that all the Spaniards were not of one humour; by employing, as Mercenaries in mind: some were faithful to Rome; and their wars abroad, those that were most some were idle beholders of the pains likely to be unquiet at home. They had also that others took. Yet when Cate had won taken Souldiers from one part of the Countrey, and ufed them in another: finding they rofe against him in many parts of the means to pay them all, out of the profirs which they raifed upon the whole Countrey, and put him unto much new which they raifed upon the whole Countrey. Whilest he was about to make trey; as being far better husbands, and of a journey against those that were as yet unmore dexterity than were the Romans, in subdued : some of the lately vanquished. that kind. But contrariwise, the Romans, using were even ready to rebell. He therefore difthe fervice of their own Legions, and of their armed them; which they took so heavily, for the Spaniards; and therefore were fain grief. Hearing of this, and well understand by held the Countrey; though feldome in Very foon after the departure of Scipio. there was raifed War in Spain against the Romans even upon the fame general ground. that was the foundation of all the Spanish Wars following. It was thought unrea onable, that the spaniards should one while treading upon any fide of it; the further parts | Carthaginians; basely forgetting to help coming little less to do, than the recon-The Carthaginians had been accustomed, quering of all spain. But it fell out hapfure friends the Latines, had little business that many of them slew themselves for very to have much business with them. spain ing that such desperation might work danwas too far distant, and withall too great for gerous effects: He called unto him the them to fend over Colonies thither, where- principal among them : and commending by to hold it in good order, according to the unto them peace and quietness, which they course that they took in Italy. Wherefore never had disturbed but unto their own it remained, that they should alwaies main- great loss, He prayed them to devise what tain such Armies in the Countrey, as might course might be taken for holding them asferve to hold in obedience perforce; and fured unto Rome, without further troubles fuch heedful Captains as might be still rea. None of them could, or would give counsel dy to oppose the Barbarians in their first in a matter of this nature. Having therefore Commotion. This they did, and there talked with them once or twice, and finding their invention barren in this kind of Subject; He gave express charge, That upona day appointed they thould throw downthe walls of all their Towns. Afterwards he care ryed the war about from place to place ; and with fingular industry finished it in short time. Neither thought he it any difgrace to him or to Rome , in this time of danger , to help the Carthaginians against the Romans, imitate the Carthaginians, and hire an Army and another while the Romans against the of the Celtiberians, against other of their Countrymen:

as it feemed, with a jest, That if he were van- continually vexed. ble to his own peculiar disposition.

ble in the Art of war, which might well be did some laudable service; and yet so, that then termed the occupation of the Romans; commonly there were of men, towns, and but so well furnished with all other usefull people, new that rebelled, instead of the qualities, that very little was wanting in old that were flain, taken, or reclaimed. At him which might feem requisite to the ac- the causes hereof, I have already pointed; were, of the Roman Antiquities, and of Huf- long after. bandry. In matter of Husbandry he was In all other Countries to the West of the notable, and thereby most increased his Ionian Seas, the Romans had peace; but so substance; being of mean birth, and the had not the Carthaginians. For when Hannifirst of his house. Strong of body he was, bal was gone from them, and that the eneand exceeding temperate: fo as he lived in mies of the Barchine House promised all feperfect health to very old age. But that licity which Rome could grant, unto themwhich most commended him unto the better (elves and their obedient City: Malanilla fort of the Romans, was his great fincerity fell to disputing with the (word, about the of life, abstinence from bribes, and fashi- title to the best part of their Lands. He beoning himself to the antient laudable Cu- gan with Emporia, a fruitful Region about stomes of the City: Herein he had merited the leffer sprik: wherein, among other Cifingular commendations, if the vehemency ries, was that of Leptis, which daily paid a of his pature had not caused him to malign Talent unto Carthage for Tribute. This Counthe vertue of that noble Scipio the African, trey the Numidian challenged, and by winand some other worthy men ; that were ning some part of it , seemed to better his noles honest than himself, through far less claim unto the whole. He had a great adrigid, and more gallant in behaviour. O- vantage: for that the Carthaginians might Countrymen: excusing the indignity, such bility and greatness as this his Ancestor had

quished and slain, then should he need to The Spanish Wars, after Cato his deparpay them nothing; whereas if he had the ture out of the Countrey, though they were victory, He could pay them with the enemies money. Finally, He brought the War and the Country feldom free from infurto fo good end, that in long time after, rection, in one part or other. The Roman though spain were often troublesome, yet Prætors therefore, of which two every year was it in no danger of being loft. He in- were fent over Commanders into Spain creased also the publick Revenues in that (that was divided into Governments) did Province, by causing some Mines of Iron rarely fail of such work, as might afford the and Silver to be wrought, that had before honour of Triumph. One flew thirteen lain unregarded. Herein he did benefit the thousand Spaniards in a battle : another Common-wealth by a vertue much agreeatook fifty Towns: and a third enforced many States of the Country to fue for peace. For this M. Cato was not only very nota- Thus every one of them, or most of them. complishment of a perfect man. He was and therefore think it enough to fay. That very skilful in the Roman Laws, a man of the business in Spain required not the imgreat Eloquence, and not unprofitable in ployment of a Roman Conful, from fuch any business either private or publick. Ma- time as Cato thence departed, untill the Nuny books he wrote; whereof the principal mantian War broke out, which was very therwife, He was avery good Citizen, and not make any War, without leave obtained one of fuch temper, that he could fashion from their Masters the Romans. They had himself to all occasions; as if he were ne- none other way of redress, than by sending ver out of his Element. He loved business to Rome their Complaint of his doings. And fowell, or rather hated vice so earnestly; furely they wanted not good matter to althat even unto the end of his life. He was ledge, if the Judges had been impartial. exercifed in defending himself or accusing For besides that Scipio, in limiting out to others. For at the age of fourfcore and fix them their bounds, had left them the pofyears, he pleaded in his own defence : and fettion of this Country : Mafaniffa himfelf, four years after . he accused sergius Galbai now very lately pursuing a Rebel that fled unto the people. So began the Nobility of out of his Kingdom; defired leave of the Catobis family; which ended in his great Carthaginians, for himself to pass through it grand-child M. Cato the Utican : one that in his way to Cyrene: thereby acknowledgbeing of like vertue and fervency, had all ing (had it otherwise been questionable) his good purposes dasht, and was finally that the Country was theirs. This notwithwearied out of his life, by men of fuch no- standing, Majanifa had wherewith to justifie his proceedings, especially unto the Roman Senate. He gave the Fathers to understand by his Embassadours, what faithless The Etolians labour to provoke Antiochus people the Carthaginians were, and how ill affected to the State of Rome. There had lately been fent unto them from Hannibal, one that should perswade them to take part with Antiochus. This man they had examined upon some suspition of his errand; yet neither arresting him nor his ship, had thereby afforded him means to escape. Hence the Numidian concluded, that certainly it was their purpose to rebell; and therefore good policy to keep them down. As for the Countrey of Emperia: it had alwaies, he faid, been theirs that were able to hold it by ftrong hand: and fo belonged fometime unto the Numidian Kings: though now of late it was in possession of the Carthaginians. But if the truth were known, the that whereon their City stood: or scarcely whole spoil of Philip, and the highest reputo so much. For they were no better than tation among the Greeks; were not only there to build upon fo much ground, as quite forfaken by their ancient dependants; they could encompass with an Oxe hide cut and of all other the most unregarded. Yet had thereto any disposition : but were prethe Romans had leifure to express the utmost of their hatred.

1058

10.00

0.452

All and well the

ø. VI.

Philip, and Nabis, to War upon the Ro. mans, by whom they hold themselves wrong. ed and dispraced. Nabis besiegeth Guttheum, and wasting some part of Achra. The exact skill of Philopeemen in advantage of ground : whereby he utterly vananisheth Nabis. Antiochus being denied peace of the Romans, joyns with the Etolians. The Æ: olians surprize Demetrias : and by hilling Nabis, their Confederate. feize upon Sparta. But they are driven out by the Citizens : who at Philopoemen his perswalions annex themselves to the Achx-

LL Greece being at peace, and the Roman Armies thence departed : it grie-Citizens of Carthage had not any very war- ved much the Etolians to think, that they rantable title unto any more ground, than who had promifed unto themselves the strangers in Africk, that had gotten leave disappointed of their covetous hopes, but into small thongs. Whatsoever they held was there made a great access to their Ewithout such a compass, was purchased by state; by adding much unto them, of that fraud, and wrongfull encroachments. This which had been taken from the Macedonian. confidered, Mafariffe requested of the Senate, This might well have sufficed them, if their that they would not adjudge unto such desires had not been immoderate; and their usurpers, the Countrey sometimes apper- indignation more vehement, than their detaining to the Accestors of him their assured fire. But they were not so pleased with that friend. The Romans having heard theseal- which they had, fince they thought it no legations on both fides, found the matter fo more than part of their due : as they were doubtful, that they could not on the sud- wexed with the denial of that which they den tell what to determine. Wherefore, claimed, and with finding themselves to be because they would do nothing rashly : they wholly disstreemed, wherein they thought fent over three Embassadours, of whom that they had unsufferable wrong. Wherefore P. Scipio the African was one and the chief, they devised, in a Parliament which they to decide the controversie : yet secretly shortly held, by what means they best might giving them instructions, to leave all as they | right themselves; and give the Romans a forfound it, without making any end one way rowful knowledge of the difference between or other. The Embassadors followed their their enmity and friendship. To this purpose directions, and left all doubtful. So was it they foon agreed, as concurring all in one likely, that Mafanissa with a strong Army affection; That they would not only pershould quickly prevail against those that swade Antagehus to make war upon the Recould no more than talk of their right, and mans, assone to whom the Romans had long exclaim against the wrong. By such Arts refused peace; but that they would deal were the Caribaginians held, not only from with the King of Macedon their ancient eneftirring in favour of King Antiochus , if they my, and with Nabis the Tyrant of Lacedamon, to join all together in a new Confedepared by little and little, unto their final racy : whose joyut forces could not in all destruction : that came upon them, when likelihood, but far surmount those of the Remans, Acheans, Rhodians, and King Eumenes, with all that were of their Faction. This was a great enterprise, which the Anglians took in hand; and well beforening them, for they were great darers. They fent Em baffadours haffadors to all these Kings, with perswall-drew part of his Army from the siege of ons, as they thought most forcible. But Cyttheum, to stop the Achaans, if they should philip was irresolute; and Antiochus wil- invadehis Country. But upon these which ing to try first all other courses. Nabis the were placed in guard of Laconia, Philose Lacedemonian, who neither (as Philip) had men came unexpected; fired their Camp, loft much, nor (as Antiochus) was in fear of and put all, fave a very few of them, to the any War; yet shewed himself of all other Sword. Then marched he with all his Arthe most forward: and not staying so much my towards Lacedamon: within ten miles as to feek any good pretence, began immediately to lay fiege unto Gyttheum, that had been lately taken from him by the Romans. The Achaans, to whose care chiefly Titus at his departure had commended the Affairs of Peloponnesus, were not flow to admonish Nabis of his duty: neither would they them, and charge them in Rcre. They marby open war; had not some of them thought it troop, reaching some five miles; having their particularly of T. Quintins, before they engaged themselves in a business of such importo give them juster cause of complaint, by walting their own Territory.

whereof he was, when the Tyrant met him, that had already taken Gytthenm. It was not expected that Nabis would have been ready for them fo foon. Or if he should come from Cyttheum with any part of his Forces: vet was it thought that he must over-take have staid long from repressing his violence ched therefore almost securely, in a long wildom to ask Counsel of the Romans, and Horse, and the greatest parr of their Auxiliaries at their backs, to bear off any fudden impression. But Nabis, who formerly undertance. Whilft thus they fpent the time in stood, or at least suspected, what course they fending Embassadors, and were advised by would take, appeared in the front of them Quintins, to let all alone, and to wait for the with all his Army; encamped there where coming of the Roman Forces, that would they meant to have lodged. It was the cufhortly be amongst them: Nabis was bold stome of Philogamen, when he walked, or traveiled abroad with his friends, to mark the fituation of the Country about him; and to Philopamen was then the Prætor of the discourse what might befal an Army march-Acheans, who had long been absent in Grete; ing the same way. He would suppose, that making War there for his minds fake and re- having with him there such a number of creation. Unto him the Acheans referred Souldiers, ordered and forted in such manner. themselves, giving him leave to order the and marching towards such a place; he were War at his pleasure; either staying till the upon that ground encountred by a greater Romans came, or doing otherwise, as he Army, or better prepared to fight. Then should think best. He made all haste to re- would he put the question, Whether it were lieve Gyttheum by Sea; fearing lest the Town, fit for him to hold on his way, retire, or and the Achean Garrison within it, should be make a stand? What piece of Ground it loft, if he used any delay. But Philopamen was were meet for him to seize upon? And in fo bad a Sea-man, that he knew not a strong what manner he might best do it? In what Ship from a rotten. He made a Quadrireme fort he should order his men? Where bestow Gally his Admiral, that had fouricore years his Carriages, and under what Guard? In agoe been counted a gallant Veffel in the what fort encamp himself? And which way Navie of Antigonus Gonatus. Neither was march the day following. By such continual the rest of his Fleet so good, as might en- meditation he was grown so perfect, that he counter with that of the Lacedemonian. On- did never meet with any difficulty, whence ly it fell out well, that he committed him- he could not explicate himself and his folfelf to a light Pinnace or Brigandine, that lowers: At this time he made a frand: and fought better with her Wings, than with her having drawn up his Rere, He encamped Talons. For his Admiral Gally was stem- near unto the place where he was; withmed at the first; and being rotten with age, in half a mile of the Enemy. His bagfprang so many leaks, and took in water so gage with all thereto belonging, he bestowfalt, that the was fain to yield without fur- ed on a Rock; encompassing them round therrefistance. When the rest of the Fleet with his Souldiers. The Ground was faw what was become of their Admiral, all rough, the wayes bad, and the day almost were presently discouraged, and saved them- quite spent; so as Nabis could not at the preselves with what speed they could. But Philo lient greatly molest him. Both Armies were pamen was not herewith daunted. If he had to water at one Brook; whereto the Achafailed in Sea-fervice, which was none of ans lay the nearer. This watering therefore his Occupation, He said, that he would was first to minister the like occasion of skirmake amends by Land. The Tyrant with | mish. Philopamen understood this; and laid an sinn

ambufh

Mercenaries of Nabis tell, and were flaugh this King in Syria, where he had accomtered in great numbers. Presently after plished the marriage between Fiolomy and this, he caused one of his own Auxiliaries to his Daughter; together with the death of go to the Tyrant as a fugitive, and tell him, young Antiochus the Kings Son, which hap-That the Achieum had a purpose to get be ned during the Treaty, and hindered, or tween him and Laredomon; whereby they feemed to hinder the King from giving auwould both debar his return into the City, dience in person to the Embassadors; canand withal encourage the People to take fed them to return home to Rome; as un-Arms for the Recovery of their Freedom, certain of their answer as at their setting The Tyrant hearing this, marched haitily forth. One thing that might have been, and away and left his Camp, which hardly partly was, beneficial unto them, they otherwise would have been forced. Some brought to pass during their abode at Ephi-Companies he made to stay behind, and Jus; either by cunning, or (as Livy ratner thew themselves upon the Rampart, thereby (think) by chance. Finding Hannibal there, to conceal his departure. But Philopamen they discoursed often with him, and blamed was not fo to be beguiled. He eafily won the him for having thus fled unto Antrockus upon Camp, and gave chase to Nabis: whose fol- a causeless suspition wherein he held the tolowers being overtaken, had no courage to mans; that honoured his versue, and intendturn about and make head. The enemies be- ed him no harm. Many have affi med that ing thus dispersed, and sled into woods where P. Scipio was one of these Embassiadors; and they lay in covert all that day: Philopamen that he, among other discourses with Hanniconceived aright, that their fear and neces | bal, demanded once, Which of all the famous fity would teach them to creep homewards, Captains that had lived, Hannibal judged the and fave themselves when it grew dark. most worthy? So Hannibal gave to alexander Wherefore in the evening, when he had ga- of Macedon the first place: to Pyrrhus the thered together all those of his light arms- second : and the third he challenged unto ture, which had followed the chase whilst it himself. But Scipio, who thought his own was day, he led forth the rest that had well title better than that it ought to be so for refreshed themselves, and occupied the two gotten, asked yet further, What wouldst most ordinary passages unto Lacedamon. So thou have said then, Hannibal, if thou hadst Nabis his men, when it was dark night, per- vanquished me? To whom the Carthaginian ceiving in Philopemens Camp great store of replied, Then would not I have given the first lights; thought that all had been at rest: place to Alexander, but have claimed it as ner without forces.

hands; and regain possession of many pla- him to use the countel of some other ces, by them taken from him. Thus did the man-Romans prepare for War against Antiochus | The Atolians, and their Friends, were in Greece, whilest their Embassadors that less busie all this while, in making their party embush in place convenient; whereinto the losten propunded. The long absence of and therefore adventured to make an escape due unto my self. Now whether this were home. But they were so way-laid, that hard- so or otherwise, the often and friendly ly one quarter of them got into Sparta. Thir-conference of Hannibal with the Roman Emty days together after this, did Philopemen baffadors, made him suspected of Antiochus; waste the Country round about, whillt Nabis who therefore did forbear a while to use his durst not issue forth of his Town; and then counsel. Yet afterwards, when Haunibal returned home, leaving the Tyrant in a man- perceived this change in the King, and plainly defiring him to tell the cause thereof, The Roman Embassadors were then in heard what it was; he easily recovered his Greece, and T. Quinting among them, labou- former grace and credit. For he told how ring to make their party strong against Antio his Father had caused him to swear at the chus and Nubis, whom they knew to be soli- Altars, when he was a little Boy, that he necited by the Atolians. Very fair countenance ver should be friend unto the Romans. Wherethey also made unto Philip; and with comfor- fore he willed the King not to regard any table promifes drew him to make shew, what vain surmizes : but to know thus much, that foever he thought, of good correspondence. So long as he thought upon War with Rome, They promised to restore unto him his Son : 10 long would Hannibal do him all good serand were contented to let him hope, that vice: whereas contrariwife, if he intended he should receive other favours at their to make peace, then should it behoove were with him in Afia, denied otherwise strong against the Romans, than were the Roto grant him Peace, than if he would yield mans in mustering up their friends in Greece, unto one of the Conditions, by them to They had so often dealt with Anisochu, vaunting vaunting much of their own forces, and arro- 1 might happen to obtain what they defired; with him; especially when the Roman Embaffadors had left him without hope of peace, unless he would buy it at too dear a rate. They dealt in like fort with the Macedonian. them to improve their own Forces to the utmust lie upon Antiochus and themselves. without help from any, fave only from fome few that were discontented in Greece, Whilst clude rashly, without first hearing the Roto approve the motion. Titus hearing this, thought the business worthy of his presence. For fince Antiochus had now declared him-Nation; where he forgot nothing that might vate Council of their Nation; that no occaferve to appeale them. He willed them to fion might flip, in waiting for the Authority consider the weight of the enterprise which of a General Assembly. The Apocleti (so were the ruine of the Country, the Romans and heads could have done. They laid a Plot part of the World, should fight for the Maof Fence, fetting them on, and becoming ind 35. * the Sticklers. As for those grievances which did thus exasperate them, and urge them to such violent courses, he willed them to much better they might do, to fend Embafgating to themselves the honour of the Victo- either as their Right, or else by way of Fary against Philip, that finally they prevailed vour. For with such Terms had they been feafted once already : and were by the Senate rejected unto Titus : who having it in his own power, gave them no fatisfaction ; yet would now again refer them to the Se-But in vain. He understood the Romans and nate. This were only loss of time, and might himself too well. Wherefore it concerned abate their credit with Antiochus. Wherefore, without more ado they made a Decree. termost: as knowing that all the burthen That King antiochus the Great should be inreated to come over into Greece, as well to fet the Country at liberty, as also to decide the Controversies depending between they were about this, and had with them an the Romans and the Atolians. Such a Decree Embaffador of the King Antiochus, that a- they would not have made, had they not unnimated them to refolution, the Athenian derstood the Kings mind before Having made Embassadors, whom Tilm had requested to it, they forgot no point of bravery, wherebe at their meeting, stayed their vehemen- by to vaunt themselves to the Kings Embassacy alittle; by exhorting them not to con- dors, and against the Romans. Titus desired of their Præsor to let him fee a Copy of this mans, that lay near at hand. For want of a new Decree. The Prætor answered. That ready Answer hereto, they were contented then he had other things to do: but that this Decree, and their further answer they would thorrly let him know, if he came to their Camp in Italy upon the River of Tibris. Gentfelf against the Romans, it would be no small ler words would have done better, as the piece offervice, to withdraw from his friend Etolians are like to understand hereafter. thip, those by whose encouragement he had But having thus begun, they meant hencemade the adventure. Wherefore he came to forth to go roundly to work. The care of their Panatolium, or great Affembly of the the War they referred unto the more prithey took in hand; whereby Greece was like the privy Council of Etolia called ) went to become a Champaign-field, on which to as hotly to work, as any of the youngest King Antioches, that commanded no small how to get into their hands at one time the Towns of Chalcis, Demetrias, and Sparta: ftery : the Atolians, as Mafters in that kind to each of which they fent men for the purpole. Demetrias they took upon the sudden entring some of them as friends, to conduct home a principal man of the City: who for speaking words against T. Quinting, had been consider how slight they were, and how driven to see thence; but was by intercession of those that loved him, again re-called. fadors to Rome, that should either plead His Etolian Companions that were not matheir Right in the Senate, or (if their Right oy, seized upon a Gate; whereat they let in unto the places which they claimed, were a Troop which they had left not far benot good) make request to have what they hind them: and so fell to murdering the defired : than thus to fet the World in an up- | chief of the Roman Faction. At Chalon they roar, and be afterwards the first that should sped not so well. Thither also they had a barepent it. But what he faid or could fay, it | nished man to bring home: but they came fo skilled not much. They had already done strong, that their purpose was discovered, ill, to make the Embassador of the King, and the Town prepared to defend it self whose help they had sought, wait so long for against them. Bring therefore demanded the an answer, and stay doubting what good end cause of this Hostility, they gave a gentle anthey should make with the Romans. Neither swer, saying, That they came not thither was it news unto them to hear those comfor- as Enemies, but only to deliver the Town table words; that by fending to Rome, they from the Romans 3 who mere infolently SIIII 2 domineered

domineered overit, than ever the Macedo- | that if need should so require, they would mians had done. By which Rhetorick they presently send away to Lasedamon all the prevailed no more than they could do by Forces that they could raife: But that they plain force. For the Towns-men replyed, were very defirous at the present, to make That they neither founnd any abridgement as goodly a muster as they could, before the of their liberty, nor needed any Garrison to great King; which caused them to send him keep them from the Romans, from whom they thither afore with no greater company. Hereneither feared any danger, nor received in- upon he willed Nabis to take heart; bring jury. So this business was dasht. The attempt forth his men, that had been long pent up in upon Sparta was more strange and desperate. the City; and train them without the Walls: Nabis their good Friend was Lord of the as if shortly he should employ them in work Town, styling himself King, but more truly of Conquest, rather than Defence. Nabis was by all men called Tyrant. He had well- glad of this: and daily exercised his men in near loft all, by means of the overthrow the field: riding up and down with this Awhich Philopemen had lately given him: fince lexamenus, and no more than three or four he durft not ftir abroad; and dayly expected Horse about him, from one point to another, the mischief, that on all sides threatned to order and behold them. During this time him. Wherefore he fent Messengers, one af- of exercise, Alexamenus made it his fashion, ter another, to the Ætolians; requesting to step aside alone to his Ætolians, and say them, That as he had not been flow to ftir somewhat as he thought fit : which done. in their behalf, but adventured himfelf up- he still returned again to Nabis. But when he on the utmost of danger, when all others saw time for the great work which he had were backward; so they would be pleased in hand; he then went aside to his thirty to fend him what help they might, since his Horsemen, and bade them remember the task bad fortude had caused him presently to enjoyned them at their setting forth; telling need it. It hath been often faid, That the them, That they were all in case of banished rayenous Etolians were only true to them-men, unless they would anon come up to felves, and regarded neither faith nor friend- him, and help him to finish that which they fince Nabis bis mercenary forces, which up- Alexamenus making towards him, charged held his Tyranny, were in a manner confu- him on the sudden, and struck him down. tread them down. As for the Etolians, he faid not many of his Company, were flain in

1062

ship, otherwise, than as it might conduce to should see him take in hand. Herewithall their own ends. And so dealt they now. For the Tyrant began to draw near them: and med : they thought it expedient for their The thirty Ætolians never flood to delibe-Estate, to put him out of the way; and by so rate upon the matter, but all flew in; and, doing to affure Lacedamon unto themselves. before any succour could arrive, had made To this purpose, they sent thither Alexame- an end of this wretched Nabis. Presently nus, one whom they thought a man fit for upon the fact committed, the Tyrant his such a work. To him they gave a thousand Mercenaries ran unto the dead body: where Foot, and thirty Horse, chosen for the pur- in stead of seeking revenge, they stood pole. These thirty were by Democritus the soolishly gazing as beholders. Alexamenus Prætor brought into the Counsel of the with his Etolians, hasted into the City, and Apocleti, where they were commanded to be seized on the Palace: where he fell to ranno wifer than they should be, nor to think sacking the Treasure; and troubled himself that they were fent to make War with the with none other care, as though all were Acheans, or to do ought elfe, fave only already done. Such of his Followers as what Alexamenus should command them; were dispersed in the Town, did also the like; which were it never so desperate, and in see- with the greater indignation of the Citizens: ming against all reason; yet must they un- who seeing themselves free by the death of derstand, that unless they performed it, they the Tyrant, could not endure to see those should have no good welcome home. So that had slain him, begin to tyrannize a-Alexamenus came to the Tyrant, whom he new. Wherefore all the Town was shortencouraged with brave words, telling him ly in Arms: and for lack of another Capthat Antiochus was already in Europe, and tain, they took a little Boy of the Roywould be anon in Greece, meaning to cover al Stock, that had been brought up with all the Land and Sea with his mighty Ar- Nabis his Children, whom they mounted mies; and that the Romans were like to find upon a good Horse, and made him their other manner of work, than of late with Chief. So they fell upon the Etolians Philip: fince the Elephants of this Great that were idly stragling about; and put King, without other help, would suffice to them all to the Sword. Alexamenus with keeping the Citadel: and those few that | That Philip was like a Bandog in a chain, de-Lacedamon, Philopamen came thither : who could have done, were ready to confer upcalling out the chief of the City, and speak- on him the greatness, which they had uning fuch words unto them as Alexemanus worthily bestowed upon insolent Earbarians, should have done, after he had slain the Ty- Of all this, the least part was true. Yet that rant : easily perswaded them for their own which was true, made such a noise, as added good and fafety, to incorporate themselves credit unto all the rest. Whilst therefore the with the Acheans. Thus by the enterprise, no King was thinking to fend Hannibal into Ales dishonourable than difficult, of the Eto- frick, there to molest the Romans, and so lians: and the small, but effectual, travel of give him the better leisure of using his own Philopamen, the Achaans made a notable pur- opportunities in Greece : Thoas the Etolian chase : and Lacedemon, that had hitherto came over to him, and bade him lay all other been governed either by Kings, or by Ty- care aside; for that his Countreymen had rants that called themselves Kings, became already taken Demetrias, a Town of main imthe Member of a Commonwealth, whereof portance, that thould give him entertainthe Name had scarce any reputation, when ment, whence he might proceed as became Sparta ruled over all Greece.

s. VII.

comes over into Greece ill attended. Sunto the Villors.

thought it neither fafe nor honourable, to vancement of hisdefires, than did anything leave them Enemies behind him : and to else by him then or after thought upon. win them by force, was more than hitherto Presently after this, He made ready for Romans: That Nabit was already up in arms: had lately waited on home, when by that escaped thence into Arcadia, were taken by siring nothing more, than to break loose: the Magistrates; who fold them all as bond- and that the Etolians, without whom the flaves. In this doubtful estate of things at Romans had done nothing, nor nothing the greatness of his vertue and fortune. This did ferve to cut off all deliberation. As for Hannibal, Thoas was bold to tell the King, first, that it was not expedient for him to di-Antiochus, perswaded by Thoas the Ætolian, vide his forces at such a time, when the verv reputation of his numbers, brought into dry passages between Him, the Etolians, Greece, might serve to lay open unto him all Chalcidians, and others. He wins Chalcis, places, without need of using violence : and and thereby the whole Ise of Euboea. The secondly, That in any such great enterprise vanity of the Kings Embassaders and the there could not be chosen a more unfit man Etolians, with the civil Answer of Titus tobe employed in the Kings fervice, than was to their discourse, before the Achaans. That that famous Hannibal the Carthaginian, For he it concerned the Greeks to have desired Peace faid that the King should as greatly feel the between the Romans and Antiochus, as the loss of a Fleet or Army, perishing under such best assurance of their own Liberty. Of ma- a notable Commander, if his fortune were my petty Estates that fell to the King. Of bad, as if the same had miscarried under one Aminander; and an idle vanity by which of meaner quality : whereas nevertheless if King Phillip was loft. Hannibal gives Hannibal prevailed, Hannibal alone should good counsel in vain. Some Towns won in bave all the honour, and not Antiochus. In this Theffaly. The King retires to Chalcis, regard he was of opinion that fuch a renownwhere he marrieth a young Wife, and revels ed Warrious should be alwayes near unto the away the rest of Winter. Upon the coming Kings Person, to give advice : which being of the Roman Conful, all forfake Antiochus. followed, as often as it was found commodi-He with two thousand Ætolians keeps the ous, the good success would wholly redound Straights of Thermopylæ. He is beaten, unto the honour of him that had the foveand flees into Asia: leaving all Greece un- raign Command, even of the King himself. Antiochus gladly hearkened unto this admonition; being jealous of the Vertue, that Ntiochno was troubled much in Afa, thined brighter than the Majesty of his own With Smyrna and Lampfacus, that would fortune. And thereupon he laid afide the denot hearken to any Composition. He termination, which tended more to the ad-

he was able. Yet was he defirous with all Greece. Before his setting forth, in a frivospeed convenient, to shew himself in Greece: lous pomp of ceremony, he went up from the where he had been told, that his presence Sea-fide to Ilium; there to do facrifice to Miwould effect wonders. It was faid, that in nerva of Troy. Thence passing over the Agean all the Country there was a very small num- Sea, He came to Demetrias. Eurylochus the ber, which bore hearty affection unto the Mognetian ; the same whom the Atolians pretext they won Demetrias; was now the an absolute Prince to engage himself, as did chief man, and ruler of his Nation. He there- Antiochus, in a business of dangerous importore with his Countreymen, in great fre- tance upon the promifed affurance of a State quency, came to do their duties to the King that is meetly popular. For if the vehemen-Antiochus, and bid him welcome. The King cy of Thoss, and some other of that Faction. was glad of this, and took it as a fign of good had not prevailed in this Council; the Atoluck, to be so entertained at the beginning. lians, for gain of two or three Towns, yea, But it may be suspected, That the Mag- for hope of such gain that might have deceiretians found not the like cause of joy. For ved them, were like to have abandoned whereas they had expected a Fleet and Ar- this King their Friend, unto the discretion of my somewhat like to that of Xerxes: they the Romans. And what remedy had there Law three hundred thips; of which no more been, if this had to fallen out? He could than forty were ferviceable for the Wars, have bemoaned himself to Thoas, and comwith an Army of ten thousand Foot, five plained of the wrong: but he must have been hundred Horfes and fix Elephants. The Eto- contented with this answer, That the fault lians no fooner heard of his coming, than was in those of the opposite tide, whom they called a Parliament, and made a Decree Those would therefore have pronounced whereby they invited him into their Coun- to be very wicked men. It happened much try. He knew before that they would fo do; better for the present, though in the fuand was therefore well onward on his way ture it proved much worfe, both for him. towards them, when they met with him that and for the Etolians. He was chosen Genebrought the Decree. At his coming to Lamia, ral of all their Forces: and thirty Commifthe Ætolians gave him as joyful entertain- fioners were appointed to be about him, as ment as they could devise. Being brought into their Council, he made an Oration : armed fuch as readily they could, whileft it wherein he defired them to hold him excu- was in dispute where they should begin the fed, that he came not followed with a greater | War. Chalcis was thought the meetelt place A:my. This was, he faid, in true estimation, to be first undertaken : whither if they came a fign of his good will; in that he staid not to suddenly, they should not peradventure

CHAP V

a Council of War for the Nation. These make all things ready, but hasted unto their need to use much force. The King had aid, even whilst the season was unsit for Na- brought with him into Etolia but a thouvigation. Yet it (hould not be longer, ere the land Foot, leaving the rest behind him at Dehope of all those which had expected him, metrias. With these he hasted away directly would be fatisfied unto the full. For it was toward Chalcis; being overtaken by no his meaning to fill all Greece with Armies, and great number of the Etolians, which accomall the Sea-Coast with his Flect. Neither panied him thither. At his coming, the Mawould he spare for any Charge, Travel, or gistrates, and some of the Chief Citizens, Danger, to follow the business which he had liffued forth to parle with him. There the undertaken: even to drive the Romans and Etolians began, as they had lately done betheir Authority out of Greece, leaving the fore, to tell, how the Romans had only in Countrey free indeed, and the Etolians words and falle femblance, fet Greece at litherein the Chief. Now as the Armies that berty. But such liberty as might be true and were following him, should be very great; uleful, they faid, would never be obtained; fo was it his meaning, that all Provisions to until by removing the necessity of obeythem belonging should be correspondent; ing their pleasure that were most mighty, because he would not be any way burden- every several estate had where to find resome unto his Consederates. But at the pre- dress, of any pressure. And to this end was the fent he must needs intreat them, having thus great Antiochus come thither; a King well hastily come over unto their aid, unprovided able to counterpoise, yea to overweigh the of many necessaries, that they would help Romans: who nevertheless desired them onhim with Corn and other Victuals, whereof y, so to joyn with him in League, as that if le ft. od in need. So he left them to their either the Romans or He should offer them consultation: the conclusion whereof was, wrong, they might keep it in their power, to after a little dispute, (for a vain motion was feek redress at the others hands. The Chalmade by some, that the differences between cidians made hereto the same answer, which, the Ronians and them, should be put by to the like allegations, they had made not Com-promife to the decision of Antiochus) long before: That their freedom was not that they would yield unto the Kingsdesire, Imaginary, but absolute; for which they and effilt him with all their Forces. Here were to thank the Romans; without whole we may observe how vain a thing it is for good liking they would enter into no new confederacy. confederacy. That which they fpake of theless he atlayed them, upon a vain hope, themselves, they could likewife affirm of all that the envy which Trius was faid to bear the Greeks: forasmuch as none of them paid unto Philopemens vertue, had bred a secret any tribute, was kept under by any Garriion, or lived otherwise than by their own Laws, and without being tied unto conditi ons which displeased them. Wherefore they wondred why the King should thus trouble defence.

to make War upon the King.

to draw the acheans to his party. Never- flaves, and good for little elfe. These divers dillike between that Nation and the Romans. Wherefore both he and the zatolians fent Embafiadors to the Council at regium, that pured not brave words, if the Acheurs would have been to taker. The Kings Emhimself to deliver Cities that were already bailador told of great Armics and Fleets that free. But fince he and the Atolians requested were coming; reckoning up the Italians, their friendship; they belought both him Medians, Flimeans, and Cadwins: names and the Etolinas, to do a friendly Office, in that were not every day heard of, and thetedeparting from them quietly, and leaving fore ashe thought the more terrible. Then them in fuch good case as they were. With told he them what not ble men at Sea, the this answer the King departed: for he was Sydonians, Tyrians, Aradians, and Famphignot as then, ftrong enough to force them. ans were; fuch indeed as could not be relift-But very foon after, he brought thither a cd. Now concerning money, and all worlder greater power, which terrified them, and furniture : it was hetari, we'l grown, there made them yield: before all the friccours the Kingdoms of & thad alwayes thereon could arrive, which Titus had fent for their great plenty. So as they were much accid ved: who confidering the Late War wield The chief City of Eubera being thus gotten, against Phalip, did think that this with Action all the rest of the Island shortly yielded to chus would prove the like : the characters Antiochus. Four or five hundred Roman Soul- far different. Yer this world game good bear, diers, that came over late to have defended that for the liberty of Graze was come work Chalcis, reposed themselves at Delium, a lit- the utmost parts of the batt; requested no tle Town of Baotia, lying over against the more of the Acheans, than that they would Island; where was a Temple and Grove, con hold them elves as neutral, and quietly look fecrated unto Apollo, that had the priviledge on, whilit he took order with the Romans. of an inviolable Sanctuary. In this place were To the same effect spake the At dian Umbasfome of them walking, and beholding the lador, and further added. That in the Battel things there to be seen, whilst others were at Cynoscephale, neither True had done the busied as they found cause, without fear of part of a General, nor the Romans of good any danger; as being in such a place, and no Souldierss: but that both he and his Army War hitherto proclaimed. But Menippus, one had been there deftroyed, had they not been of Antiochus his Captains, that had wearied protected by vertue of the Antiochus, which himself in many vain Treaties of peace, took carried the day. Titus was profest at the advantage of their careleiness, and used them Council, and heard all this : to which he made with all extremity of War. Very few of as fit answer, as could have been defined. He themescaped; fifty weretaken, and the rest told the Achaum, The neither the Kenes flain. Hereat Quintius was grieved : yet fo, Embassador, nor the Alekin, did legreatas it pleased him well to confider that his Ro- ly labour to perswade those unto whom they mans had now more just cause than before, addressed their Orations; as to vaunt themfelves the one unto the other. So as a man Antiochus liked well these beginnings, and might well duce n what good corresponfent Embassadors into all quarters of Greece; dence in vanity it was; that had thus linked in hope, that his reputation should perswade the King and the Atolians together. For very many to take his part. The wifer fort even fuch brags as here they made before returned tuch answer, as the Chalcidians had the Acheans, who knew them to be Lyars, done. Some referved themselves until he had the Ætolians also made unto King should come among them: knowing that ei- Antiochus: Proclaiming the victory over Phither if he came not, he must hold them ex- lip to be meerly their Act: and the whole cused for not daring to stir: or it he came, Country of Greece to be dependent on them. the Romans must pardon their just fear, in Interchangeably had they been featted by yielding to the stronger. None of those the King, with such tales as his Embassador that lay far off, joyned with him in true mean- told even now; of Dahans, and Aradiing, fave the Eleans, that alwayes favoured ans, and Elimeans, and a many others: that the Etolians, and now feared the Acheans. were all but a company of syrians, such Little reason there was, that he thould think as were wont to be fold about for bond-names of rafeal People, were he faid, like to with all the Nation entertained this their lathe divertity of Venison, wherewith a friend ving offer. Yet were Lysimachia, and the of his at Chal is, (no fuch Vaunter as were Towns in Thrace, lately gotten by Antiochus. these Embassadors) had sometime seasted pretended as a very great cause of fear, that him. For all that variety, whereat he won- should move them to take arms even in their slred, was none other, as his Holt then merri- own defence. But if all Greece would have ly told him; than to many pieces of one made intercession, and requested that things tame Swine, dreft after feveral fashions, with might continue as they were, promising variety of tawces. Setting therefore alide this joyntly to affift the Romans with their whole vanity of idle pomp: it were good to make Forces both by Land and Sea, whenfoever judgement of the Great King by his prefent King Antiochus should make the least offer doing. He had notwithstanding all this to stir against them: then had not only this great noile, no more than ten thousand men quarrel been at an end; but the Roman about him: for which little Army he was Patronage over the Country, had been far fain in a manner to beg Victuals of the Atto- from growing, as foon after it did, into a lians: and take up money at usury to defray Lordly rule. his charges. Aud thus he ran up and down The Acheans were at this time, in a manthe Countrey; from Demetrias to Lamia; ner the only Nation of Greece, that freely and thence back to Chalcis; and being there that generously declared themselves altogether out to Demeiri usagain. These were the fruits for the Romans, their friends and benefactors. of lies : wherewith, fince both Antiochus and All the rest gave doubtful answers of hope the Atolians had each deluded other; meet unto both fides : or if some few, as did the it was that they should, as perhaps already Theffalians, were firm against Antiochus; vet they did, repent, whileft wifer men took helped they not one another in the quarrel. heed by their example. To a favourable Au- nor shewed themselves his Enemies, till he ditory much perswation is needless. The A pressed them with open force. The Baotians cheans did not love to well the Atolians, as willingly received him, as foon as he entred to defire that they should become Princes upon their borders, not so much for fear of of Greece: but rather wished to see them, of his power, as in hatred of Titus and the Roall other, made the veriest abjects. Where- mans, by whom they had been somewhat fore they flood not to hearken after news, hardly used. Aminander the Athamanian, bewhat Antiochus did, how he sped in Eubaa, sides his old friendship with the Etolians, or what other Cities were like to take his was caught with a bait, which it may be part : but readily proclaimed War against doubted whether he did more foolishly swalhim, and againft the Atolians.

ons grew inveterate; sufficiently appears in headed man, and vaunted himself to be dethe story fore-going. Now have they gotten scended from Alexander the Great: naming each their Patrons; the one, the Romans; his two fons, in that regard, Philip and Alexthe other King Antiochis. Herein did each of ander. Philip, the elder of these Brethren, acthem unwifely: though far the greater companied his fifter to the poor Court of Ablame ought to be laid on the turbulent fpi- thamania: where having made his folly rits of the Atolians. For when the Romans known, by talking of his Pedegree He was departed out of Greece, and left the Country judged by Antiochus and the Atolians, a man at rest: there was nothing more greatly to fit for their turns. They made him believe, have been defired, than that they might ne- that in regard of his high Parentage, and the low, or Antiochus cast out. He had married How the hatred between these two Nati- the Daughter of an Arcadian, that was an idlever find occasion to return with an Army famous memory of Alexander his forefather; thither again. And in this respect ought the it was their purpose, to do their best for the Greeks to have fought, not how Smyrna conquest of Macedon to his behoof: finceno and Lampfacus might recover their Liberty, man had thereto fo good title as he. But for (which had never been held a matter worth the enabling them hereunto; it behoved him regarding, until now of late) but how the to draw Aminander to their party, that fo powers of the East and West, divided and they might the sooner have done with the kept afunder by their Countrey, as two Seas Romans. Philip was highly pleafed herewith; by an Isthmus, or neck of Land, might be and by perswasions of himself or of his kept from over-flowing the Bar that parted Sifter effected as much as they defired. But them. Neither had the Romans any better the first piece of service done by this imagipretence for their seeking to make free nary King (whether it proceeded from his those base Asiatiques, who originally were own phrenzie in hope to get love of the Greekift; than the general applause, where- Macedonians that should be his Subjects: or whether from some vanity in King Antiochus | faid He, These Etolians here present; and that employed him ) wrought more harm namely, this Thoas being lately Embassadour to his friends, thanhe and Aminander were fron them into Alia, among other motives able to do good. There were two thousand which be then used to excite the King unto this men committed to his leading : with which Expedition, insisted mainly on the same point. he marched unto Cynoscephale, there to ga- He told we that Philip was moved beyond all ther up the bones of the flaughtered Mace patience, with the Lordly infolence of the Rudonians ; whom their King had suffered all mans : likened that King to some wild beaft , this while to lie unburied. The Macedons that was chained or lockt up within (me grate, troubled not them elves to think on this and would fain break loof. If this be or let charitable act, as if it were to them any benefit at all : but King Philip took it in high that he may regain his liberty, and satisfie his indignation; as intended meerly unto his de lang of stomack, upon those that are common fpight. Wherefore he presently sent unto the enemies to us and him. But if it prove otherhe was ready with all his power to aid them dignation : then shall it behoove us to look unto wherein soever they should be pleased to him; that he may not seek to please his good nfe him.

tians, and Athamanians , having now all joy- four Army : if Philip will not hearken to your the same which he would have spoken , had now from taking the same course. Send for all fince their coming into Greece. For the Mag let ships of burden come along with them. netians, Beotians, and other their good loaden with fore of vicinals : For, as the cafe friends, which now so willingly took their now stands, we have here too few hands and too parts: what were they else than so many poor many mouths ) Wherefore let the one half be inzadjoyn themselves for fear unto him, that the other half, tarrying on this side the Ionian was strongest for the present: and would at | Sea, may both take order for the affairs of terwards, when they saw it expedient, be Greece, and therewith almake countenance; as as ready to fall to the contrary lide, alledging if you were even ready to follow us into Italy : the same fear for their excuse? Wherefore yea, and be ready to follow us indeed, if it he thought it most behooveful to win King shall be requisite. This is my advice; who Philip of Macedon unto their party : who though perhaps I am not very skilful in all forts (belides that being once engaged, he should of war; jet how to war with the Romans, 1 not afterwards have power to recoyle and have been instructed by long experience, both to forfake them at his pleasure ) was a mighty their cost and mine own. Of this Counsel which Prince; and one that had means to fustain the I give, I promise you my faithfull and diligent Roman War with his proper forces. Now Service for the execution : but what Conniel that Philip might be easily perswaded to join soever you please to follow, I wish it may be pro-with them, the benefit likely to redound sperous. Many were pleased with the great unto himself, by their society, was a very spirit of the man, and said, he had spoken ftrong Argument : though indeed what bravely : but of all this was nothing done;

Romans ; and gave them to understand, that wife , and that bu fear be greater than his inmafters the Remans, by offending us. Your fon The Etolians, Magnetians, Eubwans, Boo- Sellucus is now at Lylimachia, with part of ned with him : Antiochus took counsel of Embassage ; let Seleucus be in readiness to them about the profecution of the War in fall upon Macedon, and find him work to defend hand. The chief question was , Whether it his own on the other side , without putting us were meet for him to invade Theffaly, that here to trouble. Thus much concerning Philip. would not hearken to his perswasions : or and the present war in Greece. But more genewhether to let all alone until the Spring : be- rally for the managing of this great enterprise, cause it was now mid-winter. Some thought wherein you are now embarked against the Roone thing, and some another; confirming mans, I told you my opinion at the beginning: each his own fentence, with the weightieft whereto had you then given ear, the R mans by reasons which he could alledge: as in a mat. this time should have heard other news, than ter of great importance. Hannibal was at this that Chalcis in Subce i was become ours. Italy meeting : who had long been cast aside, as and Gaul flould have been on fire with war ; and a veffel of no use, but was now required to little to their comjort, they should have underdeliver his opinion. He freely told the King, flood, that Hannibal was again come into Ita-That what he should now utter, was even y. Neither do I fee what should hinder us even his counsel at any time before been asked your Fleet and Army hither (but in any case estates, that wanting force of their own, did ployed against Italy ; whilest you in person with need was there, of proving by infe- lave only that one was fent into Ala; to make rence the likelihood of this hope: For, all things ready there. In the mean while had won one Town by force, many other chased the honour of a Triumph, nothing fo places, doubting their own itrength, were glorious as was that of his Colleague; glad to make submission. But Lariffs that though purchased with harder service, rewas chief of the Country, flood out: not regarding any terrible threets of the King that lay before the wals with his whole Army. This their faith and courage was rewarded by good fortune. For M. Eabius, a Roman Propuator, did tend help thither. Likewile Philip of Macedon profelled himfelf lately fent Emballadors to Rome, making enemy unto Antochus, whereby the fame of offer to come each of them in person with all the succour coming to Lavissa, grew such, as his forces into Atolia, there to affift the wrought more than the fuccour could have Conful in this War. Ptolomy fent also gold done, had it arrived. For Antiochus percei- and filver, toward the defraying of charving many fires on the Mountain tops afar ges; as one that meant none other than good off ; thought that a great Army of Romans earnest. But he was two young and dwelt and Aucedonians had been coming upon too far off. So his money was returned unhim. Therefore excuting himfelf by the to him with thanks; and his loving offerss time of the year; He brake up his fiege, and lovingly refused. Unto Philips Embassadors, marched away to Chalis. At Chales he fell answer was made, that this his friendly in love with a young Maiden, daughter un-offer was gratefully accepted: and that the to a Chizenof the Town; whom, without Senate and People of Rome would think regard of the much disproportion that was themselves beholding to him, for the affibetween them, both in years and fortune, He stance that he should give to Acilius the shortly married; and so spent the winter Conful. Masanifalikewise, and the Carthafollowingss delightfully as he could, without thinking upon the war in hand. His be most forward in gratifying the Romans. great men and Captains followed his exam-ple; & the fouldiers as readily imitated their grain; which they would fend partly to Captains : in such wise, that when he took the Rome , partly to the Army in Greece. And field, he might evidently perceive in what herein Mafanissa far out-went the poor City loose manner of discipline his army had passed of Garthagesas also in that he offered to lend the winter. But M. Acilius Glabrio, the Roman the Conful five hundred horse, and twenty him to reclaim them from this loofnels of nuotialRevels, by fetting them to harder exercise. M. Acilius was cholen Conful with P. Cornelius Scipio Nasica. The war against Antiochus was no way so honourable, as Nasica, his Colgreat Nobility of his Family, had been long accepted, with condidion that they should fince, in time of the Punick War, Crow- be contented to receive the price of it. ned with the title of The best man in Rome: when the Senate for very fear and superstiti- that began with such noise and preparation, durit not have to pronounced him, had ons, were bridly credible : were not the they not to thought him, as being commanded by Oracle, that none other man than man and the Afrique Souldier. Antiochus had the very beit, thould entertain on old ftone, gotten this Spring a few Towns of Acarwhich the Devil then taught them to call nania, after the same manner as he had pre-The Mother of the Gods. But no prerogative of vailed in other parts of Greece; partly by

Tttttt

they went in hand with Tkeffaly; about which P. Scipio was therefore appointed to make they had before disputed. There when they war against the Bojians, wherein he purquiring the more ability in matter of War. But M. Acilius went over into Greece, with ten thousand foot, two thousand horse, and fifteen Elephants. Ptolomy King of Egypt, notwithstanding his late Alliance with King Antiochus ; and Philip King of Maccdon; had Conful, shall meet him very shortly, and help Elephants. On the other side, the Carthaginians undertook to fee out a Fleet at their own charges: and to bring in at one payment, all the Tribute-mony which was behind, and ought to be discharged by many yearly penfell to him by lot; whereas otherwise, He flons. But the Romans did neither think it good, to let them arm a Fleet : nor would let league : unto whom tell a charge, of far less them redeem themselves out of Tribute, by credit and importance. Nasica, besides the paying all at once. As for the Corn, it was

The halty and ridiculous iffue of this War, difference exceeding great between the Ro-Birth, Vertue or good opinion, gave such ad- fair words, and treason of the rulers: partly by vantagero the better man, as to make choice terrour, that was like to prove their excule of his own Province: or arrogate more un when they should again for fake him. But King to himself; than his lor should afford him. Philip and Bebius having recovered many plan This unpartial distribution of employments. cess the Roman Conful being arrived, against helped well to maintain prace and concord whom none made resistance; he was glad to withdraw himself. Aminander fled out of Butthere was great difference between Leohis Athamania : which the Macedonian nidas and Antiochus. The former of thele. took and enjoyed; as in recompence of his with an handfull of men, defended this pafprisoner to Rome. The The falians used much do great mir the and effect what he hited friends, than they had done in yielding to the fafety and the piace, when he was chargthe King. All their Cities one after another, ed by not say white than he had in his gave up themselves : the Garrisons of Antio- own Army. There whilest he lay, He sent ches, compounding only for their own earnest messengers one after another to the lives, and departing unarmed : yet fo, that Atolians, entreating them not to forfake him a thousand of them stayed behind, and took hus : but at least wise now to help, and pay of the Romans. This did wonderfully keep the tops of the mountains, left the Roperplex Antiochus; who having withdrawn mans, finding any by-path, should come himself to Chaleis, and hearing how things down upon him. By this opportunity, he got went, cryed out upon his friends : and faid, of them two thouland, that undertook to That they had betrayed him. He had taken make good the few passages: by which only. a great deal of toyl during one half of a and not without extreme difficulty, it was winter, and spent the other half in such possible for the Enemy to ascend. The Roman Nuptials, as were little to his honour : after Conful in like fort prepared to force the which, in time of need, he found all the Scraights; without staying to expect King promises of the Atolians meerly verbal; and Philip: that was hindred by sickness from himself reduced into terms of great extre accompanying him. He had with him M. Pormity. He therefore admired Hannibal as cius Cato, and L. Valerius Flaccus, that had a wife man, yea, a very Prophet, that had both of them been Confuls. These he sent foreseen all this long before. Nevertheles, forth by night with two thousand men, to he fent word to the Ætolians, that they try wheth t by any means they could get up should now make ready all their forces: as to the Atolians. He himself encouraged confidering their own need to be no less than his Army; not only by telling them with his. But the Etolians had cause to think, that what bate conditioned enemies they had to they themselves were shamefull disappoint- deal : but what rich Kingdoms Antiochus ed by Antiochus; who having promifed to do held, that thould bountifully reward them great wonders, was in all this while fe- if they were victors. This was on the day beconded by no greater numbers out of Asia, fore the battel. All that night Cato had a than fo many as would fill up the same ten fore journey (for what happened unto L. Vathousand which he first brought over. Yet leriss it is uncertain, save only that he failed came there some of them, though fewer than in his intent ) and so much the worse, for have made all the Nation take Arms. Since whilfthe, being a very able man of body, tacte in annuel on the lame path till toward break been spoken enough * betore, upon many of day. It was a place not haunted, because in unless they could win this difficult entrance. ed, though it were the best; yet did it lead good service to the Romans. Philip the bro- sage two or three daies together, against a ther of Aminanders wife, was taken by the world of men coming to invade the Coun-Conful; made a mocking-stock, and sent away try. The laster I wing taken upon him to more diligence in returning to their old himself in the commit himself unto at any time before, which joyned with him. that he had no skilful guide. Seeing there-Hereat the King was angry: and could get fore his men exceedingly tyred, with climbno better fatisfaction, than that Those and ing up fteepy Rocks, and crooked waies: He his fellows had done their best in vain, to commanded them to repose themselves ; therefore neither his own men came over to took in hand the discovery, accompanied him out of Asia, nor his friends of Greece with no more than one of like metal to himwould appear in this time of danger : He felf. After a great deal of trouble, he found seized upon the Straights of Thermopyle, at length a path : which he took to be, as as meaning to defend them against the Ro- indeed it was, the best way leading unto the mans, until more help should come. Of Enemies. So thither he brought his men; the Straights of Thermopyle, there hath and held on the same path till toward break occasions and then chiefly, when they were time of peace, there was a fair way thorow defended by Leonidas against the huge Ar- the Straights below, that required no such my of Xerxes. Wherefore it may easily be trouble of climbing; neither had this entrance conceived, how the Romans, that landed of the Thermopyla been so often the Seat of about Apollonia, and so came onwards into War, as might cause any travellers to search The fally, were unable to pass that Ledge of out the passages of those desolate Moun-Mountains, dividing the one half of Greece ; tains. Wherefore the way that Cato follow-Tttttt 2 him to a bog at the end, which would fuf- at the same time. Each of them plied his for him to pass no further. So he stayd there work hard; especially Philip, who tain would until day light : by which he di covered have taken Lamia before the Conful should both the Camp of the Greeks underneath come to help him. But it could not be. For him; and tome of t' stolians very near his Maceaonians that used to work by Myne. unto him, that were seasons a stob. Her here- were over-much hindered by the flony fore forth a dry de of men, ground. Yet was Lamia even ready to be whom he thoughteft for the sice of taken, when the Contul, having won Heraand willed the fome prifoner thereby understood, that these Etolians that had fought at Thermopyle. Herewith were no more than fix hundred; as also that Philip must be contented; and therefore King Antiochus lay beneath in the Valley. So went his way quietly. But Acilius, that could he presently set upon the Atolians, over- so ill endure to see Philip in likelihood of threw them, flew a great part of them, and thriving by the Romans victory, got not Lachased the rest, that by slying to their Camp, mia himselt : until such time as another Conguided himunto it. The fight was already ful was ready to ease him of his charge. begun between the Armies below : and the The loss of H. racles did so affright the Romans, that had easily repelled the Kings Atolians, that they thought no way fafer men, and driven them into their Camp, found than to defire peace. Yet had they fent unto it, in a manner, a del perate piece of work to King Antiochus presently after his flight : inassault the Camp it self, which occupied the treating him not to forsake them utterly, but to Alia.

1070

him clea, came thither, and told thilip, that the this was effected: dhe spoil of these Towns was a reward unto those whole breadth of the Straights, was nota- either to return with all those forces which bly fortified; and not only defended by An- he had purposed to bring into Greece; or if tiochus his long Pikes, which were best at any thing with held him from coming in that kind of fervice; but by Archers and person, at leastwife to help them with mony Slingers that were placed over them on and other aid. They prayed him to confithe Hill-side, and powred down ashowr of der, that this did not only concern him in weapons on their heads. But Caso his ap-honour; but appertained unto his own fafproach determined the matter. It was ty: fince it would be much to his hurt, if the thought, at first, that the Atolians had been Etolians being wholly subdued , the Recoming to help the Kings men: but when mans, without any enemies at their backs, the Roman Arms and Enligns were discover- might set upon him in Asia. He considered ed, such was the terrour, that none made of- well of this, and found their words true. fer direfiftance; but all of them forsook the Therefore he delivered unto Nicander, one Camp, and fled. The flaughter was not great: of their Embassadors, a summ of mony, that for that the badness of the way did hinder might ferve to defray the charges of the the Roman Army from making pursuit. Yet War : promising that ere long he would fend this dates loss drave Antiochus out of Greece, them strong aid, both by Land and Sea. who directly fled to Chalcis; and from thence Thoss, another of their Fmbaffadors, He rewith the first opportunity, got him back in- tained with him; who willingly stayed, that he might urge the King to make his All the Cities that had imbraced the wordgood. But when Heraclea was taken friendship of Antiochus, prepared forthwith from them; then did the Etolians lay aside to entertain the Romans, and entreat for par- all hope of amending their fortune by the don : fetting open their gates; and present- help of Antiochun; and made suit unto the ing themselves unto the Consul, in manner Consul to obtain peace, upon any reasonable of suppliants. Briefly, in few daies all was condition. The Consul would scarce vouchrecovered that Antiochus had gained: the safeto give them audience, but said, Hehad Etolians only standing out, because they other business in hand; only he granted them knewnot what else to do. Neither did the ten daies of Truce, and fent L. Valerius Consul give them any respite. At his return Flaccus with them to Hypata, willing them from Chalcu, he met with King Philip, that to make him acquainted with as much as having recovered health, came to joyn with they would have delivered unto himself. At him against Antiochus: over whom, since the their coming to Hypata, rhey began, as men victory was already gotten, He did gratulate favouring their own cause, to alledge how unto the Romans their good success; and of-fered to take part with them in the Etolian Whereto Flacess would not hearken. He War. So it was agreed, That the Conful rold them plainly, That the memory of such should besiege Heraclea; and Philip Lamia; good offices past, was quite obliterated by the malice which they had shewed of late. | need of him in the continuance of this War; Wherefore he willed them to acknowledge He was defired to fet upon the Athamanians. their fault, and to entreat pardon. Better and some other petty Nations their borthey thought to do so even betimes, than to derers, whilst the Contul was busine with flay till they were reduced unto terms of the Ætolians; taking for his reward, all that more extremity. Hereupon they agreed to he could get. And he got in that space all commit themselves unto the faith of the Ro- Athamania, Perrhabia, Aperantia, and Dolopia. mans; and to that effect fent Embassadors For the Atolians hearing what had betallen to the Conful. This phrase of committing their Embassadors, were to enraged, That unto the faith, fignified, in their use of it, although they were very ill provided for little else than the acknowledgement of a War, yet they could not endure to hear fault done, and the craving of pardon. But more talk of Peace. And it happened, that the Romans used those words in another Nicander about the same time was come back fense; and counted them all one, as * yielding trom Antiochus, with mony and hopeful proto discretion. Wherefore when the Contui m fes : the Komans abiding that about Heraheard them speak in this manner : He asked clea, and Philip having lately risen from bethem whether their meaning were agreeable fore Lamia, yet not being far gone thence. to their words. They answered that it was : His mony Nicander conveighed into Lamia. and shewed him the decree of their Nation, by very unutual dexterity. But he himself lately made to this purpose. Then, said he, being to pass further to the Assembly of the I command you first of all, That none of Atolians, there to make roort of his Emyou presume to go into Asia, upon any busi- bassage; was very much perplexed about ness, private or publick : then, That ye de- this his journey , which lay between the Roliver up unto me Dicearchus the Etolian, man and Macedonian Camps. Yet he made Menefiratus the Epirot, Aminander the Athatithe adventure : and keeping as far as he manian, and fuch of his Countrimen as have could from the Roman fide, fell upon a Stafollowed him in revolting from us. Whilest tion of Macedonians; by whom he was tadour interrupted him ; and prayed him not no good : but either to be delivered unto he was yet speaking ; Phameas the Embassa- ken, and led unto their King. He expected tomistake the custome of the Greeks, who the Romans, or used ill enough by Philip. But had yielded themselves unto his faith; not it seems, that the Kinghad not his hereoconunto flavery. What? (faid the Conful) Doye cocked well the indignity of his being tent fland to plead Custome with me, being now at away from Lamia. For he commanded his my discretion? Bring bither a chain. With servants to entreat Nicander friendly: and he that, chains were brought; and an Iron himself being then at supper, did visit him as collar, by his appointment, fitted unto every foon as he rose up : giving him to underone of their necks. This did so affright them, stand, Thar the Atolians did now reap the that they flood dumb, and knew not what fruits of their own madness; for as for a finite as to fay. But Valerius and some others en- they could never hold themselves contentreated the Consul, not to deal thus hardly ted, but would needs be calling strangers inwith them, fince they came as Embassadors; to Greece. They had pleased themselves well, though fince, their condition was altered. in their acquaintance first with the Romans, Phames also spake for himself ; and faid , and then with King Antiochus : but himself, That neither he, nor yet the Apoclets or or- being their neighbour, they could never well dinary Councel for the Nation, were able endure. It was now therefore, he faid, high to fulfill these injunctions; without appro- time for them to have regard unto his bation of the general Assembly. For which friendship, whereof hitherto they never cause he entreated yet further ten daies re- made any tryal : for surely their good afspite; and had granted unto him Truce for fection, one unto the other, would be much more available unto each of them, than their This surceasance of War, during ten, and mutual catching of advantages; whereby other ten daies together, began prefently af- they had wrought them elves much displeater the taking of Heraclea; when Philip had fure. Thus much the King willed Nicandor been commanded away from Lamia, that to fignificanto his Countrimen; and privateelse he might have won. Now because of the ly to hold in mind the courtese which he indignity herein offered unto that King, then did him, in fending him fafe home. So and to the end that he might not return giving him aConvoy to guard him to Hypata, home with his Army, like one that could not he lovingly difmiffed him. For this benefit, be trusted in employment : especially the Nicander was alwaies after dutifully assect-Romans being like hereafter to have further ed to the Crown of Macedon: fo as in the war of Perfeus he made himself suspected un- | driven out of his own Kingdom by Philip; to the Romans, and therefore was had away then did the Governour of Zacquibus offer to Rome, where he ended his life.

When the Conful understood, that the Etolicus refused to make their submission, in this: but plainly told them, That the Refuch wi'e as he required it : he forthwith mans would be their own Carvers, and take meant to profecute the war against them, what they thought good, of the Lands bewithout any longer forbearance. They were longing to their Enemies; as a reward of the preparing to make head against him at Naupattus: whither he therefore directly march | bootless to dispute. Wherefore the Acheans ed, to try what they could or durft. The refered themselves unto his discretion. So fiege of Naupactus was of greater length, than he told them, that their Commonwealth was the Romans had preconceived it : for it was like a Tortoile, whereof Peloponelus was the a strong City, and well manned. But Acilius shell: and that, holding themselves within fleod upon point of honour; wherein he that compais, they were out of danger; but thought that he should have been a loser by if they would needs be looking abroad, they rifing from before it without Victory. So should lie open to blows, which might he stayd there well-near all the following greatly hurt them. Having fettled things time of his Consulfhip; whilest the Macedomian King and the Acheans, made far better pall us: where Glabrio the Conful had lain use of the Roman Victory. Philip, as is said two months, that might have been far better before, being allowed to take in fuch places fpent. There, whether out of compassion as had revolted unto Antiochus, and were which he had upon the Etolians, or out of not hit her to reclaimed, won the strong City diffike of King Philips thriving so fast : he of Demetrise, and with an hafty course of Vi- perswaded the Consul to grant unto the bectory, subdued the Athamanians and others, sieged, and to the whole Nation, so long The Acheans called to account the Eleans truce, that they might fend Embaffadors to and Messenians: which had long been ad- Rome; and submitted themselves, crave pardicted to the Etolian fide; and followed it, don of the Senate. Most like it is, that Nauin taking part with Antiochus. The Eleans pattus was in great danger : else would not gave good words; whereby they faved the Etolians have made fuch earnest fuit as themselves from trouble a while. The Mef they did unto Tites, for procuring of this fafenians being more flout, before they were vour. But if Giabrio had been fure to carry invaded, had none other help when the it in any thort (pace, it may well be thought Achean Prætor wasted their Country, than he would not have gone away without it; to offer themselves unto the Romans. Titus fince the winning of that Town, wherein was was then at Corinth: to whom they fent then the whole flower of the Nation, would word. That at his Commandment their gates have made the promifed submission much should be opened; but that unto the Ache- more humble and sincere. When they came ans it was not their meaning to yield A mel- unto Rome, no entreaty could help them to fuffice to call home the Army, and finish the That either they should wholly submit themthe fame Titus, caused the Messenians to an- else pay a thousand talents, and make neither it well, that either they or any other (hould flould give themselves away unto discretion; part of his defire. They had lately bought the | as enemies, after long and vain attendance. Iffe of Zacynthus; which had once been Whilest the Etolians were pursuing thier Philips, and was afterward given by him to hopes of peace, the Conful had little to do in Aminander, who fent a Governour thither. Greece, and therefore took upon him gravely

o fell the Island to the Acheans; whom he ound ready Chapman. Titus liked not of victory which they had obtained. It was thus in Pelopone fus , he went over to Naufage from Titus to the Achean Prator, did better Condition, than one of these two; War: as also the peremptory Command of selves to the good pleasure of the Senate; Or nex themselves unto the Acheans, and become peace nor war with any ; further than as the part of their Common-weal. Such was now Romans should give approbation. They had the Majesty of a Roman Embassador. Titus not so much mony : neither could they well did favour the Acheans; yet could not like hope to be gently dealt withall, if they take too much upon them. He thought it which, what it fignified, they now underenough, that they oad their liberty, and were stood. Wherefore they defired to have it strong enough to defend it against any of set down, in what points, and how far forth their neighbours. That they should make they should yield unto the good pleasure of themselves great Lords, and able to dispute the Senate. But hereof they could get no with the Romans upon even terms, it was no certain answer : so that they were dismiffed

But when Aminander in this present war, was to set things in order among the tractable Acheans. fore the banished Lacedamonians home into him try the chance of a battel for his Kingtheir Country ; and to take the Eleans into dom. the fellowship of their Commonwealth. This the Acheans liked well enough : but they did not like it, that the Romans should be meddling in all occurrences. Wherefore they Lucius Scipio, baving with him Publius the deferred the restitution of the banished Laredemonians : intending to make it an Act of their own meer grace. As for the Eleans, they were loth to be beholding to the Romans, and thereby to disparage the Acheans: into whole Corporation they were defirous tobe admitted, and faw that they should have their defire, without fuch compulfive mediation.

The Roman Admiral C. Livius, much about the same time, fought a battel at Sea with Polyxenidas, Admiral to the King Antiochus. King Eumenes brought help to the Romans, though it was not great : and five and twenty fail of Rhodians came after the battel, when they were following the Chase. The Kings Fleet was the better of fail, hut that of the Romans the better manned. Where fore Polyxenidas being vanquished in fight, was yet out of danger; as foon as he betook himself to a speedy retrait.

Achsans. He would have had them to re- the Romans would foon be there, and make

«. VIII.

African his elder Erother , for his Lieutenant, is fent into Greece. He grants long Truce to the Mielians, that fo be might at leisure passinto Alia. Ainch troublesome bufines by sea, and diversfights. An invasion upon Eumenes his Kingdom; with the flees of Pergamus, raifed by an handfull of the Acheans. L. Serpio the Conful comes into Alia : where Antiochus most carnelly defireth peace, and is denyed it. The battel of Magnelia: wherein Antiochus heing vanquiffed, yieldeth to the Romans good pleafore. The conditions of the peace. In what fort the Romans wied their victory. L. Cornelius Scipio, after a most sumptuous triumph over Antiochus, is surnamed The Affatique, as his brother was fliled The African.

Veius Cornelius Scipio, the brother of P. Scipio the African, was chosen Consul And such end had the first years war be- at Rome with C. Lalius, Lalius was very gratween King Antiochus and the Komans. After cious in the Senate : and therefore being this, as many of the Greeks as had followed defirous ( as generally all Confuls were ) the vain hopes of the Etolians were glad to of the more honourable employment, offerexcuse themselves by fear ; thinking them - ed to refer to the arbitrement of the Senate. felves happy when by Embassadours they if L. Cornelius would be so pleased, the dishad obtained pardon. On the contrary polition of their Provinces; without putting fide, Philip of Macedon, Arch-enemy of late it to the hazzard of a Lottery. Lucius having unto the Romans, did now fend to gratulate talked with his brother Publius, approved this their victory: and, in recompence of his well of the motion. Such a question had not good affection, had restored unto him De- of long time been put unto the Fathers; who metrius his younger Son; whom some few therefore were the more delirous to make years they had kept as an hostage. Also an unblameable Decree. But the matter be-King Prolomy of Egypt , gratulating the Ro- ing otherwise somewhat indifferent, P. Scipio man Victory, fent word how greatly all Afia the African find openly thus much, That if and Spria were thereby terrified. In which the Senate would appoint his brother to the regardhe desired the Senate notto foreslow war against Antiochus, He himself would time; but to fend an Army, as foon as might follow his brother in that war, as his Lieutebe, into Afa: promiting, that his affiftance, nant. There words were heard with such wherein loever it pleased them to use it, approbation, that the Controversie was should not be wanting. This Ptolomy was the forth with at an end. For if Antiochus relyed Son-in-law of King Antiochus: but he was upon Hannibal, and should happen to be dithe friend of fortune. He understand long rected wholly by that great Captain, what before, as did all that were indifferent be- better man could they oppose than Scipio: holders of the contention, that the Romans that had been victorious against that same were like to have the upper hand. The same great Worthy? But indeed a worser man did Antiochus now begin to suspect, who had might have served well enough the turn. For thought himself a while as sate at Ephesia, as Hannibal had no absolute command, nor if he had been in another world: but was | fearce any truft of great importance: excepttold by Hannibal, That it was not fo far out ing now and then in consultation; where his of Greece into Asia, as out of Italy into wisdome was much approved, but his liberty Greece, and that there was no doubt but and high spirit as much disliked. It is wor-

that he used in his censures, even whilest he meaning defic it. This was glactly taken. But lived in such a Court. Antiochus mustered many messages passing to and fro: though his Army in presence of this famous Captain: Publius continued to put them in good hone: thinking, as may feem, to have made him yet the Conful made trill the fame answer. with, that he had been ferved by such brave with which they had been chailed from Rome. men in Italy. For they were gallantly decked, The Conclusion was, That they should me Both Men, Harfes, and Elephants, with such for a longer time of respite from war: wherecostiv turniture of gold filver, and purple, as by at more leifure they might attend some glittered with a terrible bravery on a Sun- better disposition of the Senate; or any helpthine day. Whereupon the King, well pleafing ful commodity which time should afford, So him elf with that goodly spectacle, asked they obtained halfe a years truce : after Hannibal what he thought; and whether all which, the winter was like to afford them the were not enough for the Romans, another half years leifure of breathing. E lough ( faid Hannibal ) were the Romans the Hereof were they not more glad, than was most covetous men in all the world : meaning P. Scipio : who thought all time lost, which that all this cott upon the backs of cowardly with held the War from paffing over into Assignes, was no better than a spoil to animate good Souldiers. How little this answer pleased the King, it is easie to guess. The aside, and the old Consul Glabrio fent home little use that he made of this Carthaginian , into Italy, the Scipio's marched into theffaly; testifies that his dislike of the man, caused intending thence to take their way by Land, him to lose the use of his service, when he through Macedon and Ihrace unto the Hellesstood in greatest necessity thereof.

all retired. The Atheman Emballadors had to Alia. dealt with P. Scipio, in behalf or the Etolians: Much was done at Sea in the beginning of entreating him to stand their triend, and this year; though, for the most part, little help them in obtaining some tolerable con- of importance. Polyxenidas, the Admiral of dition of peace. He gave them gentle words, Antiochus, was a banished Rhodian : true to the of remembrance, as a fign of the freedom that they should faithfully, and with true

The business of Atolia being thus laid pont. Yet they confidered, that hereby they The Scipio's made all hafte away from must commit themselves unto the loyalty of Rome as 100 as they could. They carried King Philip : who might either do them with them, besides other Souldiers newly some mischief by the way, if he were dispoprest to the war, about five thousand Volun- sed to watch a notable advantage: or at the taries, that had ferved under P. Africanse, least, would he be unfaithful; though he were There was also a Fleet of thirty Quinquereme not so couragious, yet might he take such Gallies, and twenty Triremes newly built, ap-order with the Thracians, that even for pointed unto L. Emilius Regillus, that was want of victuals, if by no greater inconvenichosen Admiral the same year for that voy- ence, they should be disgracefully forced to age. At their coming into Greece, they found return. He had promifed them theutmost the old Consul Glabrio besieging Amphysia a of his furtherance: wherein , whether he City of the Atolians. The Atolians after meant fincerely, they thought to make some that they were denyed peace, had expected tryal; by causing a Gentleman to ride Post him once again at Nanpactus. Wherefore unto him, and observe his doings as he should they not only fortified that Town but kept take him on the sudden. The King was merall the passages thereto leading; which heed ry at a fest, and drinking when the Messenlefly, as in a time of confusion, they had ger came: whom he lovingly bade welleft unregarded the last year. Glabrio know- come; and shewed him the next day, not ing this, deceived their expectation, and fell only what provision of victuals he had made upon Lamia: which being not long fince for the Army, but how he had made bridges much weakened by Philip, and now by him over the Rivers, and mended the bad waves attempted on the sudden; was carried at by which they were to pass. With these the second affault. Thence went he to Am- good news Gracehus returned back in haste physia: which he had almost gotten, when unto the Scipie's: who entring into Macethe stripe, his fuccefior, came with thirteen don, found all things in a readines, that thousand Foot, and five hundred Horse, and might help to advance their journey. The took charge of the Army. The Town of Am- King entertained them royally, and brought physia was presently forfaken by the Inhabi- them on their way, even to the Hellespont: tants : but they had a Castle, or higher where they stayed a good while, until their Town, that was impregnable; whereintothey Navy was in readiness to transport them inand willed them to perswade the Atolians, the King and desirous of revenge upon his hearing that the Rhodian Fleet was at Samos nothing : for that one while they were hinthe Romans and Fumenes having not as yet dred by ftorms at Sea 5, and another while put to Sea, thought to do somewhat upon by strong resistance made against them ar. those that were so early in their diligence. Land. before their fellows should arrive to help them. Yet went he craftily to work, and for sake them; and return home to the defent word, as in great secrecy, to the Rhodian sence of his own Kingdom. For Antiochus Admiral, That if the fentence of his banish wasted all the grounds about Fleu and Perment might be repealed, He would, in required thereof, betray all the Kings Fleet. Hegetheroyal City of Pergama, did with After many passages to and fro, this was the rest of his Army spoil the whole Counbelieved : and the Rhodian Admiral grew fo ry thereabout. Attalus the brother of careless, expecting still when he should re- King Eumenes, was then in Pergamus; having ceive a watch-word from Polixenidas that with him no better men to defend the City, he himself was taken by Polixenidus in his than were they that lay against it. Whereown Haven. The Kings Fleet fetting forth fore he had reason to stand in fear; being too from Ephesis by night; and for fear of being much inferior in number. There came to his discovered, resting one day in harbour aid a thousand foot, and an hundred horse of by the way, came the second night to Samos : the Acheans : old souldiers all, and trained up where, by morning it was ready to enter under Philopamen, whose Scholar, in the art the Haven. Pauliftratus the Rhodian Admi- of war, Diophanes their commander was. This ral feeing this, thought it his best way of re- Diephanes beholding from the walls of Perfistance to bestow his men on the two head- games, which was an high Town, the demealands or points of the Haven; fo to guard nour of the enemy; began to disdain that the mouth of it : for that he faw no likeli- fuch men as they should hold them besieged. hood of defending himself by Sea. But Polyx- For Scleneus his Army which was encamped enidas had already landed some Companies at the hill foot, seeing that none durst fally in another part of the Island : which falling forth upon them, grew so careless : as otherupon the back of Faulifratus, compelled him wife than by (poiling all behind their backs. to alter his directions, and command, his they feemed to forget that they were in an men aboord. This could not be without enemies Country. Diophanes therefore spake great confusion: so as the enemies took him with Att lus: and told him that he would go out of all order, and funk or boorded all his forth to vefit them. Attalus had no liking to Navy, five excepted, that by a sudden de this adventure; for he said, that the match vice made shift to escape. Each of them hung was nothing equal. But the Achean would out a burning Crefcent upon two poles, at needs have his will: & iffuing forth encamped the Beak-head; and then rowed forwards not far from the enemy. They of Pergamus directly upon the enemy: who having not thought him little better than mad. As for bethought himself what shift to make against the beliegers; they wondred at first what his fuch unexpected danger of firing, was con- meaning was: but when they faw that he held tent to give way unto these desperate Gal himself quiet, they made a jest of his boldness; lies; for fear left they should burn, together and laughed to see with what an handfull of with themselves, a part of the Kings men he looked so stoutly. So they returned Fleet.

from place to place, attempting many things, the Town, men and women, to behold this as either they were entreated by the Rhodi- (pectacle) were very joyfull; and highly Country men, that had expelled him. He, of doing good. Yet performed they little or unto their former negligence and diforders. Not long after this, the Romans had some Which Diophanes perceiving, He commanded loss by tempest: whereof Polyxenidas could all his men to follow him, even as fast as they not take such advantage as he had hoped; well might: and he himself, with the hundred because, putting to Sea for that purpose, horse, brake out on the sudden upon the stati-he was driven back again by the like foul on that was next at hand. Very sew of the weather. But the Rhodians, to shew that enemies had their horses ready sadled, but they were not discouraged, set forth twenty more few, or none had the hearts to make other Gallies : the Romans also with King resistance: so as he drave them all out of their Eumenes, repaired their fleet; and all of them Campi chased them as far as he might safetogether, in great bravery presented battel ly adventure with great slaughter of them, to Polyxenidas before the Haven of Ephelias, and no loss to his own. Hereat all the Citizens When he durst not accept it : they went of Pergamus (who had covered the walls of ans, or perswaded by some appearing hopes magnified the vertue of these Achains. Yet

1076

great deal of travel, brought almost nothing mans and their fellows lost only two or to pass. He had been at Pergamus : into three ships : but got hereby the absolute Mawhich Eumenes, leaving the Romans, did stery of the Sea. put himself with a few of his Horse and light armature. Before Pergamus he left his to have taken from Antiochas all use of reafon, as before hath been shewed, and went son. For as if no hope had been remaining to Elea: whither he heard that Emyline the to defend those places that he held in Europe, Roman Admiral was come to bring succour he presently with-drew his Garrisons from to Eumenes. There he made an Overture of Lyfimachia: which might eafily have been peace: about which to consult, Eumenes was kept even till the end of Winter following,& fent for by Emplius, and came from Pergamus. having reduced the besiegers (if the siege But when it was considered, that no con- had been continued obstinately) unto terms clusion could be made without the Conful: of great extremity, He also gave over the this Treaty brake off. Then followed the fiege of Colopbon: and laying a fide all thought overthrow newly mentioned, which caused save only of defence, drew together seleness to give over the siege of Perga- all his Army; and sent for help to his any worth or note were taken by the King : docian. and the Syrian Fleet, being of feven and Thus the Roman Conful, without impethirty Sail, was beaten by the Rhodian diment, not only came to the Hellesson, but which was of like number. But of this vihad yieled unto him all places there, bectory the Rhodians had no great cause to re- longing to Anticohus on Europe side. The Fleet joyce : for that Hannibal the Carthaginian, was also then in a readiness to transport him who, together with Apollonius a Courtier of over into Asia: where Eumenes had taken Antiochus, was Admiral of the syrians, did fuch care before, that he landed quietly at them in a maner as great hurt as they could his own good eafe; even as if the Country of war might have cut all their throats, even and was thereby in greater danger of being as they were tipling in their victualling hou- flemmed. After no long fight, the Kings fes ; which Philopamen faid that he would Navy hoysted fail : and , having a fair have done, had he been General of the Acha- wind, bore away toward Ephesas as fast as ans, and not as he then was, a private man. they could. Yet forty of their Gallies they Antiochus was full of bufiness : and turn- left behind them : whereof thirteen were ing his care from one thing to another, with a taken, all the rest burnt or sunk. The Ro-

The report of this miladventure, may feem mus. Afterwards, four or five Towns of fcarce Father-in-law , King Ariarathes the Cappathat came to fue for peace. This Embassa- Peace. dor declared in his Masters name, That the The King was not any whit moved with had been his already. The first news that he King in my name, That I would advise him to heard of the Enemy, was by an Embaffador refuse no Condition whereby he may have fame things which had hindered him from his advice. For feeing that the Conful deobtaining peace of the Romans heretofore, manded of him no less than if he had been did now perswade him, that he should easi- already subdued : little reason there was, ly come to good agreement with them. For that he should fear to come to battel; wherein all disputations heretofore, Smyrna, Lamp- in he could lote, as he thought, no more, lacus, and Lysimachia, had been the places than by seeking to avoid it he must give aabout which they varied. Seeing therefore way. He had with him threefcore and ten the King had now already given over Lyf- thousand Foot, and twelve thousand Horse; machia, and was further purposed not to besides two and fifty Indian Elephants; and Strive with the Romans about Lampfaces and many Chariots armed with Hooks or Sythes. Smyrna: what reason was there, why they according to the manner of the Eastern should need to trouble him with War? If it Countrys. Yet was he nothing pleased to was their defire that any other Towns up- hear that the Conful drew near him apace. on the Coalt of Asia, not mentioned by them as one hastening to fight. But how soever he in any former Treaties, should be also set was affected: He made so little show of sear, at liberty, or otherwise delivered into their that hearing P. Scipio to lie sick at Elaa, He hands: the King would not refuse to gra- sent thither unto him his Son without rantifie them therein. Briefly, let them take some as one both defirous to comfort this some part of Asia, so as the bounds dividing noble Warriour in his sickness, and withall them from the King, might not be uncer- not desirous to retain the young Gentleman tain, and it should be quietly put into their for a pledge of his own safety. Thus hands. If all this were not enough, the ought his bounty to be constant. Otherwise King would likewise bear half the Charges it might be suspected that herein he dealt whereat they had been in this War. So craftily. For fince he could have none other praying the Romans to hold themselves con- ransome of Scipio, than such as an honouratented with these good offers, and not to be ble man, that had no great store of wealth, too infolent upon confidence of their for- might pay: better it was to do such a courtune, he expected their answer. These offers telle before the battel, as would afterwards which to the Embassador seemed so great; have been little worth; than to stay until were judged by the Romans to be very little. the Romans, perhaps victorious, should exact For they thought it reasonable, that the it at his hands. P. Scipio was greatly com-King should bear all the Charges of the War, forted with the Recovery of his Son; so as fince it began through his own fault : and the joy thereof was thought to have been that He should not only depart out of those much available unto his health. In recomfew Towns which he held in Aolis and Io- pence of the Kings humanity, He faid only nia; but quite out of Asia the less, and keep thus much unto those that brought him this himself on the other side of Mount Taurus. acceptable Present, I am now able to make When the Embassador therefore saw that your King none other amends, than by advising no better bargain could be made, He dealt him not to fight until he shall hear that I with P. scipio in private: and to him he pro- am in the Camp. What he meant by this, mised a great quantity of Gold, together it is hard to conjecture. Antiochus resolwith the free restitution of his Son, who ved to follow his Counsel: and therefore (it is uncertain by what mischance) was ta- withdrew himself from about Thyatira. beken prisoner, and most honourably entertai- youd the River of Phrygius or Hyllus, unto ned by the King. Scipio would not hearken Magnesis by Sypilus : where encamping, he to the offer of Gold: nor otherwife to the fortified himfelf as strongly as he could. Restitution of his Son, than upon condition, Thither followed him L. Scipio the Con-That it might be with making fuch amends ful, and fat down within four miles of for the benefit, as became a private man. As him. About a thouland of the Kings Horle, for the publick business: He only said thus most of them Gallo-Greeks, came to bid much, That fince Antiochus had already for- the Romans welcome : of whom at first faken Lylimachia, and fuffered the War to they flew some; and were anon, with take hold on his own Kingdom; there was some loss, driven back over the River. now none other way for him, than either to Two dayes were quietly spent, whilest neifight, or yield to that which was required ther the King nor the Romans would pass the at his hands. Wherefore, faid he, tell your water. The third day the Romans made the adventure : wherein they found no di- | were placed there, though fuch help feemsturbance; nor were at all opposed, until ed in a manner needless. Two thousand they came within two miles and an half of Voluntaries, Macedonians and Thracians. Antiochus his Camp. There as they were were left to guard the Camp. The Conul taking up their lodging, they were charged had with him fixteen African Elephants. by three thousand Horse and Foot : whom which he bestowed in his Rere : forasmuch the ordinary Corps de guarde repelled. Four as had they come to fight with those of Andayes together after this, each of them tiochus, they only would have served to disbrought forth their Armies; and set them in courage his men; as being sure to be beaorder before the Trenches, without advanten : the Indian being far the greater cing any further. The fifth day the Romans and more couragious Beafts : whereof came half way forward, and prefented bat- Antiochm had likewife much advantage in tel; which the King would not accept. number. Thereupon the Conful took advice what was to be done. For either they must fight upon many Nations, diversly appointed, and not whatsoever disadvantage, or else resolve all accustomed to one manner of fight, was to abide by it all Winter, far from any ordered according to the several kinds, in Country of their friends, and therefore sub such wife as each might be of most use. The ject unto many difficulties : unless they main strength of his Foot consisted in sixteen would ftain their honour by returning far thousand, armed all Macedonian-like, and back, to Winter in a more convenient called Phalangiers. These he placed in the place; and so defer the War until the next midst, and divided into ten Battalions: eve-Spring. The Roman Souldier was through ry one having two and thirty in File, and ly perswaded of that Enemies base temper. fifty in Front. Between every Battalion Wherefore it was the general Cry, That were two Elephants, goodly Beafts, and this great Army should be assailed, even in such as being adorned with Frontals, high the Camp where it lay: as if rather there Crefts, Towers on their Backs, and bewere so many Beasts to be slaughtered, than sides him that governed the Elephant, four men to be fought with. Yet a day or two men in every Tower, made a gallant and

The fifth Book of the first Part

The Kings Army being compounded of passed, in discovering the Fortifications of terrible shew. On the right hand of these Antiochus, and the fafest way to set upon were fifteen hundred Horse of the Gallehim. All this while P. scipio came not. Greeks: then three thousand Barb'd Horse, Wherefore the King, being loth to dif and a Regiment of almost a thousand Horse, hearten his men, by seeming to stand in called the Agema, that were all Medians, the fear of the Enemy, resolved to put the choice of the Country, and accompanied matter to trial. So when the Romans took by some others. All which Troops of Horse the field again, and ordered their Battels: divided in their several kinds, do feem to He also did the like; and advanced so far, have followed one another in depth, rather that they might understand his meaning to then to have been stretched out in Front. Adjoyning unto thefe, were fixteen Ele-The Roman Army confifted of four Legi- phants together in one flock. A little furons, two Roman and two Latine: in each ther to the right hand, was the Kings of which were five thousand and four hun own Regiment; called the Argyraspides, or dred men. The Latines, as usually, were in the Silvershields, by a name borrowed from their points; the Roman, in the mean battel. All furniture, but nothing like so valiant as of them, according to their wonted form, those of the same name, that had served unwere divided into Maniples. The Haftati der Great Alexander : then, twelve hunhad the leading: after them followed the dred Archers on Horse-back, three thousand Principes, at such distance as was usual; and light-armed Foot, two thousand & five hunlast of all, the Triaris. Now beside these, there dred Archers of Mysia; with sour thousand were about three thousand Auxiliaries; Slingers and Archers of the Cirtaens, and partly Acheans, and partly fuch as belonged Elymaans. On the left hand of the Phalangito Eumenes: which were placed in an equal ers, were placed the like numbers of Galle-Front beyond the Latines in the right wing. Greeks, and Barb'd Horse: as also two thou-Utmost of all ( fave some five hundred Greti- fand Horse that were sent from Ariarathes, ans, and of the Trallians) were almost three with two thousand and seven hundred of thousand Horse : of which, Eumenes had divers Nations: and a Regiment of a thousand brought thither eight hundred ; the rest be- Horsemore lightly armed, that were called ing Roman. The left wing was fenced by the The Kings Troop ; being Syrians, Phrygians, and bank of the River : yet four troops of Horse Lydians. In Front of all these Horse were dians, Cyrteans, Elymeans, and many others, summons yield ed up themselves by Embafhaving also with them fixteen Elephants. Sadours: whom they sent to the Romans, wing : Seleucus in the left : and three of his many days spent, ere Antiochus his Embassaprincipal Captains commanded over the Pha- dour was in the Camp: having none other ries and armed Chariots: of which the ster. P. Scipio was now come to his Brother, one, being like to terrifie the Horse; the who obtained leave to make the answer. other, to break the Squadrons of the Foot; because it should be gentle. They required Eumenes with a few light-armed Cretians, red no more than they had lately done : Archers, Darters, and Slingers, easily made which was, That he should quite abandon frustrate the danger threatned by them both. his Dominions on this side Taurus. For For with shoutings, and noises, and some their Charges in that War, they required wounds, they were driven out of the field; fifteen thousand Talents : five hundred in and running back upon their own men, did hand; two thousand and five hundred, when the same harm which they had intended to the Senate and People of Rome should have the Enemies. Wherefore the Roman Horse confirmed the peace; and the other twelve following this advantage, charged upon the thousand in twelve years next ensuing, by left Wing: Whereas they found no refist- even portions. Likewise they demanded ance; some being out of order; others be- four hundred Talents for Eumenes; and some ing without courage. It is shameful to re- store of Corn that was due to him upon a hearfe, and fo strange, that it may hardly reckoning. Now besides twenty Hostages feem credible: that the Phalangiers, with which they required, very earnest they were fuch variety of Auxiliaris, made little or to have Hannibal the Carthaginian, and no resistance; but all of them fled, in a Thous the Etolian, with some others, who manner as foon as they were charged. Only had stirred up the King to this War, delithe King, Antiochus himself, being in the vered into their hands. But any wise man left wing of his own Battel: and seeing the might so easily have perceived that it would ly flanked with Horse, gave upon them principal demands; as no great Art was needthe fight. Succour also came from the right Peace. Wing, where the Romans were already vi- There were new Confuls chosen in the dorious: whereof when Antiochus discover- mean while at Rome, M.Fulvius, and Cn.Manfive and twenty.

leneus was gone thither before. He left the Province changed.

the Chariots armed with Hooks or Sythes, cultody of Sardes, and the Castle there, to and the Dromedaries, whereon fate Arabians one whom he thought faithful. But the with long Rapiers, that would ferve to reach Towns-men and Souldiers were fo dimayed from those high Camels. Beyond these were, with the greatness of the Overthrow; that as in the right wing, a rabble of many Na- one mans faith was worth nothing. All the tions, Carians, Cicilians, Pamphilians, Pift Towns in those parts, without expeding Antiochus himself commanded in the right whilest they were on the way. Neither were Errand, than to know what it would please The first onset was given by the Dromeda- the Romans to impose upon the King his Ma-Latines, that flood opposite unto him, weak- be their purpose to make this one of their couragiously, and forced them to retire. ful to beguile their malice. The Kings Em-But M. Emilius, that had the Guard of the baffador had full Commission to refuse no-Roman Camp, iffued forth with all his power thing that should be enjoyned. Wherefore to help his fellows : and what by perswa- there was no more to do, than to send immefion, what by threats, made them renew diately to Rome for the Ratification of the

ed the approach; He not only turned his lim Volfo. The Etolians defired peace, but Horse about, but ran away upon the spur could not obtain it : because they would acwithout further tarriance. The Camp was cept neither of the two Conditions to them defended a little while: and with no great before propounded. Soit was decreed, That valour; though by a great multitude that one of the Confuls should make War upon were fled into it. Antiochus is faid to have the Ætolians ; the other, upon Antiochus in lost in this Battel fifty thousand Foot, and Asia. Now, though shortly there came news four thousand Horse; besides those that that Antiochus was already vanquished in were taken. Of the Romans there were not Battel, and had submitted himself unto all that flain above three hundred Foot, and four could be required at his hands : yet fince the and twenty Horse: of Eumenes his followers State of Alia was not like to be so throughly fettled by one Victory, but that many things Antiochus fled to Sardes, and from thence might fall out worthy of the Romans care, Ca. to Apamea, the same night; hearing that Se- Manlius, to whom Asia fell by lot, had not his

Soon after this, came the Embassadors of King Antiochus to Rome, accompanied with the Rhodians and some others; yea, by King Eumenes in person; whose presence added a goodly lustre to the business in hand. Concerning the peace to be made with King Antiochus, there was no disputation : it was generally approved. All the trouble was about the distribution of the purchase. King Eumenes reckoned up his own deferts, and comparing himself with Masanissa, hoped that the Romans would be more bountiful to him, than they had been to the Numidian, fince they had found him a King indeed, whereas Masanissa was only such in title; and fince, both he and his Father had alwayes been IVI fame charge divided between them. their friends, even in the worst of the Roman which L. Cornelius Scipio, now stiled Asiaifortune. Yet was there much ado to make cus, had lately undergone. It was found him tell what he would have: He still refer- more than one mans work, to look at once to ring himself to their courteile; and they de- Greice and to Asia. And for this reason was firing him to speak plain. At length he cra- it apparent, that L. Scipio had granted so ved that they would bestow upon him, as long a Truce to the Etolians. But since in much of the Country by them taken from this long Interim of Truce, that haughty little Antiochus, as they had no purpose to keep in Nation had not sought to humble it self to their own hands. Neither thought he it the Roman Majefty, it was now to be brought this. They defired the Senate to be truly Pa- and Athenians to become Intercessors for them as a cause why they thould not be made where they spied advantage. free, after that Philip was overcome. But the main point whereon they intifted, was this, among them, whilst Philip of Macedon kept, That the Victory of the Romans against King for him, possession of his Lands and Castles. Antiochus, was fo great, as eafily might fatif- But the Athamanians ( befides that many of fiethe desires of all their friend. The Senate them bore a natural affection to their own was glad to hear of this; and very bountiful Prince) having been long accustomed to ly gave away to much, that every one had ferve a Mountain Lord, that converfed with caufe to be well-ple afed.

chus : after which, L. Cornelius scipio, re- command, used by the Captains of Philip turning home, had granted unto him the ho- his Garrisons. They sent therefore some nour of a Triumph : the Pomp whereof ex- few of them to their King, and offered their geeded in Riches, not only that of Titus Quin- fervice towards his restitution. At the first the Flamminius, but of any ten that Rome had there were only four of them; neither grew beheld until that day. Now for a much as they, at length, to more than two and fifty, the furname of The African had been given un- which undertook the work. Yet affurance to P. Scipio, it was thought convenient by some that all the rest would follow, made Aminanto reward L. Scopio with the title of The Alia- der willing to try his fortune. He was at tique: which the fortune of his Victory had the borders with a thousand Etolians, upon noiels deserved; though the Vertue requisit the day appointed : at what time his two to the purchass thereof, was no way corre- and fifty Adventurers, having divided themfpondent.

ø. IX.

The Atolians, and the Gallo Greeks, vanquille. ed by the Roman Confuls, Fulvius and Manlius. Manlius bardly obtains a triumb : being charged (among other objections) with attempting to have pulled the bounds anpointed as fatal to the Remans by Sibyl. Of Sibyls Prophecies; the Books of Hermes; and that Inscription, Simoni Deo Sandto. The ingratitude of Rome to the two Scipio's: and that beginning and faction amone the Roman Nobility.

Arc. Fulvius, and Cn. Manlius had the needful, that they should trouble themselves unto more lowly terms than any other of the with the care of giving Liberty to many of Greeks. The best was, that so great a storm the Greck Towns that were on Asia side. For fell not unexpected upon the Etolians. fince the most of those Towns had been par- They had foreseen the danger, when their takers with the King in his War; it was no Embaffadors were utterly denied peace at reason that they should be Gainers by his Rome: and they had provided the last Reoverthrow. The Rhodians did not like of medy; which was to entreat the Rhodians trons of the Gracian Liberty; and to call to them. Nether were they fo dejected with mind, that no small part of Greece it self had any terrible apprehensions, that they could been subject unto Philip, and served him in not well devise, even upon helping themhis War : which was not alledged against selves by repurchase of Countries lost,

Poor King Aminander lived in exile them after an homely manner; could not Such end had the War against King Antio- endure the proud and insolent manner of selves into four parts, occupied, by the reachief Towns in the Country, to his use. The | der fent his excuses to Rome, praying the Sefame of this godd success at the first; nate not to take it in despight, that he had with divers Letters running from place to recovered his own from Philip with fuch help place, whereby men were exhorted to do as he could get. Neither feems it that the their best in helping forward the Action, Romans were much offended to hear of Phimade the Lieutenants of Philip unable to lip his losses: for of this fault they neither think upon resistance. One of them held were sharp correctors, nor earnest reprothe Town of Theium a few daies; giving vers. Fulvius went in hand with the buthereby some leisure unto his King to pro- lines about which he came, and layed siege vide for the rescue. But when he had done his to Ambracia, a goodly City, that had been best, he was forced thence, and could only the chief seat of Pyrrhus his Kingdom. With tell Philip, whom he met on the way, that all this he began, for that it was of too great was loft. Philip had brought from home fix importance to be abandoned by the Atothousand men; of whom, when the greater lians : yet could not by them be relieved. part could not hold out, in such a running unless they would adventure to fight upon march, he left all fave two thousand behind equal ground. To help the Ambracians, it him, and so came to Athenaum, a little Atha- was not in the Atolians power: for they manian Castle, that still was his, as being on were, at the same time, vexed by the Illyrians a place lying over Argithea, that was chief who invaded the Countries of the Amphilo-

of the History of the World.

gone, as if he meant not to return.

throw, and of M. Fulvius the new Conful his Athens did earnestly solicite. The Atolians dy affiftance of the multitude, four of the | hafting with an Army into Greece. Aminanthe frontier of Macedon. Thence he feat at Sea, and ready to be driven from their Tene, who had kept Theinma while, to take new Conpuest, by Persen the Son of Philip, of the Country. Zeno did as he was appoint chians and Dolopians. They were unable to ed:yet neither he, nor the King had the bold- deal with so many at once; and therefore as ness to descend upon Argithea; for that they earnestly sought peace with the Romars, as might perceive the Athamanians, all along the hill fides, ready to come down upon the mean while the Athaman and Rhodian them, when they should be busie. Wherefore Embassadors came, who befought the Connothing was thought more honourable than ful to grant them peace. It helped well that a fafe retrait: especially when Aminander Ambracia made strong refistance, and would came in fight with his thousand Atolians. not be terrified by any violence of the Af-The Macedonians were called back from failants, or danger that might feem to wards Argithea, and presently withdrawn threaten. The Consul had no desire to spend by their King towards his own borders. But half his time about one City, and so be diven they were not suffered to depart in quiet at to leave unto his successor the honour of their pleasure. The Athamanians and Atolians finishing the War. Wherefore he gladly way-laid them, and pursued them so closely, hearkened unto the Etolians, and bade that their retrait was in manner of a plain them feek peace with faithful intent, withflight, with great loss of men and arms, out thinking it over-dear, at a reasonable few of those escaping, that were left be price; cosidering with how great a part of hind, as to make a countenance of holding his Kingdome their friend Antiochus had somewhat in the Country, until Philip his made the same purchase. He also gave leave to Aminander, offering his service as a Me-The Ætolians having found the business diatour, to put himself into Ambracia, and of Athamania so easie, made an attempt in try what good his perswasions might do with their own behalf, upon the Amphilochians the Citizens. So after many demands and and Aperantians. These had belonged unto excuses, the conclusion was such as was their Nation, and were lately taken by Phi-lip; from whom they diligently revolted, able. The fame Embassadours of the Atheand became Ætolians again. The Dolopians nians and Rhodians, accompanied those of lay next; that had been ever belonging to the Ætolians to Rome, for procuring the the Maccdonian, and so did still purpose to confirmation of Peace. Their cloquence continue. These took Arms at first : but soon and credit was the more needful in this inlaid them away; feeing their neighbours tercession, for that Philip had made a very ready to fight with them in the Ætolian grieveous complaint about the loss of those quarrel, and seeing their own King so hastily Countries, which they had lately taken from him. Hereof the Senate could not but take Of these Victories the joy was the less ; notice ; thoughit did not hinder the peace, for that news came of Antioches his last over- which those good Mediatours of Rhodes and were bound to uphold the Majesty of the I themselves unto the high Mountains of people of Rome, and to observe divers Olympus and Margana. These Mountains Articles, which made them the less free, and were exceeding hard of ascent, though none more chnoxious to the Romans, than any should undertake the custody. Bring people of Greece; they having been the first cherefore well manned and victualled for that called these their Masters into the a long time; as also the natural strength Country. The Ille of Cephalenia was taken being helpt by fuch fortification as profrom them by the Romans: who kept it for mifed greatest affurance: it was thought. themselves (as not long lince they had gotten that the Consul would either forbear the at-Quently from the Ackeuns, by stiffly pref- tempt of forcing them, or easily be repelled: ting their own right ) that so they might and that finally, when he had staved there have possession along the Coast of Greece, a while, winter, and much want, should while It they (cemed to forbear the Country. force him to dislodge. Yet all this availed But concerning those places, whereto Phi oot. For whereas the Gallo-Greeks had lip, or others may lay claim, there was fet been careless of furnishing themselves with down an order to perplexed, as would ne- casting weapons, as if stones would have ceffarily require to have the Romans Judges ferved well enough for that purpose: the of their Controversies, when they thould Romans, who came far otherwise appointed. arife. And hereof good use will be shortly found greater advantage in the difference of made : when want of employment elfe- arms, than impediment in the disadvantage of where, first cause a more Lordly Inquisition ground. Archers and Slingers did easily to be held, upon the affairs of Macedon and prevail against casters of stones; especially Greece.

same time War in Alia, with the Gallo-Greeks having prepared their stones before hand, and others. His Army was the fame that but catching up what lay next, the too great, had tollowed L. Scipio ; of whose victory, and the too little, oftner than those of a fit his acts were the confummation. He visited fize. Finally the Barbarians, wanting dethose Countries on the hither side of Taurus, rensive Arms, could not hold out against the that had scarce heard of the Romans; to Arrows and weapons of the Roman light arwhom they were abandoned by Antiochus. mature : but were driven from a piece of Among these there were some petty Lords ground, which they had undertaken to or Tyrants, fome free Cities, and fome that make good, up into their Camp on the top were together at wars, without regard of of the Mountain; and being forced out of the great alteration that happened in Afia. their Camp, had none other way left, than From ever y of these he got somewhat; and to cast themselves headlong down the steep by their quarrels found occasion to visit Rocks. Few of the men escaped alive: those Provinces, into which he should else all their Wives, Children, and goods, behave wanted an errand. He was even loaden came a prey unto the Romans. In the very with booty, when, having fetcht a compass like manner were the rest of that Nation about Asia, he came at length upon the overcome soon after, at the other Moun-Gallo-Greeks. These had long domineered tain : only more of them saved themselves over the Country: though of late times, it by flight, as having fairer way at their was rather the fame and terrour of their backs. fore-possed acts, than any present vertue of These wars being ended: Fulvius and Mantheirs, which held them up in reputation. lim were apointed by the Senate, each Of the Romans they had lately such trial, of them to retain as Proconsul, his Province when they ferved under King Antiochus, as for another year. Fulvius, in his fecond the worse men. Wherefore they thought it peace to those whom he had vanquished; as no small part of their safety, that they dwelt likewise to Ariarathes the Cappadocian, and upon the River Halys, in an In-land Coun- some others, not by him vanquished, but subtry, where those enemies were not very mitting themselves for fear of the Roman like to fearch them out. But when such Arms. He drew from them all, what prohopes failed; and when some Princes of sithe could; and laid upon them such con-being fuch as were thefe Gallo-Greeks, nei-Cn. Manlius, the other Conful, had at the ther exercited in that manner of fight, nor made them to acknowledge themselves far year, did little or nothing. Manlius gave their own Nation, that had been friends of ditions, as he thought expedient. He also did Eumenes, exhorted the rest to yield : then finish the League of peace with Antiochus; was no counsel thought so good, as to for- whereto he swore, and received the Kings fake their houses and Country, and with all oath by Embassadours, whom he sent for that that they could carry or drive, to betake purpole. Finally, having fet in order the matters of Afia, he took his way toward the respect of him. But Eumenes took a surge choaked the Roman vertue.

moreover to restore unto him all the Greek their handle of Greece.

Hellefoot, loaden with spoil, as carrying way. For the Scipio's had not the disposing with him (besides other treasures) all that of that which they won from Antiochie: as the Gallo-Greeks had in so many years extor- neither indeed had Manlius, nor the ten Deted from the wealthy Provinces that lay legates affilting him; but the Senate of Rome, round about them. Neither did this Army by which those Delegates were chosen, and of Manliso return home rich in money alone, instructed how to proceed. When Philip or cattel, or things of needful use, which therefore faw these upstart Kings of Pergathe Roman Souldier had been wont to take mm, whom he accounted as base companions. as the only good purchase; but furnished advanced so highly, and made greater than with sumptyous Houshold-stuff, and slaves himself: yea, himself unregarded, contemof price, excellent Cooks, and Mulicians, for ned, and exposed to many wrongs: then banquets; and in a word, with the feeds of found he great caufe to with, that he had not that Luxury which finally over-grew and so hastily declared himself against antiochus. or rather that he had joyned with Antiochus The Country of Thrace lay between Helle- and the Ætolians, by whom he might have front and the Kingdom of Macedon, which been freed from his infolent Mafters. But way Manling was to take his journey home- what great argument of such discontentedward. L. Scipio had found no impediment nels, the Macedonian had, we shall very shortamong the Thracians: either for that he paf- ly be urged to discourse more at large. At fed through them, without any fuch booty as the prefent it was believed, that the Thracimight provoke them; or perhaps rather, ans were by him fet on to affail the Romans because Philip of Macedon had taken order, passing through their Country. They knew that the Barbarians should not stir. But when all advantages, and they fell, unexpected, up-Manliss came along with a huge train of on the carriages that were bestowed in the baggage, the Thracians could not fo well midft of the Army, whereof part had alreacontain themselves. Neither was it thought, dy passed a dangerous wood through which that Philip took it otherwise than very plea- the baggage followed; part was not yet so fantly, to have this Roman Army robbed, and far advanced. There was enough to get and well beaten on the way. He had cause to be enough to leave behind: though both the angry, seeing how little himself was regar getting and the saving, did cost many lives, ded, and what great rewards were given to as well of the Barbarians, as of the Romans. Eumenes. For he understood, and afterwards They fought until it grew night : and then gave the Romans to understand, that Eume- the Thracians withdrew themselves not withnes could not have abidden in his own King- out as much of the booty as was to their full dome, if the people of Rome had not made content. And of such trouble there was war in Afia: whereas contrariwife, Antio-more, though less dangerous, before the she had offered unto himself three thou- Army could get out of Thrace into Macedon. fand Talents, and fifty Ships of War, to take Through the Kingdom they had a fair march part with him and the Atolians; promiting into Epirus; and to to Apollonia, which was

Cities, that had been taken from him by the To Maulius, and to Fulvius, when each of Romans. Such being the difference between them returned to the City, was granted the him and Eumenes, when the War began : He honour of Triumph. Yet not without contrathought it no even dealing of the Romans, diction: especially to Manlius, whom some after their victory, to give away not only the of the ten Delegates appointed to affift him. half of Afia, but Cherjonejus, and Lyimachia did very bitterly tax as an unworthy Comin Europe, to Eumener; whereas upon him-mander. Touching the rest of their accusafelf they bestowed not any one Town. It tion, it sufficeth that he made good answer. agreed not indeed with his Nobility to go and was approved by the chief of the Senate. to Rome, and beg Provinces in the Senate, as One Clause is worthy of more particular Eumenes and the Rhodians had lately done. confideration. Reprehending his delire to He had entertained lovingly the two sci- have hindered the peace with Antiochus; pio's, whom he thought the most honourable They said, That with much ado he was kept in the pions with much ado he was kept in the pions with men in Rome; and was grown into near ac- from leading his Army over Taurus, and advenquaintance with Publius, holding corre-turing upon the Calamity threatned by Sibyl's spondence with him by Letters, whereby he Verses, unto those that should pass the Fatal made himself acquainted with the Wars in Bounds. What calamiry or overthrow this Spain and Africk. This perhaps he dee- was, wherewith sibyls Prophecy threatned med sufficient, to breed in the Romans a due the Roman Captain or Army, that should

was the first that marched with an Army be yand those limits: though the Victories of Lucullus had opened unto him the way, and had before-hand won, in a fort, the Countries on the other side of the Mount; which thought that Seneca, who then lived and Lucullus gave to one of Antiochus his Race, flourished, would have abstained from though Fompey occupied them for the Ro peaking any word of an argument fo famans. But we find not, that either Lucullus or nous. Wherefore I am perswaded, that Pompey fuffered any loss, in presuming to neg this Inscription, Simoni Deo Santto, was, by lect the bounds appointed by sibyl. Indeed some bad Criticisme, taken amis in place the accomplishment of this Prophecy, fell of Semoni Sango: a title four hundred years out near about one time, with the restitu- older than the time of Simon Magus. For tion of Ptolomy King of Egipt, that was for- the Goods of one Vitruoius a Rebel, had bidden unto the Romans by the same Sybil. many Ages before been consecrated Semo-Take D large field of Time, there to take root, and mil-read, Simoni Santio, and that some belief and good authority. But observa- rotten post. Hade Care excellent work of Muster Casaubon upon the from private men in the second Punick Ware pals over Taurus, I do not conceive. Pompes | nave been quite omitted by Tacitus, by Suetonius, by Dion, and by all which wrote of those times? Philosophers and Poets would got have fuffered the matter to escape in filence, had it been true; neither can it be It may therefore feem to have had reference ni Sango, that is, To the Spirit or Demi-god unto the same things that were denounced sangus, in whose Chappel they were beas like to happen upon the reduction of the stowed. So as either by the ill shape of Fgyptian King. Whether the Oracles of the old Roman letters, or by some spoil that Sibil had in them any truth, and were not, time had wrought upon them; it might eaas Tully noteth, fowed at randome in the fily come to pass, that the words should be get credit by event; I will not here dispute. Christian who had heard of Simon Magus, But I hold this more probable, than that the but not of Sangue, thereupon should frame restitution of Ptolomy to his Kingdom by Ga- the conjecture, which now passeth for a binius the Roman, should have any way be- true History. Such conjectures, being entokened the coming of our Saviour : as some tertained without examination, find credit both ancient and modern Christian Writers by Tradition, whereby also, many times, their have been well pleased to interpret sibyl in fashion is amended, and made more Historithat Prophecy. Of the Sibylline Predictions, |cal, than was conceived by the Author. But I have sometimes thought reverently though it cannot be safe, to let our faith (which not knowing what they were ( as I think ought to stand firm upon a sure foundation) few men know ) yet following the common lean over-hardly on a well-painted, yet

The fifth Book of the first Part

tion of the shameful Idolatry, that upon all Now concerning the Triumph of en. Manoccasions was advanced in Rome by the line, it may be numbered among a few of the Books of sibyl, had well prevailed upon my richeft, which ever the City beheld. Out of credulity, and made me suspect, though not that which he brought into the Treasury, the faith and pious meaning, yet the judge- was made the last payment of those moneys Marces ment of Eusebins: when that learned and which the Commonwealth had borrowed cta. 1. 4d Annals of Cardinal Baronius, did altogether So long was it, that Rome had fill some feel-ARRAL EA- free me from mine error; making it appa- ing of Hannibal: which being past, there rent; That not only those Prophecies of Si- was remaining neither care, nor memory, byl, wherein Christ so plainly was shewed, of any danger. This Triumph of Manlins but even the Books of Hermes, which have was deferred by him, even so long as he well born such reputation, were no better than could : for that he thought it not safe, to counterfeited pieces, and at first entertained make his entrance into the City, until the (whosoever devised them) by the indiscreet heat of an inquisition, then raging therein, zeal of fuch as delighted in feeing the Chri- should be allayed. The two Scipio's were stian Religion strengthened with forreign called one after another, into judgement, proofs. And in the lame Rank I think, we by two Tribunes of the People; men, only ought to place that notable History, re- by this accusation, known to Posterity.P. scireported by Enfebius from no mean Authors, pio the African, with whom they began, ENGO. E. A. Of the honour which was done to Simon could not endure that fuch unworthy men Magus in Rome; namely, of an Altar to him should question him, of purloining from the erected, with an inscription, Simoni Deo Common Treasury, or of being hired with Sando, that is, To Simon the holy God. For what can be more strange, than that a for his Country. When therefore his day thing so memorable, and so publick, should of answer came; he appeared before the Tribunes, followed by a great Train of his Friends and thor of these contentions, and instigator of Clients, with which he paifed through the the Tribunes. He was a man of great, but not midft of the Affembly, and offered himself perfect Vertue, temperate, valiant, and of to (peak. Having audience, he told the fingular industry; frugal also, both of the people, That upon the same day of the year publick, and of his own; so as in this kind he had sought a great Battel with Hannibal, he was even faulty: for though he would and finished the Punick War by a fignal Vi- not be corrupted with Bribes, yet was heunctory. In memory whereof, he thought it merciful and unconfcionable, in feeking to no fit season to brabble at the Law; but increase his own wealth, by such means as intended to visit the Capital, and there give the Law did warrant. Ambition was his vice; thanks to Jupiter, and the rest of the gods, by which being poysoned with envy, troubl d whole grace, both on that day and at other both himself and the whole City; whilst times, he had well and happily discharged he lived. His mean birth caused him to times, he had were and happy difference the most weighty business of the Common hate the Nobility, especially those that were weal. And hereto he invited with him all the in chief estimation. Neither did he spare to Citizens: requesting them, That if ever fince bite at such as were of his own rank, men the seventeenth year of his life, until he now raised by desert, if their advancement were grew old, the honourable places by them confer-red upon him, had prevented the capacity of when Glabrio, whose Lieutenant he had been bis are, and yet his deferts had exceeded the at Thermopyla, was his Competitor for the greatness of those honourable places : then would Cenforthip, and likely to carry it, he took they pray, that the Princes and great ones of an Oath against him, which was counted as their City might still be like to him. Thele no better than malicious perjury, That he words were heard with great approbation: had not brought into the common Treasury fo as all the people, even the Officers of the some Vessels of gold and silver, gotten in the court followed Scipio leaving the Tribunes Camp of Antiochus. Now the hacred which slone, with none about them excepting their he bare unto the scipio's, grew partly, (beown flaves and a Cryer, by whom ridiculouf- fides his general spight at the Nobility) from ly they cited him to judgement, until for his own hrst rising, wherein he was countevery shame, as not knowing what else to do, nanced by Fabius Maximus, who brooked they granted him, unrequested, a further not the African; partly from some check that day. After this, when the African perceived was given un o himself, in the African Voythat the Tribunes would not let fall their age by P. Scipio, whose Treasurer he then fuit, but enforce him to submit himself to a was. For when Cato did utter his dil ke of difgraceful trial: he willingy relinquished the Consuls bad Husbandry (j.dging Magthe City and his unthankful Romans, that nificence to be no better) in some peremptocould suffer him to undergo so much indigni- ry manner; Scipio plainly told him, That ty. The rest of his time he spent at Liternum: he had no need of such double diligence in quietly with a few of his inward friends, and his Treasurer. Wherefore, either not caring without any defire of seeing Rome again. How what lies he published, or for want of judgemany years he lived, or whether he lived ment, thinking unworthily of the vertue that one whole year, in this voluntary banish- was far above him, Cato filled Rome with unment; it is uncertain. The report of his true Reports against his General; whose dying in the same year, with Hannibal and noble deeds confuted sufficiently the author Thilopamen, as also of his private behaviour of such false Tales. And thus began the haat Liternum, render it probable, that he out- tred: which being not regarded nor thought lived the Tribune-ship of his Accusers; who upon by the scipio's, whilst it was nourished meant to have drawn him back to his answer, by their enemy, brake out upon advantage, if one of their Colleagues (as one of them had especially against L. Scipio: his brother bepower to hinder all the rest from proceed- ing dead, or out of the way. A severe inquiing) had not caused them to desist. Howso- ry and judgment being appointed of purpose ever it was; the same Tribunes went more against Scipio, matters were so carried, that sharply to work with L. Scipio the Assatique. he was soon condemned in a sum of money, They propounded a Decree unto the People, far exceeding his ability to pay. For non paytouching money received of Antiochus, and ment his body should have been laid up in not brought into the common Treatury; that prison: but from this rigor of the Law, he the Senate should give charge unto one of was freed by Tiberius Gracchus, the same the Prætors, to inquire, and judicially deter | Tribune who had caused the suit against the

of the History of the World.

Tribunes, not humbly as one accused, but Oration was made by Cato, the supposed Aumine thereof. In tavour of this Decree, an African to be let fall. In his estate, which was confiscated to the use of the City, when the Commonweal receive no detriment. By this there neither appeared any fign of his having Decree of theirs, and by their proclaiming been beholding to Antiochus, nor was found any Citizen enemy to the State, they thought fo much as what he had been condemned to to have won a great advantage over the m. !pay; than fell his Accusers, and all whose titude. But after the death of C. Gracchus, hands had been against him, into the indig and of Saturnius, a popular man; whom by nation of the People. But for this was L. Scipio fuch authority they did put out of the was: no whit the better. His kindred, friends, it was not long ere Marius a famous Captain and Clients, made such a Collection for him, of theirs, wasto condemned, who by surce as would have fet him in better Estate than of arms returned into the City, and murbefore, if he had accepted it. He took no dered all the Principal Senators: whereupmore than such of his own goods, as were on began the Civil Wars; which giving unto of necessary use, being redeemed for him by Sylla, who prevailed therein, means to make his nearest friends. And thus began the Civil War of the Tongue far, a man of higher Spirit, to affect and obin the Roman pleadings; which had either not tain the like Soveraign Power, when by the been, or not been much regardable until like Decree of the Senate, he was provoked. now, fince the Punick War. Security of dan- It is true, that never any Conful had finally ger from abroad, and some want of sufficient cause to rejoyce, of his having put in execu-Employment, were especial helps to the kind tion such Authority to him committed by the ling of this fire; which first caught hold upon Senate. But as the fury of the multitude, in that Great Worthy, to whose Vertue Rome passing their Laws, by hurling of stones, and was indebted, for changing into fo great fecu- other violence, made the City stand in need rity her extream danger. But these factious of a Soveraign Lord: so the vehemency of contentions did no long while contain them the Senate, in condemning as Enemies, those felves within heat of words, and cunning that would not submit themselves, when they practice. For when the Art of leading the were over-topped by Voices in the House, multitude in such quarrelsome business, grew did compel Cafar, or give him at least preto perfection, they that found themselves tence, to right himself by Arms: wherewith overmatched by their Adversaries at this kind prevailing against his Adversaries, he took of weapon, began to make opposition first such order, that neither Senate nor People, with Clubs and Stones, afterward with (hould thenceforth be able to do him wrong. Swords; and finally, proceeded from frayes So by intelline discord, the Romans confusand murders in the streets, unto battel in the ming all or most of their principal Citizens, open field. Cornelia, Daughter of Scipio the lost their own freedom, and became sub-African, a Lady of rare Vertue, that in honour of her two Sons was more commonly named, Mother of the Gracehi, faw those her after this beginning of their insolent Rule, two Sons, whilest they were but young, wherein they took upon them as the highest slaughtered in Rome, together with some of Lords on earth, to do even what they listed. their friends: by those whom they opposed, Yet had not Rome indeed attained hitherto and their death not revenged by order of unto compleat Greatness, nor believed of her Law, but rather approved by the Senate. | felf, as if the had, whilft a King fate crowned At these times the Senators began to take on the Throne of Alexander, continuing and upon them Authority, more than was to upholding the Reputation of a former Emthem belonging. They conferred upon the pire. Wherefore this confummation of her Confuls all the whole power of the City, unhonour was thought upon betimes. Howit der this form, Let the Confuls provide, that was effected, the lequel will discover.

himself absolute Lord of Rome, taught Ca-

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

The Second Macedonian War.

6. I.

The Condition wherein thefe Princes and Fftates remained, which were Affociates of the Remans, when the War with Antiochus was finished. The Romans quarrel with Philip. They deal insolently with the Acheans, The Macedonian, being unready for War, obtains Peace at Rome, by his son Demetrius : of whom thenceforth he becomes jealous.

States of Greece, were governed by the same time questioned about any of his doings: his Laws and Migistrates as formerly had been, conformity unto them in matter of War and before the arrival of the Romans in those Peace, together with the diversion of their parts: yet in very truth (the publick De-thoughts another way, giving him leave to claration excepted) they were none other hold his own even as he lifted, until they than absolute Vaffals to the People of Rome. should otherwise dispose of him. Neither was For of those five Prerogatives belonging to a it a little available to him, that his Kingdom Monarch, or unto Soveraign Power, in bordered upon the Nations by them not whomfoever it rest; namely, To make Laws, throughly subdued. For upon the same rea-To create Magistrates, To arbitrate Peace and Son (as well as upon his own high deserts) War, to beat Money, and, To referve (as the were they very loving unto Mafanissa, and to French call it ) le dernier Reffort, or the last his House, until Cartharge was ruined, and Appeals, the Romans had assumed four ; and their Dominion settled in Africk: as likewise the greatest of them so absolutely, that is, afterwards to the Kings of Mauritania, Cap-The Appeal, or last refort, as every petty padocia, and others, holding people in subjeinjury offered to each other by the fore ction unto themselves, by the Ministry of named Kings or States, was heard and de- Kings; especially of such Kings, as were usetermined either by the Roman Embaila- ful and obsequious unto them. dours, or Commissioners, in those pla- Now the Macedonian was of a more noble ces whence the Complaint came, or other-temper, and shewed himself not forgetful of wife by the Senators themselves within his own former greatness, the honour of his Rome; from whose arbitriment, or direction. Race, or the high reputation of his Kingdom. if either King or Commonweals declined, He But such Magnanimity was none otherwise. or they were beaten, and inforced to obedi- construed by the Romans, than as want of ence; or had their Estates and Regalities due reverence to their estate, and a valuautterly diffolved. Nevertheless it is true, tion of himself against them: which in the that they had their own Laws, and Officers pride of their fortune, they could not enof their own ordaining: yet so, as neither dure. Wherefore notwithstanding that he the Laws were of force, when the Romans had lately given passage to their Armies thointerposed their will to the contrary, nei- row his, Country, prepared the wayes for ther was their election of Magistrates so free, them, and furnished them both with Victuals as that they had not therein especial re- and other things needful, to transport them gard unto the good pleasure of these their over the Hellespont into Asia, against Antiochus:

ral Estates of Greece did bow very gently : manded to abandon the Cities of Enus and either as being thankful for their delive- Maronea, with all Pieces and places demandrance from a Yoke more fensibly grievous; ed by any of his Neighbours; whereof maor, as being skilful in the Art of flattery, and ny of them he had lately conquered, by ditherein taking delight, fince therein con- rection or licence, even from the Romans fifted their chief hope of thriving; or, as be- themselves.

Fter the overthrow of Antiochus, al- ing more fearful of displeasing the strongest. though Philip of Macedon, Eumenes than miniful of their own honour. But En-King of Pergamus, the Commonweal meres living turther off, and being most obof the Acheans, and all other the fequious unto the Romans, was not of long yet upon the complaint of Eumenes and the And to such degree of servitude the seve- States of Thessaly and Thrace, he was com-

Thefe

Acheans

These Towns of Anus and Maronea had Romans were not without their own title : been part of Lylmachus his Kingdom: who lince Antiochus had gotten all the Country from Thrace Northwards, and to the North- thereabout, whilit Philip was busied in his west, extended his Dominion very far. He former war: and fince they, by their Viis thought to have made himself Lord of ctory, had gotten unto themselves all the Transformia: In which Province it is faid, title, which Antiochus thereto could pretend. * That innumerable Medals of Gold have Wherefore he only submitted his right unto been found in the age of our Grand-fathers, the good pleasure of the Senate : referring each of them weighing two or three Crowns, it unto their di position, Whether Anus and and stamped with his Image on the one Maronea should be set at liberty: whether fide, on the other fide with Victory. Of all left in his hand, or whether bestowed upon these Lordship, the pollession, or rather the Eumenes; who begged them as an appendix title (for he lived not to fettle his Estate in to Lylimachia and Chersonesus, that were al-Furofe) fell to Seleneus Nicanor by right of ready his by their gift. What they would de-War, wherein he vanquithed and slew Lysma- termine, he mig t easily perceive by the chus: as alto, by the like right I tolomy Ceran- demeanour of their Embassadours towards nus thought them his own, when he had him: who fitting as Judges between him and murdered selencus. But the inundation of all that made complaint upon him, gave fenthe Gaules, which the Kingdom of Mucedon tence against him in every controversie. Necould not fustain, did shortly and easily wash vertheleis he sent Embassadours to Rome, away from that Crown, together with the there to maintain his Right unto these more part of Thrace, all those heaps of Land Towns; wherein he thought, that equity (if newly thereto annexed. Somewhat of this it might prevail) was wholly on his fide. For was afterwards regained by Antigonus the he had holpen their Consuls in the War Son of Denetrius and his Succetiors: though against Antiochus and the Ætolian: wherein not much; for they were otherwise busied. whatsoever he had gotten for himself, was The fury of the Gauls being over-palt, those now taken from him by their Embassadors: Countries which lately had been oppressed and would they now deprive him of those by them, recovered their Liberty; and not two Towns, lying fo fitly for the guard of only held it, but learned, some of them, his Kingdom, which he had gotten to himespecially the Dardanians and wild Thraci- self out of the ruines of Antiochin, like as ans, to find their advantages, and make out of his own ruines, Antiochus had gotten use of them, even upon Macedon. Against in those quarters a great deal more? By the mischies commonly done by these, King such allegations either he was likely to prerhilip did provide the most convenient reme- vail, or at least to gain time, wherein he machia: and in the present question, the laid it even upon the Maronites: affirming, dies: by thutting up the ways, whereby the might bethink himself what he had to do. Dardanians might enter into his Kingdom; It was not long ere he had word from Rome, and by occupying Lysimachia, with some That the Senate were no more equal to him, other Towns in Thrace, which he fortified, than had been their Embassadors. Whereas Bulwarks of his own Country, against fore, considering how insolently the Marothe Barbarians. Now, although it beho-nites had behaved themselves, in pleadved him thus to do, for the defence of his ing against him for their Liberty, he took own estate: yet forasmuch as these Towns counsel of his own passion; and (as by nawere, in a manner, at absolute liberty, his ture he was very cruel) gave order to Onepossession of them was thought to partake masius, that was Warden of the Sea-coasts, more of violence than of justice. And in this to handle these Maronites in such fort, as they respect he was formerly accused by the Æto- might have little joy of the liberty by them lians, of wrongful usurpation and oppress- so earnestly defired. Onomastus employed tion, in his having occupied Lysimachia. Here- Cassander, one of the Kings men dwelling in to he made a good answer. That his Garri- Maronea, and willed him to let in the Thratondid only fave it from the Thracians: who, cians by night, that they might fack the as soon as he thence withdrew his men, did feize upon the Town, and ruine it. The done: but so ill taken by the Roman Embaslike perhaps he might have faid, touching sadors who had better notice than could Anin and Maronea; That they were places have been feared, of these proceedings; that unable to defend themselves, and Gates, by the King was by them directly charged with which the Barbarians might have entrance the crime, and called more strictly, than beinto his Kingdom. But this Plea had not came his Majesty, to an accompt. He would availed him, in the disputation about Lysi- have removed the blame from himself, and that they, in heat of their Factions, being ! some inclinable to him, othersome to Eumenes, had fallen into fuch outrage, that they regard would be born unto his person.

Whilest this business with the Macedonian hung in suspence, and whilest he, by his readiness to make submission, seemed likely hadcut one anothers throats. And hereof he to divert from himself some other way the willed the Embassadors to enquire among Roman Arms: the same Embassadors, that the Maronites themselves: as well knowing, had been Judges between him and his that they who furvived, were either his Neighbours, made their progress thorow the own friends; or fo terrified and amazed by rest of Greece; and took notice of the Conthe late execution of his vengeance among troversies, which they found between some them, that they durst not utter an offen- Estates in the Country. The greatest cause tive word. But he found the Romans more that was heard before them, was the comfivere, and more thorowly informed in the plaint of the banished Lacedemonians against business, than to rest contented with such the Achains. It was objected unto the Achaan answer. He was plainly told, That if he ans, That they had committed a grievous would discharge him elf of the Crime ob | flaughter upon many Citizens of Lacedamon: iefted, he must send Onomastus and Cassan- That unto this cruelty they had added a der to Rome, there to be examined as the Se- greater, in throwing down the Walls of the nate should think fit. This did not a little City: as also further, in changing the Laws, trouble him. Yet he collected his spirits, and and abrogating the famous Institutions of faid, That Caffander should be at their dispo | Lycurgus. Hereto Lycortas the Prætor of the fition : but concerning Onomastus, who had Acheans, made answer, That these banished notbeen at Maronea, nor near toit, he re- Lacedamonians, who now took upon them quested them not to press him, fince it stood to accuse the Nation that had once protectnot with his honour so lightly to give away ed them, were notoriously known to be the his friends. As for cassander, because he men, who had themselves committed that should tell no tales; He took order to have murder, whereof shamelesly they laid the him poyfoned by the way. By this we fee, blame upon others : the Acheans having not that the Doctrine which Machiavel taught only called those unto judgment, that were unto Cefar Borgia, to imploy men in mif- supposed to be chief Authors of a Rebellion chievous actions, and afterwards to destroy against both them and the Romans: and them when they have performed the mif- these Plaintiffs having slain them, upon prichief, was not of his own invention. All vate, though just hatred, as they were com-Ages have given us examples of this goodly ing to make answer for themselves. Concernpolicy, the latter having been apt Scho- ing their throwing down the walls of Lacelars in this Lesson to the more ancient: as demon, he faid it was most agreeable to Lythe Reign of Henry the Eighth, here in Eng- curgus his Ordinance : who, having perland can bear good witness; and therein swaded his Citizens to defend their Town especially the Lord Crommel, who perished by and liberty by their proper vertue, did inhithe same unjust Law that himself had de- bit unto them all kind of fortifications: as vised, for the taking away of another mans the Retraits and Nests either of Cowards, or (whereof Lacedamon had woful experience) Such actions of Philip made an unpleasant of Tyrants and Usurpers. Further he shewnoise at Rome, and were like to have ed, how the same Tyrants that had built brought upon him the war which he feared, thefe walls, and hemmed in the Spartans, had before he was ready to entertain it. Where- also quite abolished Lycurgus his Ordinanfore he employed his younger Son Demetrius ces; and governed the City by their own as Embalfadour unto the Senate: giving lawles Will. As for the Acheans; they com-him Instructions how to make answer to all municated their own Laws, which they held Complaints, and withall to deliver his own for the best, or else would soon change them, Grievances in such wise, that if ought were and take better, unto the Lacedamonians; amis, yet might it appear that he had been whom they found without Laws, or any tostrongly urged to take such courses. The lerable form of policy. For conclusion, Lyfum of his Embassage was, To pacifie the cortas plainly told App. Claudius, the chief Romans, and make all even for the present. of the Embassadours, That he and his Coun-Demetrius himself was known to be very actrymen held it strange, being friends and ceptable unto the Senate, as having been well faithful Allies of the Romans, to fee themapproved by them, when he was Hostage in selves thus constrained, to answer and give Rome: and therefore feemed the more likely account of their actions, as vaffals and flaves to prevail fomewhat; were it only, in that unto the People of Rome. For if they were indeed at Liberty: why might not the CHAP. V

fulpected his younger Son, as more Roman their aid, compelled Philopamens horse-man than his own ; and accordingly misconstrued to turn back, Philopemen himself had long all his doings. But ere we proceed unto the been fick of an Ague, and was then very hitter fruits of this jealousie, it will not be weak : yet the greatness of his courage that were in the mean time.

Acheans as well require to be fatisfied about prevail with them, but their private paffions. Greatness; and intimate, as they begun, that ties, into most base and fearful servility. the Liberty of their Friends was nothing All this made well for Philip of Macedon. worth, longer than should please themselves who, though he saw the Greeks very far from to ratifie it : then must the Acheans have re- daring to thir against those, by whom both course unto those Agreements that were he and they were kept in awe; yet was confirmed by Oath, and which, without per- he not without hope, that (few of them exjury could not be violated; as reverencing, cepted, whom the Romans, by freeing from and indeed fearing the Romans, but much his subjection, had made his implacable enemore, the immortal gods. To this bold an mies) in hearty affection all the Country fwer of Lycortas, Appius found little to reply. would be his, when foever he should take Yet taking state upon him; he pronounced, Arms, as shortly he was like to do. Young more like a Master than a Judge, that if the Demetrius, coming home from Rome, brought Acheans would not be ruled by fair means, with him the defired Ratification of Peace: and earn thanks whilest they might; they though qualified with much indignity foon thould be compelled with a mischief, to do following. He had been lovingly used at what was required at their hands, whether Rome, and heard with great favour in the Sethey would or no. This altercation was in nate. There, being counfounded with the the Parliament of the Acheans, which groun- multitude of objections, whereto his youth, ed to hear the Lordly words of Appins. Yet unskilful in the Art of wrangling, could not fear prevailed above indignation: and it readily make answer: it was permitted unwas permitted unto the Romans to do as to him, to read such brief notes as he had they lifted. Hereupon the Embassadours received from his Father, and out of those restored some banished and condemned men: the Senate were contented to gather satisbut the Roman Senate, very soonafter, did faction; more for Demetrius his own sake, make void all judgements of death or banish- as they then said, and wrote into Macedon, ment, that had been laid by the Acheans than for any goodness in the Defence. Such upon any Citizen of Lacedamon; as likewise pride of theirs, in remitting his faults at the they made it a matter of disputation, whe-intreaty of his Son, together with some infother or no the City and Territory of Lace- lence of his Son, growing (as appeared) damon should be suffered to continue a mem- from this favour of the Romans; did increase ber of the Achean Common-wealth: or, ta- in Philip his hatred unto Rome, and bred in ken from them, and made as it had been an him a jealousie of his too forward Son. To Estate by it self. By bringing such a matter set him forward in these passions, there came into question, the Romans well declared, dayly new Embassadors from Rome; some that they held it to depend upon their own bringing one Commandment, some another; will, how much or how little any of their and some requiring him to fulfill those things Confederates should be suffered to enjoy : which had been imposed upon him by their though by contributing sparta to the Coun- fore-goers. Neither were there wanting that cel of Achaia, they discovered no leis, as to observed his countenance: and when he had them seemed, the love which they bare unto fulfilled all that was required at his hands; the Achaians, than the power which they had yet laid it to his charge, that he had done

Into fuch flavery had the Greeks, and all Kings and Commonweals what soever, bordering upon any part of the Mediterranean Seas, reduced themselves, by calling in the Romans to their fuccour. They wanted not any ambitious respect; yet a great deal more the good counsel and perswasions of many chan was pleasing to his Father. So the ruwife and temperate men among them; they mour grew current through all Macedon, had also the examples of the Italians, Spa. That Perfens, the Elder Son of the King, mards, Gauls, and Africans, all subdued by should not succeed unto his Father, but that the Romans; and, by feeking Patronage, he Diadem should be conferred upon Demade meer Vassals; to instruct them, what meerins, if not by some other pretence, yet in the like case they should expect : yet could by meer favour of the Romans. This offended not the true reasons of Estate and Policy so not only Person, but Philip himself: who that which the Romans had done at Capua, and neighbouring hatred, which hath everas the Romans did bulie themselves, to take more bought Revenge at the price of seifaccount how things went at Lacedemon ? ruine, brought them from the honour which For if the Romans would stand upon their they enjoyed, of being free Princes and Ci-

things unwillingly, and would be obedient no longer than he needs must. With these Embassadours young Demetrius was converfant : rather perhaps out of simplicity, and for that they made much of him, than for

ø. I I.

contrary.

rake part against them in any controversie their eyes were witnesses. The first messenfelves from that Society, with purpose to set him, and behold the speciacle seeming so inred from communion with any other. This into the Theatre, that there they might faand either fide so far exasperated, that ry done to him, unrevenged. They durft little hope of agreement would be left. Up-not one trust another with the keeping of on the fame of their commotion and pro-ceedings; Philopamen, then Prætor of the vaultunder ground, that had been made for Acheans, levied such forces as he could in the custody of their Treasure. So thither hafte, and went against them. Many princi-they let him down fast bound, and with an pal Gentlemen of the Acheans, especially of Engine laid an heavy stone upon the mouth the Megalopolitans, were foon in a readi- of the Vault. There he had not stayed long. ness to wait upon him. Besides these, which ere his enemies had concluded his present were all or for the most part, horse; he had death. The Hangman of the City was let fome Auxiliaries out of Thrace and Crete, down unto him with a cup of poylon, which that usually were kept in pay. Thus accom- Philopemen took in his hand : and asking Panied, he met with Dinocrates, Captain of no more than whether the Horse-men were the Mession ; whom he charged, and escaped, and particularly whether Lycor-forced to run. But whilest his horse-men to was safe; when he heard an answer to were too earnest in following the chase; his mind, he said it was well: and so with a there arrived by chance a supply of five chearful countenance, drank his last draughed hundred from Messene, which gave new cou- He was seventy years old, and weakned rage unto those that fled. So the Enemies with long sickness, whereby the poylon began to make head again: and with the wrought the sooner, and easily took away help of those, who very seasonably came to his life. The Acheans, when they missed him amifs to speak of some memorable accidents would not suffer him to be negligent of their fafety, which had to willingly adventured themselves under his conduct. He took unon him to make the Retrait : and fuffering his horfe-men to pass along by him in a nar-The death of Philopoemen, Hannibal, and row lane, he often turned about against the Scipio. That the Military profession is of all Messenians; whom, the reputation and the other the most unhappy: notwithstanding knowledge of his great worth, did terrifie Some examples, which may seem to prove the from approaching over near to him. But it fell out unhappily, that being cast to ground by a fall off his horfe, and being with-HE Romans wantog other matter of all invery weak plight of body, he was unquarrel in the Continent of Course bed bline countries. quarrel in the Continent of Greece, had able to get up again. So the Enemies came of late been so peremptory with the Ache upon him, and took him; yet scarce beans; that they seemed not unlikely to lieved their fortune to be so good, although that should be moved. Hereupon the ger that brought these news to Messene; Mellenians, who against their will were an was so far from being believed, that he was nexed unto the Acheen Common-wealth, hardly thought to be in his right wits. having long been of a contrary Faction But when the truth was affirmed by many thereto; grew bold to withdraw them reports, all the City ran forth to meet up again the Estate of their own , seve- credible ! They caused him to be brought was the device of some that were power- tissie themselves with beholding him. The ful in their City; who finding the multi- greatest part of them had compassion on his tude only inclinable to their purpole, and mif-fortune : and in commemoration both of not over-ftrongly affected in the business, his virtue, and of the singular benefits by were careful to seek occasion of reducing him done unto them, especially in delivering things to fuch pass, that all their Citizens them from Nabis the Tyrant; began to mamight be entangled in a necessity of stand- nifest their good will for his delivery. Coning out, and of not returning to the Achean tran wife, Dinocrates and his Faction were League. And hereupon they began to defirous haltily to take away his life: because do some acts of hostility, whereby it was they held him a man implacable, and one probable that blood should be drawn, that would never leave any diffarce, or inju-

1001

ed with themselves, for that they had been sel to resort unto, he took the poison into his more mindful to preserve their own lives, hand, which he alwaies preserved for a sure than to look unto the fafety of fo excellent Antidote against the sharpest difeases of ada Commander. Whilest they were devising verse fortune; which being ready to swallow what to do in such a case : they got adver- down, he uttered these words : I will now wisatt of his being taken. All schala ((aid he) deliver the Romans of that fear which was by this report vehemently afflicted: halh so many years possess them; that fear. fo as Embaliadours were forthwith dif- which makes them impatient to attend the catched unto Meffene, craving his enlarge- death of anold man. This victory of Flaminius. ment: and yet preparation made withall, to over me, which am disarmed, and betrased inobtain it by force, in case that fair means to bis hands, shall never be numbered among the would not ferve. Licortas was chosen Ge- reft of his heroical deeds: No, it shall make it neral of the Army against Meffene : who manifest to all the Nations of the world . how coming thither, and laying siege to the far the ancient Roman virtue is degenerate Town, enforced it in short space to yield. and corruped. For such was the nobleness of Then Dinocrates knowing what he was to their forefathers, as when Pyrrhus invaded expect, laid hands upon himfelf, and made them in Italy, and was ready to give them batan end of his own life. The rest of those tel at their own door, they gave him knowledge that had been partakers in the murder : of the treason intended against him by poywere compelled to wait in bonds upon the fon; whereas thefe of a latter race, have emplorashes of Philopamen that were carryed home ed Flaminius, aman who hath heretofore been in folemn pomp to Megalopolis ; where they one of their Confuls, to practife with Prufias. conwere all of them flain at his funeral, as fa- trary to the honour of a King, contrary to his crifices to his Ghost whom they had offend- Faith given, and contrary to the Laws of Hofed, Q. Martins, a Roman Embassadour, was pitality, to flaughter or deliver up his own then in Grecce; whence, upon one occasion Guest. He then cursing the person of Prusas. or other, the Roman Embassadours were sel- and all bis, and desiring the immortal gods to dome absent. He would have intermed revenge his fidelity, drank off the poyson and led in this business of Messene, had not Ly- dyed. cortes made fhort work, and left him nothing todo.

minins fent Emballadour to Prulin King of of them, as great Captains as ever the world Bithinia : not to much to withdraw him had ; but not more famous than unfortunate. from profecuting the war against Eumenes, as | Certainly, for Hannibal, whose Tragedy we to entreat him that he would deliver Hanni- have now finished, had he been Prince of the bal, the most spightful enemy in all the world Carthaginians, and one who by his authority unto the Senate and People of Rome, into his might have commanded fuch supplies, as the hands. Pruftas (therein unworthy of the War which he undertook, required; it is Crown he wore ) did readily condescend: probable, that he had torn up the Roman or rather (as Livie thinks) to gratifie the Ro- Empire by the roots. But he was fo strongmans he determined either to kill Hannibal, ly crost by a cowardly and envious Faction or to deliver him alive to Flaminius. For at home, as his proper virtue, wanting pubupon the first conference between the King lick force to sustain it, did lastly dissolve it rected to guard and environ the lodging his Country and Common-weal.

in their flight, were marvelloully offend- therefore he law no way to escape, nor coun-

In this year alfo( as good Authors have reported ) to accompany Philopemen and Han-About the same time was T. Quintius Fla- nibal, died Scipio the African sthese being all and Fluminius, a troop of fouldiers were di- felf in his own, and in the common mifery of where Hannibal lay. That famous Captain Hence it comes, to wit, from the envy of having found cause before this to suspect the our equals, and jealousie of our Masters, be faith of Prulius, had devited some secret sal- they Kings or Common-weals, that there lies under ground to fave himself from any is no profession more unprosperous than treasonable and sudden assault. But finding that of men of war, and great Captains, now that all parts about him were fore-clo- being no Kings. For besides the envy and fed, he had recourse to his last remedy : which jealousie of men, the spoils, rapes, famine, he then was constrained to practise, as well slaughter of the innocent, vastation and to frustrate his enemies of their triumphing burnings, with a world of miseries laid on over him, as to save himself from their tor- the labouring man, are so hateful to God, as ture and merciless hands; who, as he well with good reason did Monluc the Marshal of knew, would neither respect his famous en- France confess, That, were not the mercies terprizes, his honour, nor his age. When of God infinite, and without refirition, it Patch Baffa Acomat ; Selins strangle Baffa gently : for having wrested the Scepter out were in vain for those of his profession to hope Mustapha ; and most of those Princes bring for any portion of them : feeing the cruelties , by to ruine the most of their Villers. Of the them permitted and committed, were also infi- Spanish Nation, the great Gonsalve, who drave nite. Howsoever, this is true, That the victo- the French out of Naples : and Ferdinando ries which are obtained by many of the grea- Cortese, who conquered Mexico, were crowntest Commanders, are commonly either ed with Nettles, not with Lawrel. The ascribed to those that serve under them, to Earls of Egmond and Horn had no heads left Fortune, or the cowardife of the Nation them to wear Garlands on. And that the against whom them serve. For the most of great Captains of all Nations have been others, whose virtues have raised them above paid with this Copper Coin; there are exthe level of their inferiours, and have fur- amples more than too many. On the conmounted their envy : yet have they been re- trary, it may be faid, That many have acwarded in the end, either with difgrace, ba- quired the State of Princes, Kings, and Empenishment, or death. Among the Romans we rours, by their great ability in matter of War. find many examples hereof; as Coriolanus, This I confess. Yet must it be had withall M. Livim, L. Amylim, and this our Scipio, in consideration, that these high places have whom we have lately buried. Among the been given or offered unto very few, as Greeks we read of not many that escaped rewards of their military virtue; though these rewards. Yealong before these times, many have usurped them, by the help and fait was a Legacy that David bequeathed un vour of those Armies which they commandto his victorious Captain Joab. With this ed. Neither is it unregardable, That the Tyfear Alexander feasted Fermenio, Philotas, and rants, which have oppressed the liberty of others; and prepared it for Antipater and free Cities: and the Lieutenants of Kings or Callander. Hereunto Valentinian the Empe- Emperours, which have traiteroufly cast rour invited Ætim: who, after many other down their Masters, and stepped up into victories, overthrew Attelia of the Hunnes, their feats; were not all of them good men of in the greatest battel for the well fight- war : but have used the advantage of some ing and resolution of both Armies, that commotion, or many of them by base and coever was struken in the world, for there wardly practices, have obtained those digfell of those that fought, beside run awaies, mities, which undeservedly were ascribed to an hundred and four core thousand. Here- their personal worth. So that the number upon it was well and boldly told unto the of those that have purchased absolute great-Emperour by Proximus, That in killing of ness by the greatness of their warlike virtue; Etius, he had cut off his own right hand is far more in feeming than in deed. Phocas with his left: for it was not long after, that was a Souldier, and by the help of the Maximus (by whose perswasion Valentinian Souldiers he got the Empire from his Lord flew Etim) murdered the Emperour; which Mauritius: but he was a coward; and, with he never durft attempt, Atim living. And, a barbarous cruelty, feldom found in any besides the loss of that Emperour, it is true, other than cowards, he slew first the chil-That with Atim, the glory of the Western dren of Mauritius, a Prince that never had Empire was rather diffolved, than obscu- done him wrong, before his face; and after red. The same unworthy destiny, or a far them Mauritius himself. This his bloody aspiworse had Bellisarius; whose undertakings ring was but as a debt, which was paid unto and victories were fo difficult and glorious, him again by Heraclius: who took from him as after-ages suspected them for fabulous. the Imperial Crown, unjustly gotten; and For he had his eyes torn out of his head by fet it on his own head. Leontius laid hold Justinian: and he died a blind begger. upon the Emperour Justine, cut off his Nose Narses also, to the great prejudice of Chri- and Ears, and sent him into bannishment: stian Religion, was disgraced by Justin. but Gods vengeance rewarded him with That rule of Cato against Scipio, hath been the same punishment, by the hands of Tiwell observed in every age since then, to wit, berius; to whose charge he had lest his own That the Common-weal cannot be accoun- men of war. Justine having recovered ted free, which standeth in awe of any one forces, lighted on Tiberius, and barbed him man. And hence have the Turks drawn after the same fashion. Philippicus commandanother Principle, and indeed, a Turkish ing the forces of Justine, murdered both the one, That every warlike Prince should ra- Emperour and his Son. Anastasius, the vasther destroy his greatest men of war, than falof this new Tyrant, surprised his Masuffer his own glory to be obscured by them. Ster Philippieus, and thrust out both his eyes. For this cause did Bajazes the second dis-

Yyyyyy 2

of the History of the World.

Priest. It were an endless and a needless work perity of her affairs did well witness, who in to tell, how Lee rewarded this Theodosius, all her dayes never received dishonour by how many others have been repaid with the cowardife or infidelity of any Commantheir own cruelty, by men alike ambi- der, by her felf chosen and imploved. tious and cruel; or how many hundreds, For as all her old Captains by Land died or rather thousands, hoping of Captains poor men, as Malbey, Randol, Drenry, Reade, to make themselves Kings, have by Gods Wilford, Layton, Pellam, Gilbert, Constable. justice miserably perished in the attempt. Bourchier, Barkeley, Bingham, and others: The ordinary, and perhaps the best way of so those of a later and more dangerous imthriving by the practice of Arms, is to take ployment, whereof Norrice and Vere were what may be gotten by the spoil of Ene the most famous, and who have done as great mies, and the liberality of those Princes honour to our Nation (for the means they and Cities, in whose service one hath well had ) as ever any did; those (I say ) with deserved. But scarce one of a thousand have many other brave Colonels, have left behind prospered by this course. For that obser- them (besides the reputation which they vation, made by solomon, of unthankfulness purchased with many travels and wounds ) in this kind, hath been found belonging to nor title nor estate to their posterity. As for all Countries and Ages : A little City, and the L. Thomas Burrough, and Peregrine Berie Feeld 9- a few men in it, and a great King came L. Willowghby of Ersby, two very worthy and against it, and compassed it about, and builded exceeding valiant Commanders, they brought Forts against it : And there was found a poor with them into the world their Titles and and wife man therein , and he delivered the Ci- Estates. ty by his wisdom: but none remembred this That her Majesty in the advancement of poor man. Great Monarchs are unwilling to her men of War did sooner believe other men Hereof I need not to produce examples: ter use than themselves. that of the two Scipio's being so lately recited.

the wars, which, for her own safety, she was hath honoured more Martial menthan all constrained to undertake, her Majesty had the Kings of England have done for this hunno less cause to use the service of Martial dred years. men both by Sea and Land, than any of her Predecessors for many years had: yet accord- Howard for his chargeable and remarkable ing to the destiny of that profession, I do not service, as well in the year 1588. as at Calin, remember that any of hers, the Lord Admi- the Islands, and in our own Sea; having first ral excepted, her eldest, and most prosperous commanded as a Captain, twice Admiral of a Commander, were either enriched, or Squadron, and twice Admiral in Chief. His otherwise honoured, for any service by them Majesty hath changed the Baronies of Montperformed. And, that her Majesty had many joy & Burley into Earldoms; and created sid-of his hands, he enforced him to become a advised, valiant, and faithful men, the prof-

pay great thanks, lest thereby they should than her self, a disease unto which many wise acknowledge themselves to have been in- Princes, besides her self, have been subject; I debted for great benefits: which the unwi- fay, that fuch a confidence, although it may fer fort of them think to savour of some im- seem altogether to excuse her Noble Nature, potency in themselves. But in this respect yet can it not but in some fort accuse her of they are often times couzened and abused ; weakness. And exceeding strange it were, which proves that weakness to be in them were not the cause manifest enough, that indeed, whereof they fo gladly shun the where the prosperous actions are so exceedopinion Contrariwise, free Estates are boun- ingly prized, the Actors are so unprosperous tiful in giving thanks, yet so, as those thanks and so generally neglected. The cause, I say are not of long endurance. But concerning which hath wrought one and the same effect other profit which their Captains have in all times, and among all Nations, is this, that made, by enriching themselves with the spoil those which are nearest the person of Princes of the Enemy, they are very inquisitive to (which Martial-men seldom are) can with no fearch into it; and to strip the well-deservers good grace commend, or at least magnifie a out of their gettings : yea most injuriously profession far more Noble than their own, to rob them of their own, upon a falle sup- seeing therein they should only mind polition; that even they whole hands are their Masters of the wrong they did unto most clean from such offences, have purloyn- others, in giving less honour and reward to ed somewhat from the common Treasury. men offar greater deserving, and of far grea-

But his Majesty hath already paid the greatest part of that debt. For besides the re-In my late Soveraigns time, although for lieving by Pensions all the poorer fort, he

He hath given a Coronet to the L. Thomas

ney Vicount, Knolles, Ruffel, Caren, Danvers, tion, that dwelt beyond the River of Danu-Arundel of Watder, Gerald, and Chichester, Ba- bins, to abandon their seat, and come to #### o. III.

who travelled up and down, seeking Illsria, and the Countries upon the Adriawhat work might be found about Greece, tick Sea, into Italy it felf. It was not known had received instruction from the Senate, to who should withit and them upon the way: use the utmost of his diligence in looking rather it was thought, that the scordife, into the Estate of Macedon. At his return and peradventure some others through home, that he might not seem to have disco- whose Country they were to pass, would vered nothing, he told the Fathers, That accompany them against the Romans, were Philip had done whatfoever they enjoyned it only in hope of spoil. Now to facilitate him: yet fo, as it might appear, that fuch the remove of thefe Baftarne from their his obedience would last no longer, than own habitations, into the Land of the Dartake his part : yet he provided as well as them in some small Expedition against those he could devife, against the necessity which wild people that bordered upon him, and hedaily feared. Such of his own people as stood worst effected toward him. dwelt in the maritime Towns, and gave him But these his counsels and proceedings for ske their dwelling, and removed them and in his own house. The Families and whole Townships, which he had caused much luring the Bastarne, a strong and hardy Na-sirst contained it self within words : he ha-rons, for their governments and services in the him with all their multitude: who, besides Netherlands, France, Ireland, and elsewhere. other great rewards, would help them to root out the Dardanians, and take possession of their Country. These were like to do him notable service aganst the Romans; be-Philip, making provision for war against the Romans, deals bardly with many of his own sub- being planted in those quarters by him, jeds. His negotiation with the Bastarne. His would bear respect unto him alone, The least cruelty. He suspecteth his Son Demetrius. De- benefit that could be hoped by their arrival, metrius acceled by his brother Perfeus; and mult be the utter extirpation of the Dardashortly after sain by his fathers appointment, nians; a people alwayes troublesome to the Philip repenteth bim of his fons death, whom Kingdom of Attedon, whenfoever they be findeth to have been innocent : and in- found advantage. Neither was it judged tending to revenge it on Perseus, he dieth. any hard matter, to perswade those Eastarna, by hope of spoil, and other incitements, Dintius Martius the Roman Embassador, unto a more desperate Expedition, through meer necessity should enforce him thereun- danians, upon the border of Macedon; a to. Headded further, That all the doings long and tedious journey unto them, that and sayings of that King , did wholly tend carried with them their wives and children: unto Rebellion, about which he was devi- Philip with gifts did purchase the good will fing. Now it was so indeed, that Philip much of some Thracian Princes, Lords of the repented him of his faithful obsequiousness Countries through which they were to pass. to the Romans, and forefaw their intent, And thus he fought means to strengthen which was, to get his Kingdom into their himself with the help of the wild Nations, own hands; which fafety of their honour, which neither knew the Romans, nor were if they could find convenient means; or known unto them; fince he was not like otherwise (as to him seemed apparent ) by to find assistance from any civil Nation, what means soever. He was in an ill case: about the whole compass of the Mediterraas having been already vanquished by them; nean Seas. But these devises were long ere having lost exceedingly both in strength they took effect: so as the Bastarnac came and reputation; having subjects that abhornot before such time as he was dead; his red to hear of War with Kome; and hav-death being the overthrow of that purpofe. ing neither neighbour nor friend, that, if In the mean time he neglected not the trainhe were theretourged, would adventure to ing of his men to war, and the exercise of cause to suspect that they would do but bad were miserably disturbed by the calamities fervice against the Romans, he compelled to that fell upon him, both in his Kingdom, try, whence these were transplanted, he filled against their wills to forsake their ancient with a multitude of Thracians, whose faith dwellings, and betake themselves to fuch he thought a great deal more affured against new habitations, as he in his discretion those enemies that were terrible to the Ma- thought meeter for them, were vertemently cedonians. Further, he devised upon al- offended at the change. Yet their anger at

ying

fervedly. This increased the hatred of the with the entrails, on the right hand, and the general, when the King in a barbarous and Arms of all the Kings of Macedon, from the base fury, mittrusting all alike whom he had very first original, were born before the injured, thought him elf unlike to be fafe, Army. Then followed the King between his dren of those Parents, whom tyrannically and they of his Guard; whom all the rest he had put to death. In the execution of of the Macedonians followed. Having perthis his unwanty pleafure, fome accidents, formed other ceremonies, that Army was dimore tragical then perhaps he could have vided into two parts: which under the defined, gave men cause to think (as they Kings two Sons, charged each other in mancould not in reason think otherwise ) that, her of a true fight; using poles, and the like, nor without vengeance poured on him from in stead of their pikes and accustomed wea-Heaven, he felt the like misery in his own pons. But in this present skirmish there children. It is hard to Gy what the Romans appeared fome extraordinary contention for intended, in the extraordinary favour which the victory: whether happening by chance, they shewed unto Demetrius, the Kings or whether the two Captains did overyounger Son. It may well be (though it may earnestly feek each to get the upper hand, be also suspected) that they had no purpose as a betokening of their good success in a to make and nourish diffention between the greater trial. Some small hurt there was brethren, but only to cherish the vertue and done, and wounds given, even with those towardlines of Demetrius; like as we find Stakes, until Perfeus his side at length reit in their Histories. But their notable fa- coyled. Persen himself was forry for this, your towards this young Prince, and his mu- as it had been some bad presage: but his tual respect of them, bred extream jealousie friends were glad, and thought, that herein the Fathers head. If any cultom of the of might be made good use. They were of Romans, the manner of their life, the fashion the craftier fort : who, perceiving which of their apparel, or the unlightly contriving way the Kings favour bent, and how all the and building (as then it was ) of the Town courses of Demetrin led unto his ownruine, of Rome, were jested at in ordinary dis- addressed their services to the more malicicourse and table-talk; Demetrism was sure ous and crafty head. And now they said, to be presently on fire, defending and that this victory of Demetrius would afford practing them, even in such points as rather matter of complaint against him; as if the needed excuse. This and his daily conversa- hear of his ambition had carryed him betion with their Embassadours as often as youd the rules of that solemn pastime. Each they came, gave his Father cause to think, of the brethren was that day to feast his that he was no fit partaker of any Counfel own companions, and each of them had spies held against them. Wherefore he commu- in the others lodging, to observe what was nicated all his devices with his elder Son faid and done. One of Perfew his Intelligen-Perfess: who fearing so much lest his bro cers behaved himself so indiscreetly, that ther should step between him and the success he was taken and well beaten by three or fion, converted wholly unto his destruction, four of Demetrius his men, who turned him that grace which he had with his Father, out of doors. After some store of wine, De-Perfers was then thirty years old; of a stirring metrins told his companions, that he would spirit, though much defective in valour. De- go vifit his brother, and see what chear he kept. They agreed to his motion, except- by his own virtue, at least wife from their opiing such of them as had ill handled his bro- nion thereof: so as by any impious practice, thers man : yet he would leave none of his he were more like to lose it wholly, than to train behind, but forced them all to bear increaseit. In this wretched pleading there him company. They, fearing to be ill re- wanted no fuch passions, as are incident to warded for their late diligence, armed them- fathers, children, and brethren, besides those felves fecretly to prevent all danger. Yet that are common to all Plaintiffs and Dewas there fuch good espial kept, that this fendants, before ordinary Judges. The King their coming armed was forthwith made pronouncedlike a Father, though a lealous known to Perfew: who thereupon tumul-tuoully locked up his doors, as if he stood in upon the excess or errour, whatsoever it fear to be affaulted in his house. Demetrius were, of one day and night, nor upon one wondred to see himself excluded, and fa- hours audience of the matter, but upon betred very angerly with his brother. But Fer- ter observation of their lives, manners, and (cas bidding him be gone as an enemy, and whole carriage of themselves both in word he bore a due respect unto his Father, and donians. For proof hereofhe cited a Letter, well to fend him thither again, accompanied one whose murdrous purpose was detected, and deed. And herein he may seem to have fent him away with an entertainment no dealt both justly and compassionately. But better than defiance. The next day the mat- from this time forward he gave himfelf over ter was brought before the King. The elder wholly to Perseus : using so little conference brother accused the younger unto the Father with his younger Son, that when he had matof them both. Much there was alledged, ters of weight in hand, such especially as conand, in effect, the same that hath been here cerned the Romans, he liked neither to have recited, fave that by misconstruction all was him present, nor near unto him. Above all, he made worse. But the main point of the accu- had especial care to learn out what had palfation, and which did aggravate all the rest, sed between Demetrius and T. Quintius, or was, That Demetrius had undertaken this any other of the Roman great ones. And to murder, and would perhaps also dare to un- this purpose he sent Embassadours to Rome, dertake a greater, upon confidence of the Philocles and Apelles; men whom he thought Romans ; by whom he knew that he should no way interested in the quarrels between be defended and born out. For Perfess made the brethren, though indeed they altogether shew, as if the Romans did hate him; because depended on the elder, whom they saw the more in grace. These brought home with was forry to fee him spoiled, and daily robbed them a Letter, faid to be written by Titus of somewhat by them. And for this cause he (whose seal they had counterfeited) unto the faid it was, that they did animate his brother King. The contents whereof were, A depreagainst him : as also that they sought how to cation for the young Prince; with an intimawin unto Demetrius the love of the Mace tion, as by way of granting it, That his youthful and ambitious defires had caufed fent of late from Titus Quintius to the King him to enter into practices unjuftifiable, himself: whereof the contents were, That against his elder brother, which yet should he had done wisely insending Demetrius to never take effect : for that Titus himself Rome; and that he should yet further do would not be author, or abettor of any impious device. This manner of excuse did forwith a greater and more honourable train of cibly perswade the King to think his Son a Macedonian Lords. Hence he enforced, dangerous Traitor. To ftrengthen him in this That this counsel was given by Titus, of pur- opinion, one Didas, to whom he gave Demepose to shake the allegiance of those, that trius in custody, made shew as if he had pithould wait upon his brother to Rome; and tied the estate of the unhappy Prince, and fo make them, forgetting their duties to their wrung out of him his secret intentions, which old King, become servants to this young he shortly discovered unto Philip. It was the Traitor Demetrius. Hereto Demetrius made purpose of Demetrius to fly secretly to Rome; answer; by rehearling all passages of the day where he might hope not only to live in safeand night foregoing, in such manner as he re-ty, from his father and brother, but in greamembred them, and had conceived of them: ter likelihood, than he could find at home, bitterly reprehending Persew, that con of bettering such claim as he had in reversion verted matters of pastime, and what was done or spoken in wine, to such an accusa- hopes and meanings were, all came to nought tion, whereby he fought his innocent bro-through the falfnood of Didas; who, playing thers death. As for the love which the Ro- on both hands, offered unto the Prince his mans did bear him, he said that it grew, if not help for making the escape, and in the mean while while revealed the whole matter to the in a more equal ballance. Then found he no. King. So Philip resolved to put his Son to ching that could give him tatisfaction, or he death, without further expence of time. It good probability induce him to think, that was thought behoveful to make him away malice had not been contriver of the whole privily, for fear left the Romans thould take process. His only remaining Son Perfere the matter to heart, and hold it as a proof could so ill diffemble the pleasure which he fufficient, at least, of the Kings despight took in being freed from all danger of comagainst them, if not of his meaning to renew the war. Didas therefore was commanded to rid the unhappy Prince out of his life. This accurfed minister of his Kings unadvised fenrence, first gave poyson to Demetrius : which wrought neither fo haltily, nor fo fecretly, as was defired. Hereupon he sent a couple of Ruffians, to finish the tragedy: who villainoully accomplished their work, by smothering that Prince, in whose life consisted the more diligently courted, than in former greatest hope of Macedon.

1098

been found a King, that had thus cruelly for old Philip, he was left in a manner dealt with any Prince of his own blood. The defolate, some expecting his death, and houses of Lysimachus and Cassander fell some scarce enduring the rediousness of such either with themselves, or even upon their expectation. This bred in the King a deep heels; by intestine discord and jealousies, melancholy; and filled his head with suspigrounded on defire of foveraign rule, or tious imagination; the like whereofhe had fear of losing it. By the like unnatural ha- never been flow to apprehend. He was tred, had almost been cut off the lines of much vexed : and so much the more, for Ptolomy and of Selencus : which, though nar- that he knew neither well to whom, nor perrowly they escaped the danger, yet were feetly whereof to complain. One honourable their Kingdoms thereby grievoully diftem- man, a Couzen of his, named Antigonis, pered. Contrariwife, it was worthy of extra- continued fo true to Philip, that he grew ordinary note, how that upftart family of the thereby hateful to Perfeus: and thus becom-Kings of Pergamus had raifed it felf to mar- ing subject unto the same jealous impressions vellous greatness, in very short space, from which troubled the King, became also the condition of meer the confeders, whereof a partaker of his secrets. This Counsellor, principal caute was, the brotherly love maintained by them, w th fingular commendation of their piety. Neither was Philip ignorant of these examples, but is said to have propounded the last of them to his own of the treason objected; as also that Philo-Certainly he had reason so to do : not more had brought from Rome that Epistle of Fla-

petition: as there might easily be perceived in him a notable change, proceeding from tome other cause, than the remove of those dangers which he had lately pretended. The Romans were now no less to be feared than at other times; when he, as having accomplished the most of his desires, left off his usual trouble of mind, and carefulness of making provision against them. He was times, by those that well understood the dif-In all the race of Antigonus there had not ference between a rifing and a fetting Sun. As when he found that the anger conceived against Persess would not vent it felf, and give ease to the King, until the truth were known whether Demetrius were guilty or no children, as a pattern for them to imitate cles and Apelles ( the Embassadours which in regard of the benefit which his enemies minim, that ferved as the greatest evidence reaped by their concord, than in remem- against Demetrius) were suspected of forgery brance of the tender fosterage, wherewith in the business: made diligent enquiry after King Antigonus his Tutor had faithfully the truth. In thus doing he found one cherished him in his minority. But he was Xychue, a man most likely to have understood himself of an unmerciful nature; and there- what false dealing was used by those Embasfore unmeet to be a good perswader unto sadors. Him he apprehended, brought to the kindly affection. The murders by him done Court, and prefented unto the King: faying, upon many of his friends, together with the that this fellow knew all, and must therebarbarous outrages, which for the fatiating fore be made to utter what he knew. Xychus of his blood-thirity appetite, he delightful- for fear of torture, uttered as much as was ly had committed upon many innocents, both | before suspected: confessing against himself, strangers and subjects of his own ; did now that he had been employed by the Embasiaprocure vengeance down from Heaven, dours in that wicked piece of business. No that rewarded him with a draught of his marvel if the Fathers passions were extreme, own poyson. After the death of his Son, when he understood that by the unnatural he too late began to examine the crimes that practice of one Son, he had so wretchedly had been objected; and to weigh them cast away another, far more virtuous and innocent. He raged exceedingly against himfelf, and withall against the Authors of the mischief. Upon the first news of this discovery, Apelles fled away, and got into Italy; philocles was taken: and either forasmuch as he could not deny it when Xythus confronted him, yielded himself guilty; or else was put to torture. Perseus was now grown the difference between the imaginary happiwho also concealed it a while from those to their own Country. that were about the Court. So Perfess came thither on the fudden, and took possessily gotten.

6. I V.

haviour of Perseus in the beginning of his became more obnoxious to Rome, than in delightful spectacles, magnificently by him former times. Further quarrels to Perteus. He feeks frinedship of the Acheans, and is with tood by Callicrates. The Romans discover their intent of warring TMmediately upon the death of Philip, came the Baftarna into Thrace; where order itronger, than that he should need to fly the had been taken, long before, both for the Country: yet not so flout as to adventure free passage, and for the indempnity of himself into his fathers presence. He kept on the Country. This Compact was friendly the borders of the Kingdom towards Thrace, observed, as long as no other was known whilft his father wintred at Demetries. Philip than that Philip did live to recompense all therefore, not hoping to get into his po- that should be done, or sustained, for his ferwer this his ungracious Son, took a reso vice. But when it was heard, that a new. lution, to aliene the Kingdom from him, King reigned in Macedon 5 and not heard and confer it upon Antigonia. But his weak withal, that he took any care what became body, and excessive grief of mind, so dif of the enterprize : then was all dasht and conabled him in the travel thereto belonging, founded. The Thracians would no longer that ere he could bring his purpose to effect, afford so good markets unto these strangers. he was conftrained to yield to nature. He as formerly they had done. On the other had reigned about two and forty years: al fide, the Bastarne would not be contented waies full of trouble; as vexed by others, with reason, but became their own carvers. and vexing himself with continual wars; of Thus each part having lost their rich hopes which that with the Romans was most un-reposed in Philip, grew careful of thriving in happy, and few or none of the rest found the present; with little regard of right or the conclusion, which a wise Prince would wrong. Within a while they fell to blows have defired, of bringing forth together and the Baftarne had the upper hand, fo as both honour and profit. But for all the they chased the Thracions out of the plain evil that befell him, he might thank his Countrys. But the victors made little use of own perverse condition : fince his Uncle, their good fortune. For whether by reason King Antigonus, had left unto him an estate, of some overthrow, received by them in affo great, and so well settled, as made it easie faulting a place of strength; or whether befor him, to accomplish any moderate desires, cause of extream bad weather, which is said if he had not abhored all good counsel, to have afflicted them as it were miraculous-Wherefore he was justly punished by feeling ly : all of them returned home, save thirty thousand, which pierced on into Dardania. ness of a Tyrant, which he affected, and How these thirty thousand sped in their vovthe life of a King, whereof he little cared to age, I do not find. It seems that by the careperform the duty. His death, even whilst less using of some victories, they drew loss yet it was only drawing near, was fore-figni- upon themselves: and finally took that ocfied unto Perfeus, by Caligenes the Physitian, casion, to follow their companions back in-

As for Perfew, he thought it not expedient, in the novelty of his reign, to embroil on of the Kingdom : which in fine he no less himself in a war so dangerous, as that with improvidently loft, than he had wicked the Romans was likely to prove. Wherefore he wholly gave his mind to the fettling of his Estate, which well done, he might, afterwards accommodate himfelf, as the condition of his affairs should require, either for How the Baftarnæ fell upon Dardania. The be- war or peace. To prevent all danger of rebellion, he quickly took away the life of Anreign. Some wars of the Romans: and how tigonus. To win love of his people, he fate they suffered Masanissa cruelly to oppress the personally to hear their causes in judgement, Carthaginians. They quarrelled with Per- (though herein he was fo over-diligent and feus. They allow not their Confederates to curious, that one might have perceived this make war without their leave obtained. The his vertue of justice to be no better than fai-Treason of Callicrates, whereby all Greece ned ) as also he gratified them with many necessity of war with Rome : and therefore made lamentable complaint unto the Romade it his first work, to send Embassadors man Senate. They shewed how grievously thirder to renew the league; which he ob- they were oppressed by reason of two Artained, and was by the Senate faluted King, ticles in their League : That they should not and friend unto the State. Neither was he make war out of their own Lands; nor with negligent in feeking to purchase good will of any Consederates of the Romans. Now althe Greeks, and other his neighbours: but though it were so that they might lawfulwas rather herein so excessively bountiful, ly withstand the violence of Masanissa, inthat it may feem a wonder how in few years, vading their Country, howfoever he was to his utter ruine, he became so griping and pleased to call it his : yet since he was Contenacious. His fear was indeed the mastring federate with the Romans, they durst not passion, which over-ruled him, and changed him into fo many thapes, as made it hard to but fuffered themselves to be eatenup, for difcern which of his other qualities were naturally his own. For proof of this, there is Wherefore they intreated, that they might requifite no more, than the relation of his have fairer justice; or be suffered to de-actions past and following.

The Romans continued, as they had long, bufie in wars against the Spaniards and Ligurians; people often vanquished, and as often breaking forth into new rebellion. They also conquered Istria; subdued the rebelling Sardinians; and had some quarrels, though to little effect, with the Illyrians and others. Over the Carthaginians they bore (as ever fince the victory) a heavy hand: and Suffered Masanissa to take from them what he listed. The Carthaginians; like obedient Vaffals to Rome, were affraid, though in defence of their own, to take arms: from what should be appointed by such Judges; which they were bound by an Article of than continually to live in fear, and none peace, except it were with leave of the Romans. Masanissa therefore had great advanthis Numidian Hangman. And herewithal tage over them, and was not ignorant how to the Embaffadors threw themselves proftrate use it. He could get possession by force, of on the ground, weeping; in hope to move whatfoever he defired, ere their complain- compaffion. ing Embassadors could be at Rome : and then Here may we behold the fruits of their were the Romans not hardly entreated to envy to that valiant house of the Barchines; leave things as they found them.

from them the Country of Emporia: and fo did he use them again and again: with pretence of title, where he had any ; otherwise, without it. Galathe Father of Masanissa had won fome land from the Carthaginians; which afterward Syphax wan from Gala fet forth. Above all, he had care to avoid all right. Hereof by their Embaffadors, they presume to bear defensive arms against him fear of incurring the Romans indignation. fend their own by strong hand; or at least, if right must wholly give place to favour, That the Romans yet would be pleafed to determine, how far forth Masanissa should be allowed to proceed in these outrages. If none of these petitions could be obtained. then defired they, that the Romans would let them understand, wherein they had offended fince the time that Scipio gave them peace; and vouchfafe to inflict on them fuch punishment as they themselves in honour should think meet : for that better and more to their comfort it were, to fuffer at once otherwise draw breath, than at the mercy of

of their irrefolution in profecuting a war fo So had he once dealt before, in taking important, as Hannibal made for themin Italy; and of their half-penny-worthing in matter of expence when they had adventured their whole estate in the purchase of a great Empire. Now are they fervants, even to the fervants of those men, whose fathers they have often chased, slaip, taken and sold as bondand within a while, restored to the right lilaves in the streets of Carthage, and in all Ciowners, for love of his wife Sophonisba, and ries of Africk and Greece. Now have they of Afdrubal his father-in-law. This did Ma- enough of that Roman peace, which Hanno fo fanissa take from them by force: and by the often and so carneftly defired. Only they Ransans ( to whose judgement the case was | want peace with Masanisa , once their merreferred) was permitted quietly to hold it cenary, and now their mafter or rather their The Carthaginians had now good experi- comentor out of whose cruel hands, they beence, how beneficial it was for their Estate, seech their masters to take the office of corto afe all manner of submiffive obedience to recting them. In such case are they and adore Rame. They had fearcely digested this in- the Romans, whom they see flourishing in such jury, when Masanissa came upon them prosperity as might have been their own. But again, and took from them above feventy the Romans had far better entreated Varro, Towns and Castles, without any colour of who lost the battel at Canne ; than Hannibal ans, having fought against their betters, must patiently endure the miseries belonging to the vanquished. Their pitiful behation; yet their tears may feem to have been mistrusted, as proceeding no less from envy to the Romans, than from any feeling of their own calamity. They thought themselves able to fight with Masanisa: which estimation of their forces was able to had not been unmindful of Perfews. They vicomparisons with Rome. Wherefore they with honourable spies to observe his behaviobtained not fuch leave as they fought, of our. These he entertained kindly at first, the reason of his coming; and had related unmians against his Father. He answered, That his Father not being throughly aware of known, that the Carthaginians had held Councel divers nights, in the Temple of Ælculatius: whereupon he himself was dis-Romans, and of his Father, might not be overmuch trusted; especially against his Father, whom they hated most maliciously, for his constant faith to the people of Rome. This answer gave little satisfaction. Wherefore the Senate replyed, that for Masanisia his

that wan it was used by the Carthaginians : | willed him to tell his Futher, that he should they had freely bestowed, every man of do well to fend Embassadors, more fullvinthem, all his private riches upon the Com- structed in this matter. This happened when mon-wealth; and employed their labours for the Macedonian war was even ready to the publick, without craving recompence: begin: at which time the Romans were not as also they had not thought it much, though willing too much to offend, either the Carbeing in extream want, to fet out an Army thaginians ( for feat of utging them unifeafointo Spain, at what time the enemy lay under nably to rebellion ) or Mafaniffa, at whose their own walls. These were no Carthagini- hands they expected no little help. So were an vertues : and therefore the Carthagini- they aided both by the Carthaginians and Masanissa : by the Carthaginians, partly for fear, partly for hope of better usage in the future : by Mafanilla, in way of thankfulnes : viour bred peradventure some commisera- though if it had happined (which was unlikely) that they should be vanguished; he made none other account, than that all Africk round about him, and Carthage therewithall, should be his own.

In the midft of all these cares, the Romans make them, after a little while, enter into fited him daily with Embaffadors; that is, defending their own right by arms : but until (which fell out ere long) he perceived contrariwise, when without leave obtained, whereto their diligence tended. First they they presumed so far, the destruction of car- quarrelled with him about the troubles in thage was thought an easie punishment of Dardania: neither would they take any satisthat offence. At the present, they received faction, until the Bastarna were thence gone : agentle answer; though they had other wife though he protested, that he had not sent for little amends. Guluffa the Son of Mafaniffa them. Afterward they pried narrowly into was then in Rome, and had not as yet crav- his doings; and were no less ill contented ed audience. He therefore was called be- with good offices, by himdone, to fundry of fore the Senate; where he was demanded his neighbours, than with those wrongs, which (they faid ) he did unto other some. to him the complaint made by the Carthagi- Where he did harm to any; they called it making war upon their friends. Where he did good; they called fuch his bounty, feeking any Embassadors thither sent from Carthage, friends to take his part against them. The had therefore not given him instructions, Dolopians, his subjects, (upon what occasion how to deal in that business. Only it was it is uncertain) rebelled, and with exquisite torments flew Euphranor, whom he had appointed their Governour. It feems that Enphranor had played the Tyrant among them. patched away to Rome, there to intreat the For they were a people without strength to Senate, that these common enemies of the result the Macedonian : and therefore unlikely to have prefumed far, unless either they had been extreamly provoked; or elfe were recretly animated by the Romans. Whatfoever it was that bred this courage in them. Perfews did foon allay it, and reclaim them by strong hand. But the Romans took very aufake, they had done, and would do, whatfo- gerly this prefumption of the King : even as ever was reasonable, but that it stood not it he had invaded some Country of their Itawith their justice, to allow of this his vio- lian Confederates, and not corrected his lence, in taking from the Carthaginians, those own rebels at home. Fain they would have Lands, which by the covenants of the League had him to draw in the fame yoke with the were granted unto them freely to enjoy. Carthaginians; whereunto had he humbled With this mild rebuke they difmiffed Gu- once his neck, they could themselves have Insia; bestowing on him friendly presents (as done the part of Masanissa; though Enmenes, also they did on the Carthaginians ) and or some other fit for that purpose , had been wanting. And to this effect, they told him, not with standing; when Lycortas Prettor of That the Conditions of the League be- the Acheans had utterly subdued the Mel. tween them were such as made it unlawful fenians far sooner than was expected; and both to his Father heretofore, and now to when as not only no Town rebelled from the him, to take arms without their licence first Acheans, but many entered into their Corobtained.

Zzzzzz 2

RAP. VI.

To the same pass they would also fain favoured grace, tell the same Embassadors have reduced the Greeke, and generally all to whose petition they had made such had their adherents, even fuch as had entred in- answer (and who as yet were not gone out to league with them upon equal terms: whom of the City,) That they had straightly forusually they rewarded with a frown, when bidden all manner of succour to be carried to soever they presumed to right themselves Messene. Thus thinking, by a fained graby force of Arms, without feeking first the vity, to have served their own turns, they Oracle at Rome. Hereof the Acheans had manifested their condition : both to fer on good experience: whose confidence in their the weaker against the stronger and more proper strength, made them otherwhiles suspected, and also to assume unto thembold to be their own carvers; and whose hope selves a Soveraign power, in directing all of extraordinary favour at Rome caused matters of war, which diffemblingly they them the more willingly to refer their causes would have seemed to neglect. In like manto arbitrement. For when they went about | uer dealt they with all their Confederates: to have chastisfed the Messenian by War; not permitting any of them to make war; T. Quintius rebuked them, as too arrogant, in whether offensive or defensive; though it taking such a work in hand, without his au- were against meer strangers; without inthority: yet by his authority he ended the terpoling the authority of the Senate and matter, wholly to their good liking. Sem people of Rome: unless peradventure. fomeblably at other times were they reprehend- times they winked at fuch violence, as did ed, even with Lordly threats, when they help towards the accomplishment of their took upon them to carry any business of im- own secret malice. Now these Roman Arts. portance, by their own power, without stand- howsoever many ( for gainful or timerous ing unto the good grace of the Romans. Who respects ) would seem to understand them: nevertheless upon submission, were apt yet were generally displeasing unto all enough to do them right. Thus were they men endued with free fpirits. Only the tamed by little and little, and taught to for- Athenians, once the most turbulent City in get their absolute liberty, as by which they Greece, having neither subjects of their own were not like to thrive; especially in usurp- that might rebell, nor power wherewith ing the practice of arms, which belonged only to bring any into fubjection; for want of to the Imperial City. In learning this hard lef- more noble argument wherein to practice fon they were such untoward Schollers, that their eloquence that was become the whole they needed, and not long after felt, very remainder of their ancient commendations, Pion. 14. Sharp correction. Yet was there no small part were much delighted in flattering the most bufiness no way concerning them.

fall into much distress : were it not upheld break.

poration; then did the Romans with an illof blame to be imputed unto their Masters, mighty. So they kept themselves in grace For the Roman Senate, being defirous to hum- with the Romans, remaining free from all ble the Acheans, refused not only to give trouble, until the war of Mithridates: them fuch aid as they requested, and as they being men unfit for action, and thereby challenged by the tenor of the League be- innocent; yet bearing a part in many great eweenthem; but further, with a carelessin- actions, as Gratulators of the Roman vicefolency, rejected this honest and reasonable ories, and Pardon-cravers for the vanpetition, That the Enemy might not be sup- quished. Such were the Athenians become. plied from Italy, with victuals or arms. Here- As for those other Common-weals and with not content, the Fathers, as wearied Kingdoms, that with over-nice diligence, with dealing in the affairs of Greece, pronoun- strove to preserve their Liberties and Lands ced openly, That if the Argives, Lacedamonifrom confuming by piece-meal: they ann, or Gorinthians would revolt from the were to be devoured whole, and swal-Acheans; they themselves would think it a lowed up at once. Especially the Macedomian, as the most unpliant, and wherein This was presently after the death of Phi- many of the Greeks began to have affiance, longuen: at what time it was believed, that was necessarily to be made an example, how the Common-wealth of Achaia was like to much better it were to bow , than to by countenance of the Romans. All this Neither Perfew, nor the Romans were ig-porant,

affected. Perfer, by reason of his neer neigh- authority than himself therein. Wherefore hourhood, and of the daily commerce be- instead of well discharging his credence, and tween them and his subjects, could not alledging what was meetest in justification want good information of all that might of his people, heuttered a quite contrary tale; concern him, in their affairs. He wellknew, and strongly encouraged the Romans, to opthats Il of them now apprehended the dan- press both the Acheans, and all the rest of ger which Philopemen had long fince fore- Greece, with a far more heavy hand. He told told, of the miserable subjection, whereinto the Senate, that it was high time for them to Greece was likely to be reduced, by the look unto the fetling of their authority. Roman Patronage. Indeed they not only among his froward Countrimen: if they perceived the approaching danger, but as meant not wholly to forego it. For now being tenderly fentible of their liberty, felt there was taken up a custome, to stand upon themselves grieved with the present subject- points of consederacy, and laws: as if these ion, whereto already they were become ob- were principally to be had in regard, any innoxious. Wherefore though none of them junction from Rome notwithstanding. had the courage, in matters of the publick Hence grew it, that the Acheans, both now. to fall out with the Romans; yet all of them and at other times, did what best pleased had the care to choose among themselves themselves, and answered the Romans with none other Magistrates, than such as affect- excuses: as if it were enough to say. That ed the good of their Country, and would for by some condition of League, or by sorae no ambition, or other servile respect, be flat- of some Law, they were discharged or terers of the greatness which kept all in fear. hindred from obeying the Decrees of the Thus it feemed likely, that all domestical Senate. This would not be so, if he, and consoiracies would soon be at an end; when some other of his opipion might have their honesty, and love of the Common-weal, be- wills: who ceased not to affirm. That no came the fairest way to preferment. Of this Columns, or Monuments, erected, nor no careful provision for the safety of Greece, the solemn oath of the whole Nation, to ratifie Romans were not throughly advertised: the observance of Confederacy or Statute, either because things were diligently con- ought to be of force, when the Romans cealed from their Embassadors; whom all willed the contrary. But it was even the menknew to be litle better than spies; or fault of the Romans themselves, that the because little account was made of that in- multitude resused to give ear unto such pertelligence, which was brought in by fuch swasions. For howsoever in popular Estates, Traitors ( of whom every City in Greece had the found of liberty used to be more plaufitoo many ) as were men unregarded among ble, than any discourse tending against it: their own people, and therefore more like to yet if they which undertook the mainfpeak maliciously than truly 3 or perhaps tenance of an argument, seeming never so because the Embassadors themselves, being bad, were sure by their so doing, to pro-all Senators, and capable of the greatest Of-cure their own good; the number of them fice or charge, had no will to find out other would increase apace, and they become the matter of trouble, than was fitting to their prevalent faction. It was therefore, strange own defires of employment. But it is hard how the Fathers could fo neglect the adto conceal that which many know, from vancement of those, that fought wholly to those that are feared or flattered by many. enlarge the amplitude of the Roman Maje-Rome, that should both excuse them, as touch- rebellious purpose, did the Greeks; who ma-norant, how the Greeks at this time stood Country, than to let any other be of more

The Acheans being to fend Embassadors to sty. More wisely, though with seditious and ing some point wherein they refused to obey ny times, yea and ordinarily, conferred great the Senate; and inform the Senate better in honours, upon men otherwise of little acthe same business: chose one Callicrates, count or desert, only for having uttered some among others, to go in that Embassage. By brave words against the Romans. The Fathers their making choice of such a man, one may hearing these and the like reasons, wherewith perceive the advantage, which mischievous he exhorted them to handle roughly those wretches, who commonly are forward in pur- that were obstinate, and by cherishing their fuing their vile defires, have against the friends, to make their party strong; resolplain fort of honest men, that least earnestly ved to follow this good counsel, in every thrust themselves into the troublesome bu- point; yea to depress all those that held finels of the weal-publick. For this Callicrates with the right, and to fet up their own folwas in such wise transported with ambition, lowers, were it by right or by wrong. And that he chose much rather to betray his to this end, they not only dealt thenceforth had been their manner in former times; but some acts of hostility in his passage. Yet, as wrote at the present unto all Cities of Greece, if he ought not to have taken such a journey. requiring them to fee that their mandate without their licence; this also was made a (which was concerning the restitution of valuable matter, and cast into the heap of those that were banished out of Lacedemon) his faults. He laboured greatly to recover the should be fulfilled. Particularly in behalf of love of the Acheans: which his Father had fo Callicrates, they advised all men to be such, lost, that by a solemn decree, they forbade and to affected, as he was, in their feveral any Macedonians to enter their territories. common-weals. With this dispatch, Calli- It was jealousie perhaps, no less than hatred. crate: returned home a joyful man: having which caused them, at the first, to make such brought his Country into the way of ruine, a decree. For howfoever Philip had by mabut himself into the way of preferment. Ne- my vile acts, especially by the death of the vertheleishe forbore to vaunt himfelf of his two Arati, given them cause to abhor him. eloquence used in the Senate. Only he fore- yet in the publick administration of their ported his Embassage, that all men became estate, he had, for the more part, been to fearful of the danger, wherewith he threat- them fo beneficial, that not without much ned those that should presume to oppose the ado, and at length, without any general con-Romans. By such Arts he obtained to be made fent, they resolve to forsake him. Where-Prator of the Acheans: in which Migi-fore it was needful, even for preservation of stracy, as in all his courses following, he concord among them, to use all circumspeomitted nothing, that might ferve to manifest, crion, that he might not, by his agents, negohis re ady obsequionsness unto those whom tiate, and hold intelligence with any, in a he had made his Patrons.

wan many flatterers, and lost as many true fages, they might make themselves suspected friends : so Perseus on the orner side, think- by their new friends, but the continuance of ing by liberal gifts, and hopeful promises, to this decree, beyond the time of War. and assure unto himself those that ill could brook when all danger of inovation was past. his enemies; got indeed a multitude of was uncivil, if not inhumane; as nourishing partakers, though little honester than his deadly hatred, without leaving means of reenemies had. Thus were all the Cities of conciliation. And hereof the Acheans reased Greece distracted with factions : some hold- no good fruit. For, although they were not, ing with the Romans, some with the Macedo- in like fort, forbidden the Kingdom of Mamian, and some few, respecting only the good cedon: yet understanding what would be due of the Estates wherein they lived. Hereat the to them, if they should adventure thither, Lords of the Senate were highly offended ; none of them durft fet foot therein. Hence and thought it an indignity not sufferable, it came to pass, that their bond-men. know-That a King, no better than their Vaffal, ing a fafe harbour, out of which their Mashould dare to become head of a faction sters could not fetch them, ran daily away against them. This therefore must be reckon- in great numbers: exceedingly to the loss of ed in the number of the trespasses : whereof such , as made of their slaves very profiif not any one alone, yet all of them together, table use. But Perseus took hold upon this to hold friendship sincerely with all his advised what they did : for that this was neighbours. The Romans perhaps could none other, than a plain device, to make them have been pleased better, if he had behaved depart from the friendship of the Romani.

more peremptorily with the Acheans, than himfelf after a contrary fashion, and done Country towards him to doubtfully affected: Now, as the Romans by threatning-terms especially when by hearkening to his messhall afford them just occasion to make War occasion: as fitly serving to pacific those, upon him. Perfew having finished his business whose enmity fain he would have changed among the Dolopians, made a journey to into love. He therefore apprehended all Apollo his Temple at Delphi. He took his Ar- these fugitives, to send them home again: my along with him: yet went, and returned and wrote unto the Acheans, That as for in such peaceable and friendly wise, that no good will unto them, he had taken pains place was the worse for his journey, but the to restore back their servants, so should they good affection towards him generally increa- do very well to take order for keeping them, fed thereby. With those that were in his that hereafter they might not run away way, he dealt himself; to such as lay further again. His meaning was readily understood, off he fent Embassadours or Letters: praying and his Letters kindly accepted by the greathem, That the memory of all wrongs what- ter part; being openly rehearfed by the Prafoever, done by his Father, might be buried tor, before the Councel. But Callicrates took with his Father; fince his own meaning was the matter very angerly; and bade them be

Herewithall

Herewithall he took upon him, somewhat liberally, to make the Acheans beforehand acquainted with the War, that was coming How Eumenes King of Pergamus was bulked upon Perseus from Rome. He told them how philip had made preparations for the same War; how Demetring had been made away, because of his good affection to the Romans; and how Perfews had , fince his being King , done many things, tending to the breach of neace. Briefly, He rehearfed all those matters, which were afterwards alledged by the Romans; the invation of the Baftarna, upon the Dardanians; the Kings journey against the Dolopians; his voyage to Delphi; and finally, his peaceable behaviour, which was (he faid) a dangerous temptation of men to his party. Wherefore he advised them to expet the event of things, and not over-hastily Evenenes King of Pergamus had been to enter into any degree of friendship with ficient ( to one that could understand ) of and indirect courses of revenge. the condition wherein they lived. For The Lycians could not be faved by his Pacause of War was given.

with Pharnaces, the Rhodians, and others. His batred to the Macedonian : whom he acculeth to the Roman Senate. The Senate bonours him greatly, and contemns his enemies the Rhodians; with the causes thereof. The unufual floutness of the Macedonian Embassadours. Perfeus his attempt upon Eumenes. The brotherly love between Fumenes and Attalus. Perfeus his device to poylon lome of the Roman Senators : whereupon they decree War against him, and send him defiance. Other things concerning the justice of this War.

ø. V.

1105

the Macedonians. Hereto good answer was Pharnaces and Mithridates, his neighbours. made by the Prætors brother: That Calli- He had taken the right course, in making por Lig. grates was too earnest in so light a matter ; first his complaint to the Remans : by whom so so and that, being neither one of the Kings he was animated with comfortable words. Cabinet, nor of the Roman Senate, he and promise, That they, by their authorimade himself too well acquainted with all ty, would end the business to his content. that had paffed, or was like to follow. But in conclusion, by thehelp of the Kings, For it was well known, that Perseus had Prusias and Ariarathes, he ended the War renewed his League with the Romans; that himself; and brought his Enemies to seek he was by them faluted King, and friend to and accept peace, on fuch conditions as the estate : and that he had lovingly en-pleased him to give them. After this, being tertained their Embaffadours: This being fo; at good leifure; he began to confider how why might not the Acheans, as well as the the affairs of Macedon ftood under Perfeus. Atolians, Thesalians, Epirots, and all the His hatred to Perseus was very great : and Greeks, hold with him such correspondence, therefore he was glad to understand, that as common humanity required? Neverthe- the hatred of the Romans, to the same his les Callicrates was grown a man fo terrible, Enemy was as great, and withall notorious. by his Roman acquaintance, that they durst Now, besides his ancient and hereditary not over-stiffly gainsay him. Therefore quarrel with the Macedonian; it vexed him the matter was referred unto further deli- exceedingly, That his own honours (whereberation: and answer made the whilst, That of the Greeks, prodigal in that kind, had fince the King had only fent a Letter with- heaped immoderate store on his Father and out an Embaffadour, they knew not how to him ) began to wax every where stale; resolve. Better it was to say thus, than, that whilest Perseus, either by his currying fathey were afraid to do as they thought most vour, or by the envy born to the Romans, reasonable and convenient. But when Per- had gotten their best liking and withes. For smherewith not contented, would needs despight of this indignity. He stirred up the urge them further, and fend Embassadours: Lycians against the Rhodians his old friends: then were they fain, without any good pre- and in helping these rebels, was so violent, tence, to put on a countenance of anger, and that he proceeded, in a manner, in open War. deny to give audience: which was prooffuf- But small pleasure found he in these poor hearkening to this advice of Callicrates; tronage from severe and cruel chastisement, Post Le they were foon after highly commended by given to them by the Rhodians. This render 74.

a Roman Embaliadour: whereby it became ed him contemptible: as likewife, his acts apparent, that the Romans intended War of hostility, little different from robberies , upon the Macedonian; though hitherto no made him hateful to those which loved him before. As for his honours in the Cities of Greece; they not only continued falling into neglect; but were abrogated by a misseseeming them to give, and affected by Persem, and that these marriages were solem. him beyond the proportion of his defer-nized with great concourse of Embassages vings. All this (which he needed not to from all quarters. Neither spared he to tell have regarded, had he not been too vainly them, (though feeming loth to utter it plainambitious ) befell him; especially for his ly ) That even the envy to their Estate was being over-serviceable to the Romans, and the cause, why many that could not endure for his malice to that noble Kingdom; which to hear of amity with Philip, were now if it fell, the liberty of Greece was not like to grown marvelloufly well affected to his ftand Now for the redress hereof, he thought Son. All this, and some facts of Persen. it vain to ftrive any longer with bounty, which might either be denyed or justified. against such an Adversary, as by hopeful (as that he had procured the death of some promiles alone, without any great perfor- which were friends to the Romans, and that mance, had over-topped him in the general he had expelled Abrypolis the Illyrian, who favour. And therefore he resolved even to invaded Macedon, out of his Kingdom, or overturn the foundations of this popularity, Lordship) Eumenes failed not to amplifie unby inducing the Romans utterly to take to the most; saying, That he thought it his away from the eyes of men this Idol, the duty to forewarn them: fince it would beto Macedonian Kingdom, which all so vainly himself a great shame, if Perseus got the start worthipped. Neither would it prove a diffi of him, and were in Italy making Warupon cult matter, to perswade those that were al- the Romans, ere Eumenes could come thither ready desirous : rather he was like to be to tell them of the danger. highly thanked, for fetting forward their withes; and perhaps to be recompensed with the Romans stood in fear of Perfeus, lest he fome piece of the Kingdom, as he had been should set upon them in Italy. Nevertheless, rewarded, for the like service, when An forasmuch as they loved not to make War tiochus was vanquished.

Rome: where, though he had little to fay, ther hurt intended: great thanks were which they knew not before, yet his words given to Eumenes, who had every way furwere heard with such attention, as if they nished them with such goodly colour, to had contained some strange novelty; and so beautifie their intendment. Now thoughit pondered by the Fathers, as if the weight of were fo, that he told them little elfethan them were to turn the ballance, that before what they knew before : yet his person, and was equal. The death of Demetrius, the ex- the manner of his coming, made all feem pedition of the Bastarne into Dardmia, that greater. For if upon any relation madeby of Perseus himself against the Dolopian, and their own Embassadours, or upon tales devito Delphi, the great estimation of the Ma- sed by their flatterers and spyes, they had match; That King Prusias of Bythinia, by mination. The vanity, either of him, of some decree of the Acheans, as too unmeasured, earnest fuit, had gotten to wifethe Sister of

It were too great folly, to believe that without fair pretence, not only of wrong To this end he made a second voyage to done to them or their associates, but of surcedonian in Greece, his intermedling in bu- warred against Fersem, ere he had committed finess of his neighbours, his riches and his any open act of hostility against them; their great provisions, were all the material injustice and oppression would have been points of Eumenes his discourse. Only he most manifest. But when the wrongs to them descended unto particulars, having searched done, were so notorious, and the danger into all (as he professed) like unto a Spy. He threatning them so terrible, that such a Prince faid, that Perjew had thirty thousand foot as Eumenes came out of his own Kingdom, as and five thousand horse of his own, mony in far as from Asia, to bid them look to thema readiness to entertain ten thousand Mer- selves; who could blame them, if they took cenaries for ten years, Arms to furnish a the speediest order to obtain their own right number thrice as great : The Thracians his and fecurity ? Toward this justification friends at hand, ready, at a call, to bring him of the war, and magnifying the necessity Souldiers as many as he should require ; that enforced them thereto, their more and that he prepared victuals for ten years, than usual curiofity, in concealing what because he would not be driven, either to Eumenes had uttered in the Senate, when live upon spoil, or to take from his own they could not but understand that his er-Subjects. Herewithall he prayed them to rand was well known ; helped not a little. consider, that King Selencus, the Son and The Macedonian and Rhodian Embassadours fuccessor of Antiochus the Great, had given were at Rome, provided of answers to the his Daughter Laodice in marriage to Perfeus ; words, which they knew before-hand that Perfeus not wooing, but seleucus offering the he would speak; and with matter of recrifoightfully accepted. Hence it grew, that now cast upon him, as on the greatest hope Romans, to alien quite from their own pro- to a work of fuch importance. Wherefore he, For proof hereof, they referred themselves how to use it. unto the Commentaries of the ten Embassain Afa, after the Victory against King Kings own heat; it appears by his daring to Plainer language, and were told, That King current in Affa. Hence it came, that his brother Perfew defired much to give them fatisfacti- Attalm took upon him as King, and either on, concerning any deed or word of his, took, or would have taken to wife (supposing about him, seems to have disclosed all: when | that might savour of hostility; but that, if his the weariness of the Fathers, in hiding that travel in this kind proved vain, then would which all men knew, made a notable shew be be ready to defend himfelt by arms, and of some fearful apprehension ; against which stand to the chance of War, which often falls it behoved their wisdom to neglect no pos- out contrary to expectation. There big fible remedy. Wherefore careless audience words may feem to have proceeded from was given to the Rhodian Embassadors; who the vehemency of Harpalus, that was chief accused Eumenes, as one more troublesome of the Emballadors; rather than from into Asia, than Antiochus had ever been, and struction given by the King, with whole a provoker of the Lycians to rebellion. The faint heart they agreed not. Yet was there Rhodians had with great pomp conveighed good reason, why Perfew himself might, at by Sea unto Perseus , his Bride Laodice ; this time, think to speed better by a shew of which friendly Office, as the Macedonian daring, than he was like to do by any fubbountifully requited, fo the Romans de mission. For the eyes of all Greece being when the Lycians, as already vanquished, of deliverance from the Rom in lervitude; it were fetling themselves in their obedience to was not expedient that he should lessen, or the people of Rhodes, Embassadors came from perhapsutterly cut off, the general expecta-Rome with strangenews, which gave new life tion, and the good affection born to him. to the rebellion. For the Senate pronounced which thereon depended, by discovering his That it flood not with the manner of the too much weakness of spirit, unanswerable tection any People or Nation by them van- or his Embassadour for him, was bold to quished: and that the Lycians were by them fet a good countenance on a game not very affigned unto those of Rhodes, not as meer bad, but subject (in appearance) to fortune, Vassals, but as Dependants and Associates. which might have been his, had he known

Now that this bravery (as better it may be dors; whom they had fent to dispose of things termed than courage) proceeded from the Antiochus. Hereat Eumenes, Masanisla, the adventure soon after, on a practice that Etolians, and all other Kings or Estates that more justly might anger the Romans, and were beholding to Rome, for increasing the give them fairer shew of reason to make War number of their subjects, had cause to find upon him. It was known that Eumenes, in themselves agrieved, if they well conside- returning home, would take Delphi in his way red the matter: fince by force of this or the and there do facrifice to Apollo, Ferfeus deadlike decree, those their Subjects might ea- ly hating him, and thirsting after his blood, fily be made their Fellows, whenfoever it resolved to way-lay him, and by making should please the Senate: though it were so there of him a facrifice, to rid his own hands that all men knew the present meaning of the of a most mischievous Enemy. So there were Senate: which was only to plague the Rho- appointed three or four Ruffians to do dians for their good will to Perfess, by fetting the murder: who placing themselves behind them and the Lycians together by the ears, a broken mud-wall, on the fide of a very The Fathers could therefore see no reason to narrow path leading up from the Sea to the diflike Eumenes, upon this complaint made Temple, did thence affault the King; whom by the Rhodian Embassadors, which indeed they forely bruised with great stones, and more nearly touched themselves. Rather left for dead. They might have finished they honoured the King so much the more : their work, such was the opportunity of for that others (as they would needs take it) the place which they had chosen; but fear of confoired against him, because of his love to being apprehended, made them, without staying to see all fure, flee in such haste, that But the Macedonian Embassage they heard they killed one of their own Companions, not fo carelesly as angrily : though perad- who could not hold pace with them; because venture it well contented them to find cause he should not discover them. Eunienes was of anger: for whereas at other times all conveighed away to the little Isle of Ecina. care had been taken, to pacifie them with where he was cuted : being all the while kept gentle words and excuses: now heard they so secretly, that the same of his Death was

Aaaaaaa

it be like a matter of State) stratonica the | should hereafter name, a poyson of rare onadaughter of King Ariarather, whom he then lity; fure in operation, yet not to be perceithought the Widow of Eumenes. It may well wed either in the taking or afterward. He be numbred among the rare Examples of durst not refuse to accept this Employbrotherly love, That when the King turned ment: for fear lest the vertue of this Medialive home, Attalus going forth to meet him cine should be tried upon himself. But being and do his duty, as in former times, received once at liberty, he discovered all. Rammius none other check, than, That he should forbear was but one man, and one whom the King to marry with the Queen, until he were well had never feen before, nor was like to fee assured of the Kings death. More than this, again: and therefore, besides that the Kings Fumencs never spake of these matters; but denial ought to be as good as such a fellows bequeathed at his death, unto the same Bro- affirmation, the accusation was improbable. ther, both his Wife and Kingdom. As likewife Thus did Perseus, in time shortly following. Attalus forbore to attempt any thing to the answer for himself; and in like fort concerprejudice of the King his Erother: though the oing the attempt upon Eumenes: denying to Romans (with whom he continued and grew have had any hand, either in the one or in special sayour, when Eumenes fell into other : yet withall professing, That such their hatred) were in good readiness to have objections were not to be made unto a King, transferred the Kingdom from his Brother to prove the Rightfulness of making War to him. By such concord of Brethren was the upon him, but rather unto a subject pleading Kingdom of Pergamus raised and upheld; as for his life in judgement. But howsoever the might also that of Mucedon have been, if De-Romans neglected the getting of stronger metrius had lived, and employed his grace proof (which might have been easie) than

1108

he understood that his Ministers had both very suitable to these practices. Neither did accomplished his will, and had faved all from the Senate greatly stand to dispute the matdiscovery. But as he was deceived in the terwith him: these his treacheries being held main point, and heard shortly after, that Eu- inexcusable. And as for his Royal Estate, menes lived, fo was he beguiled in that other wherein he supposed that they ought not to hope, of the concealment; which he vainly touch him for such private Offences, it gave esteemed the less material. For he had him no priviledge: they judging him to have written to one Praxo, a Gentlewoman of offended in the nature of a King Herein fure-Delphi, to entertain the men whom he fent ly they wanted not good reason. For if he about this business: and she, being appremight not lawfully make War upon Eumehended by C. Valerius, a Roman Embassador, nes their Confederate; that is, if he might then attending upon the matters of Greece, not fend mento waste the Kingdom of Pergawas carried to Rome. Thus all came to light. mus, or to befiege the Towns: might he Valerius also brought with him to Rome, out fend Ruffians to murder the King? If it were of Greece, one Rammius a Citizen of Brundu- no less breach of the League to destroy the fum; who coming newly from the Court of Senators by fire or famine, than by violence Macedon, loaden with a dangerous secret, of the Sword, was it lawful for him to doit had prefently fought out the Embaffadour, by poyfon ? Wherefore they prefently deand thereof discharged himself. Brundu- creed War against him; and sent Embassagiving to such of the Romans as the King that he had entertained long and secret confe-

with the Romans, to the benefit of Perseus. | any that we find by them produced : vet It is likely that Perfeus was very glad, when the base and cowardly temper of Perseus was finm was the ordinary Port for Ships passing dours to denounce it unto him, unless he between Italy and Greece. There had Ram- would yield to make fuch amends as they mine a fair house; wherein he gave enter- should require. He seemed at this time to tainment, being a wealthy man, to Embassa- have been so consident in the general favour dors, and other honourable personages, both of Greece, and other comfortable appearan-Romans and Mucedonians, journying to and ces, that if he defired not War, yet he did fro. By occasion of such his Hospitality, he not fearit: or at least he thought by shew of was commended to Perfess, and invited into courage, to make his Enemies more calm. He Macedon with friendly letters; as one, whose caused the Embassadors to dance attendance, many courtefies to his Embassadors, the King till being weary, they departed without auwas studious to requite. At his coming, he dience. Then called be them back, and bade was much made of; and shortly, with more them do their Errand. They made a tedious familiarity than he expected or defired, made rehearfal of all matters, which they had long partaker of the Kings Secret. The fum been collecting against him, and wherewith of all was, Thathe must needs do a turn, in Eumenes had charged him: adding thereto, remptorily required fatisfaction; as was their constant in his resolution. For if his heart manner when they intended to give defiance. could ferve him to undertake the War, he Better they might have stood upon the evi- should couragiously have managed it, and Praxo. For if those accusations could be ve- Enemy was unprepared; not have lost the opwhereon to build: of which otherwife they obtaining a worse peace than the former. were destitute; it being no fault in a King, to be ftrong, well-beloved, & well-befriended. Perfews answered, for the present, in a rage; calling the Romans greedy, proud, infolent, The Romans folicite the Greeks, to joyn with them and underminers of him by their daily Embaffadors, that were no better than meer spies. Finally, he promised to give them in writing their full answer: which was to this effect; That he would no longer stand to the League made between them and his Father; and renewed by himself indeed only for fear; but wished them to descend to more equal conditions; whereupon he, for his part, would advise, as they might also do for theirs.

In the form of the League between Philip and the Romans, as is fet down by Polybius, we find no condition, binding the Mucedonian to any inconvenience in the future ; excepting those which he immediately performed. But Livy inferts a clause, whereby he was exprefly forbidden to make any War abroad, without leave of the Romans. It is most likely, that all the Roman Confederates were included in this peace : whereby every one of the neighbours round about Macedon, entring shortly into league with Rome, did so bind the Kings hands, that he could no more make O long had the Romans been feeking oc-war abroad, than if he had been restrained by Casson to take in hand this Macedonian plain covenant. And thus might that feem an War, that well they might have been ready Article of the Peace, which never was agreed for it, when it came; and not (as they were) upon, but only was inferred by consequence. behind hand in Provisions. But it was on a Now if the Romans would urge this point sudden that they met with a confluence further, and say, that the Macedonian might of good pretences to make the Warr: not bear Defensive Arms, without their per- whereof, if no one alone had weight enough, mission; then had Perfess very just reason to yet all of them together seemed more than find himself agrieved. For since they had sufficient. This opportunity of making allowed his father, without controll, to their Cause honest in common opinion, was make war in Thrace, (whilest they themselves not to be neglected : though otherwise were unacquainted with the Thracians) else- they were unprepared for the Action. where abroad, though he asked not their li- Wherefore knowing, or having reason to becence: why should they now interpret the lieve, that their own strengths were such as bargain after another fashion? Was it now would prevail in the end; they hastily embecome unlawful for him to chastise his own braced the fair occasion of beginning, and Rebels? or to repay an Illyrian that invaded referred other cares to the diligence of time. Macedon ? By such allegations he maintain- Neither was this their unreadiness a small ed the right of his cause in very mild fort ; help, towards examining the disposition of when it was too late. At the present, by dis- the Greeks and others; who must afterwards claiming the League as unjust, he ministred dearly pay for any backwardness found in occasion unto the Embassadors, to give him their good will. There was not indeed any rence in the ille of samothrace, with Embaf- meffage, he commanded them to be gone out fadors fent to him out of Affa, about fome of his Kingdom in three days. But either ill purpofe. In regard of all which, they pe- he should have been less vehement, or more dence, brought against him by Rammin and have faln to work immediately, whilst the rified, then wanted they not good ground portunity, as now and often he did, in hope of in the war against Perfeus. How the Greeks flood affected in that war. The timeroufness of Perfeus. Martius a Roman Embaffador deludes him with kope of peace. His forces. He takes the field, and wins part of Theffaly. The forces of Lemius the Roman Conful: and what Afficants the Romans had in this War. Of Tempe in Theffaly; & what advantages the Mucedonian had, or might have had; but luft by his fear. Perfeus braves the Romans, fight's with them, knows not how to ufe his Viciery jues for peace, and is denied it by the Lar milhed. Perfeus having the worse in a A would forfakes all the Country lying about 1 ..... The Beotians rebel against the Romain, and are ricoroully punished. The Ro-Man Commanders unfortunate in the War against Postius. They vex the Greeks their firmis: for whose ease the Senate makes Prowillow bearing beard their Complaints. The Hattering Alabanders.

6. V I.

defiance. Having heard the worst of their cause to fear, that all of the Greeks, or Aaaaaaa 2 other Eastern People should conspire toge-' serve to terrifie him: and consequently, that ther, and take part with the Macedonian : it should at all times be in the Romans Power. fuch was the diffention between the feveral by giving him any tolerable conditions of Estates; howsoever the generality of them peace, to take revenge at leisure upon those were inclin'd the same way. Nevertheless which had affisted him : little cause was Embassadors were sent to deal with them there why any should adventure to partake all; and to crave their help against Perseus, with him. He made indeed a great noise: or rather to demand it, in no less ample man-leading about his army; taking by force or ner, than heretofore they had yielded it composition some few Towns, and soliciting against Philip and Antiochus, in Wars pre- all to joyn with him. But wife men could tending the Liberty of Greece. The Embaf- not be to beguiled. For at the same sime, he fadors used as gentle words for fashion fake, as fought all means of pacification: air to that if they had stood in doubt that their request end, made humble juit unto the Roman Emmight happen to be denied. But the Greeks bassadors. 2 Martius, the chief of those were now grown well acquainted with Embaffadors, and a min of more fineness fuch Roman courtelie: and understood that in cunning than was usual among the Ronot only such as made refusal, but even they mans, made shew of inclination to the Kinos who might feem to have granted half un-defire; and gave out fuch comfortable willingly, were like to hear other manner words, that the King entreated and obtaiof words, when once this business was end- ned a meeting at the River Peneus. There did ed. Wherefore none of them were forupu- Martins very gently rebuke the King, and lous in promiting the best of their help to charge him with those crimes that are before * 2011 the Romans : the * Acheans and Rhodians, mentioned. Whereto though Persons made which were chief am ong them, being rather none other answer, than the same which doubtful, even when they had donetheir they could have made for him; yet the Emhalted in some part of their duty. It is strange in good part, as therewith satisfied: and ad-

1110

best, lest it should be ill taken, as if they had bassadors, and especially Martins, took it that men could be so earnest to set up the vised him to give the like satisfaction to the side, whereof they gladly would have seen Senate. That this might conveniently be the ruine. The vulgar fort was everywhere done, a truce was agreed upon. Thus had addicted to Perfens; of the Nobles and Ru- Martins his defire; which was to make the lers, if some were vehemently Roman, they Kinglose time. For Perseus had all things wanted not opposers, that were wholly Ma- then in a readiness, and might have done cedonian; yea, the wifest and most honest, much, ere the Roman Army could have been who regarded only the benefit of their in Greece. But by the interpolition of this Country, wished better to Perseus than to the truce, he no way increased his forces; he Romans. And of this number Polybins the suffered a most convenient season of winning chief of Historians was one: who though upon the Enemy, to flip away; and obtained He * judged the victory of Persens, like to in recompence nothing else, than leisure prove hurtful unto Greece, yet wished he and vain hope. Yet was he pleased herethe Romans ill to thrive, that so the Greeks with, as it had been with some victory : pubmight recover perfect Liberty: for his en-lishing a copy of the Disputation between deavours in which course, he was at length him and the Romans, whereby he gave men tyrannically handled, as shall be shewed here- to understand how much he had the better, after. This considered, it appears that an and what great hope there was of peace. He extraordinary fear, and not only reverence fent Embassadors also to the Rhedians, of of the Imperial City, made the Achaens, whose good will to him he was best perswaand other Estates of Greece, thus conforma- ded; not only to let them know how much he ble to the Romans. The occasion of this their was superiour in cause; but to intreat them, fear may be justly imputed unto the ti- that they would take upon them, as Moderamorous demeanor of Perseus himself. He tors, to compound the differences between had undertaken a War, whereof the bene- him and the Romans, if perhaps notwithfit should redound, not only to his own standing the goodness of his cause, he should Kingdom, but unto all that were oppressed be denied peace. These were poor helps. by the Romans. Yet no fooner were fome For hereby it appeared, that his late standfew Companies brought over-lea, to make a ing upon point of Honour, was no better than countenance of meaning somewhat against meer vanity; his own safety being the uthim, than he began to speak the enemy fair, most of his ambition. This his fearfulness and sue for peace at Rome. Since therefore might seem excusable, and the blame thereof it was known, that every small thing would to appertain unto the Greeks; who de-

him in a time of necessity, that was partly ther did this poor courtesie serve alone to their own: had it not been his Office, who hide the craft of Martins, as if he had meant took upon him as their Champion, to give none other than good earnest : but it was a fuch a manly beginning to the War, as might likely mean both to keep a long while from encourage all others to follow him. But Perseus the knowledge of his business, and to his timorous quality being found, mengrew stagger his resolution, when he should need daily more and more averse from him ; and it most firm. were careful not to put their shoulders to a falling wall. The Rhodians, among whom the Roman Conful was at Apollonia, in a he had many stout Partizans, desired him not manner as soon as the Macedonian Embassato crave any thing at their hands, in which dours were with their King at Pella. Which they might feem to do against the good liking though it were enough to have rouzed Perof the Romans. The Baotians also, who fem, and have made him lay aside all cowardhad entered of late into a ftrict fociety with ly hope of getting Pardon, yet was he conthe Macedonian; renounced it now, and made tent to deliberate a while, Whether it were the like with the Romans: to whom further, not better to offer himself tributary to the in a fort, they yeelded themselves as vassals. Romans, and to redeem their good will with Neither was Martius contented to accept some part of his Kingdom, that so he might their submission under a general form; but enjoy the rest; than to put all at once to caused their several Towns to make cove- hazard. But finally, the stoutest counsel prenant apart, each for it self; to the end, that vailed; which also was the wisest, and so being thus distracted into many little Com- would have proved, had it been stoutly and monweals, they might not (were they never wisely followed. He now began, as if the so desirous to rebel) have such sorce to do War had not begun until now, to do what hurt, as when they agreed, and were incor- should have been done long afore. He porated into one, under the City of Thebes. caused all his Forces to be drawn together; This work, of separating the Buotians from and appointed their Randezvouz at Cied the Lacedamonians.

who came last on the same errand, did their gines and Munition. meffage without the Walls, in the Temple of Out of his own Kingdom he iffued forth Bellona (the usual place of giving audience into Thessaly: knowing that the Romans to open Enemies, or to such Commanders as were to pass thorow that Country, in their might not, by reason of some custom enter Journey towards him. Some Towns of the City) and had only the short warning The sale opened their Gates unto him, with-ceived his expectation, by being wanting to of eleven days, to be gone out of Italy. Nei-

And accordingly it fell out. For Licinius Thebes their Head, was more than Agestlans tium, a Town in Macedon. All being in readicould effect, or Epaminondas would suffer, ness, he did Royal Sacrifice, with an hunthen when all Greece followed the Lacede- dred Beafts, to I know not what Minerva, monians. So far more available to Thebes, that was peculiarly honoured in his Counbeing destitute of help from abroad, was try: and then with all his Courtiers, and the virtue of Epaminondas, and a few brave those of his Guard, set forward to Citium. His Citizens, than was the society with King Per Army he found confisting of nine and thirfens, against a number not so great as follow-ty thousand foot, and four thousand horse, whereof about twelve thousand foot, and a Martius brought this to effect, whilest the thousand horse were strangers, of sundry King fat still, as being bound by the truce: Nations, most part Thracians; the rest of his and having done this, he turned to the City; own Macedonians. These he animated with where, vaunting what he had wrought by lively speeches; laying before them the glory his craft, he was commended, and (though of their Ancestors, the insolency of the Rosome reproved it as dishonest) employed mans, the goodness of his Cause, the greatagain by the Senate, with commission to nessof his Provisions, and the many advandeal as he should think expedient. Touch- tages which they had of the Enemy, especialing the Embassadours which Perfews had ly in numbers. They answered him chearfulfent; audience was given to them, for that ly, with loud acclamations, and bade him be of they should not plainly see how their Master good courage. From all Cities of Macedon was deluded: but neither excuse nor in- there came likewise Messengers, offering to treaty would serve their turn: the Senate help him with money and victuals, according being resolved before-hand what to do. It to their several Abilities. He gave them was enough that they were admitted into the thanks : but answered, That his own provi-City, and had thirty days respite allowed sions would abundantly suffice, willing them them to depart out of Italy: whereas they, only to furnish him with Carts, for his En-

he balked, thinking them too ftrong or well- thither this Fleet. But whatfoever Gentius manned; and some he wan by force. Of thought in the beginning; he foolishly lost thefe laft was Myle; a Town thought im- both his Kingdom and himself, in the end of pregnable, and therefore, not more floutly this War; by offering, rather than giving than proudly defended by the Inhabitants, his help to Perfeus. who gave contumelious language to the Af- With none other company than what he failants. it was taken by reason of a sally; brought over the Sea, Licinius came into which the Towns-men rathly made, and be- Theffaly: fo tyred with a painful journey, ing driven back, received the Macedonians, through the Mountainous Country of Athathat entered pell mell with them at the gate. minia, which flood in his way from Epirm; All cruelty of War was practifed here: to that if Perfess had been ready, attending his the greatesterrour of the obstinate. Sole descent into the Plains, the Romans must latia and Connus ( Towns of much impor- needs have taken a great overthrow. He tance, especially Comme, which stood in the refreshed himself and his wearied Army, by straights of Ofia, leading into Tempe) yielded the River Peneus; where he encamped, atat the first. Having well fortified this passinge, tending his Auxiliaries, that came in as fast the King marched onwards to Sicurium, a as they could. It was not any flender help, Town feated on the foot of Mount offa ; that could enable him to deal with Perfeus. where he be reticula while, expecting news Therefore he refolved to abide where he of the Enemy.

In two human Legions: being promited tenting himself in the mean while, to have other itreng h of Auxiliaries, which was gotten quiet entrance into the Country. The thought sufficient. Eumenes and Attalus his Land of Thesaly, in which these two Armies brother came to him in theffaly, with four lay, was better affected to the Romans, than thousand foot, and a thousand Forfe. This any part of Greece besides: as having been ther also came, from every part of Greece, freed by them from a more heavy yoke of fuch 2 d as the everal Estates could afford, bondage to the Macedonian, when there was or thought expedient to fend: which from little hope of expectation of fuch a benefit. the meft of them was very little. Of the le was generally rich, fruitful, and abounding Kings abroad; Misanissa sent thither his Son in all things needful to mans life. In the Attitutenes, with a thousand Foot, as many midft of it, but somewhat more to the East, Horse, and two and twenty Elephants, was that beautiful Valley of Tempe, fo exarriarathes the Cappadocian, by reason of ceedingly full of all delights, that the name his Affinity with Exmenes, was friend to the was often used at large to fignifie the most Romans, and had fent to Rome his young pleasant and goodly places. This Valley of Son, there to be brought up: yet he did it felf was not great; but adding to it those livile or nothing in this war; pernaps because huge Mountains offa and Olympus (famous in Exmens himself began within a while, but Poesie) with their Spurs or Branches, by when it was too late, to be otherwise advifed than he had been in the beginning. Prulias was content to be a looker on: as being allied to Perfens, and yet fearing the Romans. Antiochus and Ftolomy ( hough Ptolo my was then young, and under luters ) had business of their cwin ; the Syrian meaning had long, in vain, attempted to do. Perseus to myade the Igyptian: yet each of them promited help to the Romans, which they cared not to perform. Gentius the Illy rians was inclinable to the Macedonian, yet made good countenance to the Romans, for fear. It was a pretty trick wherewith M. Lucretius, the Roman Admirals Brother. ferved him for this his counterfeit good will This King had four and fifty Ships, riding it the Fraven of Dyrrachium, uncertain to what purpose: all which Lucretzus took away. ter a very kind fort; making thew to believe That for none other end than to ferve the out making offer to defend themselves; some , Romans, their good triend Gentius had sent

then was, and keep his trenches, until his Lie, mess the Conful brought with him on- numbers were fufficiently increased : conwhich it was on all fides enclosed; it occupied the better part of Thessaly. And this way were the Romans to enter into Macedon; unless they would make an hungry journey thorow the Country of the Daffaretians, as in the former war with Philip, they therefore had no small advantage, by being Master of the Straights leading unto Tempe : hough far greater he might have had, if by mit-spending of timehehad not lost it. For f in defending the ragged passages of these Mountains, he were able to put the Romans often to the worfe; yea, to win upon them (for a while) every year more than other, with in strength and reputation : questionin he might have done far greater things, and he feized upon the Straights of AONS, which his Father once kept, and defended all he Country behind the Mountains of Pindus.

Surely, not without extreme difficulty, must | was inevitable, if he gave a little further the Romans have either travelled by Land, ground. What was performed by him or the with all their Carriages and Impediments. Romans, all the while that he kept his footthrough places wherein was no relief to be ing in The faly, it is hard to the w particularly. found or else have committed their Armies, for that the History of those things is much and all things thereto needful, unto the perished. Wherefore we must be contented mercy of Seas that were very dangerous; if with the fumm. they would have fought other way into The Conful having no defire to fight, un-Macedon, than through the heart of Greece : til fuch time as all his forces were arrived : upon neither of which courses they once kept within his Trenches, and lay still endeviced, notwithstanding any trouble which camped by the River of Pencus, about three they found in this present War. It may per- miles from Lariffa. That which persuaded has be faid, that the Greeks, and others, the Consulto protract the time, did contrawhom the King must have left on his back, wise incite the King, to put the matter unto a would have made him unable to defend any hasty trial. Wherefore he invited the Roplaces too far from his own home. But they mans into the field; by wasting the Land of were all, excepting the Theffalians, better af the Pheraans their Confederates. Finding fefted now to him, than they had been to his them patient of this indignity; he grew bold Father in the former War. The Etolians, to adventure even unto their Trenches : out upon whom the Athamanians depended, of which, if they issued, it was I kely that his grew into suspicion with the Romans (as we advantage in Horse would make the Victory hall find anon) even as foon as they met his own. At his coming they were troubled; with Perfess. The Baotians, how politically for that it was fudden : yet no way terrified; foever Martius had wrought with them, ad- as knowing themselves to be lately lodged. ventured themselves desperately in the Ma- They sent out a few of King Eumenes his cedonian quarrel: what would they have Horse, and with them some light-armed foot, done, if he at first had done his best? The to entertain skirmish. The Coptain, and some Rhodians, Illgrians, yez, and Eumenes himself, other of these were slain : but no matter of after a while began to waver, when they importance done; for that neither Licinius faw things go better with Perfeus, than they nor Eumenes, found it reasonable to hazard had expected. So that if instead of discou- battel. Thus, day after day, a while together, raging his Friends, by fuing basely for peace; Persen continued offering battel: which they he had raifed their hopes, by any brave per- still refused. Hereby his boldness much informance in the beginning; and increased creased; and much more his reputation: to the number of his well-willers; yea, and the grief of those, who being so far come to bought down with money (as he might have make a Conquest, could ill digest the shame done) some of his enemies, and among them that fell upon them by their enduring these Eumenes, who offered for good recompence, bravadoes. The Town of Sycurium, where to forget his broken head: then might the Perfeus then lay, was twelve miles from the Romans perhaps have been compelled to for- Romans: neither was there any convenient fake their imperious patronage over Greece; watering in that long march, which used to and to render the Liberty by them given, en- take up four hours of the morning, but he tire; which otherwise was but imaginary. was fain to bring water along with him in Such benefit of this War, fince it was hoped Carts, that his men might not be both weafor afterwards, might with greater reason ry and thirsty when they came to fight. For have been expected at first, from greater adreemedy of these inconveniencies, he found vantages. But as a fearful company running out a lodging seven miles nearer to the enevantages. But as a rearm company funding out a loging leven miles nearer to the enter from their Enemies, till fome River flay my: whom he vilited the next day by the their flight; are there compelled by meer defperation to do fuch acts, as done, while the battel lafted, would have won the Victory: foreign to the danger of that War, whereof he laft he danger of the danger of that war, whereof he laft he danger of that war, whereof he laft he danger of the danger of that war, whereof he laft he danger of the bould have fought the honour; he left his friends that would have ftood by him, and give check to his pride. Wherefore he sent gave them cause to provide for their own forth his Brother C. Licinius, King Eumeafety: yet being overtaken by necessity, he nes, Attalus, and many brave Captains, with choic rather to set his back to the Mountains all his power of Horse, his Velites, and all of Tempe, and defend himself with his proper the rest of his light Armature to try their forces; than to be driven into such misery, as fortune: he himself remaining in the Camp, with his Legions in readiness. The ho- might learn by Examples of either kind nour of this morning, was the Macedonian that if they would shun indignation, or in-Kings; for he ob assed the Victory in a man-cur favour, then must they adventure no ner intire (though the Theffalians made a less for their Lords the Romans, than gladly good retrait) with little loss of his own. But they would do for their own Liberty. Thus he di covered his weakness ere night, by fared it with the Consul and his Army hearkening, as Princes commonly do, to Perfess came the next day to correct the countel given by one of his own temper. former days errour ; which how great it For where as the Romans were in great fear, was, he not until then found. The Romans lest he should assault their Camp; and to were gotten into a place of safety; whithat purrole, upon the fift news of his ther they could never have attained, if the fuccess, his Phalanx was brought unto him King had either pressed his Victory, or by the Captains, though unient for : he ne- given better heed to them that night: his vertheless took it for found advice, which light Armature alone being sufficient to have indeed was timorous and base, To work routed them whilest they were conveying wastly, and moderate his victory; by which themselves to the other lide of Peness. But means it was taid. That either he should get it was vain to tell what might have been honest conditions of Peace, or at leastwise done, since there was no remedy. The many Companions of his fortune. Certainly Romans were bearen, even the flower of it was like that his good fortune would ex- their City, The Gentlemen of Rome; out alt the Hope and Courage of his Friends. of whom were chosen their Senators, and Yet, had it been greater, and had he won the consequently the Generals themselves, Piz-Roman Camp, his friends would have been tors, Confuls, and all that bore Office or was his folly, in hop ng then for peace: beaten to thamefully, that they ftole away And in fuing for it, even when he had the vi- by night, and fuffered him to gather up the

the more, and the bolder. But over great Command among them; yea, they were ctory; what Ife did he, than proclaim unto spoils of them without resiltance, as yieldall which would become his partakers, That ing themfelves overcome. With such brave neither good nor had fortune should keep words did the King set out the Glory of his him from yielding to the Romans, when to- Action; dividing the spoils among his Fulever they would be pleated to accept him? lowers. But there was much wanting At this time the joy of his victory would ad- within him, to have made his honour found. mit none of the Confiderations. He had He came nearer to the Romans, and enflain of the Roman Horse two hundred, camped at Monfelus, a place in a mid-way beand taken of them preforers the like num tween Tempe and Lariffa: as if it were his ber. Of their foor he had flain about two meaning to press them fomewhat harder. thousand: losing of his own no more than Nevertheless he was easily perswaded touse twenty Hotle, and torty foot. The Roman the occasion, which he feemed to have, of Camp, after this difafter, was full of heavi- obtaining peace. Therefore he fent unto the ness and fear : it being much doubted that Conful, and offered to yield unto the same the enemy would fee upon it. Eumenes gave Conditions, wherein his Father had been counfel to diflodge by right, and remove bound to the Romans; if the War might fo to a furer place beyond the River Peneus, take end. It were needless here again to The Conful, though athamed to profess, by thew the folly of this his course. Towards so doing, in what sear he stood; yet thought the accomplishment of this desired Peace, it better to acknowledge the Loss past, there was in the Conful no greater power than by standing on proud terms, to draw than to grant a Truce, whilest Embassadours upon himself a greater Calamity. So he might go to Rome : it resting in the Senate passed the River in the dead of the night, and People to approve the conditions, & raand en amped more strongly on the further tifie the League. And of such a truce granted fide. The Atolians were forely blamed for by Martius, he had lately found no small disthis los: as it rather a traiterous meaning, commodity redounding. But Licinium dealt than any true fear, had occasioned their plainly, and returned answer, That other flight, wherein the rest of the Greeks follow- hope of peace there was none; save that Ferseed them. Five of them that were men of espe- | se would yield both his Kingdom and Person, cial mark, had been observed to be the first simply and absolutely, to discretion of the which turned their backs: an observation | Senate. A manly part it was of Licinius to likely to cost them dear, at a time of better be so resolute in Adversity. On the other leiture. As for the Theffalians, their virtue fide, it argued a very faint heart in Perfess, was honoured with reward : fo as the Greeks that having receiv'd an answer so peremptory

ing taken in good feason, he failed in the felf. enterprise. As for the forragers; he had a After the same fashion dealt they that prey to the Romans.

he ftill perfifted, making vain offers of great came within themfelves more absolute, that ter tribute. Finding that the peace which formerly they had been. The cautes hereof he so much defired, could not be purchased were to have been sought among the with mony, the King withdrew himfelf back changes happening in their variable factions: to Sycurium. There he lay hearkening what whereof the knowledge is now loft. Some the Enemy did; whose forces were well re- of them rebelled, and were throughly pupaired by the coming of Misagenes the Son nished by Lucretius the Roman Admirai: of Majanisa, with the aid before mentio- who got so much by spoiling them, that he aed. This distance between the King and would have brought others to rebell in them, caused the Romans to wax the more like fort, if by extream oppression he could bold in making their harvest: about which have driven them to far. Neither was Libusiness they ranged over all the fields. Their cinius the Conful undiligent in the same eareless demeanour gave him hope to do kind. What his doings were, after such some notable exploit: which he attempted, time as he was at leiture from Perfeus, I both upon their Camp, and upon those that find no where mentioned. Only this is faid in were abroad. The Camp he thought to general; That in the War which he made, have fired on the fudden: but the alarm be he cruelly and covetuously demeaned him-good hand upon them, if he could have with- commanded in the year following; Hostiius drawn it, and given over in time. But whilft the Conful, and Hortenfine the Admiral, or he strove to force a guard, he was visited Prator of the Fleet. Hostilius shewed by the Conful; by whom either in a skirmish more of his industry, in picking quarrels of horse, or (for the report is divers ) in a with the Consederates of Rome, than in progreat battel, he was overcome. This milad- fecuting the War against the Macedonian. venture, whether great or fmall, caused Per- For concerning the Roman War upon his few, after a few daies, to fall back into Ma- Kingdom, after that the Conful had fought cedon; as being naturally given to fear passage in vain over certain mountains, Perdanger, even where none was; where- feus feemed in a manner, free from it. He was by what loss he felt, will appear here-troubled indeed on that fide which looked after. He left all behind him, fave only Tempe, towards Illyria, by Ap. Glaudius, whom the weakly guarded: and consequently an easie Conful sent thither with an Army of four thousand, and who, by levies made upon the After the Kings departure, Licinim went Confederates, doubled this his Army. But straight unto Connus; hoping to have taken Claudius thinking to have taken Ofcana, it, and to to have gotten entrance into Tem- a border town of Illyria, by Treason; came But finding the work too hard, he thither in such careless order, that the inreturned back unto the Perrabians and habitants which had made thew of Treaothers; from whom he won some Towns, son, with purpose only to train him into and among the rest, Larifa. There were danger; fallied forth upon him, overthrew fundry Towns thereabout, bearing the same him, and chased him so far, that hardly he name of Lariffa: fo that this which the escaped with the fourth part of his compa-Conful took, may feem not to have belong ny. Yet this Town of Ofcana, thortly afed unto the Thessalians; unless, perhaps, ter became Roman: which howsoever it hapafter his victory, Perseus did greater acts pened, Perseus very soon recovered it, and than we find recorded, and got some part of many other places therewithall : Cotys a I bracian King, fecuring him on the one fide Of matters happening in Greece at this of Macedon; and Cephalus an Epirot, revoltime, it is hard to give a precise account; for ted from the Romans, on the other. Perseus that the Histories of them are greatly de-likewise made a painful journey into Etofective. One may think it strange, that the lia; where he was promised to be admitted Beotians, whom a Roman Embaffador could into Stratus, that was the strongest City in terrifie, and bring altogether to his own will, that Region. Of this hope though he were thould not be afraid of a Roman Army, then disappointed by those of the Romans faction foot in Greece, and a Navy on their on, yet in his return home, he took in coast. But more strange it is, that the The-bans, from whom their dependants were takenby the Art of Martins, were more true ten by Cleves, one of his Lieutenants. Such to Rome, than other petty Towns, which success had the Macedanian War under Hoby that same distraction of the Beetians, be Itilius. The same Consul offended much his Embailadors made into mens affection to- burden for the present war, unless it were wards Rome. For these Embassadors travel- such, as the Senate had likewise thought ling thorow all the Citis of Peloponneseus, meet. Of this Decree the whole Country gave out speeches tending to shew, That was glad : for it was, or seemed, a good remethey liked no better of those who sought dy of many inconveniences. But they that nor by might and main to advance their bu- franding on priviledges hereof, refused to fulfinels, than of those which were of the Ma- fill every commandment, were numbred cedonian faction. Their meaning was, to among the Patriots; which in the end of have accused by name, in the Parliament of this war proved little better, if not worse. Achaia . Lycortas that worthy Commander , than to have been Traitors. The Senate was who nobly followed the steps of Philope driven to set down this order, by reason of men; and together with him his fon Polibius, many and vehement complaints brought who foon after was General of the Achean to Rome, concerning the wrongs done by Horse; but more notable by that excellent Roman Magistrates, and especially by the Ad-History which he wrote, than by his great mirals, Lucretius and Hortensius. Encretius employments, which he well and honoura- was condemned in a great fumm of mony, for bly discharged. The fumm of the accusati- the wrongs by him done : highly to the comon should have been; That these were not mendation of the Romans, in that they lohearty friends unto the Romans, but fuch as ved not to have their subjects oppressed. abitained from raising troubles, more for Hortensius being still in office, had warning to lack of opportunity, than for any love to the amend. common quiet. But fince no colour of truth | Among the great number of Embaffages could be found, that might give countenance that came to Rome about this time, either to to fuch a tale ; it was thought better, for the feek redress of injuries, orto offer their ferpresent, to let it alone, and give gentle words, vices: it is note-worthy, that from Alabanda, as if all were well. In like manner dealt a Town of the leffer Affa, there was prefented they among the Atolians : They demanded unto the Senate, and well accepted . a most hostages; and found some in the Councel base piece of flattery. These Alabanders that approved the motion: as also among brought three hundred horsemens targets, the Acarnanians, there were that intreated to and a crown of gold, to bestow upon jupihave Roman Garrisons bestowed in their ter in the Capitol. But having a desire to Towns. But neither the one northe other gratifie the Romans with fome exquisite toof these propositions took effect. They of ken of their dutiful obedience, wherein the Roman faction, accused not only such as they would be singular, and being not able were inclinable to the Macedonian, but also to reach unto any great performance : they the good Patriots; making it no less than a built a Temple, unto the Town Rome, and matter of treason, to be a Grecian in Greece. appointed anniversary games to be celebra-On the contrary side, there wanted not some, ted among them, in honour of that goddes. who roundly told these pick-thanks of their Now who can wonder at the arrogant folly base flattery, rating them openly, in such fost, of Alexander, Antigones, Ptolomy, and the like that one of them hardly escaped being sto- vain men, that would be thought gods; or at ned, even in the presence of the Embassa- the shamefull flattery of such as bestowed dors. Thus was all full of acusations, and upon men, and not the most vertuous excuses: among which the Embassadors of men, divine honours; when he sees carried themselves, as men that could believe a Town of houses, wherein powerfull none ill : though it were well enough known men dwell, worshipped as a Goddess; what they thought. The best was, that and receiving (without scorn of the Gian order from the Senate was brought into vers, or shame of the Present ) the title of should be free for all men, to refuse obedi- banda?

Выбыбы

the Greeks, by the strict inquisition which ence to any Roman Magistrate, imposing any

Greece, and published to this effect : That it Deity, at the gift of fuch a rascal City as Ala-

ø. VII.

O. Martius the Roman Conful, with extream difficulty and danger, enters into Tempe. The cowardize of Perfeus in abandoning Tempe. The Town of Dium quitted by Martius : repaired and fortified by the King. The Romans attempt many places, with ill success. Their affairs in bard eftate. Marrius a cunning and abad man. Polybius fent Embaffadour to Martins from the Achaans. Polybius his honest wisdom beneficial to the Achaans. King Eumenes grows averse from the Ro mans. Perfeus negotiates with Antiochus. and Eumenes. His false dealing with Gentius King of Illyria ; whom he draws into the Roman war. He fends Embassadours to the Rhodians : who vainly take upon them to be arbitrators between him and the Romans. Perfeus loseth a mighty succour of the Bastarna, by his wretched parsimony.

Greece, than when the war began; which but met him, and fought with him, two or had been thought likely to reform all those three daies together; each returning to Countreys, and bring them to what pass their own Camp at night, with little loss on the Romons defired; as it did in the end either fide. This bickering was on the Persons had hitherto the better, and was narrow ridge of a mountain, which gave ftronger now, than when he lived in peace. fcarcely room unto three to march in front. He had enlarged his borders on the Illyrian So that very few hands came to be employfide; his friends, in all parts of Greece, took ed: all the rest were beholders. In this courage daily; and his reputation grew case it was impossible to get forwards : yet fuch, as caused those that were before a shame to return. Wherefore Martins wholly Roman, to suspect what the issue of took the only course remaining; and inthe war might prove, and thereupon to be- deed the best : Part of his men he left with come wife for themselves. Contrariwise, Li Popilius, to attend up a the Macedonians; cinius and Hostilius the Consuls, had one after whillt he, with the rest, fetcht a compais the other spent their time in vain, seeking bout, and sought out waies that never way into Macedon; and defaced the glorious had been trodden. Herein he found exenterprize of conquest, by many losses re-tream difficulty: which notwithstanding ceived. The Roman Admirals had so de he overcame. Basides the troubles commeaned themselves, that many Towns even monly incident to such journeys, through or elfe of the Con'ul himself (for they tains, in this way which he took : that but taking pains to climb the mountains bred great confusion. Having therefore which were thought able to forbid all paffage over them, without help or need of any custody. The King heard of his approach ; and being uncertain what way he meant to take, distributed his own forces, to the efence of all places which might give enrance, or permit afcent. But the Conful proceeded in his journey: with hope, either not to be discovered by the Enemy, or to break through all oppolition or at leaftwife, to fight on as convenient ground, as they hould have that lay to ftop him, and at length, if all failed, to make a fale retreat. He fent before him four thousand of his most expedite foot, to dif over the waves. Two daies was this company troubled, in overcoming the difficulty of no more than fitteen miles: after which they had fight of the Enemy, that lay to deny their patiage. They occupied therefore a fafe piece of ground ; and fent back word to the Conful, where they were ; intreating him to halten unto A Fter two years of the Macedonian war, them : which he did. The Macedonians things were further out of tune in were not a whit dismayed at his arrival; of the best effected to Rome, kept them places unfit for habitation : he was comout by force. Generally, the fear was great pelled by labour of hand; to make paths on the Roman fide; and the Army much where none were; yea, where Nature might leffened, not only by casualties of war, but feem to have intended, that none should be. by the facility of the Tribunes or Colonels, So steep he found the descent of the mounlaid the blame one upon the other ) in li- of feven miles, which they travelled the centing the Souldiers to depart. Quintius first day, his men were compelled, for the Martius the new Conful, who succeeded un more part to rowl themselves down; as to Hostiliue, was to amend all this : which not daring to trust their feet. Neither was nevertheless was more than he knew how to this the worst. For they met with rocks, do; though he brought with him a strong that stood one over another, so upright: supply of men. He began hotly to set the and cumbersome to get down : that their war on foot, which along time had sleps. Elephants were affraid of that giddy project, And he began the right way: not feeking to and calling their governours, made a terforce the straights that were surely guarded, rible noise, which affrighted the horses, and

Bbbbbbb 2

rous journey; there was nothing more de- third were the fame which Martins had arfired by the fouldiers, than that they might tempted in vain, and another like unto it; be suffered to creep back again, the same the last, by the City of Dium out of Mace. way which they had come. But shift was don. All these were sufficiently guarded made to let down the Elephants, by a kind and whofoever would feek any other way of bridges, like unto falling draw-bridges: must be fain to take such pains as Martine whereof the one end was joyned to the had undergone. The entrance by Dinm edge of the cliff; the other fustained by was fairer than any of the rest : whereof ontwo long polts, fastened in the ground be- ly the King had benefit : for that his enemies low. Upon thete two posts, or poles, (which could not get thither, fave through the valindeed, not being very strong, since it was ley it self, into which they must first pierce intended that they should be either cut or another way. Dium stood upon the foot of broken ) were fastened two rafters, answe- the huge mountain Olympus, about a mile rable in length to the distance, between the from the Sea : of which mile, the River Hehigher and the lower fall : fo as the end of licon becoming there a lake, and called Baone bridge might reach to the beginning phyras, took up the one half, the rest being of another. These were covered with such as might easily have been fortified. Beplanks and turfe; that they might feem fides all thefe, there was in the midft of Tempe. continent with the ground : fo to make a passage which ten men might easily keep: the beafts adventurous to go upon them, where the fours of the mountains, reach-If there were a plain of any good extent ing far into the valley; drew near to the from the foot of a rock, to the next down- very banks of Penem, a goodly and deep fall; then might thebridge be shorter. When River which ran through it. Wherefore an Elephant was gone a pretty way, upon nothing had been more easie, than to make one of these; the posts upholding the frame the Consul repent him of his troublesome were cut afunder; thereby causing him to journey : if Perseus could have seen his own fink down unto the next bridge; whence advantages. For the Roman Army was not he was conveyed in like manner, to the only in ill case to fight, after the vexathird, and onward ftill to the very bot-tion of that miserable travel : but must endure the labour.

1118

Tempe: the first by Connus; which the Ro- take out of Dium, what he could carry gone, or wallowed, four miles of this grie- mans were unable to force: the second and tom. Thus went they down fliding, fome needs have either perished for want of vion their feet, others on their buttocks, auals, or been inforced to return the same till they came to an even valley. By this it way that he came if the King hade made good appears, how throughly provided the Ro- the straight of Dium. To have returned. mans used to be in their journeys, of things and climbed up with their Elephants and needful in all occasions: as also what in- carriages, against those rocks, from which, estimable pains they took in this descent, with extreem labour, they could hardly get about the conveyance of themselves and down, it seems a matter of impossibility: all their carriages down the mountains. The especially confidering how the enemy from next day they rested; staying for Popilius above their heads, would have beaten upon and his company, who hardly, or perhapes ne- them; being now aware of the path which ver, should have overtaken them, if the Ene- they had taken, though he knew it not when my had followed, and fet upon him from aloft. they stole away from him. It may therefore The third and fourth daies journeys were be thought strange that the Romans did nor like unto the first : fave that custome, and rather take their journey into Macedon, from the nearness to their waies end without the side of Illyria, whence that Kingdom meeting enemy, caused them the better to had often been invaded, as lying open on that part : than put themselves to the trouble of Perfew could not be ignorant of the Ro- breaking into Tempe, whence, after that they mans coming towards him: fince they fought were arrived, there was no means to with his men upon the passage, three daies escape, without forcing one of those passatogether; helying so nigh, that he might wel- ges, which they despaired to win. But near have heard the noise. Yet was he so the cowardize of Perseus did commend the possessed with sear; that he neither stirred counsel by them followed, as wise. For to help his own men, or to hinder the Con- he no sooner heard that the Enemy was come ful, nor made any provision for that which over the Mountains into Tempe, than he might fall out; but as one void of councel, fared like one out of his wits; faying, That fate hearkening after the event. Four he was vanquished, and had lost all, only passages there were, leading into without battel. Herewithall he began to

of the Sea by their diving, were payed their ted the action. wages after the same fort : that so there By understanding the folly, or cowardize might be no witness of the Kings base folly. of Martins; the King recollected himself, Such end must they fear, who are privy understood his own errour; sought to hide it to dishonourable actions of great Princes. by such poor means as have been shewed, If Perfess would have gone furely to work, and laboured to make what amends he for the hiding of his fault; then must be so could, He quickly repossessed the Town of royally have behaved himself, that no man Dium, which he hastily repaired, finding it might believe him to be the Author of any dif-mantled by the Romans. This done, he unworthy act or councel. But his vertue encamped strongly by the River of Enipeus : was of no such capacity. He thought it meaning there to stop the Enemies proceed-

Town that yielded, he was compelled by hope was nothing like fo great: his chief

away in hafte; and straightwaies abandon- meer lack of food for his men, to return back edthe Town. In the same vehemency of towards Thessaly. His Fleet came to him, in amazement, he sent a straight command this time of necessity, well appointed to have ment to Thessalonica, that the Arsenal there holpen him in the war : but having left should be set on fire; and to Pella, that his behind, at Magnesia, the ships of burthen, reasures there should be cast into the Sea : as which carryed the provisions. Wherefore it if the Romans were like presently to be Ma- fell out happily, that one of his Lieutenants had been careful to occupy the Caffles pointed to drown the treasure, performed it about Tempe, which were forsaken by the as hastily as well he could : though foon Mucedonians : for by those wates only might after his Master grew forry for the loss ; and Corn be brought into the Army. To meet itwas all, in a manner, recovered by Di- the fooner with this Corn, which was vers from under the water. But Andronicus, most desirously expected, he forfock Dinm. who had charge to fet fire on the Kings and went to Phila; by which foolish jour-Arfenal, deferred the execution , forefeeing ney (if not worfe than foolish) he lost more, that repentance might follow: and so he than a little the longer fafting had been prevented the damage. Whether Niceas, worth. It is probable that his Carts, with all. for his absolute and blind obedience, or or the most of his store, were lost among the Andronicus, for his careful providence, me- Mountains : for otherwise it had been madrited the greater commendation, or more ness to put himself on such an enterprize so easie pardon; it rested in the King to inter- stenderly provided, as that without enforcepret. The reward of his fervice, was this, ment, or fight of the Enemy, he should Persem growing ashamed of his mad cowar be fain to quit it. Howsoever it was : men dize, that appeared in this hasty direction: thought him a coward, or at least a bad man caused them both to be slain. Also those of war; since he thus recoyled and gave off, poor men, which had fetcht his treasure out when it most behoved him to have prosecu-

enough to lay the blame upon others. And ing all that Summer. Lefs diligence, more therefore, having called Hippias away ( the timely used, would have been enough, not Captain which had stopped the Consul on only to have delivered Martins into his hand, the top of the Mountain) and Asclepiodatus, who had beguiled him with an idle hope from defence of the passages, whereto they of peace, but to have given him such a noble were by him appointed: he rated them victory, as might cause the Romans to seek openly; faying, That they had betrayed a good end of the war upon fair conditions, unto the Enemy the gates and bars of Mace- and not to begin again in halte. Yet this don. Of this reproach, if they would dif- recovery and fortification of Dium, was to charge themselves, by laying it upon him, the Consul an exceeding hinderance. For to whom of right it belonged, then might little or nothing could afterward be done they have fped as did Niceas and Andro- toward the Conquest in hand, in all the continuance of his office. Only the Town of He-The Conful Martin had great cause to re- raclea, standing on the River of Pencus, five joyce, for that the King had so hastily relin- mile from Dium, was taken by force, or raquished his possession of Tempe, and all the ther by a trick of climbing upon mens heads, paffages leading thereinto: fince the Roman fomewhat after the manner of our tumblers. Army, this notwithstanding, was hardly able But it made such defence as it could, and to subsist for want of victuals. He took Dium was not given up for fear. After this, Martius without refistance, and thence went for-didset a bold face towards Dium; as if he ward into Macedon: wherein having travel- would have taken it again, and have driven led about a daies journey, and gotten one the King further off: though his intent or care, being to provide for his wintering. He | ( that he might not be quite without work ) fent the Admital, to make attempt upon the had fent his Lieutenant to befiege it : and by Sea-Towns, The falonica, Caffandrea, De- the terrour of his appearing suddenly over metrias, and others. All these were affayed: their heads, caused the besiegers to dislodge but in vain. The fields about Theffalonica in all hafte, fetting their Camp on fire. were walted; and fome companies, that fundry times adventured forth of the Town, rather, fo far was their ability thort of their werestill put to the worse. As for the Town | Enterprises ; ever fince their Conful ( wheit felf; there was danger in coming near ther dastardly, or carelesly ) most unlike a it either by Land or Sea; by reaton of the good Commander, had let go his hold of engines, which shot from the walls, and Macedon, by forfaking Dium: yea, it is to be reached unto the Fleet. Wherefore the Ad | fuspected , that fom: greater harm befell miral fetting fail from thence, ran along by them, or, at least, that they were in some grea-Ania, and Antigonea, (landing near to each of ter danger, than is expressed in the broken them, and both doing and receiving hurt) un remaining History of this war. For Martil he came to Pallene in the territory of Caf- tius perswaded the Rhodians by Agespolis (andrea. There King Eumenes joyned with their Embassadour, who came to him at Hehim, bringing twenty thips of War: and five racles about other bufiness of icis imporother were fent thither from King Prufin. tance, That they should do well to interpose With this access of strength, the Admiral themselves as Mediators, and seek to finish ly cast by Perfeus, before the Town: which, malicious device of Martius, craftily feekwhile the Romans were filling up, question ing to bring the Rhodians in danger ( as was made, What became of the earth taken anon it fell out) by their opposing the resothence, for that it lay not upon the bank? Iution of the Senate; than that it proceeded By this occasion, it was learned, that there from any true fear in him, either of Perfens. were Arches in the Town-wall filled up with or of Antiochus, who had then an Army on that earth, and covered with one fingle row foot : yet fince he made shew of fear, it is of brick. Hence the Admiral gathered hope like withall, that fomewhat had happened, of making way into the Town, by sapping which might make his fear seem not counterthe walls. To this work he appointed fuch as feit. And to were the Rhodians moved to he thought meetelt : giving an alarm to the think of him; not only for that the extraorother fide of the Town, thereby to shadow dinary courtesie, both of him and of the Adhis attempt. The breach was foon made miral, towards their Embassadour, com-But whileft the Romans were shouting for ing from proud natures, did argue diffiwhat was done; and fallying forth unexpect- the Embassadours of Perseus, and of Gentine

1120

Such fortune attended on the Romans : or was bold to try his fortune at Cassandrea: the War. Now, although Polybius do most rain which was bad. There was a new ditch late- probably conjecture, that this was rather a joy, and ordering themselves for the assault : dence, where there was no ambition to cause the Captains within the Town perceived it ; but much more, for that foortly after ed, gave a fierce charge on the companies the Illyrian, did fet our their bufinels at that were between the ditch and the wall; of Rhodes, not more with the ftrength of a good whom they flew about fix hundred, and fuf- | Fleet, which the Macedonians had gotten, fered few to escape unwounded. This dif- than with the honour of some victory, where; after, and the want of good success on that in he had lately sain great numbers of the part of the Town which King Eumenes Roman horse. Thus much we find intimated; affailed ( a supply in the mean while entring though the time, place, or other circumstan-gates the Town by Sea) caused the fiege to break ces of the fight, be not specified. And hereto up. Torone was the next place which the Ad- may be referred, the report of those that miral thought meet to attempt: and thence were fent from Rome to view the estate of likewise he was repelled. Finding this too Martins his Army. For they found the Conwell manned; he made way towards Deme | ful wanting meat; the Admiral wanting men; trias : whereinto Euphranor, a Macedonian and, for those few that he had wanting both Captain, was gotten before his coming, with money and clothes: and App. Claudius the fuch forces, as were not only fufficient to have | Prætor, who lay on the frontier of Illyria, fo desended the Town, if the Admiral had laid unable to invade Macedon, that contrariwife, siege to it, but to keep the Land about it he was in extream danger; so as either he from spoil; or, at least (as they did) to make must quickly be sent for thence, or a new the enemy pay dear for all that he there got. Army be tent thither to him. Wherefore it This Euphranor had taken his journey to De- may feem, that some blow had been taken on metrias, by Melibaa; whither the Conjul the Illyrian fide, which made all to halt; or from some of the Towns which they be-

fieged.
Now, although it were fo, that Martius, in very few of his actions, behaved him (elf was to deliver his opinion in the Councel like a man of war : yet in exercise of Cunsing, which one hath most aptly termed, A gooked or finister kind of wisdom, he dealt as felf, and those of his party. For as he was a crafts-master, with a restless working sure to incurr the great indignation of the diligence. This indeed neither proved his fufficiency, nor commended his honesty; him in charge; so was it manifest on the fince thereby he effected nothing to his own other fide, that the words by Martius utterhenefit; and nevertheless out of envy, ed to himin private, would prove no good vain-glory, or such delight as weak and bu- warrant for him and his friends, if openly pleasure. Polibius found the Consul busie in prisonment. finding passage thorow Tempe into Macedon.

at least that the Romans, with greater los | whether it were for love to the Achauns than is before spoken of, had been driven that the Consul was so earnest in this bullness; or rather for envy, and to hinder Ap. Claudius from doing any thing, fince himself could do nothing. But when Polibius touching this matter ; then found he a new doubt, that more nearly concerned his own fie-headed men take, in creating inexpli- they should refuse to help Clauding, alledging cable troubles, he directly made opposition that he had no need : In this case therefore, to the good of his Country. At fuch time as he had recourse unto the Decree of the Se-Perfeus, by the fuccess of his doings against nate: which exempted men from necessity Hostiline, had gotten much reputation, and of doing what the Roman Commanders was thought likely to invade Thessals. Archo, should require, unless, by special order from Lycortas, and other good Patriots among the Senate, the fame were likewise appointthe Acheans , judged it expedient for their ed. So for lack of warrant from the Senate. Nations to help the Romans, as in a time of this demand of Appins was referred unto adversity, whom in prosperity they loved not the advice of the Consul: by whom it to flatter. Wherefore Archo proposed a was sure to be made frustrate. Hereby the decree, which passed : That the Acheans Acheans were savers, of more than an hunshould fend their whole power into The faly, dred and twenty Talents: though Polibius and participate with the Romans in all dan- himself ran into danger of Appins his difgers. So the Army was levied: and Polibius, pleasure; and for such honest dealing in his with others, fent Embassadors unto Mar- Countries behalf, was afterwards rewarded tim, to certifie him thereof, and know his by the Romans with many a long years im-

Whether it were by the like policy of He went along with the Army , and awaited Martins, that King Eumenes grew cold in his the Confuls leisure, till they came to He- affection to the Romans; or whether this raclea; where, finding the time convenient, King began when it was too late, to stand in he presented the Decree , and offered the fear lest the fire, which he himself had helped service of his Nation, wherein soever it should to kindle, would shortly take hold on his be commanded. Martius took this very own lodging; or whether the regard of mony kindly; but faid, That he needed now no were able to oversway all other passions; it manner of help. Forthwith Polibius dispatch- is hard to determine : fince they that had ed home his companions, to fignifie thus better means to know the truth, have not much : tarrying himself behind in the precisely affirmed any certainty. One report Camp. After a while, word was brought to is, That Eumenes did not so much as give any Martins, that Ap. Claudius desired, or ra- help to Martins : but coming to have joynther imperiously required, of the Atheans, ed with him, in such friendly manner as he five thousand men, to be sent him into Epirus, did with the former Confuls, was not enter-It was manifest, that Appins had need of these tained according to his liking; and theremen; and that if he were strong in field, upon returned home in such anger, that he he might do notable service, by distracting refused to leave behind him certain horse of the forces of Persens. But the Labirinthian the Gallo Greeks, being requested to have head of Martius, could not allow of such done it. If this were true, and that his broplain reason. He called unto him Polibius, ther Attalus tarrying behind with the Conto whom he declared, That Appine had no ful, did the Romans good service; then is the need of fuch aid, and therefore willed him to reason apparent, of the hatred, born afterreturn home, and in any wise take order that ward by the Senate to Enmenes, and the love the men might not be fent, northe Achaans to Attalus. But it is more generally received; beput to fuch needless charges. Away went that Eumenes gave a willing ear to Perfeus his Polibius; musing, and unable to resolve, desire of accord, for meer defire of gain, (HAP. VI.

And it might well be, that covetouinels drew [deferved fomewhat, howfoever the bufinels him on in the course, whereinto indignation might happen to succeed : so that needs he first led him. Howsoever it befell : Perseus canfed Eumenes to be founded, and found him fo tractable, that he was bold to folicite him by an Embassage. The tenour of his ad vertifements, both to Eumenes and Antiochus. between a King and a free City: that the Romans had quarrel alike to all Kings, though they dealt with no more than one at a time, and used the help of one against another; that Philip was oppressed by them, with the help of Attalus; Antiochus, with the help affailed with help of Eumenes and Prusias. Herewith he willed Eumenes to consider, way, they would be doing with him in Alfa. which lay next at hand; yea, that already him. In like fort he admonished Antiochus. That if he might have fifteen hundred Ta-would have part of his wages in preft. Thus he two Kings did no more, than lofe time; and Eumenes grew suspected of the Romans is a Traitor.

After the fame manner dealt Perfeus with was: That there could be no perfect love King Gentius the Illyrian. He had attempted this Illyrian before; who dealt plainly, and aid. That without mony he could not ftir. Hercunto Perseus loved not to hearken: thinking, that his Treasures would serve at the last cast to deliver him from all his fears. But when the Romans had gotten within of Philip and Eumenes; and now Perseus tempe, then did his fear urge him to prodigality; fo as he agreed to pay three hundred Talents which Gentius demanded for a that when Macedon was taken out of their recompence. So the bargain was foon nade, and pledges on both fides delivered for performance. This was openly done by they began to think better of Prulias than of Perleus, to the end that all his Army might have comfort, by fuch access of strength to not to look for any good conclusion of his their party. Presently upon the bargain war with the Egyptian, folong as the Romans made, Embassadours were sent to Rhodes, could make him give over, by denouncing from both Perfess and Gentiss : who defired their will and pleasure. Finally, he request- the Rhodians, to take upon them, as Arbitraed both of them, either to compell the Ro- tors, between Perfew and the Romans, and to mans to furcease from their War upon Mase- bring the war to an end. The Rhodians thinkdon; or else to hold them as common ene- ing that Martius the Conful was no less demies unto all Kings. Antiochus lay far out firous of peace than the Macedonian, arroof the Romans way: and therefore was little gantly promifed, that they, by their authotroubled with such remonstrances. Eumenes rity, would make peace; wishing the Kings was more nearly toucht; and as he felt part to shew themselves conformable. But the of this to be true, so had he reason to stand Roman Senate, hearing proud words to the in doubt of the rest. Yet when he should same effect, from the Rhodian Embassadors; give answer, he began to offer a bargain of gave an answer as distainful, angry, and peace for mony. He thought the Romans to menacing, as they could device : so as this be no less weary, than Perseus was affraid. vain glory of the Rhodians was thoroughly Wherefore he promifed for his own part, chaftifed; and more thoroughly should have been, if their submiffion had not been as lents for withdrawing his hand from this humble, as their folly was proud. Suchuse of war, then would he remain a Neuter there- Gentius his friendship, made Persess, within : and that for some greater quantity of mo- out laying out one ounce of silver. Now fain ny (how much I find not) he would also he would have hastened this young and rath bring the Romans to condescend unto peace : Illyrian to enter with all speed into the War: and for affurance of his true meaning herein, but then must the mony be hastened away. he offered to give hostages. Perfeus liked Pantauchus the Macedonian Embassadour, well to receive the hostages, but not to lay who remained with Gentius, exhorted him out the mony; especially before hand, as was daily to begin the War by Land and Sea, required. He would fain have peace with whilest the Romans were unprovided. But Rome, and not with Eumenes only. For pro- finding what it was that made all to flay; curing of this, he promifed to be at any rea- he fent word to Perfew. Hereupon ten Tasonable cost; but he would lay down the lents were sent to Pantauchus: who delivermony in the Temple at Samothrace : whence ed it to the young King, as Earnest of that it should be delivered unto Eumenes, after which followed. More followed indeed; that the peace was fully concluded and rati- and fealed up with the feal of the Illyrians, fied. The Isle of Samothrace was Fersens his but carryed by Macedonians, and not too own : and therefore Eumenes thought the fast. Before this mony came into Illyria, money no nearer to him, being there, than Gentius had laid hands upon two Roman if it remained in Pella. Besides, his labour Embassadours, and cast them into prison.
Which called his Treasure-bearers, and sent them fently towards Danubius, wasting the neighwith their load to Pella; for that now the bour-parts of Thrace; yet suffering this craf-Will was of necessity to make war with ty messenger to escape unburt : which was the Romans, whether he were hired thereto more than he could have well expected.

Wria to the aid of Persem, under one Clondi- for the Komans, without diminishing the cus, a petty King, ten thousand horse, and summ. But of this painful Office he was very ten thouland foot of the Gauls, which were foon discharged by L. Anylius Paulus the (as Plutarch hath it) the Baftarne. Thesehad new Consul: who in fifteen daies after his before-hand made their bargain, and were fetting forth from Haly, brought the Kingto receive present pay at the first. At their dom of Atacedon to that end, for which entry into the Kingdom, Persess sent one to God had appointed over it a King so foolish them; defiring their Captains to come visit and so cowardly. him, whom he promised to gratifie with goodly rewards; hoping that the multitude would take good words for payment. But the first question that their General asked, was, Whether the King had fent money to give their Souldiers their pay in hand, according to his bargain? Hereto the mellenger had not what to answer. Why then faid Clondicus ) tell thy Master, that the Gauls will not ftir one foot further, until they have gold, as was agreed, and hostages. Perseus hereupon took counsel : if to utter his own opinion before men fo wife that they would not contradict him, were to take counsel. He made an invective against the incivility and avarice of the Bastarna : who came with Antigonus could make no better answer, than enough to manage this War ; either to

Which Perfess no fooner heard, than he re- | thifting excuses, the Baftarna returned pre-

Thus dealt Perfeus . like a carefull Trea-There came about the same time through surer, and one that would preserve his mony

o. VIII.

Of L. Amilius Paulus the Conful. His journey. He forceth Perseus to discamp. He will not hazard battel with any disadvantage. Of an Eclipse of the Moon. Emylius bis Superstition. The battel of Pydna. Perseus bis flight. He forsakes bis Kingdom: which hastily yeelds to Emylius. Perseus at Samothrace. He yeelds himself to the Roman Admiral, and is fent prifoner to Æmylius.

BY the War of Mucedon, the Romans hitherto had gotten much dishonour. such numbers as could not but be dangerous Which, though it were not accompanied to him and to his Kingdom. Five thou and with any danger, yet the indignity fo horse of them he said would be as many as he moved them, that either * they decreed should need touse; and not so many, that he that Province to L. Emylius Paulus, with Angel. should need to fear them. It had been well out putting it, as was otherwise their mandone, if any of his Counsellors would have ner, to the chance of lot, between him and told him, That there wanted not employ- his fellow-Conful; orat least were gladder ment for the whole Army of them, fince that the lot had cast it upon him, than without any danger to the Kingdom, they that fo worthy a man was advanced to might be let out, by the way of Perrabia, into the dignity of a second Consulship. He The flaty: where, wasting the Country, and refused to propound unto the Senate any filling themselves with spoil, they should thing that concerned his Province; unmake the Romans glad to forsake Tempe, even til by Embassdours, thither sent to view for hunger and all manner of want; therein the estate of the War, it was perfectly doing the King notable service, whether understood, in what condition both the they won any victory or not. This, and a Roman Forces, and the Macedonan, at the great deal more, might have been alledged, present remained. This being throughly if any man had dared to give advice freely, known to be such, as hath been already Inconclusion, Antigonus, the same messenger told, the Senate appointed a strong supply, that had been with them before, was fent not only to the Conful, but unto the Naagain, to let them know the Kings mind. He vy, and likewise to the Army that lay bedid his errand : upon which followed a great tween Illyria and Epirus; from which ADP. murmure of those many thousands that had Claudius was removed, and L. Anicius sent been drawn fo far to no purpose. But Clon- thither in his place. Æmylius, before his dieus asked him now again, Whether he had departure from Rome, making an Oratibrought the mony along with him to pay on to the people, as was the custom, spake those five thousand, whom the King would with much gravity and authority. He reentertain.Hereto when it was perceived that quested those that thought themselves wife accompany him into Macedon, and there af | out. There was a narrow paffage over Olym. -fitchim with their advice; or effe to govern | pur, leading into Perrabia; hard of afcent. their tongues at home, and not take upon but flenderly guarded, and therefore prothem to give directions by hearlay, and cenfure beild'e reports : for he told them plain-It, that he would frame his doings to occafeen anot to the expectation of the multitude. The like freich of his Father L. Amplius , who died valiantly in the battel of Canna. toight well be living in some of their me mories: which was enough to make them confirm themse'ves the more glasly unto reinstructions gives by a wife and refolute

Cescece accompany

All the business within the City bein, di featched, Complies was honourably attendad at his feeting forth on his journey, with to examine the doings and purpofes of their the was : theigh that he should finish it fo shouland men to this enterprise; whereofhe foon and happly, was more than could have committed the charge unto Scipio Emyliabeer hoped or imagined. He came to Trun- nus and Q Fabius Maximus, his own Sons by dufium : whence, when the wind came fair, nature; but adopted, the one of them, by a Son he fet fail at break of day, and arrived of scipio the African; the other, by one of the 12thly at the life of Coregra before night. Fabir. Scipio took with him some light-ar-Thence patied he to Delphi: where having med Thracians and Cretians; but his main done facrifice to Apollo , after the fifth day ftrength was of Legionaries. For the Kings he feet torwards to the Camp, and was there guard, upon the mountain, confifted in a in five daies more. So are there but five of manner, wholly of Archers and Slingers; who the fiveen daies remaining, in which he though, at some distance they might do no-

ving thated no labour of men and of women away their aim, they were like to makea to fortifie the banks of Enipeus, where it was bad nights work, being to deal with those foordable in dry weather: to as there was that were armed to fight at hand. To conceal little hope or rone, to force him; and the business about which they went, scipio confequently, as little peffibility to enter and Fabius took a wrong way towards the that way into Macedon, One great inconveni- Fleet: where victuals were provided for their once troubling the Romans, and much dia- journey it being noised, that they were torun bling them to make attempt upon Dinm, was along the coasts of Macedon by sea, and waste lack of fresh water. For there were ten miles | the Country. All the way they were passing between Dium and Tempe; all the way lying the mountains (which was about three daies) between the Scaffore and the foot of Olym- the Conful made thew of a meaning to fet sher way: which by enquiry was foon found understand, that their labour was in vain-

miling a fair journey. Martius either had not been informed hereef, or durft not attempt 115 or perhaps could not get his Souldiersto make the adventure ; they fearing left it would prove such a piece of work as had been their march over Offa into Tempe. But Paulus was a man of greater industry, rourage, and ability to command. He had reormed even at his first coming, many diforders in the Koman Camp: teaching the foulliers among other good leffons, to be obedient and ready in execution ; without troubling themselves, as had been their manner. an eleccial hope of mer, that he thould finish | General. And now he appointed about five table fervice against those that should climb Terfess lay ftrongly encamped at Dium : ha- up unto them; yet when the darkness took pus, without any Brook or Spring breaking upon Perfeus where he lay, rather to divert torthen that fide. But Zimylim found pre- the Kings attention from that which was his fent remedy for this, by digging Wells on the main Enterprise, than upon any hope to do thore; where he found sweet Springs: as good, in seeking to get over Enipeus. The commonly there is no shore that wants them, | channel of Enipeus, which received in Winthough they rife not above the ground, ter time a greatfall of waters from the moun-Want of this knowledge was enough to hin- trains, was exceeding deep and broad; and Get Martins from taking up his lodging any the ground of it was fuch, as though at the nearer to the Enemy, than the Town of He- present it lay well-near all dry, yet it served racles, on the River of Peness; where he had not for those that were weightily armed to watering at pleasure, but could persorm no fight upon. Wherefore Emplius employed fervice of any worth. Yet when the Roman | none fave his Veliter; of whom the Kingslight Camp had such means to lye close to the Ma- armature had advantage at far diffance, cedonian, as it presently did, the passage though the Romans were better appointed for onward being defended as bath been shew- the close. The Engines from off the Towers ed, seemed no less difficult than before. which Perseus had raised on his own bank, did Wherefore it was necessary to search ano- also beat upon the Romans, and gave them to recontinued his affault, fuch as it could be, more, than to give battel immediately: file of scipio, may each of them have been about him the next day. true. Thus was an open way cleared into That evening (which followed the third opportunity.

Yet Emplius perfifted as he had begun: and notably well fortified: they defired nothing the second day. This might have served to doubting lest otherwise the King should teach the Macedonians, that fome greater change his mind, and getfurther off. And work was in hand: fince otherwise a good to this effect scipio brake with the Conful; Captain, as Amylius was known to be, would praying him not to lose occasion by delay. not have troubled himfelf with making fuch But Amylius told him, that he fpake like a bravado's, that were somewhat costly. But young man; and therefore willed him to Perseus lookt only unto that which was before have patience. The Romans were tyred with his eyes : until his men, that came run-their journey; had no Camp wherein to rest ning fearfully down the Mountain, brought themselves; nor any thing there, save on y wordinto the Camp, that the Romans were thebare ground whereon they trod. For following at their backs. Then was all full these, and the like respects, the Consul made of tumult, and the King himfelt no left a frand : and shewing himfelf unto the Ma-(if not more ) amezed then any of the seal cedonian, who did the like, in order of bat-Order was furthwith given to diflodge: or re', gave charge to have the Camp measured rather without order, in all tume tuous out and entremened behind the Armyswherehafte, the Camp was broken up, and a spee by into, at good leifure, he fell back, without retreat made to Pydna. Whether it were any manner of trouble. After a nights restait for that they which had the custody of the was hoped both by the Romans and the Mapassage were taken sleeping, or whether they cedonious, that the matter should be deterwere beaten by plain force, Scipio and Fabi mined; each part thinking their own Genew had very good success in their journey. It rat to blame, for that they had not fought may well be, that they flept until the Romans the fame day. As for the King, he excused came somewhat near to them; and then ta- himsel by the backwardness of the enemy, king alarm, when their arrows and flings who advanced no further; but kept upon could do little (ervice, were beaten at handy ground arving ill for the Philanx: as on the ftrokes: fo as the different relations that are other file, the Conal had the reasons before cited by Plutarch out of Polybius, and an Epi- shewed, which he communicated to those Macedon: which had been effected by Mar- of September, by the Roman account) C. Sultius in the year foregoing; but was closed pitius Gallus, a Colonel, or Tribune of a up again through his not profecuting so rich Legion, who had the former year been Prætor, foretold unto the Conful, and (with his Perseus was in an extream doubt what good liking) unto the Army, an Eclipse of course to take, after this unhappy begin- the Moon, which was to be the same night: ning. Some gave advice to man his Towns, willing the Souldiers not to be troubled and so to linger out the War: having been therewith, for that it was natural, and might taught by the last years example, how reso-lute the people were in making defence. But the manner of the Romans, in such Eclipses far worse counsel prevailed: as generally to beats Pans of Bras, and Basons, as we it do in turbulent and searful deliberation. The King resolved to put all at once that thereby they did the Moon great to hazzard of battel: fearing belike to put lease, and helped her in her labour. But himself into any one Town, lest that should this prognostication of sulpitius converted be first of all besieged; and he therein ( as their superstition into admiration of his cowardly natures alwaies are jealous ) not deep skill, when they saw it verified. Conover-carefully relieved. This was even trariwife, the Macedonians howled and made that same that Amiliu, or any invader, a great noise, as long as the Eclipse lasted: should have defired. So a place was chosen rather perhaps because it was their fashion, near unto Pydna, that served well for the than for that they were terrified therewith, Phalanx, and had likewise on the sides of it as with a prodegie betokening their los: some pieces of higher ground, fit for the since their desire to fight was no whit lesse-Archers and light armature, There he abode ned by it. I will not here stand to dispute, the coming of the enemy; who stayed not Whether such Eclipses do signifie, or cause long behind him. As foon as the Romans any alteration in civil affairs, & matters that had fight of the Kings Army 5 which with have small dependance on natural complexigreater fear than discretion, had hasted away on: for the argument is too large. More worfrom them, forfaking the Camp that was fo thy of observation it is, how superstitio Ccccccc 2 captivates

the help of true religion is wanting. Emy | cd into the River, wading after him up to tim, though he were sufficiently instructed the knees. The Kings men lay on the further concerning this defect of the Moon, that it bank : whence a couple of Thracians ran inwas no supernatural thing, nor above the to the Water, to draw this horse over to their reach of humane understanding, so as he own side. These fell to blows, as in a private thould need to trouble himfelf with any devout regard thereof: yet could be not refrand His Countrimen feeing this, hafted to refrom doing his duty to this moon, &congra- venge their fellows death, and followed tulating with facrifice her delivery, as fuon those that had flain him over the River. as the shone out bright again: for which he Hereupon company came in, to help on each is commended even by Platarch, a lage Phi-part, until the number grew such, as made it losopher, as a godly and religious man. It patt a fray, and caused both the Armies to be Sulpitive perhaps did not affift him in this careful of the event. In fine, each of the Gefoolish devotion, vet it is like, that he being nerals placed his men in order of battel, aca Senator, and one of the Councel for war, ordingly as the manner of his Country, and to whom belonged the guidance of m lita contrary to the rules of war.

Now concerning the battel; Emilius was throughly perfwaded, that the King means to abide it: for that otherwise be would no have stayed at Pydna, when as, a little be fore, his leifure ferved to retire whither he

tivates the wisdome of the wisest, where | two or three of the Roman Souldiers followquarrel; and one of the Thracians was flain. was partaker the next morning in a facrifice | the arms wherewith they ferved, did repuire. done to Hercules; which was no less foolish. The ground was aflat level, save that on the For a great part of the day was vainly con lides a few hillocks were raifed here and fumed ere Herenles could be pleased with there; whereof each part might take what any facrifice, and vouchizfe to shew tokens advantage it could. The Macedonians were of good luck in the entrails of the beafts. At the greater number, the Romans the better length, in the belly of the one and twentieth fouldiers, and better appointed. Both the Cacrifice, was found a promise of victory to King and the Conful encouraged their men Emplius : but with condition, That he with lively words: which the present condishould not give the onset. Hercules was a tion could bountifully affoord. But the King, Greek, and partial, as nearer in alliance to having finished his Oration, and fent on his the Macedonian than to the Roman. Where- men, withdrew himself into Pydna: there to fore it had been better to call upon the new | do facrifice, as he pretended, unto Hercules. goddefs, lately canonized at Alabanda; or It is the less marvel, that he durst adventure upon Romulus, founder of their City, on battel, fince he had bethought himself of whom the Romans had bestowed his Deity; sucha stratageme, whereby to save his own or(if a God of elder date were more authe person. As for Hercules, he liked not the fantical ) upon Mars the Father of Romalus, crifice of a Coward : whose unseasonable devotion could be no better then hypocrifie. ry affairs; and who therefore would have For he that will pray for a good Harvelt, limited his favour, with no injunctions ought also Plough, Sow, and Weed his Ground. When therefore the King returned to the battel, he found it no better than loft: and he in looking to his own fafety, caused t to be loft altogether, by beginning the flight.

The acts of this day, such as we find relifted the Romans being further off. In re | corded are, That the Roman Elephants, could gard of this, and perhaps of the tokens ap- dono manner of good : That the Mucedonipearing in the Sacrifices, the Conful thought an Phalanx did fo ftoutly prefs onwards, that he might wait upon advantage, with and beat off all which came before it, as out making any great hafte. Neither was it Amplius was thereat much aftonished, that to be neglected, that the morning Sun was the Peligni rufhing desperately on the Phafull in the Romans faces: which would be lanx, were over-born; many of them flain, much to their hinderance all the forenoon. and the squadrons following them so discou-Since therefore Perfess kept his ground, that raged herewith, as they retired apace towas commodious for the Phalanx, and Ami- wards an hill. These were the things that lise fent forth part of his men to bring in fell out averse to the Romans; and which the Wood and Fodder, there was no likelihood Conful beholding, is faid to have rent his of fighting that day. But about ten of the Coat-armour for grief. If the King with all his clock in the morning, a small occasion power of horse, had in like manner done his brought to pass that, which whereto neither devoyre, the victory might have been his of the Generals had over earnest desire. | own. That which turned the fortune of the A Horse brake loose at watering, which battel, was the same which doubtless the Conful expected even from the beginning : the | nd houshold-fervants, ready to attend him difficulty or almost the impossibility of holding the Phalanx long in order. For men that had escaped from the battel, there whileft fome of the Romans fmall battalions preffed hard upon one part of it, and other recovled from it ; it was necessary (if the Treasurers that had the boldness to come to Masedonians would follow upon those which him, and tell him roundly of his faults. But were put to the worse ) that some files ha- in reward of their unseasonable admonitiving open way before them, should advance ons, he stabled them both to death. After themselves beyond the rest that were held this, none whom he sent for would come at a stand. This coming so to pass, admo- at him. This boded no good. Wherefore nished the Consul, what was to be done. The standing in fear, lest they that refused to come long Pikes of the Macedonians were of little at his call, would fliortly dare some greater use, when they were charged in flank by mischief, he stole out of Pella by night. Of the Roman Targettires; according to the his friends he had with him only Evander direction given by Emplies, when he saw (who had been employed to kill Eumenes at the front of the enemies great battel become | Delphi ) and two other. There followed him unequal, and the ranks in some places open, likewise about 500. Cretians, more for love by reason of the unequal resistance which of his money than of him. To these he they found. Thus was the use of the Pha- gave of his plate, as much as was worth lanz proved unavailable against many small about fifty talents, though shortly he couse-Squadrons, as it had been formerly in the ned them of some part thereof; making thew battel of Cynoscephale : yea this form of as if he would have redeemed it, but neembattailing was found unferviceable a- ver paying the money. The third day afgainst the other, by reason, that being not ter the battel he came to Amphipolis, where every where alike distressed, it would break he exhorted the Towns-men to sidelity, with of it felf; though here were little fuch in- tears : and his own speech being hinderconvenience of ground, as had been at Cyno red by tears, he appointed Evander to speak scephalæ.

rout, turned his bridle prefently, and to look well to them elves. Upon the ran amain towards Pella. All his Horse first fame of the overthrow, they had emescaped, in a manner untouched, and a great pried their Town of two thousand Thranumber followed him; the little harm cians that lay there in Garrison: sending which they had taken, witnefling the little them forth under colour of a gainful emgood service which they had done. As for ployment, and shutting the gates after them. the poor foot, they were left to the mercy And now to be rid of the King, they plainly of the Enemy : who flew above twenty bad Evander to be gone. The King hearing thousand of them; though having little cause this, had no mind to tarry : but embarking to be furious, as having lost in that battel , himselfand the treasure which he had there, only some fourscore, or sixscore men at the in certain vessels that he found in the River most. Some of the foot, escaping from the Strymon; passed over the Isle of Samothrace : execution; overtook the King and his where he hoped to live fafe, by priviledges company in a Wood, where they fell to of the Religious Sanctuary therein. railing at the Horsemen , calling them | These miserable shifts of the King make it cowards, traitors, and such other names, till the less doubtful, how all the Kingdom fell at length they fell to blows: The King was into the power of Amilius, within fo few in doubt left they had ill meaning to himfelf: daies after his victory. Pydna, which was and therefore turned out of the common nearest at hand, was the last that yielded. way being followed by fuch as thought it About fix thousand of the fouldiers, that good. The rest of the company dispersed were of fundry Nations, fled out of the battel themselves : every one ashis own occasions into that Town; and prepared for defence: guided him. Of those that kept along with the confused rabble of so many strangers their King, the number began within a while hindering all deliberation and confent. to lessen. For he fell to devising upon whom Hippius, who had kept the passage over Offa he might lay the blame of that daies misfor- against Martin, with Pantaucus, who had tune, which was most due to himself: there- been fent Embassador to Gentim the Illyrian, by caufing those that knew his nature, to were the first that came in : yielding thrink away from him, how they could. At themselves, and the Town of Berea, whither his coming to Pella, he found his Pages they had retired out of the battel. With as they had been wont. But of his great was none appearing in the Court. In this melancholy time, there were two of his what him elf would have uttered. Persent, when he saw his battel begin to the Amphilopitans made it their chief care nica, from Pella, and from all the Towns of breaks off without effect. Pre ently there Macedon, within two daies : the loss of the arrives at Samothrace Cn. Odavius the Rohead bereaving the whole body of all fense man Admiral with his Flect : who aslayes, and strength. Neither did they of Pidna, as well by terrible threats, as by tair lanftand out any longer, when they knew that guage, to draw the King out of his lurking the King had forsaken his Country: but hole; wherein, for fear of imprisonment, opened their gates upon such terms, that he had now already imprisoned himself. the fack of it was granted to the Roman Ar- When all would not ferve, a question my. Emylins fent abroad into the Country, was moved to the Samithracians; How fuch as he thought meeetest, to take charge they durst pollute their Temple, by receiof other Cities : he himself marching to- ving into it one that had violated the like ward Pella. He found in Pella no more than holy priviledge of Sanctuary, by attempting three hundred Talents : the same, whereof the murder of King Eumenes at Dephi & This Perfems had lately defrauded the Illyrian, went to the quick. The Samoibracians, be-But within a very little while he shall have ing now in the rower of the Komans , take taken Sanctuary in the Temple at Samo- the Temple, is accused of an impious fact, thrace : his own Letters to the Consul con- committed at Delphi, whereof unless he can frming the report. He sent these Letters clear himself in judgement , he must not by per onsot such mean condition, that his be suffered to prophane that holy place, care was pitted, for that he wanted the fer- by his abiding in it. The reverence born v ce ot better men. The scope of this wri- to his Majesty, now past, makes them forting was to cefire favour : which, though he bear to fay , that Perfeus him eif is charged begged in terms ill befeeming a K ng, yet with the same crime. But what will this fince the inscription of his Epistle was, King avail, when the Minister of the fact being Perfeus to the Conful Paulus; the Conful, who brought into judgement, shall ( as istobe had taken from him his Kingdom, and teared) appears the Author? Perfor here-would not allow him to rerain the Title, fore willeth Evander to have confideration refused to make any answer thereunto. So of the little favour that can be expected at there came other Letters, as humble as the Romans hand; who are I ke to be precould be expected: whereby he craved and fidents and overfeers of this judgment: fo as obtained, that some might he sent to confer it were better to dye valiantly, fince none with him about matters of his present other hope remains, than hope to make good estate. Nevertheleis, in this Conference, an ill cause; where, though he had a good he was marvelloufly earnest, that he might plea, yet it could not help him. Of this be allowed full to retain the name of motion Evander feems to like well : and King. And to this end it was, perhaps, either kills himself, or hoping to escape that he had to carefully preferred his thence, by deferring the time as it were to Treasure, unto the very last : flattering get poyson wherewith to end his life, is kilhimself with such vain hopes as these: That led by the Kings commandment. The death

1128

the like message came others from the sjalo- far against his mind, that the Conference this matter to heart ; and kno word to the It was foon understood, that Perfess had King, that Evander, who lives with him in the Romans would neither violate a San- of this man, who had stuck to Persess in all duary, nor yet neglect those great riches times of need, makes all the Kings friends inhis possession; but compound with him that remained hitherto, to forfake him: foas for money, letting him have his defire to none are left with him, ave his wife and chillive at eale, and to be called King. Yea, dren, with his Pages. It is much to be fuit feems that he had indeed, even from spected, that they which leave him upon this the beginning, a desire to live in this life occasion, will tell perillous tales, and say, That of Samothrace : both for that in one of his the King hath loft the priviledge of this holy confultations about the War, he was de-Sanctuary, by murdering Evander therein. horted by his friends, from feeking to Or if the Romans will affirm to much, who exchange his Kingdom of Macedon, for shall dare to gainsay them? Since therefore *fuch a paltry Island; and for that he offer- there is nothing but a point of formality, and ed to lay up the money which Eumenes de even that also liable to dispute, which premanded, in the holy Temple that was there. ferves him from captivity; he purpofethto But he finds it otherwise. They urge him make an escape, and fly, with his Treasures, to give place unto necessity, and, without unto Costs his good friend, into Thrace. Commore adoe. to yield to the discretion and andes, a Cretian, lay at Samothrace with one mercy of the people of Rome. This is to thip; who eafily was perf waded to watt the mimfelf; with his wife and * children (if that fuch was the mercy of the people at rather it were not true, that he had with Rome. After these good words, being inhim only * Philip his elder Son , who was vited to the Confuls Table, and respectively 18. 44. only by adoption his Son, being his * brother entreated, he was committed prisoner to by nature) with much ado got out at a 2 Ælius.

window by a Rope, and over a mud-wall. Such end had this Macedonian War, after day, whilest Perfess was scarching all along translated unto Rome. the shore: who had stayed so long about this, that he might fear to be intercepted ere he could recover the Temple. He ran therefore amain towards his lodging: and Gentius King of the Illyrians taken by the thinking it not fafe to enter it the common Romans. way, left he should be taken, he hid himfelf in an obscure corner. His Pages missing him, ran up and down making inquiry ; Arity, Anicius the Romans Prætor, who till Octavius made Proclamation, That all succeeded unto App. Claudius, had the like yield themselves to the Romans. Hereupon the way, fought with him, overcame him,

King thence. With all secrecy the Kings mo | answered all with a searful filence. He was ny, as much as could be so conveyed, was comforted with hope of life, or (as the carryed aboord by night; and the King Conful termed it ) almost affurance; for

Athis coming to the Sea-fide, he found no four years continuance: and fuch end there-Oroandes there: the Cretian had played a withall had the Kingdom of Macedon; the cretian trick, and was gone with the money glory whereof, that had sometime filled all to his own home. So it began to wax clear parts of the world then known, was now

ø. IX.

A Bout the same time, and with like celethe Kings Pages, and Macedonians whatfo- fucces against King Gentius the Illyrian. ever, abiding with their Master in Samo- Gentius had an Army of fifteen thousands thrace, should have their lives and liberty, with which he was at Liffus, ready to aswith all to them belonging, which they had fift King Perseus as soon as the money should either in that Isle, or at home in Macedon, come, whereof he had received only conditionally, That they should presently ten Talents. But Anicius arrested him on they all came in. Likewise Ion, a Theffa- and drave him into * Scorda. This Town Called lonian, to whom the King had given the was very defensible by nature, besides the now Same custody of his children, delivered them up help of fortification; and strongly manned task to Octavius. Laftly, Perfeus himfelf, with with all the force of Illyria; which, affifted his Son Philip, accusing the gods of Samo- with the Kings presence, made it seem unthrace, that had no better protected him, possible to be won, in any not a very long rendred himself, and made the Roman time. Yet Anicius was consident in his Victory compleat. If he had not trusted in late Victory ; and therefore presented his those gods of Samothrace, but employed his Army before the walls, making countewhole care in the defence of Macedon, with nance to give an atlault. The Illyrians, out other hope of living; than of reigning that might easie have defended themselves therein ; he might well have brought this within the Town, would needs iffue forth War to an happier end. Now, by dividing and fight. They were, it feems, rather his cogitations, and purfuing at once, those passionate, than couragious : for they were contrary hopes of faving his Kingdom by beaten; and thereupon forthwith began Arms, and himself by flight, he is become a amazed to treat about yielding. The spectacle of misery , and one among the King sent Embassadours ; by whom, at first, number of those Princes, that have been he desired truce for three daies, that he wretched by their own default. He was might deliberate concerning his estate. It presently sent away to Emplius; before ill became him, who had laid violent hands whom he fell to the ground so basely, that on the Roman Embassadours, to have rehe seemed thereby to dishonour the Victory course to such mediation. But he thought over himself', as gotten upon one of ab- his own fault pardonable, in as much as hiject quality, and therefore the less to be therto there was no greater harm done by esteemed. Amplius used to him the lan- him, than the casting of those Embassadours guage of a gentle Victor: blaming him, into prison, where they were all alive. Hathough mildly, for having, with so hostile ving obtained three daies respite, he passed a mind, made war upon the Romans. Here- up a River, within half a mile of the Roman to good answer might have been returned Camp, into the Lake of Scorda, asit were by one of better spirit. As for Persew, he to consult the more privately; though intrue, the hisbrother Caravantine was com- averse from the Romans in the late War of ing to his rescue. Finding that no such Macedon, were either taken and condemnhelp was toward, it is wonder, that he was ed, or fent prisoners to Rome; excepting fo foolish as to return into scorda. He sent some that slew themselves for fear, whose meffengers craving access unto the Prætor; goods also were confiscated. Yet this probefore whom, having lamented his folly past cured little grace; and less would have ( which, excepting the dishonesty, was not done, if old M. Cato, a man by nature veheto great as his folly prefent ) he fell down ment, had not uttered a milde fentence, and humbly, and yeilded himself to discretion. advertised the Senate, That in decreeing All the Towns of his Kingdom, together War against Rhodes, they should much difwith his wife, children, brother, friends, honour themselves, and make it thought, that were presently given up. So this War * rather the wealth of that City, which they how all had passed.

1130

6. X.

feus.

Tyrannically upon those that had been Romans make themselves terrible in all parts ger. The Rhodian Embassadours were still famous places therein, as for his pleasure: danger of War from Rome being known had been payed unto the Kings, was leffened deed, to hearken whether the report were at Rhodes, all that had been any whit were pretently given by the people of Rome were greedy to ranfack, than any just cause. Constant not knowing that it was begun, until Perhad moved them thereto. This confiders sale, a penna, one of the Embassadours that had tion, together with their good deserts in the conta been imprisoned, brought word from Anicius Wars of Philip and Antiochus, helped well Califer, the Rhodians: among whom a none of any mark remained alive, fave those that had been of the Roman faction. All which notwithstanding, many years passed, ereby im-How the Romans behaved themselves in Greece portunate suit, they could be admitted into and Macedon after their Victory over Per- the fociety of the Romans : a favour which till now they had not efteemed; but thought themselves better without it, as

CHAP.VI.

CHAP. VI.

the pride of their fortune; and to look With the like, or greater feverity, did the unmannerly toward them before, whilest of Greece. Zemilie himself made progress the War with Persens seemed full of dan-thorow the Country; visiting all the at Rome, when the tydings of these Victor vernot forgetting to make them understand ries were brought thither. Wherefore it what power he had over them. More than was thought good to call them into the Se- five hundred of the chief Citizens in Demenate, and bid them do their errand again. trias were flain at one time by those of the This they performed with a bad grace; Roman faction, and with help of the Rofaving. That they were fent from Rhodes to man Souldiers. Others fled, or were bamake an overture of peace; for a funch as it nished, and their goods confiscated. Of was thought, that this war was no less grie- which things, when complaint was made to vous to the Romans themselves, than to the the Conful, the redress was such, as requited Macedonians and many others: but that not the pains of supplication. His friends, now they were very glad, and in behalf of that is to fay, those which betrayed unto the Romans did congratulate with the Se- the Romans the liberty of their Country, he nate and people of Rome, that it was ended feafted liked a King, with exceffive chear; much more happily than had been expeyet fo, that he had all things very cheapin cted. Hereto the Senate made answer, his Camp : an easie matter, fince no man That the Rhodians had fent this Embal-durft be backward in fending provisions, nor fage to Rome, not for love of Rome, but in fet on them the due price. Embaffadours favour of the Macedonian ; whose partizans likewise were fent from Rome ; some, to they were, and should so be taken. By give order for settling the estate of Macethese threats, and the defire of some (co- don, towards which they had more particuvetous of the charge) to have War pro- lar instruction from the Senate, than was claimed against Rhoder; the Embassadours usual in such case; and some, to visit the afwere so affrighted, that in mourning Ap- fairs of Greece. The Kingdom of Macedon parel, as humble Suppliants, they went was fet at liberty by Emplius, and the Emabout the City, befeeching all men, espe- bassadours, his assistants, who had order cially the great Ones, to pardon their in- therefore from the Senate. But this liberty discretion, and not to prosecute them with was such as the Romans used to bestow. The vengeance, for fome foolish words. This best part of it was, That the Tribute which divided into four parts, and they forbidden commerce one with the othere. Al the Nobility were fent captive into Italy with their wives and children, as many a were above fifteen years old. The ancien Laws of the Country were abrogated and new given by Amilius. Such mil chief the Senate thought it better to do at the first alteration of things in this Province, and in the time of Conquest, that otherwise to leave any inconvenience that should be worse in the future. But concerning the Greeks, that were not lubicat to Rome, the things done to them could deserve no beetter name than meer tyrauny : yea, and shameless perjuiy; were it not fo, that the familiar cuftom, among Princes and great Estates, of violating hirst, and let them answer; which if they Leagues, doth make the Oaths of confoe deration feem of no validity. The Em them: Then faid the Roman boldly. That baffadours that were fent to visit the all their Prætors, as many as had led their Greeks, called before them all fuch men Armies, were guilty of this crime. If this of note, from every quarter, as had any were true, faid Xenon, a temperate man, and way discovered an unserviceable disposi- consident in his innocence, than should I tion towards the Romans. These they likewise have been friend to Perseus: fent to Rome; where they were made fure | whereof, if any man can accuse me, I shall enough. Some of these had sent Letters throughly answer him, either here presentto Perfess, which fell at length into the Ro- ly, or before the Senate at Rome. Upon mans hands: and in that respect, though these words of Xenon the Embassadour laid they were no subjects; yet wanted there hold, and said, That even so it were the not colour, for using them as traitors, or best way, for him and the rest topurge at least as enemies. But since only two hemselves before the Senate at Rome. men were beheaded, for having been open- Then began he to name others, and left ly on the Macedonian fide; and fince it is not until he had cited above a thoufand; less afflicted in this inquisition, than they the Senate. This might even be termed the that had fold themselves to the King : this captivity of Greece; wherein so many of manner of proceeding was inexcufable ty- the honestest and worthiest men were carranny. With the Acheans these Embassa- ried from home, for none other cause, than dours were to deal more formally : not so their love unto their Country ; to be pumuch because that Common wealth was nished according to the will of those, who adherents, had been employed by the Na- thieft among them) to inform the Senat the Romans; but only fuen as were the be ft by the Acheans, nor yet held to be offenthe time : wherein, fince all men rembled not expedient for the Country , that thefe men for fear of Rome, the featon ferved atty to should return into Achaia. Neither could any

by half. As for the relt, the Country was | rank the Acheans with the relt. And hereto Callicrates was very urgent : fearing, and procuring them to fear in behalf of him and his friends, that if some sharp order were not now taken he and his fellows should be made to pay for their mischievous devices, ere long time passed. So the Embaffadours came among the Acheans: where one of them, in open ailembly of the Nation, spake, as Callicrates had before instructed him. He said, That some of the chief among them, had with mony and other means betriended Perseus. This beng fo, he defired that all such men might be condemned; whom, after sentence given he would name unto them. After fentence given ( cryed out the whole affembly ) what justice were this? Name them cannot well do, we will foon condemn confessed, that the good Patriots were no willing them to appear and answer before strong; (though this were to be regarded could not endure, that virtue, and rezard by them, having no Commission to make of the publick liberty, should dwell to geor denounce War) and like to prove un- ther in any of the Greeks. At their coming tractable, if manifest wrong were offered; to Rome, they were all cast into prison, as as for that there appeared no manner of men already condemned by the Achaans, fign, by Letters, or otherwise, whereby Many Embassages were sent from Achaia any one of the Acheans could be fuspici- (where it is to be wondred, that any such oufly charged to have held correspon- honest care of these innocent men c ul be dence with the Macedonian. It was also remaining : since honesty had been hus so, that neither Callecrates, nor any of his punished as a vice, in to many of the wortion, in doing or offering their fervice to that these men were neither condemned Patriots. Yet would not therefore the Em- ders. But in stead of better answer, it was balladours neglect to use the benefit of pronounced; That the Senate thought it att were either dead in prison, or, having which these Embassadours came. made offer to elcape, whether upon the way before they came to Rome, or whether cut of Jayle, after that they were commit-

This was a gentle correction, in regard of what was done upon the Epirots. For the Senate being defirous to preferve the Macedonian Treasure whole ; yet withall, to gratifie the Souldiers, gave order, that was memorable in the shorttime followthe whole Country of Epirus should be ing of his reign and life. He died the fix and put to fack. This was a barbarous and hor-thirtieth year after he had worn a Crown, rible cruelty; as alfoit was performed by and in the seventeenth or eighteenth of Amylius with mischievous subtilty. Ha Ptolomy Epiphanes; while he attempted to use the liberty bestowed upon them by three Sons, Seleucus, Philopator, Antiochus the people of Rome ; he sent unto the Epirots for ten of the principal men out of Daughter, Cleopatra, whom he had given every City. There he commanded to deli- in marriage to Ptolomy Epiphanes King of ver up all the Gold and Silver which they Egypt. Seleucus, the fourth of that name, had; and tent along with them, into every and the eldest of Antiochus his Sons; reignof their Towns, what companies of men he ed in Sgria twelve years, according to Esevery one the Town whereinto he was received, took from him the means of fent. Thus in one day were threescore and managing any great affair. Of him, about ever otherwise his virtues were.

their victory, with the Greek and Macedo- the Books of the Maccabees take beginfolicitation of the Acheans, who never cea- | nians. How terrible they were to other sed to importune the Senate for their liber- Kingdoms abroad, it will appear by the ty, prevail at all; until after seventeen years, efficacy of an Embassage sent from them to fewer than thirty of them were inlarged, Antiochus; whereof, before we speak, we of whom that wife and virtuous man Poly | must say somewhat of Antiochus his forein the great Historian, was one. All the goers, of himself, and of his affairs about

ø. XI.

ted thereto, suffered death as malefactors. The War of Antiochus upon Egypt brought to end by the Roman Embaffadours.

A Ntiochus the Great, after his peace Muith the Romans, did nothing that ving taken leave of the Greeks, and of the rob the Temple of Bel, or (according to Straits. Maccdonisms, with bidding them well to Justine) of Jupiter. He left behind him 142-15. Epiphanes, Demetrius Soter; and one thought convenient, as it were to fetch febius, Appian, and Sulpitins : though Jo- Espain the mony. But he gave secret instructions sephus give him but seven years. A Prince, Con. Aprince, C to the Captains, that upon a certain day who, as he was flothful by nature, fo the date 251. by him appointed, they should tall to fack, great loss which his Father Antiochus had ten Cities, all confederate with the Ro three hundred years before his birth, D4mans, spoiled by the Roman Souldiers; niel gave this judgment, Et stabit in loco present and besides other acts of hostility in a time ejus vilissimus & indiguus decore regio. Mass of peace, ahundred and fifty thousand of And in his place (speaking of Antiochus, the that Nation made flaves. It may be grant- Father of this man ) fhall flart up a vile pered, that some of the Epirots deserved pu- son, unworthy the bonour of a King. Under nishment, as having favoured Perseus. But this Seleucus, those things were done which fince they among this people, that were are spoken of Onias the high Priest, in these thought guilty of this offence; yea, or but words, and other to the same effect : What coldly affected to the Romans, had been al- time as the holy City was inhabited with all ready fent into Italy, there to receive their peace, became of the godlines of Onias the due ; and fince this Nation, in general, was Prieft, it came to paß, that even the King did not only at the present in good obedience, honour the place, and garnished the Temple but had even in this War done good fer- with great gifts. And all that is written in vice to the Romans : I hold this act fo the third Chapter of the second of Maccawicked, that I should not believe it, had bees, of simon of Benjamin, who by Appolany one Writer delivered the contrary. lonius betrayed the Treasure of the But the truth being manitest by consent of Temple : and of Heliodorus sent by the all, it is the less marvellous that God was King to seize them; of his miraculous pleased to make Emplies childless, even striking by God, and his recovery at the in the glory of his triumph, how great fo- prayers of Onias; of the Kings death, and of his successour Antiochus Epiphanes. Itis In such manner dealt the Romans, after therefore from the reign of this King, that vered by one and the same hand. For the first Book, although it touch upon Alex in der the Great, yet it hath nothing else of his ftory ; nor of the acts of his fucceffors, till the time of Antiochus Fpiphanes, the his victory over Sogras, that was General brother and successor of this Selencus, from of the Egyptian Forces in the parts. N. whom downward to the death of Simon vertheless, Piology achered to the h Maccabeus ( who died in the hundred mans : whereby he lived has the greater threescore and seventeen year of the security. Helest behind him two Sons, this Greeks in Spria ) that first Book treateth. Ptolomy Philometer, and Piolemy Physicon; The Author of the fecond Book, although with a Daughter Cleopatra. Cleopatra was he take the flory somewhat further off, by wife to the elder of her brethren, and acway of a Proceme, yet he endeth with the ter his death to the younger, by whom the hundred and one and fiftieth year of the was cast off, and her Daughter taken in Grecian reign, and with the death of Ni- her flead. Such were the marriages of canor. flain by Judas: remembring in the thefe Egyptian Kings.

usurped from his brothers Son-

Eagle holding a Dragon in her claws.

been about feven years King of Egypt.

them, whilest he was a child. But they and recovering again at the Prayer of found such other business ere long with the Onias : yet sufficed not this example to

Which Books feem not to be delig Romans, as made them give over the unjust purpose; especially zinticelon, who gave with his Daughter in marriage, time this Ptolomy, the Provinces of Colombia Phanice, and Judga, which he had we also

fourth Chapter the practice of fason the Ptolomy Philometer, so called (that is, brother of Onias; who, after the death of the Lover of Lis Mother) by abitter nick-Selencus, prevailed with Antiochus Epipha- name, because he slew her, tellinco hatred nes, his fuccessor, for the Priesthood. It is with his subjects, and was like to be chawest also held by Jansenius, and other grave sed out of his Kingdom, his younger bro-Writers, that it was in the time of this ther being fet up against him. This can have Onias, that Arius King of the Spartans fent | ving a ftrong party, got peffession of Alex-Embaffadours to the Jews, as to their bro- andria; and Philometer held himself in thers and kinsmen. Which intelligence be- Memphis, craving succour of King Antiotween them and the Greeks, Jonathan the chus his Uncle. Hereof Antiochus was glad : brother and successor of Judas, remem- who under colour to take upon him the breth in the Preamble of that Epistle, protection of the young Prince, fought by which he himself directed to the people of all means possible to possess himself of that Sparta by Numenius and Antipater his Em- Kingdom. He fent Apellonius the Sen of baffadours, whom he employed at the Mnestheus Embaffadour into Feet, and fame time to the Senate of Rome; repeating under colour to affift the Kings Coronsal'o the former Letters word by word, tion, he gave him instructions to persuade which Arius had sent to Onias the high the Covernours of the young King Phillips Priest, whereto Josephus adds, that the meter, to deliver the King his Nephew, name of the Lacedemonian Emballadour with the principal places of that Kingdom, was Demoteles, and that the Letters had a into his hands; petending an extraordisquare Volume, and were sealed with an nary care and defire of his Nephews safety and well doing. And the better to answer Now to this Selences, the fourth of that all arguments to the contrary, he prepared name, fucceeded Antiochus Epiphanes, in a forcible Army to attend him. Thus came the hundred and seven and thirtieth year he alongst the coast of Syria to Juppe, and of the Greeks in Syria. He was the fecond from thence on the fudden he turned him-Son of the Great Antiochu: and he ob- feif towards Jerufalem; where, by Jufon Mic. 4. taled his Kingdom by procuring the death the Prieft, (a Chaplein fit for such a Paof the King his brother; which also he tron) he was with all pump and solemnity received into the City. For though late-Ptolomy Philometer, his Nepheww by his ly, in the time of Selencus, the brother and 2 Mac 3 Sifter Cleopatra, being then very young, had predecessor of Fpiphines, that impious Traitor Simon of the Tribe of Benjamin, Ptolony Epiphanes, the Father of this Ruler of the Temple, when he would have King Philometor, had reigned in Egypt four delivered the Treasures thereof to Apolloand twenty year, in great quiet, but doing nius Governour of Califoria and Phalittle or nothing that was memorable. Phi- nicia, was disappointed of his wicked purip of Macedon, and the Great Antiochus, pose by miracle from H aven; the said Apolhad agreed to divide his Kingdom between lonius being strucken by the Angel of God, though he not long enjoyed it. being over-reached by another in the Crowns, and the Golden Apparrel. He tookaltime kind, calls to mind a by-word taken fo the Silver, and the Gold, and the precious up among the Acheans, when as that mif- fewels, and the fecret Treasures: and when chievous Callicrates, who had been too he had taken away all, he departed into his hard for all worthy and virtuous men , own Land, after he had murdered man, men. was beaten at his own weapon, by one of It was about the beginning of the Ma-Las his own condition. It was thus:

1134

One fire in in other burns more farcibly, One Walf than other Walves does hise more fore, One Hark than other Hawks more fwift does fly : So one melt mifebievous of men before, Callicrates , falfe knave as knave might be, Mes with Menalcidas more falle than he.

who within three years after was betray- Achaans, Robdians, Athenians, and other of ed, and over-bidden by Menelaus the bro- the Greeks, pressed him, by several Embasther of simon, that for three hundred Ta- fages, to some good conclusion. But his lents more obtained the Priesthood for answer was, that if the Alexandrians could himself: Jason thereupon being forced to be contented to receive their King his fly from ferusalem, and to hide himself Nephew Philometer, the elder brother of among the Ammonites.

Phonicia, to augment the numbers of his he faw that it was an hard piece of work men of war, and to prepare a Fleet for his to take Alexandria by force: he thought expedition into Eggpt; with which, and it better to let the two brothers confume 1 Mac 1. with a mighty Army of Land-forces, He themselves with intestine War, than by the went about to reign over Egypt, that he terrour of his arms, threatning destruction might bave the dominion of two Realms, and unto both of them, to put into them any entred Egypt with a mighty company 5 with defire of coming to agreement. He there-Chariots and Elephants, with Hersemen, and fore withdrew his Forces for the present; with a great Navy., and moved War against leaving the Ptolomies in very weak estate, V.18, 19, Ptolemæus King of Egypt; but Ptolemæus the younger almost ruinated by his invawas afraid of him, and fled, and many were fron ; the elder hated and forfaken by his wounded to death. He wan many strong Ci- people. tics, and took away the spoils of the Land of But how weak soever these Egyptians Egypt. Thus was fulfilled the Prophecy were, their hatred was thought to be fo of Daniel: He shall enter into the quiet and strong, that Antiochus might leave them to Dan. 11.24 nlentiful Frovinces, and he shall do that the profecution thereof; and follow, at which his fathers have not done, nor his Fa- good leifure, his other bufinels at Jerufathers Father. Never indeed had any of the lem, or elsewhere. So after the lack of fe-Kings of Spria fo great a victory over the rufalem, he rested him a while at Antioch, Egyptians, nor took from them fo great and then made a journey into Cilicia, to riches. For he gave a notable overthrow suppress the Rebellion of the Thracians and to the Captains of Ptolomy, between Pelu- others in those parts, who had been given, fium, and the Hill Cassium, after which he as it were, by way of dowry to a Concuentred and fackt the greatest and richest bine of the Kings, called Antiochis. For of all the Cities of Egypt, Alexandria Governour of Syria in his absence, he lest en, this Justin, the brother of Onias, feek-ten Egypt, he turned again, and went up to ing to supplant his brother, and to obtain wards Israel and Jerusalem with a mighty in somers of money. So he got his delire, ments thereof, and the table of the Shembread, and the pouring Veffels, and the Bolls. This naughty dealing of Jason , and his and the Golden Basons , and the Vail and the cedonian War, that Antiochus took in hand this Egyptian bufinefs. At what time he first laid claim to celogria, justifying his title by * the same allegations which his Father tons. had made; and fliffly averting, that this fa. 2. Province had not been configued over to the Egyptian, or given in dowry with Cleopatra. Bafie it was to approve his right unto that which he had already gotten, when Papa, Ly. And even thus fell it out with Juson: he was in a fair way to get all Egypt. Thesishing the Ptolomies, then should the War be pre-From Terusalem, Antiochus marched into fently at an end; otherwise not. Yet when ved with zeal, and detesting the facrifedge eth Noble, or Illustrious. fearing his revenge, he withdrew himfelf for a fecond voyage into Egypt, and then into a Sanctuary at Daphne.

CHAP. VI

abused to lust, and other such voluptuous- Histories have delivered us, some more, nels. Whether it were well done of Onias some less. Before the destruction of Te-Apollo and Diana, or to claim priviledge a sword appeared in the Heavens directly from the Holiness of a ground consecrated over the City, after which there followed ownopinion, that the inconvenience is far Pliny tells us, that the Armies were feen less, to hold this Book as Apocryphal, than fighting in the Air from the morning till to judge this fearful shift which Onias the evening. either commendable or allowable, as the fountain poured out blood in stead of wa-Book seems to do. As for this refuge, it ter, in or near the City of Genoa; soon afcould not fave the life of the poor old ter which the City was taken by the Sara-Sandhary : 6 be flew him incontinently that in the Emperour Nero, the off-fpring without any regard of righteousness. Hereof of the Casars, as well natural as adopted, when complaint was made to Antiochus took end; whereof this notable fign gave after his return out of Cilicia, He took warning. amy Andronicus bis garment of purple, When Livia was first married to Augand rent his clothes, and commanded gustus, an Eagle let fall into her arms a bim to be led throughout the City; and in white Hen, holding a Lawrel branch in her the same place where he had committed the mouth. Livie caused this Hen to be care-

one Andronichus, a man of great authority | fently after this, at the first of one Ptolomy about him. In the mean while, Meneland a Traitor to Ptolomy Philometer, he conthe brother of Simon, the same who had demned innocent men to death, who justthrust Jason out of the Priesthood, and ly complained against Menelays, and his promifed the King three hundred talents brother Lysmachus, for a second robbing for an In-come; committing the charge of of the Temple, and carrying thence the the Priesthood to his brother Lysimachus, Vessels of Gold remaining. Hereby it is stole certain Vessels of Gold out of the manifest, that he was guided by his Temple: whereof he presented a part to own outragious will, and not by any re-Andronichus the Kings Lieutenant, and gard of justice : fince he revenged the fold the rest at Tyre, and other Cities ad- death of Onias, he slew those that were in iovning. This he did, as it feemeth to ad- the same cause with Onios; Who, had they vertices vance the payment of the three hundred told their cause, yea, before the Scythians, talents promised; the same being now by they should have been heard as innocent. By softratus eagerly demanded. Hereof when reason of such his unsteadines, this King Onias the Priest (formerly dispossessed by was commonly termed Epimanes, that is, Jason) had certain knowledge, being mo- Mad, instead of Epiphanes, which signifi-

of Menelaus, he reproved him for it; and After this, Antiochus made preparation 2 Me. 5 Id were there feen throughout all the City of Je-Daphne was a place of delight adjoyning rusalem, forty daies long, horsemen running as a suburb to Antioch. In compass it had in the air with robes of gold, and as bands aboutten miles : wherein were the Tem- of spear-men, and as troops of Horsemen let ples of Apollo and Diana, with a Grove, in array, encountring and coursing one weet Springs, banquetting places, and the against another. Of these prodigious like; which were wholly, in a manner, figns, or rather forewarnings of God, all to committ himself to the protection of rusalem by Vestatian, a Star in the form of

to any of the Heathen Gods, I will not a flaughter like unto this of Epiphanes, Plin. 6b. 2: stand to discourse. Only I say for mine though far greater. In the Cymbrian wars, 49 57.

(though a vertuous man ) made for his life, In the time of Pope John the eleventh, a man: for Menelaus taking Andronicus apart, cens, with great flaughter. Of these and Morton, Viprayed him to flay Onias. So when he the like prodigious signs, Vipera hath colle-per de came to Onias, he counselled him craftily, and many, and very remarkable. But this Prodig. L.S. giving him his right hand with an oath, one seemeth to me most memorable, be-pijee and perswaded him to come out of the cause the most notorious. All men know, save sale.

When Livia was first married to Au- sun Galbai wickedness against Onias, he was stain as fully nourished, and the Lawrel branch to a murderer. In taking revenge of this be planted: of the Hen came a fair ininnocent mans death, I should have crease of white Poultry; and from the litthought that this wicked King had once the branch there sprang up in time a in his life time done Justice. But pre- Grove of Lawrel; so that afterwards, in carry in their hands a branch of Bayes ta- ther unto him, which he gave in answer ken out of this Grove; and after the tri- to all Embassadours; yet he now preparumphs ended, to set it again in the same ed to make a sharp war upon them both. ground: which branches were observed, And to this end he presently surnished and when they happened to wither, to fore-flew the death of those persons who car-ried them in triumph. And in the last to enter Egypt the Spring following. When year of Nero, all the broods of the white he was on his way as far as Rhinocorura, Hensdied, and the whole Grove of Bayes he met with Embassadors sent from Prolowithered at once. Moreover, the heads my. Their errand was partly to yield of all the Cafari Statues, and the Scepter thanks to Antiochus for the establishing placed in Augustus his hand, were stricken of Philometer in his Kingdom, partly to down with lightning. That the Jews did beseech him, That he would rather be not think such strange signs to be unwor- pleased to signifie what he required to thy of regard; it appears by their calling have done in Egypt, which should be perupon Cod, and praying, that these tokens formed, than to enter it as an enemy with might turn to good.

into Egypt, was occasioned by discord of the ther call back his Fleet, nor withdraw his two brethrentherein reigning; so was this Army, upon any other condition; than fecond Expedition caused by their good that Ptolomy should surrender into his agreement. For the elder Ptolomy being hands, together with the City of Pelulum, left in Memphis, not strong enough to the whole Territory thereto belonging: force his brother, who had defended Alex- and that he should also abandon and leave andria against all the power of their Un- unto him the Isle of Coprus, with all the cle; thought it the best way to feek en- right that he had unto either of them, for trance into that royal City, rather by per- ever. For answer unto these demands, he fwasion, than by arms. Physican had not fet down a day certain, and a short one. wet forgotten the terrour of the former Which being come and past, without any fiege: the Alexandrines, though they love accordinade, the Syrian Fleet entred Nied not Philometer, yet loved they worse lus, and recovered as well those places to live in scarcity of victuals ( which was which appertained to Ptolony in Arabia, already great among them, and like to as in Egypt it felf; for Memphis, and all grow extream) fince nothing was brought about it, received Antiochus, being unable in from the Country; and the friends of to refift him. The King having now no ftop the younger brother faw no likelihood in his way to Alexandria, passed on this of good iffue to be hoped for without re- therwards by easie journeys. conciliation. These good helps, and Of all these troubles past, as well as of above all these, the loving disposition of the present danger wherein Egyps stood, Cleopatra , who then was in Alexandria , the Romans had notice long ago. But they encouraged Philometor, in his purpose. found, or were contented to find, little rea-But that which made him earnestly de- son for them to intermeddle therein. For firous to accomplishit, was the fear where- it was a Civil war: and wherein Antiechne in he stood of his Uncle. For though seemed to take part with the juster cause. Antiochus was gone out of Egypt with his Yet they gave fignification, that it would Army ; yet had he left behind him a strong be much displeating unto them, to have Garrison in Pelusum : retaining that City, the Kingdom of Egypt taken from the which was the Key of Egyps to his own rightful owners. More they could not, or use. This confideration wrought also would not do; being troubled with Perwith Physcon, and with those that were few; and therefore loth to provoke Asabout him; so as by the vehement media-tiochus too far. Nevertheles, the Egption of Cleopatra their sister the two bretian Kings being reconciled, and standthren made an end of all quarrels.

all triumphs, the Conquerors did use to and a meaning to subject his younger bro-fo puissant an Army. But Antiochus retur-Now, as the first voyage of Antiochus nedthis short answer, That he would nei-

ing joyntly in need of help against their When the news of this accord was Uncle, who prepared and made open brought to Antiochis, he was greatly enra- war against them both : it was to be exged : for notwithstanding that he had pre- pected, that not only the Romans, butmatended no other thing than the establish- ny of the Greeks, as being thereto obliment of the King Philometer his Nephew, ged by notable benefits, should arm in de-

the Auxiliaries, and his Son Polybius, Ge- could have done. neral of the Horse. Hereunto the Acheans That their Nation should, not with such tor, no less than his Brother and Sister. small numbers as were requested, but with In this ambassage of Ptolomy, now re-

fence of their Kingdom. Rome had been | from one meeting to another; and finalfultained with food from Egypt, in the ly broken by the violence of Callicrates War of Hannibal; when Haly, lying For when it was thought that the Decree waste, had neither corn nor mony where- should have passed; he brought into the with to buy sufficient store. By help of Theater where the Assembly was heldthe Egyptians had Aratus laid the founda- a Messenger with Letters from Martins; tion of that greatness, whereto the Acha- whereby the Achauns were desired to ans attained. And by the like help had conform themselves to the Roman Senate; Rhodes heen defended against Demetrius and to labour, as the Senate had done. Toliorcets . Neither were these friendly by sending Embassadours to set Egypt in turns, which that bountiful house of the peace. This was an advice against all Itolomies had done for fundry people reason. For the Senate had indeed sent abroad; ill followed, or feconded, by Embassadours to make peace; but as in a others as bad in requital : but with con-time of greater bufinels elsewhere, with tinuance of suitable beneficence, from such milde words, that nothing was eftime to time encreased. Wherefore the sected. Wherefore it was not likely two brothers fent abroad confidently for that the Acheans should do any good in aid; especially to the Rhodians and Ache- the same kind. Yet Polybius and his friend ans, who feemed most able to give it durst not gain-say the Roman Counsel, effectually. To the Romans, Physcon and which had the force of an Injunction. So Cleopatra had fent , a year fince : but the Kings were left in much diffress ; disaptheir Embassadours lay still in Rome . pointed of their expectation. But within Of the Acheans they defired in particu- a while was Perseus overcome; and then lar , that Lycortas the brave Warriour might the Embaliadours, fent from the Romight be sent unto them, as General of all man Senate, perform as much as any Army

Audience had been lately given by the readily condescended : and would imme- | Senate, unto those Embassadours of diately have made performance, if Calli- Physcon and Cleopatra: which having staycrates had not interposed his mischievous ed more than a whole year in the City. Art. He, whether seeking occasion to brought nothing of their business to effect vaunt his obsequiousness to the Romans, untill now. The Embassadours delivered or much rather envying those Noble Cap- their messege in the name of those that tains whose service the Kings defired; had sent them: though it concerned withstood the common voice: which was, ( which perhaps they knew not ) Philome-

all their power, be aiding unto the Pto- questing help from Rome, appeared a nolomies. For it was not now (he faid) table change of his fortune, from such as convenient time to entangle themselves it had been before three or four years last in any such business, as might make them past. For in the beginning of these his the less able to yield unto the Romans troubles, which began with the Macedowhat help soever should be required in nian War ; either he, or Eulaus, or Lenaus Pobb. ug. the Macedonian War. And in this sen- (upon whom the blame was afterwards 72. tence, he, with those of his faction, ob- laid) which had the government of him. ftinately perfifted 3 terrifying others with thought his affairs in such good estate, big words, as it were in behalf of the that not only he determined to set upon Romans. But Polybius affirmed, that Mar- Antiochus for Calofyria, but would have tius the late Consul had fignified unto interposed himself between the Romans him, that the Romans were past all need and Perseus, as a competent Arbitrator; of help : adding further, that a thousand though it fell out well, that his Embassefoot, and two hundred horse, might well dour was by a friend perswaded to forget be spared to the aid of their Benefactors, that point of his errand. From these high the Egyptian Kings, without disabling their thoughts he fell on the sudden, by the re-Nation to perform any service to the Ro- bellion of his brother and subjects, to live mans; forasmuch as the Acheans could under protection of the same Antiochus. without trouble, raise thirty or forty And now at such time as by attonement thousand Souldiers. All this notwith with his brother and subjects, he might standing, the resolution was deferred have seemed to stand in no need of such Ddddddd 2 protection.

protection, he hath remaining none other and people of Rome, whom they found help whereby to fave both his Kingdom obstinate, or using delay. So these Roand life, than what can be obtained by mans, together with the Alexandrine their intercession which were employed Embassadours, took their leave, and against him. This miserable condition went onward their way within three of him, his brother and fifter shewed it dayes after. felf, even in the habit of those Embassadours. They were poorly clad; the hair on their way toward Egypt, Antiochus had of their heads and beards overgrown, as transported his Army over Luline, some was their manner in time of affliction; and forty miles from Alexandria. So near was they carried in their hands branches of he to the end of his Journey, when the Olive. Thus they entred into the Se-Roman Embassadours met him. After nate, and there fell, groveling and pro- greetings and falutations at their first en-Brate, upon the floor, Their garments counter, Antiochus offered his right hand were not fo mean and mournful, nor their to Popilius ; but Popilius filled it with a looks and countenances so sad and deject- Roll of Paper; willing him to read those ed, but that their speech was than either Mandates of the Senate before he did any of the other far more lamentable. For, thing elfe. Antiochus did fo; and having having told in what danger their King and a little while considered of the business. Country flood; they made a pitiful and he told Popilius, That he would advise grievous complaint unto the Senate, be- with his friends, and then give the Emfeeching them to have compassion of their bassadours their answer. But Popilius, ac-Estate, and of their Princes, who had al- cording to his ordinary blunt manner of waves remained friendly and faithful to speech, which he had by nature, made a the Romans. They said that the people Circle about the King with a Rod which of Rome had so much heretofore favoured he held in his hand, willing him to make this Antiochus in particular, and were of him fuch an answer as he might report to fuch account and authority, with all other the Senate, before he moved out of that Kings and Nations; as, if they pleased Circle. The King astonished at this so but to fend their Embassadours, and let rude and violent a Commandment, after Antiochus know that the Senate was of he had stayed and pawsed a while, I will fended with his undertaking upon the be content (quoth he) to do whatfoever King their Confederate; then would he the Senate shall ordain. Then Popilius presently raise his siege from before Alex- gave unto the King his hand, as to a andria, and withdraw his Army out of Friend and Allie of the Romans. Egypt into Syria. But that if the Senate Thus Antiochus departed out of Egypt repair to Rome, with shameful dishonour to filling every particular circumstance, both the Senate and people thereof, in that, in of returning, and of doing mischiefto Jethe extream dangers of all their fortunes, rufalem after his return; like as if these King no more for a friend to the Senate overthrow to the Egyptian ships.

1113

Whilest Popilius and his fellows were protracted any time, or used any delay; without any good issue of his costly Exthen should Fiolomy and Cleopatra be short- pedition; even in such manner as * Da-39,50 km ly driven out of their Realms, and make niel had prophesied long before: yea, fulthey had not vouch a fed to relieve them. things had rather been historified than The Lords of the Senate moved with foretold by the Prophet. As for the Rocompassion, sent incontinently E. Popilius man Embassadours, they stayed a while, Lenus, C. Decimius, and A. Hostilius, as and settled the Kingdom of Egypt, leaving Embassadours to determine and end the it unto the elder brother, and appointed War between those Kings. In commission the younger to reign over Cyrene. This they had first to find King Prolomy, and done, they departed towards Cyprus; which then Antiochus, and to let them both un-derstand, that, unless they surceased, and the Egyptian, having first sent away Asgave over Arms, they would take that tiochus Fleet, which had already given an

6. X I I. How the Romans were dreadful to all Kings. Their demeanour towards Eumenes, Pru-

Perseus and his Children. The inflability

clusion of the Work.

Bline, in doing his Message, and by and Maronea: thereby making uneffectuthe ready obedience of King Antiochin al their promise; which otherwise they to the will of the Senate; we may per- could not, without shame, revoke. And ceive how terrible the Romans were as for the Gallo-Greeks, which were about grown, through their conquest of Ma- to invade the Kingdom of Pergamus; they cedon. The same Popilius had been well sent Embassadors to them, with such incontented, a year before this, to lay structions, as rather encouraged than afide the roughness of his natural conditi- hindred them in their purpose. The difon, and to give good language to the Acheans and Etolians, when he went Embassa. Eumenes thought it worthy of his labour dor to those people of Greece, that were to make another voyage to Rome. He of far less power than King Antiochus. might well blame the folly of his second Likewise, Antiochus had with good words, voyage thither, for this necessity of the and no more than good words, dismissed third: fince, by his malice to Perseus, he other Embassadors which came from Rome, had laid open unto these abitious Poin such sort, as they complained not, much tentates the way to his own doors. No less used any menacing terms, though he sooner was he come into Italy, than the performed nothing of their request. But Senate was ready to send him going. It now the case was altered. So found other was not thought expedient to use him as

Kings as well as Antiochus. lus, to gratulate the victory over Perseus, avoided the note of singular inconstancy : and to crave help or countenance of the and to entertain him as a friend, was Senate against the Gallo Greeks, which more then their hatred to him, for his molested him. Very welcome was Attalus, ingratitude, as they deemed it, and lovingly entertained by most of the would permit. Wherefore they made a Senators: who bad him be confident, and Decree, That no King should be suffered request of the Senate his Brothers King- to come to Rome; and by vertue thereof dom for himself ; for it should surely be fent him home, without expence of much given him. These hopeful promises tickled farther complement. Attalus with fuch ambition, that he either approved, or feemed to approve the moti- Rome somewhat before; where he was welon. But his honest nature was soon re- comedafter a better fashion. He had learclaimed by the faithful councel of Stratius ned to behave himself as humbly as the a Physitian ; whom Eumenes had fent to proud Romans could expect or defire. For, Rome of purpose to keep his Brother up-entring into the Senate, helay down and right. So, when he came into the Senate, kissed the threshold, calling the Fathers his he delivered the errand about which he gods and faviours; as also he used to wear had been sent, recounting his own ser- a Cap, after the manner of slaves newly vices done to the Romans in the late War, manumiffed, professing himself an enfranvices done to the Roman intriciate was, where withall, he forgat not to make of chifed bondman of the people of Rome. He his Brother as good mention as he could: was indeed naturally a flave, and one that and finally, requefted, That the Towns of by fuch abject flattery kept himfelf fare, and Maronea might be bestowed though doing otherwise greater mischief 895. Leg. upon himself. * By his omitting to sue for than any wherewith Perseus had been his Brothers Kingdom, the Senate con charged. His errand was, besides matter of ceived opinion, that he meant to crave complement, to commend unto the Senate granted all his defire; but in the presents which they gave unto him (as was their custome to Embassadors that came with an acceptable meilage ) they used singular fias, Masanissa, and Coyts. The end of magnificence. Nevertheless Attalus took no notice of their meaning, but went his of Kingly Estates. The Triumphs of Pau- way, contented with what they had alreahis, Anicius, and Octavius. With the Con- dy granted. This did so highly displease the Senate, that whilft he was yet in Italy, Y this peremptory demeanour of Popi- they gave order for the liberty of Einus pleasure of the Senate being so manifest; an enemy, that came to visit them in love : Eumenes fent to Rome his brother Atta- neither could they, in fo doing, have Prusias King of Bithynia had been at another day of audience for that busi- the care of his Son Nicomedes, whom he ness alone. Wherefore to make him under- brought with him to Rome, there to receive stand how gracious hewas, they not only education. Further petition he made, to have fome Towns added to his Kingdom: I had often made fuit to Amylius, that he whereto, because the grant would have might not be put to such disgrace : but been unjust, he received a cold answer. he still received one scornful answer, That But concerning the Wardship of his Son, it lay in his own power to prevent it; it was undertaken by the Senate : which, whereby was meant, that he might kill vaunting of the pleasure lately done to himself. And surely, had he not hoped rgpt, infreeing it from intiochus, willed for greater mercy than he found, he him thereby to confider, what effectual would rather have fought his death in protection the Romans gave unto the chil- Macedon, than to have been beholding to dren of Kings, that were to their Patro- the courtefie of his infolent enemies for a nage commended. held his credit with the Romans, good. hope, was no better than this: After than His quarrels were endless with the car- he, and his fellow-King, had been led in thaginians: which made the friendship of chains thorow the streets, before the the Ramans to him the more affured. In Chariots of their Triumphing Victors. all Controversies they gave judgement on they were committed to prison, wherein his fide: and whereas he had invaded they remained without hope of release. the Country of Emporia, holding the It was the manner, that when the Tri-Lands, but unable to win the Towns; umpher turned his Chariot up towards the Romans (though at first they could the Capitol, there to do sacrifice, he should find no pretext, whereby to countenance command the Captives to be had away him in this oppression ) compelle I finally to prison, and there put to death: so as hold, and to pay five hundred Talents to of those that were overcome, might be the Numidian, for having hindred him both together at the utmost. This last senstay at home.

Ddddddd 3

Costs the Thracian fent Embaffadours to the children of Perfeus, might be fet atli- Earth seemed too narrow. berry, for convenient rantome. His exhostages without necessity: Yet was his Son given bick to him ransome-free; toward the Romans in time following. His Kingdome lay between Macedon, fair terms.

Triumphs of Amylius and Anicius. Perseus ness; in stead of that blessed Counsel, Do wretched life. The iffue of the Roman But above all other Kings, Mafaniffa clemency, whereof Amylius had given him the Carthaginians both to let go all their the honour of the Vanquisher, and misery of his due so long. Now indeed had Rome tence of death was remitted unto Perfem : good leifure to devise upon the ruine of yet so, that he had little joy of his life; Carthage: after which, the race of Mafa- but either famished himself, or (for it is #iffa himself was shortly by them rooted diversly reported) was kept watching perup. But hereof the old King never dream- force by those that had him in custody; ed. He fent to Rome one of his Sons, to and fo dyed for want of fleep. Of his Sons, congratulate the Victory over Persens; two dyed; it is uncertain how. The and offered to come thither himself, there youngest called Alexander (only in name to facrifice for joy unto Jupiter in the Ca- like unto the Great, though destined somepitol. His good will was lovingly accepted; times perhaps by his Father, unto the forhis Son rewarded, and he entreated to tunes of the Great ) became a Joyner, or Turner; or, at his best preferment, a Scribe under the Roman Officers. In such poverexcuse himself touching the aid by him ty ended the Royal house of Macedon: given to Perseus, for that the Macedonian and it ended on the sudden; though some had him bound by hostages; and to in- eightscore years after the death of that treat, That his Son, which was taken with Monarch, unto whose ambition this whole

If Perseus had known it before, that his cuse was not taken; fince he had volundown Son should one day be compelled to tarily obliged himself: o Perseus, by giving earn his living by handy-work, in a painful Occupation; it is like, that he would not as in a wantonness of Soveraignty have with admonition, to carry himself better commanded those poor men to be slain, which had recovered his treasures out of the Sea, by their skill in the feat of diving. and some barbarous Nations; in which He would rather have been very gentle, respect, it was good to hold him in and would have considered, that the greatest oppressors, and the most under-trodden As for those unhappy Kings, Perseus and wretches, are all subject unto the One Gentius, they were led thorow Rome, high Power, governing all alike with abwith their children and friends, in the foliute command. But such is our unhappymy felf. One hath faid truly.

_vv-Et qui nolunt occidere quenquam Poffe volunt.

Would have it in their power to kill.

ability to do evil without controll which of the Booty. So great was the quantity is a dangerous temptation unto the per- of Gold and Silver carried by Fanlar into formance. God, who best can judge what the Roman Treasury, that from thenceis expedient, hath granted such power to forth, untill the Civil Wars which followvery few: among whom also, very few ed upon the death of Julius Cesur, the there are, that use is not to their own hurt. Estate had no need to butthen it self with For who fees not that a Prince, by racking any Tribute. Yet was this noble Triumph his Soveraign Authority to the utmost likely to have been hindred by the Soulextent, enableth ( besides the danger to diers ; who grudged at their General, for his own person ) some one of his own Sons not having dealt more bountifully with or Nephews to root up all his progeny? them. But the Princes of the Senate Shall not many excellent Princes, notwith- over-ruled the people and Souldiers heremost traiterously, and barbarously King private calamity, in stead of the pub-Edward the second; was, by reason of a lick. marriage, proclaimed, in time not long About the same time, Off avins the Adafter following, Heir apparent to the miral, who had brought Perfeus out of Sa-Crown of England: which, had he ob- mothrace: and Anicius the Prætor, who tained, then had all the power of Edward had conquered Illyria, and taken King fallen into the race of his mortal enemy, Gentius prisoner; made their several to exercise the same upon the Line of Triumphs. The glory of which magnidents, the evil that may fall on their own Rome, Sume Superbiam, Take upon thee the posterity : so do they necessarily make us Majesty that thy deserts have purchased.

1011 would be done unto, a fentence teach-| understand, how happy that Country is, ing all moderation, and pointing out the which hath obtained a King able to conway to felicity; we entertain that arro- ceive and teach, That "Gol is the fariff. The true gant thought, I will be like to the most and sharpest Schoolmssfor that can be derified have the best that is, I will do what shall please for such Kings, is think this world ordered a charter for such Kings, is think this world ordered a charter than the such as the su for them , without controlerant to turn it upfide-down at their pleasure.

Now concerning the Triumph of L. Amylius Paulus, it was in all points like unto that of T. Quintim Flamilius Even they that have no murdrous will, though far more glorious, in regard of the Kings own person, that was led along therein, as part of his own spoils; and in All, or the most, have a vain desire of regard likewise both of the Conquest, and ftanding their brotherhood, or other near- in, and brought them to reason by severe nels in blood, be driven to flatter the exhortation. Thus Paulus enjoyed as Wife, the Minion, or perhaps the Har-much honour of this Victory as men could lot that governs one, the most unworth give. Nevertheles, it pleased God to thy of his whole house, yet reigning over take away from him his two remaining all? The untimely death of many Princes Sons, that were not given in Adoption of which could not humble themselves to which, the one dyed five dayes before the such flattery; and the common practice of Triumph, the other three dayes after the Turkish Emperours to murder all their it. This loss he bore wisely: and told brethren, without expecting till they of the people, That he hoped to see the fend; are two good proofs hereof. Here- Common-wealth flourish in a continuunto may be added, that the heir of the ance of proferrity; fince the joy of fame Roger Mortimer, who murdered his Victory was required with his own that unhappy King. Such examples of the ficent spectacles, together with the coninstability whereto all mortal affairs are fluence of Embassages from all parts, and subject; as they teach moderation, and Kings, either visiting the Imperial City, admonish the transitory gods of King- or offering to visit her, and do their dudoms, not to authorize by wicked prece-ties in person; were enow to say unto INY this which we have already fet wings far over his Neft, but the SDA-Down, is feen the beginning and end niard; who fince the time that Ferdinand of the three first Monarchies of the World; expelled the Moors out of Granado, have whereof the Founders and Erectors made many attempts to make themselves thought, that they could never have end- Masters of all Europe. And it is true, that ed. That of Rome which made the by the treasures of both Indies, and by fourth, was also at this time almost at the many Kingdoms which they posless in the highest. We have left it flourishing in Europe, they are at this day the most the middle of the field; having rooted up, powerfull. But as the Turk is now counor cut down, all that kept it from the eyes terpoifed by the Persian, so instead of so and admiration of the World. But after many Millions as have been spent by the some continuance, it shall begin to lose English, French, and Netherlands in a dethe beauty it had; the ftorms of ambition fensive War, and in diversions against shall beat her great boughs and branches them, it is easie to demonstrate, that with one against another; her leaves shall fall the charge of two hundred thousand off, her limbs wither, and a rabble of pound continued but for two years, or barbarous Nations enter the field, and cut three at the most, they may not only be her down.

1142

Nations, have been the subject of those brought back into their natural channels ancient Histories, which have been prefer- and old banks. These two Nations, I say, ved, and yet remain among us; and with- are at this day the most eminent, and to all offo many tragical Poets, as in the per- be regarded; the one feeking to root out fons of powerful Princes, and other mighty the Christian Religion altogether , the men have complained against Infidelity, other the Truth and sincere Profession Time. Destiny, and most of all against the thereof; the one to joyn all Europe to Variable success of worldly things, and Asia, the other the rest of all Europe to Instability of Fortune. To these under- Spain. takings, their great Lords of the World

For the rest, if we seek a reason of the have been stirred up, rather by the desire of Fame, which ploweth up the Air, and less ambition in mortal men, we may add ory ame, which provert up the Air, and less ambition in mortal men, we may aud foweth in the wind; than by the affection to that which hath been already (aid; of bearing rule which draweth after it formuch vexation, and for many cares. And that this ist rue, the good advice of Ciness but not the ends of those great Ones to Pyrthus proves. And certainly, as which preceded them. They are alwaiss Fame hath often been dangerous to the living, foit is to the dead of no use at all; but they never mind the misery of the because separate from knowledge. Which, other, till they find the experience in were it otherwise, and the extreame ill bar- themselves. They negled the advice of gain of buying this lafting discourse, un- God, while they enjoy life, or hope of it; derstood by them which are dissolved; but they follow the councel of death, upon they themselves would then rather have his first approach. It is he that puts into wished, to have stoln out of the world man all the wisdom of the World, without without noise, than to be put in mind, that speaking a word; which God, with all they have purchased the report of their the words of his Law, promises, or threats, actions in the World, by rapine, oppres doth infuse. Death, which hateth and fion, and cruelty: by giving in spoil the destroyeth man, is believed; God, which innocent and labouring foul to the idle hath made him, and loves him, is alwaies and infolent, and by having emptied the deferred. I have confidered (faith Sahr-Cities of the World of their ancient Inha- mon ) all the works that are under the Sun, bitants, and filled them again with fo and behold, all is vanity and vexation of fimany and fo variable forts of forrows.

East, but that of the Turk : nor in the West any Prince that hath spread his perswaded to live in peace, but all their Now these great Kings, and conquering swelling and overflowing streams may be rit : but who believes it till Death tells it Since the fall of the Roman Empire us? It was Death, which opening the con-(omitting that of the Germanes, which science of Charls the fifth, made him enhad neither greatness nor continuance) joyn his Son Philip to restore Navarre; and there hath been no State fearful in the King Francis the first of France, to com-

Murderers of the Protestants in Merindol tered, thou only hast cast out of the world and Cabrieres, which till then he neglected. and despised : thou hast drawn together It is therefore death alone that can fud- all the far firetched greatness, all the denly make man to know himself. He pride, cruelty, and ambition of man, and tells the proud and infolent, That they covered it all over with these two narrow are but abjects, and humbles them at the inftant; makes them cry, complain, and Laftly, whereas this Book, by the title repent ; yea, even to hate their forepassed it hath, calls it felf, The first part of the Gehappiness. He takes the account of the rich, neral History of the World, implying a second and proves him a beggar; a naked beggar, and third Volume; which lass intended, which hath interest in nothing, but in the gravel that fills his mouth. He holds a discouragements, perswading my silence; Glass before the eyes of the most beautiful, it hath pleased God to take that gloand makes them fee therein their deformi- rious Prince out of the world, to whom tyand rottenness; and they acknowledge they were directed, whose unspeakable whom none could advise, thou haste per- lucium Citharamea, & Organum meum in weswaded; what none have dared, thou hast cem flentium.

mand that justice should be done upon the done; and whom all the world hath flat-and never enough lamented loss hath O eloquent, just, and mighty Death! taught me to say with Job, Versa est in like Annalls, yearly fet down all occurrences not more illustration, nor indeed fo much, to thete coherent. This here followeth, may ferve as an In- that are acquainted with works of this kind. To dex to the present part of this work, pointing un avoid prolixity, I have forborn to insert those to the feveral matters , that having fallen out at years, which I find not figned with some regarone time are far dif-joyned in the relation. Cer- dable accident, as with the birth or death of tainly it is not perfect meither do I think that any Some Patriarch; the beginning of Some Kings can be. For hom foever the years of the first Pa- reign ; Some change of Government ; Some triarchs may feem to have been well-neer com- battel fought, or the like. So of the 12. years pleat, get in the reigns of the Kings of Juda and wherein Sylvius Capetus reigned over the Ifrael, we find many fractions, and the last year, Latines, I note only the first ; that is, omitting or years of one King reckoned also as the fore- all between the 4. of Jehosaphat, wherein Camoft of another. The same is most likely to have petus began , unto the 17. wherein Sylvius fallen out in many other, though not fo precifely Aventinus succeeded, and wherein Jehoram recorded. Hereto may be added the divers and first reigned with Jehosaphat his father. For I imperfect forms of the year, which were in use a. thought it vain to have filled up a Page with mong fundry Nations, causing the * Summer 12. lines of idle ciphers, numbring forth, 2. 2. months, in process of some ages, to fall into the 4. 5. and so still onwards, till I had come to winter, and so breeding extream consussion in the sirft of Aventinus, and the 17. of Jehothe reckoning of their times. Neither is it a Saphat. In setting down the Kings, there is small part of trouble, to choose out of so ma- noted over the head of every one, what place ng and so utterly disagreeing computations, he held in order of succession was whether he as have already gotten Authority, what may were the first, second, fifth, seventh, or so forth probably be held for truth. All this, and intankof those that reigned in his Country, a great deal more , is to be alledged , in excuse without notable interruption : Before the name of such errours, as a more intentive and perfect is the first year of his reign; at the end or Calculator shall buppen to find herein. It may foot of the name ( as the space gives leave ) Scree to free the Book, and likewise the Rea- is the whole number of years in which he der ( if but of mean judgement, ) from any reigned; in the spaces following underneath, notorious Anachronicism; which ought to are those years of his, which were concurrent Suffice. The book indeed will need it, even in with the beginning of some other King, or with that regard ; not only from some errours of the year of any remarkable accident. Where two the Pres, in the numbring of years, but for numbers, or more, are found before one Kings some bastic mis rechonings of mine own, which name; there it is to be understood, that the fended with the rest, shall find reason to be Israel, was the Same with the second of his bropleased with this, as tending wholly to his ther Ahaziah, and the 22. of his father Ahab. omneale.

TO THE READER.

dily be Conceived. Where two titles, or more, of them reigned in Some part of the Same year. are over the head, as [ Nationality ] there do the which is reckoned the second of Ela, and the numbers underneath proportionably answer, the first of Omri. Particularly, under the reigns higher to the higher, the lower to the lower. of the Egyptian Kings, are fet down the years For example, The walls of Jerusalem were fi- of those Dynasties, which it was thought meet Rome, and in the 314 from Nabonasser. In moneth, upon which Nabonassar's year began

HE use of Chronological Tables is need- like manner it is to be understood. That Achieve ful to all Histories , that reach to any Saphat began his reign in the 3774. of the fulength of time; and most of all, to those lian Ara, in the 3092. of the World and in that are most general: fince they cannot, the 99. year of the Temple. This meds not I defire to have hereby reformed, in hope that fame year belonged not only to the King then the Printing of this Table shall not want care beginning, but unto some one or more of his ful diligence. The Reader, of he be not of foregoers: as the sufference of Jehoram King of Sombere two or three names are found in one The titles over the Columns, have reference space, as in the 3077 year of the World Zimit, tothat which follows under them, as will rear Tibni, and Omri; it is meant, that every one nished in the 319. Tear from the building of to insert; as likewise otherwhiles, the day, the a in the place last above cited.

To the Reader.

where due place was, in the book it self: be otherwhiles found in this Table but so, as the bart remaint thought on note, that under the difference is never of a whole year. rish of Olympiads, is fet down, first the numin of the Olympiad, and beneath it, the year greater number, over the years of the World. first year thereof.

Olympiads, of Rome, of Nabonassar, and the multiplication of 19. 28. and 15. that is, other, had not beginning in one moneth, but of the Cycle of the Moon, the Cycle of the Sun, Some of them in March, Some in April, Some and the years of an Indiction. Being divided about Midsummer, and some at other times: the by any of the le, it leaves the number of the pre-better to express their several beginnings, some sent year, or if no fraction remain, it shows the painful Chronologers have divided them pro-last year of that Cycle to be current. For exampartypus chromosogers wave arounce norm pro-portionably in their feveral Columns, oppoling ple, in the 44.98. of this Period, when we part of the one year to part of the other: not fought the great battel of Cannæ, the Prime or ( as I have here done ) cutting all overthwart golden number was 14. the Cycle of the Sun. with one ftraight line, as if all had begun and 18. and consequently the Dominical letter F. as ended at one time. But this labour have I spared may be found by dividing the same number of ficulty. One familiar example will explain all.

ch, how it varied from other years, may be crowned, held a Parliament, brake it up, threw down Images, and reformed many things in reoncerning the Exa, or account of years, ligion, all in her first year, yet not all in that to tohitus, who began the Olympiads, from year 1558. but the greater part in the year folbuilt, from Nabonassar, and the like; lowing, whether we begin with the first of Januthe armas thought convenient hath been ary, or with the 25. of March. The like may

The Julian Period, which I have placed as the .fthat Olympiad : as that Cyrus began his was delivered by that honourable and excellentreign in Persia, in the 55. Olympiad, and the ly learned Joseph Scaliger : being accommodated to the Julian years, now in use among us. Now, for that the years of the world, of the It consisteth of 7980. years which result from as more troublesome than useful, since the more the Julian Period 4498. by 19, for the Prime, part would not have apprehended the meaning, by 28, for the Sycle of the Sun. This Julian and fince the learned might well be without it.

It will only be accepted to observe, that howseceeds the year of the world by 682. Besides the ever the Era of the Olympiads be 24. years former uses, and other thence redounding, it is elder than that of Rome, and 29. than that of a better Character of a year, than any other Nabonassar, jet the reign of some King may Era (as, From the beginning of the World, have been at such a time of the year as did From the Flood, From Troy taken, or the not sute with this difference. But hereof I take like) which are of more uncertain position. More little regard. The more curious will easily find I shall not need to write, as touching the use or my meaning: the vulgar will not find the dif- explication of these Tables. Neither was thus much requisite to such as are conversant in Queen Elizabeth began ber reign the 17,0f No- works of this kind : it sufficeth if hereby all be vember in the year of our Lord 1558. She was made plain enough to the wulgar.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

Years of the Julian Period, World, Patriarchs, Oc.

13í	1. Setb 912		1
Ada   30   13   131	912		1			1	1	1	1			1	1
13 131	912					ì								i
12
36	106	905						l
08 326	196	91	nan.	are reck childres	oned con	spieat: z	which is	interrea	out of t	be addi	tion of t	ne veave l	hefore th	ny thing ny boga
96	266	161	71	balalel 895							}
143 161	331	226	136	66	1. fared   962
30 5	493	388	298	228	163	1. E- noch. 265								;
3 7 0 588	5;8	453	363	293	228		t hussela
57 375	745	640	550	480	415	253
930	802	695	dos	535	470	308	2+3	55
669 987	857	752	662	592	527	365	300	113
724 0 <sub>4</sub> 2	912	807	717	647	582		355	168
739 057	 	822	732	662	597		370	183
35 35 50 65 70	08   326 78   96   43   661 105   123   70   88   88   857   75   12   12   12   12   12   12   12   1	08   196   266   43   61   331   493   77   74   75   75   74   75   75   76   76   76   76   76   76	08   196   91   178   196   92   178   196   191   178   196   191   178   196   191   178   196   191	08	08   16   91   1   Cai-All the nam. are reckled   91   1   Cai-All the nam. are reckled   91   1   Cai-All the nam. are reckled   91   1   1   1   1   1   1   1   1	1   Cai   All the years of section   1   Cai   All the years of section   3:6   196   91	1   Cai   All the years of the Pate   All the years of the years of the Pate   All the years of	1   Cai- All the years of the Patriarchy, are reckened compleat: which is 910   children, mon.   are reckened compleat: which is 910   children, mon thofe that follower     78	1   Cai   All the years of the Patriarcks, whereis   326   196   91   man.   are reckoned compleat: which is inferred   90   ochidaren, mate valve   11. Ma   man.   12. Ma   man.   m	1   Cai-All the years of the Patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the point of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, wherein they began in the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, which is inferred out of the patriarcks, wh	1	1   Cai   All the years of the Patriarcks, whereis they begat children, dies   196   91   nan.   are reckoned compleat: which is inferred out of the addition of the additio	1   Cai-All the years of the Patriarcks, wherein they begatchildren, died, or perf	1   Cai   All the years of the Patriarcks, wherein they begat children, died, or performed a are reckened compleat: which is inferred one of the addition of the years before the year children, died, or performed a are reckened compleat: which is inferred one of the addition of the years before the years and years before the years before the years before the y

i	fulien The 15 orld	Енот.	Cuina	m Ma lale	iba. 7a	ared.	Me- buse- lab.	La- mech.	Neah	Sem	.	-	  -				880	$\overline{}$	373	243	213	179		35	117	89	87	58	1 450 66, 3
	1822	905	815	74	5 0	680	453	266	84	-	-		_			279 2649 1967	911	409	309	274	244	210		3 1. Ni -	148	1 20	118	89	32
Cinan dyed.	1917		910	0 8.	42	775	548	361	175	_	_	_			-· ·	316 2670 1988	932	430	330	295	265	231	201	22	169	11	139		2 1. Eu-
Mahalaleel dyed this year.	1972	\		8	95	830	603	416	234		_ _	_ _			The last year of Schis life.	331 2678 1 99 6	940	438	338	303	273	239	209	30	177	149	147	118	rops +5
Fared dyed.	1422	1					735	584	36	6	_	1.			fe dath of Na-		941	439	339	-304	274		210	31	178	150	148	119	1:	Ī
Floud threatned, Gen. 6.3.	1537		1				850	66	3 4	31	_		_		hilled this year.		950	418	348	313	283		219	40	187	159		128	19	-
	1559			1			872	68	5 50	3 1.	Sem 00	1	1		fa 10. 17# // 1 Dj.t, Fish L.2.	2009	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	451	351	316	286		222	43	190	r. Mix-		131	22	bra
Lamech djed.	2333 1651					_	96.	4 77	7 5	95	93				;;; <sub>3,4,5</sub> ,&c.	35 2701 2019 362		461	361	326	296		232	4 1. Semi ramis 4		11	 	141	32	1
Methufelah died this year a little ethe Floud Noahentreth into the J 7. § 8. & 9. The Floud.	be- 2338 4rk 1656						96	9	6	00	98		_ -	_\	dafi year of Reu	2708 2 0 26 369		463	358	333	303		239	8	207	18		148	39	1
The Floud ceafeth. Noah iss t of the Ark.	ued 2335 165						_		1	501	99					2715		475	375	340	310			15	214	25		15	1. Telk	-
and the state of t	Flow Flow	ld N	oah. S		1. Ar phaxae 43	d)	-	_	_	_	\			_	hlaft of Sarug	273 £		491	391	356	326	) 	Ì	31	230	41		171	Ì	Ť
-	234 165	9 6	03	101					$\downarrow$							Julian. World. Floud:	Sem.	Arph	axad.	Salab.	Heber.	A	yria.	Eg	ypt.	1	erah.	Sicy	m. A	bran
	237 169		538	136	36	la. S.	6.   3 3						11	54		2739 12053 396	495	3	95	360	330	3	35		45	17	5 1: 4	Apis, 2	25 '	45
	1240	6	668	166	66	3		er. 464						164		27+3 2061 40	503	4	103	568	338		S inias, 2	28	53	11	B3	9		53
The second secon	24	40 58	702	200	101	0 6	5		Pe-		Kings of A∬7 ria.		 			2760 2078 42	520	42	0	385	355		18		70	20	00   1. 1  Tb	5 Thelxion classen,	5 2	70
	117	70 8 8	732	230	13	0 5	5 6	65	31	.Ren.			- Kings	 	ense receives the pos whiles in Haran. 161 § 1.2,3	2705 2083 42	525	42	15	390	360		23	7	5	205	2	6	_  _	75
and the same of th	25 18	62 20 163	764	262	16	52	27	97	63	33	33	rug.	of E-		Frances into Cana	Julian. World. Transfe	Sem.	Arp	baxad	Salah	Hebe	r. 1	1bram.		A∫yria.			Sicgon.	- -
Fide lib. 2. c. 2. § 2.	jı	530 848 191	692	290	15	20   1	155	125	91	63	61	29	1 Cham 161	1. Na-	Infire of the 43 Of for itself of for itself	0. 2084	520	5	426	39	36	1	76	- -	24	-   3	76	7
	12	532 850 193	694	29	2   1	92	157	127	93	[63	63	31	3	bor. 148	ten.	2085	527	 	427	39	36	2	77	_	25		7	8
		$61 879 22	823	32	1 2	21	186	156	122	02	92	69	32	30	rer 68 3 car	2093	53	5	435	400	379		85	_	33	- '	5	16
		2584 1901 24	846	3.	14	244	209	179	145	115	I. Bi	8	55	53	aul born.	2099	53	7	437	40	37	-   	87 		35		87	18
															Mexad dyes.	209	5 55	8 4	38	40	3 37	3	88	1	36		88	19

Į.	Inlian World promi∫e	Sem.	Salah.		Abra- ham.	ria.	Egypt. Si	cyen					I ulian. World. Promije		$I_i$	Салс.	Гасьв.	Affyria.	Egypt. S	Sicyon.	Argiva.	1
	2781 2099 16	541	406	376		6 1.Ari- 25, 30		22				Trees fold into Egypt.	2959 2277 19			169	109	6	Orus,	16	59
eat, 101. current.	2 7 91 2109 25	551	416	38 6	101	II	101	32	1 Ifaac 180				2961 2279 196	i I		171	111	8	3 8:	18	3 1. A, ii. 35	2
	208 2126 43	568	433	403	118	1	118	49	18			The last year of Isaac.	29 7 0 2288 205			180	120	17	12	27	10	25
	2811 2129 46	571		406	121	7 1. Ara- l'us,40	121	52	21			ifrael into Egypt.	2980 2298 215				130	27	22 160	37	20	3
	2812 2130 4			467	122	2	122	1.Æ	22		1	The eighteenth Dynastie in Egypt, which lastee in Jeers.	2984 2302 219			l	134	31	2 6	41	2.1	4
rai the wife of Abraham died this year.	2827 2145 6	2		422	137	17	137	16	37				299 t 2309 226				141	58		10 1.Pera	31	5
If aac took Rebecca to Wife, when he was 40. year. I compleat.	6	6		420	141	21	141	20	41	_			2996 2314 231				146	43	3S	6	4 1. Argus,	5
The last year of Sem.	3840 2158 7	600	·	435	150	30	150	29	50	-		Jecob dies in Egypt.	29 9 7 231 5 272				147	44	39	7	2
	Fulia: World	d Heber	r. Abra bam.	I/and	7 acol	Affy-	Egypt.	Sicyon	g.ves	-			romile	7o/eph.	A∬yri	a.	Egy	pt.	Sicyon.	Argi	vcs.
	2846 2164 8	441	156	56		1 8	156	machus	1	-			3006 2324 241	65	I 2 I . Altade	s. 32		8	16	11
		446	161	61	1.7ac	ob 1 Bal 7 us. 3	161	6	t Ina-				3037 2355 271		32		79 54	' 1	11 2 Plem neus, 48	42
Abraham died this year.	218	9 460 901	175	7	5 15	19	175	20	15	-			3038 2356 273	97	13 I Mamit			lo is	2	43
Heber died this year.	2187	46	4	75	7 19	١ _		24	19			The last year of Poseph.	305 I 2369 286	110	14			3 8	15	50		j
The 17. Dynaftie, called of the Shepheards, begin ng this year, lafted 103. years.	11	6		9	1 31	I. Arr	na- es, 38 I	36	+-	+	-		3066 23 8 4 30	1	29			o8 83	30	1.Pira Criafa	(HS, or 5, 54
		9 26	_	10	01 4	1 11	201	pus.	53	+		•	3068 23 86 303		I, Man	aleus. 30	110	5	32	3
	290 221	9   36		11	1 5	١,,	21	11	seus,	60	-		3074 2392 30		7		Great.	firis the	38	9
The Floud of Ogyges, a thouf and and twenty Jea efore the Olympiads See lib. 1. C. 7. <sup>8</sup> . 2.	223 1	54			29	09  Pri	35_ 1 39			9 1.5	o- b.		3085 2403 321		18		1	2	12 1 Ortho nalis 63	20
	_	0 7 7			52 9	2 2	4 252 62	52   9	\		1 1 0		3098 2416 33	Ì	1. Spheri Iphereus	us, or		25 15	14	3 3
		79		1	54 !	94	254 64 3. & 4.	[pius,	47		11		3107 242 5 34		10		fecond.	7 offris the , 14	23	42
Sec L.2. c.2. §.6.	29 5 22 7 1	87		1	62 1		4   ter him Hercul.	7.			. 3			1 . Mo 1 ses,120				10 133	32.	51
	227			1	6+ 10		ale- 3	1	ː   5		-						E		3

	Juliani		10	Fax:	hyrn.	Argives.	į			Julian World.		A∬yria.	Egy"t.	S.сусн.	Argo.	Anen
	World. 1	10fes	Λ[Jria	Egy <sub>i</sub> t.						Exod.	 				1	4 (1.18%)
The second secon	3118   2436	3 1	16 . Mamilas,or Mamelins, 30	12 135	34	53				2541 28	108	36	5 240	=6	2	E 1879 1	_ and the second s	353 3120 2438		3	14	36 1	6 . I'horbas,35				3224 2542 29	109	37	15 t Rameffes 68 241	27	3	3 /	T>-y.
	355	- 1		8	 	3	Athe-	:	and the same of th	3228	1	19 1. Amyntas, 4	5	31	7	6
	2439 356	6	4	1 Orus, 2.07 Bus. is, 38.138.	37		nians.	-	AND THE RESIDENCE OF PERSONS ASSESSED.	33			245		8		I Dard
	3148 2466 383	33	1. Sparetus, 40	28 165	thins,30	29				2547 34 3233	114	2	246	32	- 10		115, 6
	3151 2469 386	36	4	31	4	32	1 . Ce-			2551	B!!	6	10 250	36	1. Danaus, 50	11	5
Moses visits his brethren the Israelites , I ypsian,and flies into Midian.	ils an 3155 2473	40	8	35 172	8	7 1.Tripas, 46	5		The last year of Moses.	3235 2553 4	120	8	252	38	3	13	7
yprian, and the same and the sa	390 3159 2477		12	1. Thermutis, 0	12	5	9			Fulia World Exod	l Ifrael.	A∬yria.	Egypt.	Sicyon	Argos.	At hens	Tie
	39  3171  2489	4	24	1 O 1.Rathoris,er .A	1	17	21		The Israelites enter the Landof Promise.	3236 2554 4	I fosua	9	253	39	4	14	3
the same of the sa	4º	6	31	choris 9 188.	14 1 Mara		28	-		3253 2571	18	26	30	16 1.Co-	21	31	25
والمعاول المادي	2469 41 3180	31		195 11 1 Chencres, 1	6 3	26	30			3254 2572	1 Otho-	27	31	2	22	32	26
	2498 41	5	1 18	197	+		-	-		3273		20 I.Belochus th	271	21	41	S It Pan	-
- manager	2500	5 37	1	205	11	34	38	-		_\2591 _ 328	78	Second. 2		17	-	dion 40
Moses his wandring into Egypt.	3 19 251		8	16 212	18	41	45			260	30	11	300 16	1. Epo peus 3	>   11 5   1 . Lynceus. 4	1 11	55
	uli	an. Id. Me	es Asyria.	Egypt.	Sicyo	n. Argos.	Athe				39	20	1. Menophis 4 309	0 10	10	20	64
The Passeover. If rael delivered out of Eg. and drowned. The Law given. The first of		6	9	I . Acherres	8 19	42	46			329 261	9 40	21	310	11	11	21	l Eri boniu
ears from Exedus to the building of the I The Floud of Deucalion, and conflag	empie.	8		213.	15 1 Ec	bi- 44	4			32 9 -		22	3 311	12	12	22	2
Phacton about this time.	320	ot		215 6 218	1 rens	8	1 C	a-		329 261	8   5	2 1 1. Belopares 3	1	16	16	26	6
		04	-	13 1, Cherres,		1.Crotopu	4			263	3 1 20	16	22	31	31	Eritt-	21
		22 6	89 17	221		+	3	hi-		33 18 2636		21	330	18 Lam		6	25
	25	16	96 24	8 228	14	-				3324	3	27	335	don, 40		12
		37 I	01 32	Danaus, 5	.236 23	19				332	8	22	341		1. Abbas, 2.	-	32
		222	107 35	4 239	2	5 Sthene		2		2640 I	5 35	1. Lamprides		11	5	16	36

																		,
The 19. Dynamic of the Landon, 194. June,	3332	39	5	. Zethus, or Se-	15	     9	20	 	-	i . i	ulian. World. Exod.	Ifrael	A∬yria-	Egypt.	Sicyon.	Myce-	diltens	Top:
Section C. 201 (194)	137		12	hofis, 5	22	16	27	1.7			3399 2717 204	26	20	68	42		37	1. Ans, 53
	3347	46		8 16	30	13 i.Præ	\ 	1.	60		3402 2720 207	29	23	16 71	45	Ear; bess.	÷o	4
Tantalus in Phoffia.	3358	54	20	16	19	145, 1		-}-		·	3403 2721 208	30	2+		20 . Poly		3 Pandic be 115	5
	2676 163	65	21	1	s.Sicyon, 45	1-	+	÷	-		3410	37	25	24	8	9	8	12
	165	67	23 1.Sofares, 20	29	3	14	48	-	2		215 3414 2732	S 1 Gide-	. Pannias, 45	7 9	12	13	13	16
	3363 2681 168	70	4	32 32	6	17	40	ed 2	5	Prodion chafed out of his Kingdom, which is recovered by	3427	on. 40	28	83 1 41	25	26	25	29
Pelops in Pisa, who gave name to Peloponnesus.	3364 2682 169	71	5	33 33	73	fins,		- -	26 —	ain Egeus, in few years after. In common of 1672- eign and releganting the years in the forty eight of Ageus in transiting them apart by themselver, breeds answerable forces in the times of the Athenians following, as Maesthe (2009, and the rest.	232	19	23	96 46	30	31	Q LAige	34
100 and Xuthus the fons of Hellen. See lib. 2. c. 17. 8. 6.	3 3 7 4 2692		15	43 43	17	.11	I	2	36	and the second s	3443			101	21 1. Ina-		12	45
	3380 2698 18	7	1. Lampares	o! 49	23	1	7   18	8	.;2 	Odipus in Thebes.	2761 248 3447	1	34	112	chus,4		i	1
	3387	14	15	18 1.Ramses,66 56	30	24	_ 2	5	49		2765 252 3453	34	38	61 116	5	Thyefte 65		49
ifter the death of Acrifius, the Kingdom of the Agi eves divided into many small parts, and overgrown by that			15	8 63	37	31	3	2	56		2771 258	3	44	1. Amenophis,		7	22	55
was duvided into many final parts, and over good of Modern whereif fore Kings defended from Perfeus, oth from Pelops, as in the Pedegree following.	19	9	l	1 03							2772 25	1.Abi- 9 melech	45	2 123	12	8	23	I.I.aomedon.
Tanks) (CEno-	)										3455 2773 26	0	26 1.Sofarmus,19	3 124	13	9	24	2
Pelops Hippe	) .										3457 2775 26		3	5 126	15	11	26	4
dame	y		6	erfe _ (A1	1						3474 2762 37	18 )	27 1.Mitress,27	22 143	32	28	43	21
Thye Aire (Nici)			6	us C	reda)						3480 2792	8 1.7ai		28 149	38	3.	10 1.Th	- 1 27
	Tyn	àa	Sthe	Nump	Aloze						348	5	12	33 154	I.P	be- 3	9 6	32
A Sec.	T [	ツ ===1	nedus		Ŷ						3490	8 11	17	38	6	1	11	1. Priame
Agarna (Olite) (Me	eno	Hele	Callon	Polles Eur	PAUS)						349 281	3 14	20	20	2 1. A 1. A 1. 6	dral 17	14	4
nore noly	11.5	na.					7				349		24	162 5 166	1. P	4   5	1 1	8
Ore Things	·		Am	ph Alom	Alc -	Ar				`		02 I	28	166	phide 5	1	5 22	12
fres: nia.	era:			Her-					١			06	3		- !	!		. !

Tilu

and a second case of consequences of the contract of the contr										ď		17 111
		Timple		Ifra	ı. Asy	ria. Egy	t. Athen	Latine	3			Tem
	World.		taken.	¦	—¦—-			-	-  			377
be 21.DJnasty in Ægypt, which lasted 130. years	1	29	175	3	. \ :	14   13	3	21	1			1 1
	11022	 	 			 			$\perp$			37
be Ionick migration after the taking of Troy, 180 ars. See L. 2.°C. 17. seet. 6.	13709	34	180	37	29		8	26	1			1309
	3027			I		_ 6		!	_		Of Jehoram bis fundry beginnings to reign.	375
Street, and the second	Fulian. World.	Trov.	7	uda.	Ifratl.	A∏yria.	Egya	Athen			See 1.2. c.20. S. 1. & 2.	310
	Temple						-27	1	1			1375
	3713	1 8		Ι,	a 1 ,				Ţ			310
	3031	148	I. Kes	oboam. 17	1. Feroboam.	33	10		30	· 📕		379
	3718	i	'				Che		-i			311
	3036	189	1	6	6	38	nis, 5	17	3	5		_ _!
	1 4	31	ļ		 		'	-   -4	-¦-	-		379
	372I 13039	192	1 .	9	9	41	4	t Tee	fip]	8		17
	46		 		 	 	18	415,	41		at 6-bas for and Jahoren and	37
	3723	T			11	43	6	3	ıs,	7,	Jehosaphat dies, and Jehoram reigns alone.	31
	3041	194	1	ıı	111	45	20		95	:		38
	3726	1	7		1	34			1			31
	3044		1	4	14	1. Pyrithia	des.   9 301 23		1	4		  38
	. 5		- !		-	-	1	' i	-	-		3 1
	3730 3048	201		2	18	5	1		۱ د	8		!_
	5		1.A	ijam,	1	 	27	7	4	- 1		. 38
	3733		.	•	21	. 8	10	1 1	3	11		31
	3051	8 204	1.	3 A∫a. 4			30			_		38
	3734		Ť		22		٦.	.		12	Carthage built. L. 2. c.22. 5. 6.	31
	3052	20	5	2	I. Nadab.	9	3		1	12		138
and the same of th		91			12	1		1	Ť	-		3
	3735	20	6	3	3	10	1		5	13
	1_0	50	_\		I. Baasha, 2	4	33	: -	- i	8		3
	3749	220	.	17 .	15	24	3	2 2		. S74		}
	7	1		-/ .			1 4	6 [	10	ap.20		3
The state of the s	3750	5	!			I. Ophrate	nes. 3	ا ہ	6	8		3
	3074	1 227	'	24	22	1. Operate	20 5		-			'  3
	3758		+-		24	†			0			13
	3076	5   22	9	26	4	3		1 3	8	10	The wall of all and a second and a second
		33			1. Ela, 2.	-		-	7		The end of the 21. Dynastie. The Dynastie.	s fol- 3
Of those Ifraelitish Kings, See lib. 2. c. 19.5.	3759	23	اه	27	Szimri.	4	1 4		39	11		1
Of those Ifraelitifo Kings, See in. 2. C. 19.5.	5. 307	34			1 6. Tibni.		-	56	-
	376	2	.			7	4	5 I P	hor	14		į.
	308	o 1 23 87	3	30	4	1 ′_	5	9  bas	,31			į,
	376	8	T		i			56	7	20	Joas reigned with his Father. L.2. c.22.	. 9.7.
	308		19	36	10	13	lops.	65	_ i
	377	931	+		12	-i				22	Joas reigns alone.	1
	3c8	8   24	1	38	8	15	6		9			!
		95	ļ		I. Abab, 2	2."		Ī				1
	377	4		4 Feho∫apha	t. 5	19	:		3	26		1
1		99			5	1	1 7	1	1

	Fulian World. T Temple.	roy.	Inda.	Ifrael.	A[[yria]	Egy:1.	Athens	Lutine.
	3776   3094   101	247	3	7	1. Ophra tan(1.	9 73	15	28	•
	3777 3095 102	248	4	8	2	10 74	16	1.Syl. Caretist
Jehoram bis sundry beginnings to reign. Seel.2. c.20. $. 1. & 2.	3790 3108 115	261	S 1. Fehoram.	21 9 1. Ahazia, 2	15	23 87	29	t Syl. Tyberi nut, 8
	3791 3109 116	262		2.2 2 10 1. Jehoram.	16	24 88	30	2	_
	3793 3111 118	264	20 0	3	18	26 90	6 1. Meza des, 30	4	_
	3793 3113 120		12 1. Jehoram a- gain, 8.	5	20	28 92	3	6
hosaphat dies, and Jehoram reigns alone.	3798 3116 123	269	25 4	8	23	31	6	Sol. Agrip-
	3802 3120 127	2 7 3	8 6 I. Ahazia. 1.	12	27	35	10	5
	3803 3121 128	274	1. Athalia.	11 1.Jehn 28	28	36 100	11	6
	3809 3125 13.	280	7 8 1. Joas, 40.	7	34	42 106	17	12
Carthage built. L. 2. c.22. S. 6.	3819  3137  144	290	11	17	44	52 116		22
	3825 3143 148	294	15	21	48	65		26
	3824 3142 149	295	16	22	49	nes, 50	oi a	27
	3826 3144 151		18	24	370cra per or 1, Anac daraxes	n 3	4	29	1
	3831 3149 150	302	23	12 1. Johoabaz		8	وا	34
The end of the 21. Dynastie. The Dynasties mig Iomit.	3151		25	3	8	10		36
	3157 6	1310	31	g	14	15	17	1 Syl. Alladi	9
Joss reigned with his Father. L.2. C.22.	1 17	ol	37	15 1. 700s.	20	22	23
Joes reigns alone.	3847 3165	2 118		1. Joan, 16	23	2.4	25	9
	3166	31	40 9   9 1. Amazia, :	2	23	25	26	10

										~		Julian		1	1	- 1	- 1	i	1		:
	Ju'ian World 2	Troy.	Inda.	Ifrael.	4∬yria	Egypt.	Athe	ns Lati	10.5	ı		world	Troy.	,		Inda.	Ifrael	. i¶)ris	Egypt	Athens	L.a. in	Ť
	Temple    3851    3169	322	4	5	26	28	8 1 Phe dus.	7e-1 1:		ı		3926 3244 251	397	Ì		39	Sealism una mont b 17 Menseem 13	35	3	10	9	-
	3858	329	11	12	33	35	8	1. S	ui-	-	This year nearly concurs with the first of Men	3927 3245 252	398			4c	1	36	4	1.1	10
	183   3868		15	16	37	3 9	12	inus,	- 1	1		3930 3248	401			43	4	3.9	t Sabar- cut the Etimi	14	13
	3180 187	333		1 Feroboam,41	. Sarda	45	 	8 1	+	-		3937 3255	408	Iphit.		50	18 1 Peks bis. 2	i	4	12 1.11 efelio 1.15, 23	20	-
	3186 193	339	21	7	apalus. 20		   9		- -	-	The beginning of the Olympiads.	3938 3256	409	, ,	iads.	51	2	+7	ـــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــ	2	21
	3188	341	23	9	3	47 1. Mi-	phron	ri- 12	-	4	L,2, c.23, %, 5.	263 3939		-	I .		19 1.Pe(1					1
	3874 3192	345	27	13		cerinu 6			6	_		3257 264 3940	410	2	2		Ro-neli v		.10	3	22
	Fulsan World Temp.		Juda.	Ifrael.	Affyria	Egypt	Atl	bens L	tins A	Media	L.2.C.23. §. 6.	3258 26		3	i i	1. Ja- tham,16	2	1,Tiglat: Plant off fur, 2	11	4	23
L.2, c.22, §.11,	3877 3195	348	1. Interregnum 11. Jears.	16	10	.4	1	В 1	9			Fulsas World Temple	Iphit.	Olym.	Inda.	I/rasl	Affyri.	Egypt.	Athens	Latins	 	u
Later to the state of the state	3880 3198	351	4	19		2. Boc- chorus	1	1 2	2			3946 3264 27		3	7	8	7	17	10	29	1. Medi dus, 4
	3887  3887		11	1 1	20 Sar danapa lus flain	8	1	8	29			3 955 3273 28	18	5	16 1. Ahst		16	26	19	38	10
L. 2, C.22. § 12.	3888		10 1.Vzzia, 0			9	1	9 3	0	I I. Ar-		3959	22	6	5	1. Inter regnum 7. years	20	30	23	42	14
L.2. c. 33. §.1. & 4.	3296 213 3890		Azaria, 52			11	176	io	2	3	and the little was a second of the latest the little was a second of the latest the late	28  3960  3278	i	6	6	2	21	31	1. Alc		15
	3208 215 3892		3	-	1. 1. Belofi	-	Lut	, 17		- 5		\ 28  Fulia	n Rom	Jphit.	Olym	7 nd2.	Ifrac	el. Affyri		i	ns Roma	ens
L.2. c.23. %. 4.	3210 217		5	31	or Phul. 4	1 -2	_	-+	34 14 Syl.	-	Rome buth, L 2 C 4 S 5 Catops the first, generating in Athens for ten years:		e. Nab	on	7	8	.		-	t.Ca-		-
	3895 3213 220		8	34	4	16	_		23 23	8	Catops the first. governing in Athens for ten years: whom succeeded six chosen each after other for the like timethe Office leanner Annual.	ime: 328	87	25	1 8		20		1	reps.1	10 60	37
L.2. c.23. §. I.	3903 322 I 22		16	1. Interregnun 23 years.	12	24	1	14	9	16		3 48.	5	29	8	12	i Hof	ea 27 9 I Salm	37	5	5
	3916 3234	387	29	14	25	37	:	27		2 1. Sofer- 1005, 30	The Era of Nabonassar. L.2. c. 25, %. 1.	396 328 2	5	30	2	13	2	natflar. Nahmaj	, -0	6	6
	3917 (3235	388	30	15	26	38	1	A gam ftar.	23	2	Ezekiah began in the very end of this yeat. L.2. C.25. S.1.	1320		31	8	Ezeki	ah 3	2	39	7	7
	3918 3236	1	31	16	27	39	9		15 Syl.A sulius.	3	This year concurs with the first of Ezekiah.	Ibid. 328	9 8	3 =	8	1 15	4	3	143	8	8
	24	3	37	22	33	1.Aft	rer	8	7	9	The beginning of the full Me Contra War. W	racre- 397	1 1	34	9	3	6	5	42	10	10	, 3242	395				my(is

												A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR
	292	13	37	10	6	9	8	45		13	29	'н  т	ulian R Vorld emole N	1	phit.	olymp.	Inda.	Chal-	Egypt.	Rome.	Media 1	Lydia.
[3	299 976   294   301	15	39	10	8		o 4 1. Sena therib. 7	47		15	31	L.2. C.28. §.3. & 4.	372 379	88	117	1	ı	3 .N.:bu .∏er,35	26	12	3	10
L.2. c. 26. §,7.	3980 3298 305	19	43	11.	12	Kings of the Chal- deans.		1. Se- chon. 33		19	35	3	373 380	ا و8	118	2	1 fosi. as, 31	2	27	13	4	21
	3982 3300	21	45	12	14		7	3		21	37	L,2, c, 28, 5, 1.	398	107	136	34 _+_	19	20	1. Ne-	31	22	39
	3983 3301 308	-	46	13	• >	i . Mero- dacb ,or Mardo cempadus	Afar ha'd n. 10	4		22	38	3	39 3 400		138	35	21	22	3	Marcus 3+	24	41
	3986 5304 311	25	49	13	18	4	4	7		25	4 1 Carli 1 Carli	3	394 401 4084		139	35	22	23	4		7 1 Cyaxa- 1 es, 40	42
Merodach gets the whole Empire. This year or in e end of the year foregoing. An eclipse of the Moon	3993	32	56	14	25	I. Mero. dacb, 40	11	14		32	8		3402	123	147	3	30	31	12	10	9	1 Sady-
	Julian World Temple.	Rome.	Iphit.	Olym.	Juda.	Caldea	Egypt.	Rome.	Media	I ydia.			3402 410		148	ĺ .	Jehohaz z masths	 	13	11	10	2 }
Two eclipses of the Moon, in the second year of ardocempadus.	3994 3312 319	33 28	57	15	26	2	15	33	9			minus be regarded in Aftronomical objervations concer- knime. L2C15. S-1. & C.28. S-6.	340+ 411	120	149	1 38	1. Jeho jakim,	1 33	14	12	II	3
	399 7 3319 322	36 31	60	15	29	5	18	36	12	1 1. Gy. ges, 38			3407 414		152	4	4	1. Nabu chedonofor the great.	17	15	14	6
	3998 3316 323	37	61		I Ma- nasses s		19.	3 7	13	2			4090 340 8 415	124	1 53	39	5	2	1.PJam ms, 12	16	15	7
	3999 3317 324	38	62	16	2	7		tuter regnum one year	I. Deio- cet. 53				4096 3414 421	135	159	40	I Jechen 3 month 20  Zedekia	··	7	22	21	1 Haly asses 57
	3318 325	39	63	16	3	8	21	E. Numa Pompi- lius, 43	12	4	_	Zedekiah bis journey to Babylon. L.2. c.28. §.6.	4099 3417 424		162	2	11 year.	   11	10	quin. Pr feur. 51	24,	4
L.2. C.27. S. 2.	4013 3331 33	5 <sup>2</sup> 8 47	76	19	16	21	reg-	14	15	17			3420 427	136	165	1	7	14	or Ho		27	7
	4015 3333 340	54	78	20	18	23	Prin- ces, 1	16	17	19	-	funfalem taken by Nabuchodonosor, with who shift the more part, and partly with whose 19.this wessers.	3424	140	169	43   I	11	18	5	8	31	11
The beginning of the fecond Messenian Warzwhic Ifted about 18. years. L.2, 6,37, 8,4.	6 4020 3347 35	68	92	23	32	37	s. Pfam miticus 4		3 1	33	_		fulsan   world	Nabo	Iph.t.	1	p. Capt.	i- Chal dea.	Egy	Rome	Med	ia Lydia.
L.2. c,28. §. 3.	3351 3351	72	96	4	36	1. Ben Mero- dach, 2	) >	34	35	37	-	ferufalem destroyed.	3425	140	170	3	1	19	6	9	32	12
	4035 3353 36	7+ 6 69	98	25	378	3	7	36	37	I. A	r-	Egyt conquered by Nabuchodonofor, L3, c.1. §, 8. & 9.	3429	145	174	2	5	23	phra flain and the Hingdom: Fuppt to loarned d years by b coroger.	13	36	-
	4043 3361 36	82	106	27	46	11	15	1. Tulli Hoftilis	al 47	9	-	Nikolod C. V. V. V. J. V.	3434	150	179	3	10	37	6	18
	3370 3370	91	11	5 29	55	20	24	10	I Phr		-	Nabuchodonosor lives wild: and his Kingdon fourmed by others for him, during seven years L3.c.s. §. 13.	3443	159	188	48		nerod	il 15	27	10	30
and the same of th	4 0 53	92	110	5 29	1 • A	- 21	25	11	2	19			3127	ĺ.	190		2.1	1 Nigh far, &	- 17	29	12	32

													Julian.	Rome.	Iohit.	0/mm2	Der G	.! ,	Egypt R	ome.	Greece.	feives or from
7	n'ian.	Rome.	r. Lie	0/2000	2 uda	Chale :	Egypt.	Rome.	Medi	i I I vii i			World.		грын.	0.jm <sub>f</sub>	12	"  1	1		!(	7/115
		Nabon	iphit.	49		dea.	23//			Ljan	_		4197	236	260	05	6	Ì		17 P	tiopies the for of eliftratus Tyrani Athens.	2 1
Nebuchadnezzat recovers his sense and kingdom.	131	170	194	47		ardach	21	33	16	36			3515	23 I		4_	1	_!_			Amen.
Nebuchadnezzat retsvers na jenje ana 20gmm	449	165	, · I	2	!	9 m.n	١		l	1.	1	and the same of th	4204	243	267	67	Babylon phich is		1	42	1	28
L.3. c. 1. § .6.	133	172		49		Svilme-	23	35	18	1 38			3522	238	207	3	trebetes.	14-	j	7-
The 27.of Jeconia his captivity compleat, and he		167	196	4	27	rodach.	, -, '	, ,	1	30	1	The Tarquines expelled Rome.	4205		1	68		1		1		Ĺ
	451   4137	10/ (		50				Servi-	1		7	L.4. C.1. S.1.			268	Ì.	1.	١į		25		29
	1.3/	176	200	1	31	5	27	usTulin		42	1	· ·	3523	239	ļ	68				Brnsus		ì
	3455	1		4			!	1	:  ,	+-	-	The Carthaginians first League with Rome.	4206	24)	269	1 00	1 15	: }	i	and	Confuls.	32
orty years after the conquest of Egypt past, Amasis	4151	190	214	45	5+	19	Ama-	15	or bet	;; 56	1	L.5.c.1. §. 2.	3524	240	1	1	1	1		Publ. co	ر ا
gan his reign:this being inclusively the 41.6 there- re the next year seems concurrent with Amasis his t		185	2.4	2	7		fis, 34	H.		16	1		4211	250		6	bis ex		1	- 1		١.,
re the next year jeems committee will	4153	1		54	1					5	1	L.2. c.5. §.4"	1	1	27+	١.	dition	a- 1	į	1		35
		192	216	١.	47	21	2	17	. 3	1.C			3529	245	!	2	Scyth	iani,			The Athenian	si
The second secon	3471	Rome.	ļ	1 4	 	-	 		1	_ "			4212	251	١	69	1 2	. 1	1	ï	and Ionians	30
	THITAN	Kome.	Ishit.	Olymi	Persia	Chal-	Egypt	Rome	Me	dia Ly	lia, fene		3530	246	275	j 3	1 2	١.	. 1		take Sardes.
	World	Nabon				dea.	1	j	! -	-   -			4222	261	i	72	i .		1	SP Calli	The vattail of Marathen.	1 4
	4154	193		55	1. cyru	22	3	18	4				1	١.	289	ì	3	1	ŀ	`ominius	Marainin.	1 7
		188	217	ı	in Pe fi		,		1	' i '	1 10		13540			1 1				Confuls.		- i
	3472 1159		 	56		I. Eal	. 1	1	1	1			4226	265	28	73		35	Egypt rebel letb against		1	5
The Seven Sages of Greece.	11.79	173	222	1	6	thafar.	.   8	23		9   '	7   53		3544	260		1			Darius.
2 no jetemonger 9	3477		1	2			7	-	- i		-		4228		1	17	3	4		1		1
4 616	4164	203	227	57	11	6	13	28	1	4	12 58		1		29			Xer-				1
Pisistratus makes himself Tyrant in Athens.	3482	198	127	3	1	í	1_		_!			116 5:0	3546	262		_ _3	 -	5,21	Egypt recove-	Proc. 1	Vir-	1
	4166		-	58		1	1	1	١.	Gra	fas	Th Law Agraria in Rome propounded, for divisi if Lands: which bred great commotion.	on 4229	268	292	7		2 1	red by Xer-	ganin.	. >
	ï	i i	229	1	13	8	15	30	1 '	16 44	n b) 3	of Lands: which orea great comments	3547	263	1	1 4	.	1	xes.	Sp.Ca	(fius)	-\-
	3484		-	I	-	17 Ba	1/-	 -	-	1			4233	272			4 6.	The g	reat muster of	1	ì	),
The end of the Chaldean Empire.	4175	214	238		22	thafa		39	25	5	69	An Eclipseof the Sun. L.3. c.6. § 2.		267	29			(erxes ardes	bis Army at	1		_i_
The that of the Chatteen Emphis.	13493	209	1 -3-	2	1	_ flain.		1					4234	- :		4	5 1	nr acs.			The battails
	4176	215	1	60		1 . D			1 2		70	1	4-3.	1	29			7		1	Thermofyle, J.	ala-
	l		239	1 4	23	riust Mede		140	1.2	Ì		L.3. c.6. §, 3. & 6.	355			1	1			 	The battail	1
	4177			60	 	1				ars	7		4235	27	1 29		5 87	tragi-			Platea and A
The beginning of Cyprus his Empire.	4.77	1 2.0	240		1.C)	- 2	26	41	fre	Cyrus	babo	L.;. c,6. §.9, 10,& 11.	355	26				love		1	cale.	1
His Ediet of liberty to the Jews.	3499			4		71		1-7-		10	el) Zorea		423			!,	75	i i		1	the valle, and la	r E
The state of the s	4181	220		61	5		1 30	L, Ta	er 1	100	Neiremias membred as	L2, c.7. §.1 & 2.	1	1		:o		10		1	munion.	- 1
	3499	215	24	+ 4	'	1	1,	Super	25	10	энокт об	March, 311 41 21	355			- 1	4_ -	¦		-	The great vi
	1418.			6		1		l l	1	0 3	eurs, auto 2 of Aituse		424	1 20	3   30		77	17		i	ries of Simon , Eurymedon and	eife
	1	١.	24		1.Ca		3 3	4	١,	د ا	nench.		356	2 27		1	3	الن		 	where.
	350			_ _3		5.7	1.1/	am.	· · i	1	fore Neben		424	8 28			8 2	The	death of Xerxo reason of Arta	3	1	ľ
The z. first years of Plammiticus, and part of the third m be added to the ye rs of his father, if it be true that Camby	ay  410 [es]	0 [ 24]	2.4		3 3	- 1	m.ti	- 1 (	6	16	himfelf with	L.2. c. 7. § 3.	356	6 28	3			enus.	reajonoj 22754	1		_1.
an Egypt prefently on the death of Amafis, L.3.c 4. S.z.	350	4 22		1		_  _	Cus,	3			at the fin		1+24			-17	ō:	. 1		1	Themistocles
	418	8 227		6				.   8	۱ ۱	12 4	nd wants of		14-4	ĺ	13:		XI mi	Longi- mui.		1	ing builhed
The conquest of Egypt by Cambysis.		6 22	25	1	,   5		1 3	,   ,	1	•	er(0.4-		356			_!_	+	46	Inarus fet up			$-\dot{i}$
		an Rom			·	j	1	1	-	.	_		425	1 29			94	3	King by the Egy			ĺ
	ï		I plo	tus Oly	mp. Per	fia. Eg	ypt Ron	ne. Gr	eece\ f	ewes.	From   Cyrus.		356	9 2	35   2	14	2	- 1	stans.		_	_    79
		rld. Nat	bon			1					11.00			5 129	04		80 /	. The	Inarus va	2-		36 70
1 Community Com	as 419	1 2 3	0	. 16.			1	1		,	15	L3.c7 §. 5 . & 7.		١.	1 3	18		narri igi F Helle	quished by t Persians.		+
Cambysis reigned seven years and five months, so						one	1 -	- 1	- 1		1 1	· /· ·· J· ·· /·	257	2 2	(a)	- 1	2 4	neite,	irer pans.	ı		140
his last year was filled up by the Magi, and (as n	25	00 37	2		2 Dear				٠ ١							-	2.			The Deet	m- Hippocrates the	CF.SAC I
Camby see regned seven years and five mounts, so his sast year was filled up by the Magi, and (as n seem) a good part of the next, L.3. C.4. $.4.	35	09   22 02   23	25			`- -		12			16		420		03	27	32	16		The Deed piel shof tocomp.	m- Hippocrates the in Phylicians and the und ten the Uhlispher the ript.	mocyl- flour

9.50

										17ulian.	Pomes!		,		1			7 107
The Account from the foliation of the Captivity,	Julian.	Rome.	Iphit.	Olymp.	Perfia.	Egypt	Rome.	Greece. frat		and	and	Iphit.	lymp.	Perfia.	Egypt.	Rome.	Greece.	rom Gye Doniel
as Jame 10110 time from Cyture	World.	Nabon						The cal		World.			!-				Ageplans war	1+2
	4265	304.		82	1	1	the decem	Simons vojage 89		4318	357	381	96	10	6	ĺ	reth in Afia.
	3583	299	328	4	17	i	n te aud u	Simons voyage 89 to Cyprus, in which he died. 11 A league for 36 92	L.3.c. 11. 9.4.	3636	352	,	1					6.
	4268	279	``i	-83-		'	place three	A league for 36   92		4320	359	0 1	96	1	8		The victory of Conon at Chi	1-14
Nehemias comes to Perusalem.	4200	307	331	٠,	20		ĺ	Dears beimeen A.	L3. c. 11. S . 7.	3618	a  .	383	2	12	8		dusto c.	64
, , ,	2586			3	1		Take 1	thens and Sparte 14			354 360		y 6				Xen'th nana	145
	+ 72	311	1	84			M i cum fi. ft coofee	The conquest of 97 Samos by the A		4544	,,,,	384	1	13	9	Camilius.	Plato flurifo
	2590	306	335	3	24		Curtain.			3639	355		4	1				67
		3 12	''	84	I		to placet them in the	The conquest of on		4325	364		97	1/2	Premmiticus the fin of i	The no-war, be victory of Canal Lis over the Fall	1	1.,9
i i	12/7		336		25		E.ma.	Samos by the A			359	388	4	17	appresithet bas been ex- ites releged in all about	Lis over the Fall	i 1	71
l	3591	307 l	1	_4			ı	ricles. 19		3 6 43    4326	365		98		10.7401.	Reme taken	The Peace of	150
	4278	3 7		86			1	the Ashendans to 102	L4. c. 7. S. I.	4320	ر د د	389	,	18		and burnt by
•		!	341		30			Estingt the Carinthi	L3. (411. y. y.	3644	360		1			the Gauls.	! -	72
	3596	312	\ \	- 8 6-			`·	104		4327	367		98		4 Nettanebus.		!	151
The walls of Jerusalem finished.	4280	319	343	- 00	32		1	1 104		أسرا		390	2	19 1	18	1	1 1	73
Nehemias returns to King Artaxerxes.	3598	314	1 377	3	1			1 26		3645 4332	361 371		99	i		M. Marlin	The Lacedamini	150
	4283	322		87			1	The first year 107		14332	3/-	395	"	24	6	Capitolinus Pul	a state the ti adel	-0
L.3. c.8. §. I.			345	2	25		1	of the Pelopon- nesian War. 19		3650	366	! !	3	!		to death	jin.	78 160
	3601 4289	317	·	88 -	6		-	The victory of 11:		4336	375	1	100	28	10	i i	The Thilans recover bein Citalet, and trails from their upon the La.c. demonstrate.	100
L.3. c. 9. § 1.	4209	320	352		Xerxes 2. months		1	the Athenians	L3, c.11. $. 11.	3654	370	399	3	28	10			82
L.3.c.8 §. 1.	3607	323	"	4	7 Sogdiarus 8, months.		l	at Pylus. 39		4346		`	101			Trilumes of the people continued 5. Years In a		164
	4290	329		89	8		1	110		1	1 3/2	403		32	14	Trilums of the people continued 5. Jeans in m face, prop und social Laws a sensor winds for the Covalis first be first a Picture.		86
L. 3. c. 9. §. 1.		١	353	1	1.Darius Nothus, 1c.	i	(	36		3658	374		7			be first a Pl;brian.	The tamons
	3608	324		-1 89	Mornes. 15.	!	!	A vain and troz [1]		4343	382		102		17		battaile of Leu-	1 .
L, 3.c. 8. §.5. & 6.	4292	3 3 1	355	09	3	1		blefom peace be	L 3. C. I 2. S. I	3661	377	406	2	3 5 ·	17	i	stra.	89
L. 3.C. 6. §. J. & 6.	3610	326	337	3		 	 	Sparta. 3		4345			102		t. Taskot S. Euflin	u L. Sextins a Tlebe	il The hafty	16
	4301	340	T	92	ts. Experredeth against the Personand sets us Kings that resen success fruity, till Ocean his re- conguest.	1	1	The Athenian for 12	L3.c. 12. S. 4.	יייד	,,,,	408		37	telmet only 2, years to I.	t on and L Emilias	egrowth of the	1 -
L.3, c. 9. § 1. & c.8. § 8.			364		Burly, tell Ochus his Fe-	reus,		deftrojed. 4		3363	379		4		Reime, 6. but the fin of him prives mire.	Conjuis.	Theban Estate.
	3619						-	The government of 12		4351	390		104	43 Mary Provin-		1	of Mantinea, Epa	į i
	4302	341	365	92	13. Darius enters	1 2	1	the 4.0, in Athen,		3669	185	414	2	Artaxerxes, and are four reclaimed.	7	1	minondas dies.	97.7 ona
Cap. 8. §. 9.	3620	336	30,	1	wish the Spartans			the year felloung.   5		4352		-	104	IO	3 Tachus betraye	d.	Peace in Greete. The de theme, no greatus tito felors by a martine fort treafuse to cam ujer.	176 ab
The Carthaginians invade Sicil with an Army	4204	343	1	93			)	The Athenians 12	L3, c.12, 6.8.	4,,,,	1	415	1 4	1. Ochus.	by Agefilaus.	į	treafme to cam ujer.	98 Pr
300000. L 5. c. 1. § . 4. † 3.	1	ì	367	1	15	4	1	begin to recever frength.		3670	386	;	13_	2.3	1. Nellanebus. 1	31
,	3622	338	!	1_3_	\	\ 	i	Alcibidat after mory selferies returns from burifement to Athen, is made General, and busifest again.	)	4354	393		105	]	1 -	ļ	Macedon 24 years
_	4306	345	1 260	93	17	6	ì	Saraftment to Athens, is made General, and best		3672	388	417	1	3	3		and part of the 15	10
L., c. 8. §.10.	3624	3:0	369	1	1 7	\				4359			106	i ——		1	5. The Phocian	18
	4307	1,46	i	93	1 -	2		The battail at 1: Arginusa.	L4.G 1. 5. 4.	4332	1.	422		8	8	1	war begins.	10
	177-1	1 ''	370		18	1. Ne			3	13677			2	 				1 48
*	!	1				1	ì—	Dianyfins the el. 1	2	4364	403		107	13. Ochus re- conquers E-	bus flies in	etal	11	1
*	3625	3+1	!	2.	1		1	der ujurps toranny		1.0	398	427	1 3	gypt.	Ethiopia.	"	İ	11
	3625 4308	3+I 347	\  	93	10	1 2	ł	face almino . )										1
*	4308	347	371		19	2		in Syracufe.	4	3682					, obtaining	1	15. The end of	1.19
	4308 3626	347	371		9	-	-	The battail at I		4368	407	43	108				the Phocian	1
L. 2 c, 8, § 12,	3626 4309	347 342 348	371	93	9 I. Artaxerxe	3		The battail at I	3	4368 3686	40	43	108 3				the Phocian War.	11
L 3 c. 8. § 12.	3626  4309  3627	347 342 348 343	371	93	9	3	The fieg	The battail at I Argos, Pota-	L4.c.1. §.6.	4368 3686 4369	40	43	108	17			w.sr. 16. Timolton	1
L. 3 c. 8. § 12.	3626  4309  3627	347 342 348	371	93	1. Artaxerxe Mnemon, 4	3	The fiego of Veil, lafted 11	The battail at I Argos, Pota-	L4.c.1. §.6.  L5.c.1. §.4. †	4368 3686 4369	40:	43	3 108				the Phocian W.tr. 16. Timolton his voyage into Si.il.	11
L., 3 c. 8. § 12.	3626  4309  3627  4311	347 342 348 343 350	371	93	9 I. Artaxerxe	3	The fiego of Veil, lasted 11 years.	in Syracufe.  The battail at I Argos, Pota- mos, &c.	L4.c.1. §.6.	4368 3686 4369 44• 3687	40:	43	3 108 4	17	Nabona[]ar.	-	the Phocian W.r.  16. Timolton his voyage into Sicil.  7 Philip millet	11
L 3 c. 8. § 12.	3626  4309  3627  4311  3629	347 342 348 343 350 345	371	93 3 93 4 94	I. Artaxerxe Mnemon, 4:	3 3	1	in Syratufe.  The battail at I Argos, Potamos, G.c.  Socrates put to I death. The 20 in the 20 i	L4.c.1. §.6.	4368 3686 4369	40:	432	108 108 4 109	17	Nabona[ar.		the Phocian W.r.  16. Timolter his voyage into Si.il.  7 Ph.lip millet Illyria, and draw the Theff-dians t	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1
	3626  4309  3627  4311	347 342 348 343 350 345	371	93	1. Artaxerxe Mnemon, 4: 3	3 3 5 1 1 Acc		in Systemfe.  The battail at I Argos, Pota- mos, &c.  Socratis put to death. The 30 ty- rants put down in	L4.c.1. $.6.  L5.c.1. $.4. †  7	4368 3686 4369 44. 3687 4370	405	43 <sup>2</sup> 3 43 <sup>2</sup> 9 453	108 108 4 109	18	Nabona[]ar.		the Phocian Wir.  16. Timolton his voyage into Sicil.  7 Philip wiflet illyria, and draw.	11 15 19 19 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11
L 3 c. 8. § 12.	3626  4309  3627  4311  3629	347 342 348 343 350 345 352	371 372 374	93 3 93 4 94	I. Artaxerxe Mnemon, 4:	3 3 5 1 1 Acc		in Syratefe.  The battail at I Argos, Pota-mos, &c.  Socratti put 10 death. The 30 ty	L4.c.1. $.6.  L5.c.1. $.4. †  7	4368 3686 4369 44. 3687 4370 3688	405	43 <sup>2</sup> 3 43 <sup>2</sup> 9 453	108 108 4 109 1	18	Nabona[ar.		the Phocian W.r.  16. Timolter his voyage into Si.il.  7 Ph.lip millet Illyria, and draw the Theff-dians t	11

Ggggggg

i i		Rome. and I Nabon	phicus	Olymp.	Perjia.	Egypt	Rome.	Greece.	fewes From Cyr Daniel			fulian and world.	Nabon	phitas	,,,	Macedon.	Egypt	Greek.		recce.	Romans	· Ï	Dans
	1376 5694		439	110	2			2 3 The battail of Cheroma. bilip abolin Captain Go- eral of the Greeks	1	Lingdon	Era of the	3722	438	467	117	7	14	1	us,30 L. 4.				145
14	378		441	III	1.D rius 6 years and fomewhat more.	Nabon. Vovemb. 15	·	25 Philip flain by Penfinjal L-Auxander the great 11. Lears and 5. moneths.	2	Alexa	unders Cap-	4406	445	469	118	9	Psolomy over by Demesri Cyprus.	us as 3	Deme	ns fet free by trans the fon tragonus.			15
	1379 3697	418	442	111	2			2 Thebes razea by Alexander		f Kings	c.6. §. 4.	4413 3731		476	119	16	23	10. The b Ipfus wher tigonus wa	ein An- 15 flain				158
	43 8 0 3698		443	111	3			3 Alexanderpaf- feth into Afia.		6 201 25		3732		477	120	17	24	alliance n metrius				16	to Tin the ar ent.
L. 4. c. 7. S. 1.	4381	420	444	111	The battail of Iss.			4		7 204 26		44 <sup>17</sup> 3735	456 451	180	i i	. Anti pater and Alex order the for of Cassander.	27	14	i	-			16
4. c. 2. §, 5.6,& 7. & L.		421	4+5	112	5		The Gauls enter into league with the Romant-	Alexander win Tyre and Ægyp	8 205 127	L.4.	c.6. §.7.	3739	460 455	484	121	2. Demetrius,	31	18					16
	í	Rome.	Iphit.	Olym-								7 ulian		Iphit.	Olym-	Maccdon.	Egypt.	Syria.	Greece.	Ron	ne. D	ws. aniel
An Ecliple of the Moon	1383	422   417	4.46	112	The battail of			1	Bubyion, Sula, and Perfeptie tron by A. Iszander.	9 206 128		  4427  4745	466	490	123	I. Pyrrhus.7. Moneths.	37	24			3ª Pr	Elea or high rieft,19
	3701	423	4+7	112	7 Darins flain by Bessus.			 	7	10 207 129		3746	467	491	123	t. Lysimachus	38	25				173
	13/02			1	Macedon.	Egypt.	-	Greece.	Roman	Tens. Dani		3747	468	492	123	3	39 9 1 Prolomy Philadel- phus, 38	26			i,	3 174	\ \
	4385	424	448	112	3. Alexander chang- eth conditions: he puts to death Parmenic and Philotas.					130 ale Bi	translation of ble by the Sep	of  4432	471	495	124	5	4	29 29		The Ta war in the of Italy, on thus again	rentinus raife Euftern perce us call in Pyr- of che Romans.	6 177
N	4380		449	113						131 ac.7.	L. 4. c. 6. 9 9		472	496	124	6.Lysimadbus flain. Seltucus 7 Mon	5	32 Seleucus slain in the end of the 224. Olymp. Polyb, and Justin 30		Rom ins	bus his vi- against the	7 178
Nexande: di d 17 days before il ammer Solfrice. From Nabanal as l'uberio are colletted 424 years	1390	+29	453	114	dies at Baby	Nabon. Novemb. 1	2			16 135 L.4.	. c. 7. § .3.&amp;	4434	473	497	124	1, Ttol. Cerdhnus Antipater. Meleager, Softhenes.	Nabon Non-1	1. Antiochus So ter 19	The Gauls do Spoil in Macedi Greece under Bo and Belgins.	on and	1	179
nd hence to the reign of Augustus 94. The fam it. 78: .years, which a rees with this accompt. Peolen Almogett. 1. 3. 6.8.	1391		454	114	I. Aridaus, 6	I. Ptolemie Lagi. 39.	L. 3.c.3.§.1,2 & 3.	The Lamian		as, 25 136		4436	475	499	125	1. Antigonus Gonatas. 20		33		into .		18 t
	4391	433	457	115		4. Perdie- les fish Nov. in Expt. 11.	L.4. c. 3 - 9 8 & 9.	Victories Enmenes.	of		5. c.2. §.6.		8 477	7 50	1 126	3	banasfars year be- gins, O.T.1	5 25	About these the Achean letheir society	gainst	Sicill a- the Ro.	183
	439	433	458		fent against Eumenes.	5			1	140		375	478	502	126	4	11	6 26			by the	184 184	١.
Arideus flain by Olympi Antigonus biaten by Eume	as 439	7   430	460	115		7			1:		4. 6. 7. 8. 5.	444	480	50.	120	6	13	8 38	Pyrrhus at Argos.	lain crave a Carthag		15 186
Eumenes beirayed in Antigon Olympias flain by Callander, A rigonus grows dreaffal.	10- /		46	1 110	1. Cassander.	8		Thebes re-e fied by Call der.		143 Steen	e Translation by egint finished, this iledelehue.	17	5 484	50	127	10	17	12				190	C
Some place the beginning of Selection of this 12. from Alexander, which accompt he reigned 3.1.) or	u  440	2 44	46	5   11	5	Nabona∬ar. Novemb 9.	Demetrius beat 11 Gazasby Pto my, and Selence	le-1	_ _	141		376 444 376	485	5 50	128	11	bonassar Octob.	90			//  -	Manaf- es high Prieft 27	7
leace between Alexand			441	56 1	6	\ 13	1	1		Ter	nare ancient Roman i to been often fo un at Livy hath den	Cam 1	489		129	15	howaffar	17	(L. 5.c.)		beginning first Pu-	-	Ap dia M.

17	ulian l	Rome.	phieus O	lymp	Mace-	Egypt Ki	ria and the ingdom of the	Grecce.	Romans.	ewes.	Confuls.	i l	Julian. World.	i	Iphit.	Olymp.	Masedon,	Egypt  a	ireiki.	Gricci	Rome.	and Daniel	Confuisi
	World	Nabon 492	1	129	18	1	Thous. 16				. Valerins.	Annibal taketh Sa-	1 !	534	558	140	2	3 1		Carrier Carrier Carrier Carrier Carrier Carrier Carrier	1	- (	L. Ænglin M. Livius.
1.	3771	487	516	4	10	2,	15		!		T.Octacilias.	Tue beginning of the	3813			140				L.5.C. 2	The battails of
	4454	493	517	130	19	26	2	· A	Duilius his vi Etory at Sea.		C. Duilius, Cu. Cornilius	Geme Panick war.	3814	1	559	3	3	4	93	3· É-4-	Ticinus and Tribia.	241	T. Sempron
	3772 445 7	488		130			51		Regulus paf-		M. Attil.Reg.	the otteriences of this	4497	536	560	140 4	Sal Ecupl. Lives	pris be-	٥		The battas ls of Thrasymene.	24	C. Flavoin
ì	3772	491	520	4	22	29	54		frick.		Cn. Cornelin L. Manlins	hap The battel of Thrafy-	3815	530		141	ing by Jul year		941 7	Acols!	The great bal-		Cn. Servil
	++58	497	521	131	23	30		Marcus Cary- menfis Prator of the Achean	Regulus taken		2 Caditus	Spring: the Olympian year lega at the Immuer follice Hinnihal and Marcellus	1.1 1	532	561	1	5	Valeriaje art year egent Oft:	95	E	tel at Canna.	i	L Æm I
	3 7 , 6	492 503		132			- ''	Aratus recover	5		L. Casilins,	Hinnibal and Marcentis Hero King of Syrocuf- he Histonymus fucceed	(4477	538	562	141	6	7	8		Posthumius the R.Consul flain	- ':	I. Posthum T.Semp.C
i	3781	497	526	2	28	35	60	to the Achaens.	 		C. Furius.	The two Scipio's flain i	3817	533 541		142			96	Pillo end toe Albani	by the Gauls.   Syracuse wen	244	Q. Febin. Ap Cland
he Koman Conjuls bea at Lilybæum.	4164	20+	427	132	29	36	61		Regulus his	1	L. Marlini	Sein Hannibal mins Ta	3829	536	565	1	9	10	99	terrentister Etylismi er Romans in Gresse	Syracuse wen by Marcel Capua besieged	hy Priest	2 Fulv
ne leginning of the Tar Kingdam,	3782 4465	498 504	1	2 132		'r-' 1	13	1	Shipwrack & un-	e	P. Clandins Pulcher, au	Hannibal at the wal	1 + 5 0 3	542	566	142	10	11	12		Young Seipio Jeni into Spain. Capita won by	2	Cn. Fulv
	3783	1	5 28	4	30	27	62	1	Romant at Sea.	210	L. Junius. L. Cacilius.		3821 4507	$37 $46	1	143			16		The battail at		P. Sulpit C. Clan.
	14467	506	530	133	32	1.Ptole myExer- getes 16	64	ĺ			M. Fabius.			561	570	2	14	15	104 .		Metaurus.		M. Livi
milcar the Cartha	3785 4467		-	133	34		1. Seleucus Calli			1	M.Fabins.		4508	l	571	143	15	16	17		Scipio drives the Carthaginians quitt out of: Spain		2 Cecil L Vetur
iian in Sicil. L. 5. c.1. § 11.	3787	505		13+	1_		4 4	 	Luctatius hi	s 27	C. Atilins.		3826 4510	542 549		144	·	1.Piole	105	!	Scipio invades Africk		Cethegus
	i	511	5 35		Deme		69	Í	great victorya Ægateis.	217	A. Pofthumu.		3828	544	573	1	17	my Epi- phanes.	107	ļ	King Syphax		P.Semp be war of the Mer	-4473			134	2	7	5	Aratus Win	Peace grante to Carthage	al .			1829	545	574	144	18	2	108		taken.	İ	and Servins.
naries with the Car aginians. L.5.c.2.	13791	513	 	135	1 ,	8	70 6	Corsnin.	1.00	i Simo	C. Claudius		4512			144	19	1 3	21		Hannibal van quished by Sci	11	T.Claud
	i	508	537	1	3	Nabon Oct.22	7t		The Romans tal	219	M. Semproniu.	The end of the faca	3810		1	144		 	109	Ì—	pio. Scipio tri-		M . Se
The war with the Aercenaries ended.	be +470			135	5	10	73		Sardinia from the Carthaginians.	be	Falco.	Pairk war, and beging of the Macedoni wag of the Macedoni wominh Philip. This ye	in l	ŧ.	576	4	20	4	110	İ	umphs over	Ì.,	Patus.
(E) CERALISES TIME	379			1 3	1 Antig		14		1	9	Lepidus.	as with Philip. This ye at the next were the hilipses of the Moon.	ree 4516	555			21. Philip over come at the Rive Abfus, by the R	e/, 🚙	25		L.5.c.5.$.1.3		7.2.
	380	1	5   545	1 1	fon, 1		79	 	A Roman Emba		Makeolus.  M. Empliss		-\\\ 3834 -\\\\ 4517	550	).  	3	The battail a		26	Liberty o		26t	Sex. A
		3   52	546	137	2	17	80		Sadour Slain l Queen Teusa	230	M. Junius.	L.5. c. 5. §. 14	3835	551	580	0 4	Cynoscephala.  24	8	114	Greese pro- elsimed is the Ro- mans	1	262	2. Mi,
	380  448	5 \ 52.	4	13		19	17		Teuta, Queen Illyria fubdued the Romans	lin	L. Pofthama	Certhage , L.5.C.	.5.	1	1 58	1	tween Philipo		27		İ	1	L. Furi
L.5. c. 2. §.7.	_ ,80			1 38	4	-	1. Seleucus Co		AE KOMAN	16	4 C. Fulvini. L. Englist.	54.8 C.4. § . 5.	4519	5   55	8	146	the Romans.	1	115	(Carupo Nabis	и		Marco M.Cat
L.5. c. 5. S. 1.	380	9   5 <sup>2</sup>	552		8	23	rannus.		Marcellus his	22	C. Atilini.	Cap. 5. 6. 5.	3837		···	2	26	10	116	the ty-	!		L. Valer
Flaminius was a				13	9   11	26	Great, 36.	be	Caules about		M. Maruh	C.5. €.7.	1	561	58	5 47	29	13	at Chalcis.	5	1	į.	L. Quis
see L. 5. c. 2. §	8. 38	0 5	2	13		1 Proli	89	-	Milan,	20	P. Corntill			5   56		147	10	1,	Antiochus va		The erac offers of Super of Affairs of Affairs of Super Supe	41	Acil. C
L.5. c.5. §.2.	381	1	1 559	1 4	12	my l'hii	7 90		1	23	8 M. Minatia		384		7	2	30	14	igriffed at The		farming to tes Emm.	268	Nafica L.Scip
		94   5		114	0 4	. 1	3	1	1		9 C. Luctatini		452	4 / 50	53   . 1 58	147	31	15	33	c 5. S.1	. 1	1 45	L.361p

ï	ulian R	i/	phitus 0	lymp	Mace-	Egypt K	ria and the ingdom of the reck	Greece.	Romans.	Jewes. Danie.	Cox	vals.		Julian. World.	Nabon	Tphie.		Masedin,	Egypt	Syria & king- dom of the Greeks.	Gricci	Rome.	Jews and Daniel world. I	492		129	108		Laniochus			8	L.Va	lerius.	Annibal taketh Sa-	4495	534	558	140	2	3 1	4	of the Lea		22	L. Amyline
ί'	(	- 1	516		18	25	Thous. 16	1.4		198	T.00	tacilias	yus:nm.	3813	529	,,,,	2		7 1	92	Jrap.			M. Livius.
		487		4			2			9	C. D		The beginning of the	1596	534		140			5	L.s.c.	The battails of	23 1	P.Cor. Sciel
.5. c 1. §. 6.	1454	493	517	130	19	26	٠.		Duilius his vi				heend Punick war.	3814	520	559	2	3	4	93	3. 5.4.	Ticinus and Trobia.	241	T. Semprenis
.5 1. 3. 0.	3772	488	,,,	ī			5 I		Regulus paf-			Cornelius. Attil.Reg.	the accurrences of this	4497 1				Sel Front Leve	S. War In		Think said
		496		130		20	5		feth into A-	Í	i	٠	year erereferred by Polyb.	1	- 1	560	1	4.Sol Ecosyl. Live 22.Feb 11.reck	tuen An-	1	mitt 144	The battarls of Thrasymene.
			520	4	22	29	54		frick.			Corneline.	hen The battel of Thrafy- ame was fought in the	3815	530	!	4!	X-7,-3			!		2.4.5	Carder Carla
		491		131			6	Marcus Cary-			L.A	Lanisus.			537	561	141	5	National- Juri year begins Office box, 15	. 7		The great bal- tel at Canna.	25	C.Terent,V
L.5. c. 1. § 8.	1 1	427	521	-	23	30		mensis Prator	prisoner.	203	20	Caditus.	leger as the furmeer follice Hannibal and Marcellus	3816	532	30.1	1	3	ber 15.	95	1 5		243	L. A.m Pa
	37.6	492					55	Aratus recovers		18	L.C	acilius.	The King of Strockle	4499 !	538		141			8	4	Pefthemius th
	1463	503	526	132	28	35	••	Sicyon & joym is			8 C. F		he Hieronymus facceeds	3817		562	2	6	7	96	1 .	R.Conful flain by the Gauls.		T.Scmp.Gr.
	3781	497	,20	2		1 1	60	to the Acheans.	!	19					533 541	¦	142		·	11	Pline and	Syracufe wes	247	An Claudiu
be Koman Conjuls bea		50+		132	1	1	12	ı	Regulus his	1	1		The two Scipio's flain in	4,4,00	77.	565	-4-	9	10	İ	Estime e	by Marcel.	1 Onias
ot Lilybeum. The beginning of the Tar			427	2	29	36	61		death.	1 209	9 L.A		SENERAL SENERA	3829		L	1			ووا	Greet.	Capua be fieges	195 E HEJI 19	2 Fulvius
n Kingdam,	3782	498		132		F '	13	1	Shipwrack & 1	20		Clandins. cher. and	Hannibal at the wals	4503	542	566	142	10	11	12	1	into Stain.	2	Cn. Fulviu
	4465	504	5 28		30	27		į.	Romans at Sea	210	o L.7		f Rome	3821	537	300	2	10	٠.	100		Sapua won by	248	P. Sulpitins
	3783	499	1.	4	 	-	15	  -	J `		L.C			4507	546		143		1	16	1	The battail a		C. Clan. N
	++67	5.6	1	133	32	n.Prole	٠,	i	11	1		T 1:			e.	570		14	15		ļ	Metaurus.	1
	3785	501	530	3	72	geres 16	64	 		24	2 M.	Fabins.		3825 4508	561 547	¦	2	 	ļ	104		Scipio drives th		M. Livius 2 Cecilius
Amilcar the Cartha			i	133		Ţ.,	1. Seleucus Cal	ii-	}	1	1	1		1,00	747	571	143	15	16		1	Carthaginians	) .	Z Central
nian in Sicil.	14-7	1	532		34	3	nicus,	10	1		4 C.			3826	542		3		 	105		quite out of: Spain		L. Vetarius
L. 5. c.1. § .1 I.	3787	503	-¦	134	2	                                     	1 4	1	Luctatius		7  C.1	Luct.Catal		4510	549		144	!	I.Prole		i	Scipio invade	1 9	Cethegus.
	4472	511	5 35		Deme			i	great victor	21	17 A.	Posthumas.		3828	544	573	1	17	my Epi bbanes.	107	i	Africk.	255	P.Sempron
	1790	506		3	triust	이	69	_		Oni		. Luctatiui.		4511		 	144	 		20	1	King Syphax		Servilius.
be war of the Mer	- 4473	512	1	134	2	7	5	Aratus Win	Peace gran	tea		T. Carolina		1	Ì	574	1	18	2	1		taken.	١.,	and enaries with the Car	r-1	1	1 ,,,,	4	, , ,	1	70	Corinth.	to Cartha	1 Sie	mon C	Claudius		3829	545	 	2		-	108	-1	Hannibal var		Servius.
baginianı. L. 5.C.2.	4473	513		135		8	6	1	1	the ji	uft	i		4512	1 27.	575	144	19	1 3	21		quisted by Sc		I.C lanassis
	1	1	537	١,	3	Nabo						Semproniu.		3830	546		3		!	109	_i	pio.		M . Servi
	13792				. '	1	8		The Romans		Gn	aschus.	The end of the facon	4513	352		144			22		Scipio tri-	12	Lentulus.
The war with t	ht 1470	513	539	1 139	5	10	i	1	Carthaginians.		21 F4	ilco.	Parick war, and begin	# 2 R 2 T	5+7	576	4	20	4	110	1	Carthage.	258	Patus.
Mercenaries ended.	3794	510		13	1		73	-	1	5		pidus.	ing of the Micedonia wawith Philip. This yes ad the next were thre	4516	1 555		145	23. Philip ove	r	25				T. 2. Fla
	4182	52	1		1 Anti		1-4	İ	ĺ		١.,		Ediples of the Moon.	1	,,,,	1579		come at the Riv		1	į	L.5.c.5.$.1.	3.	1
	3800	510	545	1	fon.		79	-!	-			lakeolus. LÆmylius			550	.	. 3	mans.	1	113	Hint		261	Sex. Elis
		52		13		1	15	} .	A Roman Em	6.	i		L.5. c. 5. §. 14.	4517	556	580		The battail a Cynoscephala.	8	26	Greece pr elimed i tee Ros	d.	16	Cethegus. 2 Minut
	1	1	540	1	2	17	80	1	Queen Teu	4 23	30 M	1. Junius.	1	3835		1	4	124	-	114	Mann.		262	12.841
		1 517		2			17	1	Teuta, que Illyria fubdu		10 L	Post humu.	Hannibal expell	led 4518	557			25. Peace b		27	1		17	L. Furius.
	1448	52.	4   548	1 3	1 4	19		ì	the Romans	2	234 C	. Fulvins.	Carthage , L.5.c.	3836	552	581		tween Philips	9	115	1	ĺ	062	Marcellus
L.5. c. 2. § .7.	180	3   51		_ \ _ 4		_!	82		-		16 L	. Emplist.	27-04-9-3.		558		146	ine Romans.	·	28	"ar upo	и		M.Cato.
	1448	5   52	8	13	8 8	23	1. Selencus	e-		١.		Atilius.	Cap. 5. S. 5.		1	1 582		26	10	ì	Nahis the ty-	ĺ	1	1,24.0
L.5. c. 5. S. 1.	-50	, 52	55	٠١ 4	1	1 23	raunus.		Marcellus h	( vi	10 10	. Cornelius.		3837			2		-	116	rant.	!		L. Valerius
Flaminius was	380			113	9		Antiochus	the	Hay over 1	he :			C.5. 9.7.	4522	561	585	1 47	29	1 12	31 . Antiocha	15		21	L. Quintin
a Cal shir near	١.	- 1	1 55	5	11	26	Great, 36.	i	Gaules abou		237 1	M. Marcelai	J.,/.	3840	1 556		T	9	1 3	119	1		267	Cn. Domiti
See L. 5. C. 2.	8. 381	0/5		-		1. PH	. l 89		1	1 -		P. Cornelius,			562		147		1	Armochus v	in l	The great after of Suppose our Addiction of the Addiction of the Employment of the E	22	Acil. Gla-
	1449	3 53	2 55		12		oilo,	1		1 2	238	M. Minatias.		. 0	1	586	2	30	14	quiped at Th	er	lemming to tes Rim	. CO	brio.
L.5, c.5. §.2.	381	1 5		1.		pare:	, 7 90				20	L. Veturini.		3841	1 1		,			mapyle, 110		-1		Nafica. L.Scipio,
		14   5	33		0	bi- 2	3					C. Lactatins.		452	1 56	3     587	147 	31	1 19	33	c 5. S.	1	25	i Scipio,
			1 55																					C. Lalius,

· ·	Julian. I	Rome.	Iphit.	Olymp.	Macedon,	Egypt.		Greece	Rome.	fews and Daniel	Confuls, mineral response toward	World.	Nabon		148		- !0	Greeks.	 	Scipio ba-	26	Lepidu.
5. C., 5. §. 9.	4527	566	590	148	34	18	124	1 1	kamfelf from Rome.	272	Flaminius.
	14528	507	, — ;	148		19	1. Selencus Phi-		1		S. Poft hamist.
	3846	562	591	1 2	35	19	lopater, 12.	!	Scipro Han	273	2 Martins.
L.5. c. 6. § 2.	+532	570	594	149	38	22	128	1	Scipto,Han- mbal, and Philopomen die. Yully placeth Sel- placeth death	276	2. Fabius.
	3849	565	-	149	39		5	1	eseiter.	31	Panins.
L.5.c. 6.5.3.	3850	1	595	3	The tyranes of Philip his fon Demetrius accuse? to him a and fluenthe next year.	23	1 19	Callicratu	.]!	32	Cn. Bebins.
Cap. 6. §. 4.	4533		596	149	40	24	6	Assems, and all the Greeks.		1	Γ -
лар. от э. т.	3851		 	150	 	1. Prolement Phi	7	1	一	35	A. Posthumin
	4534	568	597		41	lometor, and his brether Physicon	31			279
	4535			150	42 1. Perfeus, 11.	2	8	ł		34	1
	3853		 	1 2	or 12 yers.	1	7	1	1	39	Manlins. Sp.Posthum
An Eclipse of the Moon to of Philometor, $73 ) to nd 206 daies from the l	ars	1	603	3 3	6	7	1. Antiochus Epi- phanes. 12.		 		Scavela.
inning of Nabonaus	ac. ACAT	574 580		151	7	8	2		See 1.5 (sap. 6. (s. 11.	Jafin boy- ath the best Profibous, and after	L. Posthumi
ount. It was by Julianye he last of April, about of the clock in the mornin	one - 0		; ]	4			138	!-	-	1	P.Licinins.
1100	45+3	1	1 606		The beginning of the war of Pe feet	) of 10	1 140	ŀ	c.6.90	6 288	C.Caffins.
	3861		+	152	1	. Finte breated	, 6	十	1	290	Martins.
	386	1	60	4	11	Age: that under printer of helping one King gainst mother.	142	_	4) Gentiu	5 [192, Per	Servilins.
A total Ecliffe of the M foregoing the over:hron	1001 45 40 no of	6   585	609		Perfeut vanqui- feed and taken.	Articolous communication of the property of the Landson of the Lan	7	§.8,9	9. King of	7
Perfeus, in the ye.of No naffar bare noted.	3 864 454			153	Maceach mac	arı	1 143	The sapti uity of al the best a mong the Greeks.	Tri-		S Patus.
1	386	.	1 610		a Roman Pro	r- 14	144	Greeke.	in Ram	16. 12.	funsus.
	454			153	5	16	10	1		Macca	Torquatus a. OEtavius.
	386	67 58		4			1 146	_			Oliuvini.
							·- /s
-
4

ALPHABETICAL TABLE

OF THE

Principal Contents of the First and Second Books of the First Part of the HISTORY of the WORLD

Brahams age before Noah died, 62. Against the over-much curiosity of some in

A He was the first instructer of the Chaldeans, Phenicians, and Egypton fibe World. 5 tians, in Afrology and divine know-Agains the inexcusable excuses of this latledge, 158. Was contemporary with Ni-Canaan, 174. Its childles, till about ten Agenor his proceeding, years after his arrival in Canaan, ibid. Agamemnon and Meu His age when he rescued Lot. Abacuc his Monument, feen by S. Hie- Aide forraign ill invited, Abijah kis victory against Jeroboam, Acesines one of the Rivers that fall into Indus, where Alexander built his Fleet Alba longa, founded by Ascanius, of Gallies, Acrifius and Danae, Adams free power in his first creation, anigmatically described in the Person of Proteus. Adonibezek bis Tyranny, Adrianus bis Edict against the Jews, Egyptians, at what time they first took that name, 122. How they may be faid to have ftory for 13000. years, ibid. Egypt it felf denominated from Ægyptus the fon of Belus, ibid. A flourishing kingdom in the time of Abraham, 184. Anciently valled the land of Ham, 187. Egyptians god for all turns, 203. Egyptian wisdom, 253. &c. Egyptian Babylon.not in the beginning of Nimrods Empire, 147. The manner of the ancient Egyptian Kings government.

Equivocating oaths, how dangerou, 257

Alliopias distance from Arabia and Pale-

ter time. nus, 167. His journey from Haran to Agag, a general name of the Kings of the Agamemnon and Menelaus at variance, 457 All forms are in the first Mover. All Kings called Jupiters by the ancient, Aleppo, anciently called Magog, Amphiaraus bis destiny, 342 Amazia bis diffimulation, His base Idolatry, 433. His quarrel against Ifrael, 434. his overthrow 433. his exprobratours, 439. bis Flatterers, 438. be is generally bated, Ambition the first sin, Annius, quite contrary to Mofes, in the fitteation of Henoch, 58. his vanity in planting Gomer in Italy and Tubal in Spain in the twelfth of Nimrods reign, 105 Contradictory to himself, 104. How to be credited, His Philo, An answer to some few objections against certain particulars in the fourth and fifth chapters of Genefis, Answer of a German Prince to those that verswaded him to become a Lutheran. An Indian, presented unto Solyman the Turks General, in Anno 1570. who had out-lived three hundred years, fearching kow God wrought in the Crea-

The 1
1 Dorfane	Macedon and Thrace; and how far it casts
Andronieda 200 deservi	Bade, 97.
2931	Athenians true Originall, 112. Their
Androclus, the Founder of Ephefus,	Atlas, divers of that name, 248.
3901	Athalia, her practices, 413. Her cruelty, 416.
Anastasius the Emperour flain by ! ight-	Her sacriledge, 419. Her indiscretion and death, 425.
ning,	Atossa ber wantonnesse. 423.
Antioch upon the River Orontes, whereof S.	Augustines answer to those that take the
D to to Pillion	Tree of Life allegorically, 53. His dif-
11 - Li- Tomble at Delphus, conjumen.	course on the Arke, 87. His Millanois, 161
	His opinion concerning Baal and Astar-
Chata · mith the divers Thinks it july	- 262
7:1	te, 203.
ed, Armenia and Mesopotamia, first of all Armenia and mejoperation 41	В
known by the name of Eden, 41
Araxen, a Nation of Annius his making,	Dabel was forty years in building, 92.
24	Not walled till Semiramis time, 169.
Ararats misprission cleared, 98	Babylonians Dove, ibid.
	Balonimus invested in the Kingdome of Peter preached (according to Clement) and founded a Church in honour of our
T. J.	Basan, an exceeding fertill Region, 310.
Lady, Melopotamia, 138	Bdellium, growing plentifully in Havilah or
Aram Naharajim, now McGopotamiu, 138	Ruliana 40.
Argives, how they came to be called Danai,	Refore the beginning, there was neither primary matter to be informed, nor forme
Aristides his Ephemerides of Dreams,	to inform, nor any being but Eternall, 1.
. 101	Belus (properly) the first that peaceably
Armous, otherwise Danaus, King of Egypt,	and with generall allowance exercised so-ana with generall allowance excitings
tus, 192. Afterwards King of Argos in	veraign power, 146. His sepulchre, 152.
	Bel; the signification thereof 151.
	Bellonius his report of the Pyramides in
Arad, King of the Canaanites, surprised di-	Arg unt
	Bellerephon and Pegasus moralized, 331.
Areas, the fin of Orchomenus of whom Ar-	Rel zehuhe Temple. 290.
	Ponhadad tmice guerthrown by Ahab 315.
Arias Montanus his derivation of the name
Halian 200
Arbaces destroyed Ninive, 446. his too	of the difficulty of the real, that much levita IDIG.	11 C. Motthew
Aristodemus his blind zeal, with the fruits	Berfabe, why not named by St. Matthew,
	304
theriof,	Bethlaida, the native City of the Try
Aristocrates his perfidie, 489. Worthily re-	Deter Andrew, and Philips 2/
Aristomenes his valour during the siege of	Los and Christ
Fra. His strange escape out of prijons 490	- 10 NaG built by Liber Pa-
Li. Joseph and hursall: 491	· Designing
ACcarrie a I abe hordering on Phrigia:	ter, 288
Assur: the name thereof diversly taken, 14	A ROZUS DIS MANICTERION,
All mines demand aid of Croclus, 180	Boreas bis rape of Orithya, 328.
Ajjyrians acmand and by
Ascalus, one of the sons of Hymenæus, 296	Their manner of fight, 199.
ACadon the hirth City of Herou, Chris	106.
persecutor, 297. Repaired by Kichar	( Diateus C )
K of England. 1010	43 1
Asclepius his practice to cure the Frenzi	e,
Alciepias as praest 37	5. 62.
A Grobie his foard I am. 48	Abala, what it importers, Alychis his parp Law.  Athos, an exceeding high mountain between Atnos, an exceeding wigo mountain between	7710

b	le.
	acedon and Thrace; and how far it	caft.
		97.
ن	shade, henioms true Originall, 112.	Their 341.
٠.	pride, las, divers of that name,	248.
٦. ۵.	halia her practices. A.12. Her cruelly	416.
	Her sacriledge, 419. Her indiscr	etion
	and death,	425.
۸.	ollo her mantonnelle.	422.
Λ.	ugustines answer to those that tak	e the
a	Tree of Life allegorically, 52, 17	s azı-course on the Arke, 87. His Millanoi	r. 1 Š I
	His opinion concerning Baal and I	Aftar-
	te,	253.
	10,
	В
1	Dabel was forty years in building	, 92.
I	Not walled till Semiramis time,	169.
B	abylonians Dove,	ibid.
В	alonimus invested in the Kingdo	me of
	Zidon,	285.
В	afan, an exceeding fertill Region,	310.
В	adellium, growing plentifully in Hav	lab or
7.	ในโรกทา	40.
E	Before the beginning, there was n	enner Langua
	twist and matter to be intormed. Not	10TMC
	to inform, nor any being but Etern	all, I.
E	Calue (twoporly) the Arit that bea	ceaviy
	and with generall allowance exerc	ijea jo-veraign power, 146. His sepulchr	, 152.
I	Bel; the signification thereof	151.
1	Bellonius his report of the Pyrami	aes in
	Ægypt,	٠٠
]	Bellerephon and Pegafus moralize	2,331.
	Bel zebubs Temple,	296. Las
	Benhadad, twice overthrown by Aha	D <sub>2</sub> 313.
	Beroaldus his solution of the doubts	arijing
1	of the difficulty of the Text, that ver went out of Eden,	42
	ver went out of Eden,	43°
1	Bersabe, why not named by St. Ma	384
1		Anostles
	Bethfaida, the native City of the	276
1	Peter, Andrew, and Philip,
1	Bethleem, the native City of Ibzan,	2,112.0
1	lec and Christ,	er Pa-
1	Bethsan, anciently Nysa, built by Lil	279•
١	ter,	288.
ij	Bozius his indiscretion,	328.
	Boreas his rape of Orithya,	Romans.
.	Britains Boats in the time of the l
٠ ١		199.
5	Their manner of fight,	406.
i	Briareus moralized,	τ.
,	С
	· ·

Postin 250	•
Cain, his departure from Gods pre-	С
Cain, he departured literally, 57	С
	C
A Vagabond, now underflood,	She
Caponi bis rejolution,	vall
Condone mortal Denils. 103
t .:	war
	vila
	(
Caftle of Pilgrims,	teni
Cataractæ Cœli, probably expounded,
* 7	1
Cause of Adam and Eves disobedience, 56	Ι.
Cethim, afterward called Macedon, 116
Color the watige City of Barac. */T
Chaldza, Babylonia, Shinaar: three	1
CHAIGES, Dary tourn, Chair	1 4
	ľ
Chaldeans, descended of Arphaxad, 133	12
Chalmbon and their condition of 17152	Jei
Cham, intituled supiter Hammon of the	Ί.
Charran, fometime called Charre, Haran,	tre
Charran, Jonethane tances Charran in Melo-	.
and Aran; are the same Charran in Meso-	r۱
potania, 38. Famous by the overthrow of ibid
Chebar, mentioned by Ezekiel, but	*   1
branch of Euphrates, 47	7
Chemmis his Pyramis.	1
Charles his Daughton	1
Cheops his Daughter.	٠١.
Chison, on whose banks the Idolatron	51
	1
Cidarim a garment belonging water to	e 3
During Kanas	2 1 22
	- 1
Codici mobenes in named. 10	9 J
	9 J.
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49	9 ft 1 b
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49	9 ft 1 b 7 J
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law defined, 22 Cleanthes his defoription of God by h	9 ft 1 b 7 J
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 22 Cleanthes bis description of God by h attributes and properties, 7	9 ft 5 7 Ja 4 5 9
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law defined, 22 Cleanthes bis description of God by b attributes and properties, 7 Codyn has refolution. 23	9 ft 5 Ja 4 5 1
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law defined, 22 Cleanthes bis defoription of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus this refolution, 23 Collie Achille a fleep Mountain.	9 ft 5 7 2 4 5 9 1
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law defined, 22 Cleanthes bis defoription of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus this refolution, 23 Collie Achille a fleep Mountain.	9 ft 5 7 2 4 5 9 1
Cimmerians invade Asia, 29 Civil Law desirved, 22 Cleanthes bis description of God by b attributes and properties, 7 Codrus the rosolution, 23 Collis Achilles, a steep Mountain. Comesters tale of Moses and Tharbi	9 ft 5 1 7 2 2 2 2 3 3 1 2 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3
Cimmerians invade Asia, 29 Civil Law desirved, 22 Cleanthes bis description of God by b attributes and properties, 7 Codrus the rosolution, 23 Collis Achilles, a steep Mountain. Comesters tale of Moses and Tharbi	9 ft 5 1 7 2 2 2 2 3 3 1 2 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 20 Civil Law desired, 29 Cleanthes bis description of God by b attributes and properties, 7 Codrus div rossition, 23 Collis Achilles, a steep Montain. Cometters vale of Moses and Tharbi	9 ft 1 7 2 2 2 2 2 3 3 4 3 4 4 5 4 4 4 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law defined, 22 Cleanthes his defoription of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus this refolution, 23 Collis Achillæ, a steep Monstain. Commerces sale of Moses and Tharbit Competers of the vines Deucalious Floor and Phaetons confugration,	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invode Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 7 Codrus the refolution, 23 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Comerces sale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the vine of Deucalions Floward Phaetons configuration, 20 Continuous not a versus, but a degree we	9 ft b 7 7 a 7 5 9 7 a 8 5 7 d,
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus the resolution, 23 Collis Achille, a steep Mountain. Competers tole of Moles and Tharbit Conjectures of the vineit Deucalions Flow and Phaetons conflagration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree as	9 ft b 7 a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus the resolution, 23 Collis Achille, a steep Mountain. Competers tole of Moles and Tharbit Conjectures of the vineit Deucalions Flow and Phaetons conflagration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree as	9 ft b 7 a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 22 Cleanthes his description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus this resolution, 23 Collis Achillæ, a steep Monstain. Commerces sale of Moses and Tharbit Competences of the vines of Deucalious Floo wad Phaetons confugration, Continency, not a versue, but a degree us it, Compose, diverted from Christian Religion.	9 ft b 7 a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invode Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicleanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 7 Codrus the refolution, 23 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Commerces tale of Moses and Fharbit Competences of the vineual Deucasions Floward Phaetons confugration, 20 Continency, not a versue, but a degree wit, 29 Congo, diverted from Christian Religion.	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus the resolution, 23 Collis Achille, a steep Mountain. Competers tole of Moles and Tharbit Competers tole of Moles and Tharbit und Phaetons complagration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree as in the competer with tolling the competence with tolling.	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus the resolution, 23 Collis Achille, a steep Mountain. Competers tole of Moles and Tharbit Competers tole of Moles and Tharbit und Phaetons complagration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree as in the competer with tolling the competence with tolling.	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 29 Cleanthes bis description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus the rosolution, 23 Collis Achilles, a steep Montain. Cometters tale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the time of Deucalions Flow and Phaetons consuggration, 20 Continency, not a vertee, but a degree as the conference of the time of the continency of the time of the continency, not a vertee, but a degree as the continency of the time of the continency of the time of the continency of the time of the continency of the time of the continency of the time of the continency of the time of the continency of the contine	9 ft Ja 7 7 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2
Cimmerians invade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 22 Cleanthes his description of God by hattributes and properties, 7 Codrus this resolution, 23 Collis Achilles, a steep Montain. Comerces vale of Moses and Tharbit Comerces vale of Moses and Tharbit und Phaetons constagration, Continency, not a vertue, but a degree with Continency, not a vertue, but a degree with, Congo, diverted from Christian Religion, Contemporaries with Johna, 2 Contemporaries with Johna, 3 Contemporaries with Othoniel, 3 Contemporaries with Othoniel, Succotth Prince we fulfed to mid the Afaelities in	9 ft bir 7 Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Commerces the formation of Tharbit Competence of the vines of Touralisms Flow and Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree us of the continency, not a vertue, but a degree us of the continency, not a vertue, but a degree us of the continency of the vertue, but a degree us of the continency of the transfer of the continency of the contin	9 ft bir Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Codrus this reference, 7 Commerces the formation of Tharbit Competence of the vines of Touralisms Flow and Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree us of the continency, not a vertue, but a degree us of the continency, not a vertue, but a degree us of the continency of the vertue, but a degree us of the continency of the transfer of the continency of the contin	9 ft bir Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 7 Codrus the reference, 7 Codrus the reference, 7 Codrus the reference, 7 Collis Achilla, a steep Montain. Commerces tale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the vines of Deucalions Floward Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree use of the continency, not a vertue, but a degree use of the configuration of the steep of the selection of th	9 ft bir Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicleanthes bis description of God by be attributed and properties, 7 Codrus the regulation, 23 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Commerces tale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the vines of Deucalious Floward Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency in the characteristic of the continency with Othonical, 20 Considerable Readors, why Succodifferency in section of the substitute of the substitut	9 ft bir Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicleanthes bis description of God by be attributed and properties, 7 Codrus the regulation, 23 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Commerces tale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the vines of Deucalious Floward Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency in the characteristic of the continency with Othonical, 20 Considerable Readors, why Succodifferency in section of the substitute of the substitut	9 ft bir Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cicleanthes bis description of God by be attributed and properties, 7 Codrus the regulation, 23 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Commerces tale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the vines of Deucalious Floward Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency, not a versue, but a degree us of the continency in the characteristic of the continency with Othonical, 20 Considerable Readors, why Succodifferency in section of the substitute of the substitut	9 ft bir Ja a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a cimmerians invoade Asia, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Civil Law desired, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 77 Codrus this refoliassion, 73 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Connectors tale of Moses and Tharbis and Phaetons consumptions. Conjectures of the rime of Deucalions Floward Phaetons consumptions but a degree us it, Congo, diverted from Christian Religions. Contemporaries with Johna, 2 Contemporaries with Johna, 2 Contemporaries with Johna, 2 Contemporaries with Othoniel, 2 Conjectural Reasons, why Surcoth Princol we suffel we said the effective of Brethen, 2 Confidence in signs, instead of the faithful Corall in the Red Sea, 2 Corrections of the Statis year by Pope Corrections of the Statis year by Pope Corrections of the Statis of the S	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a cimmerians invoade Asia, 49 Civil Law desirned, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 77 Codrus this refoliusion, 77 Codrus this refoliusion, 78 Collis Achilla, a steep Mountain. Commerces vale of Moses and Tharbis and Phaetons consumption. Continency, not a vertue, but a degree as it, 79 Congo, diverted from Christian Religions of the continency with Othoniel, 79 Contemporaries with Othoniel, 79 Consideral Reason, why Succoth Petined me suffer will the stratistic to Brether, 70 Consideral Reason, 79 Consideration of the Justice year by Pope Consulting the Shirteenth, 79 Correction of the Justice year by Pope Constitute Thereties.  Consideration of the Justice year by Pope Constitute Thereties.  Consideration Fractitis contraditions with a facility of the Shirteenth, 70 Consideration Fractitis contraditions with a facility of the Shirteenth of the Facility of the Shirteenth of the Facility of the Shirteenth of the Facility of the Shirteenth of the Facility of the Shirteenth of the Facility of the Shirteenth of the Facility of the Shirteenth of t	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a Cimmerians invode Asia, 29 Civil Law desired, 29 Cleanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 7 Codrus the rosolution, 23 Collis Achilles, a steep Montain. Comerces vale of Moses and Tharbit Conjectures of the vine of Deucalions Flow and Phaetons consuggration. Continency, not a vertue, but a degree as it, Congo, diverted from Christian Religion, Contemporaries with Joshua, 20 Consemporaries with Joshua, 20 Consemporaries with Joshua, 20 Contemporaries with Joshua, 20 Consemporaries with Othonicl, 20 Consemporaries with Othonicl, 20 Consemporaries with Othonicl, 20 Consemporaries with Othonicl, 20 Consemporaries with Othonicl, 20 Consemporaries with Joshua, 20 Consemporaries with Consemporaries with Change Consemporaries with Consemporari	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a
Cimmerians invoade Asia, 49 Civil Law desirned, 49 Cleanthes bis description of God by be attributes and properties, 77 Codrus this refellation, 78 Codrus this refellation, 79 Codrus this refellation, 79 Commerces vale of Moses and Tharbis Conjectures of the vines Toursal Tharbis and Phaetons configuration, 20 Continency, not a vertue, but a degree of the conjectures with Johnsel, 20 Constant of the Johnsel, 20 Constant of the Johnsel, 20 Constant of the Johnsel, 20 Conjectural Reasons, why Succosti Peticel me suffer with Othoniel, 20 Confidence in signs, inflicted of the fallist of Brethren, 20 Coral in the Red Sea, 20 Coral in the Red Sea, 20 Corposition of the Justice year by Pope Constant of the Johnsel Sea, 20 Corpositive Facility contraditiony unit of Coral in the Red Sea, 20 Corpositive Facility contraditiony unit of the confidence in Security contraditiony units of Coral in the Red Sea, 20 Corpositive Facility contraditiony units of the sea of th	9 ft b J a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a a

Creon his cruelty, cruelty the chief cause of the Flood, Curling of Parents. Cuih , the Son of Ham , with his Sons eba , Havilah , &c. first seated in the ley of Shinaar : which region was afterds denominated after the name of Ha-Cush, and the Region of the Ismaelites, exded directly North from Æthiopia, Cush, mistaken for Ethiopia, proved, Cush, being taken for Ethiopia, is the use of much mistaking in Scriptures, Custome of Tanistry in Ireland, Cyril his comparison of Cain and the Cyaxares forceth Ninive, 500. Is comled to abandon Assyria, ibid. His exmity and remedy, D. Agon, the Idol of the Philistims, de-Cribed. Dalaqua, an Island in the Red Sea, Dardania, built by Dardanus, David his election to the Kingdom 70. His combate with Goliah, ibid. His nany dangers in Sauls time, 374. His Ju-lice on the fellow that avowed himfelf to ave slain Saul, 375. His imprecation against Joab, 377. His justice on Rechab and Baanah, for murdering Ilho(eth, ibid. His dancing before the Ark, and deriding by Micol, 378. He is prohibited to build the Temple, ibid. His taking and demolishing of Gath, ibid. Endangered by Ilibibenob, ibid. His destruction of the Moabites, 379. His ambassage to Hanum, ibid. His vittory at Helam, 380. His crosses after bis adultery with Barsheba, 381. His ex-treme forrow for the death of Absalom, 382. His reason for delivering Sauls Sons or Kinfmen to the Gibeonites, 383. His love to Jonathan, expressed in sparing his son Mephibosheth, ibid. His speech in Parliament, and the approbation thereof, 385. His advice to Solomon concerning Shimei, ibid. His death, personage, and internal gifts, ibid. Debts of cruelty and mercy never left unlatisfied. Deceit in all Prosessions, 162

Decoces his first Form of Government. 491. He built Tauris, formerly called Ecibidbatane, Decreto's Temple, 297
Deucalion and Phaeton, contemporaries with Hbbbbbb

with Moles,	2491
Devils policy,	161
Diagoras his three Sons,	455	l
Difference of Translations about the	Geni-	l
fication of Gopher, whereof the Ari	b mas	ŀ
made,	86	Į
Difference of Authors, concernen		l
Mountains of Ararat,	96	ı
Difference between Necromancirs	and	ı
Witches	164	ı
Difference between Emath and Han		١
reconciled,	128
Diffidence, the Bar to Moses and A		١.
entry into the Land of Promise,	237	1
Diodorus bis report for the original of	of the	ľ
Gods:	70	١.
Distance between the Flood and Abra		ľ
178. And between the Flood of Ogyges	and that of Noah,	78	ı
Distance between Tyre and Zidon,	263	ľ
Divers repaired from Age to Touth	61	ľ
Divers computations of years,	200	ŀ
Divers appellations of the Red-Sea,	204
Divers things in the Scripture referr
the reading of other Books , which by i.	niury	١.
of time are lost or perished,	240	٠
Divers Mercuries.	-40	1
Dodanim, the fourth son of Javan	the	•
first Flanter of Rhodes,	116
Dogs first brought by the spaniards		•
Hispagnola, changed into Wolves,	87
Domitian his shameles spectacle,		٠
- Jametejs Ipetractes	335

Asie to draw those men back, whom rage without reason hath led on. Eden of Paradife, described by the Coun-division after the Flood.

try bordering it, 39. An Island of that name in Tygris, described, 41. Known by the name of Geferta. Education inverteth influence, Effects of fear, Eglon subdueth Israel, 244 305 Elius or Sol, bis pedigree,

Emaus overthrown by Earthquake, Emims, Giants of buge stature, 241 Enoch and Elias at the time of the Flood could not be in the terrestial Paradise, Enoch, the first City of the world, built by

Cain, Epaphus, Founder of Memphis in Egypt,

Epaminondas, Author of the Messeni-

Ephori in Lacedamon, the time of their rience, beginning.

Enhraimites quarrel with Gideon, Epiphanius his answer to such as draw the truth of the ftory of Paradife, to a meer Alle. gorical understanding. Era, betrayed by a flave, Errour of Juch as understood the Sons of God, Gen. 5.24. to be Angels, Etay the Prophet, his crnel death, Esiongaber, where Solomon bails his Evangelion diverfly taken,

Euphrates & Tygris, two guides to Eden, 26. Being two of the four heads whereinto the River of Paradife is divided, Euphrates it felf is divided into four branches. Eusebius bis erronr, Ezekiah bis godly beginning, 465. Is besteged by Sennacherib, 364. Miraculously delivered, ibid. His overlight, Icus Indica described, 53. Allegorized, First or last naming in Scripture, no proof who was first or last born. Fortescue bis report of a Judgement given at Salifbury. Frederick Barbaroffa bis end and burial.

From the same place where man had his be-Doubts concerning the time of the Earth's ginning, from thence again had Men their 135 increase.

Amala a strong City, forced by Ves-Tpafian. Ganges falleth into the Ocean divers degrees to the Eastward from Indus, Gaza, a goodly city, furprized by Alexander Janneus King of the Jews, 311 Gebazites and Simonians. 293 Gehoar, Founder of Cairo, Gehon disproved to be Nilus, 48. So confeffed by Pererius. Geometrical cubit not used in Scripture Gergefcus, the fifth Son of Canaan, first

Founder of Berytus ( afterward called Forlix Julia ) in Phœnicia. Geographers Maps. Georgians, from what place they take their

Giants , men of great stature and Brength, ans replantation in their old possessions, to have been before the Flood, proved by Scrip-91 tures; and that there are like now, by expe-

Gideon his overfight and overthrow, 335. of her first building, ibid. His Contemporaries, God foreknew and comprehended the beginning and end before they were, 25. He 268. His policy in holding league with Israel, worketh the greatest things by the weakest means, 197. His first punishment of the Expetians, was in changing those Rivers storical causton, into blood, whereinto formerly their Fathers had thrown the Hebrews innocent children, their filtions ) by Pythagoras, 73. His par-198. His fecret hand in all manner of acci- tiality in Achilles praife, dents, 243. His punishment of places for the peoples fakes. Godly use to be made of praying toward the Gog and Magog, what is understood by 107 164 Good spirits not to be constrained, Golden Age. Great flaughter of the Israelites, Greeks vanity in holding, that no Flood reckon the Ages of the first Patriarchs by Lupreceded that of Ogyges, 77. Their ma- nary or Egyptian years, Gyges obtaineth the Kingdom of Lydia,

TAbdon, Judge of Israel; in whose time happened the destruction of Troy, Father of forty Sons, and thirty Grandchildren. Halon the Tartar forceth Damascus, Halyattes his reason for defending the Scythians against Cyaxares, Ham, Father of the Egyptions, Haran, the eldeft Son of Terah, Havilah, one of Joctans Sons , Seated in the Continent of the East India. 1 28 sers, Hebron, where Adam, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were buried, Helen the Empres ber sumptuous Chapel, Hellen and Melantho, sons of Deucali- nourable interment, Henricus Mechliniensis bis observations touching the general Flood, the twelve Labours are ascribed. Herod bis Harborow,

Herodium a magnificent Castle, built by Herod, the Country adjoyning, 48. His arguments, 407. It reprehended for aiding Ahab, 408. that Helen was not at Troy during the fiege, Loseth bu Fleet by shipwrack, ibid. In great

Hierusalem, how uncertain the time is nument,

Hippones bis cruel Justice. Hiram bis difblealure against Solomon Historians , borrowers of Poets, 422. Hi-Homer and Hefiod, placed in Hell (for Hooker's definition of Law. Horatii and Curiatii their combate, How the Text, speaking of four heads (into which the River of Paradise was divided ) is to be understood, How the Tree of Life is understood by the 143 Hebrews. How ridiculous their resolution is,

How far the education and simplicity of these times differ from former Ages. How the certain knowledge of the Creation came to Moles, How the appointed number of creatures to be saved, might have place in the Ark, How the West part of America, to the South of Panoma, came to be called Peru,, Hus, the Country of Job, how bounded,

Hillus and Echenus their Combate,

47 I

211

Apha, a strong place forced by Titus, Idanthura bis Answer to Darius his Let-342 Idle Ckroniclers. Idolaters vanity. Jehojada bis godly care, 419. bis policy, 425. He proclaimeth Joas, ibid. His ho-

Johojakim bis impiety , 509. He revolteth Henoch was not diffolved as the rest, from Nabuchodonosor, 510. His death and 62 burial. Jehoram his cruelty towards his Bre-

83 thren, 411. and was the first that erected Hercules, native of Tyrinthia, to whom irreligion by force, ibidem. He loseth Libna, e twelve Labours are ascribed. 281 Arabians , ibidem. His wretched end, Jehoshaphat his great numbers of Sould-Herodotus his testimony of Eden, and diers, 2 Chron. 17. how to be understood, 355 extremity for want of Water, ibid. His Mo-

Hbbbbbb 2

Gideon

214

Jephta bis just defence against the Ammonites,

Jeremy the Prophet, his death and burial.

Jestrael, where Naboth was stoned, Jethro or Jothor, Raguel or Revel, and Hobab, all one person, 209. His departure to the King of Babel, 496. His death, ibid.

from Moles. Tewish Impiety. Improbability of their conjecture place Paradife beyond the Ocean, Improbability of the confusion of Tongues at His death, 558. His Sepulchre. the birth of Peleg, Improbability of the fort time of ten years, phus, allowed by some for the finishing of Babel,

Improbability of the waters standing up-policy. right (like walls ) in the Red Sea , as some | Isaac his birth , rather a miracle wrought Schoolmen have fancied, Image and smilitude taken in one sense by Prophecy, 18 S. Paul and S. James, Indus descent into the Ocean.

India, the first peopled Country after the ibid. In whose time it was that Moses led Ifrael Countries between Havilah and Sur, wasted out of Egypt, Invention of Alcinous Gardens drawn by Homer from Moses his description of Para- of the Gibeonites, contrary to the faith before

Invention of Ethnick sacrifice, ascribed to Cain, Joab his jealousie of his place and dignity, the natural Son of Ahazia. His forward- Troy, ness to repair the Temple, 427. Is forced to buy his peace, 428. His cowardife, 430. His death. Joas, King of Israel, his triumphant entry into Jerusalem, 435. His errour, 436. His Job his sepulchre, 312. Who he was, Whence were his friends, Elihu and the reft,

John, the Son of Levi, bis commotions

Jonathan, bis happy resolution, Iones and Medes, from whom descended, 110. Iones expelled Peloponnesus,

Jonas, the flory of his Prophecy,

445

Joppa in Judas founded before the Flood. Burut to the ground by the Romans loseph his reason in favouring the Egyp-301 tian Priefts, 189. Esteemed the first Mercury, Iosephus, the first Author of mistaking Icricho, one of the Toparchies of Judaa, Piton for Ganges, 47. Mistaken in his own 220 tale, 117. Condemned together with Apoli-Jeroboam his wicked policy, 292. His end, naris, for avowing Moles to have married ibid. both Tharbis and Sippora, Tofephus Scaliger his (bort answer, 449.

280 His Retractation. Josias his zeal to God, 495. His fidelity

Josua his remove from Sittim unto the 333 banks of Jordan, 255. His passage thorow who it, ibid. His skill in War, 256. His 34 keeping faith with the Gibeonites, ibid. Jotapata, a firong City, fortified by Tole-

> Jotham bis Encomion, by Josephus. Irreligious cavilling, 210. and irreligious

205 upon Sarah than upon Abraham, 174. His Iscah and Sarah, two names of one signi-46 fication, Isles of Eliza, mentioned by Ezekiel, Ismaelites and Amalekites, possest of the 194 afterwards by Saul, Israel punisht in Saul's time for slaughter 20 given by Josua, Ifraelites overthrown by the Philistims, Jupiter Belus, the Son of Nimrod. Jupiter, renowned among the Greeks and Joas, King of Juda (in probability) not Romans, born not long before the War of Instice vendible.

Enites and Madianites of two forts; Kethura, wife to Abraham, the materibid. nal Ancestor of the Kenites. Kingdom gained by an Affes loß, Kingdom of Argos translated to Mycæna, Kings made by God and Laws Divine; by 368 humane Laws only so declared,

Lactantius

Actantius his judgement of the first Mer-161 Law among ft the Romans, Law humane desined. 226 Law national defined. 22 Law abused grievously punished, Law of Moles diverly taken. 218 Law-makers, no less beneficial to their Countries , than the greatest Conquerours , Laws, not imposed as a burthen, but a bles-Lehabim, the Son of Mizraim, called Hercules Lybius, Letters among the Chinois long before either Agyptians or Phonicians, Licentious disorder, proved (upon better tryal) no les perillous than an unindurable bondage. Lords of Thoron, whence denominated, Lucian his Supposal concerning Helen, 355. His crrand to Hell to feak with Homer, Progenitor of the Lybians in Africa,

Lycurgus his Law.

ter cured Eneas of the Pallie,

Ludim, the eldeft son of Mizraim, first

Accabees Sepulchre, Machanajim, where the Angels met Jacob for his defence. Macharus, a strong City and Castle, where John Baptista was beheaded, Madianites Sain by Gidion. dalen. Magick according to Plato , 157. properly termed Necromancy, 160. belper in knowing the Divinity of Christ, ibid. His reason for not entring immediately Mahometane Arabians descended of the 1s- 241. His death, maelites, may be called the shadow of God. Manner of fight at the Trojan War.

Many thousand Jews overwhelmed in rebuilding the Temple under Julian Apostata,

Many of the Species, which now feem differing, were not at the time of the general Deluge in rerum natura. Mare a, the Native City of Michaes, 299

Margiana, where Alexander feefied himtelf and his Army. Marus bis Labyrinth.

Means which the Greeks were forced to use for maintenance of the flege before Troy, 256

Medusa moralized, Menahambis inhumane cruelty. Menon (first bushand of Semiramis ) his death. Mercator his conceit, That Nimrod and Ninus were one and the fame person, answer-

Merchants of Eden traded with the City of Mercurius Trimegistus bis writings, in 188 Some places (probably) corrupted, 250. His two last speeches, 251. His many books, Merodach investeth himself in the Kingdom of Babylon. Messene in Sicily, by what occasion so na-

Minæus and Menis, names or titles of

Miriam ber Sepulchre. 226 Mock-Divinity. 160

Moloch described with his sacrifice, 456 Money , not used in Greece in Homer's Monuments of Jupiter's Tomb in the

Lyda, ('afterward Diospolis) where S. Pe-Mount Talius, remaining in Epiphanius his Mofal, or Mozal, anciently called Seleucia Parthorum, Muscovians, from whence descended Their wooing, Moles Bar-cephas bis opinion concerning the Tree of Knowledge, Moses did not number the generations be-Magdalum, the habitation of Mary Mag- fore the Flood precisely , 59. His preserva-276 tion, 196. His birth-time, 207. His compaß Im- by the Rivers of Zared and Arnon, 239. An His message to Schon King of the Amorites.

ibid. into Judea, after bis Victory against Schon, Mountains and Rivers, formerly named Man, wherein he chiefly resembled God, or of the Ancient after their own names, or their Ancestors names : and the cause why, Mountains of Paria, their length. Mourning for Thammuz, Monfe-magick, 164

Multiplicity of gods, 154 Myris a great Lake in Egypt, 475

Naboth

Nabuchodonofor overthroweth Necho, 508. His peremptory message to Jehojakim, ibid. His Conquest of Egypt, 509. He besiegeth Tyre, ibid. He puts Johojakim, life, 61. And concerning Jupiter, the son to death, 510. He besiegeth Jerusalem, of Saturne and Ops, 69. And concerning ibid. And forceth it, 511. He destroyeth Moles his birth-time, 193. And concerning the Temple, Nahas, a cruel King of the Ammonites, Nebo, the Idul-Oracle of the Moabites, Nectar and Ambrosia, alluding in the Poets to the Tree of Life, Neftorians , part of their general Epiftle to the Fone.

Nimrod , feated in the confluence of those Rivers which watered Paradife, 43. The first founder of Ninive, 44. 103. His build-

Ninias , Son to Semiramis , an effeminate Frince, Ninive formerly called Campfor.

Ninus his time of Government, after the Flood, 123. The first notorious facrificer to Idols.

Noah bis sundry appellations, 84. Analogically conferred with Janus, 109. ACity of that name upon the banks of the Red Sea, He never came so far Westward as Baby- per name of a place, 28. By knowing the lon, 93. Is no more remembred in Scrip- place whereof, we may better judge of the beture after his facrifice, and the cause, ibid. ginning, 40. A City of that name in Coelo-His children came not altogether to Shinaar, fyria, Nobility in Parchment, Noema, or Naamath, the Sifter of Tubalcain, expounded by Saint Augustine, 68 ment. Numa his Law, his Grave, his Books, Ak of Mambre. Obedience to Princes commanded without distinction.

Occasion of obscurity in the Egyptian stories, 185. And of the Supplicatory Letters of the Nestorians to the Pope , in the year ,

Oceanus and Hesperus, Contemporaries with Moses,

Of the Maß , indigested matter , or Chaos, created in the beginning,

Offences punished without form of judge-

Ogyges Contemporary with Jacob. Olympiads, whence fo called. One of the Pillars erected by Seth , the Aboth , the eldest son of Ismael , third from Adam , was by Josephus testimo-244 ny to be feen in his dayes. Ophir, one of Joctans sons, feated in the Moluccas in the East India. Opinions concerning the length of mans Nimrod. Oracles of Amphiaraus, Origen his sepulchre.

Orotius his report of Pharoahs Chariotwheels. Orpheus his instruction to Musaus concerning God. Orus the fecond, (or Busiris ) Author of the Edict for drowning the Hebrew Children,

Ofiris, the eldeft son of Cham. 187 Oyfters growing on Trees, 54

PAcuvius his wife carriage wish the Commons in Capua. Painters wives Island, Palm-trees, whereof the people do make Bread, Hony, Wine, Vinegar, and fine Flax, Paradife of Eden, truly taken for the pro-Paternal Authority in transferring birth-

Paternity and Eldership, the first Govern-360 Patience wounded, 247

Pelasgus, King of Arcadia, Pelusium, a great City upon the branch of Nilus, next Arabia, People in the Indies, near far greater materfalls than the Catadupæ of Nilus, are not deaf at all.

507 Periander a cruel Tyrant, 204 Petra, the Native City of Ruth, 164 Pharaoh bis Sorcerers Froggs, His Army wherewith be pursued the Israe-

Pharaoh his devilish policy, 195. ground of his cruelty, Pharaoh Vaphres ; Father in-law to Salo-

Pheron, Son to Sefostris, assumeth his ment , cause the offenders to scent innocent, Fathers name, 190. is strucken blind, ibid. 405 Recovered, Philistims

Philistims destroyed with Thunder, 263. | the Red Sea, Sauls death. Philosophers ignorant in nature, and the waves of her working, found true, though fabuloufly exprest, Phineus, and the Harpies, Phenicians navigation about Africk. Phraortes, overthrown in his attempt of Ninive. Phunon, sometime a principal City of the Edomites. Phut, the third Son of Ham, first planted. in Lybia, Piety punished, Pineda bis Miracle. Pison, falfly taken for Ganges; and Ge- thia, hon, fally for Nilus, Pison and Tigris joyning under Apamia, retain one name of Piso-Tigris, to this day, Plato his differing from Moses in that place where God made answer by his Angel:

Existens misit me ad vos, 73. His judgement concerning God. Pluto his Rape of Profernina, 328

Power (evered from Piety, pernicious, 364 Pride, foolish and wretched, Princes ruling in divers parts of the world at the time of the Law given in Mount Sinai, Probability that Nahor and Haran did not perfest in Idolatry, 175. And that Job lived in the time of Moles, 197. And that the Greeks lay not before Troy, the first nine with a discourse thereon.

Proteus, what he was probably, Pfammiticus, abandoned by his own followers and Country-men , 485. His long 289. Subverted by the Sons of Hircanus, course to divert the Scythians from Egypt, the Baptist were buried,

Ptolemaus Lathurus defeateth Alexander King of the Tems. Pygmalion, King of Tyre, in whose time Dido Sailed into Africk, and built Carthage

Pythagoras bis Eagle, 164. His golden precept,

Rameles, a City in Golen, from whence the Israelites made their first march towards

Their policy in not profecuting the Victory after | Ramelles or Egyptus , under whom Mules was born. Reasons why the Jews omitted Circumcifion during their abode in the wilderness. Philostratus in vita Apollonii Tianzi, And proving the Tyrians to have been Originally Idolaters, 255. And Reasons moving the Ammonites to make War upon labes Gi-

> Recem, now called Crac and Mozera, a 500 strong City, where the Soldanes of Egypt kept their treasures. Red colour superstitionsly observed by the Reges Arabum & Saba, in Pfal. 72. expounded according to the Hebrem. Regions lying between Armenia and Scy-Reineccius his conceit of the names of Troes. Teucri and Thraces.

Romulus bis description, Ruth and Janus Contemporaries,

CAba, the Son of Joctan, Seated in India Saffa, the birth-City of Zebedeus, Alpheus, James and John. Sages of Greece, in whole time they flou-Saint George bis Sepulchre. Saladine disponeurably repulsed , 268 He acquiresh the Soveraignty of Egypt, Salomon anointed King, 385. His education, 391. His Reasons for Adonians Prodigie, preceding the Flood of Ogyges : death, ibid. Wherein the chief excellency of his wisdom confisted, 392. His Letter to Prometheus his Vulture moralized, 82. Hieram, ibid. The answer to it, 393. His 248 Garrisons, 395. His Ring dispossessed evil 477 Spirits, 397. His frailty, Samaria founded by Amri, or Homri, siege of Azotus, ibidem. His provident ibid. Where Helisaus, Abdias, and John Samaritans a perfidious Nation. Sanar , the first bringer of the Turks into > Saul, elected (probably) by lot, His disobedience, 369. His cruelty, 370. His end , and dishonour after his death, 371 School-men, all groß, in holding the Countries under the Aquinottial uninhabitable, Scorners rewarded, Scriptures more ancient than all other An-Scultet his calculation.

Scythia Saga, or Sacz, under the Mountains of Paropanilus, 94. Scythia intra arise: with the vanity of the Ripha, and Imaum, bounded by Marius Niger, ibid. Hyperborei Mountains, Sehon discomfited, Selucia, anciently called Chalanne, Semiramis her policy in obtaining of the Empire, 167. Her Army against Staurobates, 169. Her overibrom, Tews; according to Herodotus, Seneca, his judgement of Nature, Fate, or Sephora and Thura , famous Midwives , Sephoris, the City of Joachim and Anna, the Parents of the Virgin Mary, Sesostris, endangered by his brothers treafon, 190. His Coach. Seth worshipped by the Egyptians, Setheitica, a principal Province in Egypt, Sheba and Ramma border the Persian Gulf, Son of Javan. and Jeroboam. Simon Magus his end, Sinai and Horeb but one Mountain. Single Combates. Sixtus Quintus his answer to a Fryer, Slave, why fo called. Socrates Suffered death for acknowledging one only powerful God. Spaniards pride in America, 134. Plantation in the East at Manilia, Spartans obstinacy. spring perpetual in the South of America , Stars and other culestial bodies, incline the will by mediation of the sensitive appe-matters are reported, Statutes creded by the woman, whom Christ

Strange execution of the Citizens of Gadata committed on themselves. name, flain by his own wife, Sachar made by the Sun. Sufa, in the Province of Elam, Sometimes the Seat-Ruyal of the Kings of Perlia, Syria described,

→Alus, destroyed by Medea, Tamberlain his Trophee of Victory Tanais and Volga, whence they truly

Tantalus moralized, Tarichia, a City, forced by Vespasian, 277 Taurus, whereon the Ark refled. Taurus his ftealth of Europa. Telastar , inhabited by the Edenites , 39. Sennacherib bis expedition against the called Thiluthe by Am. Marcellinus, some-482 times a Garrison-Town against the Assyrians. Teman , the City whence Eliphaz came to rcasion with Job, where situate, Temper of the lower part of Eden, Teneriffe in the Canaries , the highest Mountain known in the world. 328 Tereus his rape of Philomel, Testimonies of the Ancients concerning 69 Moles, Tharfus in Cilicia , the native City of ibid. Saint Paul, founded by Tharfis the Second That which seemeth most casual and subject Shishak his policy in entertaining Adab to fortune, is get disposed by the ordinance of 292 God, That the Flood made no such alteration as is generally received. The means that David grew rich by, Theseus his worthy exploits, Thirl of Conetouines. Thoughts, unsearchable to the Devil. Three general opinions of Paradife, Three things especially are the natural causes Their of a long and an healthful life. Three causes why Moles forbare to conduct 488 the Ifraelites thorow Arabia, Thura and Sephora , famous Midwives , Thulis an Egyptian King, of whom strange Thuoris, Supposed to be Proteus, Thuras the first Mars, Tiber, whence he took the name, cured of the bloody Iffue, Tiberius reftrameth humune fuerifices, Sterculius , mentioned by S. Augustine , Tygris, Sparated from Danubius by the 309 Sea of Helletpont and all Afia the left. # Strato, King of Lidon expelled by Alexan- overfloweth Ninive, der Macedon, 284. Another of the same Time, wherein men might attain to be such 285 as they ought, oft-times mif-frent in feeking 270 to be fach as they are not, Tires, Father of the Thracians, Tohu opprest by Hadadezer, and succour-260 ed by David. Token of liberty with the wicked, to defife the fervice of God, Torniellus his pains to prove the Book of 338 Judith Canonical, 117 Tostatus bis opinion of Ophir, 141 Traditional oblations. Treachery rightly remarded, 2811 Trealon in falbion. Treasure anciently used to be burged with death, she dead. 288 Trees of Life and Knowledge. 52 Tree of Life, how understood by the Hebrews Tree of knowledge, to called of the event Tribute denyed, caufeth Sennacherib to make war en Ezechias. Troy, when destroyed . Two forts of Kenites and Madianites, 209 Two Edens. Tydeus bis quarrel with Polynices ; and the affue thereof. Tyranny of Saul towards Jonathan, 369 and toward Abimelech. Trust in worldly prosperity; how vain Tyrants are the last that hear of any mischief against them. Tyrannous dominion of the Scythians in Tyre befreged by the Chaldeans Tyrrhenus, the first bringer of Vines into France, TAgabond, how to be understood, Valour of the Cimmerians Vanity of Homer , in description of the Ships from Nilus into the Red Sea, fight between Hector and Achilles. Vanity of Superstition, Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus bis Gigantomachia Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, Vanity of the Greeks, used in the Olym Vaphres Father-in-Law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen. Vasco de Gama, the first finder of the Cape What kind of Kings those five were mens of good hope. Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418 Vertue truly beroical. Vertue of Jofias in his child-hood, Venetians, probably descended from the Venetus his report of Japan, Vidory of Jephta, envyed by the Ephraimites; and the iffue thereof

Victory begettetb fecurity.

Treasen

Victory of Nabucho donozor against Necho,

Violence towards Parents punished with Virgils epinion touching the Original of the Trojans, Uncertainty of Authors . about the time ibid. when Homer lived. Unwarlike people hardened by custome of Voluptuoufness of Sardanapalus, Uriah bis death confidered with the flanghter done by Salomon upon his elder brother Urim and Thummim of the Jewish Priefts. Uje to be made of praying toward the East. 28. Use of Letter's found out before the Flood Uses of the Moral, Ceremonial, and Judicial Uzziah punished by God, for medling with the Priefts Office,

Weariness of Atosta, 423
Weariness of the Romansin establishing Rome for the Seat of the Empire , War concluded upon uneven terms , eftfoons breaketh out with greater violence, Way attempted to be made for passage of West part of America, bow it came to be called Peru, What S. Paul may probably be thought chiefly to intend, in the account of time from Israels comming out of Egypt to the division of the promised Land. What kind of Prophets they were . whom Saul encountred and Prophesyed What year of the world David died in What Cinzi they were against whom Balaam ropbesied, Josh. 19. 33.

tioned, Gen. 14. What part of the Red Sea Moles past thorow, What might be the cause of Jehosaphats taking his Son to be partner in his Kingdome .

Whence the conceit of Orpheus and Hefiodus fprang, that Giants were the Sons of Heaven and Earth. Whence the fable arose, of dividing the world between the three Sons of Saturn. VV hence the word (Slave) had its original.

Iiiiiii

425

163

216

129

Wildom better than all worldly riches. Where it was that Christ remained, whilest Joseph and Mary feared Herod, Which Magog Ezekiel had reference to , Wisdom of man, blind in looking into the 108 Counsel of God. Wife at home, and foolift abroad, Which Havilah it is that Poison compasseth, Witches transportations, 128 Woman given to man for a Comforter , not Which Be'us was the more ancient, Who they were that first instituted the Ne- for a Counsellor. Women, with Idolatry pervert Salomon. 343 mæan Games. Who were supposed to be the first Inventors Wonder of a Nation. of Navigation. Wondring at any thing in this world, is Wholesome severity rather defired, than re-491 folly, considering the folly of the world, 423 mißliberty. their Words of Image and Similitude, taken in 169 one and the felf same sense by Saint Paul and Why the Babylonians gave a Dove in their Wickedneß quickly planted, but not eafily Saint James. Worldly men and their condition. rooted up again, Worlds first written received Law, Wicked instigators. Worship done to Christ by the Magi, William of Tyre his report, concerning the Wretched Pride. Egyptian Caliph, Wine and strong drink, probibited to Writers on the place of Paradice, diverfly 260 conceived. teaming women.

Alphabetical TABLE

OF THE PRINCIPAL CONTENTS

Third, Fourth, and Fifth Books of the First Part OF THE HISTORY of the WORLD.

Brocomas bis cowardize, Achæmenes his affociation Arbaces, 534. His progeny, Acrocorinthus, a strong Citadel of Co- disloyalty, 632. His death, Adherbal his notable Victory at against the Romans. Advantage of absolute Lords, above such mother, as are ferved by Voluntaries, rours, 812. Itrestifies the understanding, 456 Spartan Embassadours, 588. Is forced to Advisedness and rashness through greedines of foil, 869. His encouragement to his Souldiers, exiled, 594. His friendship and good coun-871. His care to prevent the mischief, immi- sel is rejected, 595. His death nent through the head-strong conduct of his Alexander the Son of Amyntas King of vain glorious Colleague, 873. Is flain in Macedon, his magnanimity and prudence, battel. Ætolians ingratitude , 833. Their pride necks are galled with their yoke.

His wretched end, Agesilaus his sacrifice thrown down from 600 the Altar, 616. He deludeth Tiffaphernes. with ibid. He driveth Pharnabazus out of his 535 Camp, 617. He wasteth Bocotia, 620. His 830 Agis his great care for the good of Sparta, Sca unworthily recompensed with the lamentable 804 death of himself, his Mother, and Grand-79 Alcetas his unhappy end. Adversity is alwaics fure to hear of her er- Alcibiades his cunning dealing with the 766 banish himself, 589. And secketh revenge Egira taken by surprize, and lost again upon his own Citizens, 590. He is revoked 989 from banifoment , 591. His great favour Emylius Paulus his great circumspection, with Tissaphernes, ibid. Again unjustly

Alexander M. Chosen Captain General of abated, 589. Who being the first drawers of the the Greeks, 643. He winneth Thebes, 644. Romans into Greece, are the first whose His clemency to the race of Pindarus, 645. 502 His cruelty to his Mother in-laws Kinfmen, Agathocles his degrees, whereby he obtain- ibid. His gracious dealing with the Cities of ed the Kingdome of Syracuse, 787. He over- his first conquest in Asia, 647. His policy in throweth the Carthaginians, 785. Is him-sending the Persian Tangets to the Cities of self shortly after besseged by them, with the Greece, 648. His easie passage throw the strange course be takes to raise the seee, ibid. Straights of Cilicia, 649. His man good His persidy toward Ophellas, 787. His er. fortunes at once, 653. His answer to Darius rour in not making timely peace with the bu Letter after the Battel of Iss, ibid. He Carthaginians, ibid. His amazed flight in- releaseth Apollo, 654. His Vision in Dio, ibid. to Sicil, ibid. His bloody nature, 788. His affectation of Deity, 655. His passage over Tigris, 658. His answer to Darius tion against Ptolomy , 713. He enforceth Waxeth contemptible amongst his followers, intent to marry with Cleopatra, Sifter 664. His happy temerity, 668. His stra. to Alexander, 726. His Fleet in great tagen to win the piligac of a Rock, ibid. extremity, 731. His departure out of His gross affectation of flattery, 671. His Egypt, ibid. His vain oftentation, 733. His passage over the River Oxus , ibid. His unwonted sadness, 735. His end , and concruelty to a Colony of Greeks, 675. His ditions, ibid.

munificence to Omphis, ibid. He loseth Antigonus the younger, the son of Demost part of his Army, 678. His marri- metrius, is made King of Macedon, 751. age with Statira, ibid. His lamentation His fond oftentation to the Gauls Embassa-for Epheltions death, 679. His last douts, ibid. Is forced to abandon his Camp, draught. Alterations of time.

Alliance between Hannibal and the Cam- a new army against Pyrthus, ibid. And re-abtaineth his Kingdom, ibid. : His policy in Altinius his Treason worthily punished, getting Acrocorinthus.

konour of the War in Africk, out of Scipio's

a vile quality in a great Councellor.

invadeth and masteth Italy , 806. He re- sueth to Ptolomy for peace after his overfigneth his charge to Gesco, 809. His pas- throw to Raphi, 1031. He taketh Sardes, Jage over the River Bagradas, 821. His ibid. His expedition against the Parthians, first Victory over the Mercenaries, 822. His 1040. Hispassage to the Indians, ibid. He humanity to his prifeners, affrights the Cap- re-edifieth Lysimachia, 1044. His Embaf-tains of the Mutiners, ibid. His notable en- fage to the Romans, 1046. His vain brags, trapping of the Rebels; and the terrible exe- 1058. His Ambassage to the Achaans, 1059. cution done upon them, 825. He bestegeth He is driven out of Greece, 1062, And is Tunes, ibid. Is made General in the Spanish utterly defeated by the Romans, Expedition , 828. His fingular vertue ac- Antipater fends to Craterus for succour, knowledged by his most deadly enemies, ibid. 684. Is besieged in Lamia, ibid. He com-His death.

Egypt,

Andronodorus his subtilty in resigning His qualities. his Protectorship, 923. His close dealing to Apelles, his device to Supplant Aratus, attain the Soveraignty, 925. His death, 993. Happily discovered, ibid. His conspi-

803 and treachery towards the King, 996. He Angra, a strong Fort, Antigonus the Great, his politick escape is dasht cut of countenance, and forsaken from Perdiccas, 689. Is made General of of his company, by a simple check from the the Macedonian Army, 694. His bar- King, ibid. And is imprisoned where he barous usage to the dead corps of Alcetas, dyes, 695. His reasons for not entring Macedon, Apollo's Oracle concerning Cyrus, 701. His politick surprize of Eumenes his earriages, 709. His subtle plot in betraying Eumenes , 710. His just pay- vour of the Mamertines, 764. He giveth an ment of the Traitors, 711. His prepara- overthrow unto the Carthaginians, his Embassadours, 660. The number of his Tyre, by famine, to render it felf, 714. His Army , 661. Haib Arbela, with a great journey into Phrygia , 716. He forceth Mass of treasure, yielded unto him, 662. Cassander to retire into Macedon, 717. His ibid. ibid. Is forfaken of bis own Souldiers, 1001 and expelled his Kingdome, 753. He raiseth 913 Antigonus, surnamed Tutor, made Pro-Amasis his entry to the Kingdome of testor to Philip the Son of Demetrius, ibid. 530 His expedition into Achaia, 838. Is made Ambition making haste to her own ruine, Captain General over the Achaens, and 860 their Confederates, ibid. He vanguish-Ambition of divers Confuls, to wrest the eth Cleomenes at Selasia, 241. His death, 1073 Antiochus the Great , marcheth against Ambition, malignant of others vertue, is Molo, his Rebel, 1034. Wins the Victory by his name and presence, ibid. He winneth Amilear, Father of the great Hannibal, Seleucia from the Egyptian, 1035. He ibid. eth to the aid of the Macedonian Camp, Amyntas ( almost ) expelled out of Mace- 686. His subtle dealing with the Greeks 622 in the treaty of peace, 687. He changeth Amvrious obtaineth the Kingdome of the government of Athens, ibid. He re-595 turneth with the King into Macedon, 694. ibid. racy against the King, 994. His arrogancy, > Apollonides his treachery, App. Claudius arrives at Messana in fa-7.66

Apries,

Apries, the King of Egypt put to death by | Affembly of the Grecian Fitates, upon the straights of Epirus.

rinth, ibid. Being led with private puf- 579. And Inbane Mitylene; 582. Their sion, he makes a bad bargain for his Coun- rough answer to the Spartan Embassadours. Leavue with Cleomenes, 837. His obsti- stratagem against Syracuse, 774. They 987. He procureth Philip to invade Eto- whole Army. lia, 995. By his good councels he diverteth Philip from his practice upon Messene, Carthaginians, 1002. And is afterwards poysoned by

Philip, Arcadians Embassie to Athens, and Sparta,

Archimedes bis strange Engines in de-fence of Syracuse, 929. His death and se-Bagoas his malicious cruelty, pulture.

Argos, the name of an Altar in Greece,

Aridæus bis meakneß, Aristagoras surprizeth the Persian Fleet ibid. Is affisted by the Athenians, 554. He Surprizeth Sardes, and burneth it, ibid. Is overthrown by the Edonians, 555 Aristides bis integrity, Aristodemus bis fruitlesflattery, Art of quarrel, 1011 Art of Tyrants flyeth into Thrace, 569. Is together with bis whole family put to death by exquisite cellus, Artabazus bighly favoured by Alexander, for his fidelity to Darius, 666. And is made Governour of Bactria, Artaxerxes his vain oftentation, 602. His message to the Greeks, ibid. His base

Artimifia , ber found advice to Xerxes,

Aldrubal, the son of Amilcar, his strange flight towards Italy, 900. His terrible entry into Italy, 943. His main overfight, ibid. His death and commendations dome of Asia: and his unfortunate reign, Afdrubal the Son of Gesco, is chosen Romans.

525 treaty of peace with Philip, Apfus, or Aous, a great River in the Athenians constancy, 567. They send a 796 Fleet into Egypt against the Persian . 376. Aratus expelleth the Tyrant of Sicyon, They enforce Egina to render upon most 831. And Surprizeth the Citadel of Co- base conditions , 578. They invade Samos, try, 825. His violent apposition against the 587. Their perverse obstinacy, 590. Their nacy against all the gentle offers of Cleome- besiege it, ibid. Their obstinacy in the nes, ibid. His many discraces by Antigo War of Sicil, 775. Are besten at Sea by nus, 839. His revenge taken on Mantinæa, the Syracusuns, ibid. Their less Sea-fight ibid. Is overtbrown by the Etolians, in Sicil, 776. The miscrable end of their Attilius M. his Victory by Sea, against the

Aulis in Bocotia, a goodly Haven,

Balthafar, not the Son, but the Grand-Argives at diffention among themselves, child of Nabuchodonosor, 520. Miferably 589 Slain by bis own people. Bantius bis caste nature, 884 Barbarous resolution, 607 1030 Battel of Metaurus, 945 Battel of Nadagara, 979 Battel of Magnefia, 1019 Benefit and Grace. 538 Benefits arising from wrongs done, make 59 not injustice the more excusable. Beotians re-enter their own Land, and 962 recover their liberty, Bravery , of all qualities , is the least requi-Artabatus his bootles councel, 558. He site unto soveraign command, 880 Britomarus, flain in fingle fight by Mar-848 Britonspolicy against the French. 76 £

Brutus his over great severity, 745 Burrough his waftage of the English thoow the Straights of the Ellenour,

Alamities of War, in some cases rather enable than weaken Kingdoms, 816

Calpas, a goodly Haven, 61 T Callinicus his bloody entry to the King-Cambyses his chief reason, in hindering General of the Carthaginians, 963. Is the building of the City and Temple of Jefired out of his Camp by Scipio, 965. And rusalem, 543. He marrieth his own Sisters, figeth to Carthage, 966. He raifeth new 544. His cruelty to the dead, 547. His Forces, 967. And is put to flight by the attempt against the Temple of Jupiter ibid. Ammon, ibid. His dream, and the illue thereof . His death.

Camillus F.bis integrity , 746. Unjust-ly banished, ibid. His notable service against Campanians Submit to the Romans, Captains unhappy, but happy Clerks.

causes of her destruction, Carthaginians policy to separate the Syracusians from the Selinuntines, 777. Their facrifice to Sarurne , with the event thereof, 787. Their woful overlight, 810. Their consternation, 967. They affail the Romans in the Haven of Utica , 968. Their great joy upon a small occasion, ibid. Their diftonourable Embassage to Scipio, 871. Their impatience loseth them many helps , 974. Their bootles forrow, ibid. Their envy to the Barchines repayed with advantage.

Carthalo bis fortunate success against the tigonus , 696. His entry into Piræus,699. greatest part of their forces . He reduceth Athens to obedience, 700. He builds Cassandria, and re-edifies Thebes 705. His politick dealing with Alexander the son of Polysperchon, 715. He vanquilbeth Glaucias King of the Illyrians, ibid. He putteth Roxane and her son to death 724. His cruelty repayed on his own house, 739

C. Cassius bis wife answer. 590 Cato his general conclusion in Senate, 468. His condition.

Ceraunus repaireth to Seleucus, 742. His treachery against bim, 743. His good Success in Macedon and Thrace , 749. Per- the Romans, fidious love to his Sifter, ibid. His foolish pride and miscrable end, Cetaphim, or Hagiographa of the Jews, Charidemus his good conneel to Darius ill rewarded. Charles the Fifth, his advice to his Son

Philip, Choice ill made,

Cimon, General of the Athenians, 574. Hereduceth Phatelis to their Subjection , 575. He obtaineth two Victories in one day, ibid. He overthroweth the Phanicians Fleet, ibid. Daughter of Antipater, 688. He reduceth the Volscians. Cleadas his bootless per frontion,

Cleander and his Complices, worthily remarded.

Persian, ibid. His overmuch credulity and death.

Cleomenes his Victory against Ar tus. 747 825. He restoreth the ancient discipline of Lycurgus, ibid. His great firit and good carriage in managing his affairs, ibid. His Care taken to avoid good admonition, 812 great Victory at Dymes, 836. His winning Carthage described , 762. The special of Argos, 838. Is enforced to abandon Acroibid. corinthus, 839. His bold affront given to Antigonus, ibid. Is put to flight by Antigonus, and lovingly entertained by Ptolomy Euergetes, 840. His unfortunate end. Clypea a Port-Town on Africk Ide. 791 Cocles bis admirable resolution, 749 Combates of divers kinds Commodity of a retrait, is a great advancement to flat running away, Conditions of Truce between the Athem ans and Lacedemonians. Concolitanus and Aperoeitus, with a mighty Army of Gauls invaded the Romans, Caffander his fecret conference with An- | 845. But are overthrown , together with the

Congruity of natures in a rare couple, 1012 Conon his famous retrait , 613

Conquest of revenge, what it is truly, 954 Consultation rightly Cretical, 1029 Contempt used against Princes, donable than ill deeds, leß par-Contradictions in the Romish History about the Wars of the two Scipio's in Spain, 890

Convenience and inconvenience of an Army consisting of divers Nations and Languages, Coriolanus his dangerous War against

Councel prevaileth nothing, where opportunities are neglected. Courage not answerable to good will , 931

Court Wars. Cowardize and courage strangely intermixed. Craft of the Romans in obscure covenants, Craterus bis malice. He is fent back into Macedon and made Lieutenant thereof, 679. He jogneth with Autipater , 686. His marriage with the And is fint with aftrong Navy , to make in the Atolians unto hard terms , ibid. His the Ife of Cypius, 576. His death, 578 over-much hafte to encounter Eumenes , Cincinnatus his noble expedition against 692. Is deceived in his expectation, ibid.

746 His death. Cratippus Answer to Pompey, Croefus his cause of enmity with the 678 Medes, 534. His Pedigree, 537. His ma-Clearchus driveth the Persians out of their ny Conquests, ibid. His security and delu-Camp, 603. His confident meffage to the fon , ibid. Contemns Sandanes his good Cruelty in Lords . begetteth hatred in Sub- passage over Lycus. je#s. anders arrival on the banks of Tanais, 672 thus, out of Micedon and Epirus, Custom of conquered Nations. Cyna, Mother to Euridice, overthroweth the Affgrians, 534. His name observer of Philips humours, 1000. Is slain made reverend by his goodness, 536. His in attempting of Messene, pelicy in pursuing Creesis, 538. His great Demosthenes bis tenerity corrected, 775.

His good councel rejected, 776. Is abaseless of Babylon, ibid. His forcible entry doned by Nicias, 777. And basely murinto it, 541. His Sepulchre and Epitaph, 542 thered, Cyrus Brother to Artaxerxes, his policy Desire of Rule belongeth to the nobler part in levying Souldiers, 599 His unfortunate of Reason, valour, DAmaratus, the paternal Ancestour of Syracuse, 782. It again expelled, ibid.

the Tarquinii, 426 His death, with the revence thereof it.d. Danger in constituting two Generals of Dionysius the elder, aspireth to the King-contrary factions, hope of future Vittory ,

jealoufie of Histizens, ther and Grandfather had loft in Asia , ibid. 782. Is expelled Syracuse, ibid. Herecovereth His death, Darius his vain insolency, 645. His Ar- Timolion, my, and their condition, ibid. Is discomfited at Iffus , 652. He offereth conditions of persons. peace to Alexander, 660. His retrait into Media , 661. His bard destiny still to follow the worst councel, 665. His wofull dejection, ibid. His last speech to Polystratus, 666 Deceit over-reacht by fraud.

Decius Magins his conftancy toward the flege of Segesta. 88.

Delay, the sharpest Enemy to an invading Demetrius the Son of Antigonus the elder, bis love to Eumenes, 711. His vain

Journey into Cilicia, 717. He taketh Cilles,

Emperour of Congo his Guard. with his Camp and Army, 720. His wanton- Emporiæ, a Town of great importance in nesi well punisht, 727. Hetranslateth Sicyon, Spain, Spain, 889 and calleth it Demetrias, 732. His basselfs Enterchange of Visiory between Hannifuccess, 735. Heobtaineth Cilicia, 737. His basself and Marcellus, 937 gentle dealing with the ungratefull Ather. Entry of the Spartans. 715 nians, 738. His weakness most apparent in Epaminondas driveth his enemies from his most Greatness. 740. His unprincely sen- their fortifications, 626. He invadesh Pelocouncel, ibid. Flyeth to Sardes, 538. Is there tence, ibidem. He repelleth Pyrrhus. 741. ibid. Is hardly pursued by Agathocles, ibid. His

Demetrius the Son of Antigonus Gona-Curtius and Trogus mistaken in Alex- tas, expelleth Alexander the Son of Pyr-820 891 Decayed in vertue, after he became Kino

Cyncas, a principal Counsellor to Pyr- Demetrius Pharius, expelled his Kinethus, 747. Is fent Embaffadour to the Ro- dom by the Romans, and entertained by Kine 748 Philip, 900. He procureth Philip to make Cyrus his first military service, 530. He a league with Hunnibal, 998. A cunning

Desperation derided by obdurateness, 1009

Dieneces bis resolute ansmer. 56 E Dion, banisht for his good meaning, 781 He returneth with an Army , and entreth 822 dom of Syracuse, 778. "His revenge taken Danger at hand negletted, through vain on his revolted followers, ibid. Is excluded. 965 and recovereth Syracuse, 779. His power-Darius, the Son of Hystaspes, his mef- ful Navy, ibid. His perfidious dealing with Sage to the Scythians , 550. Strangely and Himilco, patterned, 780. He facketh Tau-Swered , ibid. His difficult escape, 551. His romentum, ibid. His siege of Rhegium ib. 555 His death, and his condition.

Darius Nothus seizeth the Kingdome of Dionyssus the younger, his barbarous cruPersia, 595. He recovereth all that his F4 elty, 781. His bard dealing against Dion, 596 it again, ibid. He furrendreth the fame to Disease common to Princes and private Diffention between Commanders. Doctrine of policy. Dreams fometimes too true. ibid. Duilius his policy in fighting with the 941 Carthaginian Gallies, 791. He raifeth the Duty out of Season.

Epicides bis erafty dealing with the Leontines, 926. His coftly feafting of the Syracufians. Errour of mans judgement, in valuing things according to common opinion, 818

Errours that are effecially to be avoided by a General. Euergetes, and the cause of such his denomination, Eumenes is made Governour of Cappadecia, 685. His open dealing, 691. His Gam's report to Henry 5. 4t the policy in preventing Craterus, ibid. He killeth battel of Agincourt, Neoptolemus in lingle fight, ibid. His Gauls, their furious invalion of Rome. mildome in redeeming the love of his people, 746. Overthrown by Antigonus, 693. The condition of his Army, 694. His Gelon, Prince of Syracuse, admirable resolution, ibid. Is fet at liberty Victory against the Carthaginians, ibid. His by Antigonus, 701. His Country and con- Dog, dition, 702. His prositable use of a fained Gesco his provident course in transportdream, 706. His passage into Persia, ibid. ing the Carthaginian Army from Sicil to He fortisteth the Castle of Susa, ibid. His Carthage, 809. Is sent to pacific the Musingular dexterity in ordering his Army, tiners, 810. Is detained prisoner by them, 707. His politick delussen of Antigonus, ibid. His provident circumspettion, 708. God bereaveth a man of half his virtue that His meer vertue the fole cause of his over-throw, ibid. His unfortunate end, 710 710

Eumenes King of Pergamus his policy to animate his Souldiers, 1105. He waxeth contemptible, 1106. His voyage to Rome to complain against Perseus, ibid. &cc.

Euridice her incest and murder, Euridice ber title to the Empire of Macedon after Alexanders death, 680. She calleth Catlander to her Succour, 703. Is abandoned by her own followers.

med by her own followers, ibid. Hannibal his great valour and wisdome, Expectation is alwayer teclions, when the 1850. His hereditary hatred against event is of most importance, Tarentum, and by what means, 937. His bis Souldiers, 873. His order in the marame time.

Faral taken by the English.

Flaminius bis costly jealouse, Flatterers the baleft of flaves

Flattery beyond baseness. Flight is sometimes commendable, 858 Fons Solis of a strange Nature , 650 Fortitude is a diligent preserver of it lelf . 459

Friends taken for enemies. Friendship sought after a strange manner. 863 Fruit of popular jealoufe. Fury of a multitude. 102

Gelon , Prince of Syracule , 771. His day, when he casteth him into bondage, 820

Gracehus bis Victory at Beneventum, Gylippus cometh to the relief of Syracule, 774. He wins the Athenians Fort, 775. He 626 taketh Nicias profoner, Greeks terrible to the Barbarians .

777 the Romans , 853. His paffage over Rhodanus, 854. And over the Alps. 855. He vanquifteth the Taurini , and forceth their Town, 857. His exemplary Rhetorick, 858. His Abius bis advised temporizing , 865. politick dissensation to the Gauls, 839. His Hedivideth the Legions with Minutius , taking of Classical um, ibid. His peril among 867. His grave connect to Emylius, with the Gauls, 861. His dealing with the Re-his answer thereunto, 871. His unasswer-mans after a trick of their own, 863. His able objection to Scripo, 890. His tryat of strategem in passing the kills of Collicula-kis sons judgement, 913. His recovery of and Casiline, 865. His encouragement to envy at the growing virtue of Scipio, 959. Shalling of his Army at the battel of Canna, His opinion touching Hamibal's departure 874. His intelligence in Nola, 884. Hir ent of Italy , 975. He dyelh much about the flege of Casiline , 885. His Army at Capua, 976 not so effeminate as is supposed, 886. His Faith of the Petilians toward the Romans , bootles attempt upon Cuma, 908. The fear 901 of the Romans at his approach to their City, Fayal tuken by the English, 801 919. He dislodgeth from before it, 920. His Fear pretended, where War is pretended, over-much credulity, 936. His Vidory 663 against Cn. Fulvius, ibid. His stratagem 862 againft Fabius, discovered, 938. His poliibid. tick surprize of Marcellus, 940. His notable commendations. commendations, 948. He raiseth an Altar, with an inscription of his Nictories, 960. Hie feech at his departure from Italy, 975-He landeth at Leptis, and winneth many to his party, 976. His speech to Scipio upon their meeting in Africk, 978. His resolved dealing with a vain Oratour, 983. His ibid. Is taken by Timoleon, and put to laughing in a general calamity, 984. His death, escape from Carthage. His conference with the Romans. His free feech to Antiochus 1091 1067. His death, Hanno, Admiral of the Carthaginian Fleet, 806. Is intercepted and overthrown History, by Catulus, 807. He is a bitter enemy to Amilcar, 810. His ill conduct of the Carthaginian Army , 821. His malicious jests at Hannibals Victories, 887. His unjuft accusation of Hannibal, Hardiness is unworthy of the name of valour, which hash no regard of honesty or friendsbib. Hermias his unreasonable counsel unto Antiochus. Hermocrates bis policy to detain the Athenians, 776. His unjust banishment and death

Hieroms Woman-Cow. Hieron the elder chosen King of Syracuse, 764. His league with the Carthaginians for exterminating the Mamertines out of Sicil, ibid. His great overfight in encountring with Claudius, 766. He dislodgeth from Messan, bounty and honour conferred upon martial ibid.

Hieron the younger relieveth Carthage, 824. His wife forecast in relieving the Car- Enemy ought to do , is a special means to prethaginians and Romans, when they were op- went all hostile attempt, preffed, Hieronymus, the last King of Syracuse his qualities, 923. His death. 779. He besiegeth Syracuse, ibid. His 568. Their condition of life, 583. Are treacherous peace with Dionyfius repayed with driven to hard terms, ibid. Their vain over-like perfidie. the success therefore. His Majesties prudence, and kingly power, 946. His justice, ibid. His great bounty and bonour conferred upon martial men, Histieus his prattices against the Persian, $54. His escape from Darius bis Lientenants, and death Historians general affection, Hollanders paffage by the mouth of the Duke of Parma's Cannon, Honour without truft, 662. Honour that is acquired by detratting from others And is flain in fight against the Athenians, worth, feldome thriveth with the posses

TCetes his crafty dealing with the Corinthi-He beliegeth them in the Caffle of Syracufe, Impudence of Roman fulfbood, Inarus, King of Lybia, hanged by the Per-Incoherences in the relation of the Roman 876

ઇઇંડ Inequallity of rigour, Insidelity finds no sure harbour. Injuries newly received, abolift the memo-1020 ry of old good turns, Infolency well rewarded, 795 Insolency of a mutinous Army, Inter-regnum among the the Romans, and 869

the nature thereof. John Lord Talbot, and Emylius Paulus parallel'd. Jojachim the High Prieft instituteth the Feaft of Purim.

Isaurians' desperate resolution,

Ing James his prudence, and kingly

Knowledge, in a Commander, what his Himilco recovereth many Towns in Sicil, T Acedemonians , their patient valour, ke persidie, 780 weening, 584. They lose their old true Hippocrates his counterfeit Epistle, with friends for new false ones, 585. Their Em-927 baffie to Corinth, Laodice her malicious revenge, worthily punished. League between the Romans and Ætolians. League between the Lacedamonians and Ætolians. Lemnia, a Curtizan, ber notable refolu-

Lentulus bis speech to Emylius, at the 803 battel of Canna, with the Comment, Leonatus departeth out of Babylon, 686

56I Leonidas his admirable prowes, Leontius his quarrel with Aratus ; and KAKKKKK

Mucedonians, 683. He overthroweth Anti- 630. His under-hand dealing against the pater. 681. Is flain at the flege of Lamia, Syracufians, during the treaty of peace, 922.

Leptines his great los at sea, Letters from the Carthaginians in Capua, mans, with the iffue thereof. Liberty in counsel.

Liberty chained. Lye: from what ground it is become fo terrible a word, 953. Their conditions that are every ones fame and reputation. ibid. most tender in taking it. Lvers by Record out empairing a jot of Majesty. wife, and children.

Ligurians, their Nature and Condition. Loray-Lam.

Lycophron expelled Theffaly, dom of Sparta, 987. He expelleth bis fel- rieth Sophonisba, 969. His heavie Message Lysimachus murdereth his Son in Law. 739. Is taken prisoner by the Thracians. 740. His City Lylimachia ruined by earthquake, and himself with his whole Family, (hortly after extirpated, MAchiavel his observation upon merce-nary Souldiers, 815. His Lesson to Cæsar Borgia.

Magnificence of the Plateans, Mago cometh to succour Icetes, 783. Abandons him through fear, and hangeth himself, Mago, the Brother of Hannibal, his joy 886. ful message of the Victory at Canna, His departure from Gades towards Italy 958, He winneth Genua, 459. He fighteth a battel with a Roman Proconful, wherein be receiveth bis deaths wound. Mamertines treachery to the Messenians, 763. Are besieged in Messena, 764. Their impudent request to the Romans. Mandevile his Monument, Mandonius rebelleth against the Romans . 957. And being overthrown is gently pardoned.

998 taketh Leontium, 927. He besiegeth Sv. Leofthenes levieth an Army against the racuse, 928. His profitable circumspection 686 His winning of Syracuse, 931. His death.

Mardonius, General of Xerxes Army directed to Hannibal, intercepted by the Ro- against the Greeks, 558. His fearful flat-921 tery, 566. His Embassage to Athens, ibid. Leutychides his successful stratagem, 570 He invadeth Attica , 567. He burneth 652 Athens, 568. Is flain with many thousand > Murshal of England, his power to preserve Martius his miraculous Victories , proved 954 idle dreams. . 986, &c. Martyrs

Masanissa proffereth bis service to Scipio Love purchased by mild Governours with- against the Carthaginians, 961: The cause 817 of his revolt from them to the Romans Lycidas, the wofull end of himself, his ibid. He defeateth Hanno and his company, 963. He pursueth Syphax, 967. Is 639 restored to his Kingdom, 968. He leadeth Lycurgus bayes his election to the King- Syphax bound unto Cirta, where he marlow-King, and establisheth his own tyranny, and Present unto her, ibid. Is highly mag-901 nified by the Romans, and proclaimed King,

Masistes and his wives unfortunate ends,

Matho his mutinous Oration against the Carthaginians, 811. Is chosen by the mutiners for one of their chief Captains, 812. His furious Sally upon the Carthoginians, 825. Is utterly defeated and taken prisoner,

Mazelus hie treacherous comardize, 662 Megasthenes his report of Nabuchodono-

Meleager proclaimeth Aridæus King, 682. His plot against Perdiccas , is discovered, ibid. His death,

Men that lye in wait for others, are fel, dom beedful of what may befall themselves. Menedemus and his Army overthrown by Menelaus his great indiscretion, 728. Is 974 besteged in Salamis, 729. Is forced to yield up the Town and his Army.

Metapontines and Thurines yield to Han-916 614 Midias his deteftable murther, Miltiades good fervice ill rewarded, Minos bis pursuit of Dædalus, Molo rebelleth against Antiochus, 1033. Maulius his Victory against the Sardinians, Is forced to retire towards Media, 1034. 923 Upon advertisement returns, and by fur-Marcellus repelleth Hannibal from the prize overthroweth Xcenetas and whole Army, ibid. Is abandoned by his followers, and layeth hands on himself, 1034 founded. Murder by guile, Mufter of the Macedonians, with the ancient manner theref. Mutines his good service, procures him envy,

His wrongfull disgrace by the Carthaginians, lofeth them Sicil, Abis defeated by Philopoemen, 1052. the Persons, 574. Is condemned as a Traitor, and is stain by treachery of the Eto-and dyeth in banishment, 619 1053 lians. Darius.

Mercenaries in the Wars of the Netherlands, He conquereth Cappadocia, 685. His un-

Neoptolemus bis dissimulation with Eu- | Persepolisburnt at the request of an Harmenes. 691. Is fhamefully beaten, Nicanor timely put into Athens by Caf-

776. Is entangled in his passage to Cameri- 1101. His Journey to Delphi, 1104, &c. A na, 777. Teildeth bimself, and is barba- good Treasure for the Romans, 1116, &c. rously murdered,

Nitocris a Magnificent Princeft,

marks of Time, Observations in the change of Empires

lows, if more innocent than themselves, prisoners, 663. Their slavish subjection,

Office of the Roman Genfors, 911 Olympias, enemy to Antipater, 684. Is revoked into Macedon, 696. Her inhumane Antigonus, 707. His base retrait from the cruelty , 703. Is condemned unto death , Army , 709. Worthily rewarded for his 705. Her great Estate, and perverse conditions, treachery to Eumenes,

Orchards in the Air. Orestes murdered by bis Tutour Eropus, 626

Oftentation checked by unexpected necessity,

PAcuvius Calavius, an ambitious Noble man of Capua, 880. His politich courfe taken to oblige both the Senate and People of Capua wato bim. Panick terrours,

Panormus. now called Palermo . by whone

Papyrimus his encouragement to the Rcmans against the Samnites, 892 Parlimonie without thrift, 538 Pafion in extremity, Patience of the Spaniards, 805 Patience of maiting a convenient feafon, is of great importance for obtaining Victory.

Paulanias advanceth to succour the Athenians, 568. He recovereth Bizantium from Perdiccas his Nature and Quality, 681. Naburzanes his infokent behaviour toward

10 Jarius,

Nature mifchievous,

Nature mifchievous,

Sala Respective to entrap

Meleager, ibid. Is made the Kings Pro-Necessity, and other reasons of imploying tector, and commander of his Forces, 683. 816 fortunate paffage over Nilus, ibid. lot, 536. an opulent City, Perseus is fent by his Father against the fander, 697. He surprizeth Piræus, ibid, Dardanians, 1095. His timorous Nature, the Victory at Sea against Chius, 700 1100. Is blamed by the Romans for redu-His Victory at Sea against Chitus, 700 1100. Is blamed by the Romans for redu-Nicias abandoneth the Athenian Gallies, cing his rebellions subjects to obedience, ibid. Refolveth to fight with the Romains, 1125. Is, 531 there overthrown, and the first that sted thence, 1127. He takes Sandhary, 1128. His fond conceit in preferving his Treasures, ibid. Is conzened by Cretians , 1129. His Bservations of Calestial bodies, the surest base dejection before Æmylius, ibid. Is led 720 Captive to Rome ; where he dies miserably.

Persians overthrown by their own policy. Offenders are alwayes afraid of their fel- 571. Their barbarous cruelty towards their

> Petellia , a strong city in Italy, Peucestes affrighted at the approach of Phalanx of the Macedonians. Phalaris bis just Tyranny , 771. His death.

Pharnabazus affifteth the Thracians against the Greeks, 612. He repelleth Agefilaus, 616. His politick dealing among the Greeks , 620. He marrieth one of Artaxerxes his Danghters, Pharnus and his feven Sons, Phidippides his familiar Devil, Philadelphus the first of the Egyptian Kings that made league with the Romans. Philetærus bis fortunate milbap.

Philip of Macedon is left for an Hoftage KKKKKKK 2

with the Illyrians, 636. His escape away, 637. He vanquisbeth Argæus, ibid. His Roman Historian, politick Donative of Pyndato the Olynthians , 638. He delivereth Pheres from the tyranny of Lycophron , ibid. He overthroweth Onomarchus and bis whole Army, 639. He winneth Olynthus, ibid. His arbitrement for the Kingdom of Thrace, 640. His poli- polis. cy in aiding the Bæotians, ibid. He inva-deth Asia, 641. His last feast, ibid. His divers issues.

Philip, King of Macedon, Son of De- Fleet. metrius, expelleth Attalus out of Opus, 905. His gallant demeanour towards the Acheans His Confederates, ibid. His Embaf- 675. Is restore i to his estate, with a great Sage to the Romans, 906. Is forced to quit enlargement, Ætolia , for the defence of his own Countrey, 907. His successfull expedition against the Eleans and Ætolians, ibid. worthily punished for his falshood. Is forced to rife from before Palea . by the Treason of one of his own Captains, 996. He wasteth Étolia, and carryeth Pres-away a great booty, ibid. &c. He granteth peace to the Ætolians, 998. And enters into League with Hannibal, ibidem. and punisht with contempt, His double hand dealing with the Nobility and Commons of Messen, 1000. command, are of greater use in need, than us, 1098. Whom heputs to death, his end He besiegeth Salamis, 728. His Vertues, 1099 Philiftus, a notable Parafite , 781. Is taken and executed. 782 Philopoemen his first military action, 1002. His great dexterity and sufficiency in War , ibid. He killeth Machanidas the Tyrant of Lacedamon , 1004. He was God a bad Sea-man, 1059. His policy to overthrow Nabis, 1060, &c. His lamentable end, compelled to fly for his life,
By his unjust courses makes his Friends his the willing readines of Friends, 582 Enemies, 1001. His odious diffimulation, 1006. His stratagem in the winning of Alexander, Prinassus, ibid. His unskilfulnes or un- Ptolomy Lagus his subtile dealing, to aptness to retain old Friends, and his for- debar all claim to the Macedonian Empire. wardnes in seeking new Enemies, 1007. 681. Is greatly beloved of the Egyptiwarding in leging new seconds of the field the Romans, as want of reverence to their the Sea with his Fleet, under the conduct of Estate ; He is enforced to abandon divers Seleucus, 740. He subdueth Cyprus , 717. Towns by him conquered, with leave of the He surprizeth Gaza, and taketh Tyre and Romans, his cruelty towards the Maro- Sidon, 718. Heretirethinto Egypt, 721.

His Commendation, Phyllides his Stratagem,

Polibius his impartial dealing,

His worthy reprehension of Fabius the Polysperchon is made Protector of the King and Empire of Macedon. 695 Hisunthank full Nature. 697 His cruelty to bis old friend, 699 His dishonourable departure from Megaloibid. His Treachery unto his Soveraign. 703 And to his young Pupill, 926 Polyxenidas Surprizeth the Rhodian

Porcius Cato his condition. Porus his maniy answer to Alexander. Power of the Medes. Povet , Chancellor to Francis the first

Pranestines bonest resolution, Their admirable patience. 886 Preferment acquired, by courting the mul-Pride beaten with her own weapons, 882

Provisions of War, and absolute power of Psammones bis gentle reprehension of 1089, &c. He obtaineth Sicyon and Corinth, 725. He growes jealous of his fon Demetri- His politick course against Antigonus, 731.

> Ptolomy Euergetes, King of Egypt, who taketh part with Cleomenes Publicola bis sincerity, Punick Faith. Purpose intended by men, but disposed by Pyrrhus his hard beginning, 739. His personal valour , 740. Is made Patron of 1091 the Athenians , 741. Is for faken by the Phocion is made chief Ruler in Athens, Macedonians, 742. Is called into Italy by 688. His just dealing; is deprived, and the Tarentines, 746. His offer of peace to 698 the Romans, with their answer, 747. His 688 Tyranny in Sicil, and departure thence, 623, &c. 750. He re-calls his forces out of Italy, Pilistratus his divers changes of fortune, 752. His excuse for his dissembling with 552 Sparta, 753. His fat al furprize of Argos, Python employed squinft the Rebels int Afia, 685. Is deluded, and flain by Embassadours. Antigonus, Uintius his quipping answer to Philip, 1018. His profitable observation, 1024 His check given to the insolent Atolians, 1026. His triumph, 1054. His grief mix- parents over their children. ed with gladnes, ibid. His peremptory command and power.

R Eafons moving the Romans to undertake Rebellion of divers Provinces against the Rebels confidence in the multitude, how vain a thing it is. Retchlefneß of the Campanes, Regulus his encounter with a monstrous He forceth Tunes , 795. His death , 796

bom danverous.

are flighted by the Romans, industry, 797. Their great loss by sea, 798. by the people in his African voyage, against Their whole loss by sea during the sirst the liking of the senate, 960. He recove-Their whole loss by Sea during the fiff the thing of the Senate, 960. He recoverencie, War, 808. Their answer in red Lori, 961. The politick use the analose senate to one of Privernum, ibidem. Their of Syphax his Embassage, 962. He land-policy to pick a quarrell, 829. Their who in Africk, 963. The meanure of his consideracy with the Sugmatimes, ibid. Their winter-camp, 964. His strangement to great forces at the time of Concolitanus for the Camps of Syphax and Aldrubal, his invassom, 846. Their mercipitate offeli-in the Haven of Utica, 968. His distinction with the mercipitate offeli-in the Haven of Utica, 968. His distinction with on, 869. Their magnanimity in the mid-taken at Masenissa bis marriage with delt of their greatest troubles, 870. Their Sophonisba , 970. His Embassage to age of sucre greaces rounnes, ammediately after the the Carthaginians, 973. His counteous bastel of Canna, 882. The hard short slage of the Carthaginian Embassadours, they were driven to , 883. Their policy in 977. His answer to Hannibal upon their upholding, in their several Provinces, the meeting in Africk, 978, &c. His triumphant greatness and reputations of such (and their return through Italy to Rome, 985. Is samilier) as had first submed shem to their ensured to abandon Rome, through the ma-Empire, ibid. &cc. Their general affettion to lice of the Tribunes, 1085. His death the good of the Common weal , 937. Are abandoned by twelve of their own Colonier, Sciencus figeth to Ptolomy, 712. He 938. Their imaginary Prerogative, 971. Imprincth Nicanors Camp, 716, &c. Their Custome when they took a Town by He overthroweth Antigonus, 735. His estant, 977. Their contourable thanks to marriage with Stratonica, 736. His jea-agant, 977. 10etr connurance sname; to marriage with Statonics, 730. List feather than 1010. Their first use of louse of Demetrius, 742. His pretence less than 1014 of quartell against Lytimachus, ibid. His Their answer to the Embassadours of short joy, 743 Artalus, 2018, &c. Sempronius recalled with his Arms

Their reasons not to be forry for Hannibals Rome nothing fo tyrannous as Carthage. Rowing after a strange fashion. 269 Roxane payed with her own coyn, Rule of the husband over the wife, and of Rumours cast out of purpose, to give an bonest colour to the war against Philip, 1007

Their imperious answer to Antiochus bis

CAguntines fear of Hannibal, Saguntum recovered by the Romans. 208

Saguntum found out in Athens, ICO9 Sammites and Hetrurians become Tributary to Rome. Sark, near Garnley, taken by the French, and again recovered. Scaliger his opinion concerning Naboni-

Scipio P. is fent Proconful into Spain, Retreat in the head of an Enemies Army, 898. He winneth Carthage, 899. His Victory against Hanno and Mago, 948. Rhodians recover Peras from the Macedonian. His wary nfe of his Spanish friends, 949. He expelleth the Carthoginians out of the Their fout message to Autiochus , 1043. Continent of Spain , 952. His exemplary elighted by the Romans, 1050 justice upon his muninous Souldiers, 956.
Romans, their admirable courage and is chosen Conful, ibidem. Is surfaced from his determined voyage into Africk for enforced to beg peace of the Romans. the defence of Italy. Senones, a people of the Gauls, expelled out of their Countrey by the Romans, Sicil, whence fo name d. L.mo Slaves in Nature, though not in 819 Sophonisba ber tragical end , Spaniards (mothered to death Carthaginian Mutiners, 811. He takes the rid Xerxes out of Greece, ibid. Is fent on Field against Amilcar , 825. Is crucified Embassage to Lacedamon, 573. His planetree. before Tunis, Sphodrias his fond attempt upon the haven of Athens.

Python

Spitamenes murdered by his wife. Spoil and riches, of most force with the Persian, 513. Is sain by Saruthas, common Souldier. spoil divided before Victory gotten, State of creat first, but small force, fully held a point of bonour, Stipendaries of Tyrants, fight more cou-raviously than those of free Cities or States. Cumæ.

Styx. cedon, 1010. Forceth Antipatria, 1012. over the Carthaginians, ibid. He freeth Is enforced to retire to Apollonia, Supersition of the Persians, mans , 951. But afterwards sideth with conditions , ibid. His treacherous Embaffage the Carthaginians against them, 962. He to the Grecian Army, 604. He burneth the bringeth aid to Carthage, 964. His retch- Country about the Greeks, 606. His comardize, les. manner of encamping, ibid. Is fired 615. Is sinally overtaken by his own cunning, shence by Scipio, 965. Is driven home inte bisown Kingdome, 967. He fighteth a battel with Malaniffa and Lælius , wherein he Greeks, is taken prisoner; 969. His exclamation i Treason obsruded upon guiltless persons, against Suphonistoa, 970. And is sent prisoner through the false accusation of a principal Syracufians Petalifm, 772. Their unfortunate expedition against Ducetius, ibid. Their T. Quintius, 1021. And between the Rowar with the Athenians , 773. They mans and Antiochus , lock up the Athenians Fleet in their Haven .

Anistry a Custom in Ireland, Temerity of the Roman Confuls, Terentius Varro his base carriage of him self towards the Campan Embassadours

Teuta. Ducen of Illyria, ber infelent handling the Roman Embaffadours , 843. Is 857 Thanks ill bestowed but in way of police Thebans fent Embaffadours to Athens 768 619. Their Army before Sparta.

Thebes glad to be rid of ber founder, 717 Themistocles his policy to alienate the 970 Ionians from the Persians , 563. His sharp 668 answer to an unbesceming taunt, 564. His Spendius, a principal Ring-leader of the predominating virtue, 566. His policy to Theocles his discovery of Sicil, Theramenes enforced to drink poyfon, 597 Thimbro affifteth the Ionians against the Thrafybulus surprizeth Phila, 597. And 842 taketh Piræus, ibid. He taketh part with 615 the Thebanes , 619. Recovereth Bizantium Steadfastucs in taking revenge, is wrong from the Lacedemonians, 620. And is slain 823 at Aspendus. Thrasybulus his just punishment.

Tiberius bis vain curiofity, Timoleon is fent to the aid of Syracufe, Stratagem of the Capuans against those of 783. His stratagem to free himself from the 908 Carthaginian Gallies, ibid. He surprizeth 1007 Icetes his Army, ibid. He demolisheth the Sulpitius the Roman Conful, invadeth Ma- Caftle of Syracuse, ibid. His great Victory 1015 Sicil of all ber Tyrants.

556 Tiffaphernes bis perfidious dealing with Syphax entreth into league with the Ro- Cyrus, 599. Becomes odious for his base

Tithraustes bis wife course against the 972 confirator. Treaty, between Philip of Macedon and Trust reposed in known traitors, well worthy to be betrayed. Truth of good tydings many times not presently required through the sudden joy avain Anistry a Custom in Ireland, 952 Tyranny perfected by its own pomer, 812.

Teleutius surprizes the Athenian Property defined, ibid. It is a distinct vice 622 from all osbers, 817. The true names thereof.

> 881 7 Alour of small force without advisedness , Valour scorns to hunt after opinion, 956

Vanity for a Prince to ingage himself in a business of a dangerous importance upon the promised assurance of a State meerly popular,

Varro T. his investive against Fabius, 867. His vain boasting, 869. His obstinacy chus, to suppress Molo. avainst bis Colleagues good counsel, 872. His manner of embattailing the Roman Army , But is made fruitless through his own folly , 875. His chiefest wisdom in timely flight, by the Romans. Virtue unfortunately contemned, Virtue justly termed Heroical, Victory never friendles. Victory to generous minds, is only an inducement to moderation. Victory beyond bove. Violence of great Armies is often broken His resolution on a wrong ground, 560. His upon (mall Towns or Forts.

Utica, a goodly City in Africk.

Water of Styx. Wisdom with the latest, 538. Wife men are 575. His own Son executed for his death, not moved with every rumour. Wisdom often taught by necessity. Wretchednes of Subjects, living under the government of a tyrannical City. Wrongs that are infolent, are most grievous, ** Antippus made General of the Cartha-A ginians, 795. He vanquishes in the Romans, Xcenetas is fent with Forces by Antio-His politick passage over Tygris, 1034.

Xenophon his wife answer to the Embas-Vermina, the Son of Syphax, overthrown Jadors of Tiffaphernes; 605. His providence for safety of the Army, 606. He conducteth 585 the Army over the River Gentrites, ibid. 819 He defeateth Teribafus, 607. His advised answer unto the Sinopian Embassadours, 609. His freech to his souldiers, 612, He ranfacks Bithynia.

Xerxes his barbarous ingratitude, 559. 900 distraction, beholding the Greeks resolution, 561. He refuseth the counsel of Artimesia and followeth worse, 565. His dishonourable Ant of mony finds many blind excuses, return to Persia, 566. Is fortunate against the Faction, 1.66. 883 the Egyptians, but not against the Greeks, 1007 572, His dishonourable peace with the Greeks, 865 which was contrived by another.

> 814 Dopyrus his dear love to Darius, 549 Zioberis, a very great River in Par-